

A Selected Annotated
Bibliography of William
Blake and His Circle:
A Guide to Further Research

By Wayne C. Ripley

with Contributions by Fernando Castanedo,
Hikari Sato,
Hüseyin Alhas,
and Vera Serdechnaia

2025

Including Material
through Blake <2025>

| | |
|--|-----|
| Contents¹ | |
| User Note | 5 |
| Abbreviations | 6 |
| Acknowledgements | 9 |
| Introduction | 12 |
| Citations, Annotations, and Links | 19 |
| A Note on Specialized Terms for Researchers New to William Blake | 21 |
| Different Blake Journals | 23 |
| PART I. TEACHING WILLIAM BLAKE | 24 |
| PART II. GENERAL INTRODUCTIONS, HANDBOOKS, GLOSSARIES, AND CLASSIC STUDIES | 32 |
| General Introductions, Handbooks, and Glossaries | 32 |
| Classic Studies Published Before 2000 | 34 |
| PART III. EDITIONS OF BLAKE'S WRITING | 42 |
| Standard Editions | 42 |
| Annotated Editions of Collected or Selected Writings | 46 |
| PART IV. BIOGRAPHIES | 48 |
| Brief Introductions | 48 |
| Portraits | 49 |
| Standard Biographies | 53 |
| Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information | 55 |
| Historic Biographies | 67 |
| Popular Biographies | 70 |
| Catherine Blake | 72 |
| On Writing Blake's Biography | 75 |
| Blake and Members of His Circle | 76 |
| PART V. BIBLIOGRAPHIES | 261 |

¹ For a complete table of contents with all the subheadings, open the bookmarks sidebar.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Standard Bibliographies | 261 |
| Books and Essays with Substantial Bibliographic Content | 264 |
| Bibliographies of Exhibitions | 266 |
| Bibliographies of Musical Settings | 267 |
| Annotated Bibliographies | 268 |
| Historic Bibliographies | 269 |
| PART VI. CATALOGUES | 270 |
| Standard Catalogues | 270 |
| Historic Standard Catalogues | 277 |
| Current Collections: Digital Collections, Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship | 279 |
| Major Exhibition and Sale Catalogues | 290 |
| PART VII. STUDIES OF BLAKE ARRANGED BY SUBJECT | 306 |
| Affect, Body, Disability, Neurodivergence, Object, and Trauma | 306 |
| Antiquarianism and Druids | 318 |
| Appreciations and Applications of Blake | 323 |
| Art | 328 |
| Blake's Collectors and Collections | 385 |
| Comics, Graphic Novels, and Video Games | 424 |
| Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies | 427 |
| Digital Humanities | 444 |
| Ecological Studies | 450 |
| Film, Television, and Video Studies | 459 |
| Gender and Sexuality Studies | 464 |
| Literature and Language | 484 |
| Music | 663 |
| Political and Historical Criticism | 672 |
| Psychology and Psychoanalytic Criticism | 691 |

| | |
|---|------|
| Race, Slavery, (Post-)Colonialism, and Orientalism | 699 |
| Reception Studies | 708 |
| Religion | 726 |
| Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution | 788 |
| Studies of Blake Criticism (as such), of Blake Scholars, and of Institutions and Projects Devoted to Blake | 805 |
| Theater, Dance, and Performance | 860 |
| Translating Blake | 864 |
| PART VIII. SPECIFIC WORKS BY BLAKE | 867 |
| Illuminated Books | 867 |
| Commercial Book Illustrations | 1203 |
| Separate Prints and Prints in a Series | 1297 |
| Drawings and Paintings | 1413 |
| Manuscripts and Typographic Works | 1486 |
| PART IX. COLLECTIONS OF ESSAYS ON BLAKE PUBLISHED SINCE 1957 (SINCE BLAKE [2018] FOR NON-ENGLISH COLLECTIONS) | 1569 |
| PART X. APPENDICES | 1728 |
| A. Non-English Scholarship since Blake (2018) | 1728 |
| B. Major Sources Not Recorded in BB, BBS, WBHC, or Blake | 1767 |
| C. Useful Websites | 1782 |

User Note

To best utilize this bibliography, open the bookmarks sidebar and split the viewing window.

The bookmarks sidebar (click the bookmarks icon) provides a complete table of contents that links to the relevant sections. (A shorter table of contents can be found on pages 2 to 4.)

The split window option (Menu→Window→Split) will create an anchor to the user's present location in the document when clicking an interior link.

Abbreviations

William Blake's Works

| | |
|------------------|--|
| AM | America a Prophecy |
| ARO | All Religions are One |
| BA | The Book of Ahania |
| BL | The Book of Los |
| BU | The Book of Urizen |
| BT | The Book of Thel |
| DC | A Descriptive Catalogue |
| EU | Europe a Prophecy |
| FBU | The [First] Book of Urizen |
| FCGP | For Children: The Gates of Paradise |
| FSGP | For the Sexes: The Gates of Paradise |
| GA | The Ghost of Abel |
| GP | The Gates of Paradise (Encompassing both For Children and For the Sexes) |
| Innocence | Songs of Innocence |
| J | Jerusalem The Emanation of the Giant Albion |
| L | Laocoön |
| MHH | The Marriage of Heaven and Hell |
| M | Milton a Poem |
| PA | Public Address |
| PS | Poetical Sketches |
| SI | Songs of Innocence |
| SIE | Songs of Innocence and of Experience |
| SL | The Song of Los |
| Songs | Songs of Innocence and of Experience |
| TNNR | There is No Natural Religion |
| VDA | Visions of the Daughters of Albion |

Secondary Texts and Notes

| | |
|--------------|--|
| § | Works preceded by a section mark are reported on secondhand authority |
| App. | Appendix |
| BA | William Blake Archive |
| BIB | Joseph Visconti, Blake and the Idea of the Book (1993) |
| BB | G.E. Bentley, Jr., Blake Books (1977) (<BB #> refers to the item number; BB p. refers to the page number) |
| BBS | G.E. Bentley, Jr., Blake Books Supplement (1995) |
| Blake | Blake/An Illustrated Quarterly (<Blake ([year])> indicates the year of Blake that a work was recorded in “William Blake and His Circle” and not the year the list purports to cover. Hence, < Blake (2025)> refers to Blake 59.1 (summer 2025), which covers material either published or recorded in 2024.) |
| BM | British Museum |
| BR | G.E. Bentley, Jr., Blake Records , 2nd ed. (2004) |
| BSJ | G.E. Bentley, Jr., with Keiko Aoyama, Blake Studies in Japan (1994) |
| Butlin | Martin Butlin, The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake , 2 vols. (1981) (Butlin # refers to the catalogue numbers in volume 1.) Works not in Butlin are designated BUTWBA at the Blake Archive. |
| CGW | David Bindman, assisted by Deirdre Toomey. The Complete Graphic Works of William Blake (1978) |
| Diss. | Dissertation |
| E | David V. Erdman, The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake (rev. ed., 1988) |
| ed. | edition |
| EBSP | Geoffrey Keynes, Engravings by William Blake. The Separate Plates. A Catalogue Raisonné (1956) |
| ELH | English Literary History |
| Essick, Comm | Robert N. Essick, William Blake’s Commercial Book Illustrations (1991) |
| Essick, SP | Robert N. Essick, The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue (1983) |
| Essick, WBP | Robert N. Essick, William Blake Printmaker (1980) |
| K | Geoffrey Keynes and Edwin Wolf 2nd, William Blake’s Illuminated Books: A Census (1953) |
| Keynes, EBSP | Geoffrey Keynes, Engravings by William Blake: The Separate Plates (1956) |
| MPI | Miscellaneous prints and impressions |

| | |
|-------------|--|
| n.d. | no date |
| no. | number |
| n.p. | no pages |
| ODNB | Oxford Dictionary of National Biography |
| Omnibus | Encompassing all the different states and versions of a work |
| PMLA | Publications of the Modern Language Association |
| pl(s). | plate(s) |
| RA | Royal Academy of Arts |
| rpt. | reprint |
| rev. | revised |
| SC | G.E. Bentley, Jr., Sale Catalogues of Blake's Works: 1791–2017 (2017) |
| SEL | Studies in English Literature |
| TLS | Times Literary Supplement |
| WBHC | G.E. Bentley, Jr., William Blake and His Circle (2017) |
| WBP | Robert N. Essick, William Blake Printmaker (1980) |

Acknowledgments

I owe my deep appreciation to the editors and staff of the William Blake Archive for the opportunity to create this annotated bibliography and their kind patience while I completed it. My gratitude particularly extends to the late Morris Eaves who offered me many kind words of encouragement and support, beginning as my dissertation director and lasting through his final months.

Mark Crosby's "Guide to Further Reading" served as the initial basis for this bibliography, and I hope that I have developed, rather than disfigured, his work.

Sources recorded since <Blake (2018)> have been drawn from the annual checklist on scholarship published every summer by Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly, though there are occasional corrections and elaborations. Since 2017, I have compiled this annual list with my collaborators for non-English sources: Fernando Castanedo, Hikari Sato, Hüseyin Alhas, and Vera Serdechnaia. I am indebted to their efforts. The citations, annotations, and translations in such sources are theirs, but the errors and other infelicities are mine.

For material drawn from the Blake checklists, I am thankful to Sarah Jones, the managing editor of Blake for her generous assistance, editorial guidance, and delightful good humor, and to Morton D. Paley and the late Morris Eaves, the editors of Blake, for their support, encouragement, and assistance.

Thomas Minnick's and D.W. Dörrbecker's Blake checklists also provided useful information about many sources, and I remain indebted to Professor Dörrbecker's generous words of encouragement at the beginning of my own tenure on the checklist. The annotated bibliography of Mary Lynn Johnson served as an important model for how to introduce new researchers to Blake, and I hope this bibliography is a step toward fulfilling John E. Grant's prophecy regarding editions that present previous commentary at the touch of a button.²

Like all Blake scholars, I am indebted to the catalogues of Martin Butlin and Robert N. Essick and the bibliographies of G.E. Bentley, Jr., not only for the information they provide in this bibliography, but also for their model scholarship.

This bibliography would not have been possible without the diligent efforts of the Winona State University Interlibrary Loan Librarian, Susan Byom, and her staff, who worked through both a global pandemic and chronic budget shortfalls. I am grateful to them and to all the faculty and staff librarians who have diligently argued for the importance of library resources.

Additional research was conducted at the Wilson Library at the University of Minnesota, the Memorial Library at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library at Yale University. I also received kind assistance via email from librarians and staff members at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, La Venaria Reale (Turin, Italy), the Houghton Library at Harvard University, the Tate Britain Prints and Drawings Room, the British Museum Prints and Drawing Room, the Library of Congress Rare Books and Special Collections, the Watkinson Library at Trinity College (Hartford, Connecticut), and the John Hay Library at Brown University.

² See Grant's "Blake in the Future," Studies in Romanticism 42.1 (fall 1982), 436-43, <BBS 649-50>.

Many of my colleagues at Winona State University provided their encouragement for this work, particularly Andrew Higl, Chris Buttram, Gretchen Michlitsch, and Matt Lungerhausen. I am also grateful to Leigh Marks and Alex Peachey, students at Winona State University, who assisted me with previous checklists.

No one has done more to support this project than my wife Joy Davis Ripley, to whom I remain forever grateful.

Preface

This 2025 edition of the bibliography includes material from the Blake 2025 checklist of scholarship, with the exception of sources in Russian and the content of Blake 58.4 (spring 2025). These will be included in the subsequent edition.

I have recorded any uncertain or unascertained facts in red font.

Corrections of any errors can be emailed to Wayne C. Ripley at wripley@winona.edu.

A pdf version of the bibliography that allows for slightly different functionality is also available upon request from Ripley.

Introduction

As for any major writer and artist, there is a substantial critical tradition on William Blake that can be overwhelming for new researchers. Hence, the primary goal of this Guide for Further Research is to highlight standard and significant works within this critical tradition and to orientate readers through brief introductions, an accessible structure, and annotations.

The purpose of the Guide is not to present a comprehensive bibliography. This can be found in G.E. Bentley's standard bibliographies (for works through 2017) and the annual checklists published by Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.³

That said, this Guide does consolidate important primary information about Blake's works and the scholarship on them that had hitherto been dispersed in numerous books and articles. The information presented here includes all known copies of the illuminated books; all recorded states and impressions of the separate plates; and all editions or copies of the commercial book illustrations.

Organization

In the standard bibliographies of Bentley and the annual Blake checklist, scholarship is compiled into one list alphabetized by the author, editor, or journal title. This Guide, in contrast, has ten major categories, which are described below. Most of these categories have multiple subsections specified in the header, and these subsections are enumerated both in the list below and in the bibliography proper. In the headers for the categories and subsections, I also refer users to related categories and subsections with internal links. Most categories and many subsections include "Introductions" and/or "General Studies," with a few sections also including "Useful Contextual Information," which lists works not about Blake specifically.

Given my use of multiple categories, I have cross-listed sources in different categories and subsections. While this practice results in redundancy, my hope is that the more targeted categories and subsections will be easier to navigate than the standard bibliographies and help researchers find sources relevant to their interests.

I. Teaching William Blake

The first category draws together work focused on teaching Blake, recognizing that many users of the Blake Archive are teachers. The essays are largely on teaching Blake in a undergraduate college setting, but there are also sources on teaching Blake in a high school or an AS/A-Level setting, teaching works with Blake's illustrations, and the social and political implications of teaching Blake. I have also included here editions and collections of critical essays particularly aimed at students.

II. General Introductions, Handbooks, Glossaries, and Classic Studies (Including General Introductions, Handbooks, and Glossaries and Classic Studies Published Before 2000)

The second category details useful material for beginning researchers. Classic Studies Published Before 2000 records both works that remain influential (e.g., Fearful Symmetry) and works whose once sizable influence has waned (e.g., Blake's Apocalypse).

³ Bentley's William Blake and His Circle (2017) largely consolidated the bibliographies he wrote for the annual Blake checklist from 1994 to 2017, so I have only cited Bentley's checklists if the information was not available in William Blake and His Circle. Since Blake 2018, there have been three checklists, one devoted to scholarship, one to exhibitions, and one to musical settings.

III. Editions of Blake's Writing (Including Standard Editions and Annotated Editions of Collected or Selected Writings)

This category records both standard editions and major annotated editions. I have also included the different updates and corrections to David V. Erdman's The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake in all its versions (originally titled, The Poetry and Prose of William Blake).

Not included in this category are facsimiles, reproductions, and typographic editions of individual works. These are listed with the relevant titles under Category VIII: Specific Works by Blake.

IV. Biographies (Including Brief Introductions, Portraits; Standard Biographies; Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information; Historic Biographies; Popular Biographies; Catherine Blake; On Writing Blake's Biography; and Blake and Members of His Circle)

This category draws together materials focused on Blake's biography variously conceived. Portraits includes links to digitizations and major catalogue listings as well as studies.

I have limited Standard Biographies to a few books, but I have cast a wide net with Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information. This subsection is arranged by the major stages of Blake's life. It includes work on his family and contextual information about the Moravian Church during the time of Blake's mother's known involvement with it, and it closes with links to obituaries of Blake. (For work on Blake's reception, see Reception Studies under Category VII: Studies of Blake Arranged by Subject.)

Historic Biographies encompasses nineteenth-century biographies from Benjamin Heath Malkin to Alexander Gilchrist, including those by John Thomas Smith, Allan Cunningham, and Henry Crabb Robinson. I document and provide links to different historic and modern editions of these works.

Popular Biographies include books aimed at a general audience that offer little new information.

Catherine Blake contains biographical work and scholarship highlighting Blake's wife Catherine (born Boucher) specifically.

Blake and Members of His Circle includes those figures, institutions, and topics found in Division II of the Blake checklist. The entries contain subsections on biographies; bibliographies; writings by the person; sale catalogues with substantial Blake holdings; standard, collection, and exhibition catalogues; scholarly work on the person and Blake; and scholarly work on the person without substantial reference to Blake. (For figures not listed here, see Blake and Artists; Blake, Writers and Publishers; or Blake and Musicians.)

V. Bibliographies (Including Standard Bibliographies; Books and Essays with Substantial Bibliographic Content; Bibliographies of Exhibitions; Bibliographies of Musical Settings; Annotated Bibliographies; and Historic Bibliographies)

Standard Bibliographies focuses largely on Bentley's bibliographic work, the annual Blake checklists, and Essick's, and now, Crosby's "Blake in the Marketplace."

I have separated out the bibliographies of exhibitions and the bibliographies of musical settings for the unique interest they pose.

Historic Bibliographies include bibliographies that were once important and that may still contain useful information to some researchers, particularly Geoffrey Keynes's A Blake Bibliography (1921) and Keynes and Edwin Wolf's William Blake's Illuminated Books: A Census (1953).

VI. Catalogues (Including Standard Catalogues; Historic Standard Catalogues; Collections: Digital Collections, Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship; and Major Exhibition and Sale Catalogues)

Standard Catalogues includes Butlin's The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake (1981), Essick's The Separate Plates of William Blake (1983) and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations (1991), and the updates to these works.

Historic Standard Catalogues includes works such as David Bindman's The Complete Graphic Works of William Blake (1978) and the catalogues of Archibald G.B. Russell, Geoffrey Keynes, and Laurence Binyon.

Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship provides links to a holding institution's digital collections (if available) and documents catalogues, finding aids, and scholarship about the specific collection. (For a list of items held by specific collections, see the Collections Lists at the Blake Archive, though I record collections not recorded on this list as of January 2025.)

Major Exhibition and Sale Catalogues lists the major catalogues descending by year. For a complete list of sale catalogues, see Bentley's Sale Catalogues (2017).

VII. Studies of Blake Arranged by Subject (Including Affect, Body, Disability, Neurodivergence, Object, and Trauma Studies; Antiquarianism and Druids; Appreciations and Applications of Blake; Art; Blake's Collectors and Collections; Comics, Graphic Novels, and Video Games; Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies; Digital Humanities; Ecological Studies; Film, Television, and Video Studies; Gender and Sexuality Studies; Literature and Language; Music; Political and Historical Criticism; Psychology and Psychoanalytic Criticism; Race, Slavery, \(Post-\)Colonialism, and Orientalism; Reception Studies; Religion; Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution; Studies of Blake Criticism \(as such\), of Blake Scholars, and of Institutions and Projects Devoted to Blake; Theater, Dance, and Performance; and Translating Blake)

This is a large category of major topics within Blake studies. Most of these topics include Introductions and General Studies, and several of them include more specific subsections.

Two of the broadest topics are Art and Literature and Language. Given the nature of Blake's work, the General Studies under Art and Literature and Language are naturally quite extensive, but if an interpretation stresses the intersection of writing and visual art, I have listed or cross-listed it under the topic of Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies.

In addition to General Studies, Art contains scholarship concerned with Aesthetic Theory (with subsections for the Gothic and Sublime); Materials, Media, and Methods (focusing on painting, printmaking, and paper); and Blake and Artists (detailing work on Blake and specific artists, institutions, and movements).

General Studies in Literature and Language includes scholarship on Blake's poetry and prose in general, meaning there is a great deal of overlap between it and the General Studies under Illuminated Books in Category VIII. But General Studies in Literature and Language also includes scholarship that addresses manuscripts like Tiriel, An Island in the Moon, or The Four Zoas or typographic editions like Poetical Sketches or The French Revolution.

The other sections in Literature and Language are Handwriting, Prosody, Style, and Diction; Myth and Symbolism; and Blake, Writers, and Publishers. Prosody, Style, and Diction covers studies of poetic structures, rhythms, rhymes, and word choices. Myth and Symbolism contains work on Blake's characters, particularly that which highlights their origins or function, Blake's own myth, or his use of symbols. Blake, Writers, and Publishers includes both primary work on Blake by a writer and scholarship on Blake and the writer or publisher.

The subsections in Art, Literature, and Music that consider Blake in relationship to specific artists, writers, and musicians are arranged by historical periods (as determined by the date of the figure's death) and their last name. A major figure in the Victorian Blake Renaissance, William Michael Rossetti (1829-1919), for example, is listed among Twentieth-Century Writers and Publishers because of the date of his death, but, as I do for comparable figures, I have also provided an internal link to him in Nineteenth-Century Writers and Publishers.

Appreciations and Applications of Blake consists of books and essays that recognize Blake in relationship to their times, apply Blake's thought to contemporary issues, or draw on him for inspiration. The works listed in Reception Studies differs from this subsection in their concern for how others employed Blake.

Blake's relationship to Protestant Dissent, Anglicanism, and Catholicism is found in the General Studies in Religion. Other religions (Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam, and [Judaism \[and the Kabbalah\]](#)); topics (the Bible and Norse Mythology), and aspects of religion particularly important to Blake and his milieu (Antinomianism and Popular Millenarianism, Methodism, Moravianism, Mysticism, Occult, and Alchemy, \(Neo\)Platonism, and Swedenborg and Swedenborgianism) have their own subsections. Studies of both Atheism, Secularization, and Post-Secularization and Satan and Satanism can be found here as well.

Blake's Collectors and Collections highlights studies of major Blake collectors from Blake's own period to the twenty-first century and entries include major sale, exhibition, and collection catalogues. (This section differs from Collections: Digital Collections, Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship in Catalogues, which is focused on current collections of Blake.) Blake's Collectors and Collections should not be taken as an exhaustive list of Blake collectors.

Studies of Blake Criticism concerns itself with both Blake scholars who have themselves been the subject of study (e.g., Northop Frye) or projects or organizations devoted to Blake (e.g., the William Blake Archive). For scholars, I have noted any Festschriften, books, or conferences dedicated to them, lists of their works, and notable obituaries.

VIII. Specific Works by Blake (Including Illuminated Books, Commercial Book Illustrations, Separate Prints and Prints in a Series, Drawings and Paintings, and Manuscripts and Typographic Works)

This category arranges Blake's works using the classification schema of the Blake Archive. The "General Studies" in each of these subsections examines the media of the classification or multiple works within the classification. Scholarship that examines works from multiple classification areas are either cross-listed in the different sections or found under the Art, Literature and Language, or Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies subsections in Category VII.

For most works of Blake's, with the exception of many paintings and drawings, I list studies and then the known copies, impressions, or editions, including digitizations and print facsimiles and reproductions. If a copy of an illuminated book or the impression or state of separate plates or plates in a series is available at the Blake Archive, I provide links to the specific work's digitization by the Blake Archive and its holding institution and/or its catalogue description (if separate from its digitization); b) print facsimiles and reproductions; and c) translations.

For material not yet available at the Blake Archive, I also give bibliographic data (plate arrangements and bindings) and contemporary or notable owners. For each of the illuminated books, I provide a combined list of print facsimiles and reproductions in a list descending from the most recent to the earliest.

Illuminated Books also includes the subsections: General Facsimiles, Catalogues, and Bibliographies; Studies of Facsimiles of Illuminated Books; On the Production of the Illuminated Books; Introductions to Works in Illuminated Printing; and General Studies of More than One Work in Illuminated Printing.

Some illuminated books include additional subsections. Milton a Poem has a section on the "Jerusalem" Hymn. Songs of Innocence and of Experience includes General Studies on More than One Song, Studies on Individual Poems (following the arrangement of the Songs in David V. Erdman's The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake), and Electrotypes. There is No Natural Religion has a section on the Bogus Copies that were long believed to be originals (i.e., copies E, F, H, I, J, and K).

For digitizations of Blake's works, I describe the different viewing options available and the kind of physical content visible, especially if this content differs from that available at the Blake Archive (e.g., uncropped pages, versos, facing leaves, covers, spines, endpapers, flypapers, and bookplates). If there is one item or one interface for digitally collated objects available at the holding institution's webpage, the link is available in the name of the institution. If each object has its own page, I enumerate the items using Bentley's or Butlin's standard numbers and give each number or set of numbers its own link to the proper page. I include the holding institution's accession number, call number, or museum number, and if the institution has a catalogue listing of the item that exists apart from or in lieu of its digitization, I provide the link to the catalogue in the number.

For digitized copies of Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations, I reference the owner of the physical book; the site with the digitization (typically, the Internet Archive, Hathi, or Google Books); and the institution responsible for digitization (typically, Google Books).

[IX. Collections of Essays on Blake Published Since 1957 \(Since Blake \[2018\] for Non-English Collections\)](#)

This category includes collections on Blake that contain three or more essays, with each essay listed and annotated. Books are arranged by the last name of the first editor, while journals are arranged by title. (If the editor of a collection that appeared in a journal is known, I have provided a link to the title under the editor's name.) For journals that have had more than one issue devoted to essays on Blake, I have included the volume and issue number in the internal link to distinguish it from the others.

In the other categories of this bibliography, the title of a collection (whether a book, journal, or webpage) contains an internal link to the collection's listing here, so that users can see the context in which an essay appeared. For a collection on a specific topic, the book is listed without the individual chapters, but the annotation notifies the user of the title's status as a collection, with its title linking to its entry in Category IX where the individual essays are listed and annotated. For example, Mark Greenberg's collection, Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake's Poetical Sketches (1996), is listed under Poetical Sketches, and users can access the citations and annotations of the individual essays by clicking on the link in the title.

For collections of previously printed essays, I have tried using the information available in Bentley or in the collection itself to record where the essay originally appeared, adding a link in the note that may help users access the essay if the collection is not readily available.

[X. Appendices \(Including A. Non-English Scholarship since Blake \[2018\]; B. Major Sources Not Recorded in BB, BBS, WBHC, or Blake; and C. Useful Websites\)](#)

[A. Non-English Scholarship since Blake \[2018\]](#): The limitations of time prevented me from including non-English sources except for those recorded during my tenure on the annual Blake checklist for scholarship. For the most part, these have been contributed by my colleagues on the checklist, Fernando Castanedo, Hikari Sato, Hüseyin Alhas, and Vera Serdechnaia. These sources have been listed in the appropriate categories throughout the bibliography, but they are also compiled here according to their language group.

B. Major Sources Not Recorded in BB, BBS, WBHC, or Blake: This is a list of scholarly sources recorded here for the first time that were not documented in the standard bibliographies of Bentley and the annual Blake checklists.

C. Useful Websites: The sites here are devoted to Blake, consistently produce high quality postings regarding Blake, or offer useful contextual resources. For other digital resources and references to Blake, see Part V of the annual Blake checklist since 2018.

Citations, Annotations, and Links

The citation of scholarship in this Guide follows a simplified version of the entries in the Blake annual checklist for scholarship, with the ISBNs and physical descriptions removed. American spelling, punctuation, and grammar have been used, though I have retained non-American spellings in titles and quotations.

Angle brackets (<>) at the end of an entry indicate where the source has been previously recorded in the standard bibliographies or catalogues (e.g., BB, BBS, WBHC, or Blake). (Sources not recorded in these bibliographies have footnotes recording this fact, and the sources are compiled in Appendix B.) Multiple citations (or, in the case of Blake, years) in angle brackets indicate new editions, reprints, or the documentation of reviews. Bentley did not record reviews before his tenure on the Blake checklist, at which time he provided reviews for both new material and for all the material that had been previously recorded in Blake Books and Blake Books Supplement. These reviews were incorporated into William Blake and His Circle. I cite this work rather than individual checklists unless a checklist contains information that was not transferred to William Blake and His Circle.

The annotations of scholarship are meant to be descriptive rather than evaluative, though I call attention to crucial studies and explain why once crucial studies no longer remain so. Where possible, I try to allow the authors to represent their own arguments in their own words, but I endeavor to identify which of Blake's works are discussed. While most of my annotations are original, I cite Bentley's or Dörrbecker's annotations if I could not access a source directly, if their annotation seemed to capture the argument better than my own. When I cite Bentley's annotations, I put any page numbers from the source inside of my quotation marks in parentheses, removing the "p" before the page number. The concluding parenthetical citation includes the standard abbreviation of the bibliography cited (i.e., BB, BBS, or WBHC) and the appropriate item number (for BB) or page number (for BBS and WBHC). Any emendation within a quotation can be assumed to be Bentley's unless stated otherwise. Dörrbecker's annotations are cited with issue of the Blake checklist in parentheses.

When available, links to both scholarship and different digitizations of Blake's work are provided. Recognizing the difficulty of maintaining live-links, I have made every effort to use permalinks and DOIs.⁴ Dead-links are, unfortunately, inevitable. I have strived to provide enough information for sources to be found without a direct link and will update dead-links in subsequent editions.

For scholarship, I have tried to follow Bentley in providing information about previous or subsequent publications and different versions in notes, providing links wherever I can. Many scholarly books published before 2000 are available at the Internet Archive, which can be accessed with a free account. (I have also included links to books only available to users with disabilities at the Internet Archive because the search function for these books provides large excerpts.) When I could not find a source at the Internet Archive, I utilized either HathiTrust or Google Books. HathiTrust has a much better catalogue system than the Internet Archive, but it does not allow copyrighted material to be viewed. I use Google Books for the majority of books published after 2010.

⁴ As of February 2025, much digitized material at the British Library remains offline due to a cyberattack. Praxis volumes published before 2016 are now available at the updated site for Romantic Circles only as pdfs.

For all books of scholarship, I have made every effort to list any previously published articles incorporated into the book and to provide links. For undigitized books, this means that versions of chapters published elsewhere may be digitally available. The majority of scholarly articles link to either the stable link or the DOI at J-STOR, and for journals not available at J-STOR, I have typically linked directly to the article's DOI. When no other option was available, I have included general URLs.

Entries for essays that appeared in collections with at least three essays on Blake, the journal or book title contains an internal link to a list of collections on Blake published since 1957 (see Category X).

A Note on Specialized Terms for Researchers New to William Blake

Study of Blake is made more complicated by the various media in which Blake worked and, in some cases, invented. To understand these categories some basic vocabulary is necessary. (For more advanced discussions, see Materials, Media, and Methods in Art.)

Engraving—Engraving is a broad category that includes intaglio and relief. In intaglio engraving, a tool known as a burin is used to incise the surface of a metal plate, thus creating the lines of the design in the metal itself. When the surface of the plate is inked, the ink will rest in these lines when the plate is run through a printing press. In relief engraving, the spaces on the plate that are not part of the design are cut away.

Etching—Etching uses acid to cut into the metal plate covered with an acid-resistant ground instead of a burin. The artist can work with finer tools to create the design in the ground, and the acid does the work. In practice, especially in Blake's lifetime, many engravers used both engraving and etching together.

Relief Etching—Relief etching removes the metal of a plate from around a design using acid as in etching. This method results in a design that is elevated above the rest of the plate, rather than being cut or burned into the plate as in traditional forms of engraving and etching.

Illuminated Printing—Illuminated Printing describes Blake's own method of relief etching, which he developed in the late 1780s after his brother Robert died. Most, but not all, of the illuminated books were executed in illuminated printing.⁵

Other methods of production Blake used include lithography (see Enoch), wood engraving (see The Pastorals of Virgil), and printed paintings (also known as “color printed drawings” or “monoprints”) (see Large Color Printed Drawings).

Illuminated Books are usually understood to comprise those works executed in illuminated printing. But “Illuminated Books” has also been associated with the works in which Blake employed his own mythological characters, symbols, and iconography. (Introductions to this mythic system can be found in General Introductions, Handbooks, and Glossaries and studies of it in Myth and Symbolism.)

Early scholarship (see Frye's Fearful Symmetry) considered the works in illuminated printing as a canon, but this clear distinction between the illuminated books and other material that employs Blake's mythology has been widely rejected. Blake used elements of his mythological system in the manuscripts, Tiriel and Vala or The Four Zoas (with the latter being indispensable to understanding Milton and Jerusalem), but the importance of Blake's myth in illuminated books like Songs of Innocence and of Experience, The Gates of Paradise, The Ghost of Abel, or [On Homers \[and\] On Virgil](#) remains subject to scholarly debate.

⁵ For Children: The Gates of Paradise and For the Sexes: The Gates of Paradise were done in intaglio engraving and etching. The text for The Book of Ahania and The Book of Los is in intaglio, and the designs for the works were done in planographic color printing. Both Tiriel and Vala or The Four Zoas are in manuscript. Tiriel has monochrome wash designs separate from the manuscript, while the first 43 pages of Vala or The Four Zoas utilized proofs from Blake's Night Thoughts engravings (writing the text in the blank spaces) before switching to blank paper that follows a similar layout of text and image. The French Revolution exists as a unique typeset proof.

Similarly debated is the degree to which Blake's mythology is necessary for understanding his paintings and drawings, his separate prints or prints in a series, his printed paintings, and his commercial illustrations and engravings.

Blake's mythic system today is largely understood to be more fluid and ad hoc than earlier archetypal accounts argued (again, see Frye's Fearful Symmetry), but the idea that Blake's mythic system is an expression of an established system of hermetic philosophy has been recently reasserted (see Sheila Spector's The Evolution of Blake's Myth).

Sometimes "Prophetic Books" is used to designate the works using Blake's mythic system, but only America a Prophecy and Europe a Prophecy were called prophecies by Blake himself.

Different Blake Journals

Bentley's standard bibliographies and the Blake checklist enumerate the content of these journals.

Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly (1967-Present). Ed. Morton D. Paley and Morris Eaves.

For the first ten volumes, the journal was titled, Blake Newsletter. For these issues, I have used “Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly” to avoid ambiguity regarding the source.

The website for Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly offers an index of all the articles and reviews published. Material more than five years old is available without a subscription.

The Blake Journal: The Journal of the Blake Society of St. James's (2000-2006/07)⁶ <WBHC 1746-59>

Numbers 1-4 were titled, Journal of the Blake Society at St. James, before being changed to The Blake Journal. The last issue was number 10. The current (2020-present) journal of the Blake Society is titled Vala. All issues are available as a pdf at the Blake Society webpage.

Blake Newsletter. This is the original title of what became Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly for its first ten volumes (Jun. 1967-Spring 1977). I have referred to these volumes by the current title to avoid confusion.

Blake Studies (1968-1981). Ed. Kay Parkhurst Easson (born Long) and Roger K. Easson. <BB #1218 (Vols. 1-6.1, 1968-75); BBS 410-13 (Vols. 2.1, 4.2, 6.1-9; 1970, 1972, 1976-81); WBHC 1759>

An index by Detlef W. Dörrbecker is available at the webpage of Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.

⁶ Bentley notes “copyright 2006, received 3 December 2007” (WBHC 1757).

I. Teaching William Blake

Adams, Hazard. "The Dizziness of Freedom; or, Why I Read Blake." 3-17.⁷ Antithetical Essays in Literary Criticism and Liberal Education. Ed. Hazard Adams. Tallahassee: Florida State University Press, 1990. <BBS 330, WBHC 1489>

"I shall [...] try to show through Blake what I think my pedagogical enterprise is finally all about" (3).

Bennett, Alma. "Teaching Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.3 (winter 1994-95): 115. <WBHC 1656>

A poem on the topic.

Berger, Richard. "Never Seek to Tell Thy Love': E-Adapting Blake in the Classroom." Redefining Adaptation Studies. Ed. Dennis Cutchins, Laurence Raw, and James M. Welsh. Lanham: Scarecrow Press, 2010. 31-43. <WBHC 1624-25>

On using Blake to teach adaptations across different media platforms and cultural contexts.

Burkett, Andrew, and Roger Whitson, ed. William Blake and Pedagogy. Pedagogies Edition. Romantic Circles. 2016.⁸

An important collection of essays on teaching Blake in the twenty-first century: "The present volume intervenes in the notion that pedagogy is of a secondary concern to Blake scholars by showing how William Blake's work can invigorate the classroom. Contributors use Blake's inspiration to create new teaching methodologies, propose new assignments, engage new public audiences, and critically explore the emergence of new technological modalities" (abstract).

Bygrave, Stephen. "Romantic Poems and Contexts." Approaching Literature: Romantic Writings. Ed. Stephen Bygrave. London: Routledge, 1996. 3-46. <WBHC 1820>

The chapter offers examples of Romantic poems, discusses them briefly, and poses questions for students to consider. Among the poems are Innocence's "The Chimney's Sweeper," "Nurse's Song," and "Introduction" and Experience's "A Poison Tree."

Collver, Edward, et al. "Responding to Pupil Led Tangential Thinking: A Case Study of Teaching Romantic Poetry in a Post-16 Setting." English in Education 56.1 (2020): 47-58. <Blake (2025)>

"This paper considers alternative ways of teaching Romantic poetry to post-sixteen English Literature pupils in England. It explores how practitioners can value tangents developed by pupils' independent thinking when pupils are given the freedom to develop their own ideas. It reflects on a lesson planned to respond to a tangent developed by the class in a previous session; that William Blake's "The Tyger", to a contemporary reader, explores the 21st century preoccupation of climate change" (abstract).

⁷ Rpt. of essay originally published in College English 38 (1986), 431-43, <BBS 332>.

⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

Cook, Daniel, ed. "Teaching Romanticism VI: William Blake." Romantic Textualities: Literature and Print Culture, 1780-1840. 30 May 2014.⁹

A blog with a description of teaching Blake by Richard C. Sha, Małgorzata Łuczyńska-Hołdys, Stephen Behrendt, and Stephanie Codsi.

Davies, Peter. William Blake. London: Greenwich Exchange, 1996. <WBHC 1928>

A solid overview of Blake's life and work aimed at students.

Diggory, Terence. "Allen Ginsberg's Urban Pastoral." College Literature 27.1 (2000): 103-18. <WBHC 1940>

Highlights Blake's influence on Ginsberg's sense of the urban pastoral in a special issue on teaching Beat Literature.

Eaves, Morris. "Teaching Blake's Relief Etching." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.3 (winter 1979-80): 140-47.¹⁰ <BBS 389>

A lesson plan on teaching Blake's illuminated printing method.

Edmundson, Mark. "Under the Sign of Satan: William Blake in the Corporate University." Hedgehog Review 14.2 (2012): 8-16. <WBHC 1977-78>

Reads the corporate university through Hayley, Satan, and Palamabron.

Faller, Francis. "How Long is the Present? Reflections on Teaching William Blake's Songs, and Our Measure\(s\) of Time." English Academy Review 20.1 (2007): 115-36. <WBHC 2010>

On "exploring what these verses have to offer, in an educational context, to the development of poetic sensibility" (115).

Ferguson, J. "'The voices of children': William Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." Use of English 51.3 (summer 2000): 207-18. <WBHC 2017>

"The Songs are useful in the classroom" (WBHC 2017).

Freed, Eugenie R. "Blake's Golden Chapel: The Serpent Within and Those Who Stood Without." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 53-61. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Reads the Notebook poem, "I saw a chapel all of gold," against the backdrop of teaching Blake during anti-apartheid protests in the 1970s and 1980s.

Furman-Adams, Wendy. "Visualizing Paradise Lost: Artists Teaching Milton." Approaches to Teaching Milton's Paradise Lost. 2nd ed. New York: Modern Language Association, 2012. 136-46.¹¹

⁹ Not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁰ Rpt. in sparks of fire, ed. James Bogan and Frederick Goss (1982), 127-40, <BBS 418-19, WBHC 1773>.

¹¹ Not recorded in WBHC.

On using artists, including Blake, when teaching Paradise Lost. See also Virginia Tufte's "Visualizing Paradise Lost: Classroom Use of Illustrations by Medina, Blake, and Doré" in the first edition of the book.

Gaspaire, Shawn C. "William Blake: An Integrated Teaching Approach." Graduate Student Projects. Central Washington University. Aug. 2003.

A graduate student's project for implementing the teaching of Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience "as part of the high school curriculum for tenth-twelfth grade students" (4) according to the Washington State Curriculum Standards.

Gleckner, Robert F. "‘The Lamb’ and ‘The Tyger’—How Far with Blake?" The English Journal 51.8 (1962): 536-43. <BB #1701>

On teaching Blake's poetry in high school: "It is that kind of poetry which ought to be taught in high school because it is impossible to remain neutral in the face of its onslaught on our cherished values" (540).

Gleckner, Robert F., and Mark L. Greenberg, ed. Approaches to Teaching Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience. New York: Modern Language Association, 1989. <BBS 488-89, WBHC 2083-84>

Remains the key collection of essays on teaching Blake's Songs, with its suggestions for using visual media made immensely easier with the Blake Archive.

Gross, David. "Infinite Indication: Teaching Dialectical Vision and Blake’s The Marriage of Heaven and Hell." College English 48.2 (1986): 175-86. <BBS 495>

On using Blake to teach Marxist dialectic.

Hecimovich, Gregg. "Technologizing the Word: William Blake and the Composition of Hypertext." Language and Image in the Reading-Writing Classroom. Ed. Kristie S. Fleckenstein, Linda T. Calendrillo, and Demetrice A. Worley. Mahwah, NJ: Lawrence Erlbaum Associates, 2002. 135-49. <WBHC 2139>

An early look at Blake's method as analogous to digital composition.

Hilton, Nelson. "Blake Rouses the Faculties." Teaching the Eighteenth Century: Three Courses [by] Cynthia L. Caywood, Nelson Hilton, [and] Lance E. Wilcox. ASECS Executive Board Seminar, 1987.¹² <BBS 507>

"Apparently a course" (BBS 507).

J. Paul Getty Museum Education Staff. "William Blake: Imagery, Allusions, and Opposites." J. Paul Getty Museum. 2014.

A lesson plan for teaching Blake to high school students (grades 9-12), using "A Poison Tree" and Satan Exulting over Eve, "analyzing the symbolism, metaphors, and imagery used."

¹² Bentley's emendation.

Kim, Joey S. “A Series of Research Discoveries.” Eighteenth-Century Fiction 33.1 (fall 2020): 107-09. <Blake (2024)>

Describes encountering Blake Archive as an undergraduate and how the experience with digital resources like it affected teaching during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. “How Things Work: Teaching the Technologies of Literature.” Teaching Bibliography, Textual Criticism, and Book History. Ed. Ann R. Hawkins. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2006. 155-60.¹³

Uses Blake as an example in his class on “the technologies of literature”: “Understanding how things work is, I believe, one of the best ways finally to come to terms with the important changes now well underway in media and technology, and their impact on literary studies” (160).

Kucich, Greg. “Blake’s Eighteenth-Century and the Shaping of Prophetic Consciousness in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Teaching Eighteenth-Century Poetry. Ed. Christopher Fox. New York, 1990. 331-48. 409-12. <BBS 542>¹⁴

“Instead of pretending to know how to read The Marriage, therefore, we may do our students a better service by focusing their attention on its problematics” (332).

La Belle, Jenijoy. “The Piper and the Physicist.” Engineering and Science 53.1 (1989): 25-28. <WBHC 2299>

On teaching Blake to students training to be scientists and engineers.

Leporati, Matthew. “New Formalism in the Classroom: Re-Forming Epic Poetry in Wordsworth and Blake.” Humanities 8.2 (2019): 16 pp. <Blake (2020)>

“[T]he article applies New Formalist techniques to William Wordsworth’s Prelude and William Blake’s Milton: a Poem. Often read as poems seeking to escape the dispiriting failure of the French Revolution, these texts, I argue, engage the formal strategies of epic poetry to enter the discourse of the period, offering competing ways to conceive of the self in relation to history. [...] These readings are intertwined with my experiences of teaching” (abstract).

Leporati, Matthew. “William Blake’s Perspectives: Teaching British Romanticism in the Community College Classroom.” CEA Critic 78.1 (2016): 90-105. <Blake (2017)>

Proposes to have students engage with how a work like the Songs “presents multiple and shifting perspectives” (90).

Lindsay, David W., ed. [Blake: Songs of Innocence and \[of\] Experience](#). The Critics Debate Series. Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1989. <BBS 551, WBHC 2332>

Aimed at students; contains an overview of different issues facing readers of the Songs and readings of “Holy Thursday” (Innocence), “The Echoing Green,” “The Little Girl

¹³ Not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁴ BBS mistakenly lists the chapter under “Gucich, Greb” (BBS 496).

Lost” and “The Little Girl Found,” “The Tyger” and “The Fly,” “The Human Abstract,” and “To Tizrah.”

Lucas, John, ed. William Blake. Longman Critical Readers. 1998. New York: Routledge, 2013. <WBHC 2349-50, Blake (2020)>

A collection of previously printed essays on Blake aimed at a critical theory course as envisioned in the 1990s. The 2013 edition has no updates.

Marsh, Nicholas. William Blake: The Poems. 2001. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave, 2012. <WBHC 2374>

A student guide with “poem by poem analyses of the Songs” and excerpts of other works and criticism (WBHC 2374).

McCarthy, B. Eugene. “Reading Blake: A Case for Memorization.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 85-90. <WBHC 2190-91>

On having student memorize Blake.

McCord, James. “‘If Thought is Life and Strength & Breath’: Learning Through Eye and Ear from William Blake’s Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Humanities Education 6.3 (1989): 19-26. <BBS 567>

“Starts with a pleading for ‘learning’ instead of ‘teaching’ the Songs (19), and then argues that the Songs demonstrate ‘Blake’s conviction that education involves the complete reexamination of our ideas about the value of learning and the methods we use to learn’ (20)” (Blake [1989-90]).

McLaughlin, Jeff. “The Crooked Roads of Genius: William Blake and Educational Psychology.” Literary Imagination and Professional Knowledge: Using Literature in Teacher Education. Ed. Jeff McLaughlin. Gorham, ME: Myers Education Press, 2023. <Blake (2024)>

“The writings of William Blake contain many examples of poetry and prose that could connected to concepts of educational psychology.”

Mertz, J.B. “Teaching the Revolution Debate: Edmund Burke, His Radical Respondents, and William Blake.” Teaching Representations of the French Revolution. Ed. Julia Douthwaite Viglione, Antoinette Sol, and Catriona Seth. New York: MLA, 2019. <Blake 2020>

Describes teaching The French Revolution as a response to Edmund Burke.

Natarajan, Uttara. “William Blake (1757-1827).” The Romantic Poets: A Guide to Criticism. Malden, MA: Blackwell, 2007. 4-62. <WBHC 2452>

A survey of criticism with excerpts from three previously published books, followed by an annotated list of further reading.

O’Flinn, Paul. “Studying a Blake Poem.” How to Study Romantic Poetry. Basingstoke and London: Macmillan, 1988. 12-30. New York: St. Martin’s Press, 2001. 11-28. <WBHC 2475>

Analyzes “The Nurse’s Song” from Innocence and “The Clod & the Pebble” from Experience to offer models for students’ own writing on Romantic poetry.

Punter, David. Songs of Innocence and of Experience: William Blake. London: Longman, 1998.
New rev. ed. Pearson, 2003. <WBHC 2551>

In many ways, a teacher's edition of Blake's Songs, with commentary and questions for each poem, a guide for studying poems, an overview of critical approaches, examples of textual analysis, contextual information, and a reception history of the Songs.

Punter, David. "William Blake." Literature in Context. Ed. Rick Rylance and Judy Simons. Basingstoke and New York: Macmillan, 2001. 79-90. <WBHC 2553>

An overview for students, with a discussion of "The Chimney Sweeper" from Innocence and its critical interpretations.

Punter, David, ed. William Blake: Contemporary Critical Essays. New Casebooks. Basingstoke and London: Macmillan Press Ltd., 1996. <WBHC 2551-53>

A collection of previously printed essays, with a new introduction by Punter. Aimed at students.

Rawlinson, D.H. "An Early Draft of Blake's 'London.'" and "Relevance and Irrelevance in Response: Another Blake Poem." The Practice of Criticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1968. 45-51 and 52-61. <BB #B2496 and #C2496>

Readings of the "London" draft and "The Human Abstract" using New Criticism in a text designed for students.

Reynolds, Mark. "Writings to Read Poetry: Teaching Blake's Songs of Innocence and [of] Experience." Alabama English 4 (1993): 21-28. <WBHC 2580>

Reubart, A. et al., ed. Blake through Student Eyes. Oakland, 1971. <BB #A2510>

"Student papers and poems on Blake for courses taught at Mills College, 1970 and 1971" (BB #A2510).

Simmons, Robert E. "A Way of Teaching Job." Approaches to Teaching the Hebrew Bible as Literature in Translation. Ed. Barry N. Olshen and Yael S. Feldman. New York: Modern Language Association, 1989. 124-26. <WBHC 2676>

"My suggestion for teaching Job is to use William Blake as a guest instructor' with his Job engravings (124)" (WBHC 2676).

Simons, Joan O. "Teaching Symbolism in Poetry." College English 23.4 (1962): 301-02.
<BB#2705>

A New Critical reading of "Ah Sun-flower": "Because this poem is brief and because the entire poem presents a single symbol, I have found it a very effective tool in teaching symbolism to college freshmen" (302).

Stevens, David J. "William Blake in Education: A Poet for Our Times?" Changing English 7.1 (2000): 55-63. <WBHC 2706>

Blake "seems to me a valid antidote to the systems-orientated, target-setting, managerial skills-based context of contemporary education" (55).

Stevens, David. "Teaching and Learning from William Blake through the Lens of Critical Literacy." International Perspectives on the Teaching of Literature in Schools: Global Principles and Practices. Ed. Andrew Goodwyn et al. Abingdon: Routledge, 2018. 153-63. <Blake (2019)>

Swann, Karen. "Teaching Jerusalem." European Romantic Review 25.3 (2014): 397-402.¹⁵ <WBHC 2732>

"Recounting the interpretive struggles that undergraduates have when encountering Blake's famously opaque epic, the essay speculates on the ways in which those struggles can serve as the basis for a new understanding of reading as an intellectual and affective practice" (abstract).

"Teaching Romanticism XVIII: Miltonic Legacies." Romantic Textualities: Literature and Print Culture, 1780–1840.

It includes:

Brian Bates. "Milton's Satan, Sin, Death, and Gothic Romanticism." 6 pars.

Katherine Fender. "Milton, Blake, and the Sublime." 4 pars.

W. Scott Howard. "Milton and Blake—The Poetics and Praxis of Adaptation." 6 pars.

Thistle, Louise. "William Blake." Dramatizing Classic Poetry. Lyme, New Hampshire: Smith and Kraus, 1999. 83-88. <WBHC 2759>

Offers ways for students to perform "The Lamb" and "The Tyger" and provides questions and prompts about the poems.

Tomlinson, Alan. Blake: Songs of Innocence and of Experience. Macmillan Master Guides. London: Red Globe Press / Macmillan Education, 1987. <BBS 663>

A guide for students with questions.

Trawick, Leonard. "Teaching Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." Teaching Eighteenth-Century Poetry. Ed. Christopher Fox. New York: AMS Press, 1990. 319-29, 407-08. <BBS 663>

"A useful account" (BBS 663).

Tufte, Virginia. "Visualizing Paradise Lost: Classroom Use of Illustrations by Medina, Blake, and Doré." Approaches to Teaching Milton's Paradise Lost. 1st ed. Ed. Galbraith M. Crump. New York: Modern Language Association, 1986. 112-25. <BBS 665>

On using illustrations to teach Paradise Lost. Also see Wendy Furman-Adams's "Visualizing Paradise Lost: Artists Teaching Milton" in the second edition of the book.

¹⁵ See also Swann's workshop, "Learning to Teach by Teaching Jerusalem," held at the 21st Annual Conference of The North American Society for the Study of Romanticism: "Romantic Movements." Boston, MA. 9 Aug. 2013.

Udowiczenko, Rebecca O. "The Symmetrical Tyger: The Issues and Tensions of Teaching Romantic poetry at A-level." Canterbury Christ Church University, PhD diss. in Education. 2018.¹⁶

Using "The Tyger" and poetry by John Keats as primary examples, "I explore what poetry experiences students have at A-level, consider the attitude of teachers to Romantic poetry and explore the impact that this has on their students. Working from a constructivist grounded theory perspective, this study considers the attitudes and experiences of a group of year 12 and 13 students in Somerset, England, towards Romantic poetry" (abstract).

Updates, Phillip Allan. Songs of Innocence and of Experience: William Blake. AS/A-Level Student Text Guide. Deddington: Market Place, 2004.

A preparation guide for students.

Warner, Janet. "A Videotape of America Produced at York University." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 65-66.¹⁷

Details the making of Blake's America, a videotape produced at York University by Warner, John Sutherland, and Robert Wallace, which would allow to students "to see all the plates of America, hear the whole poem read dramatically, and at the same time interpret the poem for them in a way that would link it to past and present historical events" (65). "We [...] used pictures of modern student riots and other political events which bore out the themes of political and psychological revolution" (65-66).

Weather, Winston, ed. William Blake: The Tyger. Columbus, OH: C.E. Merrill, 1969. <BB #2937>

Though the essays are dated, it includes "Suggestions for Papers" (pp. 122-24).

Welch, Dennis M. "Romanticism and Revolution: Teaching Blake's Songs." CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 101-03, 108-13. <BBS 434>

On teaching the Songs in "an introductory and interdisciplinary humanities course": "These songs suggest not only the dangers of oppression but also some liberating strategies of response to it" (108).

Willmott, Richard, ed. William Blake: Songs of Innocence and of Experience. 1990. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011. <BBS 136, WBHC 412>

A letterpress edition with explanatory notes aimed at advanced undergraduate students.

Woods, Jeanine. "Teaching Blake's Poetry with Paintings." English Journal 72.3 (Mar. 1983): 38-40. <WBHC 2880>

Though slightly dated, it offers suggestions about incorporating visual art in the classroom experience of Blake.

¹⁶ Not recorded in Blake.

¹⁷ Not recorded in BB.

II. General Introductions, Handbooks, Glossaries, and Classic Studies (Including General Introductions, Handbooks, and Glossaries and Classic Studies Published Before 2000) (See also Annotated Bibliographies and Myth and Symbolism)

Introductions, Handbooks, and Glossaries

Behrendt, Stephen C. Reading William Blake. London: Macmillan Press, 1992. <BBS 364, WBHC 1596>

An overview of the issues confronting readers of Blake, with a survey of his works in illuminated printing.

Damon, S. Foster. A Blake Dictionary: The Ideas and Symbols of William Blake. 1965. 1988. Rev. ed. with a new foreword and annotated bibliography by Morris Eaves. Hanover, NH: Dartmouth College Press, 2013. <BB #1445, BBS 447, WBHC 1915-17>

Despite its age, remedied somewhat by Eaves's foreword, bibliography, and index, an indispensable reference for a basic understanding of Blake's obscure myth and symbolism.

Eaves, Morris, ed. The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. <WBHC 1969-72>

A very readable collection aimed at introducing new researchers to Blake. Some of its chapters were developed into content for the William Blake Archive.

Ferber, Michael. The Poetry of William Blake. New York: Penguin, 1991. <BBS 470, WBHC 2015>

A well-received introduction to Blake's poetry aimed at an undergraduate audience, highlighting mostly the early illuminated books.

Freeman, Kathryn S. A Guide to the Cosmology of William Blake. New York: Routledge, 2017. <Blake (2017, 2019, 2020)>

A reference book on Blake's mythic system more recent than Damon's Blake Dictionary, which also includes useful information about Blake's circle and more contemporary bibliographical resources.

Gourlay, Alexander S. “Glossary.” The William Blake Archive. Ed. Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi.

A concise list defining key words in Blake's mythology and symbolism. Adapted from Gourlay's “A Glossary of Terms, Names, and Concepts in Blake,” published in Eaves's Cambridge Companion to William Blake.

Haggerty, Sarah, ed. William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

A very useful collection of nearly forty short essays on Blake's relationship to various contexts and topics. Each chapter includes a list of further readings. A great starting point.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. "Mapping Blake's London," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 117-22. <BBS 381>

The maps of Britain, the Holy Land, and London in the article, which were published in Blake's Poetry and Designs (1979, 2008), are very useful for visualizing Blake's syncretic fusion of biblical and British geography.

Makdisi, Saree. Reading William Blake. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2015. <WBHC 2364>

A short, but compelling, analysis of some of the different dimensions at play in reading Blake.

Natarajan, Uttara. "William Blake (1757-1827)." The Romantic Poets: A Guide to Criticism. Malden, MA: Blackwell, 2007. 4-62. <WBHC 2452>

A survey of criticism with excerpts from three previously published books and an annotated list of further reading.

Pinheiro de Sousa, Alcinda, and Jason Whittaker. "Urizen Now: Reading Anew William Blake's Response to his Times." Weaving Tales: Anglo-Iberian Encounters on Literatures in English. Ed. Paula García-Ramírez, Beatriz Valverde, Angélica Varandas, and Jason Whittaker. New York and Abingdon: Routledge, 2023. 1-17. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

On how to read Blake's works: "Blake himself seems very strongly as an author to invite engaged and dialectical readings of his works" (13).

Roberts, Jonathan. William Blake's Poetry: A Reader's Guide. London: Continuum, 2007. <WBHC 2596-97>

Aimed at advanced undergraduates. Includes an overview of Blake's context, expression, thought, and reception history, with study questions and a guide to further reading.

Summerfield, Henry. A Guide to the Books of William Blake for Innocent and Experienced Readers. Gerrards Cross: Colin Smythe, 1998. <WBHC 2717-18>

An extensive overview of Blake's poetic works, with comprehensive annotations that synthesize important critical commentaries.

Williams, Nicholas M., ed. Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. <WBHC 2867-68>

A collection of introductory essays that consider Blake from critical, historical, and cultural perspectives as might be presented in a critical theory course. Complements Eaves's Cambridge Companion well.

Classic Studies Published Before 2000

Ault, Donald D. Visionary Physics: Blake's Response to Newton. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1974. <BBS 356, WBHC 1571-72>

A very important study of how Blake incorporated the language of Newtonian science into his own symbolism.

Bindman, David. Blake as an Artist. Oxford: Phaidon, 1977. <BBS 373, WBHC 1631-32>

A substantial introduction to Blake's work as an artist.

Bloom, Harold. Blake's Apocalypse: A Study in Poetic Argument. New York: Anchor Books, 1963. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1970. <BB #1227, BBS 414, WBHC 1761-62>

A one-time influential study of Blake's poetic career. The book's argument shaped Bloom's commentary to David V. Erdman's The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake (1965, 1982, 1988).

Blunt, Anthony. The Art of William Blake. New York: Columbia University Press, 1959. Rpt. 1969. <BB #1235, WBHC 1771-72>.

Although dated in its understanding of Blake's artistic techniques and technologies, a still useful study of Blake as an artist and his relationship to the world of eighteenth-century art.

Bronowski, Jacob. William Blake and the Age of Revolution. New York: Harper & Row, 1965. <BB #1288, BBS 426, WBHC 1790-91>

First published as William Blake, 1757-1827: A Man without a Mask in 1943 [i.e., 1944] (BB p. 771). Revised and reissued by Penguin in 1954. Furter revised and reissued under the new title in 1965.

Along with David V. Erdman's Blake: Prophet Against Empire, an early and important examination of Blake within his historical and political context.

Bruder, Helen P. William Blake and the Daughters of Albion. New York: St. Martin's Press, 1997. <WBHC 1795-96>

An important feminist critique of both Blake and Blake criticism, focused primarily on the early illuminated books. Bruder reflected on the book in Vala issue 3 and was interviewed about the book and its legacy by Elizabeth Effinger in "A Conversation with Helen Bruder."

Bruder's work continued in her collection, Women Reading Blake (2007), and a series of collected essays, co-edited with Tristanne J. Connolly, which highlight issues of gender, sexuality, animal studies, and posthuman studies (Queer Blake [2010], Blake, Gender and Culture [2012], Sexy Blake [2013], and Beastly Blake [2018]).

Damon, S. Foster. A Blake Dictionary: The Ideas and Symbols of William Blake. Brown University Press, Providence, 1965. 1988. Rev. ed. with a new foreword and annotated bibliography by Morris Eaves. Hanover, NH: Dartmouth College Press, 2013. <BB #1445, BBS 447, WBHC 1915-17>

Despite its age, remedied somewhat by Eaves's foreword and bibliography, an indispensable reference for a basic understanding of Blake's obscure myth and symbolism.

Damon, S. Foster. William Blake, His Philosophy and Symbols. Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1924. London, Bombay, Sydney: Constable and Co. Ltd., 1924. New York: Houghton Mifflin, 1947. Gloucester, MA: Peter Smith, 1958. 1969 <BB #1455, BBS 447, WBHC 1917-18>

"William Blake, His Philosophy and Symbols is the first thoroughly scholarly book about Blake, and as such it is of great importance. It is particularly valuable for the parallels it draws between Blake's works and an immense variety of recondite mythologies, and for the careful, book-by-book explication of Blake's works" (BB #1455).

Davies, J. G. The Theology of William Blake. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1948. Hamden, CT, 1965. Rpt. Archon Books, 1966. <BB #1466, BBS 448, WBHC 1924-25>

"Davies attempts to assert Blake's religious orthodoxy, but he is illuminating on Blake's relations with the Swedenborgians, particularly in demonstrating the impossibility of the legend that Blake's father and family belonged to the New Church" (BB #1466).

De Luca, Vincent Arthur. Words of Eternity: Blake and the Poetics of the Sublime. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1991. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2014.¹⁸ <BBS 450, WBHC 1932-34>

An important study of how Blake's poetics invoked the sublime, both in terms of content and materially. De Luca coins the phrase, "wall of words," to describe pages of the illuminated books full of text.

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Eaves, Morris. William Blake's Theory of Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. <BBS 459, WBHC 1974-75>

An influential articulation of Blake's theory of art in relationship to Neoclassicism and Romanticism, with a consideration of Blake's notion of audience.

¹⁸ Incorporates his "Ariston's Immortal Palace: Icon and Allegory in Blake's Prophecies," Criticism 12.1 (1970), 1-19, <BB #1475>; "Blake and the Two Sublimes," Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 11 (1982), 93-105, <BB #1475>; "Proper Names in the Structural Design of Blake's Myth-Making," Blake Studies 8.1 (1978), 5-22, <BBS 411-12>; "Blake's Wall of Words: The Sublime of the Text" from Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality, ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler (1986), 49-68, <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>; and "Blake and Burke in Astonishment." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989), 100-04, <BBS 405>. The first chapter, "Blake's Concept of the Sublime," is reprinted in Romanticism: A Critical Reader, ed. Duncan Wu (1995), 17-54, <WBHC 2888>.

Erdman, David V. Blake: Prophet Against Empire. A Poet's Interpretation of the History of His Own Times. 1954. Rev. ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1969. 3rd ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977.¹⁹ <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>

A key study that examines Blake within his historical context. Erdman's approach was so influential that historicist readings of Blake are sometimes categorized as "The School of Erdman."

The book and Erdman's legacy in historical scholarship on Blake is considered in the special issue of Studies in Romanticism, ed. Morris Eaves (1982), dedicated to Erdman; in Steven Clark and David Worrall's introduction to their Historicizing Blake (1994); and in Eric K.W. Yu's "Blake as Prophet Against Empire: Erdman's Interpretive Legacy Reexamined," The International Blake Conference: "Blake in the Orient" Conference Programme (2003).

Essick, Robert N. William Blake and the Language of Adam. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1989. <BBS 465, WBHC 1999-2000>

A study of Blake's conception of language with an analysis of the paintings, Adam Naming the Beasts and Eve Naming the Birds, and most of the poetry. Includes a discussion of the Kabbalah and Hebrew, Blake's notion of the linguistic sign, his notion of the Fall, and Blake and other Romantic-era writers on language.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. <BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

Ferber, Michael. The Social Vision of William Blake. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1985.²⁰ Rpt. Princeton Legacy Library, 2014. <BBS 471, WBHC 2016-17>

Focusing on the illuminated books, an examination of Blake's thought about the individual and society, influenced by Marxism (the first two chapters are concerned with ideology), but the study also engages deeply with Christian and especially antinomian thought. Ferber builds to Blake's notion of "apocatastasis, or the restoration of all things" (xi).

Frye, Northrop. Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1947. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969. Northrop Frye's Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Ed. Nicholas Halmi. Toronto: University of

¹⁹ Incorporates Erdman's "Blake's Vision of Slavery," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3/4 (1952), 242-52, <BB #1569, WBHC 1993>.

²⁰ Incorporates Ferber's "Blake's Idea of Brotherhood," PMLA 93.3 (1978), 438-47, <BBS 471>.

Toronto Press, 2004. Vol. 14 of the Collected Works of Northrop Frye.²¹ <BB #1646, BBS 478, WBHC 2037-39>

A profoundly influential study, which dominated twentieth-century Blake scholarship. Frye considered Blake primarily as a poet and artist (rather than a mystic), and his work led to Blake's canonization as a Romantic poet as well as shaping Frye's own Archetypal Criticism. Frye's positioning of Blake in terms of British Empiricism (primarily John Locke and George Berkeley) remains key, and his reading of the prophetic works showed the profundity of what previous generations had dismissed as evidence of Blake's madness.

Several important concepts about Blake originated in Fearful Symmetry. "The Orc Cycle" is the idea that political revolution was condemned to fail, with revolutionaries destined to become themselves, in end, the type of tyrants they sought to overthrow. In the language of Blake's mythology, the fiery Orc would transform into the oppressive Urizen. "The Illuminated Canon" gave a privileged status to Blake's work in illuminated printing, considering his manuscript works failures to one degree or another. While Frye makes essential interpretations of Tiriel and The Four Zoas, Frye's reading highlights what dissatisfied Blake in them. Frye's focus on Blake's poetry also marginalized Blake's work as a visual artist, which only began to be a major interest of scholarship beginning in the early 1970s. Frye's staunch identification of Blake as a poet and artist (rather than a mystic or visionary) distanced Blake from many of his religious and esoteric contexts.

Even today, Fearful Symmetry remains an essential starting point of many studies, though recent critics of Frye have argued that his interpretations of Blake are more about his own thought than Blake's. Christopher Z. Hobson, for example, critiques the "Orc Cycle" in his Chained Boy (1999), and Sheila A. Spector aims to undo Frye's marginalization of the esoteric tradition in The Evolution of Blake's Myth (2021).

The 1969 edition includes a new preface. The 2004 edition includes this preface; an introduction by the editor; and three appendices containing other introductions and a list of "Frye's Shorter Writings on Blake."

Hagstrum, Jean H. William Blake, Poet and Painter: An Introduction to the Illuminated Verse. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1964. 1978. <BB #1770, BBS 498, WBHC 2117-18>

A classic study of the poetry and the designs of the illuminated books. See Hagstrum's defense of associating Blake with the Sister-Arts Tradition in his "Blake and the Sister-Arts Tradition."

²¹ Chapter 2, "The Rising God," 30-54, is rpt. as "The Religious Vision of William Blake," in Toward a New Christianity: Readings in the Death of God Theology, ed. Thomas J. J. Altizer (1967), 19-42; Chapter 1, "The Case Against Locke," 14-29, is rpt. as "Blake's Case Against Locke," in English Literature and British Philosophy: A Collection of Essays, ed. S.P. Rosenbaum (1971), 119-35, <BB #973>; Chapters 5 and 12, 189-91, 418-28, are excerpted in Modern Literary Criticism, ed. Lawrence I Lipking and A. Walton Litz (1972), 189-91 and 191-97; excerpts are rpt. in William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 23-35, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>.

Hilton, Nelson. Literal Imagination: Blake's Vision of Words. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1983.²² <BBS 507, WBHC 2147-48>

A major study of how Blake used and envisioned words, with many ingenious readings of Blake's word play.

Keynes, Geoffrey. Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

A collection of some of Keynes's most important essays on Blake, all of which were published elsewhere but which were revised for both editions of the collection. The first edition (1949) had 17 essays, and the second edition (1971) had 29 (see BB #2010).

Mee, Jon. Dangerous Enthusiasm: William Blake and the Culture of Radicalism in the 1790s. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1992. <BBS 571, WBHC 2392-94>

Focused on Blake's early illuminated books, a key study of Blake's relationship to religious enthusiasts of the era who shared his suspicion of Enlightenment-grounded radicalism. The study recasts Blake's relationship to millenarianism and to the polite circle of Joseph Johnson. There is also an important chapter on Norse mythology, druids, and British Antiquities, with discussions of Ossian. Mee was the first to associate Blake with Claude Levi Strauss's notion of the bricoleur.

Mitchell, W.J.T. Blake's Composite Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1978. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2019.²³ <BBS 575-76, WBHC 2420-22>

A key study on the interplay of the visual and verbal in Blake's works. The phrase, "composite art," while popularized by Mitchell, was coined by Jean Hagstrum.

Ostriker, Alicia S. Vision and Verse in William Blake. Madison and Milwaukee: University of Wisconsin Press, 1965. <BB #2335, WBHC 2485-86>

"A sensitive and responsible commentary on Blake's prosody" (BB #2335). Remains the best study of Blake's versification.

Paley, Morton D. Energy and the Imagination: A Study in the Development of Blake's Thought. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1970.²⁴ <BB #2347, WBHC 2497-98>

²² Incorporates Hilton's "Blake in the Chains of Being," Eighteenth Century 21.3 (1980), 212-35, <BBS 507>, and "Spears, Spheres, and Spiritual Tears: Blake's Poetry as 'The Tyger' ll. 17-20," Philological Quarterly 59.4 (1980), 515-29, <BBS 507>.

²³ Incorporates Mitchell's "Blake's Composite Art," Visionary Forms Dramatic, ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant (1970), 57-81, <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>; "Style as Epistemology: Blake and the Movement toward Abstraction in Romantic Art," Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (1977), 145-64, <BBS 649>; and "Poetic and Pictorial Imagination in Blake's The Book of Urizen," Eighteenth-Century Studies 3.1 (1969), 83-107, <BB #2233>. Rpt. in Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 111-34, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>.

²⁴ Incorporates Paley's "The Female Babe and 'The Mental Traveller,'" Studies in Romanticism 1.2 (1962), 97-104, <BB #2348>; "Method and Meaning in Blake's Book of Ahania," Bulletin of the New York Public Library 70 (1966), 27-33, <BB #2649>; "The Tygers of Wrath," PMLA 81.7 (1966), 540-51, <BB #2350>.

An essential study of Blake's poetry between the Songs and Jerusalem; eminently readable.

Percival, Milton. William Blake's Circle of Destiny. New York: Columbia University Press, 1938. 1964. New York: Octagon Books, 1970. <BB #2379, WBHC 2511-12>

A classic study of Blake's myth, which highlights esoteric and Kabbalistic elements.

Price, Martin. "Blake: Vision and Satire." To the Palace of Wisdom: Studies in Order and Energy from Dryden to Blake. New York: Doubleday, 1964. 390-445. Carbondale, IL: Southern Illinois University Press, 1970.²⁵ <BB #2461, WBHC 2545>

"A responsible survey, dealing particularly with the problem of order" (BB #2461).

Raine, Kathleen. Blake and Tradition. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1968. London: Routledge, 2002.²⁶ (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>

A once very influential study on Blake's thought, literature, and art largely in relationship to Platonism, Hermeticism, and Gnosticism that collects much of Raine's work on Blake delivered or published elsewhere in the 1950 and 1960s. Raine's insistence that Blake's work could be decoded through the lens of these sources has been largely rejected, but the question of Blake's relationship to these sources remains open.

The Routledge edition of 2002 is a facsimile (WBHC 2560). A shorter version of the book was published as Blake and Antiquity (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977; London and New York: Routledge, 2002. Paperback. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2023), <WBHC 2563>.

Richey, William. Blake's Altering Aesthetic. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1996.²⁷ <WBHC 2583-84>

An important study of the changes in Blake's mythic systems and aesthetic beliefs in the poetry between Songs and Jerusalem.

²⁵ Rpt. in part as "The Vision of Innocence" in Twentieth-Century Interpretations of Songs of Innocence and of Experience: A Collection of Critical Essays, ed. Morton D. Paley (1969), 36-48, <BB #A2349, WBHC 2501>; "The Standard of Energy" in Romanticism and Consciousness: Essays in Criticism, ed. Harold Bloom (1970), 255-73; and as "The Vision of Innocence" in Critics on Blake: Readings in Literary Criticism, ed. Judith O'Neill (1970), 98-115, <BB #2327>; and as "Terror and Symmetry in 'The Tyger'" in William Blake: Comprehensive Research and Study Guide, ed. Harold Bloom (2003), 38-40, <WBHC 1766-70>.

²⁶ Incorporates Raine's "Blake's 'Cupid and Psyche,'" Listener 58 (1957), 832-35, <BB #2481>; "Blake's Debt to Antiquity," Sewanee Review 75 (1963), 352-450, <BB #2482>; "The Sea of Time and Space," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 20.3/4 (1957), 318-37, <BB #2486>; "Some Sources of Tiriël," Huntington Library Quarterly 21.1 (1957), 1-36, <BB #2487>; and "Who Made the Tyger?" Encounter 2.9 (Jun. 1954), 43-50, <BB #2490>.

²⁷ Incorporates Richey's "The Neoclassical Gothicism of Blake's Early Poetry and Art," Poetica 39-40 (1994), 73-91, <WBHC 2584>, and "The French Revolution: Blake's Epic Dialogue with Edmund Burke," ELH 59.4 (1992), 817-37, <WBHC 2584>.

Rothenberg, Molly Anne. Rethinking Blake's Textuality. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1993.²⁸ <WBHC 2613-14>

The first part considers Blake's problematizing of authority, with references to Immanuel Kant and Blake's knowledge of Higher Criticism, while the second part focuses on Jerusalem "within a philosophical context informed by skepticism, associationism, and Kant's transcendentalism" (6).

Swinburne, Algernon Charles. "William Blake: A Critical Essay." 1st ed. London, 1868. (University of Michigan copy; University of California Libraries copy.) 2nd ed. London 1868. (University of Toronto copy; Oxford University copy; Harvard University copy; University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign copy) London, 1925. Rpt. of 1st ed. New York: Benjamin Blom, 1967. Ed. with an introduction by Hugh J. Luke. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1970. <BB #2795, BBS 652, WBHC 2734-36>

An important early critical reassessment of Blake.

Tannenbaum, Leslie. Biblical Tradition in Blake's Early Prophecies: The Great Code of Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2017. <BBS 657, WBHC 2750-51, Blake (2020)>

Remains a key study of Blake's relationship to late eighteenth-century discourses surrounding the Bible for the illuminated books through 1795.

Viscomi, Joseph. Blake and the Idea of the Book. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1993. <WBHC 2805-08>

The definitive study of Blake's method of illuminated printing. It elucidates Blake's studio practices, describing in detail Blake's use of artistic materials and the production of the illuminated books, touching on their relationship to Blake's other projects. The appendix dates the printing sessions for all known copies of the illuminated books and supersedes all previous efforts at dating them.

Viscomi greatly abridged the book's argument for Morris Eaves's Cambridge Companion to William Blake. This served as the basis for Viscomi's "Illuminated Printing," which is found in the Blake Archive's exhibition section.²⁹

Warner, Janet. Blake and the Language of Art. Kingston and Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1984.³⁰ <BBS 672, WBHC 2835-36>

²⁸ Incorporates Rothenberg's "The Provisional Vision of Blake's Jerusalem," Word and Image 3.4 (1987), 305-11, <BBS 628, WBHC 2612-13>; "Jerusalem's 'Forgotten Remembrances': A Blakean Analytic of Narrativity and Ideology," Genre 23 (1990), 205-26, <BBS 628, WBHC 2612>; and "Blake Reads 'The Bard': Contextual Displacement and Conditions of Readability in Jerusalem," Studies in English Literature, 1500-1900 27.3 (1987), 489-502, <BBS 628, WBHC 2611-12>.

²⁹ See also Bentley's summary "of some of [Viscomi's] more important findings" (146) in "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 1994," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.4 (spring 1995), 145-56.

³⁰ Incorporates her "Blake and the Language of Art: From Copy to Vision," Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977), 99-114, <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>; "Blake and English Printed Textiles," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.4 (spring 1973), 84-92, <BB #1217.118>; "Blake's Use of Gesture," Blake's Visionary Forms

An important study of Blake's designs in the illuminated books and his illustrations for Young, Milton, and Gray that argues Blake had a set "visual language" (185). Warner treats Blake's use of iconography and offers many probable sources for the designs.

Dramatic, ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant (1970), 174-95, <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>; and "Blake's Figures of Despair: Man in his Spectre's Power." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes, ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973), 208-24, <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>.

III. Editions of Blake's Writings

Standard Editions

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. William Blake's Writings. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1978.³¹ <BBS 169, WBHC 608-09>

The first volume includes Blake's engraved and etched writing, and the second, the writing in manuscript (including the letters) and letterpress. It includes bibliographical information not available in the editions of either Keynes or Erdman. Abbreviated in scholarship as B.

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. William Blake's Conversations: A Compilation, Concordance, and Rhetorical Analysis. Foreword. Mary Lynn Johnson. Lewiston: Edwin Mellen Press, 2008. <WBHC 1622>

A collection of William and Catherine's reported conversations from various sources, with analysis of the speech, rhymes, and vocabulary.

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. William Blake's Works in Conventional Typography. Delmar, NY: Scholars' Facsimiles & Reprints, 1984. Volume 388 of Scholars' Facsimiles & Reprints. <BBS 168, WBHC 608>

Provides facsimiles of Poetical Sketches copy F, The French Revolution copy A [the only copy], the biographical sketch from Malkin's A Father's Memoirs of His Child, "To the Queen" from The Grave, "Exhibition of Paintings in Fresco" copy A, "Blake's Chaucer: The Canterbury Pilgrims" copy A, A Descriptive Catalogue advertisement copy A, A Description Catalogue copy O, and "Blake's Chaucer: An Original Engraving" copy C. The notes are bibliographical.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Inscriptions by Blake for His Designs." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 48.1 (summer 2014): 18 pars. + listings. <WBHC 1740>

Transcriptions and, where necessary, translations of the inscriptions for Blake's designs.

Butlin, Martin. "A New Color Print from the Small Book of Designs." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 19. <BBS 409>

On the discovery of a new copy of Marriage pl. 20 <Butlin #260.6>, inscribed with the lines: "O revolving serpent / O the Ocean of Time and Space" (19). It is here Butlin also concedes that "my suggestion that the two Small Books of Designs were printed in 1794 and 1796 respectively [is] invalid" (19).

Cardinale, Philip J., and Joseph R. Cardinale. "A Newly Discovered Blake Book: William Blake's Copy of Thomas Taylor's The Mystical Initiations; or, Hymns of Orpheus \(1787\)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 44.3 (winter 2010-11): 84-102. <WBHC 1726>

Argues that the copy of Thomas Taylor's The Mystical Initiation held by Bodleian was annotated by Blake. Widely accepted.

³¹ See Bentley's "Blake's Loose Canons," Language. Philology. Culture 1 (2013), 20-45, <WBHC 2306>.

Cole, William. “An Unknown Fragment by William Blake: Text, Discovery, and Interpretation.” Modern Philology 96 (1999): 485-91. <WBHC 157-58>

Details the discovery of copy E of “Albion Rose,” which was found in Ezekiel Baker’s book, Thirty-Three Years Practice and Observations with Rifle Guns (London, 1813) and which contains new writing by Blake.

Erdman, David V., with John E. Thiesmeyer, Richard J. Wolfe, et al. A Concordance to the Writings of William Blake. 2 vols. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1967. (Vol. I, Vol. II) <BB #1579, WBHC 1993>

Based on Keynes’s The Complete Writings of William Blake (1957), with corrections of Keynes’s readings and lists of frequently used words. Provides alternative forms of words that may not be obvious, which is useful if searching the digital editions of Erdman’s The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, which grew out of this work.

See Erdman’s “A Temporary Report on the Texts of Blake” for a discussion of the implications of the Census for Blake’s texts.

Erdman, David V., ed. With Commentary by Harold Bloom. The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake. New York: Doubleday, 1965 \(Fourth Printing with Revisions\). Newly rev. ed. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1982. Newly rev. ed. New York: Doubleday, 1988. <BB #304, BBS 162-63, WBHC 553-55>

The preferred standard letterpress edition. Erdman’s textual notes remain informative, though Bloom’s commentary is very dated. Abbreviated in scholarship as E. Digital editions are available at both the William Blake Archive and Arizona State University (that latter was originally created by Nelson Hilton at the University Georgia). The original title of the 1965 edition was The Poetry and Prose of William Blake.

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. The Complete Writings of William Blake with All the Variant Readings. 1957. Blake: Complete Writings with Variant Readings. 1966. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1970. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1979. <BB #303, 370; BBS 162, 170; WBHC 614-17>

The standard edition until supplanted by Erdman’s The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake. Abbreviated in scholarship as K. The original title was The Writings of William Blake (London, 1925) (Vol. I. Vol. II. Vol. III). The one-volume edition was titled Poetry and Prose of William Blake (1927).³² The changes to the different editions (including title changes) and their various dates are described in Bentley’s bibliographies.

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. The Letters of William Blake. New York: Macmillan, 1956. 3rd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1980. <BB #92, WBHC 274-76>

The standard letterpress edition of Blake’s then-known letters and receipts. It also includes letters to Blake and useful notes.

Sloss, D. J., and J. P. R. Wallis, ed. The Prophetic Writings of William Blake. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1926. Rpt. 1957. 1964. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB #309, WBHC 557-58>

³² The 1923 on the title page of this digital edition is a bibliographic mystery.

The first responsible editing of the prophetic poetry, including The Four Zoas. The textual notes and the “Index of Symbols” in vol. 2 remain useful.

Corrections to or Commentary on Erdman’s *Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake*³³
Erdman, David V. “Improving the Text of The Complete Poetry & Prose of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.2 (fall 1986): 49-52.³⁴ <BBS 400>

Provides a list of the errata in the 1982 edition The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, some of which were corrected (with the exception of reverse printing of the Laocoön) in the edition’s second printing, with other errors found after the fact also listed.

Erdman, David V. “Redefining the Texts of Blake (Another Temporary Report).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.1 (summer 1983): 4-15. <BBS 395>

An attempt, after the 1982 edition of The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake, to further clarify Blake’s texts, with useful references to other editions and their readings. Organized chronologically by work in the categories used in The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake.

Erdman, David V.; Alistair Fowler; David V. Erdman. “A Blake Epigram.” TLS (24 Feb., 3 Mar., and 7 Apr. 1978): 234, 256, and 393. <BBS 464>

Different transcriptions by Erdman, Fowler, and Erdman again of the manuscript epigram, “Her whole Life” (E 516). See BBS 464 for Bentley’s reading.

Livingston, Ira. “An Emendation to Erdman’s Edition of Blake’s ‘Auguries of Innocence’.” Notes and Queries 63.2 (Jun. 2016): 223-24. <Blake (2017)>

Suggests that the second line of, “We are led to Believe a Lie / When we see not Thro the Eye” (E 492), should be: “When we see With not Thro the Eye.”

Metcalf, Francis Wood. “Tiriel: Two Corrected First Readings.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 40-41. <BBS 377>

Corrects reading of the manuscript.

Ripley, Wayne C. “Erdman’s Pagination of The Four Zoas.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.4 (spring 2003): 140-43. <WBHC 1694>

Corrects the pagination of The Four Zoas in the Newly Revised 1988 edition of The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake to align the page numbers completely with the 1987 Erdman and Magno reproduction of The Four Zoas manuscript.

³³ For corrections to Erdman’s Poetry and Prose of William Blake (1965), see his “[Errata Emendata: Second Printing: Erdman-Bloom P\[oetry\] & P\[rose\] of W\[illiam\] B\[lake\]](#),” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967), 11-13, <BB #1217.8>, and “Blake’s Terrible Easel” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.4 (Mar. 1968), 11-13, <BB #1217.13>.

³⁴ See also “Errata’s Errata,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.3 (winter 1986-87), 110, <BBS 400>.

Santa Cruz Study Group. Rev. of The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.1 (summer 1984): 4-28.³⁵ <BBS 396>

A review that examines the ability of letterpress to represent Blake's visual text.

³⁵ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 301-33, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

Annotated Editions of Collected or Selected Writings³⁶

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. Selected Poems. London: Penguin Books, 2005. <WBHC 566>

Contains useful notes and bibliographical information. Includes a list of institutions with major Blake collections.

Fuller, David, ed. William Blake: Selected Poetry and Prose. 2000. Rev. ed. Harlow: Pearson, Longman, 2008.³⁷ <WBHC 605-06>

The introduction includes a section on “Modernizing Blake’s Text.” There is also a commentary on each work, original annotations, and a chronology with contextual information.

Johnson, Mary Lynn, and John E. Grant, ed. Blake’s Poetry and Designs. Norton Critical Edition. 1979. 2nd Rev. ed. New York: W. W. Norton, 2008.³⁸ <BBS 149-50, WBHC 472-74>

A very useful annotated edition, with many inlaid illustrations, a chronology, maps, a bibliography, and select critical essays that were updated in the 2008 edition.

Otto, Peter, ed. William Blake: Selected Works. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

As of 2024, the edition offers the most up-to-date annotations and notes to Blake’s selected works. The introduction is a masterful survey of Blake’s reception and the efforts to edit and represent his works.

Ostriker, Alicia, ed. William Blake: The Complete Poems. London: Penguin, 1977. New York: Penguin, 2004. <BBS 151, WBHC 486>

Though slightly dated, a still important set of annotations. The 2004 edition includes an updated “Further Reading.”

Shrimpton, Nicholas, ed. William Blake: Selected Poems. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2019. <Blake 2020>

An interesting arrangement of the poems based on genre. The collection includes a biographical introduction examining Blake as a poet, a selected bibliography, a chronology, and explanatory notes.

³⁶ Not included in this list are facsimile editions with annotations, such as the individual volumes of the Blake Trust/Princeton University editions or Bentley’s facsimile of Vala. These can be found under their respective title or category (e.g., Illuminated Printing).

³⁷ For an explication of Fuller’s editorial theory and practice, see his “Modernizing Blake’s Text: Syntax, Rhythm, Rhetoric,” Editing and Reading Blake, ed. Wayne C. Ripley and Justin Van Kleeck (2010), 25 pars., <WBHC 2587-89>.

³⁸ Regarding the first edition, see Johnson and Grant’s “The Norton Critical Edition of Blake: Addenda and Corrigenda,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.2 (fall 1982), 107-10, <BBS 394>, and Johnson’s “Mapping Blake’s London,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977), 117-22, <BBS 381>, which details preparing the maps for the edition. Johnson describes the process and problems of revising the Norton Blake for the 2008 edition in her “Contingencies, Exigencies, and Editorial Praxis: The Case of the 2008 Norton Blake,” Editing and Reading Blake, ed. Wayne C. Ripley and Justin Van Kleeck (2010), 23 pars., <WBHC 2587-89>.

Stevenson, W.H., ed. Blake: The Complete Poems. 1971. 2nd ed. London and New York: Longman, 1989. 3rd ed. Longman Annotated English Poets. Harlow: Pearson Education Limited, 2007.³⁹ <BBS 149, 161, WBHC 486>

Arguably, the standard annotated edition, especially given Stevenson's updating of the annotations in successive editions. The original edition of 1971 was titled, The Poems of William Blake (Longman, 1971).

³⁹ Stevenson describes how he dealt with the problems facing an editor of Blake in his “The Ends of Editing,” Editing and Reading Blake, ed. Wayne C. Ripley and Justin Van Kleeck (2010), 48 pars, <WBHC 2587-89>.

IV. Biographies⁴⁰ (Including Brief Introductions, Portraits; Standard Biographies; Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information; Historic Biographies; Popular Biographies; Catherine Blake; On Writing Blake's Biography; and Blake and Members of His Circle)

Brief Introductions

Damrosch, Leo. "Life." William Blake in Context. Ed. Susan Haggerty. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 7-14. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Vultee, Denise. "Biography by Denise Vultee with the Editors." William Blake Archive (April 2019).

A biography supplemented by many images.

Ward, Aileen. "William Blake and His Circle." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 19-36. <WBHC 1969-72>

An overview of Blake's life.

⁴⁰ Note also Bentley's compendium of London directory listings for William and his family, William Standen or W.S. Blake, Thomas Butts, and Rev. Mr. Mathew in WBHC 1941-49.

Portraits (Arranged from Earliest to Latest)

Digital

William Blake

Thomas Stothard. "Portrait of William Blake." (c. 1780). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 3>
Collection of Robert N. Essick. Reproduced in Essick, "Marketplace, 2005," illus. 10.

Thomas Stothard. "A Scene on the Medway." (c. 1780-1781). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 2> Tate Collection. Reference no. T07042. British Museum. Museum no. 1946,0413.173.

Catherine Blake. "William Blake as a Young Man" or "Portrait of the Young William Blake." (c. 1828)⁴¹ <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 4; Butlin #C3> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.14-1953.

William Blake. "Self Portrait in Profile." (Before 1810) Notebook, pg. 69. British Library.
<Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 19; Butlin #201.67>⁴² (Image from BA)

William Blake. "[Self-] Portrait of William Blake." (c. 1802). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 35>⁴³ Collection of Robert N. Essick.

John Flaxman. "Portrait of William Blake." (c. 1804). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 5> Yale Center for British Art. Accession no. B1992.8.11(59).⁴⁴

John Flaxman. "Portrait of William Blake, seen full face." <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 6> Fitzwilliam Museum. (1804) Accession no. 828.f.37.

Thomas Phillips. "William Blake." (1807). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 7> National Portrait Gallery. Museum no. NPG 212.⁴⁵

William Blake. "Cancer." Or "William Blake: Self-caricature as 'Cancer.'" (c. 1819). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls.20a-b; Butlin #692c>⁴⁶ Collection of F. Bailey Vanderhoef, Jr.

William Blake. "The Man Who Taught Blake Painting in His Dreams." (c. 1819-20). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. 22a-c> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.166-1985. <Butlin #753>

John Linnell. "Portrait of William Blake." (1820). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 24> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.57-1950.

⁴¹ Keynes believes the work was done by memory after Blake's death rather than shortly after William and Catherine's 1785 marriage: "Mrs. Blake was at that time illiterate and it is impossible to believe that she could then have made so competent a drawing" (Complete Portraiture 119).

⁴² See Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. v and vi for F.J. Shield's reproduction of the portraits of William and Catherine in the Notebook.

⁴³ See Essick's "A \(Self?\) Portrait of William Blake" for his argument, contra Keynes, that the drawing is a self portrait and not by Linnell.

⁴⁴ See the blog of the Princeton University Library for a description of the collotype of the drawing that accompanied Milford's 1922 facsimile of Blake's illustrations of Gray.

⁴⁵ A watercolor copy dated 1807 is held by the Morgan Library and Museum, accession no. 2004.33. This portrait was etched by Louis Schiavonetti for the frontispiece of Robert Blair's The Grave that contained Blake's designs. For this and designs after Schiavonetti, see Keynes, Complete Portraiture pls. 8-18.

⁴⁶ See Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. 20b, 21, and 40a-b for engravings and copies by Linnell and Varley.

Frederick Tatham. "Portrait of William Blake." (c. 1820s). Harry Ransom Center, University of Texas. Accession no. 2002.5.

John Linnell. "William Blake." (1821). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 26>⁴⁷ Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.61-1950.

James Linnell. "Half-length of William Blake, Full Face, Arms Crossed." (1821). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 29> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.60-1950.

James Linnell. "William Blake with John Varley" or "Blake in Conversation with John Varley, Half-Length Figures Seated by a Table (1821). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 30> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.59-1950.

John Linnell. "William Blake" or "Profile Head of William Blake, Facing Right." (c. 1821). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 31> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.55-1950.

John Linnell. "William Blake" or "Two Heads of William Blake in Profile, the Lower One Cut Off Below the Mouth." (c. 1821). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 32> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.56-1950.

John Linnell. "William Blake at Hampstead" or "William Blake, Wearing Hat, Three-Quarter View, Half-Length with Hands." (c. 1825). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 33> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.58-1950.

George Richmond. "William Blake" or "William Blake Walking." (1827). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 36> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.180-1975.

George Richmond. "William Blake with Fuseli" or "Portraits of William Blake and Henry Fuseli over Studies of a Rabbit and a Copy after Durer's 'Fortuna.'" (c. 1825). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 37> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.207-1985.f1.

George Richmond. "William Blake (from Memory)." (c. 1857-59). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 38> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. Page 40 of 91: 2784.f40.a.

George Richmond. "William Blake (from Memory)." (c. 1857-59). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 39> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. Page 41 of 91: 2784.f41.a.

James S. Deville. "Life Mask of William Blake." (1 Aug. 1823). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. 23a-d> Collection of Robert N. Essick. (Sep. 1823). Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. M.7.-1947.

"Copy of Michaelangelo's 'Adam.'" William Blake. (c. 1824-27). George Hooper, Esq. <Butlin #814 verso>

⁴⁷ See Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. 27 and 28 for the engraving after Linnell by Jeens and Linnell's copy of his own watercolor.

Frederick Tatham. “Portraits of Willm Blake| at the ages of 28 & 69 years.| Born November 20th 1757. Died August 12 1827| Aetat: 69.” (c. 1830). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. 41>⁴⁸ Yale Center for British Art. Accession no. B1992.8.1(101).

Frederick Tatham. “Mrs. Wilson of Epping” or “Portrait of Mrs Wilson, who Lived in Epping Forest and Resembled William Blake; Head in Profile to Left and Looking.” (1867) <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. 43a-b> British Museum. Museum no. 1867,1012.240.

Catherine Blake

George Cumberland. “Portrait of Catherine Blake(?).” (c. 1783-1785?). Blue wash, black chalk. Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.189-1985.⁴⁹

William Blake. “William and Catherine in Bed.” (c. 1790). Notebook, pg. 4. <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. i> British Library. (Image from BA)

George Cumberland. “Catherine Blake” or “Catherine, Wife of William Blake, Seated by the Fire.” (c. 1785). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. ii> Fitzwilliam Museum. Accession no. PD.189-1985.

William Blake. “Catherine Blake.” (c. 1793). Notebook, pg. 84. <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. iii>⁵⁰ (Image from BA)

William Blake. “Catherine Blake.” (c. 1803-1805). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. iv>⁵¹ Tate Collection. Reference no. N 05188.

Frederick Tatham. “Catherine Blake.” (1828). <Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. v>⁵² British Museum. Museum no. 1894,0612.19.

Print

Keynes, Geoffrey. The Complete Portraiture of William & Catherine Blake. London: Trianon Press for the William Blake Trust, 1977. <BBS 181, WBHC 681>

Includes reproductions of all then known portraits, catalogue descriptions, and an introduction by Keynes.

William Blake. “Copy of Michaelangelo’s ‘Adam.’” (c. 1824-27). George Hooper, Esq. <Butlin #814 verso>

Reputedly has Blake-like features.

⁴⁸ This was once bound with Jerusalem copy E and Tatham’s “Life of Blake.” A brown chalk drawing based on Tatham’s original (which was owned by the Butts family, the Denver Museum of Art, and now Robert N. Essick), has traditionally been attributed to Tatham, but Essick believes it could possibly be by George Richmond. Similarly, two impressions of lithographs of Tatham’s portraits owned by the Yale Center for British Art, Accession no. B1992.8.1(103 and 104), are attributed to Richmond, but Essick considers it possible that Tatham produced them. See Essick, “Marketplace, 2017,” illus. 9 and 10.

⁴⁹ First recorded in Robert N. Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 2005,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (2006), illus. 6, <WBHC 1701>.

⁵⁰ See Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. v and vi for F.J. Shield’s reproduction of the portraits of William and Catherine.

⁵¹ See Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pls. v and vi for F.J. Shield’s reproduction of the portraits of William and Catherine. Yale Center for British Art. Call no. B1992.8.1(102).

⁵² For the copy by Richmond, Keynes, Complete Portraiture, pl. viii..

Standard Biographies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Records. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1969. 2nd ed. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2004.⁵³ <BB #1158, WBHC 1600-04>

The authoritative source for most of the known, historical facts about Blake's life. It also includes genealogies, maps, all the pre-1863 biographies of Blake, a description of the residences associated with Blake, Blake's accounts, a list of the engravings by and after Blake, a list of where Blake's poetry was reprinted between 1806 and 1849, and list of other William Blakes living in London between 1740 and 1830.

Abbreviated in scholarship as BR or BR (2), to indicate the second edition.

Updates and corrections can be found both in Bentley's Addenda (2004-2017) at Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly and in WBHC pp. 3075-3281.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Records Supplement. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1988. <BBS 366, WBHC 1604-05>

Updates the 1968 edition of Blake Records by providing all the newly discovered information. Its updates would be incorporated into the second edition of Blake Records, but Bentley's framing of the information or his notes regarding it in this particular work can still be useful.

Abbreviated in scholarship as BRS.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. William Blake in the Desolate Market. Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 2014. <WBHC 1620-21>

The most comprehensive study of Blake's economic situation. Includes lists of his known sources of income, patrons, and subscribers to his works. It illustrates that Blake relied on teaching to supplement his income more than is typically recognized.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. The Stranger from Paradise: A Biography of William Blake. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2001. <WBHC 1609-18>

The standard biography that relies heavily on Blake Records, but still offers new contextual information. Its account of Blake's family and its religious affiliations has been supplanted by the research of Kari Davies and Marsha Keith Schuchard (see Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information). This and other new material are synthesized concisely in Jason Whittaker's popular biography, Divine Images: The Life and Times of William Blake.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. <BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

⁵³ Unless otherwise noted, references to Blake Records in this bibliography are to the 2nd edition.

Gilchrist, Alexander. Life of William Blake, Pictor Ignotus. (See Gilchrist, Life of William Blake in Historic Biographies)

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. Why Mrs. Blake Cried: William Blake and the Sexual Basis of Spiritual Vision. London: Random House, 2006. <WBHC 2657-58>

An important biography of Blake within the context of religious radicalism and esoteric traditions, often highlighting their sexual practices.

Wilson, Mona. The Life of William Blake. 1927. 1932 [notes and appendices removed]. 1948 [notes and appendices restored]. [4th] Rev. and emended edition. Ed. Geoffrey Keynes. London: Oxford University Press, 1971. <BB #2981, BBS 680-81, WBHC 2871-73>

Before Bentley's Stranger in Paradise, the standard biography. Though dated, a responsible, well-documented work based on original research and a better understanding of Blake and his work than was available to Gilchrist. See Angus Whitehead's "“New matter”: Mona Wilson’s The Life of William Blake 85 Years On" for an overdue biographical sketch of Wilson, which also contains information about the different editions of the Life.

Wright, Thomas. The Life of William Blake. 2 vols. 1929. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) New York: Burt Franklin, 1969. (In 1 Vol.) Newport Pagnell, 1972. <BB #2017, WBHC 2887-88>

Offers new information after Gilchrist, but not always reliable in its claims.

Books, Chapters, and Articles with Substantial Biographical Information (Arranged by Period of Blake's Life)

General

Ankarsjö, Magnus. “‘Abstinence sows sand all over’: William Lost in Paradise.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 99-112. <WBHC 1803-04>

Addressing Tracy Chevalier’s depiction of William and Catherine’s sexuality in her novel Burning Bright, uses poems from the Notebook “to explore the intriguing tension between abstinence and what Blake called ‘free love’ in his poetry of the 1790s” (100).

Davies, Keri. “All pleasant prospect at North End”: William Blake and Hampstead.” Journal of the Blake Society at St. James [1] (spring 1995):10-22. <WBHC 2219>

On Blake and Hampstead, “[a] useful factual account” (WBHC 2219).

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. “William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England.” PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published in articles.

Hagstrum, Jean H. “Blake’s Blake.” Essays in History and Literature Presented by Fellows of the Newberry Library to Stanley Pargellis. Ed. Heinz Bluhm. Chicago: Newberry Library, 1963. 169-78. <BB #1768>

Considers Blake’s representation of himself in his works.

Miner, Paul. “Blake’s London: Times & Spaces.” Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 279-316. Special Issue: “The Once and Future Blake.” <WBHC 2715>

On Blake’s depictions of London and its various locales.

Miner, Paul. “William Blake’s London Residences.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 62.11 (1958): 535-50. <BB #869>

Uses parish rate books to establish when Blake lived where. Consult, however, the corrections in Blake Records.

Whitehead, Angus. “My Fingers Emit Sparks of Fire”: William Blake, Letter Writer.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 47-69. <Blake (2025)>

“This chapter reviews the business, as well as the homosocial sympathy, affection, and enthusiasms spiritual and otherwise of these seemingly rapidly composed letters stretching from the final days at Hercules Buildings to the equally busy last days at Fountain Court. Consulting manuscripts, considering the considerably wider body of letters (punctuated by considerable silences) with a nuanced biographical, historicist lens, Blake as letter-writer emerges in unprecedently sharper focus” (abstract).

Blake and His Family, Including Connections to the Moravians (See also Moravianism)

Atwood, Craig D. "Christ and the Bridal Bed: Eighteenth-Century Moravian Erotic Spirituality as a Possible Influence on Blake." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 160-79. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An overview of the Moravian congregation around the time Blake's mother joined and a description of its sexual practices and beliefs.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The St. James Parish Charities to Children and the Blake Family." Aligarh Journal of English Studies 13.1 (1988): 79-102. <BBS 368>

Builds on the discoveries of Stanley Gardner regarding the relationship the Blake family hosier business had with the parish of St. James.

Bentley, G.E. Jr. "William Blake of the Woolpack & Peacock." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.2 (fall 2016): 10 pars. <Blake (2017)>

On a 1772 receipt issued to Joseph Banks from the hosiery and haberdashery shop ran by Blake's father.

Castanedo, Fernando. "On Blinks and Kisses, Monkeys and Bears: Dating William Blake's An Island in the Moon." Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 437-52. <Blake (2018)>

Considers the allusions to Samuel Johnson for dating Island and suggests the possibility that it was written for Blake's dying brother, Robert.

Davies, Keri. "Bridal Mysticism and 'sifting Time': The Lost Moravian History of Blake's Family." Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering and Chatto, 2012. 57-70, 186-89. <WBHC 1800-01>

Considers the Moravian concept of "bridal mysticism" (57) and how it might have influenced Blake's mother and her first husband as well as Blake's own ideas of gender, marriage, and sexuality.

Davies, Keri. "The Lost Moravian History of William Blake's Family: Snapshots from an Archive." Literature Compass 3.6 (Nov. 2006): 1297-1319. Wiley Online Library. <WBHC 1927-28>

Summarizes his and Schuchard's discoveries regarding the Blakes, the Armitages, and the Moravians.

Davies, Keri. "William Blake's Mother: A New Identification." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.2 (fall 1999): 36-50. <WBHC 1680>

A ground-breaking article that corrects E.P. Thompson's claim in Witness Against the Beast that associated Blake's family with the Muggletonians and properly identifies Blake's mother as Catherine Wright and her first husband as Thomas Armitage.

Davies, Keri, and Marsha Keith Schuchard. "Recovering the Lost Moravian History of William Blake's Family." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 38.1 (summer 2004): 36-43. <WBHC 1698>

An essential article tracing the relationship of Blake's mother, Catherine, and her first husband, Thomas Armitage, to the Moravian Congregation. It includes letters by both Catherine and Thomas.

Davies, Keri, and David Worrall. "Inconvenient Truths: Re-historicizing the Politics of Dissent and Antinomianism." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 30-47. <WBHC 1899-1900>

A key essay that rejects many long-standing biographical claims of Blake criticism, especially the idea of Blake's relationship to Dissent and Antinomianism, in light of his mother's membership in the Moravian Church.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 1992." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.4 (spring 1993): 140-59. <WBHC 1643>

Describes and reproduces a new Robert Blake drawing, Deathbed Scene(?) on the verso of Study of Dancing Figures by a Tree (Butlin # R10).

Essick, Robert N., and Jenijoy La Belle. "A Sketch by Robert Blake Revealed." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.2 (fall 2016): 8 pars. <Blake (2016)>

Details a sketch by Robert Blake, Figure Studies (A Supplication?), which was found on the verso of Blake's Joseph Ordering Simeon to Be Bound (Butlin# 158).

Gardner, Stanley. Blake's Innocence and Experience Retraced. London: The Athlone Press, 1986. <BBS 482, WBHC 2053>

Examines Blake's Songs in the context of how Blake's parish (the Parish of St. James, Westminster) treated the poor, especially in light of Gardner's discovery that the Blake family hosiery shop supplied clothing to the St. James Workhouse and Schoolhouse.

Gardner, Stanley. The Tyger, the Lamb, and the Terrible Desart: Songs of Innocence and of Experience in its Times and Circumstance. London: Cygnus Arts, 1998. <WBHC 2054>

Develops the argument of his Blake's Innocence and Experience Retraced regarding the Songs and Blake's depiction of children and charity in the Parish of St. James. Includes a color reproduction of Songs copy I and posthumously printed copy b in monochrome.

Glausser, Wayne Edward. "A Note on the Twenty Years of Blake's Spectre." English Language Notes 24.2 (1986): 43-44. <BBS 485-86>

"In his letters of 26 Aug. 1799 and 23 Oct. 1804 'Blake may be using twenty years as much figuratively as literally,' especially because Robert Blake died in his twentieth year" (BBS 485-86).

Greer, Germaine. "'No Earthly Parents I confess': the Clod, the Pebble and Catherine Blake." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 78-90. <WBHC 1795-1800>

On William and Catherine's infertility, with biographical readings of The Book of Thel and "The Clod and the Pebble." See also Connolly's William Blake and the Body.

Henning, C.M. “Blake's Baptismal Font.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 37. <BBS 383>

Provides a picture of the font and mentions that Pitt was baptized in it as well.

Keynes, Geoffrey. “William Blake and Robert.” Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 1-7.⁵⁴ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Biographical information on Robert and a description of his Notebook.

Margoliouth, H.H. “The Marriage of Blake's Parents.” Notes and Queries (old series) 192 (1947): 380-81. <BB #2182>

“Record for the first time the marriage of Blake's parents in St. George's Chapel on 15 Oct. 1752” (BB #2182). See Keri Davies's description of the clandestine marriage in “Two Newly Discovered Advertisements': A Response to Wayne C. Ripley.”

Ripley, Wayne C. “James Blake of Rotherhithe, Timber Merchant.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 54.2 (fall 2020): 4 par. <Blake (2021)>

Presents the admission paper that granted Blake's father the Freedom of the City of London and that identified Blake's grandfather as a timber merchant.

Ripley, Wayne C. “Two Newly Discovered Advertisements Posted by William Blake's Father.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.1 (summer 2017): 8 pars. <Blake (2018)>

Records two advertisements that use James Blake's shop as a receiving address. See Keri Davies's “Two Newly Discovered Advertisements': A Response to Wayne C. Ripley” for a response to Ripley's wider claims.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “The ‘secret’ and the ‘Gift’: Recovering the Suppressed Religious Heritage of William Blake and Hilda Doolittle.” Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 209-18. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Compares the Moravian background of Blake and the Modernist poet, Hilda Doolittle (H.D.).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “Text Books for Innocence: Moravian-Swedenborg Infant Education and William Blake's Songs of Innocence and Experience.” Studies in Romanticism 62.3 (fall 2023): 405-34. <Blake (2024)>

An important recontextualization of the Songs: “In the 1780s and 90s, William Blake and his wife Catherine shared the radical, often esoteric theories of Moravian-Swedenborgian pedagogy with an international network of mystical Freemasons, and he produced illustrated (illuminated) songs and poems to express their notions of infant education” (406).

Ward, Aileen. “Who was Robert Blake?” Blake an Illustrated Quarterly 28.3 (winter 1994-95): 84-89. <BBP 36>

⁵⁴ A revised version of “William Blake's Brother,” TLS (13 Feb. 1943), <BB #2046>.

Examines the biographical record surrounding Blake's beloved younger brother, Robert Blake, including the fact he was baptized "Richard Blake" in 1762.

Blake's Youth, Apprenticeship, Marriage, and Time as a Student at the Royal Academy (See also Blake's Apprentice Engravings, James Basire, James Parker, Catherine Blake, the Royal Academy, and Joshua Reynolds)

Baird, John. "Blake's Painting at the Royal Academy, 1784: A Reference." Notes and Queries 40.4 (1993): 458. <WBHC 1577>

Records a previously unnoticed review of Blake's "War Unchained by an Angel, Fire, Pestilence and Famine Following" in the Morning Chronicle on 17 May 1784.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's First Arrest, at Upnor Castle." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.3 (winter 1997-98): 82-84. <WBHC 1671>

Reexamines Blake's first arrest with Thomas Stothard and (most likely) James Parker in 1780 in light of Thomas Stothard's etching, "A Scene on the Medway" (c. 1780-81).

Crosby, Mark. "Unentangled in the intricate windings of modern practice': William Blake's Apprentice Copperplates and Engravings." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.3 (winter 2024-25): 20 pars. <Blake (2025)>

On the discovery of drypoint, etched, and engraved marks and designs found on the verso of the copperplates for Richard Gough's Sepulchral Monuments. "The evidence presented above encourages the tentative attribution of the markings on the versos to Blake" (par. 19). There is much on James Basire's engraving studio and Blake's time there as an apprentice.

Crosby, Mark. "William Blake in Westminster Abbey, 1774-1777." Bodleian Library Record 22.2 (Oct. 2009): 162-80. <WBHC 1898>

Positions Blake's time in the Abbey as a student and considers its impact on his conception of Gothic art.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "The Engraver's Apprentice." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 14-30. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

An account of Blake's apprenticeship and descriptions of his Westminster drawings, an identification of the symbols Blake borrowed from Jacob Bryant's New System, or An Analysis of Ancient Mythology (1774-76), the engraving of Joseph of Arimathea, and his signature in a copy of Fuseli's translation of Winkelmann's Reflections on the Painting and Sculpture of the Greeks (1765).

Myrone, Martin. "William Blake as a Student of the Royal Academy: A Prosopographical Perspective." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.1 (summer 2018): 18 par. + Biographical Dictionary. <Blake (2018)>

Considers Blake's time as a student and includes a very useful "Biographical Dictionary of Students of Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving Who Attended the Royal Academy Schools, 1774-85."

Paley, Morton D. “The Man Who Married the Blakes.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.4 (spring 2009): 153-55. <WBHC 1720>

Discovers that the man who married the Blakes, the Reverend John Gardnor (b. 1728/29), was also a practicing artist.

Phillips, Michael. William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. Exhibition held at the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, from 4 Dec. 2014 to 1 Mar. 2015. <WBHC 1413-20>

Phillips's catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake's early and late years in two sections titled, “Education” and “Innovation.” In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, “Inspiration,” contains essays by others on the Ancients.

Postle, Martin. “‘sir Joshua and his Gang’: Blake, Reynolds and the Royal Academy.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 111-22. <WBHC 2190-91>

A detailed discussion on Blake and Reynolds, including Blake's time as a student at the Royal Academy, Reynolds's Discourses, and Blake's annotations to it.

Reisner, M.E. “William Blake and Westminster Abbey.” Man and Nature: Proceedings of the Canadian Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies / L'homme et la Nature: Actes de la Société Canadienne d'étude du Dix huitième siècle 1 (1982): 185-98. <BBS 620>

On Blake's time as an apprentice in Westminster Abbey and its influence on his Canterbury Pilgrims.

Wilson, David. “An idle speculation by Samuel Palmer: William Blake's involvement in Cipriani's portrait of John Milton.” British Art Journal 6.1 (spring/summer 2005): 31-36. <WBHC 2870-71>

A detailed correction of both Samuel Palmer's and G.E. Bentley, Jr.'s speculation⁵⁵ that Blake may have had some involvement in the engraved and etched portraits of Milton in Francis Blackburne's Memoir of Thomas Hollis (1780). As Wilson demonstrates, the portraits were identical to those issued in 1762 and 1765, well before Blake's apprenticeship with James Basire began.

Useful Contextual Studies

Ayres, James. Art, Artisans & Apprentices: Apprentice Painters & Sculptors in the Early Modern British Tradition. Oxford and Philadelphia: Oxbow Books, 2014.

Blake is mentioned slightly, but a good study of artistic apprenticeships in general.

⁵⁵ See G.E. Bentley, Jr. “A Portrait of Milton Engraved by William Blake ‘When Three years of Age’? A Speculation by Samuel Palmer.” University of Toronto Quarterly 51 (1981), 28-55, <BBS 368>.

Blake's Time at 23 Green Street (1782-1784), 27 Broad Street (1784-1785), and 28 Poland Street (1785-1790) (See also James Parker)

Alexander, David. "William Blake, graveur d'interprétation." William Blake (1757-1827): Le Génie Visionnaire du Romantisme Anglais. Ed. Michael Phillips. Paris: Petit Palais, 2009. 79-81, 210-211. <WBHC 3105>

The first reference to Blake's previously unknown apprentice, Thomas Owen. For more on Owen, see WBHC 3105-06 and Robert N. Essick, "Blake in the Marketplace 2010," pp. 141-42.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Journeyman and the Genius: James Parker and His Partner William Blake with a List of Parker's Engravings." Studies in Bibliography 49 (1996): 208-31. <WBHC 1607>

An account of Blake's fellow apprentice and business partner, but see Keri Davies's dissertation for important corrections, particularly about Parker's marital status.

Davies, Keri. "Good morning, Doctor Haydn." Index Rerum. 29 Nov. 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Sketches the many overlapping locales and circles of Blake and Haydn without suggesting "a direct link between the poet and the composer" (par. 3). Among the places and figures mentioned are the Swedenborgian composer, François-Hippolyte Barthélemon, John and Ann Hunter, and 28 Leicester Square.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 2011." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.4 (spring 2012): 108-43. <WBHC 1731>

Includes a description of the newly discovered copy Y of Poetical Sketches, including details on Blake's Green Street residence.

Greer, Germaine. "'No Earthly Parents I confess': the Clod, the Pebble and Catherine Blake." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 78-90. <WBHC 1795-1800>

On William and Catherine's infertility, with biographical readings of The Book of Thel and "The Clod and the Pebble."

Whitehead, Angus. "A Reference to William Blake and James Parker, Printellers, in Bailey's British Directory \(1785\)." Notes and Queries 52.1 (2005): 32, 35. <WBHC 2850>

Notes the reference to Blake and Parker's printshop.

Blake's Time at 13 Hercules Buildings, Lambeth (1790-1800)

Arnaud, Danielle, Jordan Kaplan, and Philip Norman. Cloud & Vision: William Blake in Lambeth, 2005. London: Parabola, 2005. <WBHC 1326-28>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Museum of Garden History, London, from 4 Jul. to 4 Sep. 2005 on Blake's time in Lambeth.

Connolly, Tristanne J. William Blake and the Body. Hounds mills and New York: Palgrave, 2002.⁵⁶ <WBHC 1881-82>

An influential book on Blake's various notions of and representations of the body, addressing the influence of anatomical art, physical bodies and birth (including miscarriages and abortions), parent and child relationships, and resurrected bodies. She suggests that Catherine Blake was listed as a patient on 26 August 1796 at the Lambeth lying-in hospital and posits it as likely that Catherine experienced many miscarriages.

Phillips, Michael. "Flames in the Night Sky: Blake, Paine and the Meeting of the Society of Loyal Britons, October 10th, 1793." Bulletin de la Société d'Etudes Anglo-Américaines des XVII et XVIII Siècles 44 (1997): 93-110. <WBHC 2520-21>

A detailed examination of the Loyalists in Lambeth who were active at the same time Blake printed his 1793 Prospectus.

Phillips, Michael. "No. 13 Hercules Buildings, Lambeth: William Blake's Printmaking Workshop and Etching-Painting Studio Recovered." British Art Journal 5.1 (2004): 15-21. ⁵⁷ <WBHC 2522-23>

A detailed reconstruction of Blake's studio and home in Lambeth.

Whitehead, Angus. "Mr. CLAY of Hercules Buildings." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.4 (spring 2012): 143-44. <WBHC 1731>

Dates Blake's move to 13 Hercules Buildings to sometime between 24 Jan. 1791 and 9 Mar. 1791.

Whitehead, Angus. "'William Blocke': New References to Blake in Boyle's City Guide (1797) and Boyle's City Companion (1798)." Blake Journal 8 (2004): 30-46. <WBHC 1753>

Discovers listings for Blake's in directories during his time in Lambeth.

Blake's Time in Felpham (1800-1803), Including His Trial (1804)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Trial Documents." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.1 (summer 1980): 37-39. <BBS 389>

Offers additional documents tied to Blake's trial.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Felpham Rummer: A New Angel and 'Immoral Drink' Attributed to Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.2 (fall 1984): 94-99. <BBS 397>

Argues that Blake made the inscriptions in the drinking glass while in Felpham.

⁵⁶ Incorporates Connolly's "Miscarriage Imagery in Blake," Romanticism 7.2 (2001), 145-62, not recorded in WBHC; "William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy," Spectres of Romanticism: The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics, ed. Sarah Ruston with assistance by Lidia Garbin. (Lewiston, NY, Queenston, ON, Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999), 19-42, <WBHC 1882>.

⁵⁷ Earlier versions of this essay include: "Blake's House in Lambeth," London Topographical Society Newsletter 39 (1994), 2-6, <WBHC 2520>, and "Reconstructing William Blake's Lost Studio: No. 13 Hercules Buildings, Lambeth," British Art Journal 2.1 (2000), 43-48, <WBHC 2520-21>.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Footnote to Blake's Treason Trial." Notes and Queries 200 (old series) (1955): 118-19. <BB #1169>

Documents that Hayley paid the fee of Samuel Rose, Blake's lawyer.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Rex v. Blake: Sussex Attitudes toward the Military and Blake's Trial for Sedition in 1804." Huntington Library Quarterly 56.1 (1993): 83-89. <WBHC 1609>

Considers how Sussex's hostility to the British military made the residents sympathetic to Blake.

Crosby, Mark. "[A Fabricated Perjury': The \[Mis\]Trial of William Blake](#)." Huntington Library Quarterly 72.1 (2009): 29-47. <WBHC 1897-98>

An important examination of the legal framing of Blake's trial, providing evidence that the Chichester Quarter Sessions overstepped its jurisdiction in Blake's trial.

Crosby, M[ark]. "The sweetest spot on earth': Reconstructing Blake's Cottage at Felpham, Sussex." British Art Journal 7.3 (winter 2006-07): 46-53. <WBHC 1898>

A detailed historical reconstruction of Blake's cottage at Felpham.

Crosby, Mark. "'Three years Herculean Labours at Felpham': Blake's Sussex Experience." William Blake in Sussex: Visions of Albion. Ed. Andrew Loukes. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2018. 20-31. <Blake (2019)>

A useful summary of Blake's time in Felpham.

Hawkins, John. I am, my dear sir . . . A Selection of Letters Written Mainly to and by John Hawkins. Ed. Francis W. Steer. [Chichester: Moore and Tillyer,] 1959. <BB #1811>

"A reference to Blake in a letter from Hayley to Hawkins of 11 Aug. 1800" (BB #1811).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake's Trial at Chichester." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 113-14.⁵⁸ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Offers two new documents tied to Blake's trial, suggesting that "the 'Hutton' of Blake's later Prophecies is the Lt. George Hulton who was responsible for the appearance of the two privates" (BB# 2010).

Loukes, Andrew, ed. William Blake in Sussex: Visions of Albion. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Petworth House from 13 Jan. to 25 Mar. 2018. The essays consider the work produced in or influenced by his time in Felpham.

Mee, Jon, and Mark Crosby. "'This Soldierlike Danger': The Trial of William Blake for Sedition." Resisting Napoleon: The British Response to the Threat of Invasion, 1797-1815. Ed. Mark Philp. Aldershot: Ashgate, 2006. 111-24. <WBHC 2395>

⁵⁸ Revised version of essay of the same title, Notes and Queries 4 (1957), 484-85, <BB #2024>.

A detailed account.

Owens, Norah. William Blake and Felpham 1800-1803. Bognor Regis, West Sussex: Bognor Regis Local History Society, 1986. <BBS 597, WBHC 2492>

“A responsible 22-page account of Blake at Felpham, with some useful local minute particulars” (BBS 597).

Whitehead, Angus. “‘M^{rs} Chetwynd & her Brother’ and ‘M^r. Chetwynd.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.2 (fall 2008): 75-78. <WBHC 1718>

A biographical account of the figures Blake mentioned in his 30 Jan. 1803 letter to his brother James and his 28 Sep. 1804 letter to William Hayley.

Worrall, David. “William Blake’s Indictment for Sedition, 1803.” Radical Culture: Discourse, Resistance and Surveillance, 1790-1820. Hemel Hempstead, Herts.: Harvester Wheatsheaf / Simon and Schuster, 1992. 67-75, 211-12. <BBS 685, WBHC 2882>

Considers Blake’s trial in a wider chapter titled, “Resistance and the Conditions of Discourse in the Early 1800s.”

Blake’s Time at 17 South Molton Street (1803-1821) (See also A Descriptive Catalogue)
Ripley, Wayne C. “An Unrecorded Attack on Blake.” Notes and Queries 55.4 (Dec. 2008): 418-20.

Documents that Blake was attacked in John Britton’s The Pleasure of Human Life (1807) for defending Fuseli.

Whitehead, Angus. “‘I write in South Molton Street, what I both see and hear’: Reconstructing William and Catherine Blake’s Residence and Studio at 17 South Molton Street, Oxford Street.” The British Art Journal 11.2 (2010): 62-75. <WBHC 2849>

A detailed reconstruction of Blake’s home and studio on South Molton Street.

Whitehead, Angus. “Mark and Eleanor Martin, the Blakes’ French Fellow Inhabitants at 17 South Molton Street, 1805-21.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.3 (winter 2009-10): 84-95. <WBHC 1722>

A full account of Blake’s landlord at 17 South Molton Street.

Whitehead, Angus. “New Information Concerning Mrs Enoch, William and Catherine Blake’s ‘Fellow Inhabitant’ at 17 South Molton Street.” Notes and Queries 52.4 (2005): 460-63. <WBHC 2849>

Identifies the “Mrs. Enoch” who cared for Catherine during William’s trial as Mary Enoch, the wife of Blake’s landlord at the time, William Enoch.

Whitehead, Angus, and Catherine Kelly. “William Blake’s Last Surviving London Residence.” VaLa 4 (2023): 105-09.

A concise history of 17 South Molton Street and its present state.

Blake's Last Years at 3 Fountain Court (1821-1827) and Death and Catherine Blake's Widowhood (1827-1831)

Bindman, David. "J.S. "Deville's Life Mask of William Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 55-57. <BB #1217.48>

A history of the mask dated 1 Aug. 1823.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "Mr. Rudall, The Flautist: An Authentic Blake Anecdote." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 123. <BBS 383>

On an anecdote about Blake during his time living at 3 Fountain Court when he was visited by "Mr. Rudall, the flautist" (123), which was published by the Swedenborgian James Spilling in "Blake the Visionary," New Church Magazine, 6 (1887), 209. Deck suggests the anecdote came down to Spilling from Charles Augustus Tulk to J.J. Garth Wilkinson.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "John Linnell and Mrs. Blake." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 221-29.⁵⁹ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

About Linnell's actions after Blake's death (including details of Blake's funeral), Linnell's and Frederick Tatham's relationship to Catherine Blake, disputes between Linnell and Tatham over Blake's property, and a note on posthumous Dante engravings.

Robson, Lane, and Joseph Visconti. "Blake's Death." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.2 (fall 1996): 36-49. <WBHC 1665>

The most persuasive account of Blake's terminal illness and death.

Whitehead, Angus. "'humble but respectable': Recovering the Neighbourhood Surrounding William and Catherine Blake's Last Residence, No. 3 Fountain Court, Strand, c. 1820-27."

Special Issue: The William Blake Project. University of Toronto Quarterly 80.4 (2011): 858-79. <WBHC 2790>

"I present a detailed reconstruction of Fountain Court and its residents, William and Catherine Blake during the period William and Catherine Blake were resident at No. 3 Fountain Court (c. 1820-27)" (abstract).

Whitehead, Angus. "'I also beg Mr Blakes acceptance of my wearing apparel': The William of Henry Banes, Landlord of 3 Fountain Court, Strand, the Last Residence of William and Catherine Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.2 (fall 2005): 78-99. <WBHC 1703-04>

New details about Henry Banes, who was married to Catherine's sister and who refers to Blake in his will, and about James Barrow, their Fountain Court neighbor, witness to Banes's will, and publisher of the Blake's engraving, "Mrs. Q."

Whitehead, Angus. "William Blake's Last Residence: No. 3 Fountain Court, Strand. George Richmond's Plan and An Unrecorded Letter to John Linnell." The British Art Journal 6.1 (2005): 21-30.⁶⁰ <WBHC 2850>

⁵⁹ Revised version of essay of the same title, TLS (20 Jun. 1958), <BB #2032>.

⁶⁰ See also Whitehead's "Correction," British Art Journal 6.2 (2005), 88, <WBHC 2850>.

A detailed reconstruction of Blake's home and studio at 3 Fountain Court, which includes a new letter from Blake to Linnell postmarked 25 Nov. 1825.

Worrall, David. "Blake in Theatreland: Fountain Court and its Environs." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 26-38.
<WBHC 2862-63>

Sketches the importance of "[t]he Blakes' location at Fountain Court in the heart of the theatre district" (28).

Obituaries (From Earliest to Latest)

"William Blake: The Illustrator of The Grave &c." Literary Gazette 551 (18 Aug. 1827): 540-41. Rpt. in BR 465-67.

"William Blake." The Literary Chronicle (1 Sept. 1827): 557-58. Rpt. in BR 468-70.

"William Blake." Monthly Magazine (Oct. 1827): 435. Rpt. in BR 471-72.

"Mr. William Blake" The Gentleman's Magazine (Oct. 1827 [Published 1 Nov. 1827]): Rpt. in BR 473-74.

"[D]erived largely from the account in The Literary Gazette but with some added bibliographical information" (BR 473).

"Mr. William Blake." New Monthly Magazine 21 (1 Dec. 1827): 535-36.

"[S]ilently copied from The Gentleman's Magazine" (BR 477).

The Annual Biography and Obituary for the Year 1828. 12 (1828): 417-18.

See BR 479n* for a description of the sources from which the article was cribbed.

The Annual Register 69 (1827): 253-54.

From The Gentleman's Magazine, but see BR 479-80n† for a description of the changes.

"Scientific Obituary for 1827." Arcana of Science and Art. 3rd ed. 1828. 240. <WBHC 3181>

Lists, among others, "Mr. William Blake, an eminent engraver." Beethoven is also mentioned.

Historic Biographies from Benjamin Malkin (1806) to Alexander Gilchrist (1863 and subsequent editions)

Cunningham, Allan. "William Blake." The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 2. London: John Murray, 1830. 140-79. <BB #1433, BBS 445, WBHC 1904-12> (See also Allan Cunningham in Blake and Members of His Circle)

Cunningham's life was the most popular account of Blake until Alexander Gilchrist's 1863 Life. The second edition contains a more sympathetic view of Blake's poetry, adding "The Chimney Sweeper," "Holy Thursday," "Laughing Song," and "The Lamb" from The Songs of Innocence and "I Love the Jocund Dance" from Poetical Sketches as well as an excerpt of Charles Lamb's letter on Blake to the Quaker poet, Bernard Barton.

The standard edition of Cunningham is in Blake Records, which reprints the second edition, noting the differences from the first edition. See BR 503-44 and Whitehead's "another, but far more amiable enthusiast': References to Catherine and William Blake in the Literary Gazette and La Belle Assemblée \(1830\)" and "Visions of Blake, the Artist': An Early Reference to William Blake in the Times" for reviews of Cunningham's life and accounts of its influence.

Gilchrist, Alexander. Life of William Blake, Pictor Ignotus. 2 vols. London: Macmillan, 1863. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2).⁶¹ <BB #1680, BBS 484, WBHC 2061-72> (See also Alexander Gilchrist in Studies of Blake Criticism)

- 2nd ed., 2 vols. 1880. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2).
- 3rd ed. Ed. William Graham Robertson, London: John Lane Company, 1907. (Combined Vols.) Mineola, NY: Dover, 1998. Rpt. Mineola, NY: Dover, 2017.
- Ed. Ruthven Todd. 1942. Rev. ed. London: J. M. Dent, 1945. <BB #1680, BBS 484, WBHC 2061-72>

Gilchrist's Life remains the primary source for much of our information about Blake's life, and for that reason, it could still be considered a standard biography in many ways despite the host of discoveries since its publication. The second volumes of the 1863 and 1880 editions are each important for their early efforts to document and catalogue Blake's work.

Blake Books describes well the completion of the 1863 edition after the death of Alexander Gilchrist and the changes to made in the 1880s edition and subsequent editions. Robertson's 1907 edition (still in print through Dover) is a one-volume reprint of the 1880 edition, with additional material described by Blake Books.

Todd's 1942 edition (rev. ed. 1945) reprints the first volume of the 1880 edition, but it is useful for its corrections to Gilchrist (according to the knowledge of the time). Blake Books calls the 1945 edition "certainly the cheapest and probably the best biography of Blake which has appeared" (816). WBHC details these various editions and all known reviews.⁶²

⁶¹ Gilchrist on Blake: Life of William Blake Pictor Ignotus, ed. and intro. Richard Holmes (London: Harper Perennial, 2005) features the text of the first volume of the 1863 edition without any of the illustrations, but Holmes's introduction on Gilchrist is worthwhile (Blake [2007], 29).

⁶² See also Todd's "An Accidental Scholar," London Magazine 8 (Jan. 1969), 42-51, <BB #2848>.

The Rossetti Archive has a digital collection tied to Gabrielle Dante Rossetti's contributions to the different editions of the Life, including, notably, digital editions of vol. 2 of the 1863 edition and vol. 1 and vol. 2 of the 1880 edition. The collection also contains digital editions of Rossetti's manuscripts and notebooks related to the Life and his other writings on Blake in his own published works. Shirley Dent's chapter in Women Reading Blake highlights Anne Gilchrist's editorial work.

“The Inventions of William Blake, Painter and Poet.” London University Magazine, vol. 2 (1830). Rpt. in BR 510-17.

An extensive answer to Cunningham's Life that offers its own account of Blake.

Malkin, Benjamin Heath. A Father's Memoirs of His Child. London, 1806. xviii-xli. <BB #482, WBHC 873-77> (See Benjamin Heath Malkin in Blake and Members of His Circle)

The earliest substantial biographical sketch of Blake, who designed the frontispiece to Malkin's memoir of his son. It is the first to reprint some of Blake's poems from Poetical Sketches and The Songs of Innocence and of Experience. The standard edition is found in Blake Records.

Myrone, Martin, ed. and intro. Lives of William Blake: Henry Crabb Robinson, John Thomas Smith, and Alexander Gilchrist. London: Pallas Athene, 2019. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

An accessible reprint of many of the early lives of Blake, with a useful introduction aimed at the general reader.

Robinson, Henry Crabb. “William Blake, Künstler, Dichter un religiöser Schwärmer.” [“William Blake: Artist, Poet, and Religious Mystic.”] Trans. Nikolaus Heinrich Julius. Vaterlandisches Museum I (Jan. 1811): 107-31. <BB #2538, WBHC 2598-99> (See also Henry Crabb Robinson in Blake and Members in His Circle)

Robinson's article on Blake was written in English and translated into Germany by Nikolaus Heinrich Julius, though the original English manuscript is lost.⁶³ The standard edition is in Blake Records.

Robinson, Henry Crabb. “Reminiscences.” Manuscript 1852. Based on diary accounts 1809-27. ⁶⁴ <BB #2533-2537, WBHC 2597-98> (See also Henry Crabb Robinson in Blake and Members in His Circle)

Robinson kept a diary that recorded his multiple meetings with Blake and references to him in conversation. The diary was revised slightly into the manuscript of his “Reminiscences,” which first appeared in print in Diary, Reminiscences, and Correspondence of Henry Crabb Robinson, Barrister-at-Law, F.S.A. 3 vols. (London, 1869), with references to Blake occurring in all three volumes (vol. 1, vol. 2, and vol. 3).

⁶³ The first English translation of the work appeared in Katharine Ada Esaile's “An Early Appreciation of William Blake,” The Library Vol. 5, Ser. 3 (Jul. 1914), 229-56.

⁶⁴ The manuscripts for the diaries and “Reminiscences” are held by the Dr. Williams's Library, reference code DWL/HCR.

The standard edition of the references to Blake in the manuscript is found in Blake Records, where Bentley notes the differences between manuscript and the diary.

Smith, John Thomas. "Blake." Nollekens and His Times. Vol. 2. London: Henry Colburn, 1828. 2nd ed. Vol. 2. 1829. <BB #2723, WBHC 2686-87> (See John Thomas Smith in Blake and Members of His Circle)

Smith knew both Blake and his brother Robert, and the essay is the source for much of our information about Blake's early life. The standard edition is in Blake Records. See BR 490-92 for reviews of Smith and an account of his influence.

Strange, John Clark. "Journal." Manuscript held by the University of Brighton.⁶⁵ <WBHC 2712>

Strange, a nineteenth-century Quaker, considered writing a biography of Blake in 1850s, but when he learned of Gilchrist's efforts, he abandoned the project. Most of his information is similar to what is found in Gilchrist. The journal only came to light in 1980s and was first published in full in the second edition of Blake Records, which is the standard edition.

Tatham, Frederick. "Life of Blake." Manuscript in Yale Center for British Art. c. 1832. <BB #2823, WBHC 2753>

As a young man, Tatham knew Blake, but the facts in his "Life" can be surprisingly unreliable. The manuscript of Tatham's "Life" was once bound with Jerusalem Copy E. The manuscript was first published in Archibald G. B. Russell's The Letters of William Blake Together with a Life by Frederic Tatham (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1906. London: Methuen and Co., 1906.) <BB #88>. The standard edition is found in Blake Records.

[Watkins, John, and Frederick Shoberl.] A Biographical Diction of the Living Authors of Great Britain and Ireland. London, 1816. <BB #2929>

References to Blake are found under "Blake, W."; "Blake, William"; and "Hayley, William."

⁶⁵ For an initial account of the manuscript, see Ray Watkinson, "A Meeting with Mr. Rossetti," Journal of Pre-Raphaelite Studies 4 (1983), 136-39, <BBS 674>.

Popular Biographies

Ackroyd, Peter. Blake. London: Sinclair-Stevenson, 1995. I. <WBHC 117, 1459-68, Blake (2024)>

Widely read and reviewed, offers a few original findings.

Bedard, Michael. William Blake: The Gates of Paradise. Toronto: Tundra Books, 2006. <WBHC 1589-90>

A well-received biography aimed at a young adult audience. For Children: The Gates of Paradise copy D is reproduced.

Beer, John. William Blake: A Literary Life. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. <WBHC 1594>

A good overview of Blake's life and his literary works.

Cox, Judy. William Blake: The Scourge of Tyrants. London: Redwords, 2004. Revolutionary Portraits 6.⁶⁶

A short survey of the life and works, highlighting his political views.

Damrosch, Leo. Eternity's Sunrise: The Imaginative World of William Blake. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2015. <WBHC 1918>

A biography and critical account of Blake writings. A very accessible introduction to his life and works, although some reviewers complained that it oversimplified Blake.

Davis, Michael. William Blake: A New Kind of Man. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1977. UC Press's Voices Revived Series. University of California Press, 2023. <BBS 449, WBHC 1929-30, Blake (2024)>

A very readable synthesis of the biographical work on Blake to that date.

Lindsay, Jack. William Blake: His Life and Work. London: Constable, 1978. <BBS 552>

A popular biography of Blake.

Whittaker, Jason. Divine Images: The Life and Work of William Blake. London: Reaktionbooks, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023, 2024)>

The most up-to-date account of Blake's life that offers insightful readings of Blake's writings and art that is rooted in twenty-first century scholarship.

Studies⁶⁷

Butlin, Martin. "A New Portrait of William Blake." Blake Studies 7.2 (1975): 101-03. <BBS 411>

First description of the portrait of Blake that emerged in 1974. Butlin attributes the painting to John Linnell and dates it to c. 1819-25. Essick challenges Butlin's attribution and dating in "A \(Self?\) Portrait of William Blake".

⁶⁶ WBHC records Angus Whitehead's review in Blake Journal 9 (p. 1756) but not the book itself.

⁶⁷ A "Portrait of W. Blake, R.A. in pen and ink" by William Ensom was recorded in the sale catalogue, Catalogue of the Select and Choice Collection of Engravings, Water-Colour Drawings, Picture-Books, and Books of Prints and Other Effects, of the late William Ensom, Esq. (London, 1832), lot 86, <BB #543>. The drawing is untraced.

Crosby, Mark. “The Sketch on the Verso of Blake’s Self-Portrait: An Identification.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.2 (fall 2007): 92-95. <WBHC 1714>

Identifies the sketch on the verso as “the colonnade of Hayley’s Turret House” (WBHC 1714), buttressing Essick argument for the painting’s date in “A \(Self?\) Portrait of William Blake.”

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 2005.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 178-79. <WBHC 1705, 3052>

Describes and reproduces Cumberland’s “Portrait of Catherine Blake(?)” (c. 1783-85[?]) and Stothard’s pencil sketch, “Mr Blake Engraver by | Stothard” (c. 1780).

Essick, Robert N. “A \(Self?\) Portrait of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.3 (winter 2005-06): 126-39. <WBHC 1705>

Argues that the painting is a self-portrait by Blake, composed not long after 1802—the date of the paper’s watermark.

Thompson, Raymond E. “The ‘Double’ of the Double Portrait of Blake: A Description of Tatham’s Replica Portrait.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 29-32. <BBS 388>

On copy of the portrait of the young and old Blake made by Frederick Tatham for the Butts family.

Catherine Blake (1762-1831) <Butlin #C1-3>

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake's shadow.” Times Literary Supplement (17 Mar. 1978): 320.⁶⁸ <BBS 366>

Prints Catherine’s 1 Aug. and 4 Aug. 1829 letters to Lord Egremont.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake's Shadow at Work. Catherine Blake's Assistance to Her Husband.” Notes and Queries 64.1 (Mar. 2017): 38-46. <Blake (2018)>

Includes a list of works “possibly” or ‘probably’ colored by Catherine Blake.

Connolly, Tristanne J. William Blake and the Body. Hounds mills and New York: Palgrave, 2002.⁶⁹ <WBHC 1881-82>

An influential book on Blake’s various notions of and representations of the body, addressing the influence of anatomical art, physical bodies and birth (including miscarriages and abortions), parent and child relationships, and resurrected bodies. She suggests that Catherine Blake was listed as a patient on 26 August 1796 at the Lambeth lying-in hospital and posits it as likely that Catherine experienced many miscarriages.

Crosby, Mark, and Angus Whitehead. “Georgian Superwoman or ‘the maddest of the two?’ Recovering the Historical Catherine Blake, 1762-1831.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 83-107. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An important reconsideration of Catherine, but some of their conclusions were questioned in Joseph Visconti’s article, “Posthumous Blake.”

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake's 'Female Will' and Its Biographical Context.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 31 (1991): 615-30. <BBS 466, WBHC 2003>

Important essay that examines Blake’s relationship to Catherine Blake, Elizabeth Butts, Mary Wollstonecraft, and the engraver Caroline Watson in order “[t]o understand how Blake’s interactions with them influenced his poetic representations of women” (615).

Essick, Robert N., and Jenijoy La Belle. “The Blakes at Their Press.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.3 (winter 2015-16): 8 pars. <WBHC 1746>

Reexamines the pencil sketch in Blake’s Dante in the Empyrean, Drinking at the River of Light (Butlin 812.98) as a portrait of William and Catherine at their press.

Greer, Germaine. “‘No Earthly Parents I confess’: the Clod, the Pebble and Catherine Blake.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 78-90. <WBHC 1795-1800>

⁶⁸ See Geoffrey Keynes response, TLS (Apr. 1978), 393.

⁶⁹ Incorporates Connolly’s “Miscarriage Imagery in Blake,” Romanticism 7.2 (2001), 145-62, not recorded in WBHC; “William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy,” Spectres of Romanticism: The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics, ed. Sarah Ruston with assistance by Lidia Garbin. (Lewiston, NY, Queenston, ON, Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999), 19-42, <WBHC 1882>.

On William's and Catherine's infertility, with biographical readings of The Book of Thel and "The Clod & the Pebble."

Michael, Jennifer Davis. "Behn, Bysshe, and the Blakes: Bibliomancy and the Joys of Unbinding." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 89-109. <Blake (2025)>

Considers Catherine Blake's practice of bibliomancy recorded in the Notebook in order to examine it as a "space containing several genres" and as "thus record[ing] a palimpsest of acts of excision which are also acts of pleasure" (abstract).

Otto, Peter. "'second Birth' and Gothic Fictions in Matthew Lewis's The Monk, Catherine Blake's 'Agnes,' and William Blake's Vala, or The Four Zoas." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 77-102. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

With substantial analysis of Catherine's painting of Agnes from The Monk, Otto reads The Four Zoas "as a Gothic fiction that takes ruin [...] and the dynamics of ruination [...] as its primary themes" (77).

Paley, Morton D., and Mark Crosby. Catherine Blake and Her Marriage: Two Notes." Huntington Library Quarterly 78.3 (2015): 479-91. <WBHC 2503>

Two shorter pieces published together: Paley, "The Torments of Love and Jealousy in William and Catherine Blake" (479-85) and Crosby, "The Lamentations of Catherine Blake" (485-91). Paley focuses on 1790s, and Crosby, on William Hayley's references to Catherine, Blake's and Hayley's comparison of her to Margaret Klopstock, and the underlining in Hayley's Triumph of Temper (British Library, General Reference Collection 11656.g.8), which Crosby argues was done by her.

Read, Dennis M. "'An Eminent but Neglected Genius': An Early Frederick Tatham Letter about William Blake." English Language Notes 19.1 (1981): 29-33. <BBS 618>

Transcribes a 11 Apr. 1829 letter sent to John Pye, the engraver, by Frederick Tatham on behalf of Catherine Blake in response to a letter Pye evidently sent to Blake's old address 3 Fountain Court, which inquired after works for sale.

Reed, Ashley. Craft and Care: The Maker Movement, Catherine Blake, and the Digital Humanities." Essays in Romanticism 23.1 (Apr. 2016): 23-38. <Blake (2016)>

Examines the rhetoric around the Maker movement to suggest it "obscured and even denigrates the care work that stand behind and enables Making" and applies "this insight to a discussion of Catherine Blake," underscoring "the difficulty of uncovering and representing this work within current academic frameworks [including the Blake Archive]" (25).

Stevenson, W. "William Blake's Ladder." The Blake Journal 5 (2000): 23-32. <WBHC 1747>

Suggests that evidence of tension between William and Catherine can be found in Vala and Jerusalem.

Whitehead, Angus. “an excellent saleswoman: The Last Years of Catherine Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.3 (winter 2011-12): 76-90. <WBHC 2009>

Corrects Blake Records on Catherine’s residences, though some of Whitehead’s claims are disputed by Viscomi’s article, “Posthumous Blake.”

Whitehead, Angus. “another, but far more amiable enthusiast: References to Catherine and William Blake in the Literary Gazette and La Belle Assemblée (1830).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013): 4 par. <WBHC 1735>

Considers unrecorded reviews of Cunningham’s “Life of Blake” that elicited concern for Catherine, and raises the possibility that William had friendly connections to La Belle Assemblée.

Whitehead, Angus. “But, Kitty, I better love thee: George Richmond’s Annotations to ‘song [I love the jocund dance]’ in Volume II of Gilchrist’s Life of William Blake (1863).” Blake Journal 9 (2005): 87-97. <WBHC 1756>

Makes the case that Richmond’s reference to Catherine in the annotations indicates that the “Song” was written after 1777.

Whitehead, Angus, and Joel Gwynne. “The Sexual Life of Catherine B.: Women Novelists, Blake Scholars and Contemporary Fabulations of Catherine Blake.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.⁷⁰ 193-210. <WBHC 1803-04>

Uses depictions of Catherine Blake in the novels of Barbara Lachman, Janet Warner, Beryl Kingston, and Tracy Chevalier to explore “the possibilities of Catherine’s sexual life” (208).

Viscomi, Joseph. “Posthumous Blake: The Roles of Catherine Blake, C.H. Tatham, and Frederick Tatham in Blake's Afterlife.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.2 (fall 2019): 141 par. <Blake (2020)>

The definitive account of Catherine Blake after William’s death and of the posthumous printings of Blake’s works.

⁷⁰ Many papers were delivered at the conference “Blake, Gender and Sexuality in the Twenty-First Century, aka The Sexy Blake Conference, 15-16 July 2010, St Aldate’s, Oxford” (17n1).

On Writing Blake's Biography

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "All the Evidence That's Fit to Print." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.1 (Jun. 1968): 11-13. <BB #1217.19>

On biographical claims regarding Blake by R.C. Jackson (BB #1934-41) and which are credible.

Dent, Shirley. "The right stuff in the right hands": Anne Gilchrist and The Life of William Blake." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 35-43. <WBHC 1800-01>

An appreciation and analysis of Anne Gilchrist's role in editing and publishing her husband's manuscript.

Ward, Aileen. "William Blake and the Hagiographers." Biography and Source Studies. Ed. Frederick R. Karl. New York: AMS Press, 1997. 1-24. <WBHC 2834>

"‘Blake’s early biographers’, and presumably all biographers of all individuals, wrote on the basis of distorting ‘biographical formulae’; ‘we must see Blake’s biography as a castle built on sand’ (pp. 12, 14)" (WBHC 2834).

Whitehead, Angus. "‘New matter’: Mona Wilson’s The Life of William Blake 85 Years On." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 69-88. <WBHC 1871-73>

An important (and overdue) biographical account of Wilson and a description of her Life of William Blake, including details about the different editions.

Blake and Members of His Circle (See also Collectors Contemporary with Blake)

Introductions

Mee, Jon. "Networks." William Blake in Context. Ed. Susan Haggerty. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 15-22. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

General (Work on Multiple Members of Blake's Circle)

Asleson, Robyn. The British Paintings at the Huntington. [San Marino:]: The Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens in association with Yale University Press, New Haven and London, 2001.

Includes paintings by members of Blake's circle: Richard Cosway, Thomas Lawrence, John Linnell, John Hamilton Mortimer, Joshua Reynolds, and George Romney.

Alexander, David, ed. Affecting Moments: Prints of English Literature Made in the Age of Romantic Sensibility 1775-1800. York: University of York, 1993. <WBHC 2930-31>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in 1993 at the University of York. The catalogue contains prints "from David Alexander's collection" (WBHC 2931), and includes engravings by Francesco Bartolozzi, James Parker, William Wynne Ryland, Louis Schiavonetti, Robert Thew, and Caroline Watson.

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

An exceedingly useful resource that, in addition to its biographies of engravers contemporary with Blake (including most members of his circle), contains a historical overview of the profession and a list of apprentices.

Baker, Christopher. English Drawings and Watercolours 1600-1900. National Gallery of Scotland. Edinburgh: Trustees of the National Gallery of Scotland, 2011. <WBHC 1391-92>

"The Blakes in the National Gallery of Scotland (pp. 42-49) include Blake's 'Hecate' <Butlin #317>, 'God Writing on the Tables of the Covenant' <#448>, and 'Job Confessing his Presumption to God Who Answers from the Whirlwind' <#461>. There are also sections on John Flaxman (pp. 114- 16), Samuel Palmer (pp. 234-40), and Thomas Stothard (pp. 333-38)" (WBHC 1391-92).

Baskett, John. English Drawings and Watercolors 1550-1850 In the Collection of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon. New York: Harper and Row, 1972. <WBHC 1177-78>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Morgan Library and Museum from 13 Apr. to 28 Jul 1972. Includes works by Blake and many members of his circle.

Canon-Brookes, Peter, ed. The Painted Word: British History Painting, 1750-1830. Woodbridge, Suffolk, and Rochester, NY: Boydell Press, 1991. <WBHC 2929>

A catalogue with collection of essays on painting from Hogarth to Reynolds; Benjamin West; Print Makers and Sellers; Patriotism; and the Boydell Shakespeare gallery.

Chadwick, Esther. The Radical Print. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

“Across five chapters, this book brings printmakers James Barry, John Hamilton Mortimer, James Gillray, Thomas Bewick, and William Blake together as artists of the ‘Paper Age’ for the first time. From Barry’s experiments in aquatint at the time of the American Revolution to Blake’s visionary engravings of the post-Napoleonic period, Chadwick shows how the print medium provided artists with special purchase on the major political issues of their age” (Publisher’s description).

Clinton, Daniel. “Line and Lineage: Visual Form in Herman Melville’s Pierre and Timoleon.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 73.1 (2018): 1-29. <Blake (2019)>

Considers Melville’s idea of form and outline in relationship to Blake, George Cumberland, John Flaxman, and John Ruskin.

Dias, Rosie. Exhibiting Englishness: John Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery and the Formation of a National Aesthetic. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2013. <WBHC 2940>

Argues that the Boydell Shakespeare gallery was instrumental in shaping a new idea of English art, and considers many of the painters and engravers who contributed to the project (especially Reynolds, Northcott, and Fuseli); the Royal Academy’s exhibition practices; and other gallery projects.

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Eccentric Visions: Drawings by Henry Fuseli, William Blake, and Their Contemporaries. <WBHC 1413>

An exhibition of “drawings and watercolors by Fuseli, William Blake, and the artists most closely associated with them, including George Romney, John Flaxman, Joseph Wright of Derby, James Barry, John Brown, and Richard Cosway.” Held at the Huntington Art Gallery from 22 Nov. 2014 to 17 Mar. 2015. No catalogue was produced, but see the link in the title for a description of the exhibition.

Firestone, Evan R. “Mist and Gothicism in British Painting.” Mist and Fog in British and European Painting: Fuseli, Friedrich, Turner, Monet and Their Contemporaries. London: Lund Humphries Publishers Ltd., 2023. 19-57. <Blake (2024)>

In a chapter on mist, obscurity, the supernatural, and the Gothic in the Romantic era, reproduces Blake’s The Ghost of Samuel Appearing to Saul (c. 1800) <Butlin #458>; The Temptation and Fall of Eve (1808) <Butlin #536.9>; and Milton’s Mysterious Dream (c. 1816-20) <Butlin #543.11> (titled Mysterious Dream in the catalogue). The chapter also discusses many members of Blake’s circle, most prominently Fuseli, but also Mortimer, Stothard, Romney, and Maria Cosway. Blake’s annotations to Reynolds are discussed briefly in the chapter, “Conclusion: Another Look at the Sublime,” on p. 148.

Garlick, Kenneth, Angus Macintyre, Kathryn Cave, and Evelyn Newby, ed. The Diary of Joseph Farington. 15 vols. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1978-1998. <WBHC 2012-13>

Farington records much important news, gossip, and happenings in the artistic circles of Romantic-era London. “The important references to Blake of 19 February, 24 June 1796, 12 January 1797, 30 November 1805” are found in volumes “II, 497, 588-89[;] III, 456-57[; and] VII, 2652” (WBHC 2012-13).

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks (“Hidden Dreams,” 31-67) and John Flaxman (“Poetic Departures,” 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Green, Matthew. “Outlining the ‘Human Form Divine’: Reading Blake’s Thoughts on Outline and Response to Locke alongside Lavater and Cumberland.” European Romantic Review 15 (2004): 511-32. <WBHC 2103>

“[O]ur understanding of Blake’s thoughts on redemptive form, both human and artistic, can benefit from a consideration of Lavater’s Aphorisms (1788) and Essays on Physiognomy (1789–98),² as well as George Cumberland’s Thoughts on Outline (1796)” (512).

Hagstrum Jean H. “Blake and British Art: The Gifts of Grace and Terror.” Images of Romanticism: Verbal and Visual Affinities. Ed. Karl Kroeber and William Ealling. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1978. 61-80. <BBS 498>

A good overview of Blake in relationship to the art of Barry, Fuseli, Romney, Flaxman, Stothard, Mortimer, and Banks.

Hammelmann, Hanns. Book Illustrators in Eighteenth-Century England. Ed. and Completed by T.S.R. Boase. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1975.

A useful listing of illustrators and the works they illustrated. It includes Blake and many members of his circle.

Hay, Daisy. Dinner with Joseph Johnson: Books and Friendship in a Revolutionary Age. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023-2025)>

An engaging and detailed book on Joseph Johnson and his circle. Blake is a minor but recurrent player. There are well-told accounts regarding the many members of Blake’s circle with ties to Johnson. These include Erasmus Darwin, John Gabriel Stedman, and William Cowper (and William Hayley’s relationship to him), with Henry Fuseli and Mary Wollstonecraft given extensive attention.

Herrmann, Luke. Nineteenth Century British Painting. London: DLM (Giles de la Mare Publishers Limited), 2000. <WBHC 2144>

A very useful discussions of British painting in Blake's era. In additions to its chapter, "William Blake (1757-1827) and Samuel Palmer (1805-81)" (66-83), there are also chapters on many members of Blake's circle, including Henry Fuseli, Thomas Lawrence, and John Varley.

Hooze, Robert, ed. British Vision: Observation and Imagination in British Art. Brussels: Mercatorfonds, 2007. 314-17. <WBHC 1362>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Museum voor Schone Kunsten, Ghent, from 6 Oct. 2007 to 13 Jan. 2008. Includes the Arlington Court Picture, Dante watercolors, and selections from Innocence, Urizen, and Jerusalem, along with work by members of Blake's circle.

Ibata, Hélène. "The Sublime Contained: Academic Compromises." The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke's "Philosophical Enquiry" to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 109-43. <Blake (2020)>

The chapter discusses Barry, West, and Fuseli.

Irwin, David. "William Blake and His Circle." English Neoclassical Art. London: Faber and Faber, 1966. 81-86. <BB #1920, WBHC 2196>

On Blake's artistic circle (particularly Fuseli and Romney), with subsequent references to Blake's view of the Venetian and Florentine and his relationship to Flaxman .

Jenkins, Susan. "The Politics of Public Monuments: Parliamentary Commissions of Monuments for Westminster Abbey in 1798." Sculpture Journal 30.1 (2021): 9-29. <Blake (2022)>

Considers John Flaxman's monument (1798–1804) to Captain James Montagu and John Bacon's monument (1798–1804) to Captains John Harvey and John Hutt "as case studies in the politics of commissioning and installation" (11). The appendix includes "unpublished documents relating to the commissioning of the monument to Captain James Montagu at Westminster Abbey" (26) that relate to Flaxman. There are also passing references to Allan Cunningham, Joseph Farington, Thomas Banks, Joseph Nollekens, and Prince Hoare, but none to Flaxman's Letter to the Committee for Raising the Naval Pillar (1799) and Blake's engravings for it.

Lee, T. C. "Anatomy and Academies of Art II—A Tale of Two Cities." Journal of Anatomy 236.4 (2020): 577-87. <Blake (2022)>

On the teaching of anatomy at both the Royal Academy of Arts (London) and the Royal Hibernian Academy of Arts (Dublin), with substantial discussion of William Hunter, the first professor of anatomy at the Royal Academy.

Lenihan, Liam. "Wollstonecraft's Reading of Milton and the Sublime of Barry, Fuseli and Blake." The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Considers the responses to Milton by Wollstonecraft, Barry, Fuseli, and Blake, with references to Visions of the Daughters of Albion, Edmund Burke, and William Godwin.

Lukacher, Brian. "Visionary History Painting: Blake and His Contemporaries." Nineteenth-Century Art: A Critical History. Ed. Stephen F. Eisenman. London: Thames & Hudson, 1994. 2nd ed. 2004. 3rd ed. 2007. 102-18. <WBHC 2351>

A good overview, with references to James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and the sublime.

McCue, Maureen, and Sophie Thomas, ed. The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. <Blake (2024)>

A collection of essays that examines British Romanticism and the visual arts, frequently touching on Blake, members of his circle, or practices associated with them.

McNeil, Peter. "Sir Joseph Banks: 'the Fly Catching Macaroni'" and "Richard Cosway: 'the Macaroni Painter.'" Pretty Gentlemen: Macaroni Men and the Eighteenth-Century Fashion World. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2018. 101-05 and 105-14. <Blake (2022)>

Sections on depictions of Banks and Cosway as Macaronis. The book contains passing references to Angelica Kauffman and John Caspar Lavater.

Myrone, Martin. Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. <WBHC 2446>

In addition to its chapters on Barry, Banks, Mortimer, Fuseli, and Blake, offers a wealth of information on Blake's circle, including Romney and Flaxman.

Paley, Morton D. "'Wonderful Originals'—Blake and Ancient Sculpture." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 170-97. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers the sources from which Blake would have learned about classical sculpture and his references to it in his works and in the works of his circle.

Pressly, William L. The Artist as Original Genius: Shakespeare's "Fine Frenzy" in Late-Eighteenth-Century British Art. Newark: University of Delaware Press, 2007. <WBHC 2998>

On illustrations of Shakespeare by many members of Blake's artistic circle, with a discussion of Blake's Albion rose in relationship to Chatterton.

Spies-Gans, Paris Amanda. "Exceptional, but Not Exceptions: Public Exhibitions and the Rise of the Woman Artist in London and Paris, 1760–1830." Eighteenth-Century Studies 51.4 (2018): 393-416. <Blake (2022)>

Documents women who exhibited their art in London and Paris, with references to individual artists, such as Mary Moser (1744–1819), Angelica Kauffman (1741–1807), and Mary Ann Flaxman (1768–1833), and to the practices of the Royal Academy, Associated Artists in Water-Colours, and the Society of British Artists regarding female artists.

Spies-Gans, Paris A. A Revolution on Canvas: The Rise of Women Artists in Britain and France, 1760–1830. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2022.⁷¹ <Blake (2024)>

An important discussion of women artists in Blake's period, with quantitative analyses of their work, their presence in exhibitions, and the genres in which they worked. The female artists considered who were in or near Blake's circle include Maria Cosway, Angelica Kauffman, Mary Moser, Mary Ann Flaxman, Maria Denman, Mary Hoare, Maria Spilsbury, Anne Seymour Damer, and Anne Mee, and Frances Reynolds. The Royal Academy, the Free Society of Artists, and the Society of Artists of Great Britain, and male artists, including Fuseli, Richard Cosway, John Flaxman, George Romney, and Joshua Reynolds are also referenced.

Spies-Gans, Paris A. "Why Do We Think There Have Been No Great Women Artists? Revisiting Linda Nochlin and the Archive." Art Bulletin 104.4 (2022): 70–94.⁷² <Blake (2024)>

Engages with Nochlin's influential feminist essay, "Why Have There Been No Great Women Artists?"⁷³ and considers the response of feminist art historians since, before highlighting the impediments women artists faced and overcame in late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Touches on Maria Cosway, Angelica Kauffman, Mary Moser, Maria Denman, and Mary Ann Flaxman.

Stephens, Richard. "The Minute Books of the Royal Academy Under Sir Joshua Reynolds, 1768–92." Volume of the Walpole Society 81 (2019): 1–454.

Detailed transcriptions with references to many members of Blake's circle involved with the Royal Academy.

Wilton, Andrew, and Anne Lyles. The Great Age of British Watercolours 1750–1880. Munich: Prestel-Verlag, 1993. <WBHC 2930>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Royal Academy of Arts from 15 Jan. to 12 April and at The National Gallery of Art from 9 May to 25 July 1993. Includes watercolors by Blake, John Linnell, Samuel Palmer, George Richmond, Cornelius Varley, John Varley, and James Ward.

The Ancients (See also Edward Calvert, John Linnell, Samuel Palmer, George Richmond, and John Varley)

Barush, Kathryn R. "Pilgrimage and the Art of 'The Ancients.'" Art and the Sacred Journey in Britain, 1790–1850. Abingdon: Routledge, 2016. 147–99. <Blake (2019)>

Considers their depictions of pilgrimage.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake, Samuel Palmer, and George Richmond." Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 43–50. <BB #1218.30>

⁷¹ Incorporates Spies-Gans's article, "Exceptional, but Not Exceptions: Public Exhibitions and the Rise of the Woman Artist in London and Paris, 1760–1830," Eighteenth-Century Studies 51.4 (2018), 393–416, <Blake (2022)>.

⁷² As Spies-Gans notes, "Parts of this and the prior paragraph overlap with Spies-Gans, Revolution on Canvas, 293–94, 299" (94, n118).

⁷³ Nochlin, "Why Have There Been No Great Women Artists?" ARTnews 69.9 (Jan. 1971), 22–39, 67–71. Spies-Gans records other scholarly engagement with Nochlin's essay, including Nochlin's own, published in Why Have There Been No Great Women Artists? (New York: Thames and Hudson, 2021).

Records George Richmond's annotations to his edition of Gilchrist, including his sketch of 3 Fountain Court. There are also other references to Blake by Palmer and others—now all in BR.

Binyon, Laurence. The Followers of William Blake: Edward Calvert, Samuel Palmer, George Richmond and their Circle. New York: Balch and Company, 1925. Reissued ed. New York and London: Benjamin Blom, 1968. <BB #1201, WBHC 1633>

A black and white catalogue featuring Blake's Virgil woodcuts and work by Edward Calvert, Samuel Palmer, John Linnell, George Richmond, and others.

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, Linnell and Varley and A Treatise on Zodiacial Physiognomy.” Burning Bright: Essays in Honour of David Bindman. Ed. Diana Dethloff, et al. London: UCL Press, 2015. 126-35. <WBHC 1817-18>

A description of the drawings for Zodiacial Physiognomy and what they suggest about Blake, Linnell, and Varley.

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, the Varleys, and the Patent Graphic Telescope.” William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 294-304. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Argues that John Linnell and John Varley used the “Graphic Telescope” invented by Cornelius Varley to copy Blake’s Visionary Heads and The Man who taught Blake painting in his Dreams.

Cooke, Gordon. Samuel Palmer, His Friends and His Followers: Edward Calvert, George Richmond, Frederick Griggs, Paul Drury, Graham Sutherland, Robin Tanner. London: The Fine Arts Society, 2012.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fine Arts Society from 30 May to 22 Jun. 2012.

Davidson, Peter. “The Music of the Ancients.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.2 (fall 1981): 98-100. <BBS 392>

On the songs and poems sung by the Ancients.

[William Weston Gallery.] The English Vision: An Exhibition of Original Prints by William Blake 1757-1827, Samuel Palmer 1805-1881, Edward Calvert 1799-1883. London: William Weston Gallery, 1985. <BBS 303>

“There are some sixty unnumbered pages in this small, but illustrated catalogue of a sale exhibition. The forty-seven items offered included sets of Blake’s Virgil wood-engravings, his Job prints, as well as some of the rarer Calvert engravings” (Blake <1986-87>).

Evans, Mark. “Blake, Calvert—and Palmer? The Album of Alexander Constantine Ionides.” Burlington Magazine 144.1194 (2002): 539-49.⁷⁴

⁷⁴ Not recorded in WBHC.

On the album of Alexander Constantine Ionides (1833-1900), an associate of Edward Calvert, that contains Blake's Virgil woodcuts, and works by other Ancients, including Calvert and, as argued, Samuel Palmer.

Huntington Library Quarterly 46.1 (1983). Special issue: "Essays on Blake and His Followers." Also published separately as a collection titled, Essays on the Blake Followers (1983).⁷⁵ <BBS 517, WBHC 2175>

An important set of essays exploring Blake's relationship with the Ancients and his influence on them.

Linnell, David. Blake, Palmer, Linnell and Co.: The Life of John Linnell. Sussex, England: The BookGuild Ltd, 1994. <WBHC 2334-35>

Important recent biography of John Linnell, with original information based on Linnell-family sources, including references to William and Catherine Blake.

Lister, Raymond. Beulah to Byzantium: A Study of Parallels in the Works of W.B. Yeats, William Blake, Samuel Palmer, and Edward Calvert. Dublin: Dolmen Press, 1965. <BB #2134>

Points to parallels in theme and motifs.

Lister, Raymond. "The Followers of William Blake." With My Own Wings: The Memoirs of Raymond Lister. Cambridge, England: The Oleander Press, 1994. 145-52. <WBHC 2336>

"An autobiographical account of his work particularly on Calvert, Palmer, and Richmond" (WBHC 2336).

Lister, Raymond. "The National Gallery & Blake's 'spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 105-06. <BBS 396>

On the 1870 attempt to sell the painting to the National Gallery by George Richmond and Samuel Palmer.

Paley, Morton D. "The Art of 'The Ancients.'" Huntington Library Quarterly 52.1 (1989): 97-124. <BSS 517-18, WBHC 2175-76>

A key essay on Blake's influence on the works of Samuel Palmer, Edward Calvert, and George Richmond.

Phillips, Michael. William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. Exhibition held at the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, from 4 Dec. 2014 to 1 Mar. 2015. <WBHC 1413-20>

Phillips's catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake's early and late years in two sections titled, "Education" and "Innovation." In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, "Inspiration," contains essays by others on the Ancients.

Visconti, Joseph. William Blake and His Followers. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University, 1983. <BBS 299>

⁷⁵ The papers were delivered at the Huntington Library and Art Gallery symposium, "Prints by the Blake Followers," held on 13 Feb. 1982.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Herbert E. Johnson Museum of Art from 15 Mar. to 17 Apr. 1983.

Wilcox, Timoth. The Triumph of Watercolour: The Early Years of the Royal Watercolour Society 1805-55. London: Philip Wilson Publishers, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Dulwich Picture Gallery from 2 Feb. to 24 Apr. and at the Whitworth Art Gallery, Manchester, from 13 May to 7 Aug. 2005.

Highlights the place of John and Cornelius Varley, with references to the other Ancients and some to Blake.

Wilson, Louise. “Printing Imperfections in William Blake’s Virgil Wood Engravings and What They Reveal.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 56.2 (fall 2022): 20 pars. <Blake (2023)>

A technical examination of the posthumous prints produced by John Linnell, Edward Calvert, and possibly Catherine Blake from Blake’s Virgil woodblocks that “provide a tangible commentary on the complex history of Blake’s Virgil woodblocks and the various artists who printed from them” (par. 1).

Wilson, Simon. “Blake and his Followers.” Tate Gallery: An Illustrated Companion. London: Tate Publishing, 1987. 29-32. Rpt. 1990. 65-73. <BBS 681, WBHC 2873>

A short overview.

Wilton, Andrew, and Anne Lyles. The Great Age of British Watercolours 1750-1880. Munich: Prestel-Verlag, 1993. <WBHC 2930>

A catalogue for the exhibition at the National Gallery, UK, featuring work by Blake and by most of the Ancients.

Banks, Thomas (1735–1805), Sculptor

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Julius Bryant)

Cunningham, Allan. “Thomas Banks.” The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 3. London: John Murray, 1830.

Cunningham, Peter. “New Materials for the Life of Thomas Banks, R.A.” The Builder 21 (3 Jan. 1863): 3-5, (17 Jan. 1863): 45.

European Magazine. “An Account of Mr. Thomas Banks.” 18 (Jul. 1790): 23-24.

Flaxman, John. “An Address to the President and members of the Royal Academy on the Death of Thomas Banks, Sculptor.” Lectures on Sculpture. 2nd and rev. ed. London, 1838.

Sullivan, M.G. “Banks, Thomas RA 1735-1805.” A Biographical Dictionary of Sculptors in Britain 1660-1851. Ed. Ingrid Roscoe, Emma Hard, and M.G. Sullivan. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2009. 66-74.

A substantial biographical sketch with a list of his works (Funeral Monuments, Chimneypieces, Architectural Sculpture, Reliefs, and Miscellaneous) with locations and associated literature.

The same volume contains an entry on Banks’s brother, Charles Banks (c. 1754-92).

Writing

Bell, C.F. Annals of Thomas Banks: Sculptor Royal Academician, With Some Letters from Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A., to Banks's Daughter. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1938.

Includes Banks's letters, with references to many in Blake's circle.

Catalogues

Bryant, Julius. Thomas Banks, 1735-1805: Britain's First Modern Sculpture. London: Soane Gallery, 2005.⁷⁶

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Sir John Soane's Museum from 21 Jan to 9 Apr. 2005.

Studies

Blake and Banks

O'Rourke, Stephanie. “Art after Self Evidence: Fuseli, Blake, and Banks.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 497-513. <Blake (2023)>

“[C]onsiders how models of artistic neoclassicism and scientific experimental procedures shared an investment in the evidentiary authority of an idealized male body” (abstract).

Banks without Blake

Barrell, John. “Thomas Banks and the Society for Constitutional Information.” Living with the Royal Academy: Artistic Ideals and Experiences in England, 1768-1848. Ed. Sarah Monks, John Barrell, and Mark Hallett. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2013. 131-52.

On Banks's radicalism, arguing that he was more radical than James Barry.

Bindman, David. “Thomas Banks's ‘Caractacus before Claudius’: New Letters to and from Ozias Humphrey.” Burlington Magazine 142.1173 (2000): 769-71.

Newly discovered letters and a draft between Thomas and Elizabeth Banks and Humphry regarding George Grenville of Stowe's refusal to pay for Banks's bas-relief. Other letters from the correspondence can be found in Bell's Annals of Thomas Bank.

Bryant, Julius. “The Church Memorials of Thomas Banks.” Church Monuments 1.1 (1985): 49-64.

Bryant, Julius. “Mourning Achilles: A Missing Sculpture by Thomas Banks.” Burlington Magazine 125 (1983): 742-45.

On the lost sculpture.

Bryant, Julius. “The Royal Academy's ‘violent democrat’: Thomas Banks.” British Art Journal 6.3 (2005): 51-58.

Provides an account of Flaxman's Address to the Royal Academy on Banks and explores “Banks's sculptures and correspondence in this light the political outlook [political radicalism] with which he is identified” (51).

Bryant, Julius. “Thomas Banks's Anatomical Crucifixion: A Tale of Death and Dissection.” Apollo 133 (1991): 409-11.

⁷⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

About Banks's study of anatomy that included using skinned cadavers to correctly model the crucifixion. References to Benjamin West, Richard Cosway, John Hunter, and John Flaxman.

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake \(2022\)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks ("Hidden Dreams," 31-67) and John Flaxman ("Poetic Departures," 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Hughes, Eleanor. "Smoke and Marble: Thomas Banks' Monument to Captain George Blagdon Westcott." The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London: Routledge, 2017. 163-87.

On the tension between Banks's political beliefs and his commission for the monument of a naval hero, with many excerpts from Banks's correspondence with George Cumberland.

Monks, Sarah. "Making Love: Thomas Banks' Camadeva and the Discourses of British India c. 1790." Visual Culture in Britain 11.2 (2010): 195-218.

Sullivan, M[atthew] G[reg]. "Cunningham, Chantrey, and the British School of Sculpture." The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London and New York: Routledge, 2017. 210-32.

"I seek to understand Cunningham's conception of a national school of sculpture within the parameters of his broader literary oeuvre" (210). Highlights Cunningham's relationship to the sculptor Francis Chantrey, his literary work, and his lives of Banks and Flaxman.

Stainton, L. "A Re-discovered Bas-relief by Thomas Banks." Burlington Magazine 116 (1974): 327-29.

Barry, James (1741-1806), Painter

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, William L. Pressly)

Allan, David G.C. "James Barry (1741-1806): A Biographical Outline." Cultivating the Human Faculties: James Barry \(1741-1806\) and the Society of Arts. Ed. Susan Bennett. Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2008. 23-25. <WBHC 2933-36>

See Bennett in Barry, Secondary, Barry without Blake, for a complete list of essays.

Cunningham, Allan. "James Barry." The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 2. London: John Murray, 1830.

[Fryer, Edward.] Works of James Barry, Esq. Historical Painter [. . .] To Which is Prefixed, Some Account of the Life and Writings of the Author. 2 vols. (Vol. 1, Vol. 2) London: T. Cadell and W. Davies, 1809.

Lukacher, Brian. "Visionary History Painting: Blake and His Contemporaries." Nineteenth Century Art: A Critical History. Ed. Stephen F. Eisenman. London: Thames & Hudson, 1994. 2nd ed. 2004. 3rd ed. 2007. 102-18. <WBHC 2351>

A good overview, with references to James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and the sublime.

Pressly, William L. "Foreword: Barry Studies from a Bicentennial Perspective." James Barry 1741-1806: "The Great Historical Painter". Ed. Tom Dunne and William L. Pressley. Cork: Crawford Art Gallery and Gandon Editions, 2005. <WBHC 2936-38>⁷⁷

An overview.

Pressly, William L. The Life and Art of James Barry. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1981.

A key biography, referencing Blake and his circle.

Smith, John Thomas. "Barry." Nollekens and His Times. Vol. 2. London: Henry Colburn, 1828. (2nd ed. Vol. 2. 1829)

Writing

Historic

Barry, James. An Account of a Series of Pictures in the Great Room. London, 1783.

Barry, James. Catalogue of a Series of Pictures upon the Subject of Human Culture. [1784.]

Includes "Proposals For Publishing by Subscription Six Engraved Prints from the above-mentioned Series."

Barry, James. A Letter to the Dilettanti Society. 2nd ed. London, 1799.

Barry, James. A Letter to the Right Honourable the President, Vice-Presidents, and the Rest of the Noblemen and Gentlemen, of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce. London, 1793.

Barry, James. The Works of James Barry, Esq. Historical Painter. Vol. 1. London, 1809.

[Fryer, Edward.] Works of James Barry, Esq. Historical Painter [. . .] To Which is Prefixed, Some Account of the Life and Writings of the Author. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London: T. Cadell and W. Davies, 1809.

Modern

Allan, David G.C., ed. and intro. The Progress of Human Knowledge and Culture: A Description of the Paintings by James Barry in the Lecture Hall or "Great Room" of the RSA in London. London: Calder Walker Associates, 2005. <WBHC 2934>

A very useful edition of Barry's Progress (1783, 1784). In addition to providing the context and an overview, the introduction has color reproductions of the paintings and a key to the figures.

⁷⁷ WBHC erroneously lists Dunne and Pressley's collection twice, including it in the list of chapters for Bennet's collection beginning on 2935 and then again beginning on 2936.

Barry, James. An Inquiry into the Real and Imaginary Obstructions to the Acquisition of the Arts in England. 1775. New York: Garland, 1972.

Lenihan, Liam. The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. <WBHC 2318, Blake (2015, 2018)>⁷⁸

A study of Barry's ideas of History Painting, with many references to Blake, Fuseli, and Reynolds.

Wornum, Ralph N. Lectures on Painting, by the Royal Academicians. Barry, Opie, and Fuseli. London: Henry G. Bohn, 1848.

Contains Barry's six lectures, Opie's four, and Fuseli's twelve.

Catalogues

Exhibition

Dunne, Tom, and William L. Pressley, ed. James Barry 1741-1806: "The Great Historical Painter." Cork: Crawford Art Gallery and Gandon Editions, 2005. <WBHC 2936-38>⁷⁹

The catalogue for the exhibition at the Crawford Art Gallery held from 22 Oct. 2005 to 4 Mar. 2006.

Bindman, Catherine. "A genius of first rank, lost to the world": Prints by James Barry from the Collection of William L. Pressly. [New York]: C.G. Boerner, 2014. <WBHC 2936>

Bindman, Catherine, with William L. Pressly and Armin Kunz, ed. No Cross, No Crown: Prints by James Barry from the Collection of William L. and Nancy Pressly. University of Notre Dame: Snite Museum of Art, 2016.⁸⁰

The catalogue for the exhibition held 24 Jan. 2016 to 17 Apr. 2016 at the Snite Museum of Art at the University of Notre Dame.

"In Elysium: Prints by James Barry." University of Kent.

An exhibition of Barry's prints held at the University of Kent from 4 Oct. to 17 Dec. 2010. There was no catalogue, but the exhibition is described in the link found in the title.

Studies

Blake and Barry

Barrell, John. "A Blake Dictionary." The Political Theory of Painting From Reynolds To Hazlitt: "The Body of the Public." London and New Haven: Yale University Press, 1986. 222-57. <BBS 360, WBHC 1583>⁸¹

An important explication of Blake's artistic theory around the terms originality, character, individuality, and public, with references to Reynolds, Barry, Fuseli, and Milton.

⁷⁸ WBHC notes the chapter on Blake without comment.

⁷⁹ WBHC erroneously lists Dunne and Pressley's collection twice, including it in the list of chapters for Bennet's collection beginning on 2935 and then again beginning on 2936.

⁸⁰ Not recorded in WBHC.

⁸¹ The beginning page number in WBHC misstated as "22."

Behrendt, Stephen. “‘A Defect in their Education’: Blake, Haydon, and the Misguided British Audience.” Keats-Shelley Review 24.1 (Oct. 2010): 53-65. <WBHC 1595>

Positions Keats’s painter friend, Benjamin Robert Haydon, in artistic debates over “the demise of grand-style history painting” (abstract) that also engaged artists like Blake and James Barry.

Bindman, David. “The Politics of Envy: Blake and Barry.” James Barry, 1741–1806: History Painter. Ed. Tom Dunne and William L. Pressley. Farnham: Ashgate, 2010. <WBHC 2936-38>⁸²

On Blake’s ideas of jealousy and envy in Europe and Malevolence, his references to Barry, and Barry’s own sense of his contemporaries’ jealousy and envy.

Gage, John. “Blake’s Newton.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 37 (1971): 372-77. <BB #A1658>

On the print’s relationship to Newton’s theory of the rainbow, with references to the rainbow in Blake’s poetry, Joseph Priestley’s account of Newton’s Optics, James Barry on Newton’s idea of the rainbow, and Henry Fuseli on Michelangelo’s Sistine Chapel.

Hagstrum, Jean H. “William Blake: ‘Arrows of Desire’ and ‘Chariots of Fire.’” The Romantic Body: Love and Sexuality in Keats, Wordsworth, and Blake. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1985. 109-45. <BBS 498, WBHC 2116-17>

Considers gender, desire, and sexual love in Blake’s poetry, moving from Poetical Sketches to a discussion of Beulah and Eden in the later epics. In addition to the chapter, Blake is addressed in the introduction, along with the artists Fuseli, James Barry, and William Etty.

For a more contemporary approach to similar issues, see the Bruder and Connolly’s collection, Sexy Blake, or the recent Fuseli catalogue, Fuseli and the Modern Woman: Fashion, Fantasy, Fetishism.

Hults, Linda C. “England: Barry, Stubbs, and Blake.” The Print in the Western World: An Introductory History. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1996. 358-79. <WBHC 2173>

“Both as a poet and as a printmaker, Blake was a curious and grand anomaly’ (375)” (WBHC 2173).

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke’s “Philosophical Enquiry” to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

On Burke’s notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled “Against and beyond Burke: Blake’s ‘sublime Labours’” (235-66).

⁸² WBHC erroneously lists Dunne and Pressley’s collection twice, including it in the list of chapters for Bennet’s collection beginning on 2935 and then again beginning on 2936.

Lenihan, Liam. "Wollstonecraft's Reading of Milton and the Sublime of Barry, Fuseli and Blake." The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Considers the response to Milton by Wollstonecraft, James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and Blake, with references to Visions of the Daughters of Albion, Edmund Burke, and William Godwin.

Matthews, Susan. "An Alternative National Gallery: Blake's 1809 Exhibition and the Attack on Evangelical Culture." Tate Papers 14 (autumn 2010): 28 par. <WBHC 2752>

"This essay suggests that Blake's 1809 exhibition was haunted by the memory of the Irish painter James Barry (1741–1806) and his concerns about the nation's visual culture" (abstract).

Mulhallen, Karen G. "William Blake's Milton Portraiture and Eighteen Century Milton Iconography." Colby Library Quarterly 14.3 (1978): 7-21. <BBS 580>

Examines "the Milton iconographic tradition [i.e., William Faithorne, George Vertue, Jonathan Richardson, Giovani Battista Cipriani, and James Barry] as it is reflected in three portraits by William Blake" (7).

Paley, Morton D. "James Barry as Rintrah in William Blake's Milton." Notes and Queries 61.4 (Dec. 2014): 494-97. <WBHC 2498-99>

Suggests that the judgment of Rintrah is an allegory of James Barry's expulsion from the Royal Academy.

Pressly, William L. "William Blake and James Barry as Prophetic Painters: 'would, God, that all the Lord's people were prophets.'" James Barry's Murals at the Royal Society of Arts: Envisioning a New Public Art. Togher: Cork University Press, 2014. 283-90. <WBHC 2544>

The first part of the conclusion (283-90) is devoted to Blake and Barry, with Pressly writing: "Their similarity in outlook and purpose and the likelihood of a close personal relationship suggest that Blake was aware of the Adelphi series' secret wisdom" (290).

Pressly, William, L. James Barry's Murals at the Royal Society of Arts: Envisioning a New Public Art. Togher [Ireland]: Cork University Press, 2014. <WBHC 2938>

Later chapters consider Blake and Barry.

Richey, William. "Not Angles but Angels': Blake's Pictorial Defense of English Art." European Romantic Review 7.1 (1996): 49-60. <WBHC 2584>

"Blake's design of 'Non Angeli Sed Angli,' based on James Barry's Inquiry (1775), refutes the idea that 'British artists were incapable of artistic excellence' (49)" (WBHC 2584).

Siegel, Jonah. "'United, Completer Knowledge': Barry, Blake, and the Search for the Artist." Desire and Excess: The Nineteenth-Century Culture of Art. Princeton and Oxford: Princeton University Press, 2000. 30-89. <WBHC 2675>

On Barry's and Blake's engagement with antiquity, with discussions of Joseph of Arimathea and Laocoön.

Ward, Aileen. “‘sr Joshua and His Gang’: William Blake and the Royal Academy.” Huntington Library Quarterly 52.1 (1989): 75-95. <BSS 517-18, WBHC 2175-76>

A useful account of Blake’s relationship to Joshua Reynolds and the Royal Academy, particularly in regard to his time as a student at the Academy and his favorable view of James Barry.

Wardle, J. “Europe and America.” Notes and Queries 15.1 (1968): 20-21. <BB #2922>

Suggests that the frontispiece to Europe relates to James Barry’s painting of King Lear, and that “the America plates ‘bear a contrapuntal relation to the text’” (BB #2922).

Barry without Blake

Allan, D.G.C. “Barry and Johnson.” RSA Journal 133 (1985): 628.

Allan, D.G.C. “The Chronology of James Barry’s Work for the Society’s Great Room.” The Virtuoso Tribe of Arts & Sciences: Studies in the Eighteenth-Century Work and Membership of the London Society of Arts. Ed. D.G.C. Allan and John L. Abbott. Athens and London: University of Georgia Press, 1992. 336-58.

A very useful account for understanding Barry’s project.

Allan, D.G.C. “Elysium: James Barry’s 1798 Additions to His Six Painting for the Society’s Great Room.” RSA Journal 146.5486 (119-21).

Allan, D.G.C. “James Barry and British History.” RSA Journal 136.5386 (1988): 727-31.

Barrell, John. “Thomas Banks and the Society for Constitutional Information.” Living with the Royal Academy: Artistic Ideals and Experiences in England, 1768-1848. Ed. Sarah Monks, John Barrell, and Mark Hallett. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2013. 131-52.

On Banks’s radicalism, arguing that he was more radical than James Barry.

Barush, Kathryn R. “The Catholic Case for Art and Religion: James Barry, David Wilkie, and Ann Agnes Trail.” Art and the Sacred Journey in Britain, 1790–1850. Abingdon: Routledge, 2016. 62-77. <Blake (2019)>

Considers ideas of Catholic pilgrimage.

Bennett, Susan, ed. Cultivating the Human Faculties: James Barry \(1741-1806\) and the Society of Arts. Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2008. <WBHC 2933-36>

A collection of essays.

Susan Bennett, “Prologue.” 11.

Helen Clifford, “Introduction.” 19-21.

Allan, David G.C. “James Barry (1741-1806): A Biographical Outline.” 23-25.

Puetz, Anne. “The Society and the ‘Polite Arts’ 1754-1778: ‘best drawings’, ‘High’ Art and the Design for the Manufactures.” 26-49.

Myrone, Martin. “Patriotism, Virtue, and the Problem of the Hero: The Society’s Promotion of High Art in the 1760s.” 50-63.

Grant, Charlotte. "Arts and Commerce Promoted: 'female excellence' and the Society of Arts' 'patriotic and truly noble purposes.'" 64-75.

MacKean, Andrea. "Making a Place for Ornament: The Social Spaces of the Society of Arts." 76-87.

Allan, David G.C. "The Olympic Victors: The Third Painting in Barry's Series, The Progress of Human Knowledge and Culture." 88-97.

Pressly, William L. "Elysium's Elite: Barry's Continuing Meditations on the Society of Arts Murals." 98-109.

Manning, John "This Slip of Copper": Barry's Engraved Detail of Queen Isabella, Las Casas and Magellan." 110-118.

Pressly, William L. "A Preparatory Drawing for Barry's Glorious Sextumvirate Rediscovered: The Search for the Seventh Man." 119-130.

Pressly, William L. "Barry's Medal for the Society of Arts: A Celebration of the Three Kingdoms." 131-141.

Allan, David G.C. "Epilogue: Barry's Death and Funeral." 142-44.

Appendix. Susan Burney's 1 Nov. 1779 Letter-Journal Entry Describing a Visit to the Society of Arts on 26 Oct. 1779. 145-50.

Brooks, Hero Boothroyd. "The Progress of Human Knowledge After Barry: A History of Restorations of the Great Room Paintings." RSA Journal 146.5486 (1998): 114-15.

On nineteenth-century restorations.

Chadwick, Esther. "Barry's Contemporaneity." The Radical Print. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2024. 9-49. <Blake (2025)>

On Barry's prints of the 1770s, especially The Phoenix, or the Resurrection of Freedom (1776), and his use of aquatint.

Dunne, Tom, and William L. Pressley, ed. James Barry 1741-1806: History Painter. Ashgate, 2010. London and New York: Routledge, 2016. <WBHC 2936-38>⁸³

Pressly, William L. "Foreword: Barry Studies from a Bicentennial Perspective." xv-xviii.

Dunne, Tom. "Introduction: James Barry's 'Moral Art' and the Fate of History Painting in Britain." 1-10.

Solkin, David H. "From Oddity to Odd Man Out: James Barry's Critical Legacy, 1806-66." 11-22.

Myrone, Martin. "James Barry's 'Hairbreath Niceties': Risk, Reward, and the Reform of Culture Around 1770." 23-42.

⁸³ WBHC erroneously lists Dunne and Pressley's collection twice, including it in the list of chapters for Bennet's collection beginning on 2935 and then again beginning on 2936.

- McManamon, Fionnuala. "James Barry: A History Painter in Paris in the 1760s." 43-59.
- Lind, Margaret W. "'Glowing Thoughts on Glowing Canvas': James Barry's Venus Rising from the Sea." 59-76.
- Postle Martin. "Barry, Reynolds, and the British School." 77-94.
- Haut, Asia. "Barry and Fuseli: Exile and Expulsion." 95-114.
- Bindman, David. "The Politics of Envy: Blake and Barry." 115-26.
- Barrell, John. "Reform and Revolution: James Barry's Writings in the 1790s." 127-44.
- Lenihan, Liam. "History Painting and Aesthetics: Barry and the Politics of Friendship." 145-60.
- Phillips, Michael. "No 36 Castle Street East: A Reconstruction of James Barry's House, Painting and Printmaking Studio, and the Making of The Birth of Pandora." 161-88.
- Pressly, William L. "Crowning the Victors at Olympia: The Great Room's Primary Focus." 189-210.
- Guernsey Daniel R. "Barry's Bosseut in Elysium: Catholicism and Counter-Revolution in the 1790s." 211-32.
- Allan, David G.C. "'A Monument to Perpetuate His Memory': James Barry's Adelphi Cycle Revisited." 233-46.
- Gordon, Scott Paul. "Reading Patriot Art: James Barr's King Lear." Eighteenth-Century Studies 36.4 (2003): 491-509.
- Guernsey, Daniel R. "Universal History and Protestant Dissent in Eighteenth-Century England: James Barry's The Progress of Human Knowledge and Culture, 1777-84." The Artist and the State, 1777-1855: The Politics of Universal History in British and French Painting. Aldershot, UK, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2007.
- "[A]lthough he was an Irish Catholic, Barry associated with Protestant Dissenters in the 1770s to advance, pictorially, their progressive views that linked Christian humanism, free trade, Anglo-American fellowship and universal benevolence as an ensemble of humanistic values."
- Hanson, Craig Ashley. "James Barry on Art, Freedom, and History Painting." Eighteenth Century 58.2 (2017): 259-63.
- Howard, Jeremy. "'Into the Cyclops Eye'—James Barry, Historical Portraiture and Colonial Ireland." A Shared Legacy: Essays in Irish and Scottish Art and Visual Culture. Ed. Frinten Cullen and John Morrison. Aldershot and Burlington, Vermont: Ashgate, 2005. <Blake (2020)>
- Lenihan, Liam. "Arguing for Art: James Barry's Cultural Strategy." Eighteenth-Century Ireland / Iris an dá chultúr 29 (2014): 85-107.

Lenihan, Liam. The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Myrone, Martin. "James Barry in France and Italy." Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 75-94. <WBHC 2446>

Barry "was ultimately to imply that the present-day reformation of art would necessarily be led by Catholic artists" (81).

Pollitt, Ben. "Sympathy, Magnetism, and Immoderate Laughter: The Feather in Cook's Last Voyage." Art Bulletin 101.4 (2019): 70-94. <Blake (2020)>

Discussion of Barry's The Thames, or the Triumph of Navigation panel in his Progress of Human Knowledge and Culture (1777–1801).

Pressley, William L. "A Chapel of Natural and Revealed Religion: James Barry's Series for the Society's Great Room Reinterpreted \(Part i\)." Journal of the Royal Society of Arts 132.5336 (1984): 543-46.

Pressley, William L. "A Chapel of Natural and Revealed Religion: James Barry's Series for the Society's Great Room Reinterpreted \(Part ii\)." Journal of the Royal Society of Arts 132.5337 (1984): 634-37.

Pressley, William L. "A Chapel of Natural and Revealed Religion: James Barry's Series for the Society's Great Room Reinterpreted \(Part iii\)." Journal of the Royal Society of Arts 132.5338 (1984): 693-95.

Pressley, William L. "The Chronology of James Barry's Work for the Society's Great Room. Part \(i\)." Journal of the Royal Society for Arts 131.5320 (1983): 214-24.

Pressley, William L. "The Chronology of James Barry's Work for the Society's Great Room. Part \(ii\)." Journal of the Royal Society for Arts 131.5321 (1983): 283-89.

Pressly, William L. James Barry: The Artist as Hero. London: The Tate Gallery, 1983.

A catalogue for the 1983 exhibition held at the Tate Gallery. It includes a very useful overview of Barry's career and his work in different media.

Pressley, William L. "James Barry and the Print Market: A Painter-Etcher avant la lettre." Art and Culture in the Eighteenth Century: New Dimensions and Multiple Perspectives. Ed. Elise Goodman. Newark: University of Delaware Press, 2001. 142-55. <WBHC 2938>⁸⁴

"For Barry, printmaking was about more than promotion and the expansion of markets in that it also involved at a visceral level of exploration of new aesthetic possibilities" (144).

Pressley, William L. "James Barry's Proposed Extensions for his Adelphi Series \(Part i\)." Journal of RSA 126.5260 (1978): 233-39.

Pressley, William L. "James Barry's Proposed Extensions for his Adelphi Series \(Part ii\)." Journal of RSA 126.5261 (1978): 296-301.

⁸⁴ WBHC mistakenly titles the book, Art and Collecting in the Eighteenth Century.

Pressley, William L. “Scientists and Philosophers. A Rediscovered Print by James Barry.” Journal of RSA 129 (1981): 510-15.

Taylor, David Francis. “Picturing Ekphrasis: Image and Text in Shakespeare Painting.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 461-78. <Blake (2023)>

On William Martin’s and James Barry’s paintings of Shakespeare’s Cymbeline: “Martin and Barry, I wish to suggest, show ekphrasis in order to interrogate and eschew both its rhetorical imperative (image as word) and its iconophobic implication (image as less than word)” (464).

Bartolozzi, Francesco (1727-1815), Engraver

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Timothy Clayton and Anita McConnell)

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

Brinton, Selwyn. Bartolozzi and His Pupils in England. New York: Frederick A. Stokes company, 1903.

Tuer, Andrew W. Bartolozzi and His Works. A Biographical and Descriptive Account of The Life and Career of Francesco Bartolozzi, R.A. London: Field & Tuer and New York Scribner and Welford, 1881. (Vol.1. Vol. 2.)

Some reproductions.

Catalogues

Baily, J.T. Herbert. Francesco Bartolozzi, R.A. London: Otto Limited, 1907.

Calabi, Augusto. Francesco Bartolozzi: Catalogue des Estampes et Notice Biographique d'après les manuscrits de A. de Vesme, entièrement réformés et complétés d'une Étude Critique. Milano: Guido Modiano, 1928. In French.

Remains the standard catalogue.

Hind, Arthur M. Bartolozzi and Other Stipple engravings Working in England at the end of the Eighteenth Century. New York: Fred K.A. Stokes, 1912.

Jatta, Barbara, ed. Francesco Bartolozzi: Incisore delle Grazie. Rome: Artemide Edizioni, 1995.

Studies

Blake and Bartolozzi

Smith, Bernard. European Vision and the South Pacific. 2nd ed. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1985. 173-75.⁸⁵ <BB 641-42>

A brief but important examination of Blake’s commercial engraving, A Family of New South Wales, in the context of European depictions of Pacific Islanders, with references to James Basire, John Hunter, Giovani Battista Cipriani, and Francesco Bartolozzi.

⁸⁵ Developed from Smith’s essay with the same title in Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institute 13.1-2 (1950), 65-100, <BB #2717, BBS 641-42>.

Wood, Marcus. Slavery, Empathy and Pornography. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2002.⁸⁶

An influential reading of the fusion of sentimentality and pornography in depictions of slavery and Blackness. There are chapters on Stedman's Narrative and the illustrations (with a comparison of Blake's and Bartolozzi's engravings) and on Romantic poets and slavery, including Blake, John Newton, and William Cowper.

Bartolozzi without Blake

Alexander, David. "A Cosmopolitan Engraver in London: Francesco Bartolozzi's Studio 1763-1802." Print Quarterly 35.1 (2018): 6-26.

Bergquist, Stephen A. "Francesco Bartolozzi's Musical Prints." Music in Art 32.1-2. (2007): 177-87.

Jatta, Barbara. "Drawings by Francesco Bartolozzi in Lisbon." Master Drawings 32.2 (1994): 99-128.

Murgia, Camilla. "The Artistic Trade and Networks of the Italian Community in London Around 1800." Crossing Borders: The Internationalisation of the Art Market in the Age of Nation States, 1750-1914. Ed. Jan Kirk Baetens and Dries Lyna. Brill, 2019.

On the Italian artistic and commercial networks in London, with a large focus on Bartolozzi: "Bartolozzi developed a set of collaborations which, originating from engraving, affected the whole of the London art market and its internationalization" (174).

Barton, Bernard (1784-1849), Poet

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, A.H. Bullen, rev. by James Edgar Barcus, Jr.)
Studies

Gedge, Samuel. Catalogue XX. Norwich, England, 2015. <WBHC 1424>

Offers the 12 Feb. 1830 letter from John Martin to Bernard Barton, which mentions reading Cunningham's The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors and Architects and gives his opinion of Blake, including the Night Thoughts engravings. See "Bernard Barton's Contribution to Cunningham's 'Life of Blake': A New Letter."

Riehl, Joe. "Bernard Barton's Contribution to Cunningham's 'Life of Blake': A New Letter." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.1 (summer 1999): 16-20. <WBHC 1689>

Publishes a newly recovered 24 Feb. 1830 letter from Bernard Barton to Allan Cunningham regarding Blake and particularly the comments of Charles Lamb on Blake. These had been sent to Barton, and Barton would forward them to Cunningham for publication in the 2nd edition of Cunningham's "Life of Blake." The letter also mentions Dawson Turner, John Martin, and Edward Moor as sources for information about Blake. Not in BR.

⁸⁶ Incorporates Wood's "John Gabriel Stedman, William Blake, Francesco Bartolozzi and Empathetic Pornography in the Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam," An Economy of Colour: Visual Culture and the Atlantic World 1660-1830, ed. Geoff Quilley and Kay Dian Kriz (Manchester: Manchester University Press.; N.Y.: Palgrave, 2003), 129-49, <WBHC 2878>. The book is not recorded in WBHC.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. "William Blake and Bernard Barton: Addendum to [A Blake Bibliography]—Entry No. a852." Blake Studies 1.1 (autumn 1968): 91-94. <BB #1218.4>

Synthesizes details about Barton, adding to Keynes's A Blake Bibliography (1921).

Basire, James, Sr. (1730–1802) and His Family, Engraver (See also Biographies, Antiquarianism, and Printmaking)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB⁸⁷, Lucy Peltz)

Goddard, Richard. "Drawing on Copper: The Basire Family of Copper-Plate Engravers and their Works." [Maastricht] Datawyse / Universitaire Pers Maastricht, 2016.

The most extensive study of the Basire family, considering their lives and works.

Studies

Blake and Basire

Bogen, Nancy. "William Blake, the Pars Brothers, and James Basire." Notes and Queries 17.8 (1970): 313-14. <BB #1251>

"Pars may perhaps have recommended Basire as a master to Blake" (BB #1251).

Crosby, Mark. "Unentangled in the intricate windings of modern practice': William Blake's Apprentice Copperplates and Engravings." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.3 (winter 2024-25): 20 pars. <Blake (2025)>

On the discovery of drypoint, etched, and engraved marks and designs found on the verso of the copperplates for Richard Gough's Sepulchral Monuments. "The evidence presented above encourages the tentative attribution of the markings on the versos to Blake" (par. 19). There is much on James Basire's engraving studio and Blake's time there as an apprentice.

Doxey, William S. "William Blake, James Basire, and the Philosophical Transactions: An Unexplored Source of Blake's Scientific Thought?" Bulletin of the New York Public Library 72 (1968): 252-60. <BB #1516>

Lists the engravings Basire did for the Royal Society's Philosophical Transactions for which Blake may have assisted as an apprentice.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. <BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's

⁸⁷ Article includes James Basire (bap. 1730, d. 1802), James Basire (1769-1822), and James Basire (1796-1869).

William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

Heringman, Noah, Crystal B. Lake, and Katharina Boehm, ed. Vetusta Monumenta: Ancient Monuments, a Digital Edition. 2017–22 (last update 18 June 2022). <Blake (2023)>

Includes biographical note on Basire and his place in the publication, both on his own and in relationship to Blake.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "The Engraver's Apprentice." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 14-30. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

An account of Blake's apprenticeship and descriptions of his Westminster drawings, an identification of the symbols Blake borrowed from Jacob Bryant's New System, or An Analysis of Ancient Mythology (1774-76), the engraving of Joseph of Arimathea, and his signature in a copy of Fuseli's translation of Winkelmann's Reflections on the Painting and Sculpture of the Greeks (1765).

Smith, Bernard. European Vision and the South Pacific. 2nd ed. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1985. 173-75.⁸⁸ <BBS 641-42>

A brief but important examination of Blake's commercial engraving, A Family of New South Wales, in the context of European depictions of Pacific Islanders, with references to James Basire, John Hunter, Giovani Battista Cipriani, and Francesco Bartolozzi.

Wilson, David. "An idle speculation by Samuel Palmer: William Blake's involvement in Cipriani's portrait of John Milton." British Art Journal 6.1 (spring/summer 2005): 31-36. <WBHC 2870-71>

A detailed correction of both Samuel Palmer's and G.E. Bentley, Jr.'s speculation⁸⁹ that Blake may have had some involvement in the engraved and etched portraits of Milton in Francis Blackburne's Memoir of Thomas Hollis (1780). As Wilson demonstrates, the portraits were identical to those issued in 1762 and 1765, well before Blake's apprenticeship with James Basire began.

Basire without Blake

Boehm, Katharina. "'The happiest vehicles of antiquarian knowledge': The Visual Arts and Romantic Antiquarianism." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 23-39. <Blake (2024)>

Considers engraving's importance for the work of the Society of Antiquaries, highlighting the work of Basire and George Vertue.

⁸⁸ Developed from Smith's essay with the same title in Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institute 13.1-2 (1950), 65-100, <BB #2717, BBS 641-42>.

⁸⁹ See G.E. Bentley, Jr. "A Portrait of Milton Engraved by William Blake 'When Three years of Age'? A Speculation by Samuel Palmer," University of Toronto Quarterly 51 (1981), 28-55, <BBS 368>.

Bowyer, Robert (1758-1834), Bookseller, artist

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Deborah Graham-Vernon)

Studies

Billingsley, Naomi. “‘The Great Bowyer Bible’: Robert Bowyer and the Macklin Bible.” Journal of Illustration 8.1 (2021): 51-80. <Blake (2023)>

“This article examines an iconic example of grangerizing: the Macklin Bible extra-illustrated in 45 volumes by London artist and bookseller Robert Bowyer (1758–1834) in the first quarter of the nineteenth century (Bolton Libraries and Museums, Bolton, United Kingdom)” (abstract).

Boase, T.S.R. “Macklin and Bowyer.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 26.1-2 (1963): 148-77.

An important description of their different illustrated book projects and galleries, with references to Boydell and Fuseli. Slight mention of Blake.

Hutton, Richard Wetherill. “Robert Bowyer and the Historic Gallery: A Study of the Creation of a Magnificent Work to Promote the Arts in England.” 6 vols. PhD diss. University of Chicago, 1978.

A massive study and catalogue of Bowyer’s gallery.

Myrone, Martin. “Exhibitions Culture, Consumerism and the Romantic Artist.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 184-200. <Blake (2024)>

“I would propose that the phenomenon of exhibitions culture helped institute a structurally precarious, inherently competitive and individualist artistic field, revealing a still larger set of transformations accompanying social, economic and political modernization” (189). Positions Blake in this context (pp. 197-98), with references to Royal Academy, Reynolds, Fuseli, Boydell, Macklin, Bowyer, Romney, and Barry.

Peltz, Lucy. Facing the Text: Extra-Illustration, Print Culture, and Society in Britain, 1769–1840. San Marino, CA: Huntington Library, 2017. 1-4. <Blake (2020)>

Takes Bowyer’s extra-illustrated Bible as its point of departure. Passing references to Macklin, Boydell, Blake, and Lavater throughout.

Roman, Cynthia Ellen. “Pictures for Private Purses: Robert Bowyer’s Historic Gallery and Illustrated Edition of David Hume’s History of England.” PhD diss. Brown University, 1997.

The most comprehensive study of Bowyer’s gallery. It includes a checklist of the engravings for Hume’s History, pp. 255-93.

Boydell, John (1720-1804) and Josiah (1752-1817) and the Shakespeare Project, engravers, print sellers, entrepreneurs

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Timothy Clayton)

Catalogues

Hutton, Richard Wetherill. Alderman Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery: An Exhibition of Engravings. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1978.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the David and Alfred Smart Gallery, Chicago, from 4 Oct. to 26 Nov. 1978.

Studies

Blake and Boydell

Carlson, Marvin A. "A Fresh Look at Hogarth's Beggar's Opera." Educational Theatre Journal 27.1 (1975): 30-39. <BBS 432>

A still useful essay that gives an account of Blake's engraving in relationship John Boydell's Shakespeare Project (including a reproduction of Boydell's "Key to the Engraving" [1790]) and emphasizes that Hogarth's painting was "pointed satire" (34) and not a neutral representation of a stage performance.

Brylowe, Thora. Romantic Art in Practice: Cultural Work and the Sister Arts, 1760–1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

An important study of the Sister Arts in the Romantic era. It includes discussions of Blake and Antiquarianism, the Portland Vase (including Blake's engravings), the Hunts, John Landseer, and the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Eaves, Morris. "National Arts and Disruptive Technologies in Blake's Prospectus of 1793." Blake, Nation and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 119-35. <WBHC 1866-69>

Compares Blake's 1793 Prospectus with the pronouncements of Joshua Reynolds on the foundation of the Royal Academy and John Boydell on the Shakespeare project.

Matthews, Susan. "Illustrated Poetry in the Romantic Period." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 356-73. <Blake (2024)>

On the relative novelty of the idea of "illustrations" in the Romantic period, with references to Blake's illustrations to Gray and Young and to Stothard, Fuseli, Boydell, and Charlotte Malkin.

Myrone, Martin. "Exhibitions Culture, Consumerism and the Romantic Artist." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 184-200. <Blake (2024)>

"I would propose that the phenomenon of exhibitions culture helped institute a structurally precarious, inherently competitive and individualist artistic field, revealing a still larger set of transformations accompanying social, economic and political modernization" (189). Positions Blake in this context (pp. 197-98), with references to the Royal Academy, Reynolds, Fuseli, Boydell, Macklin, Bowyer, Romney, and Barry.

Szwydky, Lissette Lopez. "Visual and Textual Adaptation in Literature and Fine Art Forms." Transmedia Adaptation in the Nineteenth Century. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2020. 97-137. <Blake (2024)>

Discusses Blake's engravings to Stedman and his illustrations to other authors (Young, Gray, Milton, and Dante). Also addresses the literary galleries of Boydell and Macklin, with a few comments on Fuseli's illustration of Shakespeare.

Boydell without Blake

"The Signatures to the Subscribers to the Shakespeare." c. 1789-1804. Boston Public Library.

Manuscript recording the signatures of subscribers to Boydell's edition of Shakespeare.

Burwick, Frederick. "The Boydell Shakespeare Gallery: The American Artists, The American Edition." Anglistik: International Journal of English Studies 25.1 (2014): 61-76.

Details the contribution of the American artists, Benjamin West and Mather Brown, to the Boydell Shakespeare (also touching on William Woollet's engraving of West's painting The Death of General Wolfe) and the 1852 American edition of Boydell's Shakespeare by Shearjashub Spooner who brought the plates to America.

Burwick, Frederick. "John Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery and the Stage." Shakespeare Jahrbuch 133 (1997): 54-76.

Bruntjen, Sven H. A. John Boydell, 1719-1804: A Study of Patronage and Publishing in Georgian London. New York: Garland, 1985.

Bryllo, Thora. "Angelica Kauffman and the Sister Arts." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 391-407. <Blake (2024)>

An overview of Kauffman's life, stressing the misogyny she faced and how her self-portraits invoked the themes of the Sister Arts. Considers Kauffman's relationship to the Royal Academy, the engraving of her designs by William Wynne Ryland and Thomas Burke, and her relationship to the Boydell and Macklin galleries.

Dias, Rosie. Exhibiting Englishness: John Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery and the Formation of a National Aesthetic. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2013. <WBHC 2940>

Argues that the Boydell Shakespeare gallery was instrumental in shaping a new idea of English art, and considers many of the painters and engravers who contributed to the project (especially Reynolds, Northcote, and Fuseli); the Royal Academy's exhibition practices; and other gallery projects.

Friedman, Winifred H. Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery. New York: Garland, 1976.

Goring, Paul. "John Opie's Portrait of Charles Macklin and the Shakespeare Gallery." Source: Notes in the History of Art 39.3 (2020): 184-93. <Blake (2022)>

On Opie's portrait of the actor that was exhibited at Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery.

Gourlay, Alexander, and Robin Simon. "Not William Hogarth but John Boydell: Attributing and Elucidating Two Leaves from an 18th-century Account Book." The British Art Journal 15.1 (2014): 35-46.

Attributes two leaves of an account book now held by the Yale Center for British Art to John Boydell, analyzing what they suggest about his print business.

Mitchell, James. “Julius Caesar Ibbetson \(1759–1817\) and Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery.” British Art Journal 20.3 (2019–20): 116–18. <Blake (2022)>

On two rediscovered paintings by Ibbetson from The Taming of the Shrew for Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery.

Pape, Walter, and Frederick Burwick, ed. The Boydell Shakespeare Gallery. Bottrop: Peter Pomp, 1996.

A very informative collection. In addition to the catalogue of plates, includes the following essays and biographical entries for all the artists involved (including Blake and members of his circle):

Burwick, Frederick. “Introduction: Gallery, Artists, and Engravers.” 9–23.

Engraving and History Painting

Gage, John. “Boydell’s Shakespeare and the Redemption of British Engraving.” 27–31. Includes reference to Blake’s Public Address to the Chalcographic Society.

Hammerschmidt-Hummel, Hildegard. “Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery and its Role in Promoting English History Painting.” 33–44. Includes discussions of Barry, Fuseli, and Kauffman.

Lennox-Boyd, Christopher. “The Prints Themselves: Production, Marketing, and their Survival.” 45–53. On the different sizes and marketing of the prints; what subscribers received; and why the project failed.

The Artists—the Themes

Maisak, Petra. “Henry Fuseli (Johann Heinrich Füssli)—‘shakespeare’s Painter.’” 57–74. A survey of his career and analysis of his Shakespeare paintings.

Shaffer, Elinor S. “Shakespeare between Dramatic Muse and the Genius of Painting’: From Boydell Façade to Shakespeare Shrine.” 75–87. Highlights Boydell’s impact on Shakespeare illustrations, with references to Banks and Flaxman.

Ziegler, Georgianna. “Suppliant Women and Monumental Maidens: Shakespeare’s Heroines in the Boydell Gallery.” 89–102. On the depictions of women.

Pointon, Marcia. “Representing The Tempest in the Boydell Gallery.” 103–11. Examines the illustrations of The Tempest in light of visual depictions of actors.

Scott, Grant F. “To Pla the King: Illustrations of the Tempest in the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.” 113–22. Argues that The Tempest illustrations by “Romney, Fuseli, Wright, [and] Wheatley” “subtly undermine Prospero’s power” (114).

The Literary Reception

Pape, Walter. “‘An Adopted Daughter of Luxury’: Georg Forster’s Aesthetics and Boydell’s Shakespeare Gallery.” 125–34.

Hölter, Achim. "Ludwig Tieck's Commentary on the Copperplate Engravings of Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery." 135-41.

Burwick, Frederick. "The Romantic Reception of the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery: Lamb, Coleridge, Hazlitt." 143-57.

The Artistic Reception

Unverfahrt, Gerd. "Shakespeare Sacrificed: Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery in Gillray's Caricatures." 161-74. Positions Gillray's satires of Boydell in relationship to print iconography.

Vaughan, W.H.T. "Shakespeare Compared: Boydell and Retzsch." 175-83. On their Shakespeare projects.

The Artists: Biographical Sketches

The Sculptures 187

The Painters 187

The Engravers 195

Taylor, David Francis. "Picturing Ekphrasis: Image and Text in Shakespeare Painting." European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 461-78. <Blake (2023)>

On William Martin's and James Barry's paintings of Shakespeare's Cymbeline: "Martin and Barry, I wish to suggest, show ekphrasis in order to interrogate and eschew both its rhetorical imperative (image as word) and its iconophobic implication (image as less than word)" (464).

Butts Family⁹⁰ (See also Biographies, Methodism, Water Color Drawings Illustrating the Bible, and Letters)

Major Members of the Butts Family (Arranged by Generation)

Thomas Witham [Thomas Butts's maternal grandfather] (d. 1743); Elizabeth Harrison [Thomas Butts's maternal grandmother] (d. 1746).

Thomas Butts, Sr. (1719-1778) [Thomas Butts's father]; Hannah Witham [Thomas Butts's mother] (1720-1762).

Thomas Butts [Blake's patron] (1759-1845); Elisabeth Mary Cooper [Thomas Butts's first wife] (1754-1826); Elizabeth Butts [Thomas Butts's second wife] (1770-1851).

Joseph Edward Butts (1784-1827); Thomas Butts, Jr. (1788-1862); Mary Ann Barrow [The Wife of Thomas Butts, Jr.] (c. 1802-?after 1881).

Frederick John Butts [Known as Captain Butts; son of Thomas Butts, Jr.] (1833-1905); Eleanor Violet Stanbridge [Frederick John Butt's first wife] (1831-1888); Mary Jane Briggs [Frederick

⁹⁰ For a summary of recent information about the Butts family, see WBHC 2941-45. The information below on the Butts's is drawn from the research of Mary Lynn Johnson. See her "Catalogue of Some of Blake's Pictures at "The Salterns": Captain Butts as Exhibitor, Litigator, and Co-Heir \(With His Sister Blanche\)" for a family tree (Appendix 2).

John Butts's second wife] (1863-1944); Mary Anne Blanche Pigott [Daughter of Thomas Butts, Jr.] (1844-1924); Aubrey Thomas Butts [Son of Thomas Butts, Jr.] (1837-1861).

Cecil Aubrey Tillbrook Butts [son of Frederick John Butts] (1861-1885); Mary Franies Butts [Daughter of Frederick John Butts and Novelist] (1890-1937); George Edward Piggott [Son of Anne Blanche Piggot] (1863-1937); Mary Graham Foster Pigott [Daughter of Anne Blanche Piggot] (1867-1907).

Sale Catalogues Associated with the Butts Family

A Catalogue of the Fifth Annual Exhibition by the Associated Painters in Water Colours.
London: J. Moyes, 1812. <BB #531, WBHC 980-81>

Messrs. Christie & Manson. A Catalogue of the collection of Books on Art, Antique Bronzes, Terra Cottas and Coins, the property of George Cumberland, Esq.; Comprising the Works of Bartoli, Vasari, Winkelmann, and other Italian Works on Art; a few Books of Prints and Engravings; Some Silver and Brass coins of Greek Cities; small bronzes of antique and early Italian work, A Few Fragments of Terra Cotta and Marbles; and a Cabinet of Tassie's casts from Gems [...] 2 May 1835. London, 1835. <SC>

Butts was a purchaser.

S. Leigh Sotheby & John Wilkinson. Catalogue of a Valuable Collection of Engravings & Drawings, from the portfolio of an Amateur, comprising . . . works of that able but eccentric artist, William Blake, with many of his best drawings [...]. 26 March 1852. <BB #559>

"Lots 50-61 are Blake books and lots 174-67 are Blake water-colours. The anonymous owner was Thomas Butts" (BB #559).

Messrs. S. Leigh Sotheby and John Wilkinson. Catalogue of the Valuable Collection of Water-Colour Drawings The Property of Charles Ford, Esq. of Bath, Comprising . . . Fine Characteristic Drawings by William Blake, Together with A Few Paintings &c. The Property of an Amateur [i.e., Thomas Butts, Jr.]. 26 June 1852. London, 1852. <WBHC 995-98, SC>

Sotheby. Catalogue of a Valuable Assemblage of Choice and Fine Books: including Some Rare Old English Poetry, and other interesting works, from the Library of an Eminent Collector, omitted in the Previous Sale. 5-8 July 1852. London, 1852.

Butts, Jr. was a purchaser.

Messrs. Foster and Son. Catalogue of a Collection of Pictures, Drawing and Works of Art, The Property of Thomas Butts, Esq. Removing from his Residence, Graft Street; including . . . A Collection of Pictures and Drawings, By the late William Blake [...]. 29 June 1853. <BB #560>

Messrs. Foster and Son. Ancient and Modern Pictures, Part by direction of the Executors: Catalogue of A Collection of Italian, Dutch, Flemish & English Pictures, . . . including . . . A Few Drawings by the late Mr. W. Blake. 8 March 1854. London, 1854. <BB #561>

Bernard Quaritch. No. 350 Catalogue of Some More Works on the Fine Arts, Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, Miniatures, and Fine Specimens of Bookbinding Chiefly Obtained from Private Sources. 10 August 1883. <WBHC 1031-33>

Catalogue of Works on the Fine Arts . . . On Sale by Bernard Quaritch. October 1883. <WBHC 1033-34>

Bernard Quaritch. William Blake's Original Drawings Finished in Colours; Choice Early Copies of his Engraved Works; Books Illustrated by Blake; and Mr. William Muir's Admirable Facsimiles of Blake's Works, Offered for Sale. London, 1885.

Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge. Catalogue of an important and very interesting collection of Autograph Letters And Historical Documents, the Property of Various Private Collectors, comprising Autograph Letters, &c. Of T. Bewick, William Blake . . . , a very interesting series of autograph letters and portraits relating to Wesleyism, Interesting Letters by Lord Strafford, And a Valuable Autograph Manuscript of E.A. Poe. London, 1888. <WBHC 1040-41>

Contains an excerpt from what may be a letter from Blake to Butts from "autumn 1800" (WBHC 1041n803).

Bernard Quaritch. A Hand-List of a Peerless Collection of Books and Manuscripts exhibited to the Bibliophiles of America. 1890.

Catalogue of Some of Blake's Pictures at "The Salterns, Parkstone. [Parkstone, Dorset, 1 June 1898]. <WBHC 1052-53>

"The catalogue of 35 pictures (34 belonging to Captain Frederick John Butts, the grandson of Blake's patron Thomas Butts" (WBHC 1053).

Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge. *Catalogue of Drawings by William Blake the Property of Captain Butts, Grandson of Thomas Butts, Muster Master General, the Friend and Patron of Blake . . . [and of a descendant of Alexander Gilchrist].*⁹¹ London, 1903. 24 June 1903. <BB #597>

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1906.

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1910. 22 March 1910 <BB pp. 106, 349; WBHC 1063-64>

Sale of Blake's "Working Cabinet" and the fragment of America plate a.

Sotheby. Catalogue of Anthony Bacon Drury Butts [grandson of Thomas Butts]. 19 December 1912. London, 1912.

Sotheby. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books, Illuminated & Other Manuscripts, Autograph Letters and Historical Documents . . . Relics of William Blake, The Property of Anthony Bacon Drury Butts, Esq., Great - grandson of Thomas Butts, Blake's friend and patron, including the well -known Miniatures painted by Blake of Thomas Butts, his wife and his son . . . London, 1932. 19 December 1932. <BB pp. 111, 355; WBHC 1111>

Messrs. Sotheby & Co. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books, Illuminated and Other Manuscripts, Autograph Letters, Topographical Drawings of American Interest, etc.: Comprising the Library of Sir Algernon Methuen, Bt. (Decd.) . . . Including: the Magnificent Butts-Crewe Copy of Songs of Innocence and Experience (the [of] Second Largest Known, and the Only One with Tinted Wash orders); the Famous Copy of Young's Night Thoughts Coloured

⁹¹ Brackets in the original title.

Throughout by Blake, also from the Butts-Crewe Collections; Very Fine Copies of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion . . . London, 1936.

Papers

“Mary Butts Papers.” Yale University. Call no. GEN MSS 487.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A Blake Letter Found.” Yale University Library Gazette 68 (1993): 60-64. <WBHC 258, 1600>

On a newly discovered letter likely dated autumn of 1800 to Thomas Butts.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Daughters of Albion and the Butts Household.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.2 (1984): 116.

A reference to an 1801 census recording “19’ females” living with the Butts, which led to the discovery of Elizabeth Butts’s school.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Thomas Butts, White Collar Maecenas.” PMLA 71 (1956): 1052-66. <BB #1175>

An important early article about Butts and his relationship with Blake.

Briggs, Ada. “Mr. Butts, the Friend and Patron of Blake.” Connoisseur 19 (1907): 92–96. <BB #1280>

“A biographical account” (BB #1280).

Crosby, Mark. “William Blake’s Miniature Portraits of the Butts Family.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.4 (spring 2009): 147-52. <WBHC 1720>

Analyzes the context of the miniatures of the Butts family and suggests that they were painted after Blake “returned to the capital in 1803” (152).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s ‘Female Will’ and Its Biographical Context.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 31.4 (1991): 615-30. <BBS 466, WBHC 2003>

Important essay that examines Blake’s relationship to Catherine Blake, Elizabeth Butts, Mary Wollstonecraft, and the engraver Caroline Watson in order “[t]o understand how Blake’s interactions with them influenced his poetic representations of women” (615).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s ‘The Phoenix’: A Problem in Attribution.” Philological Quarterly 67.3 (1988): 365-84. <BBS 466>

Argues that “The Phoenix” is by Blake, but see Viscomi’s “William Blake’s ‘The Phoenix / to Mrs. Butts’ Redux.”

“Gifts to the British Museum: Miniature Portraits by Blake.” The Times (12 Oct. 1942), 6. <BB #949>

“Of the Butts family” (BB #949).

Gourlay, Alexander. ““Man on a Drinking Horse”: A Print by Thomas Butts, Jr.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.1 (summer 2003): 35-36. <WBHC 1695>

A description of a newly discovered print dated 22 Jan. 1806, which is likely by Thomas Butts, Jr. (who was a student of Blake's at the time) but possibly by Thomas Butts, Sr. The plate was once owned by the Blake collector Lt. Col. W.E. Moss, and it was printed in the 1940s. See Robert N. Essick's description of the print in “Blake in the Marketplace,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.4 (spring 2003), 127.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “Catalogue of Some of Blake's Pictures at 'The Salterns'": Captain Butts as Exhibitor, Litigator, and Co-Heir \(With His Sister Blanche\).” University of Toronto Quarterly 80.4 (fall 2011): 893-917. <WBHC 2788-91>

A key reexamination of the Blake collection of Frederick John Butts [i.e., Captain Butts] (1833-1905) and his sister, Mary Anne Blanche.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “The Death and Assumption of Blake's Mary: Anomalous Subjects in the Biblical Watercolour Series for Thomas Butts.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 144-59. <WBHC 1899-1900>

Beginning with an important examination of Blake and Butts's relationship (including a reading of Butts's only surviving letter to Blake) and of Butts's religious views, considers the biblical watercolors, “The Death of the Virgin” and “The Assumption of the Virgin.”

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “More on Blake's (and Bentley's) ‘White Collar Maecenas’: Thomas Butts, His Wife's Family of Artisans, and the Methodist Withams of St. Bartholomew the Great.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 131-64. <WBHC 2436-40>

A key biographical essay on Thomas and Elizabeth Mary Butts, highlighting the Butts's family relationship to Methodism and other new details.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “Newfound Particulars of Blake's Patrons, Thomas and Elizabeth Butts, 1767–1806.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.4 (spring 2014): 12 pars. <WBHC 1739>

Offers detailed information about the apprenticeship Elizabeth Mary Cooper Butts (1767-1806) and her school and about Thomas Butts's loss of a promissory note, his insurance policy for 9 Great Marlborough Street and work as a coal merchant, and the suicide of his employer, George Hesse, in 1788.

Keynes, Geoffrey. “An Unpublished Poem by William Blake.” TLS (14 Sep. 1984): 1021-22. <BBS 535>

“Transcript and analysis of the ‘fully authentic’ newly discovered poem to Mrs Butts, ‘The Phoenix’” (BBS 535). See Visconti's correction of the poem's provenance in his “William Blake's ‘The Phoenix / to Mrs. Butts' Redux.”

Read, Dennis M. “Blake's Hervey, Thomas Butts, and Methodism.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.3 (winter 2023-24): 32 pars. <Blake (2024)>

On the painting, Epitome of James Hervey's “Meditations Among the Tombs” (c. 1820), Hervey, and Butts's Methodism.

Richey, William. “One must be master’: Patronage in Blake’s Vala.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 33 (1993): 705-24.⁹² <WBHC 2584-85>

Suggests that Vala or The Four Zoas shows that Blake felt torn between his two patrons, Thomas Butts and William Hayley.

Roberts, Jonathan. Blake, Wordsworth, Religion. London and N.Y.: Continuum, 2010. <WBHC 2596>

Examines the 2 Oct. 1800 letter poem to Thomas Butts and the vision of the Solitary in Book 2 of The Excursion.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “‘A Secret Common to our Blood’: The Visionary Erotic Heritage of Blake, Thomas Butts and Mary Butts.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 71-82. <WBHC 1800-01>

Examines the religious and erotic ideas of Mary Butts (the great-granddaughter of Thomas Butts) in light of Swedenborg, Moravianism, and Blake.

Thompson, Raymond E. “The ‘Double’ of the Double Portrait of Blake: A Description of Tatham’s Replica Portrait.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 29-32. <BBS 388>

On copy of the portrait of the young and old Blake made by Frederick Tatham for the Butts family. In “Blake in the Marketplace, 2017,” Essick suggests the possibility it was by George Richmond but holds that “the traditional ascription of the large drawing to Tatham carries the most weight” (description to illustration 8).

Visconti, Joseph. “Blake in the Marketplace 1852: Thomas Butts Jr. and Other Unknown Blake Collectors.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29 (fall 1995): 40-67. <WBHC 1659>

An important article that provides additional information about the Butts collection, its sale through auctions, and its transmission to family members: “the March and June 1852 auctions are not the first dispersal of the Butts collection; rather, they are the traces of earlier dispersals made by other members of Butts family” (45).

Visconti, Joseph. “A ‘Green house’ for Butts? New Information on Thomas Butts, His Residences, and His Family.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.1 (summer 1996): 4-21. <WBHC 1664>

Important information on Thomas Butts, including the school at No. 9 Great Marlborough Street run by his wife, Elizabeth.

Visconti, Joseph. “William Blake’s ‘The Phoenix / to Mrs. Butts’ Redux.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.1 (summer 1995): 12-15. <WBHC 1657>

An important article that corrects previous scholarship on “The Phoenix” and provides new information on the Butts family, especially regarding Thomas Butts’s second wife. “‘The Phoenix’ was probably written c. 1800-03 to Mrs. Cooper Butts. After she died, the poem appears to have come into the possession of Butts’s second wife” (15).

⁹² Rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005).

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. “A Note on Blake and Fuseli.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.1 (Jun. 1969): 3-4. <BB #1217.38>

Notes that Fuseli’s fourth lecture on painting in “the Spring of 1803” (3) anticipates Blake’s use of the phrase “sublime allegory” to describe epic poetry in his 6 Jul. letter to Thomas Butts.

Calvert, Edward (1799-1883), Artist (See also The Ancients)

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB\), Raymond Lister)

Calvert, Samuel. A Memoir of Edward Calvert, Artist. London: Sampson Low, 1893.

Dörrbecker, D.W. “Calvert, Edward.” Allgemeines Künstler Lexikon: Die Bildenden Künstler aller Zeiten und Völke. Vol. 15. München-Leipzig: K.G. Saur, 1997. 623-25. In German. <WBHC 2945>.

Lister, Raymond. Edward Calvert. London: G. Bell and Sons, Ltd., 1962.

Many references to Blake.

Catalogues, and Facsimile

Calvert, Edward. Ten Spiritual Designs Enlarged from Proofs of the Originals on Copper, Wood and Stone MDCCXXVII-MDCCXXXI. Thomas Bird Mosher: Portland, ME: 1913.

Produced by Thomas Bird Mosher. Includes “A Brief Notice of Edward Calvert, Painter and Engraver” by Herbert P. Horne, which addresses Blake.

Paintings and Sketches by Edward Calvert. London: Carfax Gallery, 1904.

A catalogue for the 1904 exhibition.

Studies

Blake and Calvert

Binyon, Laurence. “The Engravings of William Blake and Edward Calvert,” The Print Collector’s Quarterly 7 (1917), 305-32.⁹³ <BB # 1200>

A comparison, suggesting of Calvert “in some ways the pupil surpasses the master” (324).

Selborne, Joanna. “William Blake and Edward Calvert.” British Wood-Engraved Book Illustration, 1904-1940: A Break with Tradition. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1998. 25-26. <WBHC 2664>

A short section regarding Blake’s and Calvert’s influence on wood-engraving.

Calvert without Blake

Finberg, A.J. “Edward Calvert’s Engravings.” Print-Collector’s Quarterly 17 (1930): 139-53.

Includes a catalogue of fifteen items.

⁹³ Rpt. in The Visionary Hand: Essays for the Study of William Blake’s Art and Aesthetics, ed. Robert N. Essick (1973), 47-70, <BB #A1583, WBHC 1998>.

Harrison, Colin. "Edward Calvert 1799-1883." William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Ed. Michael Phillips. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. 232-35. <WBHC 1413-20>

Phillips's catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake's early and late years in two sections titled, "Education" and "Innovation." In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, "Inspiration," contains essays by others on the Ancients.

Cosway, Richard (1742-1821) and Maria Cosway (born Hadfield) (1760-1838), Artists Introductions and Biographies (Richard-ODNB, Stephen Lloyd)
Barnett, Gerald. Richard and Maria Cosway: A Biography. Tiverton: Lutterworth Press, 1995.

Burnell, Carol. Divided Affections: The Extraordinary Life of Maria Cosway: Celebrity Artist and Thomas Jefferson's Impossible Love. Lausanne: Column House and Lancaster: Gazelle Drake Academic, 2007.

Cazzulani, Elena, and Angelo Stroppa. Maria Hadfield Cosway: Biografia, Diari e Scritti della Fondatrice del Collegio delle Dame Inglesi in Lodi. Orio Litta: L'Immagine, 1989. In Italian.

Cunningham, Allan. "Cosway." The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 6. London: John Murray, 1833.

Diana Wilson Collection of Richard and Maria Cosway Materials: Finding Aid. Huntington Library. Online Archive of California.

"Recollections of Richard Cosway, Esq. R.A.." Library of the Fine Arts. London, 1832. 184-91.

Smith, John Thomas. "Cosway." Nollekens and His Times. Vol. 2. London: Henry Colburn, 1828. (2nd ed. Vol. 2. 1829.)

Writing

Beretti, Francis. Pascal Paoli à Maria Cosway: Lettres et Documents, 1782-1803. Oxford: Voltaire Foundation, 2003. In French and Italian.

Letters and documents related to the correspondence of Maria Cosway and Pascal Paoli, the president of Corsica.

Catalogues

Historic

[Cosway, Richard.] A Catalogue of the Entire Collection of Pictures of Richard Cosway, Esq. R.A. Principal Painter to His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, in the Great Saloon, and Eight Other Apartments, of his House in Pall Mall. London, 1791.

[A Catalogue of the Pictures of Richard Cosway, Esq. R.A.: Being the Choice Part of the Very Numerous Collection Made by him During the Last Fifty Years \[...\] to be sold by auction, by Mr. Stanley, at Mr. Cosway's late residence, no. 20, Stratford Place, Oxford Street, \[...\] the 17th of May 1821, and Two Following Days](#). London, 1821.

[A Catalogue of the Very Curious and Valuable Assemblage of Miscellaneous Articles of taste and Virtu, the Property of that Distinguished Artist and Virtuoso, Richard Cosway \[...\] London, 1821.](#)

Standard and Collection

Daniell, Frederick B. A Catalogue Raisonné of the Engraved Works of Richard Cosway, R.A.. London: Frederick B. Daniell, 1890.

Faraoni, Monja. La Collezione Maria e Richard Cosway e gli Inventari. Lodi: Quaderni di Studi Lodigiani, 2011. In Italian.

A catalogue for the Cosway collection held by Collegio della Beata Vergine Delle Grazie in Lodi, Italy, (founded by Maria Cosway). See Stephen Lloyd's review in English for a further description.⁹⁴

Joseph, Edward. A Catalogue of a Collection of Miniatures by Richard Cosway. 1883.

Williamson, George C. Catalogue of Miniatures, Oil Paintings, Drawing and Engravings by Richard Cosway, R.A. (1740-1821) and Maria Cosway his Wife. London, 1895.

Exhibition

Faraoni, Monja, and Laura Facchin, Massimiliano Ferrario, and Maria Cristina Loi, ed. Maria Hadfield Cosway. Lodi: Fondazione Maria Cosway, 2022. In Italian and English. <Blake (2024)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fondazione Maria Cosway in Lodi, Italy, from 23 Sep. to 27 Nov. 2022. Stephen Lloyd's presentation in English for Thomas Jefferson's Monticello provides an overview of the exhibition. Essays in the catalogue include:

Riberi, Mario. "L'educazione in età napoleonica."

Lloyd, Stephen. "Maria Cosway in London, 1780–1790 and 1794–1801."

Ferrario, Massimiliano. "I am susceptible and everything that surrounds me has great power to magnetise me': Maria Cosway e l'ambiente romantic."

Facchin, Laura. "Maria Cosway et l'ambiente artistico-letterario femminile fra la fine dell'Antico Regime e la Restaurazione."

Antonelli, Rosalba. "Maria Cosway, Leonardo e Giuseppe Bossi: fra teorie artistiche e appunti figurative."

Fiorio, Patrizia. "La musica nella vita e nel progetto educativo di Maria Cosway."

Laghezza, Francesco, and Beatrice Porchera. "Una storia ancora da raccontare: la biblioteca della Fondazione Maria Cosway."

Mira, Silvia. "La moda nella Parigi et nella Milano di Maria Cosway."

Facchin, Laura, and Massimiliano Ferrario. "La vita di Blevio."

Marcarini, Luca. "Un titolo nobitare per Maria Cosway."

Bolandrini, Beatrice. "Gaetano Manfredini: 'volente scultore pei quale l'ingiusta sorte non ha benigni sorris!' e l'eterno volto di Maria Cosway."

⁹⁴ Burlington Magazine, 155.1324 (2013), 497.

Loi, Maria Cristina. “But that immense sea, makes it a great distance’: Note sui Carteggio Maria Cosway–Thomas Jefferson.”

Stein, Susan. “Thomas Jefferson and Maria Cosway in Paris: Art and Affection.”

Amoriello, Elena, et al. “L’allestimento della mostra Maria Hadfield Cosway.”

Lloyd, Stephen, ed. Richard and Maria Cosway: Regency Artists of Taste and Fashion. 1995. <WBHC 2946>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Scottish National Portrait Gallery, Edinburgh, and at the National Portrait Gallery, London.

Rabier, Amandine, ed. Maria Cosway, 1760-1838: l’itinéraire singulier d’une artiste—a strada eccezzionale di un’artista. Gand: Snoeck Gent, 2024. In French. <Blake (2025)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Museu Pasquale Paoli, Merusaglia (Corsica) from 18 May to 30 Oct. 2024.

Studies

Cosway(s) and Blake

Castanedo, Fernando. “‘Mr Jacko’: Prince-Riding in Blake’s ‘An Island in the Moon.’” Notes and Queries 64.1 (Mar. 2017): 27-29. <Blake (2018)>

Reexamines the “Mr. Jacko” passage in Island, suggesting a reference to Richard Cosway and the Prince of Wales.

Hazlitt, William. The Plain Speaker: Opinion on Books, Men, and Things. 2 vols. London, 1826. I.223-24. <BB #1817, WBHC 2134>

“In ‘Essay IX. On the Old Age of the Artist,’ Blake is mentioned in a list including Flaxman, Cosway, and other artists as ‘a profound mystic’” (BB #1817).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “Blake’s Healing Trio: Magnetism, Medicine, and Mania.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.1 (summer 1989): 20-31. <BBS 404>

Reads the Notebook poem, “Cosway, Frazer & Baldwin of Egypt’s Lake,” and traces links Richard Cosway and George Baldwin and their associates had with Franz Anton Mesmer, Masons, and Swedenborgians.

Schuchard’s arguments are developed in her books, Why Mrs. Blake Cried: William Blake and the Sexual Basis of Spiritual Vision (2006) and A Concatenation of Conspiracies: “Irish” William Blake and Illuminist Freemasonry in 1798 (2021), and commented upon by Bentley’s Mainaduc, Magic, and Madness: George Cumberland and the Blake Connection.

Cosway(s) without Blake

Boucher, Diane. “Maria Cosway (1760–1838): A Commentator on Modern Life.” British Art Journal 18.3 (winter 2017–18): 78-86. <Blake (2020)>

Largely a biographical sketch.

Boucher, Diane. “Maria Cosway’s A Persian Going to Adore the Sun.” Burlington Magazine 162. 1405 (2020): 300-05. <Blake (2023)>

“This article will set out what is known about the painting’s history and suggest a possible source for its unusual subject” (abstract).

Calè, Luisa. “Maria Cosway’s Hours: Cosmopolitan and Classical Visual Culture in Thomas Macklin’s Poets Gallery.” Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 221-42. <Blake (2020)>

On Cosway’s painting, The Hours, and its place in Macklin’s Gallery.

Coltman, Viccy. “‘The lecture on Venus’s arse’: Richard Cosway’s Charles Townley with a Group of Connoisseurs, c. 1771-5.” Classical Sculpture and the Culture of Collecting in Britain Since 1760. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2009. 159-90.

“I want to demonstrate how the art historical conception of the conversation piece and the deciphering of the conversation imaged has been highly idealized. As I will argue, in the case of Cosway’s painting, they are conceptually much more subversive than has hitherto been recognized” (16).

Lloyd, Stephen. “The Cosway Inventory of 1820: Listing Unpaid Commissions and the Contents of 20 Stratford Place, Oxford Street, London.” Volume of the Walpole Society 66 (2004): 163-217. <WBHC 2946>

Lloyd, Stephen. “Fashioning the Image of the Prince: Richard Cosway and George IV.” “Squanderous and Lavish Profusion”: George IV, His Image and Patronage of the Arts. Ed. Dana Arnold. London, 1995. 5-14.

Lloyd, Stephen. “Forming the Taste of a Prince: Richard Cosway and George IV’s Early Collecting.” Apollo 138.379 (1993): 192.

Lloyd, Stephen. Richard Cosway. London: Unicorn Press, 2005.

An overview of Cosway’s life and career, with a catalogue of his miniatures.

Lloyd, Stephen. “Richard Cosway, RA: The Artist as Collector, Connoisseur and Virtuoso.” Apollo 133.352 (1991): 398-405.

Millar, Oliver. “George IV When Prince of Wales: His Debts to Artists and Craftsmen.” Burlington Magazine 138.1001 (1986): 586-92.

Reynolds, Graham. English Portrait Miniatures. London, 1952. Rev. ed. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1988.

Reynolds, Graham. “Late Eighteenth-Century Miniatures by Richard Cosway and Andrew Plimer.” British Art 1740-1820: Essays in Honor of Robert R. Wark. Ed. Guillard Sutherland. San Marino, 1992. <WBHC 2947>

Sandover, Cherry. “Let us go forward: The Soul, Spiritualism, and the Funerary Commemoration of Richard Cosway, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and Evelyn De Morgan.” The Persistence of the Soul in Literature, Art and Politics. Ed. Delphine Louis-Dimitrov and Estelle Murail. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Spies-Gans, Paris A. “Maria Hadfield Cosway’s ‘Genius’ for Print: A Didactic, Commercial, and Professional Path.” Female Printmakers, Printsellers, and Print Publishers in the Eighteenth

Century: The Imprint of Women c. 1700-1830. Ed. Cristine S. Martinez and Cynthia E. Roman. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2024. 25-39. <Blake (2025)>

Williamson, George C. Richard Cosway, R.A. London, 1905.

Williamson, George C. Richard Cosway, R.A. and his Wife and Pupils: Miniaturists of the Eighteenth Century. London 1897.

Cromek, Robert Hartley (1770-1812), Engraver, editor, entrepreneur (See also Thomas Stothard, Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims, the Illustrations for Robert Blair's The Grave)

Introduction and Biographies (ODNB, Dennis M. Read)

Cromek, Thomas H. "Memorials of the Life of R. H. Cromek. Engraver. F[ellow] A[ntiquaries] S[ociety] Edinb^r. Editor of the 'Reliques of Burns'; 'Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song' &c with the unpublished correspondence on those works; and other papers relative to his professional and literary career. Collected and Edited by his son." 23 Dec. 1864 and 27 Jul. 1865.

A memoir of Robert Cromek by his son, which exists in two manuscripts. The 23 Dec. 1864 manuscript is held by the Princeton University Library along with many other items related to Cromek and his son.

Read, Dennis M. R.H. Cromek, Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur. Farnham: Ashgate Publishing, 2011.⁹⁵ <WBHC 2573-75>

Key biography of Robert Harley Cromek who was Blake's friend and later enemy. Cromek published Blake's designs for The Grave, published the engraving of Stothard's Canterbury Pilgrims, and was close to the Hunt Circle. The book incorporates much of Read's extensive work on the illustrations to The Grave, the painting and engraving of "The Canterbury Pilgrims," and Blake's relationship to Thomas Stothard.

"Robert and Thomas Hartley Cromek Papers, 1792-1872." Princeton University. Special Collections Library. Call no. c1313.

Studies

Blake and Cromek

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Cromek: The Wheat and the Tares." Modern Philology 71.4 (1974): 366-79. <BB #A1152>

Reexamines the Blake-Cromek relationship in light of the then newly discovered prospectus for The Grave (Nov. 1805) and an April 1807 letter from Cromek to James Montgomery that includes a transcription of Blake's poem, "To the Queen."

⁹⁵ Incorporates Read's "A New Blake Engraving: Gilchrist and the Cromek Connection," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (1980), 60-64, <BBS 390>; "The Rival Canterbury Pilgrims of Blake and Cromek: Herculean Figures in the Carpet," Modern Philology 86.2 (1988), 171-90, <BBS 619, WBHC 2575>; "Thomas Stothard's The Pilgrimage to Canterbury (1806): A Study in Promotion and Popular Taste," Chaucer Illustrated: Five Hundred Years of The Canterbury Tales in Pictures, ed. William K. Finley and Joseph Rosenblum (2003), 211-31; "The Context of Blake's 'Public Address': Cromek and The Chalcographic Society," Philological Quarterly 60.1 (1981), 69-86, <BBS 618>; "Practicing 'The Necessity of Purification': Cromek, Roscoe, and Reliques of Burns," Studies in Bibliography 35 (1982), 306-19; and "Cromek, Cunningham, and Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song: A Case of Literary Duplicity," Studies in Bibliography 40 (1987), 171-90.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Promotion of Blake's Grave Designs.” University of Toronto Quarterly 31 (1962): 340-53. <BB #1174>

An account of Blake and Cromeck in light of the then recently discovered Nov. 1805 Prospectus for The Grave that indicated for the first time, and without Blake's knowledge, that Schiavonetti would be the engraver of twelve of Blake's designs. See Bentley's “A Unique Prospectus for Blake's Grave Designs” for a discussion of the Nov. 1805 Prospectus that mentions fifteen designs.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Thomas Sivright and the Lost Designs for Blair's Grave.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.3 (winter 1985-86): 103-06. <BBS 399>

Traces the then lost designs for The Grave to the 1835 sale catalogue of Thomas Sivright's collection, in which the designs are referred to as “Black Spirits and White, Blue Spirits and Grey.” There is also a discussion of the designs in terms of the original project and the likely provenance after Cromeck's death. See WBHC 638-40.

Gourlay, Alexander S. “‘Idolatry or Politics’: Blake's Chaucer, the Gods of Priam, and the Powers of 1809.” Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 97-147. <WBHC 2095-98>

Argues that “Blake illustrated Chaucer not as an original project inspired entirely by the genius of a predecessor poet, or as a way to cheat Cromeck or Stothard, but as an overt response to Cromeck's challenge, and as a way to do battle with him and all he represented in the world of art and society at large” (102).

Groves, David. “‘great and singular genius’: Further References to Blake \(and Cromeck\) in the Scots Magazine.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.1 (summer 2005): 47-48. <WBHC 1702>

Describes a July 1807 puff for an exhibition of Blake's designs for The Grave by Cromeck in Edinburgh.

Groves, David. “‘This Class of Imposture’: Robert Cromeck's View of London Booksellers and Engravers.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.1 (summer 2006): 45. <WBHC 1708>⁹⁶

Recounts Cromeck's “caustic comment” in Reliques of Robert Burns (1808) on the ways that publishers exploited illustrators and engravers in the Christian Family Bible (45).

Cromeck without Blake

Dunnigan, Sarah M. “Literary Metamorphoses and the Reframing of Enchantment: the Scottish Song and Folktale Collections of R.H. Cromeck, Allan Cunningham and Robert Chambers.” The Voice of the People: Writing the European Folk Revival, 1760-1914. London and New York: Anthem Press, 2012. 49-63.

Examines R.H. Cromeck and Allan Cunningham's The Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song (1810).

Jung, Sandro. “James Morison, Book Illustration and The Poems of Robert Burns (1812).” Scottish Literary Review 6.2 (2014): 25-48.

⁹⁶ WBHC has “Grove” instead of “Groves” (1708).

About the competing edition of Burns's poetry published by James Morison in 1812, which unlike Cromeck's 1808 edition, Reliques of Robert Burns, had illustrations. There is a good amount of detail regarding Cromeck and the 1814 edition of Reliques, which had twelve engravings after Thomas Stothard's designs.

McKeever, Gerard Lee. Regional Romanticism: Literature and Southwest Scotland, c. 1770-1830. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Reads "Cunningham's contributions to R.H. Cromeck's 1810 Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song" (42).

Shannon, Mary L. "Artists' Street: Thomas Stothard, R.H. Cromeck, and Literary Illustration on London's Newman Street." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 243-66. <Blake (2020)>

Maps the "community of illustrators" on "London's Newman Street" (15).

Cumberland, George (1754-1848), Dilettante, polymath, friend of Blake

Biographies (ODNB, Francis Greenacre)

"Living Authors, Natives of Bristol, or Residing in That City and Its Vicinity." The Bristol Memorialist. Bristol: William Tyson, 1823. 58-63. <WBHC 2954>

Cumberland's biography is on pp. 62-63. Bentley believes it authored by Cumberland himself (WBHC 2954).

"Cumberland Family." The MAN & Other Families. <WBHC 2956>

An extremely valuable article at a genealogical website detailing Cumberland's life and works. It includes pdfs of most of Cumberland's writing.

Bibliographies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. A Bibliography of George Cumberland \(1754-1848\). New York and London: Garland Publishing, Inc., 1975. <BB #A1151>

Lists Cumberland's published books and articles, unrecorded works in manuscript, works on art, and "his references to Blake" (BB #A1151). For additional material, see Bentley's "Cumberland Bibliography Addenda," the George Cumberland section in WBHC (2948-67), Heppner's "Another Cumberland Bibliography Addendum," and Whitehead's "Went to see Blake—also to Surgeons college': Blake and George Cumberland's Pocketbooks."

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Cumberland Bibliography Addenda." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 128. <BBS 383>

Notes the manuscript of Cumberland's "Tour of North Wales."

Heppner, Christopher. "Another Cumberland Bibliography Addendum." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.4 (spring 1979): 261-62. <BBS 387>

Records material as early as the 1780s and a McGill manuscript dated 1846.

Catalogues

A Catalogue of the Collection of Books on Art, Antique Bronzes, Terra Cottas and Coins, the Property of George Cumberland, Esq. <BB #549>

Available at The MAN & Other Families website. Includes Blake.

Christie's. Fine British Drawings and Watercolours. London: Christie's, 1989. <WBHC 2948-49>

Includes “26 watercolours (1815, 1818, 1821, 1822, and n.d.), with explanatory inscriptions on the versos, plus 12 ‘color etchings’ [. . .] from Views in Spain and Portugal [1818?]” (WBHC 2948).

Published Books⁹⁷

Historic Editions

Cumberland, George. An Attempt to Describe Hafod; and the Neighbouring Scenes. London: W. Wilson, 1796. <BB #445; BBS 204; WBHC 783; Essick, Comm XXXI>

Includes a map believed to be by Blake based on the serif of the “g.”

Cumberland, George. The Captive of the Castle of Sennaar: An African Tale in Two Parts. London, 1798. <WBHC 2963> [Digitized from microfilm]

Cumberland, George. Description of Some New Fossil Encrini and Pentacrini, Lately Discovered in the Neighborhood of Bristol. 1818. [Harvard University copy]

Cumberland, George. An Essay on the Utility of Collecting the Best Works of the Ancient Engravers of the Italian School; Accompanied by A Critical Catalogue. London: W. Nicol, 1827. <WBHC 2964> [Princeton University copy]

Other copies from the University of Michigan, Harvard, and University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Cumberland, George. A Letter to Henry Griffiths, Esq. of Beaumont Lodge; from George Cumberland. Windsor: C. Knight, 1797.⁹⁸ [Digitized from microfilm]

Cumberland, George. Lewina: The Maid of Snowdon. A Tale. London: W. Wilson, 1793. <WBHC 2949, 2964> [Digitized from microfilm]

Includes a handwritten note by Cumberland.

Cumberland, George. Original Tales. 2 vols. 1810. <WBHC 2965>

Includes Cumberland’s “The Captive, An African Tale” (1780), which was read to and praised by Ignatius Sancho. See A Bibliography of George Cumberland, p. 3.

⁹⁷ For a list of Cumberland’s published essays, see WBHC 2958-63, and of his published books, WBHC 2963-67. Most of Cumberland’s books are available at the “Cumberland Family” at the The MAN & Other Families website.

⁹⁸ See the response: Mr. Griffiths’s Remarks, upon the Letter, Signed George Cumberland. Windsor: C. Knight, 1797.

Cumberland, George. Outlines from the Antients. London: Septimus Prowett, 1828. <BB #446, BBS 204-05, WBHC 785> [Harvard University copy. Hathi.]

Other copy from Harvard, Hathi.

Cumberland, George. A Poem on the Landscapes of Great Britain. Dedicated to James Irvine, Esq. At Rome, by George Cumberland. Written in the Year 1780. London: W. Wilson, 1793. <WBHC 2950, 2965> [Digitized from microfilm]

Cumberland, George. Reliquiae Conservatae from the Primitive Materials of Our Present Globe. Bristol: J.M. Gutch, 1826. [Oxford University copy]

Other copy from University of California.

Cumberland, George. A Sermon for a General Fast [. . .] by a Layman. London: Longman, Hurst, Rees, and Orme and Bristol: B. Barry, 1807. <WBHC 2965-66>

Untraced.

Cumberland, George. Some Anecdotes of the Life of Julio Bonasoni. London: Robertson and T. Egerton, 1793. <WBHC 2966-67> [Princeton University copy]

Cumberland, George. Thoughts on Outline. London: W. Wilson, 1796. <BB #447, 720; BBS 205-06; WBHC 786; Essick, Comm., XXXII> [Getty Research Institute copy. Internet Archive.]

Cumberland, George. Views in Spain and Portugal take During the Campaign of his Grace the Duke of Wellington. <WBHC 2967>

Modern Editions

Black, Clementia, ed. The Cumberland Letters: Being the Correspondence of Rich^d Dennison Cumberland & George Cumberland between the Years 1771 & 1784. London: Martin Secker, 1912.

Cumberland, George. An Attempt to Describe Hafod; and the Neighbouring Scenes. Ed. and intro. Jennifer Macve and Andrew Sclater. Aberystwyth: Ymddiriedolaeth Yr Hafod –Hafod Trust, 1996. <WBHC 784>

A facsimile edition that includes “Drawings from a sketchbook of Thomas Jones of Pencerrig,” with an introduction by Donald Moore.

Cumberland, George. [The Captive of the Castle of Sennaar: An African Tale in Two Parts \[1798\]](#). Ed. G.E. Bentley, Jr. Montreal: McGill-Queen’s University Press, 1991. <BBS 369, WBHC 2949, 2952, 2963>

Cumberland, George. The Emigrants or A Trip to the Ohio, A Theatrical Farce (1817): A Comedic Portrayal of English Emigrants Who Never Get to America. Ed. Elizabeth B. Bentley. Lewiston, NY: The Edwin Mellen Press, 2013. <WBHC 2963-64>

The edition includes a preface by Angus Whitehead, a reproduction of the manuscript, and list of “Characters in the Dramatis Personae,” “The Date of the Farce,” Notes on the Manuscript,” and a bibliography.

Essick, Robert N., ed. The Visionary Hand: Essays for the Study of William Blake’s Art and Aesthetics. Los Angeles: Hennessey and Ingalls, 1973. <BB #A1583, WBHC 1998>

Reprints Cumberland's "New Mode of Printing" (1784),⁹⁹ pp. 11-12 and his Letter to his brother (1784). 13-14.¹⁰⁰

Studies

Cumberland and Blake

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Mainaduc, Magic, and Madness: George Cumberland and the Blake Connection." Notes and Queries 38.3 (1991): 294-96. <BBS 368>

On Cumberland's skepticism regarding magic. Mainaduc's "[Syllabus of \[...\] Instruction,](#)" with Cumberland's note, referred to in the essay has been digitized by the Victoria University Library at the University of Toronto.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake and Cumberland's Captive Part 1." The Captive of the Castle of Senaar: An African Tale in Two Parts. Ed. G.E. Bentley, Jr. Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1991. xxxvi-xli. <BBS 369>

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake's Techniques of Engraving and Printing." Studies in Bibliography 34 (1981): 241-53. <BBS 369-70>

Useful contextual information regarding Cumberland and Hayley, but refer to Essick's William Blake Printmaker and Viscomi's Blake and the Idea of the Book for more accurate accounts.

Bushell, Sally, Julia S. Carlson, and Damian Walford Davies. "Introduction: Romantic Cartographies." Romantic Cartographies: Mapping, Literature, Culture, 1789-1832. Ed. Sally Bushell, Julia S. Carlson, and Damian Walford Davies. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2023. 1-24. <Blake (2024)>

Discusses both Cumberland's An Attempt to Describe Hafod and Malkin's Memoir, with references to Blake.

Carr, Stephen Leo. "Visionary Syntax: Nontryrannical Coherence in Blake's Visual Art." The Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation 22.3 (1981): 222-48. <BBS 433>

"I proposed to describe his revisionary practices as a visual artist, especially the ways he organized parts into a coherent whole" (222). Considers many works, including the annotations to Reynolds, "On Homers Poetry," and several designs from Jerusalem, and contrasts Blake's linear aesthetics with Flaxman's and Cumberland's.

Clinton, Daniel. "Line and Lineage: Visual Form in Herman Melville's Pierre and Timoleon." Nineteenth-Century Literature 73.1 (2018): 1-29. <Blake (2019)>

Considers Melville's idea of form and outline in relationship to Blake, George Cumberland, John Flaxman, and John Ruskin.

Heringman, Noah. "Blake, Geology, and Primordial Substance." Romantic Rocks: Aesthetic Geology. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2004. 94-127. <WBHC 2144>

⁹⁹ From Cumberland's essay in A New Review; with Literary Curiosities, and Literary Intelligence for the year 1784 (1784), VI.318-19.

¹⁰⁰ From The Cumberland Letters, ed. Clementina Black (1912), 317-18.

On The Book of Urizen, with references to George Cumberland and James Hutton (1726-97), the geologist.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "George Cumberland and William Blake." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 230-52.¹⁰¹ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

On Blake and Cumberland's relationship, with a description of Cumberland's interests.

King, James. "The Meredith Family, Thomas Taylor, and William Blake." Studies in Romanticism 11.2 (1972): 153-57. <BB #2052>

Documents in the commonplace books belonging to William George Meredith the story of Blake being taught geometry by Thomas Taylor. Meredith "was the son of the architect George Meredith (1762-1831)," "who was admitted to the Royal Academy Schools in 1780" and may have known Blake (154). The commonplace books contain other information about Taylor and Blake's friend, George Cumberland.

Matthews, Susan. "Africa and Utopia: Refusing a 'local habitation.'" The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 104-20. <WBHC 1857-62>

Contrasts Blake's depictions of Africa and Africans within his poetry (including "Little Black Boy") with writers, including George Cumberland, Swedenborgians, William Hayley, John Stedman, Ottobah Cugoano, Olaudah Equiano, and others.

Mazzeo, Tilar Jenon. "Verbal Echoes of Cumberland's Thoughts on Outline, Sculpture, and the System that Guided the Ancients \(1796\) in Jerusalem." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 35.1 (summer 2001): 24-26. <WBHC 1687>

Argues for echoes of Cumberland in Jerusalem.

Mazzeo, Tilar J. "William Blake and the Decorative Arts." The Regency Revisited. Ed. Tim Fulford and Michael E. Sinatra. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2016. 63-80. <WBHC 2384>

With references to Jane Austen, Thomas Phillips's portrait, and George Cumberland's Thoughts on Outline, asserts Blake's place among the fashionable, stressing his interest "at particular moments of his career in both portrait miniature and in interior design, especially interior design inflected by themes" and arguing "that this constellation of 'commercial' investments shaped Jerusalem, in particular, in significant ways" (64).

Stemmler, Joan K. "Cennino, Cumberland, Blake and Early Painting Techniques." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 145-49. <BBS 396>

Argues that Blake could have learned about "Il Libro dell'Arte or The Craftsman's Handbook by Cennino Cennini" (145), which contained information about fresco techniques, from George Cumberland, who saw the manuscript in Italy in the late 1780s. This challenges John Linnell's claim that he showed Blake Cennino's work for the first time in 1821.

¹⁰¹ Revised version of "Some Uncollected Authors XLIV: George Cumberland 1754-1848," Book Collector 19 (1970), 31-65, <BB #2039>. The earlier version includes a checklist of Cumberland's books.

Stemmler, Joan K. “Undisturbed above once in a Lustre” Francis Douce, George Cumberland and William Blake at the Bodleian Library and Ashmolean Museum.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 9-18. <BBS 409>

A rich examination of the Francis Douce papers that reveals two new references to Blake as well as offering new information about Cumberland, Richard Twiss, and James and Richard Edwards.

Whitehead, Angus. “Went to see Blake—also to Surgeons college’: Blake and George Cumberland’s Pocketbooks.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 165-200. <WBHC 2436-40>

Argues, based on Cumberland’s own pocketbooks, that Cumberland visited Blake more than has been noted and that their relationship remained strong to the end of Blake’s life.

Cumberland without Blake

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “George Cumberland Sketchbook Discovered.” Notes and Queries 61.1 (2014): 39-43.¹⁰² <WBHC 2954, Blake (2015)>

On the sketchbook, now held by Victoria University in the University of Toronto.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Suppression of George Cumberland’s Captive of the Castle of Sennaar \(1798\): Liberty vs Commerce.” Yale University Library Gazette 71 (1997): 155-58. <WBHC 2955>

Considers Cumberland’s own annotations to the copy held by the Beinecke Library, Yale University, which mention the dangers of publishing the book under Pitt.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Thomas Taylor’s Biography.” Studies in Biography 14 (1961): 234-36.

Publishes a 7 Oct. 1798 letter from Thomas Taylor to George Cumberland in which Taylor mentions he is the author of the article, “Mr. Taylor, the Platonist,” which appeared in Public Characters of 1798 (London, 1798).

Macsotay, Tomas. “Artistic Labour and Cosmopolitan Sociability.” The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London: Routledge, 2017. 103-25.

“This chapter examines travellers’ accounts of sculptors’ studios before the interruption of British tourism under French Occupation in 1796-8” (105). Includes a discussion of George Cumberland’s accounts of the artistic circles of Rome (including Thoughts on Outline) and of accounts of visits to John Flaxman’s studio and of Nancy Flaxman’s Italian journal.

Macsotay, Tomas. “Autonomy and Marginality in Foreign Artists’ Circles in Rome (c. 1760-1800).” The Centre and the Margins in Eighteenth-Century British and Italian Cultures. Ed. Frank O’Gorman and Lia Guerra. Newcastle upon Tyne, UK: Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2013. 155-71.

¹⁰² An initial description is found in G.E. Bentley, Jr.’s Blake <2013> (in Division II) and in WBHC 124.

Analyzes letters to Cumberland from artists in Rome “to form an image of Rome and its market for contemporary art through rare personal accounts. Above all, these letters reveal a troubling picture of the Roman traveller market, in which Cumberland’s countrymen were heavily involved” (155-56).

Cunningham, Allan (1784–1842), Biographer (See also Cunningham’s “William Blake” in Historic Bibliographies)

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB, Leslie Stephen rev. by Hamish Whyte\)

Greene, Richard. “Allan Cunningham (1784-1842).” Nineteenth-Century British Literary Biographers. Ed. Steven Serafin. Detroit, Washington, London: Gale Research, 1994. 46-52. <WBHC 2967>

Studies

Blake and Cunningham

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “I hear a voice you cannot hear’: Madness, Blake, and the Magazin für die Literatur des Auslandes \(1833\).” Notes and Queries 58.1 (2011): 66-73. <WBHC 1607>

On the first reprint of a German article on Blake, derived largely from Smith and Cunningham, that highlights Blake’s madness and visions.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Vicissitudes of Vision: The First Account of William Blake in Russian.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 112-14. <BBS 381>

Notes the first article on Blake in Russia, which was published in 1834 and adapted Cunningham’s Life: “Artist-Poet-Sumasshesii: zhizn Vil’yama Bleka [Artist-Poet-Madman: Life of William Blake],’ Teleskop [Telescope: A Journal of Contemporary Enlightenment], Vol.22 (Moscow: Printed by P. Stepanov, Published by Nikolai Nadezhdin, 1834), 69-97” (113).

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “‘Blake, William’ in the New American Cyclopedia \(1861\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 68-69. <BBS 384>

A pre-Gilchrist biography of Blake that drew on Cunningham and that was “probably” by Charles A. Dana who “had edited the Household Book of Poetry (1857, [1859)], in which he included four of Blake’s Songs and “My Silks” from Poetical Sketches (68).

Feldman, Paula R. “Felicia Hemans and the Mythologizing of Blake’s Death.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.3 (winter 1993-94): 69-72. <WBHC 1647>

On the two versions of Hemans’ “The Painter’s Last Work,” which was inspired by Allan Cunningham’s account of Blake’s death.

Gedge, Samuel. Catalogue XX. Norwich, England, 2015. <WBHC 1424>

Offers the 12 Feb. 1830 letter from John Martin to Bernard Barton, which mentions reading Cunningham’s The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors and Architects and giving his opinion of Blake, including the Night Thoughts engravings. See “Bernard Barton’s Contribution to Cunningham’s ‘Life of Blake’: A New Letter.”

Graver, Bruce E. “New Voice on Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.3 (winter 1990-91): 91-94. <BBS 407>

Documents the discovery an anonymous, unpublished manuscript tied to Wordsworth's contribution to The Poems of Geoffrey Chaucer Modernized (1840) that mentions Blake's engraving of Chaucer and details from Cunningham's Life.

Groves, David "Blake and the Edinburgh Literary Gazette—with a Note on Thomas De Quincey." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.3 (winter 1991-92): 127-31. <BBS 408>

Highlights two reviews of Allan Cunningham's Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters (one for each volume), and second's reference to Blake, which Groves argues could have been by De Quincey.

Groves, David. "Blake, the Edinburgh Literary Journal, and James Hogg." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.1 (summer 1998): 14-16. <WBHC 1674>

Highlights 1830 notices of Cunningham's "Life of Blake" in the Edinburgh Literary Journal and raises the possibility that they might be by James Hogg, even though "[t]he most that may safely be claimed is that Hogg probably saw, and enjoyed, those reviews, and he probably read their comments on Blake" (16).

Groves, David. "Blake and the Edinburgh Evening Post." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.2 (fall 1992): 51. <BBS 410>

A reference to Blake as characterized by Cunningham's Life in a review of John Abercrombie's Inquiries Concerning the Intellectual Powers (Edinburgh, 1831).

Groves, David. "Blake and the Sheffield Iris." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.3 (winter 2005-06): 125. <WBHC 1705>

Highlights a review of Cunningham's Lives with a substantial focus on Blake.

Heman, Felicia. "The Painter's Last Work.—A Scene." Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine 31 (Feb. 1832): 220-21.¹⁰³ <BB #1830>

"A footnote to the first printing says that this poem was 'suggested by the closing scene in the life of the painter Blake; as beautifully related by Allan Cunningham'" (BB #1830).

Riehl, Joe. "Bernard Barton's Contribution to Cunningham's 'Life of Blake': A New Letter." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.1 (summer 1999): 16-20. <WBHC 1689>

Publishes a newly recovered 24 Feb. 1830 letter from Bernard Barton to Allan Cunningham regarding Blake and particularly the comments of Charles Lamb on Blake. These had been sent to Barton, and Barton would forward them to Cunningham for publication in the 2nd edition of Cunningham's "Life of Blake." The letter also mentions Dawson Turner, John Martin, and Edward Moor as sources for information about Blake.

Whitehead, Angus. "another, but far more amiable enthusiast': References to Catherine and William Blake in the Literary Gazette and La Belle Assemblée (1830)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013): 4 par. <WBHC 1735>

¹⁰³ See BB #1830 for the many subsequent reprintings.

Considers unrecorded reviews of Cunningham's "Life of Blake" that elicited concern for Catherine, and raises the possibility that William had friendly connections to La Belle Assemblée.

Whitehead, Angus. ""Visions of Blake, the Artist": An Early Reference to William Blake in the Times." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.1 (summer 2007): 46-47. <WBHC 1712>

Records a 27 Jan. 1830 review of Cunningham's Lives that references Blake.

Cunningham without Blake

Dunnigan, Sarah M. "Literary Metamorphoses and the Reframing of Enchantment: The Scottish Song and Folktale Collections of R.H. Cromeck, Allan Cunningham and Robert Chambers." The Voice of the People: Writing the European Folk Revival, 1760-1914. London and New York: Anthem Press, 2012. 49-63.

Examines R.H. Cromeck and Allan Cunningham's The Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song (1810).

McKeever, Gerard Lee. Regional Romanticism: Literature and Southwest Scotland, c. 1770-1830. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Reads "Cunningham's contributions to R.H. Cromeck's 1810 Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song" (42).

Read, Dennis. "Cromeck, Cunningham, and Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song: A Case of Literary Duplicity." Studies in Bibliography 40 (1987): 171-90.¹⁰⁴

On the spurious songs Cunningham sent Cromeck.

Sullivan, M[atthew] G[reg]. "Cunningham, Chantrey, and the British School of Sculpture." The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London and New York: Routledge, 2017. 210-32.

"I seek to understand Cunningham's conception of a national school of sculpture within the parameters of his broader literary oeuvre" (210). Highlights Cunningham's relationship to the sculptor Francis Chantrey, his literary work, and his lives of Banks and Flaxman.

Sullivan, Matthew Greg. ""Vivid presentiments of action and character": Allan Cunningham's Anecdotes of British Sculptors." Journal of Art Historiography 23 (Dec. 2020): 23 pp. <Blake (2022)>

Discusses Cunningham's use of the anecdote, touching on the "Brief Memoir" of John Flaxman by Maria Denman.

Turnbull, Michael T.R.B. "Bishop John Geddes, Robert Burns and Dr. Alexander Geddes." Innes Review 67.1 (2016): 55-61. <Blake (2019)>

Explores the relationship between John Geddes and Robert Burns and Cunningham's confusion of John and Alexander Geddes.

¹⁰⁴ Incorporated in Read's R.H. Cromeck, Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur (2011), <WBHC 2573-75>.

Yarrington, Alison. “The Female Pygmalion: Anne Seymour Damer, Allan Cunningham and the Writing a Woman Sculptor’s Life.” Sculpture Journal 1 (1997): 32-44.

On Cunningham’s “Life” of Damer, the only woman in his Lives.

Edwardses of Halifax, Bookbinders, publishers, antiquarian booksellers

Introductions and Biographies (John Edwards-ODNB)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. The Edwardses of Halifax: The Making and Selling of Beautiful Books in London and Halifax, 1749-1826. 2 vols.¹⁰⁵ Toronto, Buffalo, London: University of Toronto Press, 2015.¹⁰⁶ <WBHC 2968>

A revised version of much of Bentley’s writing on the Night Thoughts project, which is put in the context of the Edwards publishing family. (Richard Edwards commissioned Blake’s illustration of Night Thoughts; Blake had several points of contact with his brother James Edwards; the third brother, Thomas Edwards, held Blake’s watercolor designs for Night Thoughts. The second volume catalogues the books published by the different family members documents work about and by (including correspondence) the family.

“James Edwards (London 1784-1815).” The British Literary Book Trade 1700-1820. Vol. 154. Ed. James K. Bracken & Joel Silver. Detroit: Gale Research, 1995. 123-29.

Studies

Blake and the Edwardses

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The 1821 Edwards Catalogue.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 154-56. <BBS 396>

Describes the catalogue which had been lost since T.W. Hanson cited it in his 1912-13 article, “Edwards of Halifax. Books Sellers, Collectors and Book-Binders” (Halifax Guardian Dec. 1912 and Jan. 1913).

Mulhallen, Karen. “The Publisher Not Mad.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.4 (spring 2020): 6 pars.

Corrects the claim in Myrone and Concannon’s William Blake that Richard Edwards went insane.

Stemmler, Joan K. “Undisturbed above once in a Lustre” Francis Douce, George Cumberland and William Blake at the Bodleian Library and Ashmolean Museum.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 9-18. <BBS 409>

A rich examination of the Francis Douce papers that reveals two new references to Blake as well as offering new information about Cumberland, Richard Twiss, and James and Richard Edwards.

¹⁰⁵ The second volume is only available digitally at the University of Toronto Press’s entry for the book at its website’s catalogue.

¹⁰⁶ Incorporates Bentley’s “Richard Edwards, Publisher of Church-and-King Pamphlets and of William Blake,” Studies in Bibliography 41 (1988), 283-315, <BBS 368>.

The Edwardses without Blake

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Bookseller as Diplomat: James Edwards, Lord Grenville, and Earl Spenser in 1800." Book Collector 33 (1984): 471-85.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Edwardses of Halifax and Bibliomania." Bibliographical Society of Australia and New Zealand Bulletin 11 (1989): 141-56

Bentley, G.E. Jr. "The 'Edwardses of Halifax' as Booksellers by Catalogue 1749-1835." Studies in Bibliography 65 (1992). 187-222.

Edwards, Rosa. "James Edwards, Giambattista Bodoni, and Castle of Otranto: Some Unpublished Letters." Publishing History 18 (1985): 5-48.

Landon, Richard. "The Two Jameses: Edwards and Lackington and the Development of Antiquarian Bookselling in Great Britain." Descant 26.4 (1995): 55-74.

Marks, P.J.M. "The Edwards of Halifax Bindery." British Library Journal 24.2 (1998): 184-218.

Nixon, Howard M. "English Bookbinding LXXXI: A Signed Edwards of Halifax Binding, c. 1782." Book Collector 21 (1972): 256-267.

Weber, Carl J. Fore-Edge Painting: A Historical Survey of a Curious Art in Book Decoration. Irvington-on-Hudson, NY: Harvey House, Inc., 1966.

Focuses largely on the Edwardses.

Flaxman, John (1755-1826), Ann [aka Nancy] (born Denman) (1760–1820), and Maria Denman (1776-1861), Artists, friends

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB, Sarah Symons\)

Bindman, David. "Flaxman, John." The Dictionary of Art. Vol. 11. Ed. Janet Turner. New York: Grove's Dictionaries; London: Macmillan Publishers Limited, 1996. 161-63. <WBHC 2983>

Constable, W.G. John Flaxman 1755-1826. London: University London Press, 1927.

An early biography, though still useful.

Cunningham, Allan. "John Flaxman." The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 3. London: John Murray, 1830.

Cunningham, Peter. "New Materials for the Life of John Flaxman R.A." Builder 21 (17 Jan 1863), 37-38, 60. <BBS 445-46>

Includes information that supplements or, at times, contradicts his father's life of Flaxman, such as an 1803 letter to Prince Hoare and Maria Denman's (Flaxman's sister-in-law) annotations to Cunningham's life, which assert that "Mr Matthew did not join Flaxman in publishing Blake's Poetical Sketches" (BBS 446).

Fowler, Harriet Whittemore. "John Flaxman's Knight of the Blazing Cross." PhD diss. Cornell University, 1981.

Includes a chapter on Flaxman and Swedenborg.

Irwin, David. John Flaxman, 1755-1826: Sculptor, Illustrator, Designer. New York: Rizzoli and London: Christie's, 1979.

An important overview of Flaxman's life and career.

Lines, Richard. "John Flaxman, Sculptor." Things Heard and Seen 3 (2000): 25-27.¹⁰⁷

An overview that usefully documents Flaxman's involvement with the Swedenborgian Theosophical Society, the New Church congregation of Joseph Proud, and the Swedenborg Society.

Smith, John Thomas. "Flaxman." Nollekens and His Times. Vol. 2. London: Henry Colburn, 1828. 2nd ed. Vol. 2. 1829.

Sullivan, M.G. "Flaxman, John II RA 1755-1826." A Biographical Dictionary of Sculptors in Britain 1660-1851. Ed. Ingrid Roscoe, Emma Hard, and M.G. Sullivan. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2009. 443-63.

A very useful biography that includes references to Flaxman's apprentices and patrons and a list of Flaxman's sculptures (Funeral Monuments, Architectural Sculpture, Reliefs, and Miscellaneous) with locations and associated literature.

The same volume also contains entries on Flaxman's father, John Flaxman I (1726-1803); Flaxman's brother, William Flaxman (before 1755-after 1803); and Flaxman's sister, Mary Ann Flaxman (1768-1833).

Writing¹⁰⁸

Flaxman, Ann. An Uninteresting Detail of a Journey to Rome. Ed. Marie E. McAllister. Romantic Circles, 2014. <Blake \(2018\)>

A digital edition of Ann (Nancy) Flaxman's travel journal to Italy (1787-89). Includes a substantial introduction to one of the Blakes' most important friends and a "List of Artists and Architects Mentioned in the Text."

Flaxman, John. Lectures on Sculpture. London, 1829. 2nd and rev. ed. London, 1838.

Both editions include lithographs of Flaxman's drawings.

Editions of Designs

Historic

Flaxman, John. Compositions from the Tragedies of Aeschylus Designed by John Flaxman Engraved by Thomas Piroli. London: J. Matthews, 1795.

Flaxman, John. Compositions from the Tragedies of Aeschylus Designed by John Flaxman Engraved by Thomas Piroli, Moses, and Howard. London: George Bell and Sons, 1882.

¹⁰⁷ Rpt. as "John Flaxman, Sculptor of Eternity," at SwedenborgStudy.com.

¹⁰⁸ WBHC records the date, recipient, and holding archive for Flaxman and his family's correspondence with William Gunn (1750-1841), John Hawkins, Mrs. Yarborough, and Benjamin Gott, pp. 2974-78; five letters to Flaxman from Lord Egremont at the Somerset Archives, pp. 2978-79; information about Flaxman at the London Metropolitan Archive, pp. 2979; the letters to Flaxman from Thomas Hope sold at the Bonham's auction on 27 Nov. 2008, p. 2979; and the documents related to Flaxman at the Wedgwood Museum, p. 2979.

Flaxman, John. Compositions from the Works Days and Theogony of Hesiod. London: [Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme & Brown, 1817]. <BB #456, BBS 213-14, WBHC 800-04, Essick, Comm. LI>

Flaxman, John. Composizioni di Giovanni Flaxman, concernenti la Divina commedia di Dante Alighieri. London and Paris, 1807?

Flaxman, John. Darstellungen aus Homers Iliade geaezt nach den zeichnungen des John Flaxmann von E. Schuler. [Carlsruhe, 1828.]

Flaxman, John. Darstellungen aus Homers Odyssee geaezt nach den zeichnungen des John Flaxmann von E. Schuler. [Carlsruhe, 1828.]

[Flaxman, John.] J. Flaxman's Umrisse zu Homers Iliade. Leipzig, 1804.

Flaxman's Illustrations for Dante's Divine Comedy. Mineola: Dover Publications, 1977. Rpt. Mineola: Dover Publications, 2007. <WBHC 2980>

“A reduced reproduction of the 1807 edition, with engraved inscriptions replaced by letterpress, with passages from Longfellow’s translation of Dante on versos” (WBHC 2980).

Flaxman, John. A Letter to the Committee for Raising the Naval Pillar. London: T. Cadell, W. Davies, T. Payne, R.H. Evans, 1799. British Museum. Digitized by Google. Missing plate 1.

Morris, H.N. Flaxman Blake Coleridge and Other Men of Genius Influenced by Swedenborg. London: New-Church Press, 1915. <BB #2248, BBS 579>

Contains a reproduction of Flaxman’s “Knight of the Blazing Cross.”

Sparks, John C.L. Flaxman's Classical Outlines London: Seeley and Co. 1885.

Modern

Essick, Robert N., and Jenijoy LaBelle, ed. with New Introduction and Commentary. Flaxman's Illustrations to Homer: Drawn by John Flaxman Engraved by William Blake and Others. New York: Dover Publications, Inc., 1977. <BBS 215>

Catalogues (Sale, Standard, Collection, and Exhibition)

Sale Catalogues with Works by Blake

[A Catalogue of a Valuable Assemblage of Engravings by Ancient and Modern Masters \[...\] the Property of the Late John Flaxman](#). 1828. <BB #539>

Includes Blake’s Gray illustration and a drawing of the Last Judgment.

A Catalogue of Superior Second-Hand Books . . . on Sale, at Remarkably Low Prices, by Willis and Sotheran, No. 136 Strand, (W.C.), 25 June 1862, p. 5. and A Catalogue of Superior Second-Hand Books . . . on Sale, at Remarkably Low Prices, by Willis and Sotheran, No. 136 Strand, (W.C.), 25 June 1862, p. 5. <WBHC 1014-15, 1015-16>

Both the 25 June and 25 December 1862 catalogues list Flaxman’s copies of “America (S), Book of Thel (S), Europe (N), First Book of Urizen (K), For Children (F), and Visions of the Daughters of Albion (S)” (WBHC 110).

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of the whole of the celebrated Drawings and the Remaining Works of the great Sculptor, John Flaxman, R.A., The Property of the Denman Family. 26-27 February 1883. London, 1883.

Standard

Salvadori, Francesca ed. Dante La Divina Commedia illustrata da Flaxman. Milano: Electa, 2004. In Italian. John Flaxman: The Illustrations for Dante's Divine Comedy London: Royal Academy of Arts, 2005. In English. <WBHC 2980>

A catalogue of Flaxman's drawings for the Divine Comedy. The English version is a translation of the Italian. Includes high-quality reproductions, catalogue descriptions, and the following essays:

Ossola, Carlo. "Dante: From Colour to Line." 9-12. On Dante's use of color and Flaxman's illustrations.

Bindman, David. "John Flaxman: Sculptor and Illustrator." 13-15. A brief positioning of the illustrations in terms of Flaxman's life and career.

Salvadori, Francesca. "The Painted Atmosphere. Inside John Flaxman's Dante Studio." 17-47. An extended treatment of the designs, including their production and their place in Flaxman's reception.

Collections

Bilbey, Diane, with the Assistance of Marjorie Trusted. "John Flaxman R.A." British Sculpture 1470 to 2000: A Concise Catalogue of the Collection at the Victoria & Albert Museum. London: V&A Publications, 2002. 76-84. <WBHC 2983>

Details fourteen works.

Colvin, Sidney. Drawings of Flaxman in the Gallery of University College, London. London, 1876.

The Flaxman Gallery. University College of London Art Museum. 2012.

The most recent catalogue for the Flaxman Gallery, with information about Flaxman's career and descriptions of the items.

Wark, Robert F. Drawings by John Flaxman in the Huntington Collection. San Marino: Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, 1970.

Whinney, Margaret Dickens and Rupert Gunnis. The Collection Models by John Flaxman R.A. at University College London. London: Athlone Press, 1967.

Catalogue descriptions and black and white reproductions.

Exhibitions (Arranged by Year Descending)

Bindman, David, ed. John Flaxman: Line to Contour. Ikon, Birmingham, 2013. <WBHC 2973-74>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Ikon Gallery, Birmingham, UK, from 13 Feb. to 21 Apr. 2013.

Tritz, Sylvie, and Hans-Ulrich Kessler, ed. John Flaxman und die Renaissance / John Flaxman and the Renaissance. Berlin: Skulpturesammlung und Museum Für Byzantinische Kunst Staatliche Museen, 2009. In German and English. <WBHC 2973>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Bode Museum, Berlin, from 9 Apr. to 12 Jul. 2009.

Wickham, Annette. The Language of Line: John Flaxman's Illustrations to the Works of Homer and Aeschylus. London: Royal Academy, 2010. <WBHC 2973>

The catalogue for exhibition held at the Royal Academy of Arts from 27 Jul. to 29 Oct. 2010.

Bindman, David, ed. John Flaxman 1755–1826: Master of the Purest Line. London: Sir John Soane's Museum, 2003. <WBHC 2972-73>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Sir John Soane's Museum from 25 Apr. to 14 Jun. 2003.

Matilla, José Manuel. Flaxman: La difusión del modelo clásico: Homero, Esquilo, Hesíodo, Dante. Calcografía Nacional: Bilbao, 1996. In Spanish. <WBHC 2971>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Museo de Bellas Artes de Bilbao.

Gizzi, Corrado. Flaxman e Dante. Milano: Mazzotta, 1986.

The catalogue for the exhibition.

Bindman, David, ed. John Flaxman, R.A. / John Flaxman. Mythologie und Industrie. London: Thames and Hudson and München: Prestel, 1979.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg, from 3 Apr. to 3 Jun. 1979, and at the Royal Academy, London, from 26 Oct. to 9 Dec. 1979. Contains many important essays, including on his reception in France, Spain, Denmark, and Germany.

Powney, Christopher, and David Bindman. John Flaxman. London: Heim Gallery, 1976.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Heim Gallery, London, from 10 Mar. to Apr. 1976.

Studies

Blake and the Flaxmans

Allentuck, Marcia. “Blake, Flaxman, and Thomas: A New Document.” Harvard Library Bulletin 20.3 (1972): 318-19. <BB #802>

On Flaxman's postscript to Blake in a 31 July 1801 letter from Flaxman to Hayley that relates “The Rev^d Joseph Thomas of Epsom” was commissioning designs from Milton's Comus and from Shakespeare. See Allentuck's “Flaxman and Klopstock: A New Letter” for her description of the main body of the letter.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A.S. Mathew, Patron of Blake and Flaxman.” Notes and Queries 203 (Apr. 1958): 168-78. <BB #1152>

Important biographical information on Mathew and his relationship with Flaxman as well as the Mathew circle.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake's Engravings and His Friendship with Flaxman.” Studies in Bibliography 12 (1959): 161-88. <BB #1161>

Key essay that details Blake's relationship with Flaxman, including the work for Hayley, for which Flaxman recommended Blake.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake's Hesiod.” Library 20 (1965): 315-20. <BB #1162>

An important account of the engravings, detailing Flaxman's role and the Longmans' account records, which refers to the set as “Blake's Hesiod.”

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Flaxman in Italy: A Letter Reflecting the Anni Mirabiles, 1792-93.” Art Bulletin 63.4 (1981): 658-64.¹⁰⁹

With reference to failed attempt to send Blake to study in Italy by John Hawkins (?1758-1841), chronicles Flaxman's time in Italy.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A Jewel in an Ethiop's Ear: The Book of Enoch as Inspiration for William Blake, John Flaxman, Thomas Moore, and Richard Westall.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 213-40.¹¹⁰ <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

On the influence of The Book of Enoch, a book considered part of the canonical Bible in the Church of Ethiopia, but recovered for Western Europe in the late eighteenth century.

Bindman, David. “New Light on the Mathews: Flaxman and Blake's Early Gothicism.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 95–104. <WBHC 2436-40>

Inscriptions by A.S. Mathew on early Flaxman drawings of Gothic subjects, especially for Chatterton, “strongly suggest that Mathew was directly involved in Flaxman's early attempts at illustrating Chatterton” (96).

Bruder, Helen P. “‘The Bread of sweet Thought & the Wine of Delight’: Gender, Aesthetics and Blake's ‘dear Friend Mrs Anna Flaxman’ (E 709).” 1-11. Women Reading William Blake. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. <WBHC 1795-1800>

A call for considering Ann Flaxman's importance in her own right and for her influence on Blake. Reads the illustrations to Gray for what they say about her and her relationship to Blake.

Calè, Luisa. “Gendering the Margins of Gray: Blake, Classical Visual Culture and the Alternative Bodies of Ann Flaxman's Book.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 133-43. <WBHC 1800-01>

¹⁰⁹ Not recorded in BBS.

¹¹⁰ A version was published in Aligarh Journal of English Studies 1.1 (1976), 1-16, (BBS 468).

“I will flesh out the classical visual culture of the Flaxmans to work out how Blake’s watercolours regender the margins of Gray for Ann’s library” (137).

Crosby, Mark. “‘The Sculptor Silent Stands before His Forming Image’: Blake and Contemporary Sculpture.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 120-31. <WBHC 1871-73>

In addition to tracing Blake’s influence on sculptors Alastair Noble, Helen Martins, Eduardo Paolozzi, and Antony Gormley, sketches Blake’s own relationship to discourses of sculpting through John Flaxman and his vocation as an engraver, which was aligned with sculpting.

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks (“Hidden Dreams,” 31-67) and John Flaxman (“Poetic Departures,” 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Lowery, Margaret Ruth. “Blake and the Flaxmans.” The Age of Johnson: Essays Presented to Chauncey Brewster Tinker. Ed. Frederick W. Hilles. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1949. 281-89. <BB #2147>

An early account of Blake’s relationship with the Flaxmans, focused on the Gray illustrations and on Blake’s poem to Ann Flaxman.

Major, Emma. “The History of Madam Britannia.” Madam Britannia: Women, Church, and Nation 1712-1812. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011. 23-68.¹¹¹

In the section “Flaxman’s Britannia: ‘the Noblest Monument of National Glory in the World,’ pp. 60-68, considers Flaxman’s proposed sculpture of Britannia. Some reference to Blake’s engraving after Flaxman, Plan for a Colossal Statue of Britannia 230 Feet High (1799).

McKenzie, D.F. “Blake’s Poetical Sketches (1783).” Turnbull Library 1.3 (1968): 4-8. <BB #2202>

A description of copy F, including reproductions of the corrections in ink and a transcription of the titlepage script, “presented from Mrs Flaxman May 15, 1784.”

Phillips, Michael. “The Reputation of Blake’s Poetical Sketches 1783-1863.” The Review of English Studies 26.101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume’s reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and

¹¹¹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.'s sequel, "Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America."

Yates, Frances A. "Transformations of Dante's Ugolino." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 14.1-2 (1951): 92-117.¹¹²

A useful survey of eighteenth-century and early nineteenth-century depictions of Ugolino, including those by Reynolds, Fuseli, Blake, and John Flaxman.

The Flaxmans without Blake

Allentuck, Marcia. "Flaxman and Klopstock: A New Letter." Harvard Library Bulletin 19.1 (1971): 71-72.

On Flaxman's 31 July 1801 letter to Hayley that mentions he had "to decline the proposal of making a design for Klopstock's new & fine edition of the Messiah" (qtd. in Allentuck 72). Allentuck addresses the postscript to Blake in the same letter in her "Blake, Flaxman, and Thomas: A New Document."

Bentley, G.E., Jr. The Early Engravings of Flaxman's Classical Designs: A Bibliographical Study. New York: New York Public Library, 1964.

An important documentation of the published engravings of Flaxman's early classical designs, with information on the drawings and Flaxman's biography, including excerpts from letters, most of which remain unpublished. For additional sources, see the John Flaxman section in WBHC (2969-87).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Flaxman's 'sports of Genius': 'The Casket' as an Illustrated Poem." Harvard Library Bulletin 31.3 (1983): 256-84.

On Flaxman's poem, "The Casket," which he wrote for his wife, sister, and sister-in-law and illustrated. Bentley transcribes the poem and describes its manuscript and the illustrations. There are some remarks on Flaxman's reputation in the context of late eighteenth-century English illustrations and a few references to Blake and Cunningham's "Life" of Flaxman.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "John Flaxman and the Mathew Clan." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 67.7 (1963): 443-54.¹¹³

Corrects J.T. Smith's confusion of the Mathew and Matthews families with biographical information, and details Flaxman's connections with the latter especially.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Unrecognized First Printing of Flaxman's Iliad (1793)." AEB: Analytical & Enumerative Bibliography 9 (1995): 102-20. <WBHC 2983>¹¹⁴

"The unrecognized first printing of the first edition . . . [was] printed in Rome on Italian paper for Flaxman to send to his patrons" (117) (WBHC 2983).

¹¹² Not recorded in BB.

¹¹³ Not recorded in BB.

¹¹⁴ WBHC lists the journal title as A & B.

Bindman, David. “John Flaxman’s ‘Adoration of the Magi’ Rediscovered.” Apollo 526 (2005): 40-45. <WBHC 2983>

On Flaxman’s early sculpture, which is a rare “autograph” marble.

Bindman, David. “John Flaxman’s Funerary Monuments.” Neoclassicismo: Atti del convegno internazionale dal Comité International d’Histoire de l’Art. Genoa: Istituto di Storia dell’arte della Università degli Studi di Genova, 1973. 9-13.

Blake-Roberts, Gaye. “Flaxman and His Work for Wedgwood.” Transactions of the Romney Society 14 (2009).

Brigstocke, Hugh, Eckart Marchand, and A.E. Wright. “John Flaxman and William Ottley in Italy.” The Volume of the Walpole Society 72 (2010).¹¹⁵

A substantial study of Flaxman’s time in Italy that transcribes Flaxman’s Italian notebooks and sketchbooks and reproduces many images.

Coltman, V. “Commission by Correspondence: John Flaxman’s Monument to William Murray, 1st Earl of Mansfield.” Church Monuments 22 (2007): 96-110.

Dennis, Rodney G. “Flaxman’s Answers to Klopstock.” Harvard Library Bulletin 24.2 (1976): 197-203.

Transcribes and analyzes letters from Flaxman to Klopstock dated 20 July 1801 and 11 Sep. 1801, with a chronology of their correspondence between 14 Oct. 1800 and 12 Apr. 1802.

Dennis, Rodney G. “Friedrich Gottlieb Klopstock and John Flaxman.” Harvard Library Bulletin 16.1 (1968): 5-17.

On two unpublished letters (14 Oct. 1800 and 12 Apr. 1802) in French from Klopstock to Flaxman and Klopstock’s desire for Flaxman to illustrate The Messiah, which Flaxman declined. Goethe’s criticism of Flaxman is also addressed. See Allentuck’s “Flaxman and Klopstock: A New Letter” for a Flaxman’s reference to the proposed project in a letter to Hayley.

Evans, Mark. “Whigs and Primitives: Dante and Botticelli in England from Jonathan Richardson to John Flaxman.” Botticelli Past and Present. Ed. Ana Debenedetti and Caroline Elam. London: UCL Press, 2019. 94-115. <Blake (2020)>

Largely focus on Flaxman, but with references to Blake, Romney, and Hayley.

Fitzgerald, William. “The Iliad Back-Translated: John Flaxman and Alexander Pope.” The Living Death of Antiquity: Neoclassical Aesthetics. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2022. 62-119. <Blake (2023)>

Provides “a study in contrasting neoclassicisms that helps to site the distinctive neoclassical aesthetic that is my subject as it emerges from around the middle of the eighteenth century, and particularly in the wake of Winckelmann’s writings” (66-67).

¹¹⁵ WBHC lists the study twice.

There are less developed references to Flaxman throughout the book, especially in relationship to Antonio Canova.

Gyllenhaal, Martha. “John Flaxman’s Illustrations to Emanuel Swedenborg’s Arcana Coelestia.” Studia Swedenborgiana, 9.4 (1996): 1-71. <WBHC 2984>

A description of the illustrations (without any reproductions), with an account of Flaxman’s view of Swedenborg.

Hendriks, Ella. “The First Patron of John Flaxman.” Burlington Magazine, CXXVI (1984), 618-22, 625. <WBHC 2984>

“Chiefly extracts from the notebooks (1759-92) of Edward Knight (1734-1812) in Kidderminster Public Library” (WBHC 2984).

Irwin, David. “Flaxman: Italian Journals and Correspondence.” Burlington Magazine 101.675 (1959): 212-17.

On Flaxman’s time in Italy as recorded in his journals and letters. References to Hayley, Romney, Canova, and Thomas Hope.

Jones, Mark. “William Wyon as a Pupil and Follower of Flaxman.” Burning Bright: Essays in Honour of David Bindman. Ed. Diana Dethloff, et al. London: UCL Press, 2015. 89-97. <WBHC 2984-85>

“I hope to suggest both that Flaxman had a considerable and continuing influence on Wyon’s work and that Wyon’s work in its turn acted as a conduit for Flaxman’s ideas about sculpture into the mid-nineteenth century” (90).

King, James. “Flaxman, Kemble, and Talma: A New Anecdote.” Notes and Queries 21.5 (1974): 175. <WBHC 2985>

“The anecdote of 1817 is from the commonplace book of W.G. Meredith” (WBHC 2985), and it records Flaxman at the Freemason’s Tavern at a dinner honoring Kemble who was presented with Flaxman’s Tripod stand, carrying a vase.

Lemonedes, Heather. “Graceful in the Extreme’: A Neoclassical Drawing by John Flaxman.” Nineteenth-Century Worldwide 11.2 (2012). <WBHC 2985>

“She says that Flaxman’s ‘The Judgment of Paris’ in the Cleveland Museum of Art illustrates ‘Paris and Oenone’” (WBHC 2985).

Liu, Deming. “Aspects of the History of Sculpture Copyright in England.” British Art Journal 17.2 (autumn 2016): 58-67. <Blake (2020)>

An examination of the sculpture copyright acts of 1798 and 1814, with Flaxman as a major example.

MacSotay, Tomas. “Artistic Labour and Cosmopolitan Sociability.” The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London: Routledge, 2017. 103-25.

“This chapter examines travellers’ accounts of sculptors’ studios before the interruption of British tourism under French Occupation in 1796-8” (105). Includes a discussion of George Cumberland’s accounts of the artistic circles of Rome (including Thoughts on Outline) and of accounts of visits to John Flaxman’s studio and of Nancy Flaxman’s Italian journal.

Marchand, Eckart. “Sculptor and Tourist: John Flaxman and His Italian Journals and Sketchbooks (1787–1794).” Rome, Travel and the Sculpture Capital, c. 1770–1825. Ed. Tomas Macsotay. Abingdon: Routledge, 2017. 179–96. <Blake (2018)>

A useful description of the journals and sketchbooks.

Mcevansoneya, Philip. “Lord Egremont and Flaxman’s ‘st Michael overcoming Satan.’” Burlington Magazine 143 (2001): 351–59. <WBHC 2985>

“It quotes letters from Lord Egremont to Flaxman, his sister Mary Ann, and his assistant and brother-in-law Thomas Denman (pp. 358–59)” (WBHC 2985).

Miller, Charlotte. “John Flaxman’s Working Copy of Dante’s Divina Commedia.” Italian Studies 58.1 (2003): 75–87. <WBHC 2985>

“‘Flaxman’ is written by Nancy Flaxman on the title pages of Divina Commedia, ed. Andrea Rubbi, 3 vols. (Venice: Antonio Zutta and Figli, 1784), which is Vol. III-V of Parnaso Italiana in the Harold Acton Library in the British Institute of Florence” (WBHC 2985).

Petherbridge, Denna. “Some Thoughts on Flaxman and the Engraved Outlines.” Print Quarterly 28.4 (2011): 385–91. <WBHC 2986>

On the development of Flaxman’s outline style over 1792 and 1793 in his designs for the Iliad, the Odyssey, the Divine Comedy, and the Tragedies of Aeschylus. Some mention of Blake, James Parker, William Ottley, George Cumberland, and William Hayley.

Sienkiewicz, Julia A. “John Flaxman \(1755–1826\) Redux: Copying, Homage, and Allusion in the Sketches of Benjamin Henry Latrobe \(1764–1820\).” British Art Journal 19.3 (winter 2018–19): 106–13. <Blake (2020)>

On Latrobe’s copying of Flaxman in his designs.

Sullivan, M[atthew] G[reg]. “Cunningham, Chantrey, and the British School of Sculpture.” The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760–1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London and New York: Routledge, 2017. 210–32.

“I seek to understand Cunningham’s conception of a national school of sculpture within the parameters of his broader literary oeuvre” (210). Highlights Cunningham’s relationship to the sculptor Francis Chantrey, his literary work, and his lives of Banks and Flaxman.

Sullivan, Matthew Greg. “Vivid presentiments of action and character’: Allan Cunningham’s Anecdotes of British Sculptors.” Journal of Art Historiography 23 (Dec. 2020): 23 pp. <Blake (2022)>

Discusses Cunningham's use of the anecdote, touching on the "Brief Memoir" of John Flaxman by Maria Denman.

Symmons, Sarah. "John Flaxman and Francisco Goya: Infernos Transcribed." Burlington Magazine 103.822 (1971): 506-13. <WBHC 2986>

"Repetition, reduction and distortion for visual effect are qualities which are selected out of the Flaxman illustrations to Dante with astonishingly careful precision by one of the major artists of the nineteenth century, Francisco Goya. Like Blake, but in an entirely different spirit, Goya copies the design of Caiaphas and the Hypocrites and for exactly the same reason" (511).

Symmons, Sarah. Flaxman and Europe: The Outline Illustrations and their Influence. New York and London, 1984.

A published thesis.

Webb, Jane. "The Essential Outline: John Flaxman and Neoplatonism in Early Nineteenth-Century Manufactures." Visual Rhetoric and the Eloquence of Design. Ed. Leslie Atzman. Anderson, SC: Parlor Press, 2011. 131-66.

Whinney, Margaret. "Flaxman and the Eighteenth Century: A Commemorative Lecture." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 19.3-4 (1956): 269-82.

An overview, with an appendix detailing Flaxman's Italian journals.

Williams, Iolo A. "An Identification of Some Early Drawings by John Flaxman." Burlington Magazine (1960): 246-50.

The drawings include portraits of the Mathews and versions of the subject, Despair Offering a Bowl of Poison to Chatterton.

Fuseli, Henry (1741-1825), Painter, Blake's friend

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, D.H. Weinglass)

Altick, Richard D. "Eighteenth-Century Book Illustrations." Paintings from Books: Art and Literature in Britain, 1760-1900. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1985. 37-55.

On Boydell's Shakespeare, Macklin's Poet's, and Fuseli's Milton galleries.

Cunningham, Allan. "Henry Fuseli." The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors, and Architects. Vol. 2. London: John Murray, 1830.

Haycock, David. "Fuseli, Henry 1741-1825." Encyclopedia of the Romantic Era, 1760-1850. Ed. Christopher John Murray. 2 vols. New York and London: Fitzroy Dearborn, 2004. I.392-93. <WBHC 2996>

Herrmann, Luke. "Henry Fuseli, RA (1741-1825)." Nineteenth Century British Painting. London: DLM, 2000. 8-12. <WBHC 2996>¹¹⁶

Hoare, Prince. "Biographical Sketch of Henry Fuseli, Esq. RA."

¹¹⁶ WBHC misnames Herrmann's book Nineteenth-Century British Painters.

Knowles, John. The Life and Writings of Henry Fuseli, Esq. M.A. R.A. 3 vols. (Vol. 1, Vol. 2, Vol. 3) London: Henry Colburn and Richard Bentley, 1831. <BB #2066>

First biography of Fuseli (vol.1), with a few references to Blake. Vol. 2 contains Fuseli's first ten lectures on painting. Vol. 3 contains the eleventh and twelfth lectures on painting, his Aphorisms, Chiefly Relative to Art, and A History of Art in the Schools of Italy.

Lukacher, Brian. "Visionary History Painting: Blake and His Contemporaries." Nineteenth Century Art: A Critical History. Ed. Stephen F. Eisenman. London: Thames & Hudson, 1994. 2nd ed. 2004. 3rd ed. 2007. 102-18. <WBHC 2351>

A good overview, with references to James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and the sublime.

Myrone, Martin. Henry Fuseli. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2001.

A good, short overview of his life and work.

Smith, John Thomas. "Fuseli." Nollekens and His Times. Vol. 2. London: Henry Colburn, 1828. (2nd ed. Vol. 2. 1829)

Tomory, Peter. The Life and Art of Henry Fuseli. London: Thames and Hudson and New York and Washington: Praeger Publishers, Inc., 1972.

A good overview. It includes a list of the books in Fuseli's library, drawn from the Friday 22 July 1825 Sotheby Sale Catalogue.

Writing

Historic Editions

Fuseli, Henry. Lectures on Painting, Delivered at the Royal Academy March 1801. London: J. Johnson, 1801.

Fuseli, Henry. Lectures on Painting, Delivered at the Royal Academy. With Additional Observations and Notes. London: T. Cadell and W. Davies and Edinburgh: W. Blackwood, 1820.

Fuseli, Henry. Lectures on Painting, Delivered at the Royal Academy, by Henry Fuseli, P.P. London: Henry Colburn and Richard Bentley, 1830. First Series. Second Series.

[Fuseli, Henry.] Observations on the Present State of the Royal Academy: with Characters of Living Painters. By an Old Artist. London, 1790.

Fuseli, Henry. Remarks on the Writing and Conduct of J.J. Rousseau. London, 1767.

Fuseli, Henry. Sämtliche Gedichte. Ed. Martin Bircher and Karl S. Guthke. Zurich: Orell Füssli Verlag, 1973. In German.

Contains Fuseli's German and English poetry. For an English translation of a few poems, see A.M. Atkins's "Both Turk and Jew: Notes on the Poetry of Henry Fuseli, with Some Translations".

Füssli, Johann Heinrich. Aphorismes, principalement relatifs aux beaux-arts. Tr. Patrick Hersant, préface de Jean-Félix Guilloteau conservateur de Patrimoine, édition établi par Vanier Carrère. Toulouse: Éditions Ombres, 1996. In French. <WBHC 2991>

Knowles, John. The Life and Writings of Henry Fuseli, Esq. M.A. R.A. 3 vols. (Vol. 1, Vol. 2, Vol. 3) London: Henry Colburn and Richard Bentley, 1831. <BB #2066>

First biography of Fuseli (vol.1), with a few references to Blake. Vol. 2 contains Fuseli's first ten lectures on painting. Vol. 3 contains the eleventh and twelfth lectures on painting, his Aphorisms, Chiefly Relative to Art, and A History of Art in the Schools of Italy.

Pilkington, Matthew. A Dictionary of Painters, from the Revival of the Art to the Present Period... A New Edition, with Considerable Alterations, Additions, an Appendix, and an Index by Henry Fuseli, RA. London, 1805.

Wornum, Ralph N., ed. Lectures on Painting, by the Royal Academicians. Barry, Opie, and Fuseli. London: Henry G. Bohn, 1848.

Contains Barry's six lectures, Opie's four, and Fuseli's twelve.

Modern Editions

Fuseli, Henry. Lectures on Painting. New York and London: Garland, 1979

MacAndrew, Hugh. "Selected Letters from the Correspondence of Henry Fuseli and William Roscoe of Liverpool." Gazette des Beaux-Arts 62 (1963): 204-28. <BB #A2167>

"Fuseli praises Blake's plate of 'Annubis in the first part of the Botanic Garden' in a letter of 17 Aug. 1798 (218)" (BB #A2167).

Mason, Eudo C., ed. and trans. Aphorismen über die Kunst. Kosterberg, Basel: Verlag Benno Schwabe & Co., 1944.

Mason, Eudo C., ed. Johann Heinrich Füssli. Remarks on the Writings and Conduct of J.J. Rousseau=Bermerkungen über J.J. Rousseaus Schriften und Verhalten. Zurich: Schweizerisches Institut für Kunsthistorische Zürich, Kleine Schriften, 1962. In German.

Mason, Eudo C., ed. The Mind of Henry Fuseli: Selections from his Writings. London: Routledge & Paul, 1951. <BB #1648>

Mason, Eudo C., ed. Unveröffentlichte Gedichte von Johann Heinrich Füssli. Zurich: Neujahrsblatt der Zürcher Kunstgesellschaft, 1951. In German.

Weinglass, David H., ed. The Collected English Letters of Henry Fuseli. Millwood, London, Nendeln: Kraus International Publications, 1982.

Translations by Fuseli

Lavater, Johann Caspar. Aphorisms on Man. [Trans. Henry Fuseli.] 2nd ed. London: J. Johnson, 1789. 3rd ed. Dublin: W. Sleater and P. Byrne, 1790. 3rd ed. London: J. Johnson, 1794.

Winkelmann, Johann Joachim. Trans. Henry Fuseli. Reflections on the Paintings and Sculpture of the Greeks. London: A. Millar, 1765. 1767.

Catalogues \(Standard, Collections, and Exhibitions\)

Standard

Ganz, Paul. The Drawings of Henry Fuseli. New York: 1949.

Longstreet, Stephen. The Drawings of Fuseli. Alhambra: Borden Publishing Co., 1969.

Powell, Nicolas. The Drawings of Henry Fuseli. London: Faber and Faber, 1951.

Schiff, Gert. Johann Heinrich Füssli 1741-1825. 2 vols. Zürich: München Verlag Berichthaus u. Prestel-Verlag, 1973. In German.

The catalogue raisonné for the drawing and paintings. There is a section on Fuseli and Blake in vol. 1, pp. 279-91, and references to Blake and members of his and Fuseli's circles throughout.

Weinglass, David H. Prints and Engraved Illustrations by and after Henry Fuseli: A Catalogue Raisonné. Aldershot, UK, and Brookfield, VT: Ashgate, 1994. <WBHC 2988-89>

There is a useful index of engravers, including Blake, of “books containing engraved illustrations after Fuseli,” and of publishers.

Collection Catalogues

Butlin, Martin, Intro. Drawings by Henry Fuseli R.A.—From a Private Collection. Christie’s, London—Auction Catalogue—14 April 1992. London: Christie’s, 1992. <WBHC 2988>

Drawings owned by Harriet Jane Moore (1801-1884), daughter of Fuseli’s friend Joshua Moore (1762-1860), to whom Fuseli gave a copy of For Children: The Gates of Paradise in 1806.

Tomory, P.A. A Collection of Drawings by Henry Fuseli. Auckland: Auckland City Art Gallery 1967.

Reproduces 37 Fuseli drawings discovered in New Zealand in 1963. For its points regarding Blake, see Michael J. Tolley’s “The Auckland Fuselis” in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 51-52. <BB #1217.46>

Exhibition Catalogues

Baker, Christopher, Andreas Beyer, and Pierre Curie, ed. [Füssli, entre rêve et fantastique \[Fuseli, the Realm of Dreams and the Fantastic\]](#). Paris: Musée Jacquemart-André, 2022. In French. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

The catalogue for the 2022–23 Paris exhibition.

Becker, Christoph, with contributions by Claudia Hattendorf. Johann Heinrich Füssli: Das verlorene Paradies. Stuttgart: Gerd Hatje for the Staatsgalerie Stuttgart, 1997. <WBHC 2992>

The catalogue for the exhibition held from 27 Sep. 1997 to 11 Jan. 1998 at the Staatsgalerie, Stuttgart, in which “[a] large number of Fuseli’s Milton designs for his 1799 exhibition were gathered for the first time in almost two centuries” (WBHC 2992). See Wendy Furman-Adams and Virginia James Tufte’s “The Choreography of Passion: Henry Fuseli’s Milton Gallery, 1799/1998” for additional commentary.

Bindman, David. ‘A Cosmopolitan View of the Bard: Fuseli and Shakespeare.’ Drama and Desire: Art and Theatre from the French Revolution to the First World War. Toronto: Skira, 2010. 80-85.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Art Gallery of Ontario, Toronto.

Bircher, Martin, Christoph Eggenberger, and Michael Kotrba. Johann Heinrich Füssli. Male der Weltliteratur. Die Bestände der Zentralbibliothek Zürich. Zurich, 2005.

[Bogle, Andrew.] William Blake: Illustrations of the Book of Job; Henry Fuseli, The Three Witches of Macbeth and Associated Works. [Auckland: Auckland City Art Gallery, 1980]. <

The typeset catalogue for the exhibition held at the Auckland City Art Gallery from 8 Aug. to 2 Oct. 1980.

Busch, Werner, and Petra Maisak, ed. Füsslis Nachtmahr. Traum und Wahnsinn. Petersberg: Michael Imhof Verlag, 2017. In German. <Blake (2020)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Freies Deutsches Hochstift, Goethe Museum, Frankfurt, from 19 Mar. to 18 Jun. 2017, and at the Wilhelm Busch-Deutsches Museum für Karikatur und Zeichenkunst, Hanover, from 22 Jul. to 15 Oct. 2017. Considers the creation and reception of Fuseli's Nightmare.

Keay, Caroline. Henry Fuseli. London: Academy Editions and New York: St. Martin's Press, 1974.

Lentzsch, Franziszka et al. Fuseli: The Wild Swiss. Zurich: Scheidegger and Spiess, 2005. <WBHC 2991>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Kunsthaus, Zurich, from 14 Oct. 2005 to 8 Jan. 2006.

Licht, Fred, Simona Tosini Pizzetti, and David H. Weinglass. Füssli pittore di Shakespeare: Pittura e teatro, 1775-1825. Milano: Electa, 1997. In Italian. <WBHC 2989>

The catalogue for the exhibition held from 7 Sep. 7 to 7 Dec. 1997, at the Fondazione Magnani Rocca, Mamiano di Traversetolo, Parma. There are essays in Italian on Fuseli and Shakespeare, on the picture galleries of London, and on Fuseli's engravers.

Pressly, Nancy L. The Fuseli Circle in Rome: Early Romantic Art of the 1770s. New Haven: Yale Center for British Art, 1979.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Yale Center for British Art from 12 Sep. to 11 Nov. 1979.

Régis Michel. La peinture comme crime: ou, la part maudite de la modernité. Musée du Louvre, Hall Napoléon. Paris: Éditions de la Réunion des musées nationaux, 2001. In French. <WBHC 2990>

“There are sections on Blake, Fuseli, Goya, and Romney, inter alia” (WBHC 2990).

Reifert, Eva, with Claudia Blank. Fuseli: Drama and Theatre. Munich: Prestel, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

An English translation of the German catalogue for the exhibition, Füssli: Drama und Theater, at the Kunstmuseum Basel, which ran from 20 Oct. 2018 to 17 Feb. 2019 and was curated by Eva Reifert.

Schiff, Gert, ed. Henry Fuseli, 1741-1825. London: Tate Gallery Publications, 1975.

The catalogue for exhibition held at the Tate from 19 Feb. to 31 Mar. 1975.

Schiff, Gert, ed. Johann Heinrich Füssli 1741-1825. Paris: Musée du Petit Palais, 1975. In French.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Musée du Petit Palais from 21 Apr. 20 Jul. 1975.

Schiff, Gert, ed. Johann Heinrich Füssli: 1741-1825. Zürich: Kunsthaus Zürich, 1969. In German.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Kunsthaus Zürich from 17 May to 6 Jul. 1969.

Shockingly Mad: Henry Fuseli and the Art of Drawing.

An exhibition held at the Art Institute of Chicago from 16 Nov. 2017 to 1 Apr. 2018. While there was no catalogue, the title links to the Institute's website, where there are many pictures of the exhibition.

Sieveking, Heinrich. Fuseli to Menzel: Drawings and Watercolors in the Age of Goethe from a German Private Collection. Munich and New York: Prestel, 1998. <WBHC 2990>

The catalogue for the exhibition held from 4 Apr. to 7 Jun. 1998 at the Busch-Reisinger Museum, Cambridge; from 23 Jun. to 10 Aug. 1998 at the Frick Collection, New York; and from 15 Sep. to 29 Nov. 1998v at the J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles.

Solkin, David H., with Jonas Beyer, Mechthild Fend, and Ketty Gottardo. Fuseli and the Modern Woman: Fashion, Fantasy, Fetishism. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

The catalogue for the 2022–23 exhibition held at the Courtauld, London, and Kunsthaus Zürich.

Tomory, Peter. The Poetical Circle. Fuseli and the British. Florence: Centro Di, 1979.

The catalogue for the exhibition held in Florence, Italy, and later Australia and New Zealand 1979.

Studies

Blake and Fuseli

Allentuck, Marcia. "Fuseli's Translations of Winckelmann: A Phase in the Rise of British Hellenism with an aside on William Blake." Studies in the Eighteenth Century II: Papers Presented at the Second David Nichol Smith Memorial Seminar, Canberra 1970. Ed. R.F. Brissenden. Canberra: ACT, 1973. 163-85. <BB #A802>

On Fuseli's translation of Winckelmann and its influence on Blake.

Altick, Richard D. Paintings from Books: Art and Literature in Britain, 1760-1900. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1985.

A good overview of literary paintings. Blake is referenced often, especially in the chapter, "Eighteenth-Century Book Illustrations," pp. 37-55, which also considers Boydell's Shakespeare, Macklin's Poet's, and Fuseli's Milton galleries.

Antal, Frederick. Fuseli Studies. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1956. Rpt. 2022. Routledge Revivals.

A good, albeit dated, overview of Fuseli's career, with many references to Blake and his circle and earlier artists who inspired both Fuseli and Blake.

Baine, Rodney M. and Mary R. “Blake's Sketch for Hamlet.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.4 (spring 1976): 117-19. <BBS 378>

Analyzes the sketch for Hamlet and the 1806 watercolor comparing them to Fuseli's illustrations.

Barrell, John. “A Blake Dictionary.” The Political Theory of Painting From Reynolds To Hazlitt: The Body of the Public. London and New Haven: Yale University Press, 1986. 222-57. <BBS 360, WBHC 1583>¹¹⁷

An important explication of Blake's artistic theory around the terms originality, character, individuality, and public, with references to Reynolds, Barry, Fuseli, and Milton.

Beer, John. “Blake, Coleridge, and Wordsworth: Some Cross-currents and Parallels 1789-1805.” William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 231-59. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Positions Blake alongside Coleridge, Wordsworth, Godwin, and Fuseli, with a discussion of Blake's engravings for Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “'A Different Face': William Blake and Mary Wollstonecraft.” Wordsworth Circle 10.4 (1979): 349-50. <BBS 367>

Argues that Blake's Notebook and letter poem, “Mary,” (i.e., “O Why was I born with a different Face”), was based on a passage of Wollstonecraft's novel Maria, which was reviewed by Henry Fuseli.

Calè, Luisa. “Blake and the Literary Galleries.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 185-209. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers “how Blake responded to the rhetoric and aesthetics of the literary galleries,” with a focus on “Fuseli's Satan Bursts From Chaos, a Milton Gallery picture which Blake was commissioned to engrave” (186), a design that echoes in The [First] Book of Urizen and the illustrations to Night Thoughts.

Calè, Luisa. Fuseli's Milton Gallery: "Turning Readers into Spectators." Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2006.¹¹⁸ <WBHC 2993>

The key study of Fuseli's Milton Gallery, which highlights a new culture of exhibition. In addition to Fuseli's collaborators, Johnson and Cowper, there is much on Boydell's

¹¹⁷ The beginning page number in WBHC misstated as “22.”

¹¹⁸ Calè develops her argument regarding Fuseli's use of invention in her “Lapland Orgies: The Hell-hounds round Sin: Réécriture et Invention dans la Galerie Miltonienne de J. H. Füssli,” Dénouement des Lumières et Invention Romantique, ed. G. Bardazzi and A. Grosrichard (Geneva: Drosz, 2003), 231-46.

Shakespeare Gallery, Macklin's Poet Gallery, and Bowyer's Historic Gallery and some on Blake.

Carter, Sarah. "The Ambiguities of Translation: Fuseli, Blake, and the Making of Aphorisms on Man." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.2 (fall 2024): 32 pars. <Blake (2025)>

"Aphorisms on Man emerges from my analysis a composite creation—one that registers the competing visions of its several authors and constitutes the idea of self emerging in tandem with Romanticism" (par. 3).

Chayes, Irene H. "Between Reynolds and Blake: Eclecticism and Expression in Fuseli's Shakespeare Frescoes." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 85.2 (1982): 140-68. <BBS 428>

While focused primarily on Henry Fuseli and his use of "eclecticism" and "expression" (terms he used in his Lectures on Painting), also considers Fuseli's relationship to Reynolds and Fuseli's influence on Blake.

De Santis, Silvia. "How can I help thy Husband's copying Me? Dante tra Blake, Füssli e Flaxman." 101-28. Dante e l'arte 7 (2020). In Italian (abstract in Italian and English). <Blake (2021)>

Considers the bonds of friendship linking Blake, Fuseli, and Flaxman, and how their interpretations of Dante may have influenced one another.

Erle, Sibylle. Blake, Lavater, and Physiognomy. London: Legenda, 2010. <WBHC 1995-96>

A key study that examines the background and production of Lavater's Physiognomische Fragmente, Henry Fuseli's English translation, and Blake's illustrations, and which details Lavater's influence on Blake's thought.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 2004." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 38.4 (spring 2005): 124-50. <WBHC 1701>

Offers evidence that Fuseli designed the illustrations for Allen's A New and Improved History of England (1798) and A New and Improved Roman History (1798) based on a "pen and ink drawing sold by Christie's London on 6 July [2004]" (125).

Furman-Adams, Wendy, and Virginia James Tufte. "Anticipating Empson: Henry Fuseli's Re-Vision of Milton's God." Milton Quarterly 35 (2001): 258-74. <WBHC 2995>

Contrasts Fuseli's and Blake's depictions of God, Satan, and the creation of Eve in their illustrations of Paradise Lost.

Furman-Adams, Wendy. "'Delectable to Behold': Milton's Eve in the Artist's Gaze." Global Milton and Visual Art. Ed. Angelica Duran and Mario Murgia. Lanham, Boulder, New York, and London: Lexington Books, 2021. 165-98. <Blake (2024)>

Examines eighteenth- and early-nineteenth-century depictions of Eve, including Francis Hayman, Henry Fuseli, Edward Burney, Richard Westall, and John Martin.

Gage, John. "Blake's Newton." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 37 (1971): 372-77. <BB #A1658>

On the print's relationship to Newton's theory of the rainbow, with references to the rainbow in Blake's poetry, Joseph Priestley's account of Newton's Optics, James Barry on Newton's idea of the rainbow, and Henry Fuseli on Michelangelo's Sistine Chapel.

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks ("Hidden Dreams," 31-67) and John Flaxman ("Poetic Departures," 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake and Fuseli in a Student's Letter Home." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.3 (winter 1972-73): 71. <BB #1271.113>

On the reference to Fuseli and Blake in Letters from an Irish Student in England to His Father in Ireland (London, 1809), II.139-41.

Hall, Carol Louise. Blake and Fuseli: A Study in the Transmission of Ideas. New York and London: Garland, 1985. <BBS 499, WBHC 2119-20>¹¹⁹

"Deals especially with the influences on Blake of Fuseli's writings on Winckelmann, Rousseau, and Lavater" (BBS 499).

Heppner, Christopher. "The Woman Taken in Adultery: An Essay on Blake's 'style of Designing.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.2 (fall 1983): 43-60. <BBS 395>

A detailed reading of the biblical watercolor (Butlin 486), with many references to other treatments of the subject, Jonathan Richardson's An Essay on the Theory of Painting (London, 1725), and Fuseli's Lectures on Painting (London, 1801).

Hilton, Nelson. "An Original Story." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 69-104. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

An important essay that uses both Wollstonecraft's Vindication of the Rights of Woman (1792) and her relationship with Fuseli to read The Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Howard, Seymour. "William Blake: The Antique, Nudity, and Nakedness: A Study in Idealism and Regression." Artibus et historiae: rivista internazionale di arti visive e cinema 6 (1982): 117-49. <BBS 516>

A useful essay that considers Blake's use of the nude, positioning him within late eighteenth-century aesthetics (with references to Fuseli and Reynolds) and explicating his changing ideas of nakedness and his presentations of nudes.

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke's "Philosophical Enquiry" to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

¹¹⁹ "BB" in WBHC should be "BBS."

On Burke's notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled "Against and beyond Burke: Blake's 'sublime Labours'" (235-66).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "The Engraver's Apprentice." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 14-30. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

An account of Blake's apprenticeship and descriptions of his Westminster drawings, an identification of the symbols Blake borrowed from Jacob Bryant's New System, or An Analysis of Ancient Mythology (1774-76), the engraving of Joseph of Arimathea, and his signature in a copy of Fuseli's translation of Winkelmann's Reflections on the Painting and Sculpture of the Greeks (1765).

Khachaturov, Sergei. "Gotitsizmy istoricheskoi zhivopisi epokhi romantizma. Bruni, Ivanov, Fusli, Bleik [Gothicism in Romantic Historical Painting. Bruni, Ivanov, Fuseli, Blake]." Russkoe iskusstvo. II. Neuchtennyie detali. Sbornik stateiim [Russian Art. II. Overlooked Details. Digest of Articles]. Saint Petersburg: Aleteiia, 2020. 75-94. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The era of Romanticism made its main themes "overlooked details," difficult and "incorrect," "Gothic," and "Romantic" signs of historical time, and personal understanding of incidents, accomplishments, and human deeds.

Lenihan, Liam. "Wollstonecraft's Reading of Milton and the Sublime of Barry, Fuseli and Blake." The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Considers the response to Milton by Wollstonecraft, James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and Blake, with references to Visions of the Daughters of Albion, Edmund Burke, and William Godwin.

Matsushita, Tetsuya. Henry Fuseli no Gaho: Monogatari to Character Hyogen no Kakushin [The Painting Method of Henry Fuseli: A Revolution in Expression of Stories and Characters]. Tokyo: Sangensha, 2018. In Japanese. <Blake (2020)>

4 plates by Blake.

Matthews, Susan. Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Politeness. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2011. <WBHC 2381>

An important book that positions Blake's use of "sex" against the changing meaning of the term and provides rich readings of Blake and gender primarily in relationship to William Hayley and other significant members of Hayley's circle, and includes discussions of Fuseli and Wollstonecraft.

Matthews, Susan. "'Hayley on his Toilette': Blake, Hayley and Homophobia." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 209-20. <WBHC 1801-03>

“[T]race[s] Blake’s use of the satirical figure of the effeminate man in post-1800 references to William Hayley” (209), with discussion of Cowper and Fuseli. (See her Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Sexuality (2011) for an extension of these arguments.)

Matthews, Susan. “Illustrated Poetry in the Romantic Period.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 356-73. <Blake (2024)>

On the relative novelty of the idea of “illustrations” in the Romantic period, with references to Blake’s illustrations to Gray and Young, Stothard, Fuseli, Boydell, and Charlotte Malkin.

Meller, Horst. “The Parricidal Imagination: Shelley, Blake, Fuseli and the Romantic Revolt against the Father.” The Romantic Imagination: Literature and Art in England and Germany. Ed. Frederick Burwick and Jürgen Klein. Amsterdam and Atlanta: Rodopi, 1996. 76-94. <WBHC 2396>

On how the writers and artists depicted the death of fathers in relationship to their radical politics.

Merchant, W. Moelwyn. “The Romantics.” Shakespeare and the Artist. London, New York, and Toronto: Oxford University Press, 1959. 77-94. <BB #2215>

Discusses Blake’s Shakespeare illustrations on pp. 81-86, with the chapter also addressing other Romantic illustrations of Shakespeare, including those by Fuseli and John Martin. The previous chapter is on the Boydell Shakespeare project.

Miner, Paul. “Blake and Winckelmann’s ‘Paltry Critick.’” Notes and Queries 58.4 (2011): 535-37. <WBHC 2409>

“The ‘paltry critic’ in Winckelmann’s Reflections on the Painting and Sculpture of the Greeks, tr. Fuseli (1765) is echoed in Blake’s defence of Fuseli in the Monthly Magazine (1806)” (WBHC 2409).

Myrone, Martin. “The Body of the Blasphemer.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 74-86. <WBHC 1801-03>

Interprets the biblical watercolor, The Blasphemer (Butlin no. 446), for its “radically unstable queerness” (76), with references to Fuseli.

Myrone, Martin. “Conclusion: Genius, Madness and the Fate of Heroic Art: Blake and Fuseli in the Nineteenth Century.” Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 305-14. <WBHC 2446>

Considers Blake and Fuseli and the fate of the “Grand Manner” in art and its arguments regarding masculinity.

Myrone, Martin. “Fuseli to Frankenstein: The Visual Arts in the Context of the Gothic.” Gothic Nightmares: Fuseli, Blake and the Romantic Imagination. London: Tate Publishing, 2006. 31-40. <WBHC 1329-32>

Considers Fuseli, Blake, and James Gillray in relationship to the Gothic: “what brings the perverse, strange and supernatural art of Fuseli, Blake, and Gillray and their contemporaries into meaningful association with the Gothic in literature is also that they share the same range of new strategic possibilities regarding audiences, marketing and the power of sensation” (35).

O'Rourke, Stephanie. “Art after Self Evidence: Fuseli, Blake, and Banks.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 497-513. <Blake (2023)>

“[C]onsiders how models of artistic neoclassicism and scientific experimental procedures shared an investment in the evidentiary authority of an idealized male body” (abstract).

Pite, Ralph. “Illustrating Dante.” The Circle of Our Vision: Dante's Presence in English Romantic Poetry. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1994. 58-69. <WBHC 2537>

A reading of Blake’s Dante illustrations with references to Fuseli and John Taafe.

Pointon, Marcia R. “William Blake and Milton (1801-1825).” Milton and English Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1970. 135-66. Rpt. Toronto: Toronto University Press, 2019. <BB #2426, Blake (2023)>

A section on Blake’s illustrations to Milton in a wider book on visual representations of Milton’s works between, chiefly 1688 and 1860. Many references to Blake’s precursors and contemporaries, including Fuseli’s Milton Gallery.

Ripley, Wayne C. “An Unrecorded Attack on Blake.” Notes and Queries 55.4 (Dec. 2008): 418-20.

Blake was attacked in John Britton’s The Pleasure of Human Life (1807) for defending Fuseli.

Sullivan, Ernest W., II. “Illustration as Interpretation: Paradise Lost from 1688 to 1807.” Milton's Legacy in the Arts. Ed. Albert C. Labriola and Edward Sichi, Jr. University Park, PA and London: Pennsylvania State University, 1988. 59-92. <BBS 650>

An overview of illustrations of Paradise Lost, ending with Blake’s, with slight mention of Fuseli’s.

Szwydky, Lissette Lopez. “Visual and Textual Adaptation in Literature and Fine Art Forms.” Transmedia Adaptation in the Nineteenth Century. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2020. 97-137. <Blake (2024)>

Discusses Blake’s engravings to Stedman and his illustrations to other authors (Young, Gray, Milton, and Dante). Also addresses the literary galleries of Boydell and Macklin, with a few comments on Fuseli’s illustration of Shakespeare.

Todd, Ruthven. “Fuseli and Blake: Companions in Mystery.” Art News 52 (1954): 26, 57-58, <BB #2850>

On why the men were friends.

Todd, Ruthven. “Two Blake Prints and Two Fuseli Drawings, with Some Possibly Pertinent Speculations.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 173-81. <BB #1217.83>

On seeing sketches by Fuseli for Blake’s commercial engravings of Lavater’s Aphorism on Man (Essick, Comm. XVIII) and Fuseli’s Lectures on Painting (Essick, Comm. XL) at the London bookstore of Ernest Seligmann, with an effort to document all of Blake's engravings for Fuseli and speculation on the Fuseli and Blake relationship.

Tomory, Peter. "A Blake Sketch for Hayley's Ballad 'The Lion' and a Connection with Fuseli." The Burlington Magazine 17.867 (1975): 376-78. <BBS 663>

On a sketch for "The Lion" in the "Royal Academy miscellanea collected by Edward Bell the engraver" (376), and its relationship to Fuseli's Odysseus Killing the Suitors, which was also executed in 1802.

Trawick, Leonard. "William Blake's German Connection." Colby Library Quarterly 13.4 (1977): 229-45. <BBS 663>

On Blake's possible knowledge of German literature and art through Fuseli and Lavater.

Wasser, Henry H. "Notes on the Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Modern Language Quarterly 9.2 (1948): 292-97. <BB #2927>

An early reading of Visions through the lens of Mary Wollstonecraft's relationship with Henry Fuseli.

Wein, Toni. Monstrous Fellowship: "Pagan, Turk and Jew" in English Popular Culture, 1780-1845. Oxford: Peter Lang, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

Shows that the phrase that Blake applied to Fuseli originated as early as 1548. Takes the Gordon Riots as its point of historical departure for an examination of the treatment of Irish Catholics, Muslims, and Jews in literature (including the work of Smith) and society.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. "A Note on Blake and Fuseli." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.1 (Jun. 1969): 3-4. <BB #1217.38>

Notes that Fuseli's fourth lecture on painting in "the Spring of 1803" (3) anticipates Blake's use of the phrase "sublime allegory" to describe epic poetry in his 6 Jul. letter to Thomas Butts.

Yates, Frances A. "Transformations of Dante's Ugolino." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 14.1-2 (1951): 92-117.¹²⁰

A useful survey of eighteenth-century and early nineteenth-century depictions of Ugolino, including those by Reynolds, Fuseli, Blake, and John Flaxman.

Fuseli without Blake

Allentuck, Marcia. "Further Reflections on Henry Fuseli's 'Nightmare' by Way of a New Inventory of Influence and Caricature." Humanities Association Review 27.4 (1976): 459-65.

Allentuck, Marcia. "Fuseli and Lavater: Physiognomical Theory and the Enlightenment." Studies in Voltaire in the Eighteenth Century 55 (1967): 88-112.

Allentuck, Marcia. "Henry Fuseli on Engravings of His Milton Paintings: An Unpublished Letter." Burlington Magazine 116.853 (1974): 214.

¹²⁰ Not recorded in BB.

A 27 Sep. 1802 letter to Du Roveray on “William Bromley’s engravings of his work in the 1802 edition of Paradise Lost” (214).

Allentuck, Marcia. “Henry Fuseli and J. G. Herder’s Ideen Zur Philosophie Der Geschichte Der Menschheit in Britain: An Unremarked Connection.” Journal of the History of Ideas 35.1 (1974): 113-20.

Suggests that Fuseli had a role in Joseph Johnson’s 1800 edition of Herder’s work.

Allentuck, Maricia. “Henry Fuseli’s ‘Queen Katherine’s Vision’ and Macklin’s Poet’s Gallery: A New Critique.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes. 39 (1976): 266-268.

Highlights Fuseli’s review of Macklin’s 1789 Catalogue of the British Poets in the Analytical Review, where he comments on painters illustrating literature, with specific references to Gainsborough, Opie, Stothard, Reynolds, and Bartolozzi’s engraving of Fuseli’s own painting, “Queen Katherine’s Dream.”

Andres, Sophia. “Narrative Challenges to Verbal, Gendered Boundaries: Mary Shelley and Henry Fuseli.” Journal of Narrative Theory 31.3 (2001): 257-82. <WBHC 2991>

“Shelley’s text [Matilda], as I will demonstrate, transforms Fuseli’s figures into more complex individuals. Indeed, her feminist narrative transformations of Fuseli’s paintings give us insights into gender conflicts not only in this novella but also in her other works as well” (257).

Andrus, Z. Dana. “Some Implications for Another Reading of Henry Fuseli’s ‘The Nightmare.’” Gazette des Beaux-Arts 137.126 (1995): 235-52.

Atkins, A.M. “Both Turk and Jew’: Notes on the Poetry of Henry Fuseli, with Some Translations.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983): 206-11. <BBS 394>

Considers Fuseli’s turn from poetry and letters to paintings and offers English translations of five of the poems published in Johann Heinrich Füssli, Sämtliche Gedichte, ed. Martin Bircher and Karl S. Guthke (Zürich, 1973).

Baker, George. “Fuseli’s Orpheus: A Drawing Found.” On Paper 2.6 (1998): 15-17.

Notes and reproduces the rediscovered Fuseli drawing, Orpheus and Eurydice.

Baskcomb, Camilla, and Ute Larsen. “Henry Fuseli: Necessity or Frugality? The Artist’s Selection of Drawing Papers.” Journal of the Institute of Conservation, 32.1 (2009): 15-29. <WBHC 2992>

Bohrer, Frederick N. “Public Virtue and Private Terror: A Two-Sided Oil Sketch by Henry Fuseli.” Zeitschrift für Kunstgeschichte 53 (1990): 89-106.

Brenneman, David A. “Self-Promotion and the Sublime: Fuseli’s Dido on the Funeral Pyre.” Huntington Library Quarterly 62.1-2 (1999): 68-87. <WBHC 2992>

On Fuseli’s and Reynolds’s depiction of Dido at the 1784 Royal Academy exhibition, which established Fuseli’s reputation and “transformed [the sublime] from a marginal aesthetic espoused by Fuseli and a few others into an acknowledged feature of Reynolds’s theoretical platform” (70).

Brown, David. “Fuseli’s Drawings for Ben Jonson’s ‘Masque of Queenes,’ and a Figure Study, Rediscovered in the Ashmolean Museum.” Burlington Magazine 121.911 (1979): 111-13.

Burden, Michael. “A Short Article on a Lively Subject: Geltruda Rossi, Sarah Siddons, and Shakespeare’s Lady Macbeth à la Fuseli.” Dance Research Journal 49.1 (April 2017): 55-69. <Blake (2018)>

Cass, Jeffrey. “Fuseli’s Milton Gallery: Satan’s First Address to Eve as a Source for Maria Edgeworth’s Belinda.” ANQ 14.2 (2001): 15-24.

Contextualizing Edgeworth’s obscure reference to Fuseli’s ‘well known picture’ provides clues to the symbolic import of the miscues and misdirections of Hery and Lady Delacour” (15).¹²¹

Chappell, Miles L. “Fuseli and the ‘judicial adoption’ of the Antique in the ‘Nightmare.’” Burlington Magazine 128.99 (1986): 420-22.

de Lima, Cecilia Nazaré, and Thaïs Flores Nogueira Diniz. “Hamlet in Two Interpretations: Fuseli and Liszt.” Todas as Letras: Revista de Língua e Literatura 19.1 (Jan.-April 2017): 92-102. In English. <Blake (2018)>

Dörrbecker, Detlef W. “Fuseli, The Swiss, and the British: Some Recent Publications.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.1 (summer 1981): 53-55.

An account of some of the then recent German and Italian sources.

Duffy, Michael H. “Michaelangelo and the Sublime in Romantic Art Criticism.” Journal of the History of Ideas 56.2 (1995): 217-38.

Highlights Reynolds’s Discourses and Fuseli’s Lectures.

Feingold, Lawrence. “Fuseli, Another Nightmare: The Night-Hag Visiting Lapland Witches.” Metropolitan Museum Journal 17 (1982): 49-61.

“The Night-Hag merges Milton, the nightmare and the Medusa, Lapland, and Ben Jonson in a single cauldron” (61).

Furman-Adams, Wendy, and Virginia James Tufte. “The Choreography of Passion: Henry Fuseli’s Milton Gallery, 1799/1998.” Reassembling Truth: Twenty-First Century Milton. Ed. Charles W. Durham and Kristin A. Pruitt. Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press; London and Cranbury [N.J.]: Associated University Presses, 2003. 213-41. <WBHC 2999>¹²²

Analyzes the paintings of the Milton Gallery in relationship to ballet, with references to the 1997-98 Staatsgalerie Stuttgart exhibition.

Harvey, A.D. “Benjamin West and Henry Fuseli in Fiction, 1828.” Notes and Queries 45.2 (Jun. 1998): 202-03.

Notes their dialogue in James Boaden’s A Man of Two Lives (1828).

¹²¹ Cass is quoting Edgeworth’s Belinda.

¹²² WBHC misattributes the essay to Jay Stubblefield and alphabetizes it accordingly.

Haut, Asia A. “Reading Flora: Erasmus Darwin’s The Botanic Garden, Henry Fuseli’s Illustrations, and Various Literary Responses.” Word & Image 20.4 (2004): 240-56.

“This essay focuses on a nexus of late eighteenth-century British botanically related texts -both literary and visual -in which the garden is revealed to be a site in which gender-dependent assertions over language are contested” (240). In addition to Fuseli’s illustrations to Darwin, work by Anna Seward (1742-1809) and Richard Polwhele’s The Unsex’d Females (1798) are considered.

Hay, Daisy. Dinner with Joseph Johnson: Books and Friendship in a Revolutionary Age. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

An engaging and detailed book on Joseph Johnson and his circle. Blake is a minor but recurrent player. There are well-told accounts regarding the many members of Blake’s circle with ties to Johnson. These include Erasmus Darwin, John Gabriel Stedman, and William Cowper (and William Hayley’s relationship to him), with Henry Fuseli and Mary Wollstonecraft given extensive attention.

Irwin, David. “Fuseli’s Milton Gallery: Unpublished Letters.” Burlington Magazine 101.681 (1959): 436-40.

Letters to Roscoe on the Milton Gallery.

Junod, Karen. “Henry Fuseli’s Pragmatic Use of Aesthetics: His Epic Illustrations of Macbeth.” Word & Image 19.3 (2003): 138-50. <WBHC 2996>

“[A] close analysis of Fuseli’s interpretation of Macbeth” showing “how Fuseli intended” “to produce the most powerful effect possible on the spectator, which nonetheless involved a discrepancy between his theory and practice” (138).

King, James. “An Unlikely Alliance: Fuseli as Revisor of Cowper’s Homer.” Neophilologus 67.3 (1983): 468-79.

On Fuseli’s assistance in helping Cowper to translate Homer.

Liberto, Fabio. “Shakespeare, Fuseli, and Problems of Visual Representation in Romantic Culture.” Textus 24.1 (2011): 131-52. <WBHC 2996>

Focusing on Fuseli’s paintings for the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery, argues that “Fuseli’s paintings show profound ontological problems connected to stage representation, actors’ identity, and visual imagination, especially when it comes to representation inspired by Shakespeare’s works” (abstract).

Matthews, Susan. “Henry Fuseli’s Accommodations: ‘Attempting the Domestic’ in the Illustrations to Cowper.” Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 119-42. <Blake (2020)>

Considers “how Fuseli responded to the challenge of working for commercial publishers” after the failure of the Milton Gallery (14).

MacAndrew, Hugh. “Henry Fuseli and William Roscoe.” Liverpool Bulletin, Walker Art Gallery 8 (1959-60).

MacAndrew, Hugh. "Selected Letters from the Correspondence of Henry Fuseli and William Roscoe of Liverpool." Gazette des Beaux-Arts 62 (1963): 204-28. <BB #A2167>

"Fuseli praises Blake's plate of 'Annubis in the first part of the Botanic Garden' in a letter of 17 Aug. 1798 (218)" (BB #A2167).

Moffitt, John F. "A Pictorial Counterpart to 'Gothick' Literature: Fuseli's The Nightmare." Mosaic 35.1 (2002): 173-96.

"It now appears that it is a single published source-The Malleus Maleficarum 'The Hammer of Witches' composed by Heinrich Kramer ('Institor') and Jacob Sprenger, and first published in 1486-87 - that best contextually explains the intrinsic significance of many specific motifs encountered in Fuseli's familiar painting" (178).

Myrone, Martin. "Henry Fuseli and Gothic Spectacle." Huntington Library Quarterly 70.2 (2007): 289-310.

Explores Fuseli's relationship to the Gothic in terms of public spectacle and new technologies of popular entertainment.

Myrone, Martin. "Henry Fuseli and Thomas Banks in Rome," "Gothic Romance and Quixotic Heroism: Fuseli in the 1780s," and "Conclusion: Genius, Madness and the Fate of Heroic Art: Blake and Fuseli in the Nineteenth Century." Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 163-90, 227-51. <WBHC 2446, 2996>

Considers Blake and Fuseli and the fate of the "Grand Manner" in art and its arguments regarding masculinity.

O'Dell, Ilse. "Füssli 'Fakes'?" Print Quarterly 10 (1993): 37-42. <WBHC 2997>

"About 'Füssli's borrowing from prints by Jost Amman in his early drawings . . . some drawings that are attributed to Amman are in fact by Füssli' (37)" (WBHC 2997).

Oppenheimer, Margaret. "Reinventing Henry Fuseli's Nightmare: A Forgotten Painting by William Martin \(1753-1830 or later\)." British Art Journal 21.1 (2020): 64-72.

Reads Martin's Iachimo in the Apartment of Imogen as a response to Fuseli's Nightmare.

O'Rourke, Stephanie. "Fuseli's Physiognomic Impressions." Art, Science, and the Body in Early Romanticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2022. <Blake (2024)>

"Despite referring to physiognomy as 'the mother of correctness,' Fuseli often represented bodies that could not be read according to the criteria of Lavater's system" (20).

Padilla, Nathalie. L'esthétique du sublime dans les peintures shakespeariennes d'Henry Füssli (1741-1825). Paris: L'Harmattan, 2009. In French. <WBHC 2997>

Parrino, Maria. "Gothic and Earlier Painting: Nightmares and Premature Burials in Fuseli and Wiertz." The Edinburgh Companion to Gothic and the Arts. Ed. David Punter. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2019. 107-21. <Blake (2020)>

Poot, Luke Terlaak. “Scott’s Momentaneity: Bad Timing in The Bride of Lammermoor.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 72.3 (Dec. 2017): 283-310. <Blake (2018)>

Considers the influence of Fuseli’s concept of “momentaneity” on Scott.

Pop, Andrei. Antiquity, Theatre, and the Painting of Henry Fuseli. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2015. <WBHC 2997>

Seeks to reconstruct “Fuseli’s career as an interpreter of antiquity” (12).

Pop, Andrei. “Henry Fuseli: Greek Tragedy and Cultural Pluralism.” Art Bulletin 94.1 (2012): 78-98. <WBHC 2997>

On Fuseli’s Shakespeare designs in relationship to Greek antiquity.

Pop, Andrei. “Sympathetic Spectators: Henry Fuseli’s Nightmare and Emma Hamilton’s Attitudes.” Art History 34.5 (2011): 934-57. <WBHC 2997>

“I shall argue that, beyond all self-congratulatory rhetoric, it is Fuseli’s dogged effort to involve viewers in a dreamer’s private experience that makes The Nightmare compelling” (934).

Powell, Nicolas. The Nightmare. New York: Viking Press, 1973.

A study that includes a list of different versions and variants and of caricatures and satirical prints.

Priestman, Martin. “‘Fuseli’s Poetic Eye’: Prints and Impressions in Fuseli and Erasmus Darwin.” Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 94-118. <Blake (2020)>

Suggests that Fuseli’s illustrations “functioned like meditations on Darwin’s complex ideas” (14).

Regier, Alexander. “Crossing Channels: Fuseli, Hamann, and Lavater.” Exorbitant Enlightenment: Blake, Hamann, and Anglo-German Constellations. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. 93-124. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

On Fuseli’s relationships to Hamann and Lavater.

Riccardi, Silvia. “Dal colosso al frammento: Fuseli, Flaxman, Blake e i giganti di Botticelli (If. XXXI-XXXII).” Dante e Botticelli II. Ed. Cornelia Klettke and Dagmar Korbacher. Franco Cesati Editore, 2024. In Italian. <Blake (2025)>

Riccardi, Silvia. “The true terrors of Dante: ‘L’Inferno di Henry Fuseli.’” Dante in der romanischen Welt. Ed. Thomas Klinkert and Patricia Oster-Stierle, Brill Fink, 2024. 93-113. In Italian. <Blake (2025)>

Rykov, Anatolii. “Buria, natisk i legkoe dominovalie. Genri Fiuzeli [Storm, Stress, and Light Domination. Henry Fuseli].” Studia Culturae 43 (2020): 68-77. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The author comes to the conclusion that the reception of the male-female opposition, typical for the Sturm und Drang movement, is transformed by Fuseli into the deconstruction and erosion of stable gender identities. The erotization of art, the sexualization of the set of subjects and themes traditional for European art by Fuseli, leads to a rethinking of the problems of power and social relations.

Schiff, Gert. Johann Heinrich Füssli's Milton-Galerie. Zurich: Fretz & Wasmuth, 1963. In German.

Includes a catalogue of the Milton Gallery.

Schiff, Gert, and Viotto P, ed. L'Opera completa di Johann Heinrich Füssli. Milan: Rizzoli, 1977. In Italian.

Shachar, Hila. "Cultural Manifestations of Romanticism on the Contemporary Screen." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 486-501.

On Mary Shelley and The Nightmare.

Sillars, Stuart. "Fuseli and the Uses of Iconography" and "Fuseli: Nature and Supernature." Painting Shakespeare: The Artist as Critic 1720-1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2006. 98-132 and 219-53. <WBHC 2998>

Smith, Hester Camilla. "Artist as Educator? Assessing the Pedagogic Role of Folly in the Early Work of the Anglo-Swiss Artist Henry Fuseli \(1741-1825\)." Paedagogica Historica 46.5 (2010): 559-83. <WBHC 2998>

"This article examines a group of five ink, pen and wash drawings produced by the Anglo-Swiss artist Henry Fuseli in the mid-eighteenth century in Zurich. The drawings were produced for a Narrenbuch (Book of Fools) uniting visual images of folly with humorous slogans. The drawings are significant in that they imitate sixteenth-century print culture and pedagogic literary genres based around the figure of the fool by humanist writers such as Sebastian Brant and Erasmus. The article argues that Fuseli's conception of the Narrenbuch was a criticism of the ascetic methods of teaching employed at the Carolinum Collegium where he was training to become a Reformist Minister" (abstract).

Smith, Camilla. "Between Fantasy and Angst: Assessing the Subject and Meaning of Henry Fuseli's late Pornographic Drawings, 1800-25." Art History 33.3 (2010): 420-47. <WBHC 2998>

"[A]rgues that drawings such as Three Courtesans Operating on the Face of a Bound Man, Three Women and a Recumbent Man, Woman Torturing a Child, and Prostitute Swinging a Whip (a direct copy after Fuseli c. 1822–30) express a unique set of concerns related to both Fuseli's early life in Zurich, where he was training to be a minister, as well as the emergence of marginal sexual appetites through the increasing international availability of libertine literature by the Marquis de Sade" (422-23).¹²³

Vinje, John W. "Fuseli's Bottom and the Barberini Faun." Notes and Queries 54.3 (Sep. 2007): 283-85.

The "Barberini Faun [is] a possible source for Fuseli's painting" (283).

¹²³ I removed Smith's reference to the article's plate numbers.

Weinglass, D.H. “Henry Fuseli's Letter of Enquiry to Paris on Behalf of Mary Wollstonecraft's Sister Everina.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.4 (spring 1988): 144-46. <BBS 402>

Argues that a 17 Jan. 1788 letter “provides a terminus a quo for the beginning of [Fuseli and Wollstonecraft's] acquaintance” (145).

Gibson, John (1786–1866), Sculptor

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB\), Martin Greenwood

Eastlake, Elizabeth. Life of John Gibson, R.A., Sculptor. London: Longmans, Green, and Co., 1870.

Gibson's meeting with Blake is described on p. 42

Hardy, Emma. “Gibson, John RA 1790-1866.” A Biographical Dictionary of Sculptors in Britain 1660–1851. Ed. Ingrid Roscoe, Emma Hardy and M.G. Sullivan. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2009. 521-29.

A useful overview, with a list of Gibson's works (Funeral Monuments, Statues, Busts, Chimneypieces, and Miscellaneous) with locations and associated literature.

The same volume contains an entry on Gibson's brothers, Solomon Gibson (1796-1866) and Benjamin Gibson (1811?-1851).

Matthew, Thomas, ed. The Biography of John Gibson, R.A., Sculptor, Rome. London: William Heinemann, 1911.

Gibson's meeting with Blake is described on p. 39.

Sullivan, M.G. “Banks, Thomas RA 1735-1805.” A Biographical Dictionary of Sculptors in Britain 1660-1851. Ed. Ingrid Roscoe, Emma Hard, and M.G. Sullivan. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2009. 66-74.

A substantial biographical sketch with a list of his works (Funeral Monuments, Chimneypieces, Architectural Sculpture, Reliefs, and Miscellaneous) with locations and associated literature.

Catalogues

Panzanelli, Roberta, with Eike D. Schmidt and Kenneth Lapatin, ed. The Color of Life: Polychromy in Sculpture from Antiquity to the Present. Los Angeles: The J. Paul Getty Museum and the Getty Research Institute, 2008.

Gibson is discussed on pp. 85 and 87, and his Tinted Venus is catalogue no. 33.

Studies

Edwards, Jason “By Abstraction Springs Forth Ideal Beauty?: The ‘Real Academy’ and John Gibson's Anglo-Roman Modernity.” Living with the Royal Academy: Artistic Ideals and Experiences in England, 1768-1848. Ed. Sarah Monks, John Barrell, and Mark Hallett. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2013. 195-220.

On Gibson's career, his critical neglect, and the contemporary resurgence of interest in him.

Ferrari, Robert O. "Before Rome: John Gibson and the British School of Art." The British School of Sculpture, c. 1760-1832. Ed. Jason Edwards and Sarah Burnage. London and New York: Routledge, 2017. 126-45.

Surveys Gibson's career in London before his departure for Rome in 1817, referring to Gibson's relationship to Roscoe, Nollekens, Fuseli, Flaxman, Blake, and West.

Ferrari, Robert O. "Beyond Polychromy: John Gibson, the Roman School of Sculpture, and the Modern Classical Body." PhD diss. City University of New York, 2013.

Ferrari, Robert O. "John Gibson, Designer: Sculpture and Reproductive Media in the Nineteenth Century." Journal of Art Historiography 13 (2015): 1-50.

Ferrari, Roberto C. "The Sculptor, the Duke, and Queer Art Patronage: John Gibson's Mars Restrained by Cupid and Winckelmannian Aesthetics." Rome, Travel and the Sculpture Capital, c. 1770-1825. Ed. Tomas Macsotay. Abingdon: Routledge, 2017. 225-48. <Blake (2018)>

Fletcher, Hans. "John Gibson: An English Pupil of Thorvaldsen." Apollo 96.128 (1972): 336-40.

Fletcher, Hans. "John Gibson's Narcissus." The Connoisseur 196 (1977): 60-62.

Fletcher, Hans. "John Gibson's Polychromy and Lord Londonderry's Bacchus." The Connoisseur 187 (1974): 2-5.

Frasca-Rath, Anna Sophie. John Gibson & Antonio Canova: Rezeption, Transfer, Inszenierung. Böhlau, 2018. In German.

Morris, Edward. "John Gibson's Satan." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 34 (1971): 397-99.

Passing reference to Blake, Hayley, Fuseli, and Romney, but more extended discussion of Gibson's relationship to Roscoe.

Stevens, Timothy. "John Gibson's 'The Sleeping Shepherd Boy.'" Patronage & Practice: Sculpture on Merseyside. Liverpool: Tate Gallery Liverpool, National Museums & Galleries on Merseyside. 57-59.

Tate Papers 29 (spring 2018). Special focus on Gibson. <Blake (2019)> Includes:

Avery-Quash, Susanna. "John Gibson's Friendship with Charles Eastlake and Its Importance in Securing Gibson's Reputation in London." 44 pars. On Gibson's friendship with Eastlake.

Ferrari, Roberto C., and M. G. Sullivan. "'Men thinking, and women tranquil': John Gibson's Portraiture Practice." 46 pars. Considers Gibson's practice of portraiture.

Frasca-Rath, Anna. "Via della Fontanella 4: John Gibson's Workshop in Rome." 30 pars. Reconstructs Gibson's workshop in Rome.

Yarrington, Alison. "John Gibson and the Anglo-Italian Sculpture Market in Rome: Letters, Sketches and Marble." 26 pars. Explores Gibson's life in Rome and his relationship with the Duke of Devonshire.

Hayley, William (1745-1820)¹²⁴ (See also Biographies, John Flaxman, George Romney, William Cowper, Milton, a Poem, Commercial Book Illustrations, Eighteen Heads of the Poets, and Letters)

Bibliographies

Barker, N.J. “Some Notes on the Bibliography of William Hayley: Part I.” Transactions of the Cambridge Bibliographical Society 3.1 (1959): 103-12.

The first of three important essays providing bibliographical descriptions of Hayley’s works, including different editions and collation formulas.

Barker, N.J. “Some Notes on the Bibliography of William Hayley: Part II.” Transactions of the Cambridge Bibliographical Society 3.2 (1960): 167-76.

Includes a description of Essay on Sculpture.

Barker, N.J. “Some Notes on the Bibliography of William Hayley: Part III.” Transactions of the Cambridge Bibliographical Society 3.4 (1962): 339-60.

Includes a description of Ballads, The Life of William Cowper, and Little Tom.

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Vivienne W. Painting)

Bishop, Murchard. Blake's Hayley: The Life, Works, and Friendships of William Hayley.

London: Victor Gollancz, 1951. Rpt. Freeport, NY, 1972. <BB #1210, BBS 375, WBHC 1634>

A rich biography of Hayley, with extensive contextualization of Blake’s relationship with him and Blake’s time in Felpham.

Hayley, William. Memoirs of the Life and Writings of William Hayley. 2 vols. Ed. John Johnson. London: Henry Colburn and co. and Simpkin and Marshall, 1823. <BB #1814>

Hayley’s own memoir.

Holmes, John R. “William Hayley \(1745-1820\).” British Romantic Poets, 1789-1832: First Series. Ed. John R. Greenfield. Detroit, New York, London: A Brucoli Clark Layman Book, Gale Research Inc., 1990. 165-174. <WBHC 3005>

An overview, stressing his relationship with Blake.

Sale Catalogue with Works by Blake

Mr Christie. A Catalogue of the Interesting Assemblage of Pictures, Drawings, Prints, and Old Oriental China, The Property of William Hayley, Esq. Deceased; and brought from his late Residence at Felpham, Sussex . . . Framed and Glazed Drawings, Books of Prints; A Collection of Rare Portraits of British and Foreign Poets and Other Literary Characters . . . Loose Engravings; An Enamelled Cistern, and fine Specimens of Old Japan, and Other Oriental China . . . London, 1821.

¹²⁴ See also Butlin, “Works Done at the Instigation of William Hayley ([#]343-375), c. 1800-1805” (pp.297-315), in The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake.

[Catalogue of A Valuable Collection of Autograph Letters, forming The Hayley Correspondence, comprising Thirty-four characteristic Letters in the Autograph of William Blake \[...\].](#)

[London:] Dryden Press, 1878. <BB#572>

“The Blake lots (1-34) include 16 letters which have still not been traced, and some for which the excerpts printed here are the only or the best text available” (BB#572). The 7 Aug. 1804 letter (one of the 16 mentioned by Bentley) is described in Mark Crosby and Robert N. Essick’s “the fiends of Commerce': Blake's Letter to William Hayley, 7 August 1804.

Historic Editions

Given Hayley’s immense productivity, only the books that have some relationship to Blake are listed here. All titles link to the full entry in Commercial Book Illustrations. For digital editions of Hayley’s other works, see Hayley’s entry at the Online Books website.

Ballads . . . Related to Animals. Chichester: J. Seagrave, 1805.

Designs to a Series of Ballads. Chichester: J. Seagrave, 1802.

An Essay on Sculpture. London: T. Cadell Jun. and W. Davies, 1800.

Little Tom the Sailor. Printed October 5, 1800.

The Life of George Romney. Chichester: T. Payne, 1809.

The Life, and Posthumous Writings, of William Cowper. 3 vols. Chichester: J. Johnson, 1803.

The Triumphs of Temper. 12th ed. Chichester: T. Cadell and W. Davies, 1803. 13th ed. Chichester: J. Seagrave, and London: T. Cadell and W. Davies, 1807.

Modern Editions

Foster, Paul, ed., with Diana Barsham. William Hayley (1745–1820): Selected Poetry. Chichester: University of Chichester, 2013. <WBHC 3004>

Macdonald, Simon. “The Correspondence between William Hodges and William Hayley c. 1793-96.” Transactions of the Romney Society 16 (2011).

“A Museum of Relationships: The Correspondence of William Hayley \(1745–1820\).” Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. <Blake (2023)>

A pilot project displaying the letters of William Hayley owned by the Fitzwilliam Museum. Currently (as of 23 Feb. 2023) there are three digital exhibitions available: Hayley’s correspondence with his wife, Eliza Hayley \(born Ball\); with Anna Seward; and with John Flaxman, which includes Flaxman’s correspondence with Hayley’s son, Thomas Alphonso.

Catalogues

Chan, Victor. Leader of My Angels: William Hayley and His Circle. Edmonton: Edmonton Art Gallery, 1982.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Edmund Art Gallery from 17 Sep. to 31 Oct. 1982. Includes Blake, Flaxman, Romney, and Stothard.

[Johnston, Elizabeth.] “For friendship’s sake”: William Blake and William Hayley. [Manchester, [1969]. <BB #697>

The catalogue for exhibition held at the City Art Gallery, Manchester, from 29 Apr. to 18 May 1969. Includes:

Conran, G.L. “Foreword.” 2.

[Johnston, Elizabeth.] “Arguments Towards a Conjectural Arrangement of Blake’s ‘Heads of the Poets.’” 3-5.

“47 works (six by Blake) which provide context and ‘iconographical sources’ for Blake’s ‘Heads of the Poets’” (BB #697).

Studies

Blake and Hayley

Allentuck, Marcia. “Blake, Flaxman, and Thomas: A New Document.” Harvard Library Bulletin 20 (1972): 318-19. <BB #802>

Describes Flaxman’s 31 Jul. 1801 letter to Hayley, which contains a postscript on Blake.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake, Hayley, and Lady Hesketh.” The Review of English Studies 7.27 (Jul. 1956): 264-86. <BB #1157>

Important early article on Hayley’s relationship to Lady Hesketh (Cowper’s cousin) in writing the Life of Cowper and on Lady Hesketh’s views of Blake and of his work for Hayley, which were not as negative as previous work had suggested. Lays out key details about Blake’s time in Felpham.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “William Blake and ‘Johnny of Norfolk’.” Studies in Philology 53.1 (1956): 60-74. <BB #1179>

Traces Blake’s friendship with John Johnson, William Cowper’s cousin, as documented in Blake’s correspondence with Hayley.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “William Blake’s Techniques of Engraving and Printing.” Studies in Bibliography 34 (1981): 241-53. <BBS 369-70>

Useful contextual information regarding Cumberland and Hayley, but refer to Essick’s William Blake Printmaker and Visconti’s Blake and the Idea of the Book for more accurate accounts.

Crosby, Mark. “‘Absorbed by the Poets’: The Sources and Hanging Arrangement for Blake’s Eighteen Heads of Poets.” William Blake Archive. Ed. Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Visconti. April 2024. <Blake (2025)>

“Using evidence from the restored paintings, the original architectural plans for Turret House, and Hayley’s correspondence, this exhibit offers an updated hanging arrangement for Blake’s eighteen portrait heads. Comprising two galleries, the exhibition traces the construction of Hayley’s Turret House and its upper library before providing a new hanging arrangement and possible sources available in Hayley’s libraries for the portrait heads, including the identification of new sources for Blake’s portraits of Homer, Demosthenes, and Tasso.”

Crosby, Mark. “‘a Ladys Book’: Blake’s Engravings for Hayley’s The Triumphs of Temper.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 105-30. <WBHC 2436-40>

Traces the publication and reception history of William Hayley’s Triumphs of Temper, importantly noting that rather than reflecting anything about Blake and Hayley’s deteriorating relationship, the second thirteenth edition returned to the old plates, which “were reworked, often extensively, in each new edition” (123), likely because Blake’s were simply too worn to be reused.

Crosby, Mark. “A Minute Skirmish: Blake, Hayley, and the Art of Miniature Painting.” Blake and Conflict. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 164-84. <WBHC 2113-15>

Definitively considers Blake’s brief career as miniaturist in terms of his technique, including the use of stipple; his relationship with William Hayley; and other miniaturists Blake or Hayley knew.

Crosby, Mark. “‘No Boys Work’: Blake, Hayley and the Triumphs of (Intellectual) Paiderastia.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 199-208. <WBHC 1801-03>

Suggests that Blake’s struggle with Hayley “was because Hayley’s instructional methods appear to have been based on the classical Greek practice of Paiderastia” (200), with many references to Edward Garrett Marsh.

Cox, Philip. “Blake, Hayley and Milton: A Reassessment.” English Studies 75 (1994): 430-42. <WBHC 1892>

Critiques Joseph Wittreich’s account of Blake’s and Hayley’s relationship in “Domes of Mental Pleasure.”

Essick, Robert N. “Blake, Hayley, and Edward Garrard Marsh: ‘An Insect of Parnassus.’” Explorations: The Age of the Enlightenment. Ed. J.E. Riehl. Lafayette: Levy Humanities Series, 1987. 58-84. <BBS 464>

“The references to Blake in the newly discovered Marsh letters suggest that “Blake’s descent from hope to disillusionment bordering on despair [in his relationship with Hayley] unfolded within and was in part shaped by class structures” (80)” (BBS 464).

Fairchild, Hoxie Neale. “Unpublished References to Blake by Hayley and Lady Hesketh.” Studies in Philology 25.1 (1928): 1-10. <BB #1590>

Records references to Blake in the correspondence of Hayley and Lady Hesketh (Cowper’s cousin). Fairchild’s characterization of Hesketh is answered by Bentley’s “Blake, Hayley, and Lady Hesketh.”

Fosso, Kurt. “Blake’s ‘Horses of Instruction.’” Beastly Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2018. 37-63. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Treats Blake’s relationship to real horses, particularly William Hayley’s pony Bruno.

Haggarty, Sarah. Blake’s Gifts: Poetry and the Politics of Exchange. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010. <WBHC 2112-13>

An important and original study on how Blake's poetry and art functioned within his social and local commercial networks and how he conceived of and depicted value and exchange. Useful for understanding Blake and Hayley's relationship.

Harper, George Mills. "Blake's Lost Letter to Hayley, 4 December 1804." Studies in Philology 61.3 (1964): 573-85. <BB #1789>

Publishes the letter in full for the first time and elucidates its references to William Hayley and Richard Phillips as well as what its contents suggest about Blake's correspondence with Hayley in general.

Martin, Simon, Martin Butlin, and Robert Meyrick. Poets in the Landscape: The Romantic Spirit in British Art. Chichester: Pallant House Gallery, 2007. <WBHC 1358-59>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in the Pallant House Gallery, Chichester, from 31 Mar. to 10 Jun. 2007. Includes:

Martin, Simon. "Everything except the Poetry: William Hayley and Romantic Patronage 1775-1805." 17-25, 115-16.

Butlin, Martin. "The Pastoral Vision: Blake, Palmer and the Ancients 1805-1850." 41-45, 116-17.

Matthews, Susan. "Blake, Hayley and the History of Sexuality." Blake, Nation and Empire. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 83-101. <WBHC 1866-69>

"This essay looks at one set of contexts for Blake's writing about sexuality, attempting to set the passage from the Preludium to America within existing discourses of femininity, nationhood and sexuality in order to ask whether Blake changes the familiar tropes he seems to use" (84).

Matthews, Susan. Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Politeness. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2011. <WBHC 2381>

An important book that positions Blake's use of "sex" against the changing meaning of the term and provides rich readings of Blake and gender primarily in relationship to William Hayley and other significant members of Hayley's circle, and includes discussions of Fuseli and Wollstonecraft.

Matthews, Susan. "'Hayley on his Toilette': Blake, Hayley and Homophobia." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 209-20. <WBHC 1801-03>

"[T]race[s] Blake's use of the satirical figure of the effeminate man in post-1800 references to William Hayley" (209), with discussion of Cowper and Fuseli. (See her Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Sexuality (2011) for an extension of these arguments.)

Matthews, Susan. "'Mock on': Blake, Hayley and the Spirit of Voltaire." William Hayley \(1745-1820\) Poet, Biographer, and Libertarian: A Reassessment. Chichester: University of Chichester, 2013. 168-81. <WBHC 3004-05>

Paley, Morton D. "And the Sun Dial by Blake (Butlin #374A)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.3 (winter 2009-10): 105-06. <WBHC 1723>

On the artist "Pamela," who knew Hayley and Romney and whose "pastoral drawing" was listed in lot #106 with "the sun dial by Blake" in the 1821 auction of Hayley's art collection.

P[ovey], K[enneth]. "Blake and 'the Bard of Oxford.'" Sussex County Magazine 1 (1927): 391. <BB #2436>

The first identification of Marsh as the Bard of Oxford, using Blake's correspondence with Hayley.

Sato, Hikari. "Blake, Hayley, and India: On Designs to a Series of Ballads (1802)." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 134-44. <WBHC 1857-62>

"Focusing on Designs to a Series of Ballads written by Hayley and published by Blake in 1802, I will work from the initial premise that Hayley used Indian motifs in the Designs to commemorate his son who had died in 1800 and that Blake became familiar with India through the collaboration with his erudite patron" (135). Discusses the books about India in Hayley's library.

Stevenson, Warren. "Blake and Hayley." Poetic Friends: A Study of Literary Relations During the English Romantic Period. New York, 1990. 5-70, 177-83. <BBS 647>

A useful overview.

Wardle, Judith. "satan not having the Science of Wrath, but only of Pity." Studies in Romanticism 13.2 (spring 1974): 147-54. <BBS 649>

On Hayley and his differences from Blake's aesthetic views and practices.

Wittreich, Joseph. "Domes of Mental Pleasure: Blake's Epic and Hayley's Epic Theory." Studies in Philology 69 (1972): 101-29. <BB #B2995>

Argues that Hayley's theory of the epic laid out "a course that Blake meticulously follows" (103).

Hayley without Blake

Allen, Reggie. "The Sonnets of William Hayley and Gift Exchange." European Romantic Review 13.4 (2002): 383-92. <WBHC 3004>

"Hayley's sonnets exemplify a theory of art as gift and commodity exchange" (384).

Bates, Madison C. "Cowper to Hayley and Rose, June 1792: Two Unpublished Letters." Harvard Library Bulletin 11.1 (winter 1957): 80-101.

In addition to the letters (not in Hayley's Memoirs of Cowper) to Hayley and to Samuel Rose (Blake's lawyer), details Cowper's relationships to both men.

Blass, Rebecca. "The Hermit of Earham: William Hayley and his Friendship with George Romney." Transactions of the Romney Society 5 (2000).

Clucas, Tom. “[Editing Milton during the French Revolution: Cowper and Hayley as ‘Brother Editor\[s\].’](#)” Review of English Studies 65.272 (2015): 866-87. <WBHC 3005>¹²⁵

On Cowper’s Milton translations and Hayley’s Life of Milton.

Crosby, Mark. “William Hayley’s Benevolent Gift: The Triumphs of Temper.” Bodleian Library Record: (2009): 101-08. <WBHC 3019>

“A copy in Bodley is poetically dedicated by Hayley to Mariana Stark” (WBHC 3019).

Dörrbecker, D.W. “[The Reader Viewing the Reader Reading: Romney\[’\]s Serena liest in Hayley\[’\]s The Triumphs of Temper.](#)” Entree aus Schrift und Bild: Titelblatt und Frontispiz im England der Neuzeit. Ed. Werner Busch, Hubertus Fischer, Joachim Möller. Munster, Hamburg, Berlin, Wien, London: Lit Verlag, 2008. 162-250. In German. <WBHC 3004>

Foster, Paul, ed., with Diana Barsham. William Hayley (1745–1820) Poet, Biographer, and Libertarian: A Reassessment. Chichester: University of Chichester, 2013. <WBHC 3004-5>

A collection of essays that offer an important reprisal. Includes an appendix with a chronology and select biography.

One: The Man and the Work

Painting, Vivienne. “Hayley-the Man.” 13-22.

Barsham, Diana. “The Five Lives of William Hayley: Poetry, Biography, & Self-Identification.” 23-55.

Two: The Years of Success

Carr, Tracey. “Hayley at Earham.” 57-77. Includes biographical descriptions of Hayley’s circles.

Crosby, Mark. “Hayley’s Poetry: The Triumphs of Temper.” 78-99.

Three: The Hermit

Carter, Janet and John Wyatt. “Twenty Years at Felpham.” 101-25.

Foster, Paul. “William Mason: Hayley’s Chichester Printer.” 127-34.

Four: Cultural Resonances

Gee, Lisa. “Hayley and Culture of Sensibility.” 126-51.

May, Suzanne E. “The Jupiter of Sussex: William Hayley and His Portraits.” 153-67.

Matthews, Susan. “‘Mock on’: Blake, Hayley and the Spirit of Voltaire.” 168-81.

Crane, Anthony. “William Hayley’s Epitaphs: A Dialogue between the Living and the Dead.” 182-90.

Gee, Lisa. “Hayleyworld: A Zoography of William Hayley (1745–1820).” PhD diss., Bath Spa University, 2018.

¹²⁵ WBHC mistakenly refers to the author as “Lucas” and gives the page numbers as 866-67.

Gee, Lisa, organizer. Hayley2020 Conference. Fitzwilliam Museum, University of Cambridge, 12-13 Nov. 2020.

Select presentations have been posted to Youtube:

Kidson, Alex. “Romney’s and Haley’s Friendship.”

Kidson, Alex. “Romney’s Cupide & Psyche Cartoons.”

Kidson, Alex. “Romney’s Pictures: The Triumphs of Temper & Old Maids.”

Kidson, Alex. “Romney’s Tempest.”

Kidson, Alex. “Flaxman Modelling the Bust of Hayley & The Four Friends.”

Kidson, Alex. “Alex Kidson on Romney’s Portrait of Charlotte Bettesworth.”

Harris, Alexandra. “Dear Retreats’: Hayley’s Places.”

Gee, Lisa. “Hope, Disability, Love, and Grief.”

Bindman, David. “Introducing John Flaxman.”

Bindman, David. “Flaxman, Hayley, Mansfield & Collins.”

Bindman, David. “[The Lushington/Blakeshaw & Steevens Monuments \[by Flaxman\]](#).”

Bindman, David. “A Word about William Blake.”

Gee, Lisa. “William the Conqueror: The Friendship between William Hayley and William Cowper.” The Cowper & Newton Journal 3 (2013): n.p.

A useful overview of the men’s friendship.

Hogg, James. “William Hayley’s Marcella and Thomas Middleton and William Rowley’s The Changeling: A Watered-Down Jacobean Masterpiece.” Jacobean Drama as Social Criticism. Ed. James Hogg .Lewiston, NY, and Salzburg: Edwin Mellen Press, 1995. 319-61.

Partly on Hayley’s play.

King, James. “Cowper, Hayley, and Samuel Johnson’s ‘Republican’ Milton.” Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 17 (1987): 229-38.

On Cowper’s and Hayley’s reaction to Johnson’s “Life of Milton,” and Cowper’s letters and unsent poem to Richard Phillips, who had been imprisoned for publishing Paine’s Rights of Man.

Leporati, Matthew. “Ann Yearsley’s ‘Brutus’ and the Evangelical Epic Poem.” Studies in Romanticism 57.2 (summer 2018): 265-300.¹²⁶ <Blake (2019)>

Includes a discussion of Hayley’s An Essay on Epic Poetry (1782).

¹²⁶ Incorporated in Leporati’s Romantic Epics and the Mission of Empire (2023), <Blake (2024)>.

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. “Mary Tighe’s Psyche, William Hayley’s Psyche, and George Romney’s Cupid and Psyche.” Romanticism 24.1 (Apr. 2018): 1-21. <Blake (2019)>

“This essay argues that Hayley tried to use [Mary] Tighe’s Psyche to complete the unfinished project he wanted to pursue with Romney in the first days of their friendship, which would help him overcome the emotional paralysis he experienced in 1805–1806 as he struggled to move forward on his Life of Romney” (abstract).

Mertner, Edgar. “The ‘Horrid Penance’: William Hayley and Swift.” Swift Studies 7 (1992): 101-05. <WBHC 3006>

“In the Temple of Spleen section of his Triumphs of Temper, Hayley devotes fifty lines to the ‘severe punishment’ of Swift” (WBHC 3006).

Picón, Daniela. “Recepción de La Araucana en el romanticismo inglés: William Hayley y Robert Southey.” Bulletin of Hispanic Studies 98.3 (2021): 249-67. In Spanish. <Blake (2022)>

On the reception by Hayley and Southey of Alonso de Ercilla y Zúñiga’s sixteenth-century epic poem, La Araucana, with special reference to Romantic and anticolonial readings.

Scobie, Ruth. “Breakfast with ‘Her inky Demons’: Celebrity, Slavery, and the Heroine in Late Eighteenth-Century British Fiction.” Eighteenth-Century Fiction 34.4 (summer 2022): 415-40. <Blake (2023)>

Argues that Hayley’s The Triumphs of Temper offers “a formulaic scene,” “in which a young white woman experiences sudden unwanted celebrity by reading about herself in a morning newspaper” before being “inevitably rescued from ... a newspaper sphere in which older discourses of blackness, and metropolitan unease at the commodification of humans, were tightly but implicitly associated” (abstract).

Hope, Thomas (1769-1831), Designer

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, John Orbell)

“Thomas Hope, Esq. F.R.S. & S.A.” The Gentleman’s Magazine 101, pt. 1. (April 1831): 368–70.

Writing¹²⁷

Anastasius: or, Memoirs of a Greek; Written at the Close of the Eighteenth Century. 3 vols. 1819. Vol. 1. Vol. 2. Vol. 3.

Costume of the Ancients. 2 vols. London, 1809. Vol. 1. Vol. 2. 2nd ed. 1809. New edition, enlarged. 2 vols. London, 1812, Vol. 1. Vol. 2.

Household Furniture and Interior Decoration: Classic Style Book of the Regency Period. 1962 Dover reprint.

An Essay on the Origin and Prospects of Man. London, 1831. Vol. 1. Vol. 2. Vol. 3.

Historical Essay on Architecture. 3 vols. London, 1835–1836.

¹²⁷ A bound collection of letters from Hope to John Flaxman, dated c. 1792-1808, was sold at Bonhams in 2008. See Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 2008,” 133.

Household Furniture and Interior Decoration, Executed from Designs by Thomas Hope.
London, 1807.

“On Instruction in Design.” The Artist: A Collection of Essays Relative to Painting, Poetry, Sculpture, Architecture, The Drama, Discoveries of Science and Various Other Subjects. Ed. Prince Hoare (2 May 1807): 1-7. Reprinted in 2 vols. London: John Murray, 1810.

Observations on the Plans and Elevations designed by James Wyatt, Architect, for Downing College, Cambridge; in a letter to Francis Annesley, Esq. M.P. London, 1804.

“The Utility of Remains of Antiquity.” The Director 2 (1807): 198–205.

Catalogues

Sale

Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of the valuable library of books on architecture, costume, sculpture, antiquities, etc., formed by Thomas Hope, Esq. ... which will be sold by auction . . . on Wednesday, July 25, 1917 and two following days. London, 1917.

Exhibition

Watkin, David. Thomas Hope: Regency Designer. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2008.

The catalogue for the exhibition of the same name held at the Bard Graduate Center for Studies in the Decorative Arts, Design, and Culture from 17 Jul. to 16 Nov. 2008.

Includes the following essays:

Watkin, David. “Introduction.” xiii-ixx.

Ben-Arie, Daniella. “Hope Family Tree and Chronology.” xx-xiv.

Mansel, Philip. “European Wealth and Ottoman Travel.” 3-22.

Watkin, David. “Reform of Taste in London: Hope’s House in Duchess Street.” 23-44.

Watkin, David. “Critic and Historian: Hope’s Writings on Architecture, Furniture, and Interior Decoration.” 45-56.

Collard, Frances. “Thomas Hope’s Furniture: ‘A Delightful and Varied Significance of Shape and Embellishment.’” 57-76.

Ribeiro, Aileen. “Fashion a l’Antique: Thomas Hope and Regency Dress.” 77-90.

Chapman, Martin. “Thomas Hope’s Metalwork for Duchess Street: ‘Character, Pleasing Outline, and Appropriate Meaning.’” 91-106.

Jenkins, Ian. “Past as a Foreign Country: Thomas Hope’s Collection of Antiquities.” 107-30.

Bindman, David. “Thomas Hope’s Modern Sculptures: ‘a zealous and liberal patronage of its contemporary professors.’” 131-50.

Chapel, Jeannie. “Thomas Hope’s Contemporary Picture Collection.” 151-66.

- Chapel, Jeannie. "Old Master Collection of John, Thomas, and Henry Philip Hope." 167-92.
- Ben-Arie, Daniella. "Hope Family in London: Collecting and Patronage." 193-218.
- Watkin, David. "Reform of Taste in the Country: The Deepdene." 219-36.
- Nolan, Jerry. "Tragic Mask of Anastasius/Selim: A New Introduction to Hope's Novel." 237-42.
- Scruton, Roger. "Hope's Philosophical Excursus." 243-248.
- Collard, Frances, and David Watkins. "Afterlife of Hope: Designers, Collectors, Historians." 249-63.

Studies

Blake and Hope

Read, Dennis. "The Context of Blake's 'Public Address': Cromeck and The Chalcographic Society." Philological Quarterly 60.1 (1981): 69-86.¹²⁸ <BBS 618>

Hope without Blake

Anstey, Tim Ainsworth. "Economies of the Interior: Thomas Hope and Interior Decoration." Grey Room 78 (2020): 124-45.

Analyzes Hope's Household Furniture and Interior Decoration.

Baumgarten, Sandor. Le Crépuscule Neo-Classique: Thomas Hope. Paris: Didier, 1958.

Cohen, A.H. "Domestic Utility and Useful Lines: Jean-Charles Krafft's and Thomas Hope's Outlines." Journal of Art Historiography 9 (2013): 1-20.

Fisher, Clive. The Thomas Hope Table: A Rediscovered Masterpiece. New York: Carlton Hobbs, 2007.

Keuren, Frances Van, and Kristen Miller Zohn. "'some Useful Hints for Improving the Elegance and Dignity of her Attire': Thomas Hope and Henry Moses, Greek Vases and Neoclassical Fashion." International Journal of the Classical Tradition 29.4 (2022): 390-429. <Blake (2025)>

"Author, artist, designer and collector Thomas Hope (1769–1831) published his influential Costume of the Ancients in 1809 and in an enlarged version in 1812. This article identifies archaeological sources for figures in the plates of Costume of the Ancients and seeks to explain why Hope altered his sources by adding patterns from Greek vases" (abstract).

Tillyard, E M.W. The Hope Vases: A Catalogue and a Discussion of The Hope Collection of Greek Vases with an Introduction on the History of the Collection and on Late Attic and South Italian Vases. Cambridge, 1923

¹²⁸ Incorporated in Read's R.H. Cromeck, Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur. Farnham: Ashgate Publishing, 2011, <WBHC 2573-75>

Van Keuren, F. “Unpublished Drawings by Thomas Hope and Henry Moses in the Gennadius Library, Athens.” Nineteenth-Century Art Worldwide 7.2 (2008): 139–57.

Tsigakou, F.M. Thomas Hope (1769–1831): Pictures from 18th Century Greece. Athens: Benaki Museum, 1985.

Watkin, David. Thomas Hope and the Neoclassical Idea. London: John Murray, 1968.

Watkin, David, Jill Lever. “A Sketch-book by Thomas Hope.” Architectural History 23 (1980): 52–59, 181–87.

A description of each page and reproductions. Twelve illustrations were used in Hope’s Historical Essay on Architecture.

Humphry, Ozias (1742–1810), Artist, patron

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB\), V. Remington

Williamson, George Charles. Life and Works of Ozias Humphry, R.A.. London and New York: John Lane, 1918.

Catalogue

“A ‘catalogue of the art collection of Ozias Humphry (d.1810), the portrait painter, compiled by his natural son William Upcott (d. 1845), the antiquary, to whom Humphry bequeathed it,’ was presented to the Manuscript Department of the British Museum [now British Library] in 1958 (Add MS: 49682)” (WBHC 2791).

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Ozias Humphry, William Upcott, and William Blake.” Humanities Association Review 26 (1975): 116–22. <BB #A1170>

On Humphry’s and Upcott’s relationship to Blake, the works they owned, and Upcott’s influence on accounts of Blake.

Bindman, David. “Thomas Bank’s ‘Caractacus before Claudius’: New Letters to and from Ozias Humphrey.” Burlington Magazine 142.1173 (2000): 769–71. <WBHC 3009>

Newly discovered letters and a draft between Thomas and Elizabeth Banks and Humphry regarding George Grenville of Stowe’s refusal to pay for Bank’s bas-relief. Other letters from the correspondence can be found in Bell’s Annals of Thomas Bank.

Paley, Morton D. “George Romney and Ozias Humphry as Collectors of William Blake’s Illuminated Printing.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.3 (winter 2016–17): 49 pars. <Blake (2017)>

“Taken together, the two artists’ purchases compose a substantial portion of Blake’s known sales of illuminated books and associated material in the period from his initial prospectus ‘To the Public’ (E 692–93), dated 10 October 1793, to 1796” (par. 1).

Roe, Albert S. “A Drawing of the Last Judgment.” Huntington Library Quarterly 21.1 (Nov. 1957): 37–55. <BB #2544>

An analysis of the Rosenwald Last Judgment, now held at the National Gallery of Art (Washington D.C.), largely in light of Blake’s letter to Ozias Humphry ([“The Design of the Last Judgment”]).

Johnson, Joseph (1738-1809), Bookseller, Blake's sometime employer (See also Erasmus Darwin, Henry Fuseli, John Gabriel Stedman, Mary Wollstonecraft, William Godwin,¹²⁹ Political and Historical Criticism, For Children: Gates of Paradise, Commercial Book Illustrations, and The French Revolution)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Carol Hall)

Brathwaite, Helen. Romanticism, Publishing and Dissent: Joseph Johnson and the Cause of Liberty. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2003.

An important study, updating Tyson, and highlighting Johnson's connections to Dissenters. Blake referred to slightly.

Hay, Daisy. Dinner with Joseph Johnson: Books and Friendship in a Revolutionary Age. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

An engaging and detailed book on Joseph Johnson and his circle. Blake is a minor but recurrent player. There are well-told accounts regarding the many members of Blake's circle with ties to Johnson. These include Erasmus Darwin, John Gabriel Stedman, and William Cowper (and William Hayley's relationship to him), with Henry Fuseli and Mary Wollstonecraft given extensive attention.

Tyson, Gerald P. Joseph Johnson: A Liberal Publisher. Iowa City: University of Iowa Press, 1979.

An important survey of Johnson's career, with references to Blake.

Writing

Bugg, John, ed. The Joseph Johnson Letterbook. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2018, 2019)>

An edition of Johnson's letterbook, with references to Blake, Fuseli, Wollstonecraft, and many other members of Johnson's circle.

Studies

Blake and Johnson

Barfoot, C.C. "In the Churchyard and Under the Full Moon: The Radical Publisher and his Clients and Guests." The Literary Utopias of Cultural Communities 1790-1910. Ed. Margurite Corporal and Evert Jan Van Leeuwen. Amsterdam and New York: Rodopi, 2010. 9-22. <WBHC 3010>

A good overview of Johnson's life and career, with his relationship to several writers (including Blake) sketched.

Byrne, Joseph. "Blake, Joseph Johnson, and The Gates of Paradise." Wordsworth Circle 44.2-3 (spring-summer 2013): 131-36. <WBHC 1820>

On Blake's relationship to the Johnson Circle; "Johnson did not publish The Gates of Paradise" (WBHC 1820).

¹²⁹ The Diary of William Godwin (2010), ed. Victoria Myers, David O'Shaughnessy, and Mark Philp, has many references to Johnson and to his dinners.

Davies, Keri. "Mrs Bliss: A Blake Collector of 1794." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd, 1999. 212-30. <WBHC 1863>

Key article on one of Blake's earliest collectors that demonstrates Blake's works were sold at Joseph Johnson's bookshop. The article also details her library, references to her and her Blake collection in the correspondence of Francis Douce and Richard Twiss, her long relationship with Ann Whitaker, and the Dissenting Carey Street Chapel to which she belonged. Developed in "Rebekah Bliss: Collector of William Blake and Oriental Books."

Tomalin, Clair. "Publisher in Prison: Joseph Johnson and the Book Trade." TLS (2 Dec. 1994): 15-16.

An overview.

Johnson without Blake

Barfoot, C.C. "In the Churchyard and Under the Full Moon: The Radical Publisher and His Clients and Guests." The Literary Utopias of Communities, 1790-1910. Ed. Marguerite Coporaal and Evert Jan van Leeuwen. Brill, 2010. 9-22.

On Johnson's relationship to his writers.

Bugg, John. "How Radical Was Joseph Johnson and Why Does Radicalism Matter?" Studies in Romanticism 57.2 (summer 2018): 173-95. <Blake (2019)>

Asks what is meant when Johnson is called a radical.

Byrne, Joseph. "Wordsworth, Joseph Johnson, and Salisbury Plain Poems." Wordsworth Circle 40.2-3 (2009): 103-07.

"[L]ike many other former Johnson authors, Wordsworth decided that Johnson was now [after his trial] political poison" (106).

Chard, Leslie J., II. "Bookseller to Publisher: Joseph Johnson and the English Book Trade, 1760 to 1810." Library Ser. 5 32.2 (1977): 138-54.

Highlights Johnson's role in the transformation of the book trade.

Chard, Leslie J., II. "Joseph Johnson in the 1790s." Wordsworth Circle 33.3 (2002): 95-100.

A "profile" of Johnson's publication in the 1790s (95).

Chard, Leslie J., II. "Joseph Johnson: Father of the Book Trade." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 79.1 (1975): 51-82.

An overview.

Hay, Daisy. Dinner with Joseph Johnson: Books and Friendship in a Revolutionary Age. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023-2025)>

An engaging and detailed book on Joseph Johnson and his circle. Blake is a minor but recurrent player. There are well-told accounts regarding the many members of Blake's circle with ties to Johnson. These include Erasmus Darwin, John Gabriel Stedman, and William Cowper (and William Hayley's relationship to him), with Henry Fuseli and Mary Wollstonecraft given extensive attention.

Hay, Daisy. “Wanderers Without a Home: Houses and Houselessness in the Johnson Circle.” European Romantic Review 29.5 (2018): 557-78. <Blake (2019)>

The essay “proposes that in the 1790s the presence at Johnson’s house of Lindsey, Priestley and other ‘wanderers without ... home[s]’ endowed the building in which the publisher lived and worked with particular significance for the writers who gravitated towards him; and it suggests that a focus on houses alters the stories scholars have told about the Johnson circle, Dissenting identity and a Burkean aesthetic of ruins and terror (abstract).

Oliver, Susan. “Silencing Joseph Johnson and the Analytical Review.” Wordsworth Circle 40.2-3 (2009): 96-102.

On Johnson’s Analytical Review and attacks on it, culminating in Johnson’s trial and the end of the journal.

Smyser, J.W. “The Trial and Imprisonment of Joseph Johnson, Bookseller.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 77.4 (summer 1974): 418-35.

A useful factual account.

Kauffman, Angelica [Angelika Kauffmann] (1741–1807), Painter
Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Wendy Wassyng Roworth)
Brylowe, Thora. “Angelica Kauffman and the Sister Arts.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 391-407. <Blake (2024)>

An overview of Kauffman’s life, stressing the misogyny she faced and how her self-portraits invoked the themes of the Sister Arts. Considers Kauffman’s relationship to the Royal Academy, the engraving of her designs by William Wynne Ryland and Thomas Burke, and her relationship to the Boydell and Macklin galleries.

Catalogues

Exhibition

Baumgärtel, Bettina, ed. Angelica Kauffman. Munich: Hirmer, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Kunstalast in Düsseldorf from 30 Jan. to 20 Sept. 2020. It was originally scheduled to be exhibited at the Royal Academy from 28 June to 20 Sept., but was canceled because of COVID. It contains:

Baumgärtel, Bettina. “The whole World is angelicamad.” 10-17.

Valentine, Helen. “‘The elements of art’: Four Ceiling Roundels for the Royal Academy of Arts at Somerset House.” 18-23.

Myssook, Johannes. “Angelica Kauffman and Antonio Canova: A Friendship between Two Artists in Rome.” 24-29.

Holubec, Inken Maria. “Angelica Kauffman and the Neoclassical Picture: Material, Technology and Painting Process.” 30-35.

Baumgärtel, Bettina. Catalogue. 36-199.

Häusle, Magdalena, and Tobias G. Natter. Angelica Kauffman: A Woman of Immense Talent. Ostfildern: Hatje Cantz and New York: Distributed Art Publishers, 2007.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Vorarlberger Landesmuseum, Bregenz and Angelika Kauffmann Museum, Schwarzenberg, from 14 Jun. to 5 Nov. 2007.

Rosenthal, Angela. Angelica Kauffman in British Collections. London: Rafael Valls Ltd., 2007.

The catalogue for held at Rafael Valls Limited, London, from 19 Nov. 14 to Dec. 2007.

Roworth, Wendy Wassyng, ed. Angelica Kauffman: A Continental Artist in Georgian England. London: Reaktion Books, 1992.

A catalogue for the exhibition held at York City Art Gallery, Exhibition Square, from 23 Jan. to 7 Mar. 1993. Includes David Alexander's "Kauffman and the Print Market in Eighteenth century England," which highlights especially the work of William Ryland and Francesco Bartolozzi and offers a checklist of "Singly Issued English Prints after Angelica Kauffman."

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Rev. of Wendy Wassyng Roworth, ed., Angelical Kauffman: A Continental Artist in Georgian England \(1992\). Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.4 (spring 1994): 130-31. <WBHC 1651>

Stresses how much the book reveals about Blake's context without addressing him directly.

Calè, Luisa. "Modern Sibyls and Sibylline Media." Studies in Romanticism 59.1 (2020): 59-83. <Blake (2021)>

Examines "portraits of women as modern Sibyls, focusing on the works of Benjamin West, Angelica Kauffmann, Emma Hamilton, Friedrich Rehberg, and Elisabeth Vigée Le Brun" (60).

Cypress, Rebecca. "Musical Improvisation and Poetic Painting in the Salon of Angelica Kauffman." Women and Musical Salons in the Enlightenment. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2022. 233-78. <Blake (2025)>

"Musical performance, and especially the fleeting art of sung poetic improvisation, destabilized the permanence of painting, rendering the total artistic experience of Kauffman's salon more temporal—more delicate and fleeting—than the visual dimension along would suggest" (238).

Elam, Keir. "Women Painting Shakespeare: Angelica Kauffman's Text-images." Women Making Shakespeare: Text, Reception, and Performance. Ed. Gordon McMullen, Lena Cowen Orlin, and Virginia Mason Vaughan. London: Bloomsbury, 2014.

Goodden, Angelica. Miss Angel: The Art and World of Angelica Kauffman. London: Random House, 2005.

Harmeyer, Rachel. "The Education of Daughters: Embroidered Pictures after Angelica Kauffman." The Enlightened Mind: Education in the Long Eighteenth Century. Ed. Amanda Strasik. Wilmington, DE, and Malaga, SP: Vernon Press, 2022. 43-66. <Blake (2025)>

"This chapter will provide a close study of amateur embroidered pictures made after Kauffman's The Parting of Hector and Andromache, 1768 (Saltram House, National Trust) and will argue that makers of embroidered pictures emulating history paintings responded to debates on women's education sought to elevate the genre of needlework" (44).

Natter, Tobias. Angelica Kauffman: A Woman of Immense Talent. Hatje Cantz, 2007.

Rosenthal, Angela. Angelica Kauffman: Art and Sensibility. London and New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006.

Rosenthal, Angela. "Angelica Kauffman: Ma\(s\)king Claims." Art History 15.1 (1992): 38-59.

"This article sets out to disclose in the work of Angelica Kauffman commentaries upon the dominant ideologies of sexual difference active in the eighteenth century" (38).

Roworth, Wendy Wassyng. "Angelica Kauffman's Place in Rome." Italy's Eighteenth Century: Gender and Culture in the Age of the Grand Tour. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 2009. 151-71.

"The purpose of the present chapter is to reconsider Kauffman's place in Rome by focusing on her literal location—the house in which she lived and worked—as well as her symbolic place, especially in regard to her gender, within the history of art in that city" (153).

Roworth, Wendy Wassyng. "An Artist's Bedroom: Angelica Kauffman in London and Rome." Sex, Politics, and Material Culture in the Eighteenth-Century Bedroom and Boudoir. Ed. Tara Zanardi and Christopher M. S. Johns. London and New York: Bloomsbury, 2023. 123-42. <Blake (2025)>

About Kauffman's bedrooms as places of display for clients.

Schmid, F. Carlo. "'Talent and Untiring Diligence': The Print Legacy of Angelika Kauffmann, Marie Ellenrieder, and Maria Katharina Prestel." Female Printmakers, Printsellers, and Print Publishers in the Eighteenth Century: The Imprint of Women c. 1700-1830. Ed. Cristina S. Martinez and Cynthia E. Roman. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2024. 56-74. <Blake (2025)>

Vickery, Amanda. "Branding Angelica: Reputation Management in Late Eighteenth-Century England." Journal for Eighteenth-Century Studies 43.1 (2020): 3-24. <Blake (2022)>

"This case study of the London career of the Swiss-born artist Angelica Kauffman (1741-1807) examines the development of the 'Angelica' brand: from stage-managed debut, studio establishment and performance, and self-promotion through self-portraiture to market positioning, diffusion lines and pricing strategy" (abstract).

Linnell, John (1792-1882) (See also Catherine Blake in Biography; The Ancients in Members of Blake's Circle, Illustrations of the Book of Job and Illustrations of Dante in Separate Plates, and Genesis in Manuscripts)

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB, Christiana Payne\)

Linnell, David. Blake, Palmer, Linnell and Co.: The Life of John Linnell. Sussex, England: The BookGuild Ltd, 1994. <WBHC 2334-35>

Important recent biography of John Linnell, with original information based on Linnell-family sources, including references to William and Catherine Blake.

Linnell, John. "Autobiography of John Linnell." MS (1850s-1864). Held by the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge University. MS32-2000.

Story, Alfred T. The Life of John Linnell. 2 vols. (Vol. 1, Vol. 2) London: Richard Bentley and Son, 1892. <BB #2769>

BB identifies "first-hand accounts of Blake in Vol. I" (BB #2769). There is also much on the other Ancients, C.H. Tatham, and Catherine Blake.

Writing

The Archive of John Linnell was purchased by the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge UK, in 2000. This includes the manuscript of Linnell's "Autobiography of John Linnell" (1850s-1864).

Sale Catalogues from Linnell's Blake Collection

Hodgson. Catalogue "including a Selection from the Property of The late John Linnell, Esq., Jun. (removed from Redhill)" London, 1906.

Hodgson & Co. A Miscellaneous Collection Auction Sale Prices Supplement to "The Connoisseur." London, 1908.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of the John Linnell Collection of Highly Important Works by William Blake Obtained direct from the Artist . . . which (by Order of the Trustees) Will be Sold. London, 1918. <BB #608>

Sotheby. Catalogue of the property of John Linnell and many others. London, 1918.

E. Parsons & Sons. Old Books: Catalogue No. 282. London, 1918.

Christie. Catalogue of Water Colour Drawings Printed Drawings and Wood Blocks by William Blake, Sold by Order of the Surviving Trustee of the late John Linnell, Esq, Senior, The Executor of the late Miss S.E. Pease and Miss Enid Morse . . . and Others. London, 1938.

Catalogues on Linnell and His Circle

Feeling through the Eye: The "New" Landscape in Britain, 1800-1830. London: Spink-Leger, 2000.

There are chapters on Varley and Linnell.

John Linnell (1792-1882) and his Contemporaries, 1800-1820. London: Guy Peppiatt Fine Art Ltd., 2017.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Guy Peppiatt Fine Art, London, from 2 Oct. to 11 Oct. 2017.

Lifting Veil from Nature, John Linnell, 1792-1882: An Exhibition to Mark the Publication of the Book BLAKE, PALMER, LINNELL & CO by David Linnell. London: Martyn Gregory, 1994.
<WBHC 3018>

An exhibition without a catalogue.

Power & Poetry: The Art of John Linnell. London, 2008. <WBHC 3019>

A catalogue of Lowell Libson Ltd and The Fine Art Society.

Studies

Blake and Linnell

Abley, Mark, and G.E. Bentley, Jr. “New Blake Documents: Job, Oedipus, and the Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.3 (winter 1987-88): 104-07.
<BBS 402>

New references to Blake in the Ivimy manuscript of John Linnell (named Ivimy after the descendent, Joan Linnell Ivimy, who holds it), including reference to a young patron, Edward Denny and Linnell, Blake’s viewing of John Dryden and Nat Lee’s Oedipus at the Royal West London Theatre, the printing and reception of Job, and Eliza Aders purchase of Blake’s works among which was Songs copy AA.

Browne, Max. “The First Subject Painting to Emerge by the Infamous Thomas Griffiths Wainewright \(1794-1847\).” British Art Journal 15. 1 (2014): 113-16.

On the recently discovered painting, Two Lovers in a Moonlit Landscape, with references to Blake, Fuseli, Linnell, and Thomas Phillips.

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, Linnell and Varley and A Treatise on Zodiacial Physiognomy.” Burning Bright: Essays in Honour of David Bindman. Ed. Diana Dethloff et al. University College London Press, 2015. 126-35. <WBHC 1817-18>¹³⁰

A description of the drawings for Zodiacial Physiognomy and what they suggest about Blake, Linnell, and Varley.

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, the Varleys, and the Patent Graphic Telescope.” William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 294-304. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Argues that John Linnell and John Varley used the “Graphic Telescope” invented by Cornelius Varley to copy Blake’s Visionary Heads and The Man who taught Blake painting in his Dreams.

Butlin, Martin. “A New Portrait of William Blake.” Blake Studies 7.2 (1975): 101-03. <BBS 411>

First description of the portrait of Blake that emerged in 1974. Butlin attributes the painting to John Linnell and dates it to c. 1819-25. Essick challenges Butlin’s attribution and dating in “A \(Self?\) Portrait of William Blake.”

¹³⁰ The collection is not recorded as such in WBHC.

Cieszkowski, Krzysztof Z. “‘They Murmuring Divide; While the wind Sleeps Beneath, and the Numbers are Counted in Silence’: The Dispersal of the Illustrations to Dante’s Divine Comedy.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.3 (winter 1989-90): 166-71. <BBS 405>

A detailed account of the 1918 sale and dispersal of the Dante watercolors to various institutions from the Linnell collection.

Davies, Keri. “‘O Nancy’s hair is yellow as gowd’: Blake, Border ballads, and the Reinvention of Relief Etching.”¹³¹ Index Rerum. 26 Mar. 2024. <Blake (2025)>

An essay with two parts. The first focuses on Blake’s ideas of music and identifies the probable source of the “Border Melody” sang by Mrs. Linnell, which according to Alexander Gilchrist, affected Blake emotionally. The second considers Scottish members of Blake’s late circle, particularly William Home¹³² Lizars and Thomas Sivright, and makes the claim that both Lizars’ and Charles Pye’s relief inventions were modelled on the men’s knowledge of Blake’s method of illuminated printing.

Essick, Robert N. “Blake, Linnell, & James Upton: An Engraving Brought to Light.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.4 (spring 1974): 76-79. <BB #1217.135>

Notes the discovery and acquisition of two states of the print, details its place at the foundation of Blake and Linnell’s relationship, and examines Linnell’s influence on Blake’s engraving style.

Essick, Robert N. “John Linnell, William Blake, and the Printmaker’s Craft.” Huntington Library Quarterly 46.1 (1983): 18-32. <BBS 517, WBHC 2175>

On what Blake learned from Linnell about engraving.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s Copy of Chapman’s Homer.” English Language Notes 27.3 (1990): 27-33. <BBS 466>

“The copy of ‘Homers Iliad & Oddisy’ which Mrs Blake sold to John Linnell in 1829 may be the set of Chapman’s translation with Linnell’s inscription acquired by Professor Essick” (BBS 466).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s Jerusalem, Plate 51.” Art Bulletin of Victoria 31 (1990): 20-25. <BBS 466>

Suggests that Blake gave pl. 51 from copy E to John Linnell (now held by the National Gallery of Victoria) as a separate plate and colored another copy printed in black to replace it in copy E.

Keynes, Geoffrey. “The Blake-Linnell Documents.” Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 205-12. ¹³³ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

¹³¹ “A version of this paper was read at “Romanticism’s Debatable Lands”: the British Association for Romantic Studies Biennial Conference, 28-31 July 2005, Newcastle upon Tyne” (Davies’s Acknowledgment).

¹³² As Davies points out, “Home” was Lizars’ middle name and not “Hone” as Bentley has it in Blake Records (2004).

¹³³ Revised version of “New Blake Documents: History of the Job Engravings,” TLS (9 Jan. 1943), <BB #2032>.

On the receipts from Linnell; largely on the Illustrations of the Book of Job.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "John Linnell and Mrs. Blake." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 221-29. ¹³⁴ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

About Linnell's actions after Blake's death (including details of Blake's funeral), Linnell's and Frederick Tatham's relationship to Catherine Blake, disputes between Linnell and Tatham over Blake's property, and a note on posthumous Dante engravings.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "William Blake and John Linnell." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 213-20. ¹³⁵ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Records the references to Blake in Linnell's journal.

Linton, W.J. Threescore and Ten Years 1820 to 1890. London: Lawrence and Bullen, 1894. <BBS 552>

Offers an anecdote about visiting John Linnell with Alexander Gilchrist when working on the illustrations for the Life of Blake (pp. 181-82).

Olson, Roberta J., and Jay M. Pasachoff. "The Comets and Meteors of William Blake." Fire in the Sky: Comets and Meteors, the Decisive Centuries, in British Art and Science. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998. 80-95. <WBHC 2482>

"Deals especially with Linnell's meticulous drawings of the 1811 comet" (WBHC 2482).

Phillips, Michael. "The Printing of Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job." Print Quarterly 22.2 (Jun. 2005): 138-59. <WBHC 2523>

A detailed account of the printing in light of a newly discovered letter to John Linnell dated 25 Nov. 1825.

Phillips, Michael. "'Printing in the infernal method': William Blake's Method of 'Illuminated Printing.'" Interfaces: Image—Texte—Language 39 (2018): 30 pars. ¹³⁶ <Blake (2019)>

A well-illustrated discussion of Blake's printing method, with references to J.T. Smith, John Linnell, and Jackson and Chattoo's A Treatise on Wood Engraving (1839).

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel. Dante Gabriel Rossetti: His Family-Letters. With a Memoir by William Michael Rossetti. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London: Ellis and Elvey, 1895. Boston: Robert Brothers, 1895. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) New York: AMS Press, 1970. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB # 2569>

References to Blake (including the finding of the Pickering Manuscript [Vol. 1, 109-10]), Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, John Linnell, and Rossetti's siblings.

Rossetti, William Michael. Rossetti Papers 1862 to 1870. New York: Scribner and Sons, 1903. <BB #2577>

¹³⁴ Revised version of essay of same title, TLS (20 Jun. 1958), <BB #2032>.

¹³⁵ Revised version of "William Blake and John Linnell," TLS (13 Jun. 1958), <BB #2042>.

¹³⁶ Adapted from Phillips's catalogue, William Blake Apprentice & Master (2014), 89-105, <WBHC 1413-20>.

Includes references to Blake, Linnell, Tatham, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, Swinburne, and Rossetti's siblings.

Warner, Janet. “James Vine.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 106-07. <BB #1217.70>

On patron who owned Milton copy D, Thel copy O, and Job, and dined with Blake and Linnell.

Whitehead, Angus. “The Arlington Court Picture: A Surviving Example of William Blake's Framing Practice.” British Art Journal 8.1 (summer 2007): 30-33. <WBHC 2849>

“The Arlington Court Picture is [...] a Blake painting not merely in its original frame, but also in a frame the style of which Blake probably played some role in deciding upon, through his friend and patron John Linnell and the framer of the painting, James Linnell” (32).

Whitehead, Angus. “The Uncollected Letters of William Blake.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 423-35. <Blake (2018)>

Delineates the importance of Blake's 25 November 1825 letter to John Linnell in terms of both Blake's printing practices and his relationship to Linnell. Includes black and white reproductions of the letter and one from 10 November 1825. (Both are available at the Blake Archive now.)

Wolf, Edwin. “The Blake-Linnell Accounts in the Library of Yale University.” Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America 37.1 (1943): 1-22. <BB #3001>

“Important transcriptions and discussion” (BB #3001), including discussion of ownership.

Linnell without Blake

Firestone, Evan R. “Lady Torrens and Her Family by John Linnell.” Elvehjem Museum of Art Bulletin (1986-86): 11-21.

Payne, Christiana. “John Linnell and Samuel Palmer in the 1820s.” Burlington Magazine, 124 (1982): 131-36. <WBHC 3021>

“On what Samuel Palmer's art owes to John Linnell” (WBHC 3021).

Pezzini, Barbara. “The ‘Art’ and the ‘Market’ Elements of the Art Market: John Linnell, William Agnew and Artist-Dealer Relationships in Nineteenth-Century Britain.” Journal for Art Market Studies 2.4 (2018): 1-18. <Blake (2020)>

On Linnell's relationship to the dealer, William Agnew, to whom Linnell sold paintings from 1853 to 1869. (11), and its implications for the relationship between art and the marketplace.

Sperber, Roxane. “The Retouching Practices of John Linnell: Technique, Patronage and Practice from Two Works in the Yale Center for British Art.” A Changing Art: Nineteenth-Century Painting, Practice, and Conservation. Ed. Nicola Costaras et al. London: Archetype, 2017. 116-22. <Blake (2018)>

Macklin, Thomas (d. 1800). Publisher

Introductions and Bibliographies (ODNB, G.E. Bentley, Jr.)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Thomas Macklin (1752–1800), Picture-Publisher and Patron: Creator of the Macklin Bible (1791–1800). Lewiston, NY: Edwin Mellen Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2019)>

A biography and bibliography.

Studies

Blake and Macklin

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Great Illustrated-Book Publishers of the 1790s and William Blake.” Editing Illustrated Texts. Ed. William Blissett. New York and London: Garland Publishing Co., 1980. <BBS 367>

Argues that Blake was spurred by the publishing projects of Boydell, Macklin, and Bowyer.

Myrone, Martin. “Exhibitions Culture, Consumerism and the Romantic Artist.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 184-200. <Blake (2024)>

“I would propose that the phenomenon of exhibitions culture helped institute a structurally precarious, inherently competitive and individualist artistic field, revealing a still larger set of transformations accompanying social, economic and political modernization” (189). Positions Blake in this context (pp. 197-98), with references to Royal Academy, Reynolds, Fuseli, Boydell, Macklin, Bowyer, Romney, and Barry.

Szwydky, Lissette Lopez. “Visual and Textual Adaptation in Literature and Fine Art Forms.” Transmedia Adaptation in the Nineteenth Century. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2020. 97-137. <Blake (2024)>

Discusses Blake’s engravings to Stedman and his illustrations to other authors (Young, Gray, Milton, and Dante). Also addresses the literary galleries of Boydell and Macklin, with a few comments on Fuseli’s illustration of Shakespeare.

Macklin without Blake

Billingsley, Naomi. “The Great Bowyer Bible: Robert Bowyer and the Macklin Bible.” Journal of Illustration 8.1 (2021): 51-80. <Blake (2023)>

“This article examines an iconic example of grangerizing: the Macklin Bible extra-illustrated in 45 volumes by London artist and bookseller Robert Bowyer (1758–1834) in the first quarter of the nineteenth century (Bolton Libraries and Museums, Bolton, United Kingdom)” (abstract).

Brylowe, Thora. “Angelica Kauffman and the Sister Arts.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 391-407. <Blake (2024)>

An overview of Kauffman’s life, stressing the misogyny she faced and how her self-portraits invoked the themes of the Sister Arts. Considers Kauffman’s relationship to the Royal Academy, the engraving of her designs by William Wynne Ryland and Thomas Burke, and her relationship to the Boydell and Macklin galleries.

Calè, Luisa. "Maria Cosway's Hours: Cosmopolitan and Classical Visual Culture in Thomas Macklin's Poets Gallery." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 221-42. <Blake (2020)>

On Cosway's painting, The Hours, and its place in Macklin's Gallery.

Haywood, Ian. "Illustration, Terror, and Female Agency: Thomas Macklin's Poets Gallery in a Revolutionary Decade." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 199-220. <Blake (2020)>

"[S]how how serial publication of illustrated 'Numbers' produced configurations of images and texts that were and still are wide open to subversive interpretations" (15).

Malkin, Benjamin Heath (1769-1842) and Malkin, Charlotte (1772–1859), Writer, Artist
Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB\), G. Martin Murphy
Davies, Keri. "Benjamin Heath Malkin, 1769-1842: a Bio-Bibliography." Index Rerum (26 May 2021). <Blake (2022)>

A very useful chronology of Malkin's life combined with a list of his publications and scholarly sources.

Mackerness, E.D. "Blake and the Malkins." Durham University Journal 35 (1974): 179-84.
<BBS 556>

An early biographical sketch of Malkin and his family.

Matthews, Susan. "Blake's Malkin." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 108-29. <WBHC 1899-1900>

A key overview of Malkin's life, his connections (including Ann Batten Cristall), and his relationship to Blake.

Studies

Baulch, David. "'Living Form': William Blake's Gothic Relations." William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncle and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 33-63. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Explores Benjamin Heath Malkin's and Blake's ideas of the Gothic.

Betz, Paul F. "Wordsworth's First Acquaintance with Blake's Poetry." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.4 (May 1970): 85-89. <BB #1217.51>

Dates Wordsworth's transcription of Blake's poetry from Malkin in his commonplace book between March and June of 1809, noting Dorothy's description of Malkin as "a coxcomb."

Bushell, Sally, Julia S. Carlson, Damian Walford Davies. "Introduction: Romantic Cartographies." Romantic Cartographies: Mapping, Literature, Culture, 1789-1832. Ed. Sally Bushell, Julia S. Carlson, and Damian Walford Davies. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2020. 1-24. <Blake (2024)>

Discusses both Cumberland's An Attempt to Describe Hafod and Malkin's Memoir, with references to Blake.

Erdman, David V. “Every Thing Has Its Vermin.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.3 (Dec. 1968): 68. <BB #1217.34>

Notes that in the copy of Malkin’s Memoirs bought in 1809 by Jabez Legg has an annotation in the Blake section after “The Tyger”: “This is a little too much about Mr. Blake” (68).

Matthews, Susan. “Charlotte Malkin’s Waterloo Diary and the Politics of Waterloo Tourism.” Literature Compass 11.3 (Mar. 2014): 218-231.¹³⁷

“[E]xamines [Charlotte Malkin’s] unpublished journal account of a family visit to the Waterloo battlefield in July 1816” (abstract).

Matthews, Susan. “Illustrated Poetry in the Romantic Period.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 356-73. <Blake (2024)>

On the relative novelty of the idea of “illustrations” in the Romantic period, with references to Blake’s illustrations to Gray and Young, Stothard, Fuseli, Boydell, and Charlotte Malkin.

Marsh, John (1752-1828) and Edward Garrard (1783-1862), Musicians

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Brian Robins)

Writing

Robins, Brian, ed. The John Marsh Journals: The Life and Times of a Gentleman Composer \(1752-1828\). Stuyvesant, NY: Pendragon Press, 1998. <WBHC 3022>

References to Blake and Hayley.

Studies

Blake and the Marshes

Crosby, Mark. “‘No Boys Work’: Blake, Hayley and the Triumphs of (Intellectual) Paiderastia.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 199-208. <WBHC 1801-03>

Suggests that Blake’s struggle with Hayley “was because Hayley’s instructional methods appear to have been based on the classical Greek practice of Paiderastia” (200), with many references to Edward Garrett Marsh.

Essick, Robert N. “Blake, Hayley, and Edward Garrard Marsh: ‘An Insect of Parnassus.’” Explorations: The Age of the Enlightenment. Ed. J.E. Riehl. Lafayette: Levy Humanities Series, 1987. 58-84. <BBS 464>

“The references to Blake in the newly discovered Marsh letters suggest that “Blake’s descent from hope to disillusionment bordering on despair [in his relationship with Hayley] unfolded within and was in part shaped by class structures” (80)” (BBS 464).

¹³⁷ Not recorded in WBHC.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake and John Marsh.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.2 (fall 1991): 70-74. <BBS 408>

On Marsh’s father, John Marsh (1752-1828) and the references to Hayley and Blake in his manuscript autobiography: “to Mr Blake’s an Engraver M.^r H. had lately brought down from London & settled in a Cottage at Felpham, in order to prepare some ornamental Engravings, Vignettes &c. for his Works” (70).

Vultee, Denise. “Apollonian Elephant?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.1 (summer 1996): 22. <WBHC 1664>

Identifies the allusion to an “Apollonian Elephant” by Edward Garrard Marsh in a June 1802 letter to William Hayley as originating in “Philostratus’s Life of Apollonius of Tyana, a highly embroidered tale of the travels and purported miracles of a Neopythagorean philosopher who lived during the first century A.D. In the second book of that work, Apollonius and his sidekick Damis travel to India, where they encounter a number of elephants” (22).

Mashes without Blake

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “John Marsh and Peregrine Project: A Tour through Some of the Southern Counties of England \(1804\).” Huntington Library Quarterly 59.1 (1996): 80-81. <WBHC 3023>

Points out that Marsh’s journal reveals he is the author of the novel, A Tour, which was written under the pseudonym Peregrine Project and Timothy Type.

Brewer, John. “‘The Harmony of Heaven’: John Marsh and Provincial Music.” The Pleasures of the Imagination: English Culture in the Eighteenth Century. New York: Farrar Straus Giroux, 1997. 531-51. <WBHC 3024>

Foster, Paul, ed. Marsh of Chichester (1752-1828): Gentleman, Musician, Composer, Writer. Chichester: University College, 2004. <WBHC 3022-23>

A collection of essays, many highlighting Chichester.

Renshaw, Martin. John Marsh: A Most Elegant and Beautiful Instrument: The Organ. Chichester, 2002. <WBHC 3024> London: At the Sign of the Pipe, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

Mathew, Harriet, and Anthony Stephen¹³⁸ (1733-1824), Patrons of the young William Blake (See “Blake” by J.T. Smith)

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A.S. Mathew, Patron of Blake and Flaxman.” Notes and Queries 203 (Apr. 1958): 168-78. <BB #1152>

Important biographical information on Mathew and his relationship with Flaxman as well as the Mathew circle.

¹³⁸ See WBHC 3024-25 for information about Mathew’s will.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “John Flaxman and the Mathew Clan.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 67.7 (1963): 443-54.¹³⁹

Corrects J.T. Smith’s confusion of the Mathew and Matthews families with biographical information, and details Flaxman’s connections with the latter especially.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Mathews as Patrons.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.6 (fall 2012): 5 pars.

Details the death of Mathews’s daughter in 1798 and five books to which one or both of the Mathews subscribed.

Bindman, David. “New Light on the Mathews: Flaxman and Blake’s Early Gothicism.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 95–104. <WBHIC 2436-40>

Inscriptions by A.S. Mathew on early Flaxman drawings of Gothic subjects, especially for Chatterton, “strongly suggest that Mathew was directly involved in Flaxman’s early attempts at illustrating Chatterton” (96).

Margoliouth, H.M. “Blake’s Mr. Mathew.” Notes and Queries 196 (old series) (1951): 162-63. <BB #2180>

First identification of A.S. Mathew.

Mora, José Joaquín de (1783–1864), Writer
Studies

Blake and Mora

Flores, Cristina. “The Reception of Blake in Spain.” The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Earle and Morton D. Paley. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. I.155-84. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

Discusses Mora’s use of Blake’s designs for The Grave.

Romero Vallejo, Alberto Custodio. “Poetas que conocieron el secreto de la inspiración’: estudio comparativo de The Grav de Robert Blair \(1743\) y Meditaciones poéticas de José Joaquín de Paolini, Daniela, and Mario Rucavado Rojas. “Del Redentor al Demiurgo: Las ilustraciones de William Blake vistas a través de las Meditaciones poéticas de José Joaquín de Mora.” Hyperbórea. Revista de ensayo y creación 7 (2024): 40-57. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2025)>

“José Joaquín de Mora’s Meditaciones poéticas consists of a series of eleven poems inspired by William Blake’s illustrations for Robert Cromek’s edition of Robert Blair’s poem The Grave (1808). [...] This article contextualises Mora’s poems and explores to what extent they can be considered an ekphrasis of Blake’s designs” (abstract).

(1826).” Cuadernos de Ilustración y Romanticismo 28 (2022): 423-53. In Spanish. <Blake (2023)>

¹³⁹ Not recorded in BB.

An essay on how Mora assimilated Blair's The Grave in his Meditaciones poéticas, published in 1826 by Rudolph Ackermann with Blake's 1808 illustrations to the Blair poem.

Mora without Blake

García Castañeda, Salvador, and Alberto Romero Ferrer, ed. José Joaquín de Mora o la inconstancia. Periodismo, política y literatura. Madrid: Visor Libros, 2018. In Spanish. <Blake (2023)>

A collection of essays on Mora, including his London exile and experience there as editor, journalist, and man of letters in the 1820s.

Medina Calzada, Sara. José Joaquín de Mora and Britain: Cultural Transfers and Transformations. Berlin: Peter Lang, 2022. In English. <Blake (2023)>

The volume “explores the connections that José Joaquín de Mora (1783–1864) established with Britain, where he was exiled from 1823 to 1826” (publisher’s summary).

Morganwg, Iolo [Edward Williams] (1747-1826), Welsh Poet and Antiquarian (See also Antiquarianism and Druids and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Prys Morgan)

Jenkins, Geraint H. Bard of Liberty: The Political Radicalism of Iolo Morganwg. Cardiff: University of Wales Pres, 2012.¹⁴⁰

Biography focus on Morganwg’s politics, with many references to Owen Pughe. Blake is only mentioned slightly.

Morgan, Prys. Iolo Morganwg. Cardiff: University of Wales Press, 1975.

Williams, G. J. “Williams, Edward \(Iolo Morganwg, 1747-1826\), poet and antiquary.” 1959. The Dictionary of Welsh Biography.

Writing

Smith, Malcolm. The Triads of Britain. 1801. London: Wildwood House, 1977.

Studies

Blake and Morganwg

Clark, Steve. “Blake and the Pastoral-Georgic Tradition.” Romantic Environmental Sensibility: Nature, Class and Empire. Ed. Ve-Yin Tee. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. 211-29. <Blake (2023)>

Considers Milton “from the perspective of a more historically engaged environmental poetics, drawing on its indebtedness to the tradition of sensibility and focusing in particular on James Thomson, Mark Akenside, and Iolo Morganwg” (212-13).

Fisher, Peter F. “Blake and the Druids.” Journal of English and Germanic Philology 58.4 (1959): 589-612. <BB #1068>

¹⁴⁰ Incorporates Jenkins’s “The Bard of Liberty during William Pitt’s Reign of Terror,” Heroic Poets and Poetic Heroes in Celtic Tradition. CSANA Yearbook 3-4, Ed. Joseph Falaky Nagy and Leslie Ellen Jones. (Dublin and Portland, OR: Four Courts Press, 2005), 183-206.

A useful sketch of Blake's ideas regarding druids in relationship to Edward Williams and Edward Davies, and an exploration of Blake's druid imagery in A Descriptive Catalogue, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem.

Hutton, Ronald. "Interlude: A Pair of Williams." Blood and Mistletoe: The History of the Druids in Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2009. 183-209. <WBHC 2180>

On the use of Druids by Blake and Wordsworth. Includes a chapter on Iolo Morganwg and another on his influence.

Mee, Jon. "‘Images of Truth New Born’: Iolo, William Blake and the Literary Radicalism of the 1790s." A Rattleskull Genius: The Many Faces of Iolo Morganwg. Ed. Geraint H. Jenkins. Chicago: University of Chicago Press in association with the University of Wales Press, 2009. <WBHC 2394>

"This chapter examines [. . .] parallels between Iolo’s Poems, Lyric and Pastoral and Blake’s Songs of Innocence and of Experience," with a discussion of Iolo’s and Blake’s "situation in the radical London of the 1790s" (174).

Taylor, Dena. "A Note on William Blake and the Druids of Primrose Hill." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 104-05. <BBS 395>

Referencing Blake’s comments to Henry Crabb Robinson that he saw the spiritual sun on Primrose Hill, calls attention to "a ritual called the Gorsedd of Bards" that was established by "Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg, 1747-1826)" and joined in by "Blake’s friend William Owen" and was "performed" "on Primrose Hill at the Autumn Equinox of 1792" (104).

Morganwg without Blake

Constantine, Mary-Ann. "Songs and Stones: Iolo Morganwg \(1747-1826\), Mason and Bard." Eighteenth Century 47.2 (2006): 233-51.

Constantine, Mary-Ann. The Truth against the World: Iolo Morganwg and Romantic Forgery. Chicago: University of Chicago Press in association with the University of Wales Press, 2009.

Constantine, Mary-Ann. "Viewing Most Things Thro’ False Mediums”: Iolo Morganwg (1747-1826) and English Perceptions of Wales." Romanticism’s Debatable Lands. Ed. Claire Lamont and Michael Rossington. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 27-38.

Constantine, Mary-Ann. "“Within a Door or Two”: Iolo Morganwg, Chatterton and Bristol." From Gothic to Romantic: Chatterton’s Bristol. Ed. Alistair Heys. Bristol: Redcliffe Press Ltd., 2005. 104-15.

Grande, James. "London Songs, Glamorgan Hymns: Iolo Morganwg and the Music of Dissent." Studies in Romanticism 58.4 (winter 2019): 481-503. <Blake (2020)>

"This essay explores the relationship between song, political radicalism, and religious dissent through the case of Iolo Morganwg (1747–1826), stonemason-poet, London showman, and self-proclaimed preserver of the Welsh bardic tradition" (481).

Jenkins, Geraint H. Facts, Fantasy, and Fiction: The Historical Vision of Iolo Morganwg. Aberystwyth: University of Wales Press, 1997.

Jenkins, Geraint H., ed. A Rattleskull Genius: The Many Faces of Iolo Morganwg. Chicago: University of Chicago Press in association with the University of Wales Press, 2009.

A collection of essays.

Jones, Ffion M. "The Bard is a Very Singular Character": Iolo Morganwg, Marginalia and Print Culture. Cardiff: University of Wales Press, 2010.

Morgan, Prys. "From a Death to a View: The Hunt for the Welsh Past in the Romantic Period." The Invention of Tradition. Ed. Eric Hobsbawm and Terence Ranger. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2012.

With references to both Owen Pugh and Iolo Morganwg, charts Romantic-era investigations and fictions regarding ancient Wales and the Druids. Useful contextualization for Blake's idea of Druids.

Shestakova, Nadezhda. "Ot Khamfri Lluida do Iolo Morganuga: osnovnye etapy razvitiia antikvarnoi traditsii Uel'sa v XVI-seredine XIX veka [From Humphrey Llwyd to Iolo Morganwg: Main Stages of Development of the Antiquarian Tradition of Wales from the Sixteenth to Mid-Nineteenth Centuries]." Izvestiia Saratovskogo universiteta. Novaia seriiia. Seriia: Istoriiia. Mezhdunarodnye otnosheniia [Bulletin of Saratov University. New Series. History. International Relationships] 20.3 (2020): 353-58. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

Mortimer, John Hamilton (1740-79), Artist

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB\), John Sunderland

Benthall, Gilbert. "John Hamilton Mortimer ARA Drawings and Engraved Works, with a Revised Account of his Life." (c. 1950s) Typescript MS. Victoria and Albert Museum Library.

Sunderland, John. John Hamilton Mortimer: His Life and Works. Volume of the Walpole Society 52 (1986): 1-270.

Catalogue

Nicolson, Benedict. John Hamilton Mortimer A.R.A., 1740-1779: Paintings, Drawings and Prints. London: Paul Mellon Foundation for British Art, 1968.

A catalogue for the exhibition held at the Towner Art Gallery 6 July to Sept 3 and Iveagh Bequest from 10 Sep. to 8 Oct. 1968.

Studies

Blake and Mortimer

Bowden, Betsy. "Visual Portraits of the Canterbury Pilgrims 1484(?) - 1809." The Ellesmere Chaucer: Essays in Interpretation. Ed. Martin Stevens and Daniel Woodward. San Marino: Huntington Library; Tokyo: Yushodo Co., Ltd, 1995. 171-204 <WBHC 1778>

The section on Blake is titled, "Reading/Riding between the Lines: Mortimer, Stothard, and Blake," 193-200. "I will discuss Mortimer's drawing and Stothard's frontispiece primarily as transitional pieces situated between the elaborate, accessible engravings of the Urry edition and the two rival paintings by Stothard and Blake" (193).

Mortimer without Blake

Allentuck, Marcia. “New John Hamilton Mortimer Drawings of Shakespearean Characters.” Burlington Magazine 115.845 (1974): 530-35. Responded to by Sunderland’s “Mortimer Drawings.”

Chadwick, Esther. “Mortimer’s Caprice.” The Radical Print. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2024. 51-89. <Blake (2025)>

On Mortimer’s Fifteen Etchings Dedicated to Sir Joshua Reynolds (1778), the influence of Salvator Rosa, and Mortimer’s use of banditti figures. “Mortimer’s prints effected the paradoxical manoeuvre of suggesting that it is precisely through ‘caprice’ that the artist asserts his freedom, and thus secures for his art a critical function fit for his age” (89).

Clarke, David. “Chinese Visitors to 18th-Century Britain and Their Contribution to Its Cultural and Intellectual Life.” Curtis’s Botanical Magazine 34.4 (Dec. 2017): 498-521. <Blake (2019)>

Includes a discussion of Mortimer’s portrait of the Chinese artist Chitqua (c. 1771).

Donohue, Joseph W. “John Hamilton Mortimer and Shakespearean Characterization.” Princeton University Library Chronicle 29.3 (1968): 193-207.

Hargraves, Matthew. Candidates for Fame: The Society of Artists of Great Britain 1760-1791. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2005.

Mortimer figures prominently in the account.

Hetherington, Michelle. “John Hamilton Mortimer and the Discovery of Captain Cook.” British Art Journal 4.1 (2003): 69-77.

Märtens Susanne. Art and Appetites: Studien zur Ästhetik des Grotesken bei John Hamilton Mortimer und Thomas Rowlandson. Freiburg, Berlin, and Wien: Rombach, 2007.

Myrone, Martin. “Outlaw Masculinity: John Hamilton Mortimer in the 1770s.” Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 121-44. <WBHC 2446>

Solkin, David H. “Conquest, usurpation, wealth, luxury, famine’: Mortimer’s banditti and the Anxieties of Empire.” Art and the British Empire. Ed. Tim Barringer, Geoff Quilley and Douglas Forham. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2007. 120-38.

“What such pictures offer are fantasies of freedom” (132).

Sunderland, John. “John Hamilton Mortimer and Salvator Rosa.” Burlington Magazine 112.809 (1970): 520-31.

Sunderland, John. “John Hamilton Mortimer’s Bacchanalian Dance.” British Art Journal (2000): 69.

Sunderland, John. “John Hamilton Mortimer’s Progress of Vice.” Burlington Magazine 118.884 (1976): 768-71.

Sunderland, John. “Mortimer Drawings.” Burlington Magazine 116.851 (1974): 108-111. A response to Allentuck’s “New John Hamilton Mortimer Drawings of Shakespearean Characters.”

Sunderland, John. “Mortimer, Pine and Some Political Aspects of English History Painting.” Burlington Magazine 116 (1974): 318-26.

“Mortimer’s The Discovery of Prince Arthur’s Tomb by the Inscription on the Leaden Cross can be seen not just as an obscure historical footnote or an antiquarian’s anecdote compounding legend and fact, but as an assertion of the mortality of monarchs and a rejection of the divinity and implied immortality with which Kings were sometimes invested” (321).

Sunderland, John. “Mortimer’s ‘sir Arthegal the Knight of Justice’.” Burlington Magazine 121.914 (1979): 278, 310-11.

Sunderland, John. “Samuel Johnson and History Painting.” Journal of the Royal Society of Arts 134 (1986): 834-41.

On the influence of Johnson’s essay on history painting in Idler no. 45 on the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce’s prize for history painting, with references to Joshua Reynolds, Benjamin West, James Barry, and John Hamilton Mortimer.

Sunderland, John. “Two Self-Portraits by James Jefferys?” Burlington Magazine 119 (1977): 279-80.

Notes that Jefferys was apprenticed to the engraver William Woollett, exhibited at the Society of Artists in 1771, and was admitted to the Royal Academy Schools in 1772. Also considers Jefferys’s relationship to Mortimer and his influence on Jeffreys.

Palmer, Samuel (1805-1881), Artist (See also The Ancients and Gilchrist)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Raymond Lister)

Harrison, Colin. “Samuel Palmer 1805-1881.” William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Ed. Michael Phillips. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. 224-31. <WBHC 1413-20>

Phillips’s catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake’s early and late years in two sections titled, “Education” and “Innovation.” In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, “Inspiration,” contains essays by others on the Ancients.

Herrmann, Luke. “William Blake (1757-1827) and Samuel Palmer (1805-81).” Nineteenth Century British Painting. London: DLM [Giles de la Mare Publishers Limited], 2000. 66-83. <WBHC 2144>

An informed overview of Blake as an artist and his relationship with and influence on Palmer.

Lister, Raymond. Samuel Palmer: A Biography. Faber and Faber, 1974.

Lister, Raymond. Samuel Palmer: His Life and Art. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1987.

A good introduction to Palmer’s life, work, and his relationship to Blake and Linnell.

Palmer, A.H. The Life and Letters of Samuel Palmer. London: Seely & Co., 1892.

Palmer, S.M., A.H. Palmer, and F.G. Stephens. A Memoir of Samuel Palmer with an introduction by William Vaughan. London: Pallas Athena, 2006.

Includes:

Vaughn, William. "Introduction." Pp. 7-24.

Palmer, Samuel. "Autobiographical letter to F.G. Stephens." 25-34.

Palmer, A.H., and F.G. Stephens. "Life of Samuel Palmer." 35-50.

Stephens, F.G. "Notes on some Pictures, Drawings and Etchings by Samuel Palmer exhibited at the Fine Art Society." 51-94.

Writing

Abley, Mark, ed. The Parting Light: Selected Writings. Manchester: Carcanet Press Ltd., 1985.

Blake is referenced in the editorial notes and in Palmer's own writings.

Bindman, David. "Samuel Palmer's An Address to the Electors of West Kent, 1832 Rediscovered." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.2 (fall 1985): 56-59. <BBS 398>

On Palmer's politics and favorable view of the Anglican Church, along with an analysis of his anonymous pamphlet, An Address to the Electors of West Kent (1832), which is published in the same issue of Blake.

Lister, Raymond, ed. The Letters of Samuel Palmer. 2 vols. (Vol. 1, Vol. 2) Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1974.

Lister, Raymond, ed. The Writings of Samuel Palmer. [Paris]: Extrait de la Gazette des Beaux-Arts, 1973.

Wilcox, Timony. Samuel Palmer. London: Tate Publishing, 2005. <WBHC 3040>

Catalogues and Facsimiles

Standard

Lister, Raymond. Catalogue Raisonne of the Works of Samuel Palmer. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1988.

Collection

Harrison, Colin. The Works of Samuel Palmer. Oxford: Ashmolean Museum, 1999. Rev. and updated 2021. <Blake (2022)>

Exhibition

Baker, Elizabeth, et al. Samuel Palmer, 1805-1881: Vision and Landscape. London: British Museum Press, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the British Museum from 21 Oct. 2005 to 22 Jan. 2006 and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art from 7 Mar. to 28 May 2006.

Cooke, Gordon. Samuel Palmer, His Friends and His Followers: Edward Calvert, George Richmond, Frederick Griggs, Paul Drury, Graham Sutherland, Robin Tanner. London: The Fine Arts Society, 2012.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fine Arts Society from 30 May to 22 Jun. 2012.

Lister, Raymond. The Paintings of Samuel Palmer. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1985.

Lister, Raymond. Samuel Palmer and “the Ancients.” Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1984.

The catalogue for the exhibition at the Fitzwilliam Museum from 9 Oct. to 16 Dec. 1984.

Vaughan, William et al. Samuel Palmer 1805-1881: Vision and Landscape. London: British Museum Press, 2005. <WBHC 3029-30>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the British Museum from 21 Oct. 2005 to 22 Jan. 2006, and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art from 7 Mar. to 29 May 2006.

Facsimiles

Butlin, Martin, ed. and intro. Samuel Palmer: The Sketchbook of 1824. Foreword William Vaughan. New York: Thames & Hudson in assoc. with the William Blake Trust, 2005. <WBHC 3033-34>

A beautiful facsimile edition. The Preface lays out the sketchbook's connection to Geoffrey Keynes and the very rare 1962 Blake Trust facsimile. Vaughan's Foreword, "Palmer and the 'Revival of Art,'" contextualizes the sketchbook in relationship to Palmer's thought on art. Butlin's Introduction provides the immediate context of the sketchbook (especially as pertains to John Linnell and William Blake) and details its history and major motifs. There is commentary on each page, and two appendices record the leaves of the sketchbook that were removed and the media Palmer used.

Samuel Palmer: A Vision Recaptured: Etchings for Milton and for Virgil. London: Trianon Press Facsimiles, 1978.

Studies

Blake and Palmer

Anon. "William Blake and Samuel Palmer: The Vision and the Vision Recaptured." Book Collector 28.1 (1979): 7-8, 11-12, 15-16. <BBS 422>

"Remarks stimulated by the exhibition at the Victoria and Albert Museum" (BBS 422).

Antliff, Mark. "Pacifism, Realism, and Pathology: Alex Comfort, Cecil Collins, and Neo-Romantic Art during World War II." Modernism/Modernity 27.3 (Sept. 2020): 519-49. <Blake (2021)>

Some references to the influence of Blake and Samuel Palmer on the Neo-Romantics.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake, Samuel Palmer, and George Richmond." Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 43-50. <BB #1218.30>

Records George Richmond's annotations to his edition of Gilchrist, including his sketch of 3 Fountain Court. There are also other references to Blake by Palmer and others—now all in BR.

Grigson, Geoffrey. "Palmer and William Blake." Samuel Palmer: The Visionary Years. London: Kegan Paul, 1947. 18-34. <BB #1754>

"A detailed and responsible account of the relations between the two men" (BB #1754).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake's Copy of Dante's Inferno." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 147-54. ¹⁴¹ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Transcribes the annotations to Dante's Inferno, and describes how Keynes obtained the copy of the book from a descendent of Samuel Palmer.

Linnell, David. Blake, Palmer, Linnell and Co.: The Life of John Linnell. Sussex, England: The BookGuild Ltd, 1994. <WBHC 2334-35>

Important recent biography of John Linnell, with original information based on Linnell-family sources, including references to William and Catherine Blake.

Lister, Raymond. "The National Gallery & Blake's 'spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 105-06. <BBS 396>

On the 1870 attempt to sell the painting to the National Gallery by George Richmond and Samuel Palmer.

Lister, Raymond. "References to Blake in Samuel Palmer's Letters." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 305-09. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

A few new references to Blake in letters by Palmer dated 1839-81.

Lister, Raymond. "Two Blake Drawings and Letter from Samuel Palmer." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.2 (fall 1972): 53-54. <BB #1217.109>

Records two pencil sketches, "The Prophet Isaiah Foretelling the Crucifixion and the Ascension" (Butlin 772), and Palmer's note on it to an unknown recipient.

Paley, Morton D. "To Realize after a Sort the Imagery of Milton': Samuel Palmer's Designs for 'L'Allegro' and 'Il Penseroso.'" Huntington Library Quarterly 46.1 (1983): 48-71.

Examines Palmer's illustrations of Milton, with references to how Palmer's differed from Blake's.

Payne, Christiana. "A mild, a grateful, an unearthly lustre': Samuel Palmer and the Moon." Burlington Magazine 154.1310 (May 2012), 330-36. <WBHC 3039>

Wilson, David. "An idle speculation by Samuel Palmer: William Blake's involvement in Cipriani's portrait of John Milton." British Art Journal 6.1 (spring/summer 2005): 31-36. <WBHC 2870-71>

¹⁴¹ Revised version of essay of same title, TLS (3 May 1957), <BB #2014>.

A detailed correction of both Samuel Palmer's and G.E. Bentley, Jr.'s speculation¹⁴² that Blake may have had some involvement in the engraved and etched portraits of Milton in Francis Blackburne's Memoir of Thomas Hollis (1780). As Wilson demonstrates, the portraits were identical to those issued in 1762 and 1765, well before Blake's apprenticeship with James Basire began.

Palmer without Blake

Lister, Raymond. "The Book Illustrations of Samuel Palmer" The Book Collector 28.1 (1979): 67-103.

Anon. "Samuel Palmer in the Marketplace." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.3 (winter 1976-77): 68.¹⁴³

Notes the recent newspaper coverage of the fact that "many of the paintings sold in recent years as Samuel Palmers have been modern fakes" (68).

Shaw-Miller, Simon, and Sam Smiles, ed. Samuel Palmer Revisited. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2010. <WBHC 3039-40>

A collection of essays:

Vaughan, William "Introduction: The Perception and Study of Palmer's Work in the Later Twentieth and Early Twenty-first Centuries."

Vaughan, William "Samuel Palmer's Houndsditch Days."

Smith, Greg. "Ancients and Moderns: Samuel Palmer and the 'Progress of water colours,' 1822-1833."

Postle, Martin. "'This very unstudent-like student': Palmer and the Education of the Artist."

Payne, Christiana. "'Dreaming of the marriage of the land and sea': Samuel Palmer and the Coast."

Goldman, Paul. "Samuel Palmer: Poetry, Printmaking and Illustration."

Smiles, Sam. "From the Valley of Vision to the M25: Samuel Palmer and Modern Culture."

Shaw-Miller, Simon. "Palmer and the Dark Pastoral in English Music of the Twentieth Century."

Stuart, Kathleen. "Samuel Palmer, John Martin, and John Sell Cotman: Visions of Paradise in the Eye of the Beholder?" Religion and the Arts 22.1-2 (2018): 40-57. <Blake (2019)>

"[C]onsiders how a viewer identifies spiritual meaning in landscape images of the Romantic era as well as the role of artists' statements about their work in a viewer's interpretive process" (abstract).

¹⁴² See G.E. Bentley, Jr. "A Portrait of Milton Engraved by William Blake 'When Three years of Age'? A Speculation by Samuel Palmer." University of Toronto Quarterly 51 (1981), 28-55, <BBS 368>.

¹⁴³ Not recorded in BBS.

Vaughan, William. Samuel Palmer: Shadows on the Wall. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2015. <WBHC 2800, 3040>

A study of Palmer that positions him within his times. Includes a chapter on his meeting with Blake.

Vaughan, William, and Elizabeth E. Barker. “‘Mysterious wisdom won by toil’: new light on Samuel Palmer’s ‘Lonely tower.’” Burlington Magazine 147 (2005): 590-97. <WBHC 3040>

Woodcock, Peter. “The Valley of Vision: The Works of Samuel Palmer.” The Enchanted Isle: The Neo-Romantic Vision from William Blake to the New Visionaries. Glastonbury: Gothic Images Publications, 2000.

Parker, James (1757/1760—1805), Engraver¹⁴⁴ (See also Biographies and James Basire)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Vivienne W. Painting)

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

Sale Catalogue with Works by Blake

[Thomas] Dodd. [A Catalogue of a Collection of Prints, Comprising a Numerous Assemblage of Proofs & Etchings, After Westall, Smirke, Stothard \[i.e., Stothard\], and Others, Several Ditto by Old Masters; Drawings, By Morland, Town, &c. Books, Books of Prints, and Several Curious Miscellaneous Articles. Together with a valuable Collection of Coins and Medals, chiefly Silver, in a high State of Preservation, many of them very rare and curious -- late the Property of Mr. James Parker, Engraver, Deceased; Which will be Sold by Auction](#). London, 1807.

Catalogue

Alexander, David, ed. Affecting Moments: Prints of English Literature Made in the Age of Romantic Sensibility 1775-1800. York: University of York, 1993. <WBHC 2930-31>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in 1993 at the University of York. The catalogue contains prints “from David Alexander’s collection” (WBHC 2931), and includes engravings by Francesco Bartolozzi, James Parker, William Wynne Ryland, Louis Schiavonetti, Robert Thew, and Caroline Watson.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake’s First Arrest, at Upnor Castle.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.3 (winter 1997-98): 82-84. <WBHC 1671>

Reexamines Blake’s first arrest with Thomas Stothard and (likely) James Parker in 1780 in light of Thomas Stothard’s etching, “A Scene on the Medway” (c. 1780-81).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Death of Blake’s Partner James Parker.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.2 (fall 1996): 49-51. <WBHC 1665>

¹⁴⁴ In his dissertation, Keri Davies believes that Parker was more likely born in 1760. See “William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England,” 240. He also distinguishes between James Parker, Blake’s partner and a bachelor, from James Parker, a law stationer of Chancery Lane who married Anne Sergeantson in 1782 (239n525).

Analyzes Parker's 1805 will.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Journeyman and the Genius: James Parker and His Partner William Blake with a List of Parker's Engravings.” Studies in Bibliography 49 (1996): 208-31.¹⁴⁵ <WBHC 1607>

An important account of Blake's fellow apprentice and business partner, but see Keri Davies's dissertation for important corrections, particularly about Parker's marital status.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Note 421: Trade Cards and the Blake Connection.” Book Collector 37 (1988): 127-33. <BBS 368>

“Records trade cards of William Staden Blake, James Parker, and ‘hosiery firms named Blake for the period 1770-1830’ (128)” (BBS 368).

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. “William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England.” PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Whitehead, Angus. “A Reference to William Blake and James Parker, Printellers, in Bailey's British Directory \(1785\).” Notes and Queries 52.1 (2005): 32, 35. <WBHC 2850>

Notes the reference to Blake and Parker's printshop.

Phillips, Richard (1767-1840), Publisher, Blake employer (See also William Hayley and Letters)
Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Pamela Clemit and Jenny McAuley)
Studies

Erdman, David V. “Blake's 'Nest of Villains'.” Keats-Shelley Journal 2 (1953): 61-71. <BB #1567>

Largely on the hostile reviews of Blake by The Examiner, but also describes Blake's relationship to Hayley's friend, John Carr (1772-1832), and Carr's publishing career with Richard Phillips.

Hammerschmidt, Sören. “Print, Proximity, and the Marketing of Richard Phillips: Mediating Richardson.” Eighteenth-Century Fiction 29.2 (winter 2016-17): 277-316.

Examines the production history of Phillips's edition of Samuel Richardson; also discusses Anna Letitia Barbauld and Caroline Watson.

Harper, George Mills. “Blake's Lost Letter to Hayley, 4 December 1804.” Studies in Philology 61.3 (1964): 573-85. <BB #1789>

¹⁴⁵ WBHC 3041-42 lists other engravings by Parker not recorded here.

Publishes the letter in full for the first time and elucidates its references to William Hayley and Richard Phillips as well as what its contents suggest about Blake's correspondence with Hayley in general.

King, James. “Cowper, Hayley, and Samuel Johnson’s ‘Republican’ Milton.” Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 17 (1987): 229-38.

On Cowper's and Hayley's reaction to Johnson's “Life of Milton,” and Cowper's letters and unsent poem to Richard Phillips, who had been imprisoned for publishing Paine's Rights of Man.

Paley, Morton D. “William Blake, Richard Phillips and the Monthly Magazine.” Studies in Romanticism 51.1 (spring 2012): 41-57. <WBHC 2502>

About Blake's relationship to Richard Phillips, publisher of Hayley's Ballads (1805).

Pughe, William Owen (1759-1835), Writer (See also Antiquarianism and Druids, Antinomianism and Popular Millenarianism, and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, J.E. Lloyd rev. by Glenda Carr)

Williams, Griffith John. “Pughe, William Owen (1759-1835), lexicographer, grammarian, editor, antiquary, and poet.” Dictionary of Welsh Biography.

Carr, Glenda. William Owen Pughe. Caerdydd, 1983.

Writing

Oddy, John, ed. The Writings of the Radical Welsh Baptist Minister William Richards (1749-1818). Lewiston, NY: Edwin Mellon Press, 2008.

Contains six letters to Pughe.

Studies

Blake and Pughe

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “‘The Triumph of Owen’: William Owen Pughe and Blake’s Ancient Britons.” National Library of Wales Journal 24 (1985): 248-61.

Details about the painting, The Ancient Britons, Pughe, and his commissioning of the painting.

Johnston, Arthur. “William Blake and ‘The Ancient Britons’.” Cylchgrawn Llyfrgell Genedlaethol Cymru: The National Library of Wales Journal 22 (1982): 304-20. <BBS 528>

Provides a historical account of the Welsh Triads, including the translation (c. 1800 and 1807) by Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg) that Blake likely used and suggests Blake's source of Williams's translation was William Owen, whose life and interests are detailed, including his connections to Joanna Southcott.

Kaminski-Jones, Rhys. “William Owen Pughe and Romantic Rewritings of the Poetry of Llywarch Hen.” Review of English Studies 73.308 (Feb. 2022): 100-20. <Blake (2022)>

Chronicles Pughe's translation of Llywarch Hen's bardic poetry.

Taylor, Dena. "A Note on William Blake and the Druids of Primrose Hill." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 104-05. <BBS 395>

Referencing Blake's comments to Henry Crabb Robinson that he saw the spiritual sun on Primrose Hill, calls attention to "a ritual called the Gorsedd of Bards" that was established by "Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg, 1747-1826)" and joined in by "Blake's friend William Owen" and was "performed" "on Primrose Hill at the Autumn Equinox of 1792" (104).

Pughe without Blake

Jenkins, Geraint H. Bard of Liberty: The Political Radicalism of Iolo Morganwg. Cardiff: University of Wales Pres, 2012.

A biography that focuses on Morganwg's politics, with many references to Owen Pughe. Blake is only mentioned slightly.

Wright, Eugene Patrick. A Catalogue of the Joanna Southcott Collection at the University of Texas. Austin: University of Texas at Austin, 1968.

In addition to Southcott, includes many references to William Sharp and William Owen Pughe.

Richmond, George (1809-1896), Artist (See also The Ancients)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Raymond Lister)

Brown, David Blayney. "George Richmond." The Dictionary of Art. Vol. 26. Ed. Janet Turner. New York: Grove's Dictionaries and London: Macmillan Publishers Limited, 1996. 353-54.
<WBHC 3045>

Lister, Ryamond. George Richmond: A Critical Biography. London: Robert Garton Ltd., 1981.
<BBS 552>

The Tathams of County Durham. <WBHC 3059>

A website devoted to Tatham family history. The site also includes George Richmond, who married Frederick Tatham's sister, Julia (1811-1881), in 1831. The site includes detailed genealogies; biographies; lists of residences with drawings, paintings, etc. of them when available; portraits; legal documents (birth, marriage, probate, etc.); and other papers. For Charles Heathcote Tatham, these include his fragment of an Autobiography, which describes his youth and time in Italy (with references to Angelica Kaufman, Canova, and Sir William and Lady Hamilton). For Frederick Tatham, it includes his 31 Mar. 1877 letter to his brother Robert (transcribed in WBHC 3060-63).

Writing

Stirling, A.M.W. The Richmond Papers from the Correspondence and Manuscripts of George Richmond, R.A., and His Son, Sir William Richmond, R.A., K.C.B.. London: W. Heinemann, 1926.

Catalogues

Sale Catalogues with Works by Blake

Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of a Choice Collection of Engraved Portraits of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the Property of the Late George Richmond, R.A., and Engravings after his

Works; and Drawings by James Barry, R.A., William Blake, T. Gainsborough, R.A., S. Palmer and Others. London, 1897.

Exhibition

Sloman, Susan, ed. Missing Pages: George Richmond R.A., 1809-1896: Drawings, Watercolours, Letters, Journals & Notebooks. London: Thos. Agnew & Sons, 2001.¹⁴⁶

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Thomas Agnew Gallery, London, from 31 Oct. to 23 Nov. 2001.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake, Samuel Palmer, and George Richmond." Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 43-50. <BB #1218.30>

Records George Richmond's annotations to his edition of Gilchrist, including his sketch of 3 Fountain Court. There are also other references to Blake by Palmer and others—now all in BR.

Butlin, Martin. "George Richmond, Blake's True Heir?" Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 201-12. <WBHC 2436-40>

Argues that among the young artists who gathered around Blake in his old age, George Richmond was Blakes true heir.

Harrison, Colin. "George Richmond 1809-1896." William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Ed. Michael Phillips. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. 236-39. <WBHC 1413-20>

Phillips's catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake's early and late years in two sections titled, "Education" and "Innovation." In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, "Inspiration," contains essays by others on the Ancients.

Lister, Raymond. "The National Gallery & Blake's 'spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 105-06. <BBS 396>

On the 1870 attempt to sell the painting to the National Gallery by George Richmond and Samuel Palmer.

Piggott, Jan. "Milton's Comus: From Text to Stage, the Fine Arts, and Book Illustrations, c. 1750-1850." British Art Journal 15.2 (2014/15): 18-32.

A useful survey of depictions of Comus. Blake's are discussed on p. 27, with subsequent references to them. Also discusses Fuseli and Richmond.

Smith, Dinitia. "Critic's Books Go to Small College." New York Times, 23 April 2003. <WBHC 2686>

¹⁴⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

Records Bloom's bequest of 25,000 books and "a drawing of William Blake on his death bed by George Richmond, and a frontispiece of Blake's For the Sexes" to St. Michael's College, Colchester, Vermont (WBHC 2686).

Todd, Ruthven. "A Recollection of George Richmond by His Grandson." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.1 (summer 1972): 24. <BB #1217.13>

On Arthur Richmond (George Richmond's grandson) telling Todd in Jun. 1966 that his grandfather had told him as an old man that he had shut Blake's eyes after his death "to keep the vision in." As Todd notes, the line was originally published in Anne Gilchrist: Her Life and Writings (1887).

Whitehead, Angus. "But, Kitty, I better love thee: George Richmond's Annotations to 'song [I love the jocund dance]' in Volume II of Gilchrist's Life of William Blake (1863)." Blake Journal 9 (2005): 87-97. <WBHC 1756>

Makes the case that Richmond's reference to Catherine in the annotations indicates the "Song" was written after 1777.

Robinson, Henry Crabb (1775-1867), Writer (See also Historic Biographies and William Wordsworth)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Vincent Newey)

Blake and Robinson

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America." Review of English Studies 31.122 (1980): 183-92. <BBS 449>

Adding to Michael Phillips's "The Reputation of Blake's Poetical Sketches 1783-1863" and G.E. Bentley, Jr.'s The Critical Heritage, illuminates via "a newly discovered collection of letters" (184) how seven poems from Poetical Sketches passed from J.J. Garth Wilkinson to Henry James, Sr. for publication in the American magazine, Harbinger, in 1848. References to Emerson and Robinson as well.

Esdaile, K.A. "An Early Appreciation of William Blake." Library 5 (1914): 229-56. <BB #1582>

Translates Henry Crabb Robinson's 1811 German article on Blake into English.

Gillet, Louis. "Le cas de William Blake." Revue des deux mondes (1 July 1923). B. 1924. C. 2012. <WBHC p. 2073> D. Le cas de William Blake. Angoulême: Éditions Marguerite Waknine, 2020. In French. <Blake (2021)>

"About Crabb Robinson's account of Blake in Morley's edition" <WBHC p. 2073>.

Hunnekuhl, Philipp. "'matters of Religion & Morality': Herder, Wordsworth, and Blake." Henry Crabb Robinson: Romantic Comparatist, 1790-1811. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2020. 159-193. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

"Robinson's underlying criteria for the appreciation of Blake the 'Artist, Poet, and Religious Enthusiast' [...] echo the concerns of Wordsworth and Herder: through invoking a childlike naivety, or simplicity, Blake frees compassion from religious dogmatism" (192). Hunnekuhl also reproduces the two pages of Robinson's pocket diary that describe his visit to Blake's exhibition and the writing of his 1811 article for Vaterländisches Museum.

Junod, Karen. “Crabb Robinson, Blake, and Perthes' Vaterländisches Museum \(1810-1811\).” European Romantic Review 23.4 (Aug. 2012): 435-51. <WBHC 2231>

“[F]ocuses on Anglo-German relations and explores the cultural and political context in which Henry Crabb Robinson's 1811 article on William Blake was published” (abstract).

Phillips, Michael. “The Reputation of Blake's Poetical Sketches 1783-1863.” The Review of English Studies 26:101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume's reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.'s sequel, “Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America.”

Stead, Evangelia. “First Steps in Britain.” Goethe's Faust I Outlined: Moritz Retzsch's Prints in Circulation. Brill, 2023. <Blake (2024)>

On the British reception of Friedrich August Moritz Retzsch's illustrations to Faust, which were given to Henry Crabb Robinson by Friedrich Christoph Perthes, the publisher of Robinson's German biographical sketch of Blake: “Perthes's bond and counter-bond of cultural exchange brings Retzsch's interpretation of Faust to Britain via the very same mediator as had sponsored Blake in Germany, bridging visionary poetry and art in a ritual of give and receive” (n.p.).

Taylor, Dena. “A Note on William Blake and the Druids of Primrose Hill.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 104-05. <BBS 395>

Referencing Blake's comments to Henry Crabb Robinson that he saw the spiritual sun on Primrose Hill, calls attention to “a ritual called the Gorsedd of Bards” that was established by “Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg, 1747-1826)” and joined in by “Blake's friend William Owen” and was “performed” “on Primrose Hill at the Autumn Equinox of 1792” (104).

Robinson without Blake

Stelzig, Eugene. “Henry Crabb Robinson's Reminiscences as Autobiography.” Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 134-53. <Blake (2022)>

Anticipating the Oxford University Press publication of Robinson's manuscripts, Stelzig suggests that the Reminiscences “add up to a significant autobiographical and literary achievement” (134). (No references in the article to Robinson's encounters with Blake.)

Romney, George (1734-1802), Painter, friend of Blake, collector (See also William Hayley, The Life of George Romney; William Hayley; John Flaxman)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Alex Kidson)

Chamberlain, Arthur B. George Romney New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1910.

Cross, David A. A Striking Likeness: The Life of George Romney. Aldershot and Brookfield: Ashgate, 2000. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2019.

Romney, John. Memoirs of the Life and Works of George Romney. London: Baldwin and Cradock, 1830.

Writing

Kidson, Alex. "The Letters of George Romney." Transactions of the Romney Society 22 (2017).

Catalogues

Sale

Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Christie. A Catalogue of the Collection of Pictures and Books [], Reserved after the Death of that Celebrated and elegant Painter, George [] Romney . . . By his Son, the Rev. John Romney, deceased, in pursuance of whose Will they are now sold . . . Also, the Small collection of Modern Pictures of William Cowden, Esq [and Others]. London, 1834.

Standard

Dixon, Yvonne Romney. "The Kendal Sketchbook 1763-71 (a boxed set in two parts)." Transactions of the Romney Society 15 (2010).

Contains a catalogue with commentary and a complete reproduction of the sketchbook.

Gower, Ronald Sutherland. George Romney. London: Duckworth and Co., 1904.

Kidson, Alex. George Romney: A Complete Catalogue of his Paintings. 3 vols. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2015.

The current catalogue raisonné.

Kidson, Alex. "George Romney: A Complete Catalogue of His Paintings, Supplement 2015–2020." Transactions of the Romney Society 25 (2020).

Kidson, Alex. George Romney's Titania and Her Attendants. London: Lowell Libson Limited, 2011.

On his painting and his other paintings and drawings of Midsummer's Night Dream.

Ward, Humphrey, and William Roberts. Romney: A Biographical and Critical Essay with a Catalogue Raisonné of his Works. 2 vols. London, Manchester, Liverpool: Thos. Agnew & Sons and New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1904. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.)

Collection

Dixon, Yvonne Romney. "The Folger Shakespeare Library Collection" Transactions of the Romney Society 1 (1996).

Dixon, Yvonne Romney, and Alex Kidson. "Romney Sketchbooks in Public Collections." Transactions of the Romney Society 8 (2003).

Eltham, Barry Maclean. "A Note on the Romney Collection at Yale University." Transactions of the Romney Society 1 (1996).

Jaffe, Patricia. Drawings by George Romney from the Fitzwilliam Museum. Cambridge, 1977.

Exhibition

Dixon, Yvonne Romney. "Designs from Fancy": George Romney's Shakespearian Drawings. Washington DC: Folger Shakespeare Library, 1999.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Folger Shakespeare Library.

Jaffe, Patricia. Drawings by George Romney from the Fitzwilliam Museum Cambridge. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1977.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum from Kidson, Alex. George Romney, 1734-1802. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2002.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, from 8 Feb. to 21 Apr., the National Portrait Gallery, London, from 30 May to 18 Aug., and the Huntington Art Gallery, San Marino, CA, from 15 Sept. to 1 Dec. 2002.

Studies

Blake and Romney

Bishop, Mochard. "The Poet and the Attorney: The Story of a Legacy." To Geoffrey Keynes: Articles Contributed to The Book Collector to Commemorate His Eighty-Fifth Birthday. London: The Book Collector, 1972. 37-46.¹⁴⁷

On the 1801 letters between William Hayley and Thomas Greene over the ownership of George Romney's painting, John Flaxman Modeling the Bust of William Hayley (1795). As Mochard notes, Blake is conspicuously absent from the letters but alludes to the dispute in his 28 May 1804 letter to Hayley that mentions Greene.

Collé, Nathalie. "Author Portraits of Milton, Authorship, and Canonization." Global Milton and Visual Art. Ed. Angelica Duran and Mario Murgia. Lanham, Boulder, New York, and London: Lexington Books, 2021. 141-64. <Blake (2024)>

Touches on Blake's portrait of Milton for the Eighteen Heads of Poets and on Romney's "John Milton and His Two Daughters" in a wider chapter on portraits of Milton.

Crosby, Mark. "Ah! Romney!: Blake's 'supernaculum' Portrait Engraving of George Romney." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.3 (winter 2013-14): 20 pars. <WBHC 1738>

Describes the rediscovered engraving of Romney's now lost self-portrait that Blake executed for Hayley's Life of George Romney, but which did not appear in the book, and the context of its creation. "In Blake's correspondence there are more references to a portrait engraving of Romney than to any other reproductive engraving he executed" (par. 4). The engraving, which is likely a proof, is now in the collection of Robert N. Essick.

Eisenman, Stephen F. "Black Ops in Art and History." Visual History 3 (2017): 25-56. <Blake (2018)>

Examines the theatricality of contemporary paramilitary operations—black ops—in terms of Romantic-era depictions of "Inquisition, imprisonment and torture" (50) by artists and writers such as Blake, Goya, John Hunter, and George Romney.

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Romney and Blake: Gifts of Grace and Terror." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 201-12. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

¹⁴⁷ Not recorded in BB.

On Romney and his influence on Blake, with references to Hayley.

Loukes, Andrew. “Under a fortunate star’: The Petworth Blakes in Context.” William Blake in Sussex: Visions of Albion. Ed. Andrew Loukes. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2018. 46-61. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Considers the works by Blake held by Earl of Egremont and his wife, Elizabeth Wyndham, at the Petworth House and Egremont’s collecting practices and his relationship to Hayley and Romney.

Paley, Morton D. “George Romney and Ozias Humphry as Collectors of William Blake’s Illuminated Printing.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.3 (winter 2016-17): 49 pars. <Blake (2017)>

“Taken together, the two artists’ purchases compose a substantial portion of Blake’s known sales of illuminated books and associated material in the period from his initial prospectus ‘To the Public’ (E 692-93), dated 10 October 1793, to 1796” (par. 1).

Paley, Morton D. “George Romney’s Shipwrecks.” Nature, Politics, and the Arts: Essays on Romantic Culture for Carl Woodring. Ed. Hermione de Almeida. Newark, Delaware: University of Delaware Press, 2015. 203-23. <WBHC 2498>

On Romney’s depictions of shipwrecks, including The Lapland Witch Watching a Shipwreck in a Storm, The Tempest and Sketch for a Shipwreck, and Blake’s engraving of the latter, with references to the context of William Hayley’s Life of George Romney.

Paley, Morton D. “William Blake, George Romney, and The Life of George Romney, Esq.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.2 (fall 2011): 43 pars. <WBHC 2009>

Traces the production of the volume and especially the illustrations.

Visconti, Joseph. “The Myth of the Commissioned Illuminated Book: George Romney, Isaac D’Israeli, and ‘ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY Designs . . . of Blake’s.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989): 48-74. <BBS 404>

An important article that uses the example of Isaac D’Israeli, who, Visconti suggests, obtained his illuminated books not from Blake himself but from the collection of George Romney, to argue that the illuminated books were not produced individually on commission but in printing sessions.

Romney without Blake

Addison, Joan. “William Cowper and George Romney: Public and Private Men.” The Cowper & Newton Journal 5 (2015): n.p.

On Cowper and Romney’s relationship, touching on Romney’s portrait of Cowper but not Blake’s engraving of it.

Blass, Rebecca. “The Hermit of Earham: William Hayley and his Friendship with George Romney.” Transactions of the Romney Society 5 (2000).

Cross, David A. “George Romney: The Earliest Biography.” Transactions of the Romney Society 9 (2004).

Kidson, Alex, ed. Delightful Regions of the Imagination: Essays on George Romney. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2002.

Includes:

Kidson, Alex. "Writing about Romney." 1-9. A survey of Romney early reception through M.H. Spielmann's British Portrait Painting to the Opening of the Nineteenth Century (London, 1910).

Cross, David A. "The 'Admiral of the Blues': Romney, Depression and Creativity." 10-32. On Romney's struggles with depression, with references to Romney's siblings, William and Thomas Alfonso Hayley, John Flaxman, and Blake's engraving of Romney's The Shipwreck at Cape Good Hope.

Tscherny, Nadia. "'Persons and Property': Romney's Society Portraiture." 33-62.

Postle, Martin. "Factions and Fictions: Romney, Reynolds and the Politics of Patronage." 63-96.

Pressly, William L. "Romney's 'Peculiar Powers for Historical and Ideal Painting.'" 97-130.

West, Shearer. "Romney's Theatricality." 131-58.

Asleson, Robyn. "Antiquity, Mortality and Melancholy in Romney's Portraiture." 159-86.

Dixon, Yvonne Romney. "Romney's Drawings and Academic Tradition." 187-222.

Brett, Helen. "Miss Sarah Rodbard: A Case Study of Romney's Painting Materials and Techniques." 223-50.

Alexander, David. "A Reluctant Communicator: George Romney and the Print Market with a Chronological List of Plates after George Romney." 251

Kidson, Alex. "Romney: What Remains to be Done." Transactions of the Romney Society 17 (2012).

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. "Mary Tighe's Psyche, William Hayley's Psyche, and George Romney's Cupid and Psyche." Romanticism 24.1 (Apr. 2018): 1-21. <Blake (2019)>

"This essay argues that Hayley tried to use [Mary] Tighe's Psyche to complete the unfinished project he wanted to pursue with Romney in the first days of their friendship, which would help him overcome the emotional paralysis he experienced in 1805–1806 as he struggled to move forward on his Life of Romney" (abstract).

Orrom, Martin. "Romney Studies since the Society was Formed in 1994." Transactions of the Romney Society 18 (2013).

Paley, Morton D. "George Romney's Death of General Wolfe." Romantik: Journal for the Study of Romanticsm 6 (2017): 51-62. <Blake (2023)>

On the lost painting.

Transactions of the Romney Society

I have only cited articles here that contain information about collections, catalogues, writing, bibliographies, or other members of Blake's circle. For a complete list of the journal's articles and reviews, see the Romney Society Transactions page at The Romney Society.

Roscoe, William Stanley (1782-1843), Writer, patron of the arts (See also Henry Fuseli)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Donald A. Macnaughton)

Roscoe, Henry. The Life of William Roscoe. London: T. Cadell, 1833.

A digital edition at the webpage, Lord Byron and his Times. Written by his son, the biography also contains references to Fuseli, Hayley, and Cromeck.

Sale Catalogues

Catalogue of the Genuine and Entire Collection of Prints, Books of Prints, &c. the Property of William Roscoe, Esq. Which Will Be Sold by Auction, by Mr. Winstanley, at His Rooms in Marble-Street, Liverpool, on Monday the 9th of September, and ten following days, Sunday excepted. [Liverpool: Winstanley], 1816.

Catalogue of the Very Select and Valuable Library of William Roscoe, Esq. Which Will Be Sold by Auction, by Mr. Winstanley, at His Rooms in Marble Street, Liverpool, on Monday the 19th of August, and Thirteen Following Days (Sundays excepted). [Liverpool: Winstanley], 1816.

Studies

Blake and Roscoe

Goldman, Arnold. "Blake and the Roscoes." Notes and Queries 12.4 (1965): 178-82. <BB #1709>

"Influence of Blake on William Stanley Roscoe" (BB #1709).

Heppner, Christopher. "Notes on Some Items in the Blake Collection at McGill with a Few Speculations around William Roscoe." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 100-08. <BBS 381>

Highlights items in the Lande Collection at McGill.

MacAndrew, Hugh. "Selected Letters from the Correspondence of Henry Fuseli and William Roscoe of Liverpool." Gazette des Beaux-Arts 62 (1963): 204-28. <BB #A2167>

"Fuseli praises Blake's plate of 'Annubis in the first part of the Botanic Garden' in a letter of 17 Aug. 1798 (218)" (BB #A2167).

Read, Dennis M. R.H. Cromeck, Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur. Farnham: Ashgate Publishing, 2011.¹⁴⁸ <WBHC 2573-75>

¹⁴⁸ Incorporates Read's "A New Blake Engraving: Gilchrist and the Cromeck Connection," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (1980), 60-64, <BBS 390>; "The Rival Canterbury Pilgrims of Blake and Cromeck: Herculean Figures in the Carpet," Modern Philology 86.2 (1988), 171-90, <BBS 619, WBHC

Key biography of Robert Harley Cromeck who was Blake's friend and later enemy. Cromeck published Blake's designs for The Grave, published the engraving of Stothard's Canterbury Pilgrims, and was close to the Hunt Circle. The book incorporates much of Read's extensive work on the illustrations to The Grave, the painting and engraving of "The Canterbury Pilgrims," and Blake's relationship to Thomas Stothard.

Tomaselli, Sylvana. Wollstonecraft: Philosophy, Passion, and Politics. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023)>

Offers a lucid distillation of Wollstonecraft's thought, with some biographical and historical context. Slight references to William Roscoe, Henry Fuseli, Joseph Johnson, and Blake.

Roscoe without Blake

Fletcher, Stella. Roscoe and Italy: The Reception of Italian Renaissance History and Culture in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries. Ed. Stell Fletcher. Ashgate, 2012. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2016.

A collection. Some references to Fuseli.

Fletcher, Sarah. "Introduction." 1-22.

Pellegrini, Emanuele. "Between History and Art History: Roscoe's Medici Lives." 23-42.

Lonergan, Corinna Salvadori. Roscoe's Lorenzo: "Restorer of Italian literature." 43-64.

Brooke, Xanthe. "Roscoe's Italian Paintings in the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool." 65-95.

Clough, Cecil H "William Roscoe and his Lorenzo de Medici." 97-118.

Law, John E. "William Roscoe and Lorenzo de Medici as Statesman." 119-36.

Chambers, D.S. "William Roscoe's Life of Leo X and Correspondence with Angelo Fabroni." 137-59.

Wilson, Arline. "William Clarke and the Roscoe Circle." 161-76.

Rundle, David. "Un amico del Roscoe: William Shepherd and the First Modern Life of Poggio Bracciolini (1802)." 177-94.

Gáldy, Andrea M. "William Roscoe and Thomas Coke of Holkham." 195-215.

Bullard, Melissa Meriam. "Roscoe's Renaissance in America." 217-39.

Stansfield, H. "William Roscoe, Botanist." Liverpool Bulletin, Walker Art Gallery 5.1-2 (1955): 19-61.

2575>; "Thomas Stothard's The Pilgrimage to Canterbury (1806): A Study in Promotion and Popular Taste," Chaucer Illustrated: Five Hundred Years of The Canterbury Tales in Pictures, ed. William K. Finley and Joseph Rosenblum (2003), 211-31; "The Context of Blake's 'Public Address': Cromeck and The Chalcographic Society," Philological Quarterly 60.1 (1981), 69-86, <BBS 618>; "Practicing 'The Necessity of Purification': Cromeck, Roscoe, and Reliques of Burns," Studies in Bibliography 35 (1982), 306-19; and "Cromeck, Cunningham, and Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song: A Case of Literary Duplicity," Studies in Bibliography 40 (1987), 171-90.

On Roscoe's Liverpool Botanic Garden, his lectures to the Linnean Society London, and his letters on botany.

Sharp, William (1749-1824), Engraver, follower of Joanna Southcott (See also Antinomianism and Popular Millenarianism)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Richard Sharp)

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

“Mr. Wiliam Sharp.” The New Monthly Magazine and Universal Register (1 Sep. 1824): 426-27.

Obituary.

Baker, William Spohr. William Sharp, Engraver, with a Descriptive Catalogue of His Works. Philadelphia: Gebbie & Barrie, 1875.

A life and catalogue description, but no reproductions.

Studies

Garrett, Clarke. Respectable Folly: Millenarians and the French Revolution in France and England. John Hopkins University Press, 1975.

A classic study that includes Blake, Swedenborg, Richard Brothers, Joanna Southcott, William Sharp, John Wright, and William Bryan.

Harrison, J.F.C. The Second Coming: Popular Millenarianism 1780-1850. London and Henley, 1979. <BBS 501>

Remains an excellent survey of millenarianism. In addition to the chapters on Richard Brothers and Johanna Southcott, it discusses Swedenborg, the engraver William Sharp, and Blake.

Hopkins, James K. A Woman to Deliver Her People: Joanna Southcott and English Millenarianism in an Era of Revolution. Austin: University of Texas Press, 1982. <BBS 514>

A good study. Considers Blake's relationship to Southcott and her followers (who included William Sharp, William Own Pugh, and John Pye), with references to Swedenborg and Richard Brothers.

Niblett, Matthew. Prophecy and the Politics of Salvation in Late Georgian England: Theology and Apocalyptic Vision of Joanna Southcott. London and New York: I.B. Taurus, 2015.

Slight reference to Blake but substantial discussion of Sharp and his relationship to Southcott.

Paley, Morton D. “William Blake.” The Apocalyptic Sublime. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1986. 71-100. <BBS 598>

Considers Blake's visual depictions of apocalyptic imagery, including the early paintings, War unchained by an Angel, Pestilence, and A Breach in the City; Europe; the Night Thought designs; and the paintings of Revelation in the Bible watercolors. (The wider book details well how other artists of Blake's era, e.g., Benjamin West, Philippe Jacques de Loutherbourg, J.M.W. Turner, and John Martin, depicted similar subjects. It also discusses millenarian figures like Thomas Spence, John Wright, William Bryan, and William Sharp.)

Rix, Robert. "Joanna Southcott and the Strange Effects of Printing: Publishing Prophecies in the Early Nineteenth Century." History of Religions 55.1 (2015): 65-88.

Explores Southcott's utilization of print, including the role of William Sharp.

Wright, Eugene Patrick. A Catalogue of the Joanna Southcott Collection at the University of Texas. Austin: University of Texas at Austin, 1968.

In addition to Southcott, includes many references to William Sharp and William Owen Pughe.

Smith, John Thomas (1766–1833), Friend and biographer of Blake (See also John Thomas Smith's "Blake")

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Lucy Pelz)

Writing

Antiquities of London and Its Environs: Containing Views of Houses, Monumnets, Statues, and Other Curious Remains from Antiquity, Engraved from Original Drawings, Communicated by Several members of the Society of Antiquaries. London: T. Sewell et al., 1800.

Antiquities of Westminster; the Old Palace; St. Stephen's Chapel, \(Now the House of Commons\). Containing 246 Engravings of Topographical Objects, of which 122 No Longer Remain. London: J.T. Smith, 1807.

A Book for a Rainy Day, or, Recollections of the Events of the Years 1766-1833. London, 1845. 2nd ed. London, 1845. 3rd ed. Revised. London, 1861. London: Methuen & Co., 1905. <BB #2722>

Contains references to Blake pp.81-82 (1st ed.); 81-83 (2nd ed.); 83-84 (3rd ed.); 96-97 (4th ed.).

Etchings of Remarkable Beggars, Itinerant Traders and Other Persons of Notoriety in London and Its Environs. London: John Thomas Smith, 1815.

Nollekens and His Time: Comprehending a Life of that Celebrated Sculptor; and Memoirs of Several Contemporary Artists from the Time of Roubiliac, Hogarth, and Reynolds, to that of Fuseli, Flaxman, and Blake. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London: H. Colburn, 1828. <BB #2723, WBHC 2686-87>

Includes Smith's Life of "Blake." An extra-illustrated edition is at the Yale Center for British Arts. Call no. MSS 10.

[Remarks on Rural Scenery: with Twenty Etchings of Cottages, from Nature: and Some Observations and Precepts Relative to the Picturesque \[sic\].](#) [London]: Nathaniel Smith, 1797.

Blake and Smith

Wein, Toni. Monstrous Fellowship: "Pagan, Turk and Jew" in English Popular Culture, 1780–1845. Oxford: Peter Lang, 2018. <Blake \(2020\)>

Shows that the phrase that Blake applied to Fuseli originated as early as 1548. Takes the Gordon Riots as its point of historical departure for an examination of the treatment of Irish Catholics, Muslims, and Jews in literature (including the work of Smith) and society.

Smith without Blake

Jensen, Oskar Cox. "Joseph Johnson's Hat, or, The Storm on Tower Hill." Studies in Romanticism 58.4 (winter 2019): 545-69. <Blake (2021)>

An essay on the subject of Smith's print "Joseph Johnson" (1815), whom Smith also describes in his Vagabondiana (1817). Johnson was "a disabled ex-sailor, ballad-singer, and busker of Afro-Caribbean origins" (545).

Peltz, Lucy. "Aestheticizing the Ancestral City: Antiquarianism, Topography and the Representation of London in the Long Eighteenth Century." Art History 22.4 (1999): 472-94.

On Smith's engravings of antiquarian London.

Stedman, John Gabriel (1744–97), Friend (See also Race, Slavery, \(Post-\)Colonialism, and Orientalism, Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Richard Price)

Price, Richard. Representations of Slavery: John Gabriel Stedman's "Minnesota" Manuscripts. University of Minnesota Press: The Associates of the James Ford Bell Library, 1989.

A useful (and entertaining) introduction to the manuscript of Stedman's Narrative and how it came to be at the University of Minnesota, highlighting some differences with the published versions and Blake's engravings, which are reproduced. Also includes a reproduction of Stedman's only surviving watercolor sketch.

Thompson, Stanbury. John Gabriel Stedman: A Study of His Life and Times. Stapleford, Notts: Thompson and Co., 1966.

van Gelder, Roelof. Dichter in de jungle: John Gabriel Stedman (1744–1797). Amsterdam: Atlas Contact, 2018. In Dutch. <Blake (2020)>

A new biography of Stedman.

Writing

Hardesty, Jared Ross, ed. and intro. The Surinam Writings of John Gabriel Stedman. Indianapolis: Hackett, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

An edition of Stedman's Surinam diary, with excerpts of the published Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam (1796) for comparison. Blake is mentioned briefly (p. xxxv), and "A Coromantyn Free Negro, or Ranger, armed" and "Europe supported by Africa & America" are among the illustrations reproduced.

Price, Richard, and Sally Price. "John Gabriel Stedman's 'Journal of a Voyage to the West Indies in ye Year 1772. In a Poetical Epistle to a Friend.'" Nieuwe West-Indische Gids / New West Indian Guide 59.3-4 (1985): 185-96.

A transcription with annotations of Stedman's poem, which was bound with the original manuscript for his Narrative and which recounts the early part of his journey to Surinam.

Price, Richard, and Sally Price, ed. and intro. John Gabriel Stedman, Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam. Baltimore and London: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1988. <BBS 257, WBHC 909>

A transcription of Stedman's 1790 manuscript, which includes "new text and reproductions of all the plates save the engraved title-page" (BBS 257).

Price, Richard, and Sally Price, ed. Stedman's Surinam: Life in Eighteenth-Century Slave Society. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1992. <WBHC 3050>

An abridgment of their edition of Stedman's published manuscript of the Narrative.

Stedman, John Gabriel. Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam. Barr, MA: University of Massachusetts Press, 1971. 1972 (a reissue). <BB #499F, BBS 256>

A modern edition that includes both 1796 volumes and their engravings.

Thompson, Stanbury, ed. The Journal of John Gabriel Stedman. London, 1962. <BB #2749>

Includes his references to Blake (see BB) and an account of his time in Surinam.

Studies

Blake and Stedman

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Stedman as Costumiers: Curious Copies of Blake's Engravings in 1821." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013): 21 pars. <WBHC 2009>

Documents how Blake's engravings were copied and adapted in new designs for Giulio Ferrario seventeen-volume work, Il costume antico e moderno [in Italian] and Le costume ancien et moderne [in French] (1821).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Napoleon Rediivivus." Notes and Queries 38.3 (1991): 293-94. <BBS 366>

Suggests that William Thompson (who edited Stedman's Narrative for Johnson) may have been source of Blake's notion that the original Napoleon had been killed and replaced.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 1995." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.4 (spring 1996): 145-46. <WBHC 1662-63>

Discusses Stedman's suspicion of Joseph Johnson.

Blessin, Joseph. "Vegetable Pornography: The 'Moral' (Scientific Debate Surrounding Francesco Bartolozzi's 'stipple Gardens' and William Blake's 'Vegetable Earth' in John Gabriel Stedman Surinam Travelogue [sic].)" Rethinking the Erotic: Eroticism in Literature, Film, Art and Society. Leiden: Brill, 2019. 87-99. <Blake (2025)>

Criticizes Marcus Wood's reading of the Stedman illustrations: "[C]onflating Blake and Bartolozzi, as Wood does, highly problematic" (96).

Bogan, James. "Vampire Bats & Blake's Spectre." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.1 (summer 1976): 32-33. <BBS 378>

Suggests that imagery associated with the Spectre stems from Stedman's depiction of vampire bats.

Bohls, Elizabeth A. "Stedman's Tropics: The Mercenary as Naturalist." Slavery and the Politics of Place: Representing the Colonial Caribbean, 1770-1833. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2014. 54-81. <WBHC 3050>

"I examine two of the Narrative's interwoven strands that represent the ways in which people in varying relationships to the colonial regime lived and worked in the forests of Suriname" (55). There is also an analysis of the engraving, "The skinning of the Aboma Snake, shot by Cap. Stedman."

Brienen, Rebecca P. "Joanna and her Sisters: Mulatto Women in Print and Image, 1602-1796." Early Modern Women 10.2 (2016): 65-94.¹⁴⁹

Considers depictions of mulatto women, focusing in the second half of the article on Joanna in Stedman's Narrative. The Blake engravings are touched upon, but Brienen emphasizes Stedman's role as the illustrator.

Cutter, Martha J. "Apotropaic Images and Pornotroping in Stedman's Narrative of a Five Years' Expedition to Surinam." The Illustrated Slave: Empathy, Graphic Narrative, and the Visual Culture of the Transatlantic Abolition Movement, 1800–1852. Athens, GA: University of Georgia Press, 2017. 32-47. <Blake (2020)>

Includes a discussion of both Stedman's text and Blake's engravings.

Erdman, David V. "Blake's Vision of Slavery." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3-4 (1952): 242-52.¹⁵⁰ <BB #1569, WBHC 1993>

A foundational article on The Visions of the Daughters of Albion and the Stedman commercial engravings and what they suggest about Blake's views of race and slavery. It is most substantially challenged in David Bindman's "Blake's Vision of Slavery Revisited."

Gallant, Christine. "Blake's Coded Designs of Slave Revolts." Wordsworth Circle 42.3 (summer 2011): 212-17. <WBHC 2049>

She suggests that the Continental Prophecies, in their designs especially, depict the Haitian Revolution and were influenced by the Stedman designs.

Haywood, Iain. "John Gabriel Stedman, Narrative of a Five Years' Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam (1796)." Bloody Romanticism: Spectacular Violence and the

¹⁴⁹ Not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁵⁰ Incorporated in Erdman's Blake: Prophet Against Empire (1954), <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>.

Politics of Representation, 1776-1832. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 36-43.¹⁵¹

Considers the violence against enslaved people in Stedman's text, including scenes engraved by Blake.

Johnson, Mary Lynne. "Coleridge's Prose and a Blake Plate in Stedman's Narrative: Unfastening the 'Hooks & eyes' of Memory." Wordsworth Circle 13.1 (1982): 36-38. <BBS 527>

On Coleridge's references to reading Stedman and his possible reaction to the engraving, "A Negro hung alive by the Ribs to a Gallows."

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake's Engravings for Gay's Fables." To Geoffrey Keynes: Articles Contributed to The Book Collector to Commemorate His Eighty-Fifth Birthday. London: The Book Collector, 1972. 47-52. <BB #2015>

On Blake's alterations to original drawings in his engravings, highlighting the Stedman and Gay engravings.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake's Spectre." Book Collector 28.1 (spring 1979). 60-66. <BBS 422>

"The effect of the vampire-bat described in Stedman's Surinam (1796) on Blake's changing use of 'spectres'" (BBS 422).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "William Blake and John Gabriel Stedman." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 98-104. ¹⁵² <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

On Stedman and his diary entries on Blake.

Klarer, Mario. "Humanitarian Pornography: John Gabriel Stedman's Narrative of a Five Years Expedition Against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam \(1796\)." New Literary History 36 (2005): 559-87. <WBHC 3051>

"I will use psychoanalytic film theory to account for some of the pornographic mechanisms at work in the Narrative and its illustrations, as well as apply Burkean concepts of the sublime as a possible contemporaneous theoretical source for Stedman's text" (559).

Lange, Thomas L. "Blake in American Almanacs." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 94-96. <BBS 390>

On the reprinting of Stedman plates, "The skinning of the Aboma snake, shot by Capt. Stedman" and "The Sculls of Lieut. Lepper, and Six of his Men," in The People's Almanac (1834, 1836).

Lee, Debbie. "Intimacy as Imitation: Monkeys in Blake's Engravings for Stedman's Narrative." Slavery and the Romantic Imagination. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2002. 66-119. <WBHC 2316>

¹⁵¹ Not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁵² Revised version of essay of the same title, TLS (20 May 1965), <BB #2041>.

Examines Blake's engravings of monkeys in light of "the new accounts of race science published in London in the time" (72).

Lezra, Esther. "'Neptune': Literal and Visual Translations of Black Revolution into White." The Colonial Art of Demonizing Others: A Global Perspective. New York: Routledge, 2014. 23-50.

Suggests that Neptune, the man being tortured in the engraving, "The Execution of Breaking on the Rack," is part of the inspiration for Orc.

Linebaugh, Peter, and Marcus Rediker. "Blake's African Orc." "Conclusion: Tyger! Tyger!" The Many-Headed Hydra: Sailors, Slaves, Commoners, and the Hidden History of the Revolutionary Atlantic. Boston: Beacon Press, 2000. 327-54. <WBHC 2334>

The section on Blake in the conclusion reads his depictions of slavery and revolution in the Stedman illustrations and the Continental Prophecies in terms of the Black Atlantic.

Matthews, Susan. "Africa and Utopia: Refusing a 'local habitation.'" The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 104-20. <WBHC 1857-62>

Contrasts Blake's depictions of Africa and Africans within his poetry (including "Little Black Boy") with writers, including George Cumberland, Swedenborgians, William Hayley, John Stedman, Ottobah Cugoano, Olaudah Equiano, and others.

Mellor, Anne K. "Sex, Violence, and Slavery: Blake and Wollstonecraft." Huntington Library Quarterly 58:3-4 (1995): 345-70. <WBHC 2176-77>

Key examination of Visions in relationship to Wollstonecraft. "I will explore what Blake meant by 'slavery' in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and what he considered to be the best way to 'free' oneself from that condition. And I will compare Blake's 'solution' to the problem of female slavery with that proposed by Wollstonecraft" (345). Also considers Stedman's view of slavery.

Parrish, Susan Scott. "Embodying African Knowledge in Colonial Surinam: Two William Blake Engravings in Stedman's 1796 Narrative." Slave Portraiture in the Atlantic World. Ed. Agnes Lugo-Ortiz and Angela Rosenthal. New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013. 257-81. <WBHC 2508>

Focuses on "A Private Marine of Col. Fourgeoud's Corps" and "The Celebrated Gramman Quacy": "Together, Stedman and Blake practiced a form of Romantic containment of African authority to the forest environment" (277).

Peh, Li Qi. "Stedman's Horror, Blake's Indifference." ELH 90.2 (2023): 367-91. <Blake (2024)>

Argues that Stedman relied on Blake's engraving to lessen the horror that the pro-slavery William Thompson's rewriting of Stedman's text sought to elicit.

Price, Richard. "Dialogical Encounters in a Space of Death." New World Orders: Violence, Sanction, and Authority in the Colonial Americas. Ed. John Smolenski and Thomas J. Humphrey. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2005. 47-67.

"I [...] wish to explore the world of the eighteenth-century 'victims'—the people depicted by Stedman, Blake, and others—and attempt to 'read through' available discourses [...]" to try to understand re-present something of what they might have been thinking and feeling, and to explore the broader implications” (48).

Ritchie, Caroline Anjali. “Symbols of embodied agency: The Reception of William Blake's Engravings for John Gabriel Stedman's Narrative \(1796\) in Contemporary Art and Visual Culture.” 30 par. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.2 (winter 2024-25): 30 pars. <Blake (2025)>

Considers the reception of the designs “in the works of British and American contemporary artists Sokari Douglas Camp, Jazzmen Lee-Johnson, and Hew Locke” (par. 6). There is also a thoughtful coda, “On Reproduction,” addressing issues associated with reproducing the engravings (pars. 26-30).

Rubenstein, Anne, and Camilla Townsend. “Revolted Negroes and the Devilish Principle: William Blake and Conflicting Visions of Boni’s Wars in Surinam, 1772-1796.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 273-98. <WBHC 1950-53>

A very thoughtful essay that, in addition to considering Stedman’s Narrative, Blake’s illustrations, and various anti-slavery discourses, highlights the wars led by Boni and the Aluku and the impact slavery and colonialism still have on their descendants today.

Thomas, Helen. “William Blake: Spiritualism and Abolitionism” in “Romanticism and Abolitionism: Mary Wollstonecraft, William Blake, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, and William Wordsworth” and “John Stedman’s Redemption and the Dynamics of Miscegenation” in “Cross-Cultural Contact: John Stedman, Thomas Jefferson and the Slaves.” Romanticism and Slaves Narratives: Transatlantic Testimonies. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2000. 114-24. 125-33. <WBHC 2759-60, 3051>

Blake’s and Stedman’s relationships to slavery, racism, and abolitionism are discussed briefly in two adjacent sections in different chapters, with Blake’s commercial illustrations for Stedman referenced in both.

Thomas, Sarah. “Unmasking ‘simple truth.’” Witnessing Slavery: Art and Travel in the Age of Abolition. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2019. 99-123. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

A very engaging analysis of both Stedman’s text and Blake’s engravings within the context of the late eighteenth-century abolition movement and visual culture in a wider book on visual representations of slavery.

Wood, Marcus. Slavery, Empathy and Pornography. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2002.¹⁵³

An influential reading of the fusion of sentimentality and pornography in depictions of slavery and Blackness. There are chapters on Stedman’s Narrative and the illustrations

¹⁵³ Incorporates Wood’s “John Gabriel Stedman, William Blake, Francesco Bartolozzi and Empathetic Pornography in the Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam,” An Economy of Colour: Visual Culture and the Atlantic World 1660-1830, ed. Geoff Quilley and Kay Dian Kriz (Manchester: Manchester University Press.; N.Y.: Palgrave, 2003), 129-49, <WBHC 2878>. The book is not recorded in WBHC.

(with a comparison of Blake's and Bartolozzi's engravings) and on Romantic poets and slavery, including Blake, John Newton, and William Cowper.

Youngquist, Paul. "Possessing Beauty." Monstrosities: Bodies and British Romanticism. Minneapolis and London: University of Minnesota Press, 2003.¹⁵⁴ 57-88.¹⁵⁵

Discusses Blake's representations of African bodies and beauty in the engravings for Stedman in light of racist anatomy texts and the aesthetic theories of Reynolds.

Stedman without Blake

Boe, Ana de Freitas. "John Gabriel Stedman, Heteronormativity, and White Men's Gender Trouble." Heteronormativity in Eighteenth-Century Literature and Culture. Ed. Ana de Freitas Boe and Abby Coykendall. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2014.

Gikandi, Simon. "Close Encounters: Taste and the Taint of Slavery." Slavery and Culture of Taste. Princeton and Oxford: Princeton University Press, 2011. 145-87.

The last section pp. 183-87 considers Stedman, with Blake's engravings reproduced but not discussed beyond a sentence.

Gwilliam, Tassie. "'scenes of Horror', Scenes of Sensibility: Sentimentality and Slavery in John Gabriel Stedman's Narrative of a Five Years Expedition Against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam.' ELH 65.3 (1998): 653-73. <WBHC 3050>

"Because the story of Stedman and Joanna documents a series of negotiations with problematic facts-most vitally the fact that Stedman entered into the quintessentially colonial economic/sexual agreement of formal concubinage with Joanna-the text registers with peculiar clarity the compromises and coercion common in the sentimental love plot, both as a genre and as erotic wish-fulfillment (654).

Hoogbergen, Wim. The Boni Maroon Wars in Suriname. Leiden, New York, København, Köln: Brill, 1990.

Usefully contextualizes Stedman's Narrative in terms of the Maroon Wars.

Iwanisziw, Susan B. "American Slave-Concubines and the Labor of Assimilation: The Example of John Gabriel Stedman's Joanne and Toussaint Charboneau's Sacagawea." Topic: The Washington and Jefferson College Review 55 (2007): 37-54. <WBHC 3050>

Iwanisziw, Susan B. "Intermarriage in Late-Eighteenth-Century British Literature: Currents in Assimilation and Exclusion." Eighteenth-Century Life 31.2 (2007): 56-82.¹⁵⁶

Considers depictions of intermarriage in Stedman's Narrative alongside "George Colman the Younger's comic opera Inkle and Yariko (1787)" and "Maria Edgeworth's 'moral tale' Belinda (1810)" (57).

¹⁵⁴ Incorporates Youngquist's "In the face of beauty: Camper, Bell, Reynolds, Blake," Word & Image 16 (2000), 319-34, <WBHC 2909>.

¹⁵⁵ The book is not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁵⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

Kim, Lingold, and Mary Caton. “Peculiar Animations: Listening to Afro-Atlantic Music in Caribbean Travel Narratives.” Early American Literature 52.3 (2017): 623-50. <Blake (2018)>

Examines Stedman’s and others’ efforts to represent “early African diasporic musical life” in musical notation.

Polcha, Elizabeth. “Voyeur in the Torrid Zone: John Gabriel Stedman’s Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam, 1773–1838.” Early American Literature 54.3 (2019): 673-710. <Blake (2020)>

“This article reads John Gabriel Stedman’s Narrative of a Five Years Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam through the literary and scientific cultures of natural history, demonstrating how Stedman’s acts of sexual domination and exploitation in Suriname are veiled in the rhetoric of science” (abstract).

Pratt, Mary Louise. “Eros and Abolition.” Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation. New York and London: Routledge, 1992. 2nd ed. New York and London: Routledge, 2008. 84-106.

An analysis of Joanna and Stedman’s relationship.

Richardson, R.C. Household Servants in Early Modern England. Manchester and New York: Manchester University Press, 2010.

Touches on Stedman’s relationship to his servants in Devon.

Senior, Emily. “Skin, Textuality and Colonial Feeling.” The Caribbean and the Medical Imagination, 1764–1834: Slavery, Disease and Colonial Modernity. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2018. 89-121.¹⁵⁷ <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

Discussion of Stedman and Joanna. Passing reference to Blake.

Sharpe, Jenny. Ghosts of Slavery: A Literary Archaeology of Black Women’s Lives. Minneapolis and London: University of Minnesota Press, 2003.

“[T]acks the changing representation of Joanna in Stedman’s private and published writings” in relationship to “other colonial texts from the same era” (46).

Stothard, Thomas (1755-1834), Friend and Enemy, Illustrator, Painter (See also Commercial Book Illustrations, Chaucer’s Canterbury Pilgrims, and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, M.G. Sullivan)

Writing

Carey, William Paulet. Critical Description of the Procession of Chaucers Pilgrims to Canterbury, Painted by Thomas Stothard, Esq. R.A. London, 1808, 1818. Rpt. in Chaucer Illustrated: Five Hundred Years of The Canterbury Tales in Pictures, ed. William K. Finley and Joseph Rosenblum. New Castle, DE: Oak Knoll Press and London: The British Library, 2003. 379-422. <BB #1338, WBHC 1825>

¹⁵⁷ Incorporates a version of Senior’s “‘Perfectly Whole’: Skin and Text in John Gabriel Stedman’s Narrative of a Five Years Expedition Against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam,” Eighteenth-Century Studies 44.1 (2010), 39-56, <WBHC 3051>.

Sale Catalogues with Blake's Works

Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Christie. A Catalogue of the Beautiful Original Sketches, and some finished Pictures, with a large collection of Drawings and Studies in Colours and Indian Ink, of that Charming Artist, Thomas Stothard, Esq. R.A., Deceased. London, 1834. <BB #546>

Christie and Manson. Catalogue of the Valuable and Very Interesting Collection of Pictures, Drawings, by Ancient English Masters, Engravings and Books, Of that well-known Amateur Francis Duroveray, Esq. Deceased; . . . a series of beautiful Compositions by Stothard and Smirke, illustrative of Shakespeare, &c . . . The Engravings Comprise Fine Proofs of the beautiful Works published by Mr. Duroveray, and of Bartolozzi. Also, the Small Library of Books . . . London, 1850.

Catalogues

The two major catalogues of Stothard's work are:

Bennett, Shelley M. Thomas Stothard: The Mechanisms of Art Patronage in England circa 1800. Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1988. <BBS 366>

Coxhead, A.C. Thomas Stothard, R.A.: An Illustrated Monograph. London: A.H. Bullen, 1906. Thomas Stothard, R.A.: His Life and Work. London: Sidwick and Jackson, 1909.

G.E. Bentley, Jr. records several more illustrations in his review of Bennett's book, and Alexander S. Gourlay's "Six Illustrations by Stothard" added more. Robert N. Essick's annual "Blake in the Marketplace" records newly discovered illustrations by Stothard.

Studies

Blake and Stothard

Behrendt, Stephen C. "The Best Criticism: Imitation as Criticism in the Eighteenth Century." Eighteenth-Century Theory and Interpretation 24 (1983): 3-22. <BBS 362>

On Blake's and Reynolds's similar ideas of copying and of imitation, with a discussion of how Blake's commercial engravings (of, especially, Stothard) were a type of imitation.

Bentley, E.B. "Blake's Elusive Ladies." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 30-33. <BBS 409-10>

Documents her search for the volume in which the commercial engravings, "A Lady in the full Dress, & another in the most fashionable Undress now worn" and "The Morning Amusements of her Royal Highness the Princess Royal & her 4 Sisters," (after Stothard) appeared.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's First Arrest, at Upnor Castle." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.3 (winter 1997-98): 82-84. <WBHC 1671>

Reexamines Blake's first arrest with Thomas Stothard and (likely) James Parker in 1780 in light of Thomas Stothard's etching, "A Scene on the Medway" (c. 1780-81).

Bowden, Betsy. "Transportation to Canterbury: The Rival Envisionings by Stothard and Blake." Studies in Medievalism 11 (2001): 73-111. <WBHC 1778-79>

"An analysis of the horses in Stothard's painting and Blake's engraving, with the premise that reason is the rider and passion the horse" (WBHC 1779).

Bowden, Betsy. "Visual Portraits of the Canterbury Pilgrims 1484(?)–1809." The Ellesmere Chaucer: Essays in Interpretation. Ed. Martin Stevens and Daniel Woodward. San Marino: Huntington Library; Tokyo: Yushodo Co., Ltd, 1995. 171–204 <WBHC 1778>

The section on Blake is titled, "Reading/Riding between the Lines: Mortimer, Stothard, and Blake," 193–200. "I will discuss Mortimer's drawing and Stothard's frontispiece primarily as transitional pieces situated between the elaborate, accessible engravings of the Urry edition and the two rival paintings by Stothard and Blake" (193).

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 2005." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 178–79. <WBHC 1705, 3052>

Describes and reproduces Stothard's pencil sketch, "Mr Blake Engraver by | Stothard" (c. 1780).

Gourlay, Alexander S. ""Art Delivered": Stothard's The Sable Venus and Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Journal of Eighteenth-Century Studies 31.4 (2008): 529–50. <WBHC 2095>

Suggests that Visions may be responding to Thomas Stothard's lost painting, "The Voyage of the Sable Venus," which illustrated Isaac Teale's poem, "The Sable Venus: An Ode" (1794).

Gourlay, Alexander S. "'Idolatry or Politics': Blake's Chaucer, the Gods of Priam, and the Powers of 1809." Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 97–147. <WBHC 2095–98>

Argues that "Blake illustrated Chaucer not as an original project inspired entirely by the genius of a predecessor poet, or as a way to cheat Cromeek or Stothard, but as an overt response to Cromeek's challenge, and as a way to do battle with him and all he represented in the world of art and society at large" (102).

Greenberg, Mark L. "The Canterbury Pilgrims by Stothard and Blake: An Account with Reproductions in 'The Architect'." Notes and Queries 23.9 (1976): 401–02. <BBS 494>

About an article in the journal, The Architect (23 Nov. 1878), regarding Stothard and Blake, which drew on Gilchrist's Life.

Hamlyn, Robin, and Andrew Moore. William Blake: Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims. Norfolk: Norfolk Museums Service, 1993. <WBHC 1248>

A catalogue of the 1993 Norfolk exhibition that includes "new evidence, in the shape of drawings by Stothard for an engraving of Chaucer's Pilgrims in 1793, that leads Robin Hamlyn to conclude that 'Cromeek and Stothard can be exonerated from the charge [by Blake] of plagiarism' (4)" (WBHC 1248).

Kiralis, Karl. "William Blake as an Intellectual and Spiritual Guide to Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims." Blake Studies 1.2 (spring 1969): 139–90. <BB #1218.10>

A detailed analysis of Blake's design, with references to Stothard's version.

Matthews, Susan. "Illustrated Poetry in the Romantic Period." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 356-73. <Blake (2024)>

On the relative novelty of the idea of "illustrations" in the Romantic period, with references to Blake's illustrations to Gray and Young, Stothard, Fuseli, Boydell, and Charlotte Malkin.

Mertz, J.B. "Blake v. Cromeck: A Contemporary Ruling." Modern Philology 99.1 (2001): 66-77. <WBHC 2401>

Considers the implications of the fact that Francis Douce owned the prospectuses for both Blake and Stothard's Chaucer prints (see Mertz, "Unrecorded"), but only bought Blake's. Reproduces copy B of Blake's Chaucer: The Canterbury Pilgrims (1809).

Mertz, J.B. "An Unrecorded Copy of Blake's 1809 Chaucer Prospectus." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.3 (winter 1998-99): 73-74. <WBHC 1676>

Records Francis Douce's copy of Blake's 1809 Chaucer Prospectus, with references to Stothard and Cromeck.

Miner, Paul. "Blake's Enemies of Art." Notes and Queries 58.4 (Dec. 2011): 537-40. <WBHC 2413>

On Blake's and Stothard's Canterbury Pilgrims designs.

Read, Dennis M. R. H. Cromeck, Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur. Farnham: Ashgate Publishing, 2011. <WBHC 2573-75>¹⁵⁸

Key biography of Robert Harley Cromeck who was Blake's friend and later enemy. Cromeck published Blake's designs for The Grave, published the engraving of Stothard's Canterbury Pilgrims, and was close to the Hunt Circle. The book incorporates much of Read's extensive work on the illustrations to The Grave, the painting and engraving of "The Canterbury Pilgrims," and Blake's relationship to Thomas Stothard.

Reed, Dennis M. "Thomas Stothard's The Pilgrimage to Canterbury (1806): A Study in Promotion and Popular Taste." Chaucer Illustrated: Five Hundred Years of The Canterbury Tales in Pictures. Ed. William K. Finley and Joseph Rosenblum (New Castle [Delaware]: Oak Knoll Press, and London: The British Library, 2003. 211-31. <WBHC 3057-58>

An account of Stothard's painting, highlight the role of Cromeck.

¹⁵⁸ Incorporates Read's "A New Blake Engraving: Gilchrist and the Cromeck Connection," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (1980), 60-64; "The Rival Canterbury Pilgrims of Blake and Cromeck: Herculean Figures in the Carpet," Modern Philology 86.2 (1988), 171-90; "Thomas Stothard's The Pilgrimage to Canterbury (1806): A Study in Promotion and Popular Taste," Chaucer Illustrated: Five Hundred Years of The Canterbury Tales in Pictures, ed. William K. Finley and Joseph Rosenblum (2003), 211-31; "The Context of Blake's 'Public Address': Cromeck and The Chalcographic Society," Philological Quarterly 60.1 (1981), 69-86; "Practicing 'The Necessity of Purification': Cromeck, Roscoe, and Reliques of Burns," Studies in Bibliography 35 (1982), 306-19; and "Cromeck, Cunningham, and Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song: A Case of Literary Duplicity," Studies in Bibliography 40 (1987), 171-90.

Stothard, Robert T. "Stothard and Blake." Athenaeum 1886 (19 Dec. 1863): 838. <BB #2775>

A letter by Stothard's son: "I cannot admit Mr. Gilchrist's assertion that there was any apparent ill-will between my father and Blake" (BB #2775).

Ward, Aileen. "Canterbury Revisited: The Blake-Cromek Controversy." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.3 (winter 1988-89): 80-92. <BBS 403>

Revisits Blake's controversy with Cromek to side with Cromek, concluding that "the belief which apparently began to grow on [Blake] after 1810 that Cromek and Stothard had stolen his idea for a painting from Chaucer is no more delusive than a number of other suspicions of his friends and foes that he vented at the time" (88). Ward is answered by G.E. Bentley's "They take great liberty's': Blake Reconfigured by Cromek and Modern Critics—The Arguments from Silence."

Stothard without Blake

Bennett, Shelley M. Thomas Stothard: The Mechanisms of Art Patronage in England circa 1800. Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1988. <BBS 366>

The standard account of Stothard's life and work. It includes a list of Stothard's illustrations (205-09), which G.E. Bentley, Jr. added to in his review, with Alexander S. Gourlay's "Six Illustrations by Stothard" adding six more.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Coleridge, Stothard, and the First Illustration of 'Christabel.'" Studies in Romanticism 20.1 (1981): 111-16.

Analyzes the passage illustrated and includes a letter to Stothard by an unknown writer recounting Coleridge's thoughts on Stothard and the illustration.

Blewitt, David. "The English Rediscovery of Defoe: Stothard." The Illustration of Robinson Crusoe 1719-1920. Gerrard's Cross: Colin Smythe, 1995. 45-64. <WBHC 3054>

"Also pp. 196-98 listing editions of Robinson Crusoe with Stothard designs" (WBHC 3054).

Bray, Mrs. [Anna Elizabeth]. Life of Thomas Stothard, R.A. London: John Murray, 1851. <BB #1973, WBHC 1783-84> Beginning of book to page 112. Page 113 to end of book.

An early biography of Stothard by his daughter-in-law. Describes the 1780 arrest of Blake, Stothard, and Ogleby [probably, Parker] as well as Stothard's early designs, many of which Blake engraved. Ignores Blake in its description of Stothard's painting of the Canterbury Pilgrims. (For a full account of the controversy, see Dennis M. Read's R.H. Cromek: Engraver, Editor, and Entrepreneur.) WBHC describes an extra-illustrated edition of Bray (pp. 3054-56).¹⁵⁹

Chapman, Alison. "Nineteenth-Century Illustrated Poetry: Mis-en-Page and the Visual Rhythms of Seriality." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 450-70. <Blake (2024)>

¹⁵⁹ Among the extra illustrations was Object 10, Bentley pl 4., in America MPI.

On the intersection of word and image, referencing Stothard's vignette in Samuel Rogers's Italy, A Poem (1830) in addition to many other examples.

Coxhead, A.C. Thomas Stothard, R.A.: An Illustrated Monograph. London: A.H. Bullen, 1906.
Thomas Stothard, R.A.: His Life and Work. London: Sidwick and Jackson, 1909.

Gives a biographical sketch and offers an early and still important catalogue of Stothard's designs "compiled chiefly from the collections in the British and Victoria and Albert Museums" (32). The 1909 edition is retitled without updates.

Eimer, Christopher. "Thomas Stothard and the British Neo-Classical Medal." Designs on Posterity: Drawings for Medals: Papers Read at FIDEM 1992, the 23rd Congress of the Fédération internationale de la Médaille held in London, 16-19 September 1992. London: British Art Medal Trust, 1999. <WBHC 3056>

Essick, Robert N. Rev. of John Heath, The Heath Family Engravers 1779-1878. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.2 (fall 1994): 67-71. <WBHC 1653>

Includes an appendix: "Unrecorded Book Illustrations by Thomas Stothard."

Finlay, Nancy. "Thomas Stothard's Illustrations for Parnell's 'Hermit.'" Princeton University Library Chronicle 45.2 (1984): 174-77. <WBHC 3056-57>

"24 drawings illustrating scenes from 'The Hermit' by Thomas" (174).

Finlay, Nancy. "Thomas Stothard's Illustrations of Thomson's Seasons for the Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas." Princeton University Library Chronicle 42.3 (1981): 165-177. <WBHC 3057>

"18 sketches with captions from The Seasons by James Thomson" (165).

Jung, Sandro. "Dominant Visual Narrative, the Competitive Marketing and Metacritical Functions of Illustrations, and Robert Morison's 1793 Edition of James Thomson's The Seasons." AAA: Arbeiten aus Anglistik und Amerikanistik 46.1 (2021): 43-72. <Blake (2023)>

"Offering a book-historical contextualisation of the competitive marketing of illustrated editions of James Thomson's best-selling modern classic, The Seasons (1730), as well as the role of illustrations in a multi-medial reading history of the poem, the article examines the formation of a dominant-paradigmatic eighteenth-century visual narrative of the poem that is deliberately countered by the Perth bookseller, Robert Morison" (abstract).

Jung, Sandro. "Print Culture, Marketing, and Thomas Stothard's Illustrations for The Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas, 1779-1826." Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 41 (2012): 27-53. <WBHC 3057>

Examining The Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas, the article "briefly sketches the variety of illustrated pocket books in the 1790s and then examines both the marketing strategies employed by its publisher and the importance of book illustration—particularly the vignettes of Thomas Stothard—in the formation of a canon of literary texts at the end of the eighteenth century." (27).

Jung, Sandro. "Reading the Romantic Vignette: Stothard Illustrates Bloomfield, Byron, and Crabbe for The Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 143-70. <Blake (2020)>

On Stothard's illustrations of Romantic poets, with a consideration of Thomas Bewick's endpieces.

Jung, Sandro. "Thomas Stothard, Milton and the Illustrative Vignette: The Houghton Library Designs for The Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas." Yearbook of English Studies, XLV (2015): The History of the Book, 137-58. <WBHC 3057>

Compares versions of Stothard's illustrations of "L'Allegro" and "Il Penseroso" in order to "consider both the formal and ideational aspects of Stothard's creative practice, offering both insight into Stothard's development as a book illustrator and a record of the changes introduced to the formal conventions of a specific publication" (138).

Jung, Sandro. "Thomas Stothard's Illustrations for The Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas, 1779-1826." Library 12.1 (2011): 3-22. <WBHC 3057>

"The range of visual responses Stothard produced both for Baker and for editions of literary texts on which he worked from the early 1780s to the mid-1820s reveal him as a sensitive reader of the literature of his time but also as a very astute businessman who could effectively market his skill in the ever proliferating world of print culture" (22).

Lipski, Jakub. "Re-Visioning Robinson's Island: Thomas Stothard's Rousseauian Crusoe." Re-reading the Eighteenth-Century Novel: Studies in Reception. New York: Routledge, 2021. <Blake (2024)>

McCue, Maureen. "Intimate Distance: Thomas Stothard's and J.M.W. Turner's Illustrations of Samuel Rogers's Italy." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 171-95. <Blake (2020)>

"[S]hows how the combination of Turner's landscapes and Stothard's human figures delivered to the reading public a highlight attractive notion of Renaissance Italy" (15).

Myrone, Martin. "Coda: Romantic Illustration and the Privatization of History Painting." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 288-301. <Blake (2020)>

Mostly on Stothard.

Pratt, Stephie. American Indians in British Art. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 2005.

Touches on Stothard's depictions of Native Americans.

Shannon, Mary L. "Artists' Street: Thomas Stothard, R.H. Cromek, and Literary Illustration on London's Newman Street." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 243-66. <Blake (2020)>

Maps the "community of illustrators" on "London's Newman Street" (15).

Van De Walle, Kwinten. “The Visual Criticism of Thomas Stothard’s Designs of Walter Scott’s Ivanhoe for the Royal Engagement Pocket Atlas \(1821\).” AAA: Arbeiten aus Anglistik und Amerikanistik 46.1 (2021): 93-116. <Blake (2023)>

“Rather than simply serving a decorative function in a fashionable print medium, then, the illustrations can, and should, be read as acts of visual literary criticism” (abstract).

Tatham, Charles Heathcote (1772-1842), Architect, Father of Frederick Tatham (See also America copy B and Frederick Tatham)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Richard Riddell)

Campbell, Gordon, ed. “Tatham, C\(harles\) H\(eathcote\).” The Grove Encyclopedia of Decorative Arts: Two-volume Set. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2006. II.432.

The Tathams of County Durham. <WBHC 3059>

A website devoted to Tatham family history. The site also includes George Richmond, who married Frederick Tatham's sister, Julia (1811-1881), in 1831. The site includes detailed genealogies; biographies; lists of residences with drawings, paintings, etc. of them when available; portraits; legal documents (birth, marriage, probate, etc.); and other papers. For Charles Heathcote Tatham, these include his fragment of an Autobiography, which describes his youth and time in Italy (with references to Angelica Kaufman, Canova, and Sir William and Lady Hamilton). For Frederick Tatham, it includes his 31 Mar. 1877 letter to his brother Robert (transcribed in WBHC 3060-63).

Writing

Designs for Ornamental Plate, Many of Which Have Been Executed in Silver. London, 1806.

Etchings, Representing the Best Examples of Ancient Ornamental Architecture; drawn from the originals in Rome, and other parts of Italy, during the years 1794, 1795, and 1796. London: Printed for the Author, and sold by Thomas Gardiner, 1799.

Etchings, Presenting Fragments of Antique Grecian and Roman Architectural Ornament; chiefly collected in Italy, before the late revolutions in that country, and drawn from the originals. London: Printed for T. Gardiner, by J. Barfield, 1806.

Catalogue

Bernard Quaritch. No. 350 Catalogue of Some More Works on the Fine Arts, Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, Miniatures, and Fine Specimens of Bookbinding Chiefly Obtained from Private Sources. 10 August 1883. <WBHC 1031-33>

Studies

Blake and Tatham

Visconti, Joseph. “Posthumous Blake: The Roles of Catherine Blake, C.H. Tatham, and Frederick Tatham in Blake’s Afterlife.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.2 (fall 2019): 141 par. <Blake (2020)>

The definitive account of Catherine Blake after William's death and of the posthumous printings of Blake's works.

Tatham without Blake

Casola, Tiziano. "Etchings of Ancient Ornamental Architecture \(1800\) e Designs for Cottages \(1805\): L'esperienza romana nelle pubblicazioni ottocentesche di Charles Heathcote Tatham e Joseph Michael Gandy." MCCC 1800 7 (2018): 25-36. In Italian (abstract in English). <Blake (2020)>

Discusses the differences in the two artists' representations of their Italian experiences.

De Jong, Sigrid. "Paradoxical Encounters, Eighteenth-Century Architectural Experiences and the Sublime." Translations of the Sublime: The Early Modern Reception and Dissemination of Longinus' Peri Hupsous in Rhetoric, the Visual Arts, Architecture and the Theatre. Ed. Caroline van Eck et. al. Leiden and Boston: Brill, 2012. 247-68.

Cites C.H. Tatham's invocations of the sublime during his time in Italy.

Harris, John. "Precedents and Various Designs Collected by C.H. Tatham." In Search of Modern Architecture: A Tribute to Henry-Russell Hitchcock. Cambridge: MIT Press, 1982. 52-63.

An overview of Tatham's career, with 26 of his architectural designs and drawings.

Moser, Stephanie. "Reconstructing Ancient Worlds: Reception Studies, Archaeological Representation and the Interpretation of Ancient Egypt." Journal of Archaeological Method and Theory 22.4 (Dec. 2015): 1263-1308. <Blake (2020)>

Also includes the work of Thomas Hope.

Pearce, Susan. "Material as Style or Material as History? Charles Tatham and the Transformation of the Object" Researching Material Culture, Leicester Archaeology Monographs 8 (2000): 55-64.

Pearce, Susan, and Frank Salmon. "Charles Heathcote Tatham in Italy, 1794-96: Letters, Drawings and Fragment, and Part of an Autobiography." The Volume of the Walpole Society 67 (2005): 1-91.

Pos, T.B. "Tatham and Italy: Influences on English Neo-Classical Design." Furniture History 38 (2002): 58-82.

Proudfoot,

Salmon, Frank. "Charles Heathcote Tatham and the Academia di S. Luca, Rome." Burlington Magazine 13 (Feb. 1998): 85-92.

Uses "Tatham's election in Rome [to the Academia di S. Luca]" to "illuminate the uncertain relationship which existed between an historic Italian academy and more recently founded British fine arts institutions, such as the Royal Academy and the Architects' Club" (85).

Story, Alfred T. The Life of John Linnell. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London: Richard Bentley and Son, 1892. <BB #2769>

BB identifies "first-hand accounts of Blake in Vol. I" (BB #2769). There is also much on the other Ancients, C.H. Tatham, and Catherine Blake.

Tatham, Frederick (1805-1878), Friend, Collector, Son of Charles Heathcote Tatham (See also Tatham's "Life of Blake," Catherine Blake, and The Ancients)

Introductions and Biographies

The Tathams of County Durham. <WBHC 3059>

A website devoted to Tatham family history. The site also includes George Richmond, who married Frederick Tatham's sister, Julia (1811-1881), in 1831. The site includes detailed genealogies; biographies; lists of residences with drawings, paintings, etc. of them when available; portraits; legal documents (birth, marriage, probate, etc.); and other papers. For Charles Heathcote Tatham, these include his fragment of an Autobiography, which describes his youth and time in Italy (with references to Angelica Kaufman, Canova, and Sir William and Lady Hamilton). For Frederick Tatham, it includes his 31 Mar. 1877 letter to his brother Robert (transcribed in WBHC 3060-63).

Writing

Bolton, Arthur T., ed. The Portrait of Sir John Soane, R.A. \(1753-1837\) Set Forth in Letters to His Friends. London: 1927. <BB #1255>

Includes a Frederick Tatham letter, undated but after Catherine Blake's death, offering Blake's works to Soane (pp. 485-86).

Tatham, Frederick. "Life of Blake." <WBHC 2753, BR 661-91>

Never published, the manuscript, which was once bound with Jerusalem copy E, is held by the Yale Center for British Art. "A manuscript copy belongs to Gill Tatham, widow of George Tatham (1929-86) of Ladysmith, South Africa" (WBHC 2753).

Sale Catalogues

Messrs. S. Leigh Sotheby & John Wilkinson. Catalogue of a Valuable Collection of Engravings, Drawings and Pictures, chiefly from the cabinet of An Amateur;¹⁶⁰ comprising . . . Original Drawings and Sketches by W. Blake. London, 1862. <BB #565>

Bernard Quaritch. William Blake's Original Drawings Finished in Colours; Choice Early Copies of his Engraved Works; Books Illustrated by Blake; and Mr. William Muir's Admirable Facsimiles of Blake's Works, Offered for Sale. London, 1885.

Bernard Quaritch. Rough List, No. 73. A Rough List of Valuable and Rare Books, Including Choice portions of Libraries lately dispersed; and many very Cheap Works of every class of Literature. London, November 1885.

Studies

Blake and Tatham

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Inscriptions on Blake's Designs to Pilgrim's Progress." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.2 (winter 1972-73): 68-70. <BB #1217.111>

Records the pencil inscriptions and attributes them to Frederick Tatham.

Erdman, David V. "Blake and Godwin." Notes and Queries 1.1 (1954): 66-67. <BB #1558>

¹⁶⁰ Identified by Bentley as "[p]erhaps" Frederick Tatham (Sales Catalogue).

Considers it possible that Blake leant Godwin money as implied by Tatham's Life.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 2017." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.4 (spring 2018): par. 4 and descriptions of illustrations 8 and 9. <Blake (2019)>

Reconsiders the attributions of William Blake in Youth and Age and the larger copy to Frederick Tatham put forward in Raymond E. Thompson's "The 'Double' of the Double Portrait of Blake: A Description of Tatham's Replica Portrait."

Garnett, Richard. William Blake, Painter and Poet. London: Seeley and Co. and New York: Macmillan and Co., 1895. <BB #1669>

There is a note on Garnett having received a visit from Frederick Tatham (71-72n).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake's Library." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 155-62.¹⁶¹ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

A list of the books Blake was known to have owned and the transcription of an 1864 letter by Frederick Tatham on Blake's reading practices.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "John Linnell and Mrs. Blake." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1971. 221-29.¹⁶² <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

About Linnell's actions after Blake's death (including details of Blake's funeral), Linnell's and Frederick Tatham's relationship to Catherine Blake, disputes between Linnell and Tatham over Blake's property, and a note on posthumous Dante engravings.

Peres Alós, Anselmo, and Daniela Schwarcke do Canto. "Alexander Gilchrist e a criação do personagem Blake (Alexander Gilchrist and the Invention of the Character Blake)." Fênix—Revista de História e Estudos Culturais 15.2 (2018): 48 pars. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2020)>

Compares passages in Gilchrist to the accounts in Malkin, Robinson, Tatham, J.T. Smith, and Cunningham.

Read, Dennis M. "'An Eminent but Neglected Genius': An Early Frederick Tatham Letter about William Blake." English Language Notes 19.1 (1981): 29-33. <BBS 618>

Transcribes a 11 Apr. 1829 letter sent to John Pye, the engraver, by Frederick Tatham on behalf of Catherine Blake in response to a letter Pye evidently sent to Blake's old address 3 Fountain Court, which inquired after works for sale.

Rossetti, William Michael. Rossetti Papers 1862 to 1870. New York: Scribner and Sons, 1903. <BB #2577>

Includes references to Blake, Linnell, Tatham, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, Swinburne, and Rossetti's siblings.

Skretkowicz, Victor, Jr. "J. Deffett Francis: The Swansea Blakes." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 52-54. <BB #1217.47>

¹⁶¹ Revised version of essay of same title, TLS (6 Nov. 1959), <BB #2020>.

¹⁶² Revised version of essay of same title, TLS (20 Jun. 1958), <BB #2032>.

Describes Francis's relationship with Frederick Tatham and his Blake items. He donated 7 pencil drawings by Blake to the British Museum in 1873; sent "Woe cried the muse" to William Michael Rossetti in 1875; gave 60 more pieces by Blake to the British Museum in 1878; and gave America a Prophecy pls. 2, 5, and 15, Europe pls. 6-7, 12, "He descended into Hell," and "Michael Angelo (Buonarroti)" (from Fuseli's Lectures on Painting [1801]) to the Swansea Public Library by 1890. The last are now held by the Glynn Vivian Art Gallery, Swansea.

Thompson, Raymond E. "The 'Double' of the Double Portrait of Blake: A Description of Tatham's Replica Portrait." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 29-32. <BBS 388>

On copy of the portrait of the young and old Blake made by Frederick Tatham for the Butts family. In "Blake in the Marketplace, 2017," Essick suggests the possibility it was by George Richmond but holds that "the traditional ascription of the large drawing to Tatham carries the most weight" (description to illustration 8).

Viscomi, Joseph. "Posthumous Blake: The Roles of Catherine Blake, C.H. Tatham, and Frederick Tatham in Blake's Afterlife." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.2 (fall 2019): 141 par. <Blake (2020)>

The definitive account of Catherine Blake after William's death and of the posthumous printings of Blake's works.

Viscomi, Joseph. William Blake's Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. London: Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake's "printed paintings" (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.¹⁶³ It includes important information on Blake's illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

The two appendices ("Blake Redefines Fresco" and "Monoprints after Blake's Death, 1827–1863") are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book's list of abbreviations (vi) and can be found at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake's collectors, Frederick Tatham (and his relationship to William Michael Rossetti), Joseph Hogarth, and John Ruskin.

Whitehead, Angus. "'an excellent saleswoman': The Last Years of Catherine Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.3 (winter 2011-12): 76-90. <WBHC 2009>

Corrects Blake Records on Catherine's residences, though some of Whitehead's claims are disputed by Viscomi's article, "Posthumous Blake."

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. Nineteenth Century Accounts of William Blake. Gainesville: Scholars' Facsimiles and Reprints, 1970.

¹⁶³ An excerpt was published as "Impressions of Colors: On William Blake's Monoprints," Lapham's Quarterly (20 July 2021).

Reprints early biographical accounts of Blake (Malkin, Robinson, Smith, Cunningham, and Tatham) along with Yeats' introduction to his Poems of William Blake (1905).

Tatham without Blake

Jackson, Ruth. "The man who lived in my house: Frederick Tatham (1805-1878)." Camden History Review 30 (2006): 7-9. <WBHC 3064>

"Tatham was at 45 Oak Village near Hampstead Heath in 1868-78" (WBHC 3064).

Taylor, Thomas (1758-1835), Platonist (See also Plato and Platonism)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Andrew Louth)

Writing (See also Taylor's Entry at The Online Books Page)¹⁶⁴

Raine, Kathleen, and George Mills, ed. Thomas Taylor, the Platonist: Selected Writings.

Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1969. B. 2019. Princeton Legacy Library.

Includes a biographical sketch of Taylor and notes, with references to Blake and members of his circle.

Studies

Blake and Taylor

Baine, Rodney M., and Mary R. Baine. "Thel's Northern Gate." Philological Quarterly 51.4 (1972): 957-61. <BB #A1112>

Rejects the idea that the "Northern Gate" in Thel came from Thomas Taylor's translation of Porphyry and suggests, instead, that it came from Pope's translation of the Odyssey.

Cardinale, Philip J., and Joseph R. Cardinale. "A Newly Discovered Blake Book: William Blake's Copy of Thomas Taylor's The Mystical Initiations; or, Hymns of Orpheus \(1787\)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 44.3 (winter 2010-11): 84-102. <WBHC 1726>

Argues that the copy of Thomas Taylor's The Mystical Initiation (1787), held by Bodleian, was annotated by Blake. Widely accepted.

Chayes, Irene H. "Blake and Tradition: 'The Little Girl Lost' and 'The Little Girl Found.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 25-28. <BB #1217.62>

A critique of Raine's overemphasis on Thomas Taylor and Platonism in her reading of the poems in Blake and Tradition (1968).

Evans, Frank B. III. "Thomas Taylor, Platonist of the Romantic Period." PMLA 55.4 (1940): 1060-70.

An overview of Taylor and his connection to different Romantic-era writers.

Haggarty, Sarah. "Blake's Newton, Line-Drawing, and Geometry." Studies in Romanticism 60.2 (2021): 123-51. <Blake (2022)>

Proposes two new sources for the Newton print and positions "him for the first time in his contemporary mathematical-cultural context" (127), with references to Blake's supposed argument with Thomas Taylor over geometry.

¹⁶⁴ For reprints by Prometheus Trust, see WBHC 3064-66. There are many print on demand reprints.

Harper, George Mills. The Neoplatonism of William Blake. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1961.¹⁶⁵ <BB #1793, WBHC 2129-30>

A classic study that emphasizes Blake's reliance on Platonism and his relationship with Thomas Taylor.

King, James. “The Meredith Family, Thomas Taylor, and William Blake.” Studies in Romanticism 11.2 (1972): 153-57. <BB #2052>

Documents in the commonplace books belonging to William George Meredith the story of Blake being taught geometry by Thomas Taylor. Meredith “was the son of the architect George Meredith (1762-1831),” “who was admitted to the Royal Academy Schools in 1780” and may have known Blake (154). The commonplace books contain other information about Taylor and Blake's friend, George Cumberland.

Larrissy, Edward. “Blake and Platonism.” Platonism and the English Imagination. Ed. Anna Baldwin and Sarah Hutton. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 186-98. <WBHC 2312>

A good overview of Blake's relationship to Platonism and Plato, including Thomas Taylor.

Miner, Paul. “Blake: An Unrecognized Allusion to Plato.” Notes and Queries 58.1 (March 2011): 61-63. <WBHC 2410>

The allusion is to Thomas Taylor's translation of Timaeus.

Notopoulos, James A. “Shelley and Thomas Taylor.” PMLA 51.2 (1936): 502-17.

On Taylor's influence.

Pierce, Frederick E. “Blake and Thomas Taylor.” PMLA 43.4 (1928): 1121-41. <BB #2396>

Lists parallels in their writings.

Raine, Kathleen. Blake and Tradition. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1968. London: Routledge, 2002.¹⁶⁶ (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>

A once very influential study on Blake's thought, literature, and art largely in relationship to Platonism, Hermeticism, and Gnosticism that collects much of Raine's work on Blake delivered or published elsewhere in the 1950 and 1960s. Raine's insistence that Blake's

¹⁶⁵ Incorporates Harper's “The Source of Blake's ‘Ah! Sun-Flower,” Modern Language Review 48.2 (1953), 139-42, <BB # 1794>; “The Neo-Platonic Concept of Time in Blake's Prophetic Books,” PMLA 69.1 (1954), 142-55, <BB #1792>; “Blake's Neo-Platonic Interpretation of Plato's Atlantis Myth,” Journal of English and Germanic Philology 54.1 (1955), 72-79, <BB #1791>; “Thomas Taylor and Blake's Drama of Persephone,” Philological Quarterly 34 (1955), 378-94, <BB #1796>; and “Symbolic Meaning Blake's ‘Nine Years,” Modern Language Notes 72.1 (1957), 18-19, <BB #1795>.

¹⁶⁶ Incorporates Raine's “Blake's ‘Cupid and Psyche,” Listener 58 (1957), 832-35, <BB #2481>; “Blake's Debt to Antiquity,” Sewanee Review 75 (1963), 352-450, <BB #2482>; “The Sea of Time and Space,” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 20.3/4 (1957), 318-37, <BB #2486>; “Some Sources of Tiriel,” Huntington Library Quarterly 21.1 (1957), 1-36, <BB #2487>; and “Who Made the Tyger?” Encounter 2.9 (Jun. 1954), 43-50, <BB #2490>.

work could be decoded through the lens of these sources has been largely rejected, but the question of Blake's relationship to these sources remains open.

The Routledge edition of 2002 is a facsimile (WBHC 2560). A shorter version of the book was published as Blake and Antiquity (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977; London and New York: Routledge, 2002. Paperback. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2023), <WBHC 2563>.

Raine, Kathleen. “The Crested Cock.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967): 9-10. <BB #1217.6>

Identifies probable sources for “the crested Cock” (M 28 [30]: 24, E 126) in James Macpherson’s Introduction to the History of Great Britain and Ireland (1772) and Thomas Taylor’s Works of Plato (1804).

Raine, Kathleen. “The Little Girl Lost and Found and The Lapsed Soul.” The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 17-49, 50-63.¹⁶⁷ <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

The first part reads “The Little Girl Lost” and “The Little Girl Found” as Platonic allegories of the soul, emphasizing the supposed influence of Porphyry and the translations of Plato and the Platonists by Thomas Taylor. The second part extends this analysis to the phrase, “the lapsed soul,” from the “Introduction” for Experience.

Raine, Kathleen. “Taylor, Blake and the English Romantic Movement.” Blake and the New Age. London, Boston, Sydney: G. Allen & Unwin, 1979. London: Routledge, 2011. 74-105.¹⁶⁸ <BBS 612-13, WBHC 2559-60>

Argues that Taylor’s translations of Plato were key for the Romantic age.

Taylor without Blake

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “John Flaxman and Thomas Taylor.” Notes and Queries 16.9 (1969): 354-55.

Notes an unpublished letter from Flaxman to an unknown addressee that appears to reference Thomas Taylor.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Thomas Taylor’s Biography.” Studies in Biography 14 (1961): 234-36.

Publishes a 7 Oct. 1798 letter from Thomas Taylor to George Cumberland in which Taylor mentions he is the author of the article, “Mr. Taylor, the Platonist,” which appeared in Public Characters of 1798 (London, 1798).

Cochran, Peter. “Manfred and Thomas Taylor.” Byron Journal 29.1 (2001): 62-71.

Suggests Taylor’s influence, particularly around ideas of evil.

Harper, George. “Mary Wollstonecraft’s Residence with Thomas Taylor the Platonist.” Notes and Queries 9.12 (1962): 461-63.

¹⁶⁷ Rpt. in Raine’s Blake and Tradition, <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>.

¹⁶⁸ From her article titled, “Thomas Taylor, Plato, and the English Romantic Movement,” Sewanee Review 76.2 (1968), 230-57, <BB #2488>.

Expresses skepticism about whether Wollstonecraft ever resided with Taylor.

King, James. “A New Piece of Tayloriana.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.3 (winter 1972-73): 72. <BB #1271.114>

On the notes for Thomas Taylor’s Arguments of Celsus (London, 1830).

Muller, S. Marek. “Archival Mocking as Feminist Praxis: A Rhetorical Repurposing of A Vindication of the Rights of Brutes.” Women’s Studies in Communication 44.1 (2021): 23-43. <Blake (2022)>

An ironic reading of A Vindication of the Rights of Brutes, Taylor’s parody of Mary Wollstonecraft’s A Vindication of the Rights of Woman, that transforms it into “a solid defense of animal liberation based on vegan ecofeminist principles of empathy, care, and the interconnectedness of the human and more-than-human worlds” (40).

Tomaselli, Sylvana. ““Have Ye Not Heard That We Cannot Serve Two Masters?: The Platonism of Mary Wollstonecraft.” Revisioning Cambridge Platonism: Sources and Legacy. Ed. Douglas Hedley and David Leech. Cham: Springer, 2019. 175-89. <Blake (2021)>

Also references Thomas Taylor and the Joseph Johnson circle.

Thomas, Joseph (1765-1811), Patron (See also the Illustrations to Milton)
Studies

Allentuck, Marcia. “Blake, Flaxman, and Thomas: A New Document.” Harvard Library Bulletin 20.3 (1972): 318-19. <BB #802>

On Flaxman’s postscript to Blake in a 31 July 1801 letter from Flaxman to Hayley that relates “The Rev^d Joseph Thomas of Epsom” was commissioning designs from Milton’s Comus and from Shakespeare.

Höltgen, Karl Josef. “Religious Emblems (1809) by John Thurston and Joseph Thomas, and its Links with Francis Quarles and William Blake.” Emblematica 10 (1996 [1999]): 107-43. <WBHC 2162>

A revised version can be found online at “William Blake and the Emblem Tradition” (Feb. 2002). This also includes a “Biographical Note” on Joseph Thomas (1765-1811).

Parris, Leslie. “William Blake’s Mr. Thomas.” TLS 5 (Dec. 1968): 1390. <BB #2359>

An early biographical sketch of Joseph Thomas.

Thornton, Robert John (1768-1837), Physician, Patron, Botanist (See also [The Pastorals of Virgil \[1821\]](#), [Drawings for the Pastorals of Virgil \[c. 1820\]](#), [Virgil Relief Etching \[1820\]](#), and Annotations to Thornton)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Martin Kemp)

Hemsley, W. Botting, and Perkins, W. Frank. “Robert!John!Thornton, M.D.” Gardeners’ Chronicle. Vol. 2 .London: 41 Wellington Street, Convent Garden, 1894): 89-90, 276.

“Robert Thornton & The Temple of Flora.” The Gardens Trust Blog [of the Royal Horticulture Society]. 2 Feb. 2016.

A good introduction to Thornton and his beautifully illustrated, The Temple of Flora.

Writing

Thornton, Robert John. The Lord's Prayer, Newly Translated (1827).

Googlebook digitization of the British Library copy. Not Blake's copy.

Thornton, Robert John. A New Illustration of the Sexual System of Linnaeus and The Temple of Flora, or Garden of Naure. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London, 1807. (Smithsonian Copy).

Advertisements were published in 1797 and 1798. A prospectus says that the work would be published 1 Mar. 1799.

Thornton, Robert John. Temple of Flora, or, Garden of the Botanist, Poet, Painter, and Philosopher. 1812. (Getty Research Institute Copy).

Grigson, Geoffrey, and Handasyde Buchanan. Thornton's Temple of Flora with Plates Faithfully Reproduced from the Original Engravings. London: Collins, 1972.

Studies

Blake and Thornton

Nanavutty, Piloo. “A Title Page in Blake's Illustrated Genesis Manuscript.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 10 (1947): 114-22. <BB #2270>

A detailed description of the symbolism, including that of an “an azure lily,” which, she suggests, is drawn from Robert John Thornton’s description in his New Illustration of the Sexual System of Linnaeus and Temple of Flora (1799-1807) and shows Blake using a Hindu symbol of creation.

Patterson, Annabel. “Thornton and Blake: Reformist Text and Radical Image. Pastoral Ideology: Virgil to Valéry.” Berkely and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 1988. 252-62. <BBS 600>

“Thornton’s Virgil was a far more complex document, as a whole, than is usually admitted, and not least in its mixture of sophistication and imperception, both of which are featured in Thornton’s treatment of Blake” (253).

Thornton without Blake

Bush, Clive. “Erasmus Darwin, Robert John Thornton, and Linnaeus' Sexual System.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 7.3 (1974): 295-300.

“Much of the work of Robert John Thornton extends and glosses the work of Erasmus Darwin” (306).

Doherty, Meghan. “Robert John Thornton’s A New Illustration: Imaging and Imagining Nation and Empire.” Visualizing the Unseen, Imagining the Unknown, Perfecting the Natural: Art and Science in the 18th and 19th Centuries. Ed. Andrew Graciano. Newcastle: Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2008. 49-83.

Fein, Susanna, and Michael Johnston, ed. Robert Thornton and His Books: Essays on the Lincoln and London Thornton Manuscripts. Woodbridge, Suffolk: York Medieval Press/Boydell & Brewer, 2014.

Mollendorf, Miranda Andrea. "The World in a Book: Robert John Thornton's 'Temple of Flora' (1797-1812)." PhD diss. Harvard University, 2013.

Trusler, John (1735-1820), Would-be Patron (See also Letters and George Cumberland)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Emma Major)

Studies

Blake and Trusler

Rowland, Christopher. "William Blake and the King James Bible." Modern Believing 52 (2012): 131-39. <Blake (2022)>

Analyzes Blake's engagement with the King James Bible largely through the letters to Trusler and the Illustrations of the Book of Job.

Todd, Ruthven. "The Rev. John Trusler \(1735-1820\)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.3 (winter 1972-73): 71. <BB #1271.112>

On Trusler's work as a bookseller.

Trusler without Blake

Gibson, William. "John Trusler and the Sermon Culture of Late Eighteenth Century England." Journal of Ecclesiastical History 66 (2015): 302-19.

"[T]his article seeks to reconsider his trade in printed sermons using imitation manuscript print, which clergy could pass off as their own" (abstract).

Immel, Andrea. "The Shady Business of Enlightenment: John Trusler's Progress of Man and Johann Basedow's Elementarwerk." Princeton University Library Chronicle 68.3 (2007): 969-86.

"59 of Bewick's 108 subjects were based on Chodowiecki" (970). (Blake's engravings for Salzmann and Lavater are also based on Chodowiecki—See Essick's "The Figure in the Carpet: Blake's Engravings in Salzmann's Elements of Morality" and Johnson's "Blake's Engravings for Lavater's Physiognomy: Overdue Credit to Chodowiecki, Schellenberg, and Lips.")

Lupton, Christina. "Creating the Writer of the Cleric's Words." Journal for Eighteenth-Century Studies 34.2 (2011): 167-83.

"The discussion traces the effect of handwriting as a virtual dimension of printed writings by and about the clergy, focusing on Tristram Shandy, Mansfield Park and the faux manuscript sermons of John Trusler as texts drawing attention to religious writing at the surface of the page" (abstract).

Tulk, Charles Augustus (1786-1849), Patron, Swedenborgian (See also Swedenborgianism and Coleridge)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Alexander Gordon, rev. by Timothy C.F. Stunt)

Escott, Margaret. "TULK, Charles Augustus \(1786-1849\), of 19 Duke Street, Mdx." The History of Parliament: The House of Commons 1820-1832. Ed. D.R. Fisher. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2009.

Rothery, Mary Catherine. A Brief Sketch of the Life, Character, and Religious Opinions of Charles Augustus Tulk. Boston: Otis Clapp, 1850. 2nd ed. London: James Spiers, 1890.

Studies

Blake and Tulk¹⁶⁹

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “Mr. Rudall, The Flautist: An Authentic Blake Anecdote.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 123. <BBS 383>

On an anecdote about Blake during his time living at 3 Fountain Court when he was visited by “Mr. Rudall, the flautist” (123), which was published by the Swedenborgian James Spilling in “Blake the Visionary,” New Church Magazine, 6 (1887), 209. Deck suggests the anecdote came down to Spilling from Charles Augustus Tulk to J.J. Garth Wilkinson.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “New Light on C.A. Tulk, Blake's 19th Century Patron.” Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (1977): 217-36.¹⁷⁰ <BBS 649>

A useful overview of Tulk, a Swedenborgian and a friend to Flaxman and Coleridge, including reference to the Tulk printing “The Divine Image” and “On Another’s Sorrow” in the Swedenborgian periodical, The Dawn of Light in 1825.

Rix, Robert. William Blake and the Cultures of Radical Christianity. Hampshire: Ashgate, 2007. <WBHC 2593-94>

A very useful study for understanding Blake’s relationship to both Enlightenment-grounded radicals and Swedenborgians, especially in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “The Peculiar Alchemical Research of John Flaxman, Charles Augustus Tulk, and Fabian Wrede Ekenstam (1776-1818).” Heredom: The Transactions of the Scottish Rite Research Society 29 (2021): 96-132. <Blake (2024)>

Argues that “[t]hough Flaxman’s biographers have been unaware of his alchemical involvement, evidence for his collaboration and that of his wife Nancy survives in the unpublished correspondence and book marginalia of Tulk and [Fabian Wrede] Ekenstam” (96). In addition to these figures, there are references to Blake, Moravianism, Swedenborg and later Swedenborgians (particularly, Augustus Nordenskjöld), and Thomas Taylor.

Tulk without Blake

Jackson, H.J. “‘swedenborg’s Meaning is the truth’: Coleridge, Tulk and Swedenborg.” Philosophy Literature Mysticism: An Anthology of Essays on the Thought and Influence of Emanuel Swedenborg. Ed. Stephen McNeilly. London: The Swedenborg Society, 2013.¹⁷¹ <WBHC 2407>

¹⁶⁹ See Robert N. Essick’s description of drawings discovered in 2010 in a notebook owned by a descendent of C.A. Tulk, “Blake in the Marketplace, 2012,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013), par. 7, illus. 9, and listing. The original account of how Essick learned of the notebook is in “Blake in the Marketplace, 2011.” A full bibliographical description is found in WBHC 3067-69.

¹⁷⁰ Rpt. in Blake and Swedenborg: Opposition Is True Friendship: The Sources of William Blake’s Arts in the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg (1985), 107-19, <BBS 364-65, WBHC 1597-98>

¹⁷¹ Originally published in In Search of the Absolute—Essays on Swedenborg and Literature, ed. and intro. Stephen McNeilly (London: Journal of the Swedenborg Society, 2004), 1-14.

On what Tulk tried to teach Coleridge about Swedenborg, and Coleridge's largely skeptical engagement.

Lines, Richard. "Coleridge and Charles Augustus Tulk." Charles Lamb Bulletin 140 (2007): 167-79.

A useful introduction to Tulk and his friendship with Coleridge, with references to Blake, Flaxman, and the Swedenborgian John Clowes.

Upcott, William (1779-1845), Patron, Autograph Collector, Son of Ozias Humphrey

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Janet Ing Freeman)

Boyle, Frederick. Memoirs of Thomas Dodd, William Upcott, and George Stubbs, R.A.

Liverpool: David Marples & Co., 1879.

Sale Catalogues

[R.H.] Evans. Catalogue of Curious Autograph Letters and Early Historical Documents Relating to England, with seals. Also rare and valuable books [of Upcott]. London, 1836.

Catalogue of the Collection of Prints, Pictures, and Curiosities of the Late William Upcott, Esq.

London: Sotheby, 1846. <BB #555>

Catalogue of the Library of the Late William Upcott, Esq. London: Atkins and Andrew, 1846.

Writing

A Bibliographical Account of the Principal Works Relating to English Topography. 3 vols. London: Richard and Arthur Taylor, 1818. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2. Vol. 3.)

A Catalogue of the Library of the London Institution. London: Richard Taylor and Co., 1813.

Scrapbook of Early Aeronautica. 3 vols. Compiled by Upcott. Held by the Smithsonian Museum.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Ozias Humphry, William Upcott, and William Blake." Humanities Association Review 26 (1975): 116-22. <BB #A1170>

On Humphry's and Upcott's relationship to Blake, the works they owned, and Upcott's influence on accounts of Blake.

Erdman, David V. "Reliques of the Contemporaries of William Upcott, 'Emperor of Autographs.'" Bulletin of the New York Public Library 64.11 (Nov. 1960): 573-80. 581-87. <BB #1573>

On William Upcott and his collection of autographs, including Blake's autograph <Butlin #777> and that of many others, with some analysis of the context described below Blake's drawing and signature.

Harding, Robert. "The Library of the Royal Academy of Arts, London: Selected Treasures—Part II." British Art Journal 19.2 (2018): 20-25.

Includes references to William Roscoe, William Upcott, and Ozias Humphrey.

Sherry, Margaret Meyer. "The 'Predicament' of the Autograph: William Blake." Glyph: John Hopkins Textual Studies 4 (1978): 131-55. <BBS 637>

On the allographic in Blake's work, particularly in Urizen: "It should be precisely that sense of 'handwriting,' however, and the aura of '[Blake's] daily labors on copper' that signal rather the problem of distance in his technique" (132).¹⁷²

Upcott without Blake

Ryskamp, Charles. "William Cowper and His Circle: A Study of the Hannay Collection." Princeton University Library Chronicle 24.1 (1962): 2-26.

A description of the Neilson Campbell Hannay Collection of William Cowper at the Princeton Library, which includes books, manuscripts, letters, and the extra-illustration drawings of Cowper's works by William Upcott. The article prints Cowper's previously unpublished letters to John Duncombe (1729-1786).

Varley, John (1778-1842), Artist (See also The Ancients, Visionary Heads, and The Ghost of a Flea)
Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, C.M. Kauffmann)

Jeffrey, John Varley. "The Varley Family: Engineers and Artists." Notes and Records of the Royal Society of London 51.2 (Jul. 1997): 263-79.

A family history from the eighteenth- to early twentieth centuries, with a genealogy tree. There is no reference to Blake.

Writing

Historic

A Practical Treatise on Perspective. London, 1815.

A Treatise on the Principles of Landscape Design. London: Sherwood, Gilbert, and Piper, 1821.

A Treatise on Zodiacial Physiognomy. London: Longman, 1828. <BB #501, BBS 257-58, WBHC 912-14>

For reviews, see BB #971, 1038.

Modern

Stevens-Cox, James, ed. A Few Observations on Art [(1815?)]. St. Peter Port: Toucan Press, 1978.

Manuscripts

Blake-Varley Sketchbook (Folio, 1819-25). Untraced except for Butlin #s 708, 710, and 711.
<WBHC 645-46, 697>

Blake-Varley Sketchbook (Large). <WBHC 646, 694, 1233-34>

Blake-Varley Sketchbook (Small, 1819). <WBHC 694-97>

Catalogues

Butlin, Martin, ed. The Blake-Varley Sketchbook of 1819. 2 vols. London: Heinemann, 1969.
<BB #401>

Christie, Manson, and Woods. The Larger Blake-Varley Sketchbook. London: Christie, Manson and Woods, 1989. <BBS 178-80>

¹⁷² Quoting Erdman's Illuminated Blake (1974), 12.

A Christie auction catalogue “devoted to this work, all the Blake drawings reproduced” (BBS 178).

Hargraves, Matthew. Great British Watercolors: From the Paul Mellon Collection at the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2007. <WBHC 1361>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, from 11 Jul. to 30 Sep. and at the State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, from Oct. to Dec. 2007. Includes works by Blake (pp. 69-77), Samuel Palmer (pp.178-81), and John (pp. 124-29) and Cornelius Varley (pp. 130-31).

Heseltine, John Postle. [John Varley and His Pupils: W. Mulready, J. Linnell, and W. Hunt. Original Drawings in the Collection of J\[ohn\] P\[ostle\] H\[eseltine\]](#). London: J.J. Waddington, 1918.

John Varley (1778-1842): A Bicentenary Exhibition. London: Hackney Library Services, 1978.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Hackney Library, London, 18 Aug. to 8 Oct. 1978.

Kauffmann, C.M. John Varley 1778-1842. London: Batsford, 1984.

The catalogue for the Varley watercolors held by the Victoria & Albert Museum. References Blake and the Ancients.

Wilcox, Timothy. Cornelius Varley: The Art of Observation. London: Lowell Libson, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at 3 Clifford Street, London, from 8 Jun. to 8 Jul. 2005. Features references to John Varley and to his works. Includes a discussion and a photograph of Cornelius Varley’s Graphic Telescope.

Wilton, Andrew, and Anne Lyles. The Great Age of British Watercolours 1750-1880. Munich: Prestel-Verlag, 1993. <WBHC 2930>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Royal Academy of Arts from 15 Jan. to 12 April and at The National Gallery of Art from 9 May to 25 July 1993. Includes watercolors by Blake, John Linnell, Samuel Palmer, George Richmond, Cornelius Varley, John Varley, and James Ward.

Studies

Blake and Varley

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, Linnell and Varley and A Treatise on Zodiacial Physiognomy.” Burning Bright: Essays in Honour of David Bindman. Ed. Diana Dethloff, et al. London: UCL Press, 2015. 126-35. <WBHC 1817-18>

A description of the drawings for Zodiacial Physiognomy and what they suggest about Blake, Linnell, and Varley.

Butlin, Martin. “Blake, the Varleys, and the Patent Graphic Telescope.” William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 294-304. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Argues that John Linnell and John Varley used the “Graphic Telescope” invented by Cornelius Varley to copy Blake’s Visionary Heads and The Man who taught Blake painting in his Dreams.

Butlin, Martin. “A New Color Print from the Small Book of Designs.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 19-20. <BBS 409>

Includes information on Wilson Lowery (1762-1824) a friend of John Varley whose daughter Delvalle (born c. 1797-1800) became Varley’s second wife.

Curry, Patrick. “John Varley, Magus.” A Confusion of Prophets: Victorian and Edwardian Prophecy. London: Collins and Brown, 1992. 18-45. <WBHC 3070>

Touches on Blake and Zodiacal Physiognomy before looking at Varley’s later life.

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. “William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England.” PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Erle, Sibylle. “From Vampire to Apollo: William Blake’s Ghosts of the Flea, c. 1819–1820.” Beastly Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2018. 225-52. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

On John Varley’s A Treatise on Zodiacal Physiognomy (1828), Blake’s Visionary Heads, and The Ghost of the Flea and their relationship “through the intersecting discourses of astrology, physiognomy and vampirism” (227).

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 1989, Including a Report on the Recently Discovered Blake-Varley Sketchbook.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.1 (summer 1990): 220-37. ¹⁷³ <BBS 406>

A description, with reference to other designs, based on “the very thorough [Christie’s] auction catalogue and information supplied by David Bindman [...]” “I list below, in the probable order of their execution, all of Blake’s drawings” (222).

Whitehead, Angus, ““a bite”: The First Published Reference to Blake’s Ghost of a Flea?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.3 (winter 2015-16): 7 pars.

Records a 12 May 1827 allusion to The Flea in the Literary Gazette, with many references in the article to John and Cornelius Varley.

¹⁷³ As BBS points out (406n1), the pagination for Blake should have started anew with this issue. “[Correction to Pagination]” in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990), 75, offers the correct pagination, but as the both the html and the pdf version retained the erroneous pagination, I have retained the erroneous pagination here.

Varley without Blake

Wilcox, Timoth. The Triumph of Watercolour: The Early Years of the Royal Watercolour Society 1805-55. London: Philip Wilson Publishers, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Dulwich Picture Gallery from 2 Feb. to 24 Apr. and at the Whitworth Art Gallery, Manchester, from 13 May to 7 Aug. 2005.

Highlights the place of John and Cornelius Varley, with references to the other Ancients and slightly to Blake.

Wainewright, Thomas Griffiths (1794–1847), Patron

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB, Annette Peach\)

Curling, Jonathan. Janus Weathercock, the Life of Thomas Griffiths Wainewright, 1794-1847. London: T. Nelson and Sons, 1938.

Hodgman, V. W. “Wainewright, Thomas Griffiths \(1794–1847\).” Australian Dictionary of Biography. National Centre of Biography, Australian National University.

Writing

Wainewright, Thomas Griffiths. Essays and Criticisms. Ed. W. Carew Hazlitt. London” Reeves & Turner, 1880.

Catalogues

Sale Catalogues with Blake's Works

Mr Wheatley, Library, Books of Prints, Music, Casts, Pictures. A Catalogue of the Valuable and Extensive Library of the Late George Edward Griffiths, Esq. Editor of the Monthly Review The Property of a well known Amateur of the Fine Arts. [. . .] 3-11 August 1831. <WBHC 984-85>

Exhibitions

Paradise Lost: Thomas Griffiths Wainewright. Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery, Hobart, 11 June to 3 October 2021. <Blake (2023)>

In addition to art by Wainewright and other items from his collection, it included works by Blake, Fuseli, and Flaxman. A digital tour is available at YouTube.

Vaulbert de Chantilly, Marc. “Property of a Distinguished Poisoner: Thomas Griffiths Wainewright and the Griffiths family Library.” Under the Hammer: Book Auctions Since the Seventeenth Century. Ed. Robin Myers, Michael Harris, and Giles Mandelbrote. New Castle, DE: Oak Knoll Press; London: The British Library, 2001. <WBHC 3072>

Records the sale of his Blake items; see WBHC 3072.

Studies

Browne, Max. “The First Subject Painting to Emerge by the Infamous Thomas Griffiths Wainewright \(1794-1847\).” British Art Journal 15.1 (2014): 113-16.

On the recently discovered painting, Two Lovers in a Moonlit Landscape, with references to Blake, Fuseli, Linnell, and Thomas Phillips.

Williams, John Price. The Fatal Cup: Thomas Griffiths Wainewright and the Strange Deaths of His Relations. Barnet: Markosia Enterprises, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

Claims to have uncovered new evidence that brings into question Wainewright’s guilt.

Ward, James (1769-1859), English Painter, Defender of Blake
Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Edward J. Nygren)
Beckett, Oliver. The Life and Work of James Ward, R.A., 1769-1859: The Forgotten Genius. Sussex: Book Guild, 1995.¹⁷⁴

Frankau, Julia, William Ward ARA, James Ward RA: Their Lives and Works. London: Macmillan, 1904.

Fussell, G.E. James Ward R.A.: Animal Painter, 1769-1859, and his England. London: Joseph, 1974.

Grundy, Cecil Reginald. James Ward, R.A.: His Life and Works, with a Catalogue of his Engravings and Pictures. London: Otto Limited, 1909.

Catalogues

Gates, Andrea. James Ward R.A.: A Lioness with a Heron. London: Matthiesen & Gates, 2011.

Grossman, Lloyd. Breadth & Quality: Oil Studies Watercolours Drawings by James Ward RA. London: Lowell Libson, 2013.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Lowell Libson Limited from 28 Jun. to 12 Jul. 2013.

Johnson, Oscar, and Peter Johnson. Ward, Morland and Their Circle. London: Lowndes Lodge Gallery, 1966.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Lowndes Lodge Gallery from 11 May to 27 May 1966.

Munro, Jane. James Ward R.A. 1769-1859. London: White Bros., 1991.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, from 8 Oct. 1991 to 12 Jan. 1992.

Nygren, Edward J. James Ward's 'Gordale Scar': An Essay in the Sublime. London: Tate Gallery, 1982.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate Gallery, London, from 3 Nov. 1982 to 2 Jan. 1983.

James Ward and Romantic Paintings of His Period. London: Roland, Browse, and Delbanco. 1952.

The catalogue for the exhibition held in March 1952.

Sloman, Susan. Drawings by James Ward, 1769-1859: On the Occasion of the 150th Anniversary of the Artist's Death. London: W.S. Fine Art/Andrew Would, 2009.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Andrew Wyld Gallery from 18 Nov. to 11 Dec. 2009.

¹⁷⁴ Not recorded in WBHC.

Studies

Blake and Ward

Nygren, Edward. “James Ward, RA \(1769-1859\): Papers and Patrons.” The Volume of the Walpole Society 75 (2013): 1-438.

A useful scholarly edition with references to Blake, Butts, Cumberland, Cosway, Flaxman, and other members of Blake’s circle. Includes Ward’s 1817-1820 Journal, (which contains his 22 May 1818 reference to seeing Blake’s drawing at Butts’s “full of Genius & power” [49]), his 1826 Diary, his Account Book, Selected Letters and Documents, a Catalogue of Ward’s works, and a biographical index of the “People and Patrons” mentioned.

Ward without Blake

Fussell, G.E. James Ward R.A.: Animal Painter, 1769-1859, and His England. London: Joseph, 1974.

Nygren, Edward. “The Art of Jame Ward, R.A. (1769-1859).” PhD diss. Yale University, 1976.

Nygren, Edward J. “James Ward’s Exhibition Pictures of 1838: Controversy in Paint.” The Art Bulletin 61.3 (1979): 448-59.

On Ward’s pictures for the 1838 Royal Academy exhibition, which were spurred by a hostile review from the previous year.

Nygren, Edward. “James Ward’s Papers: An 1826 Diary in Context.” Getty Research Journal 3 (2011): 179-88.

Details Ward’s diary that was kept “from late August to mid-November of 1826” (179).

Watson, Caroline (1761?-1814), Engraver

Introductions and Biographies \(ODNB, Sarah Hyde\)

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

Catalogues

David Alexander. Caroline Watson and Female Printmaking in Late Georgian England. Fitzwilliam Museum. Cambridge: Fitzwilliam Museum, 2014. <WBHC 3073>

A catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum (Cambridge, UK) from 23 Sep. 2014 to 4 Jan. 2015. “It includes a catalogue of over 100 prints by Caroline Watson and sixteen letters from her to William Hayley” (WBHC 3073).

Studies

McPherson, Heather. “Caroline Watson and the Theatre of Printmaking.” Female Printmakers, Printsellers, and Print Publishers in the Eighteenth Century: The Imprint of Women c. 1700-1830. Ed. Cristina S. Martinez and Cynthia E. Roman. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2024. 40-55. <Blake (2025)>

Strobel, Heidi A. The Artistic Matronage of Queen Charlotte (1744-1818): How a Queen Promoted Both Art and Female Artists in English Society. Lewiston, NY: Edwin Mellen Press, 2011.

Includes an account of Caroline Watson, who served as engraver to the Queen.

Wedgwood, Josiah, the Elder (1730-1795) and the Younger (1769-1834), Potters, Blake's Sometime Employers

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Robin Reilly)

Writing

Farrar, Katherine Euphemia, ed. Correspondence of Josiah Wedgwood. 3 vols. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010.

Finer, Ann, and George Savage, ed. Selected Letters. London: Cory, Adams & Mackay, 1965.

Studies

Blake and Wedgwood

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Wedgwood." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.1 (summer 1990): 249-50. ¹⁷⁵ <BBS 406>

Presents evidence that Blake was paid by Wedgwood (through John Flaxman) "for painting on Ceiling pictures" (249) at the Wedgwood home in Staffordshire.

Brylowe, Thora. Romantic Art in Practice: Cultural Work and the Sister Arts, 1760–1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

An important study of the Sister Arts in the Romantic era. It includes discussions of Blake and Antiquarianism, the Portland Vase (including Blake's engravings), the Hunts, John Landseer, and the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.

Hughes, G. Bernard. "Blake's Work for Wedgwood." Country Life 126 (1959): 194-196. <BB #1904>

"A careful account of the 1815 catalogue, no. 511" (BB #1904).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake and the Wedgwoods." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 59-65. ¹⁷⁶ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

On Blake's relationship to the Wedgwoods, with references to Erasmus Darwin and The Botanic Garden, and the first publication of Josiah Wedgwood's and Blake's 1815 correspondence and receipts.

Solecki, Sam. "William Blake: What Is an 'Etruscan' Doing in 'An Island in the Moon' (1784-85)?" The Etruscans in the Modern Imagination. Montreal and Kingston, London, and Chicago: McGill-Queen's University Press, 2022. 61-66. <Blake (2024)>

In a book on the reception of Etruscans, the short chapter on Blake highlights Blake's work for Josiah Wedgwood's Etruria Hall, Etruscan Column in Island, and the "Hetrurians" in A Descriptive Catalogue.

¹⁷⁵ As BBS points out (406n1), the pagination for Blake should have started anew with this issue. "[Correction to Pagination]" in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990), 75, offers the correct pagination, but as the both the html and the pdf version retain the erroneous pagination, I have retained the erroneous pagination here.

¹⁷⁶ "The great part first printed in" (59n1) TLS (9 Dec. 1926), <BB #2043>.

Sung, Mei-Ying. "Blake and the Chinamen." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 63-76. <WBHC 1857-62>

Details how "Chinamen," that is, pottery manufacturers like Josiah Wedgwood I (1730-95) and II (1769-1834), used "copper-plate engraving techniques [...] from which Blake failed to benefit" (63), even though the Spode pottery factory and Blake "sourced their copper plates from the same copper-plate makers," including G. Harris of 31 Shoe Lane, London (64).

Wedgwood without Blake

Jewitt, Llewellynn. The Wedgwicks: Being a Life of Josiah Wedgwood; with Notices of his Works and their Productions, Memoirs of the Wedgwood and Other Families, and a History of the Early Potteries of Staffordshire. London: Virtue Brothers and Co., 1865.

McKendrick, Neil. "Josiah Wedgwood: An Eighteenth-Century Entrepreneur in Salesmanship and Marketing Techniques." The Economic History Review [n.s.] 12.3 (1960): 408-433.

McKendrick, Neil. "Josiah Wedgwood and Factory Discipline." The Historical Journal 4.1 (1961): 30-55.

Meteyard, Eliza. The Life of Josiah Wedgwood. London, 1856-66. (Vol. 1 Vol. 2)

Meteyard, Eliza. Wedgwood and His Works. London: Bell and Daldy, 1873.

Moon, Iris. Melancholy Wedgwood. Cambridge: MIT Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Wollstonecraft, Mary (1759–97), Feminist, radical (See also Gender and Sexuality Studies, Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and Wollstonecraft, Original Stories from Real Life)

Bibliographies

Todd, Janet. Mary Wollstonecraft: An Annotated Bibliography. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 1976. Rpt. 2013.

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Barbara Taylor)

Studies

Blake and Wollstonecraft

Ackland, Michael. "The Embattled Sexes: Blake's Debt to Wollstonecraft in The Four Zoas." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16 (winter 1982-83): 172-83. <BBS 394>

Argues for Wollstonecraft's influence on the Emanations in The Four Zoas, with discussion of women in the Lambeth prophecies as well.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Different Face': William Blake and Mary Wollstonecraft." Wordsworth Circle 10.4 (1979): 349-50. <BBS 367>

Argues that Blake's Notebook and letter poem, "Mary," (i.e., "O Why was I born with a different Face"), was based on a passage of Wollstonecraft's novel Maria, which was reviewed by Henry Fuseli.

Bernath, Elizabeth. "'seeking Flowers to Comfort Her': Queer Botany in Blake's Visions, Darwin's Loves and Wollstonecraft's Rights of Woman." Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen

P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 111-22. <WBHC 1800-01>

“Alongside Blake’s botany in the 1790s [in Visions], I consider how two authors in Joseph Johnson’s circle of radical intellectuals, Erasmus Darwin and Mary Wollstonecraft, portray gender from botanically informed perspectives that suggest the naturalness of transgender and homoerotic sexualities” (111).

Blamires, David. “Elements of Morality: Salzmann and Wollstonecraft.” Telling Tales: The Impact of German on English Children’s Books 1780-1918. Cambridge: OpenBook Publishers, 2009. 39-49.¹⁷⁷

A useful overview of Salzmann’s life, thought, and work, and of Wollstonecraft’s translation. Blake is mentioned as the engraver.

Chapman, Wes. “Blake, Wollstonecraft, and the Inconsistency of Oothoon.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.1 (summer 1997): 4-17. <WBHC 1662>

“Blake decentered a woman-centered undertaking, appropriating parts of it for his own political purposes and projecting upon it his own reimaginings of female character” (4).

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 2010.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 44.4 (spring 2011): 116-42.

Essick speculates that Blake’s apprentice, Thomas Owen, may be responsible for the Salzmann engravings (142). Citing Essick, Bentley repeats this claim (WBHC 3107).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, Thomas Paine, and Biblical Revolution.” Studies in Romanticism 30.2 (1991): 189-212. <BBS 465-66, WBHC 2003>

With references primarily to Marriage, Urizen, and the annotations to Watson, examines Blake’s complicated relationship with Paine and other Enlightenment radicals, such as Joseph Johnson and Mary Wollstonecraft: “The Johnson circle was at once too secular in its liberalism and not radical enough in its revolutionism to satisfy Blake. The biblical revolution of the past had been replaced by a deistic ideology that was in part a revolution against biblical tradition” (212).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s ‘Female Will’ and Its Biographical Context.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 31 (1991): 615-30. <BBS 466, WBHC 2003>

An important essay that examines Blake’s relationship to Catherine Blake, Elizabeth Butts, Mary Wollstonecraft, and the engraver Caroline Watson in order “[t]o understand how Blake’s interactions with them influenced his poetic representations of women” (615).

Fay, Elizabeth. “Blake’s Wollstonecraft’s Girls.” Wordsworth Circle 49.1 (winter 2018): 32-40. <Blake (2019)>

¹⁷⁷ Not recorded in WBHC.

“Rather than reading Blake’s depictions of human forms in Original Stories as a subversive critique of Wollstonecraft’s approach to female identity-formation, because its strict lines are so at odds with his renditions of children and young women in his Illuminated Books, I am arguing that it should read as tacit acknowledgement of Wollstonecraft’s project of protective care” (40).

Freed-Isserow, Eugenie. “This Free Born Joy: William Blake’s Vision of Emancipation.” EAR: English Academy Review [of Southern Africa] 17 (2000): 111-30. <Blake (2003)>¹⁷⁸

With references to Blake’s use of Ossian’s Oithona’s rape plot and Blake’s arguments with Wollstonecraft, examines the connection between rape and slavery in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and in abolitionist debates.

Hilton, Nelson. “An Original Story.” Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 69-104. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

An important essay that uses both Wollstonecraft’s Vindication of the Rights of Woman (1792) and her relationship with Fuseli to read The Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Lee, Judith. “Ways of their Own: The Emanations of Blake’s Vala, or The Four Zoas.” ELH 50.1 (1983): 131-53. <BBS 547>

Gives an important emphasis to the agency of the Emanations and their relationship to Wollstonecraft: “Inheriting a social vision that places women as witnesses rather than as participants in social change, and a model of the imagination that subordinates the ‘feminine’ aspect as the source or barrier to inspiration rather than as the creative impulse itself, critics have not considered the possibility that the emanations of Vala function as characters as well as symbols” (131).

Lenihan, Liam. “Wollstonecraft’s Reading of Milton and the Sublime of Barry, Fuseli and Blake.” The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Considers the responses to Milton by Wollstonecraft, Barry, Fuseli, and Blake, with references to Visions of the Daughters of Albion, Edmund Burke, and William Godwin.

Locker, Frederick. “The Illustrations in Mrs. Godwin’s ‘Elements of Morality.’”¹⁷⁹ Notes and Queries 61 (old series) (1880): 493-94. <BBS 553>

“The plates in Salzmann’s Elements of Morality, tr. Mary Wollstonecraft, are not by Blake, as Gilchrist implies, but by Daniel Nicholaus Chodwiecki [1726-1801]” (BBS 553).

Matthews, Susan. Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Politeness. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2011. <WBHC 2381>

An important book that positions Blake’s use of “sex” against the changing meaning of the term and provides rich readings of Blake and gender primarily in relationship to ¹⁷⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

¹⁷⁹ Locker’s article commences in the right bottom corner of the pdf preview.

William Hayley and other significant members of Hayley's circle, and includes discussions of Fuseli and Wollstonecraft.

Matthews, Susan. "‘Hayley on his Toilette’: Blake, Hayley and Homophobia." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 209-20. <WBHC 1801-03>

"[T]race[s] Blake’s use of the satirical figure of the effeminate man in post-1800 references to William Hayley" (209), with discussion of Cowper and Fuseli. (See her Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Sexuality [2011] for an extension of these arguments.)

Makarova, Elena. “Zhizn' i sud'ba Meri Uolstonkraft \(1759–1797\): poverkh bar'erov [The Life and Destiny of Mary Wollstonecraft (1759–1797): Over the Barriers].” Istoriya [History] 13.5 (2022). In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2023)>

Mellor, Anne K. “Sex, Violence, and Slavery: Blake and Wollstonecraft.” Huntington Library Quarterly 58:3-4 (1995): 345-70. <WBHC 2176-77>

Key examination of Visions in relationship to Wollstonecraft. “I will explore what Blake meant by ‘slavery’ in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and what he considered to be the best way to ‘free’ oneself from that condition. And I will compare Blake’s ‘solution’ to the problem of female slavery with that proposed by Wollstonecraft” (345). Also considers Stedman’s view of slavery.

Mitchell, Orm. “Blake’s Subversive Illustrations to Wollstonecraft’s ‘stories’.” Mosaic 17.4 (1984): 17-34. <BBS 575>

“Blake reverses Wollstonecraft’s idea that the cause of society’s sickness is the ‘half-formed faculties’ of the child and that its cure will be effected by the development of the child’s reasoning faculty” (19). Treats Blake’s depictions of children and education in many different works.

Nelson, Sean David. “In the ‘Lilly of Havilah’: Sapphism and Chastity in Blake’s Jerusalem.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 83-97. <WBHC 1803-04>

Argues that Blake’s depiction of sapphism in Jerusalem is a response to Wollstonecraft’s use of chastity in A Vindication of the Rights of Woman.

Niimi, Hatsuko. “The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion: Oithona, Oothoon, and Mary Wollstonecraft.” Blake’s Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 93-127. ¹⁸⁰ <WBHC 2460-63>

An examination of Visions in light of Oithona from Ossian and Wollstonecraft’s writing.

¹⁸⁰ Translated by Niimi from her “Albion no musume tachi no urei—Wollstonecraft to Blake no joseitachi: The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion—Women in the Works of Wollstonecraft and Blake,” Toho Gakuen Daigaku Kenkyu Kiyo: Faculty Bulletin, Toho Gakuen School of Music 14 (1988), 99-120, <BBS 587>.

Van Wingen, Peter. "Into the Mystic: Rare Books Division Acquires Important Addition to Blake Collection." Library of Congress Information Bulletin 53 (1994): 443-44. <WBHC 2796>

"The Library of Congress acquired in 1994 a copy of Mary Wollstonecraft, Original Stories ([1791]), with Blake's prints coloured 'contemporary with the time of publication' in keeping with Blake's 'concept of the completed book' [though the "vibrant colors" described are not at all characteristic of Blake's works in Illuminated Printing in 1791]" (WBHC 2796, Bentley's emendation).

Wada, Ayako. "Visions of the Love Triangle and Adulterous Birth in Blake's The Four Zoas." Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 35-46. <WBHC 1803-04>

"This chapter explores a new way to read the relationship of Los, Urizen and Enitharmon in [The Four Zoas] as a love triangle, and further suggests that, to an extent, the poem in this aspect may be regarded as Blake's tribute to Mary Wollstonecraft and possibly her husband William Godwin" (35).

Wasser, Henry H. "Notes on the Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Modern Language Quarterly 9.2 (1948): 292-97. <BB #2927>

An early reading of Visions through the lens of Mary Wollstonecraft's relationship with Henry Fuseli.

Williams, Nicholas M. Ideology and Utopia in the Poetry of William Blake. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998. <WBHC 2866>

Reads Blake's literary works between the Songs and Jerusalem in conjunction with different utopian texts: the Songs with Rousseau's Emile; Visions of the Daughters of Albion with Wollstonecraft's Vindication of the Rights of Woman; America, The Song of Los, and The Four Zoas with Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution; Milton with Paine's Rights of Man; and Jerusalem with the writings of Robert Owen.

Wollstonecraft without Blake

Ahn, Somi. "The Metropolis and Female Citizenship in Mary Wollstonecraft's Original Stories from Real Life." Women's Writing 25.1 (2018): 21-34. <Blake (2019)>

Ayres, Brenda. Becoming Wollstonecraft: The Interconnection of Her Life and Works. New York: Routledge, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

A biography with nominal references to Blake and his illustrations but with many more to Henry Fuseli and Joseph Johnson.

Ayres, Brenda. Betwixt and Between: The Biographies of Mary Wollstonecraft. London: Anthem Press, 2017. <Blake (2020)>

Rather than an anthology of different lives, an "analysis of the diverse biographical representations of Wollstonecraft" (4).

Ayres, Brenda. Wollstonecraft and Religion. London and New York: Anthem Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Batterbee, Megan. "Re-establishing Identity through Testimony: The Rape Survival Narratives of Mary Hay's The Victim of Prejudice (1799) and Mary Wollstonecraft's Maria, or The Wrongs of Women (1798)." Consent: Legacies, Representations, and Frameworks for the Future. Ed. Sophie Franklin et al. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2024. n.p. <Blake (2025)>

"Consent within the romantic relationships entered into by the heroines of The Victim of Prejudice and Maria, or The Wrongs of Women deserves greater scrutiny because it depicts the shift in loyalty from one patriarchal figure to another: from guardian to lover, blood ties to marital allegiance. The abuses within this transition of power concern both the authors and modern consent scholars alike" (n.p.).

Bergès, Sandrine, and Alan Coffee. "Cocks on Dunghills— Wollstonecraft and Gouges on the Women’s Revolution." SATS 23.2 (2022): 135-52. <Blake (2023)>

"This essay looks at how Mary Wollstonecraft and Olympe de Gouges theorised the new tyranny that grew out of the French Revolution, that of 'petty tyrants' who found themselves like 'cocks on a dunghill' able to wield a new power over those less fortunate than themselves" (abstract).

Bergès, Sandrine, and Alan Coffee, ed. The Social and Political Philosophy of Mary Wollstonecraft. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2016. <Blake (2020)>

A collection of essays on Wollstonecraft's philosophy.

Bergès, Sandrine, and Alan Coffee. "Introduction." 1-13.

Tomaselli, Sylvana. "Reflections on Inequality, Respect, and Love in the Political Writings of Mary Wollstonecraft." 14-33.

Kendrick, Nancy. "Wollstonecraft on Marriage as Virtue Friendship." 34-49.

Reuter, Martina. "The Role of the Passions in Mary Wollstonecraft's Notion of Virtue." 50-66.

Mackenzie, Catriona. "Mary Wollstonecraft: An Early Relational Autonomy Theorist?" 67-91.

Botting, Eileen Hunt. "Mary Wollstonecraft, Children's Human Rights, and Animal Ethics." 92-116.

Brace, Laura. "Wollstonecraft and the Properties of (Anti-) Slavery." 117-34.

Pettit, Philip. "Republican Elements in the Thought of Mary Wollstonecraft." 135-47.

James, Susan. "Mary Wollstonecraft's Conception of Rights." 148-65.

Halldenius, Lena. "Representation in Mary Wollstonecraft's Political Philosophy." 166-82.

Coffee, Alan. "Mary Wollstonecraft, Public Reason, and the Virtuous Republic." 183-200.

Bergès, Sandrine. "Wet-Nursing and Political Participation: The Republican Approaches to Motherhood of Mary Wollstonecraft and Sophie de Grouchy." 201-17.

Taylor, Barbara. "Mary Wollstonecraft and Modern Philosophy." 218-25.

Bergès, Sandrine, Eileen Hunt Botting, and Alan Coffee, ed. The Wollstonecraftian Mind. Abingdon: Routledge, 2019. <Blake (2021)>

A collection of short essays on Wollstonecraft's background, major works, interlocutors, and philosophy.

Bergès, Sandrine, Eileen Hunt Botting, and Alan Coffee. "Editor's Introduction." 1-10.

Part 1: Background

Green, Karen. "The Defence of Women, 1400–1700." 13-24.

Broad, Jacqueline. "The Early Modern Period: Dignity and the Foundation of Women's Rights." 25-35.

Taylor, Natalie Fueher. "The Social Contract Tradition." 36-48.

Smith, Orianne. "Rational Dissent." 49-62.

O'Neill, Daniel. "The Scottish Enlightenment." 63-76.

Tegos, Spiros. "The Revolutionary Period." 77-89.

Part 2: Major Works

Tomaselli, Sylvana. "A Vindication of the Rights of Men." 93-103.

Johnson, Nancy. "A Vindication of the Rights of Woman." 104-15.

Laird, Susan. "Educational Works." 116-30.

Dolan, Elizabeth. "The Novels." 131-44.

Carroll, Ross. "Epistolary and Historical Writings." 145-58.

Part 3: Interlocutors

Brooke, Christopher. "Jean-Jacques Rousseau." 161-70.

Carlson, Liane. "Immanuel Kant." 171-82.

Fairclough, Mary. "Edmund Burke." 183-97.

Coffee, Alan. "Catharine Macaulay." 198-210.

Philp, Mark. "William Godwin." 211-23.

Cronin, Madeline Ahmed. "Jane Austen." 224-35.

Vetter, Lisa Pace. "Lucretia Mott." 236-47.

McCabe, Helen. "Harriet Taylor." 248-60.

Botting, Eileen Hunt. "John Stuart Mill." 261-72.

Gordon, Lyndall. "Virginia Woolf." 273-82.

Marsø, Lori J. "Simone de Beauvoir." 283-94.

Part 4: Philosophy

Dumler-Winckler, Emily. "Theology and Religion." 297-310.

Bour, Isabelle. "Epistemology." 311-22.

Sapiro, Virginia. "Virtue." 323-37.

Reuter, Martina. "Reason, Passion, Imagination." 338-50.

Gunther-Canada, Wendy. "Patriarchy and Social Power." 351-64.

Abbey, Ruth. "Masculinity." 365-77.

Part 5: Legacies

Kendrick, Nancy. "Marriage, Love, and Friendship." 381-90.

Weiss, Penny. "Feminist Liberalism." 391-403.

Halldénus, Lena. "Feminist Republicanism." 404-16.

Frazer, Elizabeth. "Democracy." 417-28.

Lefèuvre, Alexandre. "Human Rights." 429-40.

Brace, Laura. "Family." 441-51.

White, Melanie. "Citizenship." 452-63.

Bergès, Sandrine. "Capabilities, Adaptive Preferences, and Education." 464-75.

Bracewell, Lorna. "Gender and Social Theory." 476-88.

Regier, Emily F., and Nancy J. Hirschmann. "Freedom." 489-500.

Bergoffen, Debra. "On Becoming Human and Being Humane: Human Rights, Women's Rights, Species Rights." Religions 15.7 (2024): n.p. <Blake (2025)>

"This essay focuses on the nexus of vulnerability and rights. It argues that in transforming vulnerability from a stigma that alienated women from their humanity to the signature of human dignity, women bridged the gap between the liberatory promise of human rights and its exploitative patriarchal politics. It finds that the ideas of Mary Wollstonecraft, Simone de Beauvoir, Drucilla Cornell, and Jean-Luc Nancy were/are crucial to this transformed idea of dignity" (abstract).

Borham-Puyal, Miriam. "Jemima's Wrongs: Reading the Female Body in Mary Wollstonecraft's Prostitute Biography." International Journal of English Studies 19.1 (2019): 97-112. <Blake (2020)>

Botting, Eileen Hunt. "Wollstonecraft in Jamaica: The International Reception of A Vindication of the Rights of Men in the Kingston Daily Advertiser in 1791." History of European Ideas 47.8 (2021): 1304-14. <Blake (2022)>

“The reception of Wollstonecraft’s A Vindication of the Rights of Men (1790) in the Kingston Daily Advertiser helped to spread abolitionist and revolutionary discourse on rights in the British colony of Jamaica—due west of Saint-Domingue—during the first three months of 1791” (1304).

Botz, Samantha. “Reorienting Sympathy: Rereading Mary Wollstonecraft’s Vindication of the Rights of Men.” Studies in Romanticism 60.3 (2021): 331-52. <Blake (2022)>

Develops the Vindication’s response to Burke.

Boyson, Rowan. “Mary Wollstonecraft and the Right to Air.” Romanticism 27.2 (2021): 173-86. <Blake (2022)>

“This article situates her numerous remarks on air alongside medical sources, racialized climatological theory, slavery cases, and the pneumatic chemistry of the 1790s” (abstract).

Brooks, Ann. “‘Uncompromising politics’: Mary Wollstonecraft and Catherine Macaulay.” Women, Politics and the Public Sphere. Bristol: Policy Press, 2019. 23-48. <Blake (2020)>

Compares Wollstonecraft and Macaulay in a wider context that stretches from the Bluestockings to Hillary Clinton.

Civale, Susan. “‘A man in love’: Revealing the Unseen Mary Wollstonecraft.” Romantic Women’s Life Writing: Reputation and Afterlife. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2019. 73-140. <Blake (2020)>

“This chapter traces Wollstonecraft’s reputation in her lifetime, looking at her early reception and her self-construction in her Vindications and Letters, before turning to Godwin’s Memoirs and its aftermath” (73).

Clery, E. J. “Revising the Professional Woman Writer: Mary Wollstonecraft and Precarious Income.” Huntington Library Quarterly 84.1 (spring 2021): 27-38. <Blake (2022)>

“This essay examines debate on the category of the professional woman writer and reconsiders its relevance to Wollstonecraft’s authorial career, using correspondence with her publisher, Joseph Johnson, to argue for the applicability of the concept of the precariat” (abstract).

Collings, David. “Catastrophic Benevolence, Ruinous Immortality: Wollstonecraft’s Shipwreck.” Disastrous Subjectivities: Romanticism, Modernity, and the Real. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2019. 31-55. <Blake (2021)>

Cronin, Madeline Ahmed. “Mary Wollstonecraft’s Conception of ‘True Taste’ and Its Role in Egalitarian Education and Citizenship.” European Journal of Political Theory 18.4 (2019): 508-28. <Blake (2020)>

“Although she shares some of Edmund Burke’s and David Hume’s assumptions, [Wollstonecraft] proposes dramatic revision of the extant model of refined taste driven by the spread of rational education. In this way, she attempts to rescue ‘true taste’ from its sentimental context – one permeated by false assumptions about femininity and class” (abstract).

Dumler-Winckler, Emily. Modern Virtue: Mary Wollstonecraft and a Tradition of Dissent. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024, 2025)>

An account of Wollstonecraft's thought regarding virtue.

Dumler-Winckler, Emily. "Protestant Political Theology and Pluralism: From a Politics of Refusal to Tending and Organizing for Common Goods." Religions 10.9 (2019). 18 pp. <Blake (2020)>

Considers Wollstonecraft within the context of religious dissent. Widely and favorably reviewed.

Dumler-Winckler, Emily. "Reproductive Justice: Mary Wollstonecraft on Women's 'Rights Against Domination' for the 'Cause of Virtue.'" Political Theology: The Journal of Christian Socialism (2024): pp. 1-21. <Blake (2025)>

"The article challenges" "anachronistic and revisionist histories" of Wollstonecraft that "have sought to reclaim the label "feminist" by enlisting Wollstonecraft in the contemporary antiabortion, anticontraception, and heterosexual family-centered cause" (abstract).

Gallagher, Megan. "Wollstonecraft's Gothic Violence." Polity 54.3 (2022): 457-77. <Blake (2023)>

"This paper introduces the concept of gothic violence in order to better theorize how domination operates in Mary Wollstonecraft's unfinished novel, The Wrongs of Woman, or Maria" (abstract).

Green, Karen. "The Rights of Woman and the Equal Rights of Men." Political Theory 49.3 (2021): 403-30. <Blake (2022)>

Some mention of Wollstonecraft in relationship to Mary Astell and Catharine Macaulay.

Hobday, Alexander. "'The Great Distinction of Our Nature': Imagination and Commerce in the Later Wollstonecraft." Romanticism 30.3 (2025): 236-48. <Blake (2025)>

"This article elucidates a central but underexplored theme in Wollstonecraft's later writing: the distinction between the imagination and commerce" (abstract).

Horrocks, Ingrid. "'Take, O World! Thy Much Indebted Tear!': Mary Wollstonecraft Travels." Women Wanderers and the Writing of Mobility, 1784–1814. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2017. 140-68. <Blake (2020)>

An analysis of Letters Written During a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark.

Hulbert, Annette. "Teaching Mary Wollstonecraft's Travelogue of Historical Trauma." ABO: Interactive Journal for Women in the Arts, 1640– 1830 12.2 (2022). <Blake (2023)>

"In this essay, I describe a metacognitive exercise in which students reflected on Wollstonecraft's meditation on survival in an era of environmental catastrophe with their own 'travelogues' written from where they logged into the Zoom classroom" (abstract).

Hunt, Eileen M., ed. Portraits of Wollstonecraft: The Making of a Feminist Icon, 1785 to 2020. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2023. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

Documents with scholarly notes both visual portraits and verbal descriptions of Wollstonecraft.

Journal of Gender Studies 28.7 (2019). Special Issue: “Mary Wollstonecraft, Feminist Pioneer: Life, Work and Contemporary Importance.” Ed. Kathleen Lennon and Rachel Alsop. <Blake (2020)>

Includes papers from the 2017 University of Hull conference Mary Wollstonecraft: Life, Work and Legacy.

Lennon, Kathleen, and Rachel Alsop. “Editorial.” 755-57.

Todd, Janet. “The First Life of Mary Wollstonecraft: Godwin’s Perplexing Memoirs.” 759-65.

Browne, Victoria. “The Forgetting of Mary Wollstonecraft’s Religiosity: Teleological Secularism within Feminist Historiography.” 766-76.

Maione, Angela. “Over the Centuries: A History of Wollstonecraft Reception.” 777-88.

O’Donnell, Katherine. “Effeminate Edmund Burke and the Masculine Voice of Mary Wollstonecraft.” 789-801.

Niknam, Arman Teymouri. “Mary Wollstonecraft’s Divergent Attitudes towards Trust.” 802-13.

Hague, Ros. “Autonomy as a Disposition to Non-Domination in the Work of Mary Wollstonecraft.” 814-25.

Hartman, Matthew H. “An Aristotelian Paradox: Wollstonecraft and the Implications of Marriage as Friendship.” 826-36.

Pramaggiore, Valentina. “Deconstructing the Boundaries: Gender and Genre in Mary Wollstonecraft’s Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway and Denmark.” 837-45.

Alsop, Rachel, and Suzanne Clisby. “A Vindication of the Rights of Girls: Surviving Girlhood in the 21st Century.” 846-55.

Johnson, Nancy E., and Paul Keen, ed. Mary Wollstonecraft in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2020. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023)> The book includes many short but useful chapters on a range of contexts and issues, with targeted references for further research.

Johnson, Nancy E., and Paul Keen. “Preface.” xxi-xxvii.

Part I: Life and Works

Chisholm, Kate. “Biography.” 3-10.

McInnes, Andrew. “Correspondence.” 11-20.

Carlson, Julie. “Family.” 21-28.

Fallon, David. "Joseph Johnson." 29-37.

Part II: Critical Fortunes

Johnson, Nancy E. "Early Critical Reception." 41-49.

Botting, Eileen Hunt. "Nineteenth-Century Critical Reception." 50-56.

Murray, Julie. "1970s Critical Reception." 57-63.

O'Brien, Eliza. "Recent Critical Reception." 64-72.

Part III: Historical and Cultural Contexts

The French Revolution Debate

Favret, Mary A. "Writing the French Revolution." 77-86.

O'shaughnessy, David. "Radical Societies." 87-94.

Mee, Jon. "Radical Publishers." 95-101.

Keen, Paul. "British Conservatism." 102-08.

The Rights of Woman Debate

Fairclough, Mary. "Jacobin Reformers." 111-18.

Levy, Michelle. "Liberal Reformers." 119-26.

Grogan, Claire. "Conservative Reformers." 127-35.

Philosophical Frameworks

Tomaselli, Sylvana. "French Philosophes." 139-45.

McKendry, Andrew. "Dissenters." 146-54.

Kirkley, Laura. "Jean-Jacques Rousseau." 155-63.

de Bruyn, Frans. "Edmund Burke." 164-72.

Clemitt, Pamela. "William Godwin." 173-81.

Halldenius, Lena. "Political Theory." 182-88.

Moore, Jane. "Feminist Theory." 189-96.

Legal and Social Culture

Ward, Ian. "The Constitution." 199-206.

Packham, Catherine. "Property Law." 207-14.

Probert, Rebecca. "Domestic Law." 215-21.

Donington, Katie. "Slavery and Abolition." 222-29.

Schellenberg, Betty A. "The Bluestockings." 230-37.

Jones, Vivien. "Conduct Literature." 238-45.

Ferguson, Frances. "Theories of Education." 246-54.

Literature

Wetmore, Alex. "Sentimentalism and Sensibility." 257-63.

London, April. "English Jacobin Novels." 264-72.

Kelly, Gary. "Anti-Jacobin Novels." 273-80.

O'Malley, Andrew. "Children's Literature." 281-88.

Gamer, Michael. "Gothic Literature." 289-96.

Perkins, Pamela. "Travel Writing." 297-304.

Sachs, Jonathan. "History Writing." 305-13.

George, Jacqueline. "Periodicals." 314-22.

Johns, Alessa. "Translations." 323-31.

Kidd, Chelsea. ""I Could Almost Wish for the Madman's Happiness": Escape, Escapism, and Madness in Wollstonecraft's Novels." European Romantic Review 35.2 (2024): 213-33. <Blake (2025)>

Reading "Mary, A Fiction (1788) and The Wrongs of Woman, or Maria (1798)," "I propose a feminist perspective on women's insanity as a form of escape and a reading of this madness as an assertion of agency" (abstract).

King, Elizabeth. "Anti-Gothic Gothic Animals in Mary Wollstonecraft's Maria \(1798\)." Eighteenth-Century Life 48.3 (2024): 101-19. <Blake (2025)>

"Wollstonecraft employs gothic iconography while simultaneously dismissing gothic sensationalism for its failure to capture women's real-world subjugation; thus, an 'anti-gothic gothic' perspective characterizes her depiction of the dark realities of Enlightenment society. The animals that feature in Maria are likewise anti-gothic gothic animals" (abstract).

Kirkley, Laura. "Across Disciplines, Languages, and Nations: Recent Scholarship on Mary Wollstonecraft." Literature Compass 19.10 (2022): 12 pp. <Blake (2023)>

Surveys twenty-first-century scholarship on Wollstonecraft.

Kirkley, Laura. Mary Wollstonecraft: Cosmopolitan. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. <Blake (2025)>

Kirkley, Laura. "Mary Wollstonecraft's Translational Afterlife: French and German Rewritings of A Vindication of the Rights of Woman in the Revolutionary Era." European Romantic Review 33.1 (2022): 1-24.

"I argue that Wollstonecraft's feminist thought was reshaped by its passage into different national and cultural contexts" (abstract).

Lambrianou, Nickolas. “Monumental Failures: The Contested Bodies and Sites of Public Art under Lockdown.” Sculpture Journal 31.1 (2022): 75-92. <Blake (2023)>

“This article reads the events of June 2020 surrounding Bristol’s Colston statue and Maggi Hambling’s monument to Mary Wollstonecraft as examples of the tensions emerging around the idea of the monument under lockdown. If lockdown is understood as the suspension of personal and social freedoms, then it is not simply individual movement which is at stake, but the shared space of representation too” (abstract).

Lefebvre, Alexandre. “The Juridical Subject as Ethical Subject: Wollstonecraft on the Rights of Man.” Human Rights and the Care of the Self. Durham: Duke University Press, 2018. 25-46. <Blake (2020)>

Makarova, Elena. “Zhizn' i sud'ba Meri Uolstonkraft \(1759–1797\): poverkh bar'erov [The Life and Destiny of Mary Wollstonecraft (1759–1797): Over the Barriers].” Istoriya [History] 13.5 (2022). In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2023)>

McInnes, Andrew. Wollstonecraft's Ghost: The Fate of the Female Philosopher in the Romantic Period. Abingdon: Routledge, 2017. <Blake (2019)>

Muller, S. Marek. “Archival Mocking as Feminist Praxis: A Rhetorical Repurposing of A Vindication of the Rights of Brutes.” Women's Studies in Communication 44.1 (2021): 23-43. <Blake (2022)>

An ironic reading of A Vindication of the Rights of Brutes, Taylor’s parody of Mary Wollstonecraft’s A Vindication of the Rights of Woman, that transforms it into “a solid defense of animal liberation based on vegan ecofeminist principles of empathy, care, and the interconnectedness of the human and more-than-human worlds” (40).

Packham, Catherine. “Genre and the Mediation of Political Economy in Edmund Burke's Reflections on the Revolution in France and Mary Wollstonecraft's A Vindication of the Rights of Men.” Eighteenth Century 60.3 (fall 2019): 249-68. <Blake (2022)>

“Burke rewrites recent historical events as fiction or theater; Wollstonecraft exposes the contradictions of his text like an exasperated literary critic, inviting generic comparison to a commentary” (250).

Packham, Catherine. Mary Wollstonecraft and Political Economy: The Feminist Critique of Commercial Modernity. Cambridge, UK, and New York: Cambridge University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Parker, Deven M. “Epistolary Form in the Age of the Post Office.” Studies in English Literature, 1500–1900 59.3 (summer 2019): 625-45. <Blake (2020)>

“Examines the 1790s epistolary novels of radical women writers Mary Wollstonecraft and Mary Hays in light of the British post office’s rise to power under the Pitt administration” (abstract).

Philp, Mark. Radical Conduct: Politics, Sociability and Equality in London, 1789–1815. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022, 2023)>

Considers political radicalism from the perspective of conduct and the relationship of the private and the public, with a major focus on William Godwin and Mary Wollstonecraft throughout (including Godwin's Memoirs) and a few passing references to Joseph Johnson.

Reuter, Martina. “Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Mary Wollstonecraft on the Imagination.” British Journal for the History of Philosophy 25.6 (Dec. 2017): 1138-60. <Blake (2019)>

Ryndina, M. E. “Vzglyady Olimpii de Guzh i Meri Uolstonkraft kak otrazhenie dvizheniya feminizma [The Views of Olympe de Gouges and Mary Wollstonecraft as a Reflection of the Feminist Movement].” XXIV vserossiyskaya studencheskaya nauchno-prakticheskaya konferentsiya Nizhnevartovskogo gosudarstvennogo universiteta [XXIV All-Russian Student Scientific and Practical Conference of Nizhnevartovsk State University]. Vol. 5. Nizhnevartovsk, 2022. 290-95. In Russian. <Blake (2023)>

Shchuka, Virlana M. “Nursed under his own Eye': Co-nursing Fathers and the Spectacle of Breastfeeding in the British Romantic Period.” Eighteenth-Century Fiction 34.4 (2022): 441-69. <Blake (2023)>

On representations of fathers watching breastfeeding, with a consideration of “the works of several Romantic-period women writers, particularly Mary Wollstonecraft and Frances Burney” (446).

Shunina, Z.S. “Brak kak vyzov obshchestvu: Meri Uolstonkraft i Uil'yam Godvin [Marriage as a Challenge to Society: Mary Wollstonecraft and William Godwin].” Protsessy integratsii i differentsiatsii v mire: sotsial'no-gumanitarnyy aspekt: materialy Vserossiyskoy studencheskoy nauchnoy konferentsii [Processes of Integration and Differentiation in the World: Social and Humanitarian Aspect: Materials of the All-Russian Student Scientific Conference]. Ekaterinburg, 2022. 276-86. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2023)>

Shunina, Zoya. “Istoricheskii i pouchitel'nyi obzor proiskhozhdeniya i razvitiya Frantsuzskoi revolyutsii i ee vliyaniya na Evropu Meri Uolstonkraft kak istoricheskii istochnik [An Historical and Moral View of the Origin and Progress of the French Revolution and the Effect It Has Produced in Europe by Mary Wollstonecraft as a Historical Source].” Mir i pandemii: transformatsii, kommunikatsii, strategii: materialy Vserossiiskoi nauchnoi konferentsii studentov-stipendiatov Oksfordskogo Rossiiskogo fonda (Ekaterinburg, 25 noyabrya 2020 g.) [World and Pandemics: Transformations, Communications, Strategies: Proceedings of the All-Russian Scientific Conference of Students-Fellows of the Oxford Russian Foundation (Yekaterinburg, 25 November 2020)]. Yekaterinburg, 2021. 324-26. In Russian. <Blake (2022)>

Shunina, Zoya. “Ostavlyayu vas s mirom ..., pis'mo M. Uolstonkraft G. Imleyu [‘I Leave You in Peace ...,’ a Letter by Mary Wollstonecraft to Gilbert Imlay].” Imagines mundi 5.11 (2021): 39-44. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2022)>

The article includes the first Russian translation of a letter from Wollstonecraft to her lover Imlay, and a commentary.

Sigler, David. “The Necrophilia of Wollstonecraft’s ‘The Cave of Fancy.’” Romantic Women’s Writing and Sexual Transgression. Ed. Kathryn Ready and David Sigler. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Siméon, Ophélie. “‘Goddess of reason’: Anna Doyle Wheeler, Owenism and the Rights of Women.” History of European Ideas 47.2 (2021): 285-98. <Blake (2022)>

Focuses on Anna Doyle Wheeler, who “fused [Robert] Owen’s co-operative ideals with calls for women’s emancipation” (abstract); includes references to Wollstonecraft.

Sireci, Fiore. “Writers Who Have Rendered Women Objects of Pity’: Mary Wollstonecraft’s Literary Criticism in the Analytical Review and A Vindication of the Rights of Woman.”

Journal of the History of Ideas 79.2 (Apr. 2018): 243-65. <Blake (2019)>

Slegers, Roos. “The Ethics and Economics of Middle Class Romance: Wollstonecraft and Smith on Love in Commercial Society.” Journal of Ethics 25.4 (Dec. 2021): 525-42. <Blake (2022)>

“This article shows the philosophical kinship between Adam Smith and Mary Wollstonecraft on the subject of love” (abstract).

Sokowski, Sandra. “Disciplining Desire and the Problems of Authorship in Denis Diderot’s The Nun and Mary Wollstonecraft’s Maria: Or, the Wrongs of Woman.” Comparatist 45 (Oct. 2021): 324-46. <Blake (2022)>

“These two novels pose important questions regarding the assumptions at this time about women’s writing: what it means for one to write her experience, and how her readers may misinterpret (either willfully or not) her self-representation” (324).

Steiner, Enit Karafili. “Mary Wollstonecraft’s ‘Love of Mankind’ and Cosmopolitan Suffering in Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway and Denmark.” Studies in Romanticism 58.1 (spring 2019): 3-26. <Blake (2020)>

Temple, Kathryn. “Heart of Agitation: Mary Wollstonecraft, Emotion, and Legal Subjectivity.” Eighteenth Century 58.3 (fall 2017): 371-82. <Blake (2019)>

Tillotson, Marcia. “Recent Wollstonecraft.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1977): 58-64.¹⁸¹

A review of Mary, A Fiction, and The Wrongs of Woman, ed. and intro. Gary Kelly. (London: Oxford University Press, 1976), Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, ed. and intro. Carol H. Poston (Lincoln and London: University of Nebraska Press, 1976); Godwin & Mary: Letters of William Godwin and Mary Wollstonecraft, ed. Ralph M. Wardle (Lincoln and London: University of Nebraska Press, 1977); A Vindication of the Rights of Woman, ed. and intro. Miriam Brody Kramnick (Harmondsworth, England: Penguin Books, 1975); and Claire Tomalin, The Life and Death of Mary Wollstonecraft (New York and London: 1974).

Tomaselli, Sylvana. ““Have Ye Not Heard That We Cannot Serve Two Masters?: The Platonism of Mary Wollstonecraft.” Revisioning Cambridge Platonism: Sources and Legacy.” Ed. Douglas Hedley and David Leech. Cham, CH: Springer, 2019. 175-89. <Blake (2021)>

¹⁸¹ Not recorded in BBS.

Also references Thomas Taylor and the Joseph Johnson circle.

Tomaselli, Sylvana. Wollstonecraft: Philosophy, Passion, and Politics. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023)>

Offers a lucid distillation of Wollstonecraft's thought, with some biographical and historical context. Brief references to William Roscoe, Henry Fuseli, Joseph Johnson, and Blake.

Tumanova, A. “Idei o vospitanii i ob obrazovanii Meri Uolstonkraft [Mary Wollstonecraft's Ideas about Parenting and Education].” Dni nauki studentov Vladimirskogo gosudarstvennogo universiteta imeni Aleksandra Grigor'evicha i Nikolaia Grigor'evicha Stoletovykh. Sbornik materialov zaочnykh nauchno-prakticheskikh konferentsii [Days of Science of Vladimir State University Students. Collection of Materials of Correspondence Scientific and Practical Conferences]. Vladimir, 2020. 2346-51. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

Weinglass, D.H. “Henry Fuseli's Letter of Enquiry to Paris on Behalf of Mary Wollstonecraft's Sister Everina.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.4 (spring 1988): 144-46. <BBS 402>

Argues that a 17 Jan. 1788 letter “provides a terminus a quo for the beginning of [Fuseli and Wollstonecraft's] acquaintance” (145).

Weiss, Deborah. The Female Philosopher and Her Afterlives: Mary Wollstonecraft, the British Novel, and the Transformations of Feminism, 1796–1811. Cham, CH: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer Nature, 2017. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2023)>

“This study aims to refocus discussion of late-Enlightenment/Romantic-period women writers by arguing that the figure of the female philosopher—a literary character brought into existence by Mary Wollstonecraft's performance as the author of A Vindication of the Rights of Woman—came to embody the transformations of feminism during the period in which British society reacted to the French Revolution” (1).

Weiss, Deborah. “Madness and Maria: The Wrongs of Woman and Patriarchal Control.” Women and Madness in the Early Romantic Novel: Injured Minds, Ruined Lives. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

White, Willow. “Feminist Sensibilities: The Feud of Elizabeth Inchbald and Mary Wollstonecraft.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 55.3 (2022): 299-315. <Blake (2023)>

“This article examines the acrimonious relationship between Elizabeth Inchbald and Mary Wollstonecraft through the lens of their differing approaches to feminism and sensibility” (abstract).

Yücel, Uğur Eylül. “The Place of Animals in Wollstonecraft's Early Educational Writings.” Dialogue: Canadian Philosophical Review / Revue canadienne de philosophie (2024): pp. 1-18. <Blake (2025)>

“Thomas Taylor's parody of Mary Wollstonecraft's support for rights of women and humans raises a question: does his satire unwittingly propose a defence of animal rights found in Wollstonecraft's arguments?” (abstract).

Yuen-Yuk, Liz Wan. “Haunted beyond Dreams: The Gothic and Enlightenment in Mary Wollstonecraft’s Mary, A Fiction.” Gothic Dreams and Nightmares. Ed. Carol Margaret Davison. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

“With its strategic portrayal of nightmares in which reality and dreams are literally and metaphorically interwoven, Mary, as a prototypical Gothic novel, simultaneously expresses Matrimonial dissent and feminist values” (n.p.).

Wolfson, Susan J. On Mary Wollstonecraft’s “A Vindication of the Rights of Woman”: The First of a New Genus. New York: Columbia University Press, 2023. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

V. Bibliographies (Including Standard Bibliographies, Books and Essays with Substantial Bibliographic Content; Bibliographies of Exhibitions, Bibliographies of Musical Settings; Annotated Bibliographies, Historic Bibliographies): (See also Standard Catalogues)

Standard Bibliographies and Updates

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Books: Annotated Catalogues of William Blake's Writings in Illuminated Printing, in Conventional Typography and in Manuscript and Reprints Thereof: Reproductions of his Designs, Books with his Engravings, Catalogues, Books he owned, and Scholarly and Critical Works about him. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1977. With a New Preface and Post Script. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2000.¹⁸² <BBS 294, WBHC 18-20>

As accompanied by its two sequels, Blake Books Supplement (1995) and William Blake and His Circle (2017), Blake Books (1978, 2000) is the standard comprehensive bibliography for works by and about Blake. It is abbreviated in scholarship as BB.

Using categories first established by Geoffrey Keynes's A Bibliography of William Blake (1921), Blake Books contains detailed bibliographical descriptions of Blake's writings; (including descriptions of each copy of the illuminated books, provenance, and location) editions of Blake's writings (including selections); reproductions of drawings and paintings; commercial book engravings (including different editions and variants); catalogues and bibliographies reproducing or listing Blake's works; the books Blake was known to have owned; and scholarship (including biographies, reviews, and dissertations). Bentley's introduction remains a useful overview of Blake's life, work, and critical reception.

Blake Books (2000) includes a new preface and postscript along with an unaltered reprint of the 1978 edition. The preface is an instructive bibliographical essay on important work on Blake since 1975, and the postscript lists major works.

Bentley's article “A Supplement to Blake Books” was his first effort to update the bibliography. Robert N. Essick's review of Blake Books contains many substantial corrections, as do Essick's standard catalogues, The Separate Plates of William Blake (1983) and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations (1991).

For the standard catalogue of Blake's paintings and drawings, see Butlin's The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake (1981).

For the standard bibliography of Blake set to music, see Fitch's Blake Set to Music.

G.E. Bentley and Martin Nurmi's A Blake Bibliography: Annotated Lists of Works, Studies, and Blakeana (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1964) was the precursor to Blake Books, and the major differences between the two are laid out by Bentley on BB pp. 11-12.

¹⁸² For corrections of the 1977 edition, see Robert N. Essick's review and R.J. Shroyer's “Blake's Copy of Lavater's Aphorisms on Man: A Correction of G.E. Bentley, Jr., Blake Books,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.2 (fall 1979), 108, <BBS 388>.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Books Supplement. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1995. <WBHC 1259-60>

Organized like its predecessor, Blake Books, Blake Books Supplement records newly discovered copies of Blake's works and the books he owned in bold, and it updates the provenance and location of the previously recorded and newly discovered works. It records new scholarship on Blake, as well as new editions of previously recorded scholarship.

Bentley's introduction to Blake Books Supplement continues his bibliographical and critical survey from Blake Books through 1992, which is roughly the terminal date for the other updates. It is abbreviated in scholarship as BBS.

The sequel to Blake Books Supplement is William Blake and His Circle (2017).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Sale Catalogues of William Blake's Works: 1791-2017. E.J. Pratt Library. Emmanuel College Library. University of Toronto. May 2017.

An exhaustive list of every known sale catalogue with items by William Blake through May 2017. For subsequent material, consult Essick's and now Crosby's "Blake in the Marketplace."

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Supplement to Blake Books." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.3 (winter 1977-78): 136-77. <BBS 383>

The first update to Blake Books. For a description, see the annotation for Blake Books.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Studies in Japan: A Bibliography of Works on William Blake Published in Japan 1893-1993. Tokyo: Japan Association of English Romanticism, 1994. <WBHC 1245>

A comprehensive record of reprints, translations, catalogues, and studies of Blake written in Japanese following the categories of Blake Books. It is a substantial record of Blake's reception in Japan. For additional entries missed by Bentley, see Kazumitsu Watarai's "A Bibliography of William Blake in Japan, 1969-1977." For subsequent work, see William Blake and His Circle and the annual Blake Checklist.

Abbreviated in scholarship as BSJ.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. with Assistance of Keiko Aoyama, Hikari Sato, Li-Ping Geng, and Fernando Castanedo. [William Blake and His Circle: Publications and Discoveries from 1992 \[to 2016\] Including Addenda to Blake Records, Second Edition \(2004\)](#). Toronto, 2010-17.

A massive successor to Bentley's bibliographic work in Blake Books and Blake Books Supplement and to his biographical work in Blake Records, which updates and corrects the material in all these sources through 2016. It also includes reviews, which were not recorded by either of its predecessors. It provides tables of watermarks and stab-holes (pp.142-56) and the size and probable cost of the copperplates used for the engravings (with each individual entry). Abbreviated in scholarship as WBHC.

Much of the work is a synthesis of the material produced for Bentley's tenure on the annual Blake checklist (1993-2016), though I have noted significant discrepancies.

Discoveries after 2016 are recorded in Essick's and now Crosby's "Blake in the Marketplace," with Calè's "Blake and Exhibitions," Whittaker's "Blake and Music," and Ripley et al.'s "William Blake and His Circle" being the latest forms of the Blake checklist.

Calè, Luisa. "Blake and Exhibitions." Published annually in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.

The annual checklist of exhibitions of Blake's work, published in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly since the summer of 2018.

Crosby, Mark. "Blake in the Marketplace." Published annually in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.

The annual description of sales and discoveries regarding Blake and his circle published in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly. From the winter of 1973-74 to the spring of 2023, it was written by Robert N. Essick. In the spring of 2024, it was taken over by Mark Crosby.

It includes updates to Essick's catalogues, The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations: A Catalogue and Study of the Plates Engraved by Blake after Designs by Other Artists.

For an overview of Essick's tenure, see Sarah Jones, "Our Sales Review Editor," Hell's Printing Press (17 Mar. 2024).

Ripley, Wayne C., Fernando Castanedo, Hikari Sato, Hüseyin Alhas, and Vera Serdechnaia. "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Recent Scholarship." Published annually in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.

The current iteration of the annual checklist on editions, catalogues, bibliographies, biographies, and scholarship on Blake and his circle. It has been published in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly since the summer of 2018.¹⁸³

While its structure largely follows that of Blake Books, it also describes notable digital resources pertaining to Blake.

It currently records material produced in English, the Romance languages, Japanese, Turkish, and Cyrillic languages.

Abbreviated in scholarship as <Blake (year)>. Note that the "(year)" in the citation refers to publication year of the issue of Blake in which the checklist appeared, and not to the year the checklist claims to cover.

Watarai, Kazumitsu. "A Bibliography of William Blake in Japan, 1969-1977." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.3 (winter 1978-79): 198-201. <BBS 386>

Entries supplementing Blake Books (1977).

¹⁸³ For a history of the Blake checklist, see the introduction to Ripley's first "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Recent Scholarship," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.1 (summer 2018).

Books and Essays with Substantial Bibliographic Content

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake Among the Slavs: A Checklist.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 50-54. <BBS 383>

A bibliography of Blake translations and criticism in Russian and other Slavic languages compiled by M.V. Brestkina, Bibliographer of the Saltykov-Shchedrin Library, and translated by Lisa Schneider and Sarah Bentley. See also Detlef W. Dörrbeck and Marta Slowiková’s “Some Minor Additions to Bentley’s ‘Blake Among the Slavs,’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.3 (winter 1978-79), 198, and Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley’s The Reception of Blake in Europe (2019).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Eternal Wheels of Intellect: Dissertations on William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.4 (spring 1979): 224-43. <BBS 387>

Analyzes trends in dissertations on Blake.

Crosby, Mark, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. “William Blake and the Age of Revolution: The Interdisciplinary Blake MA Course, Center for Eighteenth Century Studies, University of York, 1998-2004: An Appreciation, Checklist of Dissertations and Publications.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (fall 2006): 72-73. <WBHC 1709>

A description of the Master’s course at the University of York on Blake taught by Michael Phillips from 1998 to 2004 and of the Blake scholars it helped to produce.

Dörrbecker, D.W. “In . . . Cambridge & in Oxford, places of Thought: Blake in British Theses, 1950-1994.” Trier an der Mosel, 1995. <WBHC 1260>

Gross, Rochelle C., and C.M. Henning. “Dissertations on Blake: 1963-1975.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 54-59. <BBS 383>

Taken from Dissertation Abstracts and Dissertation Abstracts International, 1964-1976.

Jing-yu, Gu. “Unlisted Articles on Blake Published in China.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 157-59. <BBS 396>

Records and summarizes articles not found in Blake Books and Malmqvist’s “Blake in China.”

Malmqvist, N.G.D. “Blake in China.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 24-28. <BBS 388>

On Blake’s Chinese reception. Focused on the period around 1957 when Blake was named poet of the year by the World Peace Conference. (For the impact of this on Blake’s reception in the Soviet Union, see Vera Serdechnaia’s “[Uil’iam Bleik v sovetskoi retsepsií: formirovanie obraza ‘revoliutsionnogo romantika’ \[William Blake in the Soviet Reception: Forming the Image of ‘Revolutionary Romantic’\]](#)”).

Spector, Sheila A., with the assistance of Kendall DeBoer and Sarah Jones. “List of Biblical Illustrations.” William Blake’s Biblical Illustrations. William Blake Archive. 27 Apr. 2021. <Blake (2022)>

The list includes: “1) biblical reference; 2) title of work; 3) most commonly accepted date of composition; 4) medium; 5) major catalogue reference; 6) comments, including initial provenance; and 7) link to the image in the Blake Archive if published there.”

Van Kleeck, Justin. “A Bibliography for the Study of VALA/The Four Zoas.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.3 (winter 2007-08): 100-24. <WBHC 1714>

A bibliography through 2007.

Bibliographies of Exhibitions¹⁸⁴

Myrone, Martin. “Blake in Exhibition and on Display, 1904–2014.” “William Blake: The Man from the Future?” Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue. Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker 365-79. <Blake (2017)>

Chronicles the exhibitions and displays of Blake between 1904 and 2014.

Myrone, Martin. “Blake the Artist: At Tate and Abroad.” The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. 679-92. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

Includes a list of the Tate exhibitions of Blake and “a checklist of art exhibitions in Europe where Blake was represented as a visual artist” (689).

Paley, Morton D. “Timeline of the European Reception of William Blake, 1789–2016.” The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. xxviii-lxv. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

A very useful synthesis that provides nations, titles, publication dates, and exhibition dates.

Townsend, Joyce H., ed. William Blake: The Painter at Work. London: Tate Publishing, 2003.¹⁸⁵ <WBHC 2775-79>

An important collection of essays on the more technical features of Blake’s painting, with sections devoted to the watercolors, the large color prints, and the temperas. The book also analyzes Blake’s use of paper, paints and other materials; his practices of framing; the materials he used; and the contexts of his exhibitions.

¹⁸⁴ See also the Catalogue Sections in BB, BBS, BSJ, and WBHC and Butlin’s Paintings and Drawings.

¹⁸⁵ See the overview of the book and its methodology in Townsend and Bronwyn A. Ormsby’s “Blake’s Painting Materials, Technical Art History, and the Legacy of G.E. Bentley Jr” in Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr., ed. Karen Mulhallen (2010).

Bibliographies of Musical Settings

Davies, Keri. "Blake Set to Music." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 189-208. <WBHC 1871-73>

On twentieth-century settings of Blake and their importance, including Hubert Parry's "Jerusalem," Ralph Vaughan Williams's Job: A Masque for Dancing, Benjamin Britten's Songs and Proverbs of William Blake, John Tavener's "The Lamb," and Ed Sanders's The Village Fugs. Includes a useful "Appendix 13.1. Blake Set to Music: Selected Recordings."

Fitch, Donald. Blake Set to Music: A Bibliography of Musical Settings of the Poems and Prose of William Blake. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1990. <BBS 309-10, WBHC 1238-39>

The standard record of Blake set to music.

Updated by Fitch's "Blake Set to Music: Supplement 2001" and Kumari's "Adding to Blake Set to Music."

For material after 2001, see Davies's "Blake Set to Music," Whittaker, "Blake and Music," and Whittaker, "'Jerusalem' Set to Music: A Selected Discography."

Fitch, Donald. "Blake Set to Music: Supplement 2001." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 35.2 (fall 2001): 40-61. <WBHC 1688>

Updates Fitch's Blake Set to Music.

Gooch, Bryan N.S., and David S. Thatcher. Musical Settings of British Romantic Literature. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) New York and London: Garland Publishing, 1982. <BBS 491>

"An extensive but erratic catalogue" (BBS 491).

Kumari, Ashanka. "Adding to Blake Set to Music." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.4 (spring 2016): 40-61. <Blake (2017)>

Adds forty entries (1976-2013) to Donald Fitch's Blake Set to Music (1990).

Whittaker, Jason. "Blake and Music." Published annually in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly.

The annual checklist of Blake set to music, published in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly since the summer of 2018.

Whittaker, Jason. "'Jerusalem' Set to Music: A Selected Discography." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.4 (spring 2019): 5 pars. + listings. <Blake (2020)>

Details settings of the "Jerusalem" hymn, which prefaces Milton.

Annotated Bibliographies

Fuller, David. "William Blake." Literature of the Romantic Period: A Bibliographical Guide. Ed. Michael O'Neill. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1998. 27-44. <WBHC 2047>

"A sound and straightforward guide designed especially for undergraduates, with essays on 'Texts and Facsimiles' (27-28), 'Literary Scholarship and Criticism' (29-37), and 'Art Scholarship and Criticism' (37-40)" (WBHC 2047).

Johnson, Mary Lynn. "William Blake." The English Romantic Poets: A Review of Research and Criticism. 4th ed. Ed. Frank Jordan. New York: Modern Language Association, 1985. 113-252. <BBS 528>

A substantial annotated bibliography. (Blake, it should be noted, was not included in the first three editions of this influential bibliography of canonical Romantic poets.)

Natoli, Joseph R. Twentieth-Century Blake Criticism: Northrop Frye to the Present. New York and London: Garland Publishing Inc., 1982. Rpt. Routledge Library Editions. 2015. <BBS 299>

An annotated bibliography of secondary sources in English largely between the 1950s and 1970s.

Summerfield, Henry. A Guide to the Books of William Blake for Innocent and Experienced Readers. Gerrards Cross: Colin Smythe, 1998. <WBHC 2717-18>

An extensive overview of Blake's poetic works, with comprehensive annotations that synthesize important critical commentaries.

Historic Bibliographies

Caro, Ann. "William Blake (1757-1827): A Bibliographical Continuation to the Grolier Bibliography of William Blake." London: London Diploma in Librarianship, 1963. <WBHC 1827>

Continues Keynes's A Bibliography of William Blake.

Keynes, Geoffrey. A Bibliography of William Blake. New York: Grolier Club, 1921. Rpt. 1969. <BB #617>

A foundational bibliography whose organizational schema structured Blake studies.

Most importantly, Keynes described the then-known copies of the illuminated books and provided the copies with letter designations.¹⁸⁶

Keynes also documented Blake's other original writings in all forms and media, his book illustrations, editions, musical settings, facsimiles, biographies, criticism, exhibition catalogues, sale catalogues, the books once in his possession, and the known portraits of William and Catherine.

Keynes provided for the first time the text for Blake's annotations to Watson's Apology for the Bible and Berkeley's Siris, newly discovered letters, three cancelled plates for America, and contemporary references to William and Catherine.

Keynes and Edwin's Wolf's William Blake's Illuminated Books (1953) updated the information about the illuminated books.

Ann Caro's "William Blake \(1757-1827\): A Bibliographical Continuation to the Grolier Bibliography of William Blake" added many secondary sources, but the true successor of A Blake Bibliography was Bentley's Blake Books.

Keynes, Geoffrey, and Edwin Wolf. William Blake's Illuminated Books: A Census. New York: Grolier Club, 1953. Rpt. New York: Kraus, 1969, 1975. <BB #666, WBHC 1144>

Updates Keynes's Bibliography (1921) regarding Blake's illuminated books, detailing both the new copies discovered and adding new information about existing copies.

Its descriptive bibliography has been supplanted by Bentley's Blake Books and its sequels, and its dating of the illuminated books and its description of Blake's printing method, by Visconti's Blake and Idea of the Book.

¹⁸⁶ The letter designations were meant by Keynes to indicate the chronology of the different copies relative to one another, but subsequent scholarship, beginning with Keynes and Wolf's William Blake's Illuminated Books: A Census and continuing most significantly with Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book, redated many copies. Bentley changed the letter designations for some books based on his idea of their production sequence, but, despite the revisions offered by Visconti and others, Bentley's (and not Keynes's) letter designations remain standard today.

VI. Catalogues (Including Standard Catalogues, Major Exhibition and Collection Catalogues, and Current Collections)

Standard Catalogues (Including Sale Catalogues and Catalogues Raisonne for the Major Media and Genres in which Blake Worked)

Butlin, Martin. The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake. 2 vols. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1981.¹⁸⁷ <BBS 2297, WBHC 1207-09>

The catalogue raisonné of Blake's paintings and drawings. Volume one contains the text, and volume two, the plates. Abbreviated in scholarship as Butlin. Typically, the numbers following Butlin refer to the number assigned to the work in volume one and not the page number. Works not listed in the Butlin catalogue are designated BUTWBA at the Blake Archive.

Major supplements include:

Butlin's

- “A New Acquisition for the Tate and a New Addition to the Blake Catalogue,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.3 (winter 1981-82), 132-33, <BBS 392-93>: Announces that “[t]he delicate pencil and watercolor sketch for the alternative composition of “Every Man also gave him a Piece of Money”” is now owned by the Tate Collection and has an unrecorded pencil sketch on the verso (132).
- “Paintings and Drawings of William Blake \(1981\): Some Minor Additions,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984), 159, <BBS 396>: Corrects information regarding Butlin #301, #320, #654, #812.31, and #812.99.
- “Two Blakes Reappear and Make Three.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.2 (fall 1984), 118-19, <BBS 397>: Records the rediscovery of Butlin #214 and #592, the latter of which has an unrecorded sketch of the same subject on its verso.
- “A New Blake from his Apprentice Years?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.4 (spring 1988), 143, <BBS 402>: “[A] pen and wash drawing of the head and shoulders of King Edward III from his tomb in Westminster Abbey” housed “in the Archives and Local History section of the branch of the Victoria Library in the Buckingham Palace Road, London” (147).
- “Footnotes on the Huntington Blakes,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.1 (summer 1988), 17-18, <BBS 403>: Reconciles discrepancies between Butlin's Catalogue and Essick's The Works of William Blake in the Huntington Collections (1985).
- “Six New Early Drawings by William Blake and a Reattribution,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989), 107-12, <BBS 405>: The six new drawings are: “Angels Gathered Around a Book” (c. 1785), “Moses with the Tablets of the ¹⁸⁷ See Butlin's “Cataloguing William Blake,” in Blake in His Time, ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce (1978), <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>, for an explanation of the principles and practices structuring the catalogue and Butlin's “The Catalogue of Blake's Designs Completed, & A Last Minute Inclusion,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975), 48-49, <BBS 377>, for a discussion of the difficulty of shaping the different categories of Blake's art. Essick's review in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.1 (summer 1982), 22-65, <BBS 393>, offers corrections, alternative theories, and useful contextual information..

Law" (c. 1780-85), "Three Naked Children Crouching Around a Source of Light" (c. 1785), "A Young Man Seated Behind a Stone Slab" (c. 1785), "The First Sight of the Spiritual World" (c. 1785), a sketch for "Joseph's Brethren Bowing Before Him" (c. 1785); and the recovery of "The Complaint of Job" (c. 1785) [listed as "Untraced since 1928" in Butlin #163] and its unknown verso, a sketch for "The Bard, from Gray" (c. 1785).

- "Two Newly Identified Sketches for Thomas Commins's An Elegy and Further Rediscovered Drawings of the 1780s," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992), 21-26, <BBS 409>: The Commins sketches offer alternative designs for Blake's engraving. The three rediscovered drawings are: "An Encounter in Heaven" (c. 1780-85), "Lady Macbeth and the Sleeping Duncan" (c. 1785), and its verso, depicting the same subject in a rough sketch, "Lady Macbeth and the Sleeping Duncan" (c. 1785).
- "Two Newly Identified Sketches for Thomas Commins's An Elegy: A Postscript," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993), 42-44, <WBHC 1646>: On newly discovered drawings for the engravings.
- "Another Rediscovered Small Color Print by William Blake," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.3 (1993-94), 68, <WBHC 1647>: A second-pull print of Urizen, pl. 3, likely made for the Small Book of Designs but "distinguished by a small but quite distinct female breast" (68). There is also a unrecorded sketch on the verso.
- "New Risen from the Grave: Nineteen Unknown Watercolours by William Blake," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 35.3 (winter 2002), 68-73, <WBHC 1689>: The preliminary account of the discovery of Blake's watercolor designs for The Grave.
- With Robin Hamlyn. "Tate Britain Reveals Nine New Blakes and Thirteen New Lines of Verse," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.2 (fall 2008), 52-72, <WBHC 1717>: Describes a newly discovered first state of the 1793 Job print (only the second known) and prints from the illuminated books produced for the Small Book of Designs copy B, which are inscribed with verses. Table 1 gives each new print a Butlin catalogue number tied to this copy of the Small Book of Designs (Butlin #261).
- "Harpers and Other Drawings: The Case for a Unified Composition," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.2 (fall 2013), 6 pars, <WBHC 1738>: On new drawings in an album originally owned by Charles Augustus Tulk. See "Blake in the Marketplace, 2012."
- "Blake's Unfinished Series of Illustrations to Paradise Lost for John Linnell: An Addition," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.1 (summer 2017), 10 pars, <Blake (2018)>: On what Butlin maintains is a rediscovered watercolor drawing, Adam and Eve Asleep, which was produced for the Linnell Paradise Lost Set. Butlin's claim of the watercolor drawing's authenticity was disputed by David Bindman's "Adam and Eve Asleep: A Dissent," Robert N. Essick's "A Copy of Blake's Adam and Eve Asleep," and Joseph Viscomi's "A Newly Discovered Copy of Blake's Adam and Eve Asleep," but defended by Butlin's "The 'Linnell' Adam and Eve Asleep: The Case for the Defense," all published in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.2 (fall 2017), <Blake (2018)>.

By others

- Messrs. S. Leigh Sotheby & John Wilkinson. Catalogue of a Valuable Collection of Engravings, Drawings and Pictures, chiefly from the cabinet of An Amateur comprising . . . Original Drawings and Sketches by W. Blake (London, 1862). <SC>: “A Design, apparently intended in illustration of a tale [. . .], highly finished in indian [sic] ink’ (lot 184)” (BB #565, WBHC 1034).
- Sotheby, Catalogue of the Choice Collection of Engravings & Etchings, formed by W.B. Scott, Esq. . . . also a Number of Beautiful Drawings by William Blake (London, 1881), <BB #581, SC>: “Figures in pen and ink”; “5 ‘Studies of Figures in red chalk’”; “Three ‘drawings in a frame in colours’ for Songs of Innocence”; and “Pen sketch for ‘The Fly’ ‘slightly washed with colour’” (SC).
- Bernard Quaritch, William Blake's Original Drawings Finished in Colours; Choice Early Copies of his Engraved Works; Books Illustrated by Blake; and Mr. William Muir's Admirable Facsimiles of Blake's Works, Offered for Sale (London, 1885), <SC>: “the same” as “Cordelia and the Sleeping Lear” <Butlin #84.4>.
- John Pearson, Catalogue 62 (London [1886?]), <SC>: “‘Battle Scene’ [. . .], india, Palgrave marked it as Blake’s ‘but it is more in the style of Flaxman,’ verso pencil of the same subject” and King and his courtiers [. . .], india, style of Stothard, female figures on the verso” (SC).
- John Pearson, Catalogue 64 (London [1887?]), <SC>: “‘Spring’ [. . .], a female figure holding the bough of a tree, oval” (SC).
- Bernard Quaritch, No. 91 Choice Portions Selected from Various Old Libraries, including that of the Earl of Hardwicke, formed during the last century by Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, removed from Wimpole Hall, Herts, of the late Right Hon. A.J.B. Beresford-Hope, LL.D., F.R.G.S., F.R.S.L, F.S.A., F.S.S., Etc, removed from Arklow House; The late Edward Breese, Esq. F.S.A., of Morva Lodge, Portmadoc, Wales; also many Books of general interest from other sources, transferred to 15 Piccadilly (London, 1888), <WBHC 1039, SC>: “A Large Water-colour Drawing representing the Incantation-scene in ‘Macbeth’” and “The HOSTS OF HEAVEN AND HELL mustering for battle.” Lots 255-56.
- Christie, Catalogue [including L.W. Hodson] (London, 1906), <SC>: “Day of Destruction” (SC).
- Walpole Galleries, Books, Autographs and Ex-Libris, including the Library of the Late William W. Phillips of New York City (New York, 1918), <WBHC 1072, 1074, SC>: “It includes a painting by Blake” (WBHC 1072).
- Anderson Galleries, Colour Plate Books; Sporting Books, Library Sets, Rare and Beautiful Bindings . . . Original Drawings by William Blake, John Leech and Rowlandson (New York, 1921), <WBHC 1079, SC>: “It includes books from Anthony J. Drexel” (WBHC 1079). Bentley doesn’t specify which.
- Sotheby, Catalogue (London, 1925), <SC>: “‘Androcles and the Lion’ [. . .], exhibited at the Bradford Exhibition of Fine Arts 1904”; “Joseph’s Dream”; and “Two studies in pencil [. . .], one of a tropical plant, a note in Blake’s? hand says ‘in height an elm 2 or 3 feet diameter, the bark lig[h]t bluish like cherry tree’ (SC, Bentley emendation in quotation from catalogue). Lots 143, 144, 146.
- American Art Association, The Important Library of Press Books Library Sets First Editions Formed by the late Emma W. Bucknell, Philadelphia, Pa. (New York, 1928), <SC>: “a giant figure, seated on the ground, in a hunched position, head resting on knees, arms entwining legs and hands clasped at ankles; in the background is the blue sky; rocks to each side of figure; in the right margin is depicted a snake wending its way down the side of the rock” (SC). Lot 57.

- Robert N. Essick, Review of Butlin's The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake, Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.1 (summer 1982), 22-62, <BBS 393>: Corrections, supplemental information, and praise.
- Robert N. Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 1985,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986), illus. 3, <BBS 399>: An unrecorded pencil sketch for the Visionary Heads (c. 1819-25), The Head of Jonathan.
- Jenijoy La Belle, “A Pencil Sketch for Blake's Dante Illustrations,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.2 (fall 1985), 73-74, <BBS 399>: A new sketch “of a standing woman” (73) on the verso of the pencil sketch of “The Six-Footed Serpent Attacking Agnolo Brunelleschi” (Butlin #822).
- John Westenhall, “Blake's Sketches for 'Hamlet',” Burlington Magazine 92 (1985), 229, <BBS 677>: Suggests that the Stanford Hamlet sketches (Butlin #74 and #75) are for Hamlet and His Father's Ghost (1806) (Butlin #547.5) and were created around that time and not during Blake's apprenticeship as suggested in Butlin's Paintings and Drawings of William Blake.
- Christie, Manson, and Woods. The Larger Blake-Varley Sketchbook (London: Christie, Manson, and Woods, 1989), <BBS 178-80>: A Christie auction catalogue “devoted to this work, all the Blake drawings reproduced” (BBS 178).
- Robert N. Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 1992,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.4 (spring 1993), 140-59, <WBHC 1643>: Describes and reproduces a new Robert Blake drawing, Deathbed Scene(?) on the verso of Study of Dancing Figures by a Tree (Butlin #R10).
- Agnew's. 130th Annual Exhibition of Watercolours & Drawings (London: Thos. Agnew & Sons, 2003), <WBHC 697, SC>: “A Man Wearing a Tall Hat.” Lot 18.
- Sotheby. Catalogue (London, 2003), <SC>: “The Judgment of Solomon” (SC). Lot 235.
- Robert N. Essick and Rosamund A. Paice, “Newly Uncovered Blake Drawings,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.4 (winter 2003-04), 84-100, <WBHC 1696>: Nine new sketches were discovered on the versos of drawings held by the British Museum when they were remounted. The sketches relate to: The Book of Thel, Europe, The Botanic Garden, and “God Judging Adam.”
- Robert N. Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 2005,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006), 178-79, <WBHC 1705, SC>: Records the pencil drawing Satan Going To and Fro in the Earth, and Another Figure (c. mid-1820s).
- Arader Galleries. Catalogue (2008). <SC>: “Cumea' ('1773'), a copy, attributed to Blake, of Michelangelo's fresco of the Cumean Sibyl in the Sistine Chapel, watercolour [...] (recto); study of one of Michelangelo's ignudi (verso)” (SC).
- G.E. Bentley, Jr, “Pictura Ignota: Blake's Most Seen, Least Known Painting,” Descant 40.4 (2010), 73-103, <WBHC 1608>: On Blake's only known sign painting for the Talbot Inn in Southwark, which depicted Chaucer and the Canterbury pilgrims.

- Mark Crosby and Robert N. Essick, “the fiends of Commerce': Blake's Letter to William Hayley, 7 August 1804,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 44.2 (fall 2010), 52-72, <WBHC 1725>; On a newly discovered 7 Aug. 1804 letter to William Hayley. Also identifies two miniatures by Blake.
- John Windle. Catalogue 46 (San Francisco, 2010), <SC>; Verso of Butlin #79, “studies of a leg, two heads, a standing figure, and the head of an eagle” (SC).
- Robert N. Essick, “Blake in the Marketplace, 2012,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013), <WBHC 1734>; On drawings and sketches from an album owned originally by Charles Augustus Tulk, including Harpers and Other Drawings (1792-93), sketches for America and Europe (the verso of Harpers), Parental Affection, or the Meeting of a Family in Heaven, and Sisyphus Rolling the Stone up a Hill (the verso of Parental Affection). See also Butlin’s “Harpers and Other Drawings: The Case for a Unified Composition” and Lowell Libson, British Paintings & Works on Paper (London: Lowell Libson, 2013), pp. 44-55.
- Robert N. Essick and Jenijoy La Belle, “A Sketch by Robert Blake Revealed,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.2 (fall 2016), 8 pars., <Blake (2016)>; Details a sketch by Robert Blake, Figure Studies (A Supplication?), which was found on the verso of Blake’s Joseph Ordering Simeon to Be Bound (Butlin# 158).

Butlin reviewed the issues that confronted him in compiling the catalogue in his essay, “Cataloguing William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.1 (summer 1982) is dedicated to the catalogue. It contains Mary Lynn Johnson’s “Observation on Blake's Paintings and Drawings \(Based on Butlin's Catalogue Raisonné\),” which uses the catalogue to comment on unrecognized “subjects,” motifs,” and “analogues” (4) [pp. 4-6]; John E. Grant’s “Some Drawings Related to Blake's Night Thoughts Designs: The Coda Sketch and Two Pictures Not Previously Connected with the Series,” which uses the catalogue to identify additional sketches tied to the Night Thoughts designs not recognized by the Oxford Edition [pp. 7-11]; Martin Butlin’s “A Concordance between William Rossetti's Annotated Lists, W. Graham Robertson's Supplementary List, and Butlin's Catalogue Numbers” [pp. 12-21]; and Robert N. Essick’s review, which offers corrections and gives a useful overview of Blake’s work as an artist [pp. 22-65].

Essick, Robert N. The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1983. <BBS 301, WBHC 1221-22>

The standard catalogue for Blake’s separate plates. Updated annually in Essick’s and now Crosby’s “Blake in the Marketplace.”

See “A Supplement to The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue” for Essick’s initial update and “Updates to Essick's The Separate Plates of William Blake \(1983\) and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations \(1991\)” for a list of the relevant years for “Blake in the Marketplace.”

The new copies and new impressions recorded in these are documented under the respective titles in Separate Prints and Prints in a Series.

Essick, Robert N. “A Supplement to The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 139-44. <BBS 396>

The first update and correction to The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations: A Catalogue and Study of the Plates Engraved by Blake after Designs by Other Artists. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1991. <BBS 310, WBHC 1243-45>

The standard catalogue of Blake's commercial engravings after other artists, adding greatly to the description of the commercial illustrations in Blake Books (and its sequels).

Updated annually in Essick's and now Crosby's “Blake in the Marketplace.” See “Updates to Essick's The Separate Plates of William Blake \(1983\) and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations \(1991\)” for a list of the relevant years.

The new copies and editions recorded in these sources are documented under the respective titles in Commercial Book Illustrations.

Updates to Essick's The Separate Plates of William Blake (1983) and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations (1991) are found in:

- “A Supplement to The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 139-44. <BBS 396>
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1990.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1991.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1992.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1993, Including a Report on the Sale of the Frank Rinder Collection.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1994.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1995, Including a Survey of Blakes in Private Ownership.¹⁸⁸
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1996.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1997.¹⁸⁹
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1998.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 1999.¹⁹⁰
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2000.¹⁹¹
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2001.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2002.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2003.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2004.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2005.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2006.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2007.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2008.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2009.”

¹⁸⁸ The sections missing from the print edition and provided in “The Missing Portions of ‘Blake in the Marketplace, 1995’,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.2 (fall 1996), 62-63, are restored in the digital edition.

¹⁸⁹ Includes “Current [“Jan. 1998”] Ownership of the Preliminary Drawings for, and Proofs and Relief Etchings of, Blake's Wood Engravings Illustrating Thornton's Virgil.”

¹⁹⁰ Includes “A Census of Complete Copies of Designs to a Series of Ballads, 1802.”

¹⁹¹ Includes “A Handlist of Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations Engraved by Other Craftsmen.”

- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2010.”¹⁹²
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2011.”¹⁹³
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2012.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2013.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2014.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2015.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2016.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2017.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2018.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2020.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2021.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2022.”
- “Blake in the Marketplace, 2023.”

¹⁹² Contains Essick’s estimation of which of Blake’s engravings may have been executed by his apprentice, Thomas Owen.

¹⁹³ Contains a list of “discoveries of unrecorded or long-lost works by Blake” (108) from 1990 to 2010.

Historic Standard Catalogues

Bindman, David, assisted by Deirdre Toomey. The Complete Graphic Works of William Blake. New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons and [London]: Thames and Hudson, 1978. Paperback edition. [\[London\]: Thames and Hudson, 1986.](#) <BBS 150-51, WBHC 483>

A once essential but still useful collection of Blake's designs, encompassing at least one black and white copy of most of the illuminated books, commercial engravings and separate plates. Includes 765 illustrations; an introduction, "Blake as a Graphic Artist" (10-22); and "Notes to the Plates" (465-88).

Binyon, Laurence. The Drawings and Engravings of William Blake. Ed. Geoffrey Holme. London, 1922. New York, 1967. <BB #404; WBHC 680-81, 697>

Includes illuminated books, color printed drawings, watercolors, temperas, and both pen and ink and pencil drawings.

Binyon, Laurence. The Engraved Designs of William Blake. London: Ernest Benn Limited and New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1926. Rpt. New York: Da Capo Press, 1967. <BB #627, WBHC 1099-1100>

A dated catalogue of the illuminated books, separate prints, and some of the commercial engravings, but the description of the designs in the catalogue can be useful.

Easson, Roger R., and Robert N. Essick. William Blake: Book Illustrator: A Bibliography and Catalogue of the Commercial Engravings. Vol. 1: A Bibliography and Catalogue of the Commercial Engravings. Normal, IL, 1972. Volume II: Plates Designed or Engraved by Blake 1774-1796. Memphis, TN: The American Blake Foundation, 1979. <BB #702, BBS 296>

Contains important bibliographical details of the commercial engravings, but it has been largely supplanted by Essick's William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations (1991). The third volume of William Blake: Book Illustrator was never published.

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. Blake's Pencil Drawings. Second Series London, 1956. <BB #402>

"57 plates" (BB #402).

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. Drawings of William Blake: 92 Pencil Studies. New York, 1970. <BB #405>

"[M]ost of the drawings are repeated, rather darker, from the Pencil Drawings of 1927 (27) and 1956 (39)" (BB #405).

Keynes, Geoffrey. Engravings by William Blake: The Separate Plates. A Catalogue Raisonné. Dublin: Emery Walker, 1956. <BB #669, WBHC 1147-48>

Important successor to Russell's The Engravings of William Blake (1912), though Keynes's catalogue has been largely supplanted by Blake Books (and its sequels), The Separate Plates of William Blake (1983), and William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations (1991).

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. Pencil Drawings by William Blake. [First Series.] London, 1927. <BB #409>

“82 plates” (BB #409).

Keynes, Geoffrey, ed. William Blake's Illustrations to the Bible. A Catalogue Compiled by Geoffrey Keynes. London: The William Blake Trust, 1957. <BB #681>

“208 entries” (BB #681).

Russell, Archibald G.B. The Engravings of William Blake. New York: Houghton Mifflin, 1912. <BB #603, WBHC 1067>

The first reliable catalogue of Blake's engravings (including some illuminated books, the separate plates, and the commercial book illustrations). Despite its age, contains bibliographic information not offered elsewhere.

Current Collections: Digital Collections, Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship (Alphabetized by Institution or Collector's Last Name) (See also the Collection List at the William Blake Archive for the Specific Items Held by Major Collections and Collectors)

General Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Annals of Philanthropy: William Blake's Writings and Pictures in Public Collections." Notes and Queries 62.3 (Sept. 2015): 389-400.

Documents donations of Blake's works to public institutions.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake on Sale: Blake's Watercolours, Temperas, Works in Illuminated Printing, Commercial Engravings, and Manuscripts in Catalogues of 1997–2016." Notes and Queries 66.2 (Jun. 2019): 251-68.¹⁹⁴ <Blake (2020)>

A description of the 1820 listing of Blake works for sale by the bookseller Edward Evans.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Sale Catalogues of William Blake's Works: 1791-2017. E.J. Pratt Library. Emmanuel College Library. University of Toronto. May 2017.

An exhaustive list of every known sale catalogue with items by William Blake through May 2017. For subsequent material, consult Essick's and now Crosby's "Blake in the Marketplace."

Ackland Art Museum (University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, US)
Digital Collection

Albertina Museum (Vienna, AT)
Digital Collection

Arlington Court and the National Trust Carriage Museum (Devon, UK)¹⁹⁵

Art Institute of Chicago (Chicago, IL)
Digital Collection

Ashmolean Museum (Oxford University, UK)
Digital Collection

Auckland Public Library (Auckland, AU)
Digital Collection

The William Blake Collection in the George Grey Rare Books Room. Auckland: Auckland City Library, 1991. <WBHC 1245>

¹⁹⁴ See Bentley's briefer description in "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publication and Discoveries for 2016," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.1 (summer 2017), pars. 8-12, <Blake (2018)>.

¹⁹⁵ The museum has not digitized its one Blake item, The Sea of Space and Time (also known as the Arlington Court Painting), but the painting is available at the Blake Archive in preview mode.

Bayerische Staatsbibliothek (Munich, DE)
Digital Collections

Bentley, G.E., Jr. (See Victoria University, University of Toronto, CA)

Beinecke Library, Yale University (Including the Chauncey Brewster Tinker Manuscript Collection)
(New Haven, CT)
Digital Collections

Metzdorf, Robert F. The Tinker Library: A Bibliographical Catalogue of the Books and Manuscripts Collected by Chauncey Brewster Tinker. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1959. 1995. 1998. <BB #683, WBHC 1156>

See also the current description of the collection.

Birmingham Museums & Art Gallery (Birmingham, UK)
Digital Collection

Bodleian Library (Oxford University, UK)
Digital Collection

British Library¹⁹⁶ (London, UK)

British Museum (London, UK)
Digital Collection

Morgan, Richard, with Supplementary Notes by G.E. Bentley, Jr. “A Handlist of Works by William Blake in the Department of Prints and Drawings in the British Museum.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.4 (spring 1972): 221-58. <BB #1217.95>

Brighton & Hove Museums (Brighton, UK)
Digital Collection

Just The Adoration of the Kings (1799). Accession no. FAooooo34. Not included on the Blake Archive Collection List.

Brooklyn Museum (Brooklyn, NY)
Digital Collection

Cincinnati Art Museum (Cincinnati, OH)
Digital Collection

Grant, John E., and Mary Lynn Johnson. “Illuminated Books in the Cincinnati Art Museum.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.1 (fall 1973): 40-43. <BB #1217.129>

Note that the Cincinnati Art Museum holds The Book of Thel copy N, Songs of Innocence copy S, Songs of Innocence and of Experience copy S, and provides new descriptions.

¹⁹⁶ As of Nov. 2024, the British Library’s digital collection remains inaccessible due to a cyber-attack.

Cleveland Museum of Art (Cleveland, OH)
Digital Collection

Cornell University (Cornell, NY)
Digital Collection

Visconti, Joseph. Blake at Cornell: An Annotated Checklist of Works by and about William Blake in the Cornell University Libraries and the Herbert F. Johnson Museum. Ithaca: 1987. <BBS 302>

Collection of Robert N. Essick (San Marino, CA)

Essick, Robert N. "William Blake and His Circle and Followers: A Catalogue of the Collection of Robert N. Essick Compiled by the Collector." ([Altadena, 2008]). <WBHC 1370-71>

Available only from the collector.

Lyle, Janice S. "Handlist of the Essick Blake Collection." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 217-35. <BBS 384>

Details the Essick collection up to that date.

Fitzwilliam Museum (Cambridge University, UK) (See also Geoffrey Keynes in Blake's Collectors)
Digital Collection

Bindman, David. William Blake: Catalogue of the Collection in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. Cambridge: Heffer, 1970. <BB #703, BBS 292>

Keynes's collection, which was bequeathed to the Fitzwilliam Museum, is listed in an appendix, pp. 65-84.

Keynes, Geoffrey. Bibliotheca Bibliographici: A Catalogue of the Library Formed by Geoffrey Keynes. London, 1964. <BB# 687>

The catalogue of Keynes's collection, most of which is now housed at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge University.¹⁹⁷ It also reprints his "Religio Bibliographici."

Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University (Cambridge, MA)
Digital Collection

Paley, Morton D, with the assistance of Michael Davies. "Handlists of Four Blake Collections." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 260-75. <BBS 384>

Includes the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Art, the Fogg Art Museum (Harvard University), and the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Folger Shakespeare Library (Washington, DC)
Digital Collection

¹⁹⁷ For exceptions, see Bindman's William Blake: Catalogue of the Collection in the Fitzwilliam Museum (1970), <BB #703>, and the description in BBS 292.

Glynn Vivian Gallery (Swansea, UK)

Skretkowicz, Victor, Jr. "J. Deffett Francis: The Swansea Blakes." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 52-54. <BB #1217.47>

Describes Francis's relationship with Frederick Tatham and his Blake items. He donated 7 pencil drawings by Blake to the British Museum in 1873; sent "Woe cried the muse" to William Michael Rossetti in 1875; gave 60 more pieces by Blake to the British Museum in 1878; and gave America a Prophecy pls. 2, 5, and 15, Europe pls. 6-7, 12, "He descended into Hell," and "Michael Angelo (Buonarroti)" (from Fuseli's Lectures on Painting [1801]) to the Swansea Public Library by 1890. The last are now held by the Glynn Vivian Art Gallery, Swansea.

J. Paul Getty Museum (Los Angeles, CA)

Digital Collection

The Georgian House (Merstham, UK)

Not Included on BA Collection List

Preston, Kerrison. Notes for a Catalogue of the Blake Library at The Georgian House Merstham. Cambridge: Golden Head Press Ltd., 1960. 2nd ed. 1962. <BB #684>

"There are some 472 entries, including books, MSS, and pictures by Blake and books, pamphlets, and articles about him" (BB #684).

Glasgow Museums and Art Galleries (Glasgow, UK)

[Auld, Alasdair A.] William Blake 1757-1827: Six Paintings in the Stirling Maxwell Collection, Pollock House. [1971]. <BBS 292-93>

Hamburger Kunsthalle

Bindman, David, and Esther Chadwick, ed. William Blake's Universe. London: Philip Wilson, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge UK, from 23 Feb. to 19 May and at the Hamburger Kunsthalle from 14 Jun. to 8 Sep. 2024.

Dörrbecker, Detlef. "Jerusalem in Hamburg." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 61.¹⁹⁸

Details the growing collection of the Hamburger Kunsthalle Museum: the preparatory drawing for Jerusalem pl 51, Young's Night Thoughts, Illustrations of the Book of Job, and "an almost complete set of the Blake Trust Facsimiles" (61).

Houghton Library (Harvard University, Cambridge, MA)

Digital Collection

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 1985." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986): 12-13.

¹⁹⁸ Not recorded in BBS.

Details the works owned by Hoffer that are now held by the Houghton Library, Harvard University.

Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens (San Marino, CA)

Digital Collection

Essick, Robert N. William Blake at The Huntington: An Introduction to the William Blake Collection in The Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino, California. New York and San Marino: Harry N. Abrams, Inc., in Association with the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, 1994. <WBHC 704-05>

A selection, with new descriptions and color reproductions. See Butlin's "Footnotes on the Huntington Blakes," which reconciles the discrepancies between Butlin's Catalogue and Essick's Works of William Blake in the Huntington Collections.

Butlin, Martin. "Footnotes on the Huntington Blakes." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22 (1988-89): 17-18. <BBS 403>

Reconciles the discrepancies between Butlin's Catalogue and Essick's The Works of William Blake in the Huntington Collections (1985).

Essick, Robert N. The Works of William Blake in the Huntington Collections: A Complete Catalogue. San Marino: Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, 1985.¹⁹⁹ <BBS 303>

The current standard catalogue for the collection, replacing Wark's revision to Baker's Catalogue of William Blake's Drawings and Paintings in the Huntington Library.

Baker, C.H. Collins. Enlarged and revised by R.R. Wark. Catalogue of William Blake's Drawings and Paintings in the Huntington Library. San Marino: Huntington Library, 1957. <BB #646>

Keynes, Geoffrey (See the Fitzwilliam Museum and Geoffrey Keynes in Twentieth-Century Collectors)

King's College Library (Cambridge University, Cambridge, UK)

Library of Congress (Washington, DC) (See also Lessing J. Rosenwald in Blake's Collectors)
Digital Collection

The Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection: A Catalog of the Gifts of Lessing J. Rosenwald to the Library of Congress, 1943 to 1975. Washington [DC]: Library of Congress, 1977.325-42. <BBS 19>

Louvre Museum (Paris, FR)

Digital Collection

Manchester Art Gallery (Manchester, UK)

Digital Collection

¹⁹⁹ Replaces Essick's "Handlist of the Huntington Blake Collection," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978), 236-59, <BBS 384>.

McGill University Libraries (Montreal, CA)
Library Catalogue

A Catalogue of the Lawrence Lande William Blake Collection in the Department of the Books and Special Collections of the McGill University Libraries. Montreal, 1983. <BBS 300-01>

Collection Guides

A Catalogue of the Lawrence Lande William Blake Collection. Foreword by Lawrence Lande. Preface by Christopher Heppner. Intro. by Elizabeth Lewis. Catalogue by Rosemary Haddad. Montreal, 1983. <BBS 300-01>

Scharbach, Deborah. Index to A Catalogue of the Lawrence Lande William Blake Collection in the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections of the McGill University Libraries. Montreal: Department of Rare Books and Special Collections, McGill University Libraries, 1990. <WBHC 1223>

Studies

Garland, Jennifer. “On this day: William Blake \(d. August 12, 1827\).” Rare Books and Special Collections at McGill [Blog]. 12 Aug. 2016.

On Blake and the McGill Library collection. Excerpted and adapted from Meetings with Books: Special Collections in the 21st century with a Tribute to Raymond Klibansky & Illustrated Survey of Special Collections at McGill University Library and Archives (Montreal: McGill Library and Archives, 2014).

Heppner, Christopher. “Notes on Some Items in the Blake Collection at McGill with a Few Speculations around William Roscoe.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 100-08. <BBS 381>

Highlights items in the Lande Collection at McGill.

A Catalogue of the Lawrence Lande William Blake Collection. Foreword by Lawrence Lande. Preface by Christopher Heppner. Intro. by Elizabeth Lewis. Catalogue by Rosemary Haddad. Montreal, 1983. <BBS 300-01>

Garland, Jennifer. “On this day: William Blake \(d. August 12, 1827\).” Rare Books and Special Collections at McGill [Blog]. 12 Aug. 2016.

On Blake and the McGill Library collection. Excerpted and adapted from Meetings with Books: Special Collections in the 21st century with a Tribute to Raymond Klibansky & Illustrated Survey of Special Collections at McGill University Library and Archives (Montreal: McGill Library and Archives, 2014).

Heppner, Christopher. “Notes on Some Items in the Blake Collection at McGill with a Few Speculations around William Roscoe.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 100-08. <BBS 381>

Highlights items in the Lande Collection at McGill.

Scharbach, Deborah. Index to A Catalogue of the Lawrence Lande William Blake Collection in the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections of the McGill University Libraries.

Montreal: Department of Rare Books and Special Collections, McGill University Libraries, 1990.
<WBHC 1223>

Mead Art Museum (Amherst College MA)

Digital Collection

Paul Mellon (See Yale Center for British Art and Paul Mellon in Blake Collectors)

Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York, NY)

Digital Collection

Paley, Morton D, with the assistance of Michael Davies. “Handlists of Four Blake Collections.
Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 260-75. <BBS 384>

Includes the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Art, the Fogg Art Museum (Harvard University), and the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Minneapolis Institute of Art (Minneapolis, MN)

Digital Collection

Morgan Library and Museum (New York, US) [Formerly Known as the Pierpont Morgan Library]
Digital Collection

John Murray Collection

Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (Boston, MA)

Digital Collection

[Boston] Museum of Fine Arts. Exhibition of Drawings, Water Colors, and Engravings by William Blake. 2nd ed. Boston: [Museum of Fine Arts], 1880.

[Boston] Museum of Fine Arts. Exhibition of Books, Water Colors, Engravings, Etc. by William Blake. Boston: Museum of Fine Arts, 1891.

[Constable, W.G.] Catalogue of Paintings and Drawings in Water Color Museum of Fine Arts Boston. Boston, 1949. <BB #691>

Blake is on “pp. 19-33” (BB #691). Detailed catalogue descriptions.

Paley, Morton D, with the assistance of Michael Davies. “Handlists of Four Blake Collections.
Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 260-75. <BBS 384>

Includes the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Art, the Fogg Art Museum (Harvard University), and the Victoria and Albert Museum.

National Gallery of Art (Washington DC)

Digital Collection

National Gallery of Scotland (Edinburgh, UK)

Digital Collection

Baker, Christopher. English Drawings and Watercolours 1600-1900. National Gallery of Scotland. Edinburgh: Trustees of the National Gallery of Scotland, 2011. <WBHC 1391-92>

“The Blakes in the National Gallery of Scotland (pp. 42-49) include Blake’s ‘Hecate’ <Butlin #317>, ‘God Writing on the Tables of the Covenant’ <#448>, and ‘Job Confessing his Presumption to God Who Answers from the Whirlwind’ <#461>. There are also sections on John Flaxman (pp. 114- 16), Samuel Palmer (pp. 234-40), and Thomas Stothard (pp. 333-38)” (WBHC 1391-92).

National Gallery of Victoria (Melbourne, AU)
Digital Collection

Butlin, Martin, and Ted Gott. William Blake in the Collection of the National Gallery of Victoria. Melbourne: National Gallery of Victoria, 1989. <BBS 306-07, WBHC 1235-36>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne, from 14 Sep. to 19 Nov. 1989.

Leahy, Catherine. William Blake. Melbourne: The Council of Trustees of the National Gallery of Victoria, 2014. <WBHC 1319>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne, from 4 Apr. to 31 Aug. 2014. It also serves as the most recent collection catalogue, with all of Innocence copy X, its 22 Job engravings, and its Dante watercolors reproduced.

Newberry Library (Chicago, IL)
Not in BA Collection List. Owns Europe (11, 17), (9, 4), (16, 17).

New York Public Library (New York, NY)
Digital Collection

Collection of Alan Parker

Petworth House (Sussex, UK)
Digital Collection

Philadelphia Museum of Art (Philadelphia, PA)
Digital Collection

Pollock House (Glasgow, UK)

Preston, Kerrison (See City of Westminster Archives Center)

Princeton University Library (Princeton, NJ)
Digital Collection

Ryskamp, Charles. [William Blake Engraver: A Descriptive Catalogue of an Exhibition \[in Princeton University Library\]](#). Princeton, 1969. <BB #700, WBHC 1167-68>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Princeton University from Dec. 1969 to Feb. 1970. No reproductions but “129 entries, described with great care” (BB #700).

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 1985.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986): 13.

Identifies the works now held by the Princeton University Library that were given by Irene Taylor.

Harry Ransom Center (University of Texas at Austin, Austin, TX)
Digital Collection

“William Blake: An Inventory of His Collection at the Harry Ransom Center.”

Rhode Island School of Design Museum of Art (Providence, RI)

Robertson, W. Graham (See W. Graham Robertson in Blake Collectors)

Rosenbach Museum and Library (New York, NY)
Digital Collection

Royal Institution of Cornwall (Cornwall, UK)

Society of Antiquaries of London (London, UK)
Digital Collection

SUNY Buffalo

Paley, Morton D. “Blakes at Buffalo.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 81-86.
<BB #1217.67>

Records that SUNY Buffalo owns Europe pl. 18; a pencil sketch, “A Boxer Holding a Cestus” (Butlin #179); and The Beggar’s Opera; “the Buffalo and Erie County Library has Europe pl. 4” (BB #1217.67).

Syracuse University Library (Syracuse, NY)

Tate Collection (London, UK)
Digital Collection

Butlin, Martin. William Blake, 1757-1827. London: Tate Gallery, 1990. <WBHC 1154>

Valuable catalogue for an important collection. Earlier versions were published in 1957, 1971, and 1983.

Myrone, Martin. “Blake the Artist: At Tate and Abroad.” The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley, ed. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. I. 679-92.<Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

Includes a list of the Tate exhibitions of Blake and “a checklist of art exhibitions in Europe where Blake was represented as a visual artist” (689).

Thorne, Mrs. Landon K. (See Morgan Library and Museum and Mrs. Landon K. Thorne in Blake Collectors)

Trinity College (Hartford CT)

William Blake Collection. Watkinson Library. Trinity College Archives.

The collection includes Blake's Memorandum, some of the correspondence with Hayley and with Ozias Humphry; references to Blake in the correspondence of Thomas Carlyle, Seymour Kirkup, and Algernon Charles Swinburne; and the correspondence (c. 1930s-40s) of the Trinity College Librarian Allan R. Brown about the acquiring of the Blake collection (including letters with Ruthven Todd and Geoffrey Keynes).

University of Adelaide (Adelaide, AU)

Not Included on BA Collection List

Lee, Elizabeth. A Catalogue of Blake Material in the Special Collections of the Barr Smith Library. Adelaide: Barr Smith Library, the University of Adelaide, 1988. <BBS 306>

University of California, Los Angeles (Los Angeles, CA)

Beer, John. “Blake’s ‘Donald the Hammerer.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 165-67. <BB #1217.81>

Provides the story illustrated by Blake in “Donald the Hammerer” (Butlin 782).

Essick, Robert N. “The Blakes at UCLA.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 75-78. <BB #1217.65>

Describes the illustrations held by UCLA: “Donald the Hammerer” (Butlin 782) and “In maiden meditation fancy free” (Butlin 582), a preliminary sketch for “Enoch.” See “John Beer’s “Blake’s ‘Donald the Hammerer’” for the background on the story the sketch is based on.

University of Glasgow (Hunterian Art Gallery, Glasgow, UK)

Stirton, Paul. William Blake and His Circle. [No publication information.] 1993.

The small catalogue for the exhibition held at the Hunterian Art Gallery, University of Glasgow, from 1 May to 26 Jun. 1993. All of the works are from the University of Glasgow collection.

University of Toronto (Victoria University Library, Toronto, CA)

Digital Collection

G.E. Bentley: Blake Collection. E.J. Pratt Library.

G.E. Bentley Collection of William Blake & His Contemporaries. E.J. Pratt Library. Emmanuel College Library. University of Toronto.

The Blake collection of G.E. Bentley, which is now held by the University of Toronto. A digitized copy of the print catalogue is available at the Internet Archive.

Brandeis, Robert. "Appendix: William Blake in Toronto: The Bentley Collection at the Victoria Library." Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 265-72. <WBHC 2436-40>

Highlights Bentley's career and the collection he donated.

Victoria and Albert Museum (London, UK)
Digital Collection

Paley, Morton D, with the assistance of Michael Davies. "Handlists of Four Blake Collections." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 260-75. <BBS 384>

Includes the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Art, the Fogg Art Museum (Harvard University), and the Victoria and Albert Museum.

City of Westminster Archives Center (London, UK)
[Goff, Phyllis.] [William Blake: Catalogue of the Preston Blake Library Presented by Kerrison Preston in 1967 \[to the\] Westminster City Libraries.](#) London, 1969.²⁰⁰ <BB #701, BBS 292>

William Blake: Supplement to the Catalogue of the Preston Blake Library. [London], 1972. <BB #701>

Whitworth Art Gallery²⁰¹ (Manchester, UK)
Digital Collection

Yale Center for British Art (Yale University, New Haven, CT)
Digital Collection

Hargraves, Matthew. Great British Watercolors: From the Paul Mellon Collection at the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2007. <WBHC 1361>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, from 11 Jul. to 30 Sep. and at the State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, from Oct. to Dec. 2007. Includes works by Blake (pp. 69-77), Samuel Palmer (pp.178-81), and John (pp. 124-29) and Cornelius Varley (pp. 130-31).

Noon, Patrick. The Human Form Divine: William Blake from the Paul Mellon Collection. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1997.²⁰² <WBHC 1274-76>

An exhibition of Blake's work from the Paul Mellon Collection held at the Yale Center for British Art from 2 Apr. to 6 Jul. 1997.

²⁰⁰ An overview of the Preston Blake Collection is available at the Special Collections page of the City of Westminster Archives Centre webpage.

²⁰¹ As of Nov. 2024, the digitized images documented at WBHC are not available.

²⁰² Incorporates Noon's essay, "A 'Mad' but Compelling Vision," Yale Alumni Magazine (Apr. 1997), which details the Mellon collection and its Blakes.

Major Exhibition and Sale Catalogues (Descending by Year)

2020s

2024

Bindman, David, and Esther Chadwick, eds. William Blake's Universe. London: Philip Wilson, 2024. Also published in German as William Blakes Universum. Berlin : Hatje Cantz Verlag, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

The English and German versions of the catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum from 23 Feb. to 19 May 2024 and at the Hamburger Kunsthalle from 14 June to 8 Sept. 2024. The exhibition and catalogue highlight Blake in a European and, especially, German context, pairing Blake's works with those of the German artist, Otto Runge (1777-1810). There are also significant discussions of John Flaxman, Henry Fuseli, Dante, Henry Crabb Robinson, Jacob Boehme, and Dionysius Andreas Freher. The German exhibition also included gratis a graphic novel, William Blake Universum, by Noëlle Kröger.

Insley, Alice, ed. [Blake e La Sua Epoca: Viaggi nel tempo del sogno \[In the Age of Blake: Visionary Journeys\]](#). Turin: Hopefulmonster, 2024. In Italian except for the foreword by the Director of the Tate. <Blake (2025)> The catalogue for the exhibition held at the La Venaria Reale, Turin, Italy in partnership with the Tate, which ran from 31 Oct. 2024 to 2 Feb. 2025. The webpage (linked to in the English title) includes photos of the exhibition.

Sotheby's. “William Blake | 'Poems with very wild and interesting pictures.'” Three Poets: William Blake, A.E. Houseman, Robert Frost. 26 June 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Lot 1. A digital reproduction and detailed description of Songs copy J, silently by Essick, along with a reproduction of Coleridge's 12 Feb. 1818 letter to Charles Augustus Tulk on the Songs.

2022

Windle, John. Catalogue 70. William Blake: Present Joy: A Chronology. San Francisco: John Windle, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

A chronological arrangement of works by or connected to Blake offered by Windle. According to Essick's “William Blake in the Marketplace, 2022,” “this is the second-largest sale catalogue devoted to Blake and his circle, exceeded only by Windle's October 2009 catalogue 46” (par. 1).

2020

Adam, Edina, with Julian Brooks, and an essay by Matthew Hargraves. William Blake: Visionary. Los Angeles: J. Paul Getty Museum, 2020. <Blake (2021-2025)>

The catalogue for the exhibition originally slated to run at the J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles, from 21 July to 11 October 2020, which was postponed because of COVID. It subsequently ran from 17 Oct. 2023 to 14 Jan. 2024. The catalogue is dedicated to Robert N. Essick.

2010s

2019

Myrone, Martin and Amy Concannon, with afterword by Alan Moore. William Blake. London: Tate Publishing, 2019. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2023)>

The catalogue from Tate Britain's 2019-20 exhibition, the largest of the twenty-first century.

2018

Loukes, Andrew, ed. William Blake in Sussex: Visions of Albion. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2018. <Blake (2019)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Petworth House from 13 Jan. to 25 Mar. 2018.

Windle, John. Blake Blowout. San Francisco: John Windle, Antiquarian Bookseller, 2018. Catalogue 69.

A sale catalogue.

Windle, John. Blake Books: The Commercial Engravings of William Blake. A Tribute to Gerald E. Bentley, Jr. San Francisco: John Windle, Antiquarian Bookseller, 2018.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at John Windle's Blake Gallery, San Francisco, in Feb. 2018, dedicated to G.E. Bentley, Jr.

2017

Eisenman, Stephen F. William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2017. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Mary and Leigh Block Museum of Art, Northwestern University, from 23 Sep. 2017 to 11 Mar. 2018. Contains a collection of essays that considers Blake in relationship to the counter-culture movements of the mid-to late-twentieth century (mostly American).

Windle, John. William Blake: Always in Paradise: A Catalogue of Artwork and Books by and about Blake and His Circle. San Francisco: John Windle, Antiquarian Bookseller, 2017. Catalogue 65. <Blake (2018)>

Windle, John. The William Blake Gallery: Dreams and Visions. San Francisco: John Windle, Antiquarian Bookseller, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at John Windle's Blake Gallery, San Francisco, that ran from 8 Sep. to 22 Dec. 2017. Includes a reproduction of Blake's unconfirmed signature on the title page of John Quincy's English Dispensatory, 9th ed. (London, 1733).

Windle, John. The William Blake Gallery: William Blake in Color: Plates from the Illuminated Books of William Blake by the Trianon Press \(1951–1987\). San Francisco: John Windle, Antiquarian Bookseller, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

The catalogue for the exhibition of Trianon Press facsimiles held at John Windle's Blake Gallery, San Francisco, that ran from 11 May to 28 Jul. 2017.

2016

Burning Bright: The G.E. Bentley Blake Collection Today: An Exhibition of Recent Additions to the Collection. E.J. Pratt Library. Victoria University in the University of Toronto.

An exhibition held at Victoria University at the University of Toronto, from 3 Nov. to 1 Dec. 2016. No catalogue was produced but the title links to a webpage with images and a description of the items, with a pdf version available.

Windle, John. Short List 3: 30 Books in Six Specialties. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, [n.d.].

Blake is one of the six.

Windle, John. The William Blake Gallery: Opening Exhibition: Always in Paradise: A William Blake Chrestomathy. San Francisco, 2016.

The catalogue for the opening exhibition held at John Windle's William Blake Gallery.

2015

Sanders of Oxford. William Blake, Printmaker. Oxford, 2015. <WBHC 1420-21>

Blake-related lots 1-22.

Windle, John. London International Antiquarian Book Fair, 28-30 May 2015. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, [2015].

Blake works are included.

Windle, John. William Blake Short List 30. San Francisco: John Windle, 2015.

2014

Bonhams. Books, Maps, Manuscripts, and Historical Photographs. London, 2014. <WBHC 1410-11>

Blake lots 71-73. Reproduces Songs copy I, Bentley plates 2, 42, 23, 1.

Henry Sotheran Limited [and John Windle]. William Blake. London: Henry Sotheran Limited, 2014. <WBHC 1412-13>

Leahy, Cathy. William Blake. National Gallery of Victoria. Melbourne: National Gallery of Victoria, 2014. <WBHC 1319>²⁰³

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne, from 4 Apr. to 31 Aug. 2014. Reproduces all the museum's Blake holdings, including Innocence copy X.

Phillips, Michael. William Blake: Apprentice & Master. Oxford: Ashmolean, 2014. <WBHC 1413-20>

²⁰³ Misdated in WBHC 2004.

Phillips's catalogue for the 2014-15 Ashmolean exhibition is particularly rich regarding Blake's early and late years in two sections titled, "Education" and "Innovation." In addition to these sections by Phillips, the third section, "Inspiration," contains essays by others on the Ancients.

2013

Christie's. The Collection of Arthur and Charlotte Vershbow. New York, 2013. <WBHC 1403-04>

The print catalogue and the website (linked to in the title) includes Songs copy p, Bentley plates 1, 8, and 46, and the watercolor sketch, "The Waking of Lenora" <Butlin #338>.

Christie. The Collection of Arthur & Charlotte Vershbow, Part Four: The Neoclassical, Romantic, Symbolist and Modern Periods. 29 October 2013. New York, 2013. <WBHC 1406-07>

Commercial book engravings lots 784-89; Virgil watercolor lot 790; Virgil plates lot 791; Job lot 792; facsimiles lots 793-95.

2012

Sotheby. Prints. New York, 2012. <WBHC 1393-94>

Both the print catalogue and the webpage (linked to in the title) includes color reproductions of Innocence copy Y, Bentley plates: 11, 8, 15, 6-7, 13, 14. Lots 42-47.

2011

§ Уильям Блейк и британские визионеры. Каталог выставки [Uil'jam Bleik I britanskie vizioniery. Katalog vystavki] [William Blake and the British Visionaries. Exhibition Catalogue]. Moscow: Krasnaya ploshchad', 2011. 248 pp. In Russian. <WBHC 1390, 1392>

Windle, John. Omnium Gatherum. Catalogue 48. San Francisco: John Windle, 2011. <WBHC 1389>

Windle, John. Pictorial Blake: A Catalogue of Recently Acquired Original Blake Illustrations from a Private Collection, Along with the Reference Library and a Complete Run of the Blake Trust Publications, and Other Facsimiles. Also Blake Facsimiles from the Biblioteca La Solana, Printed by Robert N. Essick. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 2011. <WBHC 1391>

2010

Brandeis, Robert, and Karen Mulhallen, ed. Remember Me! Blake in Our Time: A Keepsake Book in Celebration of An Exhibition and Symposium on the Life and Art of William Blake (1757-1827). Toronto: Victoria University Library, 2010. <WBHC 1385-87>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Victoria University, Toronto, from 3 Aug. to 2 Oct. 2010. Mulhallen's introduction to the catalogue is available at her blog. The catalogue reproduces Marriage copy M.

The exhibition honored the donation of the Bentley Collection (the Blake collection of G.E. Bentley, Jr. and Elizabeth B. Bentley) to Victoria College. During the exhibition, a symposium, "Blake in Our Time: A Symposium Celebrating the Future of Blake Studies and the Legacy of G.E. Bentley, Jr.," was held and recorded as a podcast. These and other papers were published in the collection, Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr.

2000s

2009

Myrone, Martin, ed. and intro. Seen in my Visions: A Descriptive Catalogue of Pictures. London: Tate Publishing, 2009. <WBHC 1376-79, 1383>²⁰⁴

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Tate Britain, London, from 20 Apr. to 4 Oct. 2009. The exhibition recreated Blake's 1809 exhibition on its bicentennial. The catalogue includes an edition of the Descriptive Catalogue and reproductions of all of Blake's surviving paintings.

The symposium that accompanied the exhibition published its papers in Tate Papers 14 \(autumn 2010\).

Phillips, Michael, ed., with the assistance of Catherine de Bourgoing. William Blake (1757-1827): Le Génie visionnaire du romantisme anglaise. Paris: Paris-Musées, 2009. In French. <WBHC 1371-75>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Petit Palais, Musée des beaux-arts de la Ville, Paris, from 2 Apr. to 28 Jun. 2009. Essays on Blake in French (see WBHC 1371-74 for enumeration, including some translations), including David Alexander's "William Blake, graveur d'interprétation" (pp. 79-81), which recorded for the first time that Blake had an apprentice, Thomas Owen. Reproduces Europe copy B, The Ghost of Abel copy B, and Marriage copy M.

William Blake's World: "A New Heaven Is Begun." The Morgan Library and Museum, 2009-10. <WBHC 1379-83>

The online catalogue for the exhibition at the Piermont Morgan Library and Museum, New York, held from 11 Sep. 2009 to 3 Jan. 2010. No print catalogue was produced, but the webpage linked to in the title includes descriptions of the objects displayed and a YouTube presentation by the former director Charles Ryskamp on the Blake items that he donated to the Morgan Library and Museum.

Windle, John. William Blake: A Catalogue of Books by and about Blake and his Circle from 1775-2008 Mainly from the Collections of Roger and Kay Easson and Roger Lipman with Additions from Stock. Catalogue 46. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 2009. <WBHC 1383-84>

2008

"William Blake: 'I still go on / Till the Heavens and Earth are gone.'" Exhibition at Tate Britain from 3 Nov. 2007 to 1 Jun. 2008. <WBHC 1364-65>

"The exhibition focuses upon eight newly discovered color prints from Thel, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (apparently including pl. 16), and Urizen (including pl. 23), together with 13 new lines accompanying the prints" (WBHC 1364). No catalogue was produced, but for an account and reproduction of the prints, see Martin Butlin and ²⁰⁴ Jason Whittaker's review is listed independently on WBHC p. 1383.

Robin Hamlyn's "Tate Britain Reveals Nine New Blakes and Thirteen New Lines of Verse."

William Blake: An Exhibition of Prints, Books and Facsimiles June 2008. London: Henry Sotheran Limited, in Conjunction with John Windle, 2008. <WBHC 1367>

2007

Bindman, David. Mind-Forg'd Manacles: William Blake and Slavery. With an essay by Darryl Pinckney. London: British Museum/Hayward Gallery Publishing, 2007. <WBHC 1359-60>

Catalogue for the exhibition held at the Ferens Art Gallery, Hull, from 7 Apr. to 20 May 2007; at the Burrell Collection, Glasgow, from 3 Nov. 2007 to 6 January 2008; and at the Whitworth Art Gallery, Manchester, from 26 Jan. to 6 Apr. 2008. The exhibition commemorated both the 200 years since the abolishment of the slave trade and the 250 years since Blake's birth. Includes:

Bindman, David. "William Blake and Slavery." 10-21.

Pinckney, Darryl. "In My Original Free African State." 22-28. On Thomas Clarkson and Olaudah Equiano, touching slightly on Blake.

Bindman, David, Stephen Hebron, and Michael O'Neill. Dante Rediscovered: From Blake to Rodin. Grasmere: Wordsworth Trust, 2007. <WBHC 1361-62>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Wordsworth Trust from 15 Aug. to 18 Nov. 2007. Bindman's essay, "Artists Discover Dante," includes the section, "'Nature worse than Chaos': Blake's Dante," pp. 31-38. There are illustration of Dante by Blake, Fuseli, and Flaxman.

Blake, and Slavery and the Radical Mind. Tate Britain. Exhibition held from 30 Apr. to 21 Oct. 2007. <WBHC 1360-61>

No catalogue was produced, but the webpage to the exhibition (linked to in the title) includes a description and photographs of the exhibition itself.

Hargraves, Matthew. Great British Watercolors: From the Paul Mellon Collection at the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2007. <WBHC 1361>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, from 11 Jul. to 30 Sep. and at the State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, from Oct. to Dec. 2007. Includes works by Blake (pp. 69-77), Samuel Palmer (pp. 178-81), and John (pp. 124-29) and Cornelius Varley (pp. 130-31).

Hooze, Robert, ed. British Vision: Observation and Imagination in British Art. Brussels: Mercatorfonds, 2007. 314-17. <WBHC 1362-63>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Museum voor Schone Kunsten, Ghent, from 6 Oct. 2007 to 13 Jan. 2008. Includes the Arlington Court Picture, Dante watercolors, and selections from Innocence, Urizen, and Jerusalem, along with work by members of Blake's circle.

Martin, Simon, Martin Butlin, and Robert Meyrick. Poets in the Landscape: The Romantic Spirit in British Art. Chichester: Pallant House Gallery, 2007. <WBHC 1358-59>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in the Pallant House Gallery, Chichester, from 31 Mar. to 10 Jun. 2007. Includes:

Martin, Simon. "Everything except the Poetry: William Hayley and Romantic Patronage 1775-1805." 17-25.

Butlin, Martin. "The Pastoral Vision: Blake, Palmer and the Ancients 1805-1850." 41-45.

Sotheby's. Prints. New York, 2007. <WBHC 1363-64>

Both the print catalogue and the webpage (linked to in the title) includes color reproductions of Innocence copy Y, Bentley plates 4, 5, 9-10, 12, 18, and 16-17.

2006

[Brandeis, Robert C.] William Blake and His Contemporaries: An Exhibition Selected from the Bentley Collection at Victoria University. Toronto: Victoria University Library, 2006. <WBHC 1354-55>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Victoria University Library, University of Toronto, from 30 Oct. to 15 Dec. 2006. In addition to Blake, it includes works by and chapters on "George Cumberland, John Flaxman, Henry Fuseli, John Linnell, Thomas Stothard, and Henry Tresham" (WBHC 1354-55).

Myrone, Martin. Gothic Nightmares: Fuseli, Blake and the Romantic Imagination. London: Tate Publishing, 2006. <WBHC 1329-32>

Exhibition held at Tate Britain, London, from 15 Feb. to 1 May 2006. The essays in the catalogue focus primarily on Fuseli, though the catalogue contains "33 Blake reproductions" (WBHC 1330).

Sotheby's. William Blake: Designs for Blair's Grave. New York, 2006. <WBHC 1332-53>

The auction catalogue for the rediscovered watercolors.

Windle, John. Catalogue Forty-Two: Blake Plates. San Francisco: John Windle, 2006. <WBHC 1356-57>

Includes colored proof of The Grave; Songs pl. 23 trimmed to the design; and Songs copy o pls. 24, 38, 53; and There is No Natural Religion copy G pls. a4, a6, b3.

2005

Arnaud, Danielle, Jordan Kaplan, and Philip Norman. Cloud & Vision: William Blake in Lambeth, 2005. London: Parabola, 2005. <WBHC 1326-28>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Museum of Garden History, London, from 4 Jul. to 4 Sep. 2005.

Hargraves, Matthew. Great British Watercolors: From the Paul Mellon Collection at the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, from 11 Jul. to 30 Sep. and at the State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, from Oct. to Dec. 2007. Includes works by Blake (pp. 69-77), Samuel Palmer (pp. 178-81), and John (pp. 124-29) and Cornelius Varley (pp. 130-31).

Windle, John. Catalogue Forty: William Blake and His Circle: Books of Scholarship, Books of Beauty. [Ed. Robert N. Essick]. San Francisco: John Windle, 2005. <WBHC 1328-29>

Includes a reproduction of Blake's signature of the title page of John Quincy's Parmacopoeia (1733).

2004

Woof, Robert, How J.M. Hanley, and Stephen Hebron, ed. "William Blake." Paradise Lost: The Poem and its Illustrators. Grasmere: The Wordsworth Trust, 2004. <WBHC 1321-24>

The catalogue of the exhibition held at Grasmere by the Wordsworth Trust from 6 Jul. to 31 Oct. 2004. The opening chapters, "Seeing Milton's Voice" and "Milton and the Romantics," usefully contextualize Blake's illustrations, and there is an appendix on Joseph Thomas. In addition to presenting the Thomas set, the catalogue highlights Blake's other engagement with Milton, including the head of Milton for Hayley's library, Marriage, and Milton.

2003

[Essick, Robert N.] Vision and Verse: William Blake at The Huntington. Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens, Mary Lou and George Boone Gallery, January 19-May 25, 2003. <WBHC 1314-15>

A pamphlet (8 pp.) was produced to accompany the exhibition at the Huntington Library, Art Collections, and Botanical Gardens held from 19 Jan. to 25 May 2003.

The Glad Days in the Reception of Blake in Japan: The International Blake Conference. Kyoto: Blake Conference Committee, 2003. In English (1-53, 93) and Japanese (54-92). <WBHC 1317-18>

The catalogue for the exhibition held with the conference, "Blake in the Orient," at Kyoto University Museum on 27 Nov. to 27 Dec. 2003. Includes:

Suzuki, Masashi, and Steve Clark, "Preface." 1-2.

Yanagi, Sori. "Message." 3.

Anon. "The Glad Days in the Reception of Blake in Japan." 5-6, 56. "Our Exhibition aims to show how Blake was received in the early period of his introduction into Japan, mainly through documents."

Shioe, Kozo. "On the '[Taro] Nagasaki Collection.'" 7-9, 57-59. His 52 Blakes went mostly to Kyoto City University of Arts.

The catalogue entries, first in English and then in Japanese, are by Kozo Shioe and Yumiko Goto. Each section begins with a short essay.

Part I consists of "Japan's Encounter with Blake," subdivided into "Master Writers of the Meiji Period and Blake" (11-14, 65), "The Introduction of Blake's Art by Soetsu Yanagi and the Shirakaba Group” (15-20, 66-68), “Blake Exhibitions Organized by Shirakaba” (21-25, 69-70), and “The Development of Blake Reception and the 100th Anniversary of the Death of Blake” (26-37, 71-77).

Part II, “Japanese Blakeans,” consists of “Ryusei Kishida and the Artists of the Shirakaba Group” (38-45, 78-81), “Kagaku Murakami and Kokuga Sosaku Kyōkai” (46-50, 81-82), and “Blake Collector: Taro Nagasaki” (51-53, 83-84).

Iacono, Domenic J., intro. William Blake at Syracuse University: An Exhibition of Works from the Syracuse University Art Collection and Special Collections at E.S. Bird Library. New York: New York, 2003. <WBHC 1316>

Windle, John. Catalogue Thirty-Six. San Francisco: John Windle, 2003. <WBHC 1318>

2001

Christie's. The Library of Abel E. Berland: Part I: Important English Literature, Science and Philosophy. New York: Christie's, 2001. <WBHC 1310>

Reproduces front cover and Bentley plates 3, 5, 8, 11, 17 of Innocence copy J.

Windle, John. Catalogue Thirty-Two: William Blake. San Francisco: John Windle, 2001. <WBHC 1309>

2000

Bindman, David, and Simon Baker, ed. William Blake 1757-1827. Trans. into Finish, Tomi Snellman. Trans. into Swedish, Camill Ahlström-Taavitsainen. Tennispalatsi: Helsingin kaupungin taidemuseo; Tennispalatset: Helsingfors stads konstmuseum, [2000]. In Finnish and Swedish. William Blake 1757-1827. Trans. Simon V. Turner. Praha :Správa Pražského hradu. The British Museum: The British Council, 2000. In Czech. <WBHC 1284-85>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Helsinki City Museum, Finland, from 11 Apr. to 25 Jun. 2000 and at the Imperial Stables, Prague Castle, from 15 Sep. to 11 Nov. 2000. It has versions in Finnish, Swedish, and Czech, but not English, although Bo Lindberg mentions seeing the English typescript in his review in Blake.

William Blake. London: Tate, 2000; New York: Harry Abrams, 2000. <WBHC 1286-1308>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate Britain, London, from 9 Nov. 2000 to 11 Feb. 2001 and at the New York Metropolitan Museum, from 27 Mar. to 24 Jun. 2001. Includes reproductions of Laocoön copy A and Marriage copies L and M.

Windle, John. Catalogue Thirty-One: William Blake. San Francisco: John Windle, 2000. <WBHC 1308>

1990s

1999

Bindman, David. “William Blake: Prophet and History Painter.” The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come. Ed. Frances Carey. Toronto and Buffalo: University of Toronto Press, 1999. 219-23. <WBHC 1283>

The section on Blake appears in a wider chapter by Bindman titled, “The English Apocalypse,” which provides a useful context for Blake’s apocalyptic paintings. The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come is the catalogue for exhibition of the same name held at the British Museum Department of Prints and Drawings from 17 Dec. 1999 to 24 Apr. 2000.

Sotheby. The Estate of Mrs. John Hay Whitney. New York, 1999. <WBHC 1278-79>

Includes reproduction of Urizen copy E.

Tyger of Wrath: William Blake in the National Gallery of Victoria. National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne, Australia. 1999.

An exhibition held at the National Gallery of Victoria from 28 Apr. to 30 Jun. 1999. No catalogue was produced but the exhibition’s webpage (linked to in the title) is still active and contains reproductions and descriptions.

1998

Windle, John. List Twenty-Nine: William Blake. San Francisco: John Windle, 1998. <WBHC 1278>

1997

The Human Form Divine: William Blake from the Paul Mellon Collection. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1997.²⁰⁵ <WBHC 1274-76>

An exhibition of Blake’s work from the Paul Mellon Collection held at the Yale Center for British Art from Apr. 2 to Jul. 6 1997. Curated by Patrick Noon.

1995

Hamlyn, Robin, intro. William Blake and Patronage London: Tate Gallery, 1995. <WBHC 1258>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate Gallery from 11 Jul. to 15 Oct. 1995.

Windle, John. The Blake Collection of Joseph Holland & Vincent Newton With Additions from our Inventory. John Windle List Twenty-Six. San Francisco: John Windle, 1995. <WBHC 1258-59>

1994

Hamlyn, Robin. William Blake: Art and Revolution. London: Tate Gallery, 1994. <WBHC 1250-51>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate Gallery from 16 Jul. to 16 Aug. 1994.

1993

Christie’s. Books and Prints by William Blake from the Collection formed by the late Frank Rinder, Esq. 30 November 1993. <WBHC 1249>

²⁰⁵ Incorporates Noon’s essay, “A ‘Mad’ but Compelling Vision,” Yale Alumni Magazine (Apr. 1997), which details the Mellon collection and its Blakes.

Includes Marriage copy M; Jerusalem copy C; Milton pl. 38; Jerusalem pl. 25; “4 Virgil pulls”; “The Man Sweeping the Interpreter’s Parlour”; and “George Richmond’s copy of Job (1826) and Job ([1874])” (WBHC 1249).

Hamlyn, Robin. William Blake: Independence and Innovation. London: Tate Gallery, 1993. <WBHC 1247>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate Gallery from 18 May to 8 Aug. 1993.

Stirton, Paul. William Blake and His Circle. [No publication information.] 1993.

The small catalogue for the exhibition held at the Hunterian Art Gallery, University of Glasgow, from 1 May to 26 Jun. 1993. All of the works are from the University of Glasgow collection.

1992

Hamlyn, Robin. William Blake: The Apprentice Years. London: Tate Gallery, 1992. <BBS 311>

Exhibition held at the Tate Gallery from 13 May to 16 Aug. 1992. Includes an essay by Hamlyn on Blake’s apprentice years.²⁰⁶

Perry-Lehman, Meira. There Was a Man of the Land of Uz: William Blake’s Illustrations to the Book of Job. Jerusalem: The Israel Museum, 1992. In English and Hebrew. <BBS 311>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Israel Museum in April 1992.

William Blake: Paintings, Watercolors and Drawings. New York: Salander-O’Reilly Galleries, 1992. <BBS 311>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Salander-O’Reilly gallery (Washington D.C.) from 4 Nov. to 31 Dec. 1992.

1991

Hamlyn, Robin. William Blake and His Followers. London: Tate Gallery, 1991. <BBS 310>

Exhibition held at the Tate Gallery from 19 Jul. to 3 Nov. 1991.

1990

William Blake (Yanagi: Blake no deai): William Blake (Great Encounter: Yanagi and Blake). 1990. In English and Japanese. <BBS 307-07, WBHC 1237-38>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Nihon Mingeikan: The Japan Folk Crafts Museum from 1 Sep. to 28 Oct. 1990.

Schiff, Gert, et al. William Blake. Tokyo: Nihon Keizai Shimbun, for the National Museum of Western Art, 1990. <BBS 308-09, WBHC 1236-37>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Museum of Western Art, Tokyo, from 25 Sep. to 25 Nov. 1990.

²⁰⁶ Hamlyn’s essay was reprinted in William Blake: Paintings, Watercolors and Drawings (1992).

1980s

1989

Butlin, Martin, and Ted Gott. William Blake in the Collection of the National Gallery of Victoria. Melbourne: National Gallery of Victoria, 1989. <BBS 306-07, WBHC 1235-36>

The catalogue produced for the exhibition held at the National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne, from 14 Sep. to 19 Nov. 1989.

1982

Bindman, David. William Blake: His Art and Times. [London]: Thames and Hudson, for the Yale Center for British Art [New Haven, Conn.] and the Art Gallery of Ontario [Toronto, Ont.], 1982.²⁰⁷ <BBS 298-99, WBHC 1209-13>

The catalogue for the “major exhibition” (BBS298) held at the Yale Center for British Art from 15 Sep. to 14 Nov. 1982 and at the Art Gallery of Ontario from 3 Dec. 1982 to 15 Feb. 1983.

1970s

1978

Butlin, Martin. William Blake. London: Tate Gallery Publications, 1978. <BBS 295, WBHC 1196-1201>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Tate from 9 Mar. to 21 May 1978 and organized “in association with the William Blake Trust.” There are pictures of the exhibition itself as well as of Geoffrey Keynes, Arnold Fawcus, and the Rosenwalds in Ruth E. Fine’s review in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 42-55.

1976

Walker, Corlett Rossiter. William Blake in the Art of His Time. Santa Barbara: Standard Printing of Santa Barbara, 1976. <BBS 293, WBHC 1190-91>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at University of California, Santa Barbara, from 24 Feb. to 28 Mar. 1976. It includes Essick’s essay, “William Blake as an Engraver and Etcher,” pp. 16-18. See the papers delivered at the conference held during exhibition and published in Soundings: Collections of the University of California at Santa Barbara Library 8.2.

1975

[Bindman, David]. William Blake 1757-1827. Trans. Detlef Dörrbecker, Eleonor Reichert, and Georg Syamken. Munich and Hamburg: Prestel, for the Hamburger Kunsthalle, 1975; and Frankfort: Städelisches Kunstinstitut und Städtische Galerie, 1975. <BB #C710, WBHC 1180-90>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Hamburger Kunsthalle from 6 Mar. to 27 Apr. 1975 and the Städtische Gallery Frankfort from 15 May to 27 Jul. 1975.

²⁰⁷ See also Bindman’s “An Afterword on William Blake: His Art and Times,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983), 224-25.

1960s

1969

Ryskamp, Charles. William Blake Engraver: A Descriptive Catalogue of an Exhibition [in Princeton University Library]. Princeton, 1969. <BB #700, WBHC 1167-68>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Princeton University from Dec. 1969 to Feb. 1970. No reproductions but “129 entries, described with great care” (BB #700).

William Blake: Poet. Prophet. Prophet. Foreword, Francis W. Hawcroft. Intro., Lessing J. Rosenwald. 1969. <BB #698>

The catalogue for the exhibition held from 14 May to 21 Jun. 1969 at the Whitworth Art Gallery at the University of Manchester, Manchester, UK. The exhibition included both selections from the illuminated books and watercolors and drawings from the W. Graham Robertson collection. The foreword and introduction touch on the Blake Trust and its relationship to Robertson. Kerrison Preston also has a note in the catalogue on Robertson’s collection of Blakes and their auction on 22 Jul. 1949.

1965

William Blake: An Annotated Catalogue. Emira, NY: Golos Printing, 1965. <BB #689>

The catalogue for the travelling Blake Trust exhibition held at the Andrew Dickson White Museum of Art, Cornell University, from 27 Feb. to 29 Mar. 1965. See also BB #690.

[Wark, Robert R.] William Blake and His Circle: Two Exhibitions at the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery. <BB #691>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery from Nov. 1965 to Feb. 1966.

1964

Keynes, Geoffrey. An Exhibition of the Illuminated Books of William Blake Poet Printer Prophet. 1964. A Study of the Illuminated Books of William Blake Poet Printer Prophet. London and Paris, 1965. London & Paris, 1970. <BB #688>

1950s

1958

Catalogue of the Celebrated Collection of Books Illuminated & Illustrated by William Blake[.] The Property of the late Mrs. William Emerson which will be sold by Sotheby & Co. 19 May 1958. New York, 1958. <BB #682>

Sangu, Makoto. William Seitan 200-nen Kinen: Blake Bunken Tenjikai Shuppin Mokuroku: Catalogue of an Exhibition of Blakeana held in Commemoration of the Bicentenary of Blake's Birth at Hosei University. Tokyo, 1958. <BB #676>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Hosei University, Tokyo, in Nov. 1957.

1957

William Blake Exhibition. Winnipeg, 1957. <BB #671>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Winnipeg Art Gallery from 2 to 28 Feb. 1957.

William Blake (1757-1827) Bicentenary Celebrations. Paintings, Drawings and Facsimiles.
Manchester, 1957. <BB #671>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Whitworth Art Gallery from 25 Apr. to 18 May 1957.

The Art of William Blake. Washington DC, 1957. <BB #674>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Gallery of Art, Washington DC, from 18 Oct. to 1 Dec. 1957.

William Blake and his Circle. London, 1957. <BB #680>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the British Museum.

1940s

1947

William Blake, 1757-1827. The British Council, 1947. <BB #657>

A travelling exhibition organized by the British Council that travelled to Paris, Antwerp, Brussels, and Zurich. See BB p. 672 for details about the different catalogues.

1930s

1939

Mongan, Elizabeth, and Edwin Wolf, 2nd. William Blake 1757-1827: A Descriptive Catalogue of an Exhibition of the Works of William Blake Selected from Collections in the United States.

Philadelphia: Philadelphia Museum of Art, 1939. <BB #647>

“[O]ne of the most important Blake exhibitions” (BB #647).

1938

William Blake: The Renowned Collection of First Editions, Original Drawings, Autograph Letters and an Important Painting in Oils [. . .] Collected by late George C. Smith, Jr. Parke-Bernet Galleries Inc. 1938. <BB #645>

The sale catalogue for the George C. Smith Jr. Collection.

1937

Catalogue of the Very Well-Known and Valuable Library The Property of Lt.-Col. W.E. Moss. Sotheby & Co., 1937. <BB #643>

The sale catalogue for the Moss collection.

1936

A Descriptive Hand-List of a Loan Exhibition of Books and Works of Art by William Blake, 1757-1827, chiefly from the Collection of Mr. Lessing J. Rosenwald. Pasadena, 1936. <BB #639>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Little Museum of Lat Miniatura from 16 to 28 Mar. 1936.

1930

Illustrated Books and Original Drawings of William Blake, Drawings, Etchings, Lithographs by Muirhead Bone. Philadelphia, 1930. <BB #636>

The catalogue for exhibition held at the Print Club of Philadelphia, from 17 Feb. to 1 Mar. 1930, loaned by Lessing J. Rosenwald.

Loan Exhibition of Works of William Blake Fogg Art Museum. Cambridge, MA, 1930. <BB #637>

“A mimeographed list of an extraordinarily rich exhibition” held at the Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University, from 22 Oct. to 5 Dec. 1930 (BB #637).

1920s

1927

100-nenki Kinen Blake: Sakuhin Bunkan Tenrankai Shuppin Mokuroku Oite Onshi Kyoto Hakubutsukan [Commemoration of Blake's Centenary: Bibliography and Exhibition Catalogue at Onshi Kyoto Scientific Museum]. Kyoto, 1927. <BB #630>

Burlington Fine Arts Club Catalogue: Blake Centenary Exhibition. London: Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1927. 1927.²⁰⁸ <BB #631>

1910s

1919

Yanagi, Soetsu (Muneyoshi). William Blake no Fukusei Hanga Tenraikai Mokuroku [An Annotated Catalogue of an Exhibition of Reproductions from the Works of William Blake]. Tokyo, 1919. <BB #611>

The catalogue at the exhibition held at the Russian Gallery, Tokyo, from 7 to 11 Nov. 1919 and at the “Shirakabasha [The White Birch Society]” from 22 to 18 Nov. 1919 (BB #611).

William Blake: An Exhibition The Grolier Club. New York, 1919. <BB #612>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Grolier club from 5 Dec. 1919 to 10 Jan. 1920.

1918

Catalogue of the John Linnell Collection of Highly Important Works by William Blake Obtained Direct from the Artist. 1918. <BB #608>

“‘The John Linnell Collection of Works by William Blake’ is lots 148-215, over 360 items” (BB #608).

1913

Catalogue of Loan Exhibition of Works by William Blake. London, 1913. 2nd ed. 1913. <BB #604>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the National Gallery, British Art, from Oct. to Dec. 1913.

1906

Exhibition of Works by William Blake. London: Carfax & Co, Ltd., 1906. <BB #600>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Carfax Gallery from 14 Jun. to 13 Jul. 1906.

²⁰⁸ See BB pp. 668-69 for a description of the different editions.

1905

Catalogue of Books, Engravings, Water-Colors & Sketches by William Blake. 1905. <BB #599>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Grolier Club from 26 Jan. to 25 Feb. 1905.

1904

Exhibition of Works by William Blake. London: Carfax & Co., 1904. <BB #598>

“Archibald G.B. Russell, ‘The Art of William Blake’ (p. i-iii)” (BB #598).

1890s

1892

Examples of the English Pre-Raphaelite School of Painters, Including Rossetti, Burne-Jones, Maddox-Brown, and Others, Together with a Collection of the Works of William Blake. 1892.
<BB #588>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia 8 Dec. 1892. “Entries 115-205 are by Blake, mostly from the collection of H.H. Gilchrist” (BB #588).

1891

Museum of Fine Arts Department. Exhibition of Books, Water Colors, Engravings, Etc. By William Blake. Boston, 1891. <BB #586>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts from 7 Feb. to 15 Mar. 1891.

1880s

1880

Exhibition of Drawings, Water Colors, and Engravings by William Blake. Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Boston: Alfred Mudge and Sons, 1880. <BB #575>

1870s

1876

Scott, William Bell. Exhibition of the Works of William Blake. London: Spottiswoode and Co., 1876. <BB #571>

1850s

1852

Messrs. S. Leigh Sotheby and John Wilkinson. Catalogue of the Valuable Collection of Water-Colour Drawings[.] The Property of Charles Ford, Esq. of Bath, Comprising . . . Fine Characteristic Drawings by William Blake, Together with A Few Paintings &c. The Property of an Amateur. London, 1852. <WBHC 995-98>

VII. Studies of Blake Arranged by Subject (Including Affect, Body, Disability, Neurodivergence, Object, and Trauma Studies; Antiquarianism and Druids; Appreciations and Applications of Blake; Art; Blake's Collectors and Collections; Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies; Comics, Graphic Novels, and Video Games; Digital Humanities; Ecological Studies; Film, Television, and Video Studies; Gender and Sexuality Studies; Literature and Language; Music; Political and Historical Criticism; Psychology and Psychoanalytic Criticism; Race, Slavery, (Post-)Colonialism, and Orientalism; Reception Studies; Religion; Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution; Studies of Blake Criticism (as such), of Blake Scholars, and of Institutions and Projects Devoted to Blake; Theater, Dance, and Performance; Translating Blake)

Affect, Body, Disability, Neurodivergence, and Trauma Studies

Introduction

Goldsmith, Steven. “(Without) Sympathy.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 333-44. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Adnot, Camille. “Enough! Or Too much’: William Blake’s Intermedial Aesthetics of Excess.” Etudes anglaises 76.4 (2024): 404-24. Abstract in English and in French. <Blake (2025)>

“Drawing on vitalism and image-text studies, this article explores William Blake’s aesthetics of excess in his long ‘Prophecies’ (The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem). Blake’s conception of excess combines notions of energy, vitality, and power, informed by 18th-century scientific investigations into life forms and taxonomy. With his “bounding line,” Blake pushes the boundaries of semiotic as well as biological categorization. I analyze cases of graphic overflow, synesthesia, and sensory overload, to highlight how Blake uses multiplicity as a creative principle” (abstract).

Apesos, Anthony. “Visionary Anatomy: Blake’s Bodies.” Romantik: Journal for the Study of Romanticisms 10 (2021): 57-82. <Blake (2023)>

“I will explore the origin and significance of Blake’s divergence from anatomical correctness” (abstract). Also references William Hunter, Joshua Reynolds, and Luigi Schiavonetti.

Barr, Mark L. “Prophecy, the Law of Insanity, and The [First] Book of Urizen.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 46.4 (2006): 739-62. <WBHC 1583>

“[I]n retrieving an old reading of Urizen as dramatizing psychic conflict, I would suggest that the poem’s referent is not so much Freudian as Georgian” (758).

Brewster, Glenn. “From Albion to Frankenstein’s Creation: The Disintegration of the Social Body in Blake and Mary Shelley.” Romantic Generations: Essays in Honor of Robert F. Gleckner. Ed. Ghislaine McDayter, Quinn Batten, and Barry Milligan. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 64-82. <WBHC 1785>

Compares the social bodies represented by Albion and Frankenstein’s monster.

Brisman, Leslie. “Re: Generation in Blake.” Romantic Origins. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1978. 224-75, 394-97.²⁰⁹ <BBS 425>

On the “seven ‘successive retellings of this story of generation’” in Night VIIa of The Four Zoas (227)” (BBS 425).

Bundock, Christopher. “Blake’s Nervous System: Hypochondria, Judaism, and Jerusalem.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 150-71. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Reads the body of Albion in Jerusalem through the lens of the long reaction to the 1753 Jewish Naturalization Bill: “Albion thus seems to become the living embodiment of the anti-Semitic image of the Jew that he himself generates” (165).

Burwick, Frederick. “Visceral Visions Marionettes and Monsters.” The Haunted Eye: Perception and the Grotesque in English and German Romanticism. Heidelberg: Carl Winter, 1987. 240-73. <BBS 429>

In a wider book on “grotesque modes of perception” (240), pp. 240-54 treat Blake’s depictions of the body and the grotesque, particularly in The Four Zoas.

Calè, Luisa. “William Blake’s Pestilence, Sympathy, and the Politics of Feeling.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022). Special Issue: “Romanticism and Vision.” Ed. Terry F. Robinson and John Savarese. 515-33. <Blake (2023)>

“Blake’s scene of pestilence becomes a virtual test of moral sentiments in which viewers confront an ethics of freedom built on sacrifice” (abstract).

Chandler, James. “Blake and the Syntax of Sentiment: An Essay on ‘Blaking’ Understanding.” Blake, Nation and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 102-18. <WBHC 1866-69>

On the nationalization of sentiment, with references to the Songs.

Chard, Leslie F. II. “Two ‘New’ Blake Engravings: Blake, James Earle, and the Surgeon’s Art.” Blake Studies 6 (1975): 153-65. <BBS 410>

A description of the engravings for James Earle’s Practical Observations on the Operation for the Stone (1793), contending that “the Earle prints do suggest that a study of eighteenth-century surgery (and in particular lithotomy) might be of some contextual value in appreciating Blake” (156).

²⁰⁹ Excerpted in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 145-57, <BBS 415>

Choe, Sharon. “Deformed Bodies and Norse Origins in William Blake.” Studies in English Literature, 1500–1900 60.3 (summer 2020): 529-49. <Blake (2021)>

“The scope of this article then is to rethink how the formation of Urizen’s deformed body speaks to Blake’s antiquarian interests, specifically in the North and Old Norse, and how this interest in an alternate creation narrative reveals the limits of the Genesis narrative when examining The Book of Urizen” (531).

Clark, Stephanie Brown, M.D. “Behaviour, Biology and William Blake: the History of a Paradigm Shift.” Humane Medicine 9 (1993): 189-200. <WBHC 1857>

“Much of what Blake wrote and drew . . . seems to anticipate the ‘new’ paradigm of the 20th century, which attempts to reintegrate the mind and body, subjective experience and objective matter” (200) (WBHC 1857).

Connolly, Tristane J. William Blake and the Body. Hounds mills and New York: Palgrave, 2002.²¹⁰ <WBHC 1881-82>

An influential book on Blake’s various notions of and representations of the body, addressing the influence of anatomical art, physical bodies and birth (including miscarriages and abortions), parent and child relationships, and resurrected bodies. She suggests that Catherine Blake was listed as a patient on 26 August 1796 at the Lambeth lying-in hospital and posits it as likely that Catherine experienced many miscarriages.

Connolly, Tristane J. “William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy.” The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics: Spectres of Romanticism. Ed. Sarah Ruston with Assistance by Lidia Garbin. Lewiston, NY: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999. 19-42. <WBHC 1882>

On Blake’s use of “anatomical imagery” (19).

[Coudert], Pierre-Yves. “Enclosure and Expansion: Blake, Science, and the Body.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 47-56. <WBHC 2190-91>

On what Blake saw wrong in the science of Newton, Locke, and Bacon, and his affinities with the twentieth-century painter, Francis Bacon (1909-1992).

Dushane, Allison. “Speculative Enthusiasm: William Blake’s Jerusalem and Quentin Meillassoux’s Divine Ethics.” Romanticism and Speculative Realism. Ed. Chris Washington and Anne C. McCarthy. New York: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. 93-109. <Blake (2020)>

“Blake’s speculative enthusiasm encourages an affective stance that operates through openness to and reciprocal exchange with the other in order to embrace radical contingency” (105).

²¹⁰ Incorporates Connolly’s “Miscarriage Imagery in Blake,” Romanticism 7.2 (2001), 145-62, not recorded in WBHC; “William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy,” Spectres of Romanticism: The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics, ed. Sarah Ruston with assistance by Lidia Garbin. (Lewiston, NY, Queenston, ON, Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999), 19-42, <WBHC 1882>.

Effinger, Elizabeth. "Anal Blake: Bringing Up the Rear in Blakean Criticism." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 63-73. <WBHC 1801-03>

On Blake's representations of "buttocks and anuses in The Book of Urizen and Milton, and the corresponding anxiety within Blake criticism surrounding the reading of butts" (63).

Effinger, Elizabeth. "Forgiving Blake's Disaster: The Changing Face(s) of Science and 'Governmentalized' Bodies of Knowledge." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 172-93. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Examines Hand in Jerusalem as representing the "disastrously disfigured body" of "the industry of science" (174).

Engelstein, Stefani. "The Regenerative Geography of the Text in William Blake." Modern Language Studies 30.2 (2000): 61-86. <WBHC 1984, 1987>²¹¹

Considers how Blake represented bodies, with many references to the anatomist, John Hunter.

Engelstein, Stefani. "William Blake's Bodies." Anxious Anatomy: The Conception of the Human Form in Literary and Naturalist Discourse. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2008. 61-112. <WBHC 1987-88>

Moves from discussing William Hunter's lectures on anatomy at the Royal Academy and his models to Blake's ideas of the body, embryology, the polyp.

Erle, Sibylle. Blake, Lavater, and Physiognomy. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2010.²¹² <WBHC 1995-96>

A key study that examines the background and production of Lavater's Physiognomische Fragmente, Henry Fuseli's English translation, and Blake's illustrations, and which details Lavater's influence on Blake's thought.

Fabi, Marta. "'O Rose thou art sick': Unravelling Social Implications of Body and Mind's Sickness in William Blake's Poems of Experience." Testo e Senso 25 (2022): 177-89. <Blake 2023>

"By looking closely at the poem, The Sick Rose, which will be compared with the last stanza of the poem London, this paper aims at investigating the symbolical meaning of the works with references to the spreading of venereal diseases in 1790s London" (abstract).

²¹¹ WBHC lists the entry twice, with the first being out of alphabetical order.

²¹² Incorporates Erle's "Leaving Their Mark: Lavater, Fuseli and Blake's Imprint on Aphorisms on Man," Comparative Critical Studies 3 (2006), 347-69, <WBHC 1996>, and "The Myth of the Lost Original: Blake and Lavater's Search for Divine Likeness," In the Embrace of the Swan: Anglo-German Mythologies in Literature, the Visual Arts and Cultural Theory, ed. Rüdiger Görner and Angus Nicholls (Berlin and New York: Walter De Gruyter, 2010), 211-30, <WBHC 1996>.

Frosch, Thomas R. The Awakening of Albion: The Renovation of the Body in the Poetry of William Blake. <BB #A1637, BBS 476, WBHC 2033-35>

“A study of ‘the conviction that the transformation of man needed to include what can be described as a resurrection of his body through a remaking of its sensory organization’” (BB #A1637).

Fuller, David. “‘Mad as a refuge from unbelief’: Blake and the Sanity of Dissidence.” Madness and Creativity in Literature and Culture. Ed. Corinne Saunders and Jane Macnaughton. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. 121-43. <WBHC 2046-47>

Considers Blake’s madness as “resistance to normalisation” (140).

Gigante, Denise. “Blake’s Living Form: Jerusalem.” Life: Organic Form and Romanticism. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2009. 106-154.²¹³ <WBHC 2060>

“[Jerusalem’s] seemingly disjointed textual and visual elements illustrate the poetics of epigenesis on an epic scale” (108).

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks (“Hidden Dreams,” 31-67) and John Flaxman (“Poetic Departures,” 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Goldsmith, Steven. Blake’s Agitation: Criticism and the Emotions. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 2013.²¹⁴ <WBHC 2088>

An important work on Blake from the perspective of affect studies, with references to Kenzaburo’s Rouse up O Young Men of the New Age and Wordsworth.

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. “Blake’s Mundane Egg: Epigenesis and Milieux.” Sweet Science: Romantic Materialism and the New Logics of Life. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2017. 35-71. <Blake (2018)>

“Reading scenes of embryogenesis from The First Book of Urizen (1794), Milton (c. 1804-1811), and Jerusalem (1804-c. 1820) with related poetic prose accounts from Erasmus Darwin and Jean Baptiste Lamarck, this chapter presents a now unfamiliar premise that, I argue, held contemporary experimental life science open to poetic participation” (36).

²¹³ Rpt. of Gigante’s Blake’s Living Form, Nineteenth-Century Literature 63.4 (2009), 461–85, <WBHC 2060>.

²¹⁴ Incorporates Goldsmith’s “Blake’s Agitation,” South Atlantic Quarterly 95 (1996), 753-96, <WBHC 2087-88>, and “William Blake and the Future of Enthusiasm,” Nineteenth-Century Literature 63 (2009), 439-60, <WBHC 2089>.

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. “William Blake and the Time of Ontogeny.” Systems of Life: Biopolitics, Economics, and Literature on the Cusp of Modernity. Ed. Richard A. Barney and Warren Montag. New York: Fordham University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2021, 2023)>

“Blake joins contemporary zoologists Erasmus Darwin and Jean-Baptiste Lamarck in casting epigenesis as a work of acute historical and circumstantial dependency, rather than of autotelic power” (abstract).

González-Treviño, Ana Elena. “Female Spaces and the Gothic Imagination in The Book of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncle and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 189-209. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Reads how Thel and Oothoon engage with their own bodies and the natural world.

Goss, Erin M. “What Is Called Corporeal: Blake and the Body’s Origins.” Revealing Bodies: Anatomy, Allegory, and the Grounds of Knowledge in the Long Eighteenth Century. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2012. 87-117.²¹⁵ <WBHC 2093>

“Blake’s insight suggests [...] the degree to which the body remains a question that cannot be answered” (92). Focuses largely on The Book of Urizen.

Green, Matthew. “Disruptions of Identity: Points of Intersection between Blake’s Urizen Books and Cognitive Science.” Sparta Journal for the Psychological Study of the Arts 6 (2002): n.p. <WBHC 2103>

“Blake’s dynamic explorations of identity challenge dominant Lockean models of the self to present a complex matrix of identity similar to those posited by researchers working in the field of cognitive neuroscience.”

Hadley, Karen. “Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion and the Biopolitical Unconscious.” PMLA 133.2 (Mar. 2018): 314-28. <Blake (2019)>

“Correcting the prevalent misidentification of the marigold that Oothoon plucks in Visions, my reading newly envisions an Oothoon whose relation to the life-forms around her replicates the modes of domination and exploitation inherent in capitalist ideology” (abstract).

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. “Blood in Blake’s Poetry of Gender Struggle.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 47-63. <WBHC 1803-04>

“I will explore the ways in which Blake’s blood becomes sexualized and gains multiple meaning, sometimes conflicting, in gender struggle scenes in The Book of Urizen, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem,” and “I draw attention to the fact that a similar kind of blood appears in examples of Japanese film and literature [by Yukio Mishima and Hayao Miyazaki]” (47).

Ishizuka, Hisao. “Enlightening the Fibre-Woven Body: William Blake and Eighteenth-Century Fibre Medicine.” Literature and Medicine 25.1 (Spring 2006), 75-92. <WBHC 2196>

²¹⁵ Incorporates Goss’s “What Is Called Corporeal: William Blake and the Question of the Body,” Eighteenth Century 51.4 (2010), 413-30, <WBHC 2094>.

On Blake's understanding of the body as fibers and its importance to his thought.

Ishizuka, Hisao. "Thel's 'Complaint': A Medical Reading of Blake's The Book of Thel." Eibungaku Kenkyu Nihon Eibungakkai: Studies in English Literature [The English Literary Society of Japan] 73 (1997): 245-63. <WBHC 2196-97>

An important reading that connects the character Thel to medical discourses surrounding pubescent girls and the repression of sexuality.

Ishizuka, Hisao. "Untying the Web of Urizen: William Blake, Nervous Medicine, and the Culture of Feeling." Liberating Medicine, 1720-1835. Ed. Tristanne Connolly and Steve Clark. Pickering & Chatto 2009. New York: Routledge, 2016. 97-107. <WBHC 2197>

"Focusing on the complex figure of Urizen, one of Blake's Four Zoas, and that of the web that he spins, I explore in this essay how Blake intertwines into this representation the idea and metaphor of the web that Enlightenment medical theories of the nerves created" (97).

Jarvis, Simon. "Blake's Spiritual Body." The Meaning of "Life" in Romantic Poetry and Poetics. Ed. Ross Wilson. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2008. 13-32. <WBHC 2207>

Suggests that Blake's conception of the spiritual and natural body highlights "[t]he opposition [...] between the subjective body and the objective body: between the body which I am and the body which I have; between the body which touches and the body which is touched" (14).

Keith, Jennifer. "The Feet of Salvation in Blake's Milton." Bulletin de la Société d'Etudes Anglo-Américaines des XVIIe et XVIIIe Siècles 45 (Nov. 1995): 51-67. <WBHC 2247>

"Blake's stepping feet, metaphors of metaphoric cognition, exercise consciousness of the spirit falling and rebounding" (67).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "William Blake & Bart's." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.1 (summer 1973): 9-10. <BB #1217.126>

Provides information about James Earle, who, like Keynes, was a surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Details Earle's and Blake's connection to William Long (1747-1818), another surgeon to whom Earle's Practical Observations is dedicated and whom is mentioned by Blake in a 16 Mar. 1804 letter to Hayley, and offers a hypothesis of Blake's unpublished engraving of "Edmund Pitts Esq," another surgeon and associate of Earle's.

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake: Removing the Curse by Printing for the Blind." The Blind and Blindness in Literature of the Romantic Period. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2007. 64-88. <WBHC 2312>

"[S]tudies William Blake's characteristic themes, which were developed in close relationship with the imagery of blindness and in the light of its philosophical debates, starting with Blake's debate of the imagery of blindness and the blind with empiricist epistemology" (abstract). Discusses Tiriel.

Lee, Haram. “The Critique of Reason and Biopolitics in William Blake’s The Four Zoas.” Texas Studies in Literature and Language 63.1 (spring 2021): 53-77. <Blake (2022)>

“For Blake, the liberal radicals such as Thomas Paine, John Thelwall, and Joseph Priestley paved the way for a technology of biopolitical governance on the rise in the late 1790s because, not unlike Malthus, they embraced the misconceived notion of reason as a mere instrument for the mastery of self and nature” (55).

Lee, Tara. “Against Self-Organization: Redefining Vitality with William Blake in Jerusalem and The Four Zoas.” Studies in Romanticism 61.3 (fall 2022): 351-77. <Blake (2023)>

“Reading Blake’s reception of scientific concepts with reference to the Christian contexts in which he was embedded, this article finds that Blake, across his corpus, but especially in works such as The Four Zoas (composed c. 1796–1807) and Jerusalem The Emanation of the Giant Albion (composed 1804–c. 1820), defines true vitality against the false vitality produced by the capricious self-organizing powers of the body” (abstract).

Lee, Tara. “Fibres, Globules, Cells: William Blake and the Biological Individual.” Romanticism on the Net 76 (2021). <Blake (2023)>

“This article argues that William Blake’s critique of eighteenth-century medicine is grounded upon a Romantic view of organic form shared by contemporary scientists such as Lorenz Oken” (abstract).

Lorenz, Matt. “Blakean Wonder and the Unfallen Tharmas: Health, Wholeness, and Holarchy in The Four Zoas.” Disabling Romanticism. Ed. Michael Bradshaw. London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2016. 127-45. <Blake (2017, 2019)>

Considers Tharmas’s blindness.

Łuczyńska-Holdys, Małgorzata. “The Experience of Female Embodiment in William Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” Nordic Journal of English Studies 19.1 (2020): 1-27. <Blake (2022)>

“I hope to demonstrate that through his criticism of thinking that perceives the body as inferior in the gendered binary Blake not only rehabilitates the body as equally important as the mind, but also succeeds in delivering the psychologically viable and progressive message that the divorce between the mind and the body can only create a virtually torn, unhappy subject” (3-4).

Lussier, Mark. “Affective Textualities: Restructuring Subjectivity in Blake’s Marriage.” Romanticism and Affect Studies. Ed. Seth T. Reno. Romantic Circles (May 2018): 30 pars. <Blake (2019)>

“Within the accumulation of The Marriage as assemblage, from its opening titular mirror and its dedicated exploitation of the ‘I’ as our narrative guide through both heaven and hell, readers both transfer (via internalization) the subject-function and thereby continuously pronounce themselves the ‘I’ of the text, which operates through countertransference” (par. 30).

Lussier, Mark. “Beyond Pure Poetics: On the Rhythmic Impulse in Romanticism.” Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 94-117. <Blake (2022)>

“In different ways, Blake, Byron, and Shelley undertake rhythmic operations with affective aspirations and in the process express the literal spirit of the age, a rhythmic presence operative at all scales, active in every atom and cell, and manifest in material and mental processes” (113).

Matsushita, Tetsuya. “Mushakoji Saneatsu saku, Kishida Ryusei ga Kachi Kachi Yama to Hanasakajiji no soga ni mirareru William Blake no kansogakuteki jintaizokei no eikyo [The Physiognomic Influence of William Blake on the Modeling of a Human Body in Kishida Ryusei’s Illustrations for Mt. Kachi Kachi and an Old Man Who Made the Dead Trees Blossom Written by Mushakoji Saneatsu].” Bigaku (Aesthetics) 68.2 (2017): 148. In Japanese. <Blake (2020)>

Mee, Jon. “Bloody Blake: Nation and Circulation.” Blake, Nation and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 63-82. <WBHC 1866-69>

Examines circulation in both a social and bodily sense to suggest that Blake’s concern with “the cardiovascular system” (64) in The Book of Urizen is tied to his engraved frontispiece for Thomas Beddoes’s new edition of John Brown’s Elements of Medicine (1795).

Michael, Jennifer Davis. “Blake’s Feet: Toward a Poetics of Incarnation.” Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 205-24. <WBHC 2095-98>

“I want to suggest [...] that Blake’s symbolic use of feet, beginning with Poetical Sketches, is intrinsic to his artistic project, fusing spiritual, sexual, and poetic acts into a single member” (206).

Miner, Paul. “Blake: The Metaphors of Generation.” Notes and Queries 61.1 (Mar. 2014): 33-38.²¹⁶

On Blake’s metaphors of birth and weaving.

Miner, Paul. “Blake’s Mouth-Space and the Tongue of Touch.” Notes and Queries 63.2 (Jun. 2016): 202-11. <Blake (2017)>

On Blake’s depictions of the mouth and tongue.

Mulvihill, James. “‘Demonic Objectification and Total Isolation’: Blake and the Culture Industry.” Studies in Romanticism 38.4 (1999): 597-620. <WBHC 2442>

“What the cultural critique practiced by Horkheimer and Adorno offers the student of Blake is a model of what in his essay on Dialectic of Enlightenment Habermas terms a ‘totalizing, self-referential critique’” (598).

Myrone, Martin. “Conclusion: Genius, Madness and the Fate of Heroic Art: Blake and Fuseli in the Nineteenth Century.” Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 305-14, 367-69. <WBHC 2446>

Considers Blake and Fuseli and the fate of the “Grand Manner” in art and its arguments regarding masculinity.

²¹⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

Nelson, Cary. "Blake's Jerusalem: A Fourfold Vision of the Human Body." The Incarnate Word: Literature as Verbal Space. Urbana, Chicago, London: University of Illinois Press, 1973. 129-59. <BB #D2278>

"Jerusalem dramatically enacts Blake's self-deliverance from the womb of this world" (159).

Ngide, George Ewane. "Romantic Individuation and Individualism: Re-reading William Blake's Vision of Romantic 'Thingliness'." International Journal of Language and Literature 7.2 (2019): 16-27. <Blake (2021)>

Suggests the Songs portray "journeys of life from individuation, through individualism and back to individuation" (abstract).

O'Rourke, Stephanie. "Art after Self Evidence: Fuseli, Blake, and Banks." European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 497-513. <Blake (2023)>

"[C]onsiders how models of artistic neoclassicism and scientific experimental procedures shared an investment in the evidentiary authority of an idealized male body" (abstract).

Porter, Roy. "William Blake: The Body Mystical." Flesh in the Age of Reason. London: Allen Lane, 2003. New York: W.W. Norton, 2004. 433-46. <WBHC 2541>

An overview in a wider book on conceptions of the body in the Enlightenment: "Blake rejected the traditional self of Christian Platonic humanism, as philosophized by Cartesian dualism" (445).

Punter, David. "Legends of the Animated Body: Blake's Albion and the Body and Soul of the Nation." Romanticism 1.2 (1995): 161-76. <WBHC 2551>

"[A]ddresses some aspects of the figure of Albion as it recurs throughout Blake's Prophetic Books" and "is concerned [...] with the concept of an authenticating body of legendry and its role in a national culture" (161).

Rajan, Tilottama. "Blake's Body without Organs: The Autogenesis of the System in the Lambeth Books." European Romantic Review 26.3 (2015): 357-66. <WBHC 2570>

"[E]xplores Urizen's body as a figure for Blake's own corpus and the disfiguration of its idealistic ambitions" (abstract).

Santos, Andrio J.R. dos. "O corpo como acesso ao divino na arte iluminada de William Blake [The Body as Access to the Divine in William Blake's Illuminated Art]." Estudos Avançados 35.103 (2021): 141-54. In Portuguese (abstract and keywords in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2022)>

Sha, Richard C. "Blake, Liberation and Medicine." Liberating Medicine, 1720–1835. Ed. Tristanne Connolly and Steve Clark. Pickering & Chatto 2009. New York: Routledge, 2016. 83-96. <WBHC 2669>

"I situate William Blake in the medical contexts of his time to show that the body for Blake was thus not an albatross of materiality, but rather a site for change, liberation" (84).

Sha, Richard C. "Blake and the Mark of the Cognitive: Notes Towards the Appearance of the Sceptical Subject." Distributed Cognition in Enlightenment and Romantic Culture. Ed. Miranda Anderson, George Rousseau, and Michael Wheeler. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2019. 204-18. <Blake (2022)>

"Blake's 'London' provides an especially appropriate venue for thinking about the environment as part of a cognitive system because it highlights the process of cognitive mapping" (207).

Sha, Richard C. "William Blake and the Neurological Imagination." Imagination and Science in Romanticism. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 2018. 96-43. <Blake (2019, 2021)>

"I turn to Blake's The Four Zoas to consider the ways in which neurology of the period facilitated a flexible materialism that included a reductionism driving toward a unity that can only be gestured at through narrative" (96).

Stauffer, Andrew M. Anger, Revolution, and Romanticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2005. 75-86. <WBHC 2702>

Argues that "Blake's work embraces revolution as a correlative (perhaps even a consequence) of an allegiance to particular passions and emotional trajectories" (75). Blake is discussed most directly in the chapter, "Inflammatory Reactions," but is mentioned throughout. "A Poison Tree" and the angry tone in Blake's poetry and annotations are discussed.

Volpone, Annalisa. ""From out the Portals of My Brain": William Blake's Partus Mentis and Imaginative Regeneration." Humanities 13.4 (2024): 13 pp. <Blake (2025)>

"The article examines various instances of mental impregnation and parturition in William Blake's works, specifically through Urizen, Los, Enitharmon, and the Nameless Shadowy Female" (2).

Weston, Sarah T. "Matrix, Imprint, Dot: Romantic Data by the Fingertip." Wordsworth Circle 53.3 (2022): 395-421. <Blake (2023)>

"This article unites book history, disability studies, and media studies, examining what blindness and sight meant to the early Romantic poets (from poetic meditations on the subject to actual bodily struggles with vision) alongside emergent systems of writing invented for blind readers, from embossed typographies to braille. Blake's 'infernal method' of relief printing particularly yields fruitful juxtapositions with these book media for the blind" (395-96).

Whissell, Cynthia. "The Emotionality of William Blake's Poems: A Quantitative Comparison of Songs of Innocence with Songs of Experience." Perceptual and Motor Skills 92 (2001): 459-67. <WBHC 2847>

Compares the vocabulary of the two Songs according to a dictionary of affect in which "[e]ach word" "has been rated by several people in terms of its pleasantness, its activation, and its imagery" (461).

Whitson, Roger. "Jerusalem and 'the Jew': Biopolitics between Blake and Spinoza." Romanticism on the Net 40 (Nov. 2005): 23 par. <WBHC 2852>

Using Spinoza to highlight the place of the body in reading, argues that “whatever comments Blake makes about Jewish identity cannot be read outside of the complicated biopolitical contexts emerging from the address [“To the Jews” in Jerusalem]” (abstract).

Williams, Nicholas M. “Blake Dead or Alive.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 63.4 (Mar. 2009): 486-98. <WBHC 2865>

“William Blake’s interests in the living body and its aesthetic analogue, “Living Form,” underlie his attempt at representing motion” (abstract).

Worrall, David. “Enlarged & Numerous Senses’: The Neurobiology of Auras and Visions.” Ed. Degard and Melissa Alley. Aura 2: Exhibition by Contemporary Visionary Artists, Degard and Mellissa Alley. London: Degard, 2021. 86-92. <Blake (2024)>

Argues that Blake’s visions were rooted in his experience of migraine auras and synesthesia. (The online version of the catalogue requires that its pages be flipped through, but there is a print version of the catalogue as well.)

Worrall, David. ““Seen in my visions’: Klüver Form-Constant Visual Hallucinations in William Blake’s Paintings and Illuminated Books.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.4 (spring 2022): 61 pars. <Blake (2023)>

Suggests Blake experienced a type of hallucination that manifests itself in “geometric-patterned phosphenes perceived as self-luminous entoptic hallucinations in the visual field” (par. 14). These patterns included “four form-constant patterns: tunnel, spiral, net or lattice, and cobweb or concentric circles” (par. 14), patterns that Worrall identifies in some of Blake’s works.

Worrall, David. William Blake’s Visions: Art, Hallucination, Synaesthesia. Switzerland: Springer, 2024.²¹⁷ <Blake (2025)>

“This book is an inquiry into whether what Blake called his ‘visions’ can be attributed to recognizable perceptual phenomena. [. . .] Worrall draws on an understanding of neuroscience to examine both Blake’s visual art and writings, and discusses the lack of evidence pointing towards psychosis or pathological ill-health, thus questioning the rumours pertaining to Blake’s insanity” (abstract).

Youngquist, Paul. “Possessing Beauty.” Monstrosities: Bodies and British Romanticism. Minneapolis and London: University of Minnesota Press, 2003.²¹⁸ 57-88.²¹⁹

Discusses Blake’s representations of African bodies and beauty in the engravings for Stedman in light of racist anatomy texts and the aesthetic theories of Reynolds.

²¹⁷ Incorporates a version of Worrall’s ““Seen in my visions’: Klüver Form-Constant Visual Hallucinations in William Blake’s Paintings and Illuminated Books.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.4 (spring 2022), 61 pars, <Blake (2023)>

²¹⁸ Incorporates Youngquist’s “In the face of beauty: Camper, Bell, Reynolds, Blake,” Word & Image 16 (2000), 319-34, <WBHC 2909>.

²¹⁹ The book is not recorded in WBHC.

Antiquarianism and Druids (See also the Gothic, Milton, Jerusalem, Illustrations to Gough, and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Introduction

Heringman, Noah. "Antiquarianism." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 245-53. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Adlard, John. "The Annandale Druids: A Blake Crux." Notes and Queries 14.1 (1967): 19-20. <BB#784>

Suggests sources that align the druids with Annandale valley or, at least, the neighboring Nithsdale valley.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Triumph of Owen': William Owen Pughe and Blake's Ancient Britons." National Library of Wales Journal 24 (1985): 248-61.

Details about the painting, The Ancient Britons, Pughe, and his commissioning of the painting.

Butler, Marilyn. "Blake." Mapping Mythologies: Countercurrents in Eighteenth-Century British Poetry and Cultural History. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2015. 162-88. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Positions Blake in an English tradition of myth making.

Brylowe, Thora. "Antiquity by Design: Mediating the Portland Vase." Romantic Antiquarianism. Ed. Noah Heringman and Crystal B. Lake. Romantic Praxis Volume. 2014.

"The Portland Vase serves as a useful example of Romantic-era management of antiquity as both economic and cultural capital, and it points to a multifaceted mediation of ancient artifacts that crosses and complicates the categories of art and craft" (par. 1).

Blake, Darwin, Wedgwood, and William Hamilton are discussed.

Brylowe, Thora. "Of Gothic Architects and Grecian Rods: William Blake, Antiquarianism and the History of Art." Romanticism 18.1 (April 2012): 89-104. <WBHC 1806>

Considers Blake's relationship to "competing strains of antiquarianism" (89).

Brylowe, Thora. Romantic Art in Practice: Cultural Work and the Sister Arts, 1760–1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

An important study of the Sister Arts in the Romantic era. It includes discussions of Blake and Antiquarianism, the Portland Vase (including Blake's engravings), the Hunts, John Landseer, and the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.

Cantor, Paul A. "Blake and the Archeology of Eden." A Walk in the Garden: Biblical, Iconographical and Literary Images of Eden. Ed. Paul Morris and Deborah Sawyer. Sheffield, UK: Sheffield Academic Press, 1992. 229-44. <WBHC 1824>

“‘The theories of mythology Blake inherited [from Jacob Bryant and the speculative mythologists] made Eden come alive for him’ (240)” (WBHC 1824).

Churton, Tobias. "Antiquarianism: Stuckley and Blake" and "Blake and the Original Religion." The Lost Pillars of Enoch: When Science and Religion Were One. Rochester, VT: Inner Traditions, 2021. 244-74. <Blake (2022)>

Considers Blake in the context of British Antiquarianism.

Fisher, Peter F. "Blake and the Druids." Journal of English and Germanic Philology 58.4 (1959): 589-612. <BB #1068>

A useful sketch of Blake's ideas regarding druids in relationship to Edward Williams and Edward Davies, and an exploration of Blake's druid imagery in A Descriptive Catalogue, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem.

Heringman, Noah. "Primitive Arts and Sciences and the Body of Knowledge in Blake's Epics." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 30-53. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

"By extending the myth of the Fall to bodies of knowledge, Blake enters a field of competition that encompasses speculative domains ranging from mythography to Naturphilosophie as well as empirical histories of custom and manner and of nature" (31).

Heringman, Noah, Crystal B. Lake, and Katharina Boehm, ed. Vetusta Monuments: Ancient Monuments, a Digital Edition. 2017–22 (last update 18 June 2022). <Blake (2023)>

Blake's contributions (vol. 2, nos. 29-35) were executed while he was an apprentice to Basire, and they are signed by Basire. Blake's preliminary drawings can be found at the Blake Archive, under "Pen and Ink Drawings \(Composed 1774-c. 1825\)" and "Water Color Drawings \(Composed 1775-c. 1790\)." Bernard Nurse authored the commentary for the Blake set.

Hungerford, Edward B. "Blake's Albion." The Shores of Darkness. New York: Columbia University Press, 1941. Cleveland and New York: Meridian Books, 1963. 35-62. <BB #1909>

Considers the figure of Albion in different antiquarian traditions.

Johnston, Arthur. "William Blake and 'The Ancient Britons.'" Cylchgrawn Llyfrgell Genedlaethol Cymru: The National Library of Wales Journal 22 (1982): 304-20. <BBS 528>

Provides a historical account of the Welsh Triads, including the translation (c. 1800 and 1807) by Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg) that Blake likely used and suggests Blake's source of Williams's translation was William Owen, whose life and interests are detailed, including his connections to Joanna Southcott.

Lindsay, David W., and M.A.L. Locherbie-Cameron. "'Malden' in Blake's Jerusalem.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.4 (spring 1989): 136-39. <BBS 404>

Explores the "connections between Malden and druidism" (136), suggesting the importance of Philip Morant's The History of the Antiquities of Colchester (1748).

McQuail, Josephine A. "Blake and the Antiquarians: The Manuscript of The Four Zoas and the 'Monumental Folios' of the Dilettanti and the Antiquarians." William Blake's Manuscripts:

Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 149-77. <Blake (2025)>

“Antiquarian influences on Blake from the neoclassical underpinnings of the classical revival of the eighteenth century to more esoteric and suppressed aspects of the rites of pagan worship documented by the Society of Antiquaries and the Society of Dilettanti illuminate aspects of Blake’s most voluminous, but unpublished poem in manuscript, Vala, or The Four Zoas” (abstract).

Mee, Jon. Dangerous Enthusiasm: William Blake and the Culture of Radicalism in the 1790s. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1992. <BBS 571, WBHC 2392-94>

Focused on Blake’s early illuminated books, a key study of Blake’s relationship to religious enthusiasts of the era who shared his suspicion of Enlightenment-grounded radicalism. The study recasts Blake’s relationship to millenarianism and to the polite circle of Joseph Johnson. There is also an important chapter on Norse mythology, druids, and British Antiquities, with discussions of Ossian. Mee was the first to associate Blake with Claude Levi Strauss’s notion of the bricoleur.

Miller, Eric. “‘Druid Rocks’: Restoration, Originality, Nature and Authority in John Dryden, Titia Brongersma and William Blake’s Visions of Megalithic Monuments.” Lumen: Selected Proceedings from the Canadian Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies/Travaux choisis de la Société canadienne d’étude du dix-huitième siècle 36 (2017): 143-59. <Blake (2018)>

Compares Dryden’s and Blake’s poetic uses of Stonehenge and their desire to produce national monuments that would restore the nation.

Owen, A.L. “All Things Begin and End in Albion’s Ancient Druid Rocky Shore.” The Famous Druids. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1962. 224-36. <BB #2337>

The closing chapter of a survey of Early Modern British ideas of druids, highlighting Milton and Jerusalem.

Ott, Judith. “Iris & Morpheus: Investigating Visual Sources for Jerusalem 14.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 149-54. <BBS 396>

Details the sources and analogues for the illustration of pl. 14 of Jerusalem, including illustrations of Iris, Blake’s painting The Death of a Virgin (Butlin 512) (which also depicts a rainbow over a supine figure), and the engraving Edmund Earl of Lancaster in Sepulchral Monuments.

Saurat, Denis. “Blake et les Celomanes.” Modern Philology 23.2 (1925): 175-88. In French. <BB #2656>

“Demonstrates that Blake’s ideas about the Druids were commonplace among his contemporaries” (BB #2656).

Smiles, Sam. “Art and Antiquity in the Long Nineteenth Century.” Visions of Antiquity: The Society of Antiquaries of London, 1707-2007. Ed. Susan Pearce. London: Society of Antiquaries of London, 2007.

On antiquarian drawing, with references to Gough and Blake's drawings as an apprentice for the Society of Antiquaries.

Suzuki, Masashi. "‘Gensoteki na Mokuso’: Blake no Kojibutsu Aiko Shugiteki Sozoryoku [‘Visionary contemplations’: Blake’s Antiquarian Imagination].” Eibungaku Kenkyu Shibu Togo Go [Studies in English Literature. Regional Branches Combined Issue] 14 (2022): 139-47. 2 plates by Blake. In Japanese, with English synopsis. <Blake (2023)>

“The present paper aims to show how Blakean antiquarianism is revealed in The Ancient Britons by reading through Blake’s long and esoteric description of the work” (English synoposis).

Taylor, Dena. “A Note on William Blake and the Druids of Primrose Hill.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 104-05. <BBS 395>

Referencing Blake’s comments to Henry Crabb Robinson that he saw the spiritual sun on Primrose Hill, calls attention to “a ritual called the Gorsedd of Bards”, which was established by “Edward Williams (Iolo Morganwg, 1747-1826),” and joined in by “Blake’s friend William Owen” and was “performed” “on Primrose Hill at the Autumn Equinox of 1792” (104).

Taylor, Dena Bain. “The Visual Context of ‘Joseph of Arimathea Among the Rocks.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.2 (fall 1986): 47-48. <BBS 399>

Suggests that Blake’s design drew on the depiction of “a Druid as a bearded sage” in Aylett Sammes’s Britannia Antiqua Restaurata (London, 1676), which was copied by “Henry Rowlands in 1723 in his Mona Antiqua Restaurata” and “altered slightly” for William Stukeley’s Stonehenge, A Temple restored to the British Druids (1740) (47).

Todd, Ruthven. “William Blake and the Eighteenth-Century Mythologists.” Tracks in the Snow. London: Gray Walls Press, 1946. New York, 1947. 29-60. <BB #2856>

“Informative study of Blake’s indebtedness to currents of thought among contemporary antiquarians” (BB #2856).

Whittaker, Jason. “Blake and the Native Tradition.” The Journal of Blake Society at St. James 2 (1996): 48-56. <WBHC 2222-23>

Examines Albion and “his sons, the bards and the druids, for Blake’s religious vision (48)” (WBHC 2223).

Whittaker, Jason. “The Matter of Britain: Blake, Milton and the Ancient Britons.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 186-200. <WBHC 1866-69>

On Milton’s History of Britain as a source for Jerusalem.

Whittaker, Jason. William Blake and the Myths of Britain. Basingstoke and London: Macmillan Press, 1999. <WBHC 2856-57>

A study of Blake’s mythologizing of Britain, especially as it is related to antiquarianism, Druids, and Albion.

Worrall, David. “Blake's Jerusalem and the Visionary History of Britain.” Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (spring 1977): 189-216. <BBS 649>

On Jerusalem's use of British myth and history.

Useful Contextual Studies

Bertram, Jerome. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments: Being a Catalogue of Material Relating to Sepulchral Monuments in the Gough Manuscripts of the Bodleian Library. Oxford: J. Bertram, 2004. <WBHC 810>

Coltman, Vicci. Fabricating the Antique: Neoclassicalism in Britain, 1760-1800. Chicago: Chicago University Press, 2006.

“Fabricating the Antique deals [. . .] with the packaging and repackaging of the material culture of the ancients; how ancient culture came to be isolated and dislocated from its original contexts in Italy for the purposes of possession and exhibition by a British audience” (15).

Evans, Joan. A History of The Society of Antiquaries. Oxford: Society of Antiquaries, 1956. Published rebound, London: Thames & Hudson, 1977.

Provides much information about the Society in the 1770s when Blake was apprenticed to James Basire.

Heringman, Noah, and Crystal B. Lake, ed. Modern Philology 120.1 (Aug. 2022). Special Issue: “Ancient Objects and New Media.” <Blake (2023)>

A collection of essays on Antiquarianism.

Appreciations and Applications of Blake (See also Reception Studies)

Aberbach, David. "William Blake and the Struggle for Social Justice." Literature and Poverty: From the Hebrew Bible to the Second World War. Abingdon: Routledge, 2019. 94-99. <Blake (2020)>

On Blake's fight for social justice.

Adams, Hazard. "The Dizziness of Freedom; Or, Why I Read William Blake." College English 48.5 (1986): 431–43.²²⁰

I shall [...] try to show through Blake what I think my pedagogical enterprise is finally all about" (431).

Albani, Louisa. In Search of Paradise: William Blake at Old Wyldes, Hampstead. London: Night Bird Press, 2023.²²¹ <Blake (2024)>

Albani, Louisa Amelia, with contributions by Simon Cole. William Blake's Mystic Map of London. London: Night Bird Press, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

Visionary maps of London based on Blake's life.

Curbelo, Jesús David. "William Blake: apuntes para tratar de visionar la voz del bardo." Agulha 67 (2009): 30 pars. 26 pp. In Spanish. <Blake (2023)>

Describes the strength and originality of Blake's ideas and discourse, while discussing his role as one in a group of "visionaries, individualists and revolutionaries thanks to whom thought has moved against all kinds of authoritarianism and orthodoxy."

Dean, Remy. "The Wisdom of William Blake." Medium.com (7 Sept. 2019): 11 pars. <Blake (2020)>

"Some people would look to The Bible, The Koran, or similar religious texts at those times when they need to contemplate serious matters ... for me William Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience (1794) is that book" (par. 1).

Dent, Shirley. "'Esoteric Blakists' and the 'Weak Brethren': How Blake Lovers Kept the Popular Out." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 57-68. <WBHC 2862-63>

"[T]his sense of special readers for a special poet [i.e., Blake] takes hold in the major mid-nineteenth-century revival of Blake [...] and ironically set in train a pop culture misconception of Blake as a poet best suited to sub- and countercultures, a hallmark of the esoteric and obscure" (57).

"Draw the Line at Sambo's." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.1 (summer 1983): 39.

Reproduces a flier using America pl. 12 that was made by protesting workers at the restaurant with the racist name that.

²²⁰ Rpt. in Adams's Antithetical Essays in Literary Criticism and Liberal Education (1990), 3-17, <BBS 330, WBHC 1489>.

²²¹ See Albani and David Mullin's article on the book in Vala 4 (2024), 34-36.

Eisenman, Stephen F. “Black Ops in Art and History.” Visual History 3 (2017): 25-56. <Blake (2018)>

Examines the theatricality of contemporary paramilitary operations—black ops—in terms of Romantic-era depictions of “Inquisition, imprisonment and torture” (50) by artists and writers such as Blake, Goya, John Hunter, and George Romney.

Finch, G. J. “Blake and Civilization.” English: The Journal of the English Association 40.168 (1991): 193-203. <WBHC 2018>

“‘Blake is unique in the security of his belief that civilization lies within the self, not outside it’ (193)” (WBHC 2018).

Frye, Northrop. “The Road of Excess.” Myth and Symbol: Critical Approaches and Applications by Northrop Frye, L.C. Knights, and Others. Ed. Bernice Slote. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1963. 3-20.²²² <BB #1650>

A new reflection on Blake after Frye reread his Fearful Symmetry for the first time in fifteen years.

Gunderman, Richard B. “The Heart of Pediatric Radiology.” Pediatric Radiology 49.13 (Dec. 2019): 1707-09. <Blake (2020)>

On Blake as a model for patient care: “A person who knew much less about medicine but far more about the human heart was the poet William Blake, whose masterpieces ‘Songs of Innocence’ (1789) and ‘Songs of Experience’ (1794) each contain a poem titled ‘The Chimney Sweeper.’ . . . Most significantly, he gives the chimney sweeps proper names—Tom Dacre, Dick, Joe, Ned and Jack. . . . Blake implicates us in justifying Tom’s suffering, both to him and especially to ourselves. . . . Only if we know the plight of Tom, Dick, Joe, Ned and Jack can we call others to witness it, and only insofar as we ourselves are moved to action can we call others to do the same.”

Higgs, John. William Blake Now: Why He Matters More Than Ever. London: Widenfield and Nicolson, 2019. <Blake (2020, 2021)>

A passionate argument for Blake’s contemporary relevance.

Higgs, John. William Blake Vs. The World. London: Weidenfeld and Nicholson, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023, 2024)>

A study of Blake’s ideas, aimed at a popular audience.

Hyman, Timoth. “A Blake for Today.” Artscribe 11 (1978): 22-27. <BBS 518>

²²² Rpt. in Frye’s The Stubborn Structure: Essays in Criticism and Society (1970, 1974, 1980), 166-74; in Romanticism and Consciousness: Essays in Criticism and Society, ed. Harold Bloom (1970), 119-32; in Contexts of Canadian Criticism, ed. Eli Mandel (Toronto and Buffalo: University of Toronto Press, 1971); in Modern Literary Criticism 1900-1970, ed. Lawrence I Lipking and A. Walton Litz (New York: Atheneum, 1972); in Le structure inflexible de la obra literaria: Ensayos sobre crítica y sociedad, trans. Raphael Derbán Sánchez (1973); in L’ostinato struttura á saggi su critica e società, trans. Leonardo Terzo and Anna Paschetto (1975) in Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angela Esterhammer (2005), <WBHC 2040-43>.

“Blake has through this century . . . pushed us toward a different conception of the artist and his function’ (23)” (BBS 518).

Kovel, Joel. “Dark Satanic Mills: William Blake and the Critique of War.” Capitalism Nature Socialism 21.2 (June 2010): 4-19. <WBHC 2291-92>

On Blake and the Military Industrial Complex.

Leavis, F.R. “Introductory: ‘Life’ is a Necessary Word.” Nor Shall My Sword: Discourses on Pluralism, Compassion and Social Hope. London, 1972. 11-37. <BB #A2106>

“Blake (pp. 11-27) and D.H. Lawrence as inspiration for ‘essential human creativity’ (19)” (BB #A2106).

Mayberry, Tommy. “Hélyos and Celèn [A Poison Tree]*.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 161-76. <WBHC 1803-04>

A creative response to “A Poison Tree,” with an analysis of how the creative work engages with issues raised by scholarship on the poem or Blake in general.

Miłosz, Czesław. Ziemia Ulro [The Land of Ulro]. Paris, 1977. Paris, 1980. Trans. Louis Iribarne. New York: Farrar, Straus, Giroux, 1984. Trans. Louis Iribarne. New York: Farrar, Straus, Giroux, 1985. <BBS 575, WBHC 2408>

An autobiography with reflections on Blake: “Blake restored me to my earlier rapture, a, perhaps to my true vocation, that of a lover” (31).

Mitchell, W.J.T. “Blake Now and Then.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 198-205. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Reflects on Blake in his own time and in relationship to our own.

Roob, Alexander. William Blake’s “The Ancient Britons”: Appearances of a Vanished Picture/William Blake’s “The Ancient Britons”: Erscheinungen eines verschollenen Bildes. Hamburg: Textem Verlag, 2022. In English and German. <Blake (2023, 2025)>

Contemporary German followers of Mesmer document their efforts to use group hypnosis to recreate Blake’s lost painting in various media.

Sanzo, Eileen Barbara. “William Blake and the Technological Age.” Thought 46.4 (1971): 577-91. <BB #A2643>

“Through his creation of an industrial mythology, [Blake] speaks for the modern industrial age. Consequently, his work becomes increasingly significant in our technological world and should be given more attention” (578). Focuses on the later epics and, especially, The Four Zoas.

Simpson, Philippa. “Blake and Porn.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 211-18. <WBHC 1803-04>

“There has, I believe, been an implicit desire in Blake scholarship to neutralize the pornographic in Blake’s works” (217).

Simpson, Philippa. “Mental Joy & Mental Health / And Mental Friends & Mental Wealth’: Blake and Art Therapy.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 132-45. <WBHC 1871-73>

Examines Blake’s place in the theory, practice, and literature of art therapy, using as her case study the “William Blake House,” a Northamptonshire “residential care institution [...] founded on the principles of Rudolf Steiner” (134).

Sluyter, Dean. “Eternity’s Sunrise: William Blake.” The Dharma Bum’s Guide to Western Literature: Finding Nirvana in the Classics. Novato, CA: New World Library, 2022. 7-10. <Blake (2023)>

The chapter is a popular celebration of Blake’s spiritual and visionary awakening.

Sklar, Susanne. “How Beauty Will Save the World: William Blake’s Prophetic Vision.” Spiritus: A Journal of Christian Spirituality 7 (2007): 30-39. <WBHC 2682>

“The prophetic poetry of William Blake (especially his Jerusalem) can help us see how this world-saving beauty works” (30).

Solomon, Andrew. “Mental Fight.” Blake Journal 10 (2006): 48-64. <WBHC 1757>

How Blake can facilitate “inner peace” (53).

Stephen, Addie. “How to Nearly Wreck Your Life Living Blake.” Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 62-61-69. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Sketches Blake’s influence on her erotic life.

Thompson, E.P. “Anti-Hegemony: The Legacy of William Blake.” New Left Review 201 (1993): 26-33. <WBHC 2760>

Tweedy, Roderick. The God of the Left Hemisphere: Blake, Bolte Taylor, and the Myth of Creation. London: Karnac, 2012. <WBHC 2786-87>

Uses Blake to critique an overly rational and mechanistic culture.

Vala: The Journal of the Blake Society. Ed. Sibylle Erle.

Since 2020, the annual publication of the London Blake Society. It contains essays, poetry, and art aimed at a popular audience. Each issue has a theme.

Vultee, Denise M., Todd H. Chiles, and Sara R.S.T.A. Elias. “Entrepreneurial Imagination: A Blakean Perspective.” World Scientific Encyclopedia of Business Sustainability, Ethics and Entrepreneurship. Vol. 3, Spirituality, Entrepreneurship and Social Change. Ed. Kathryn Pavlovich and Gideon Markman. Singapore: World Scientific, 2022. 25-55. <Blake (2022)>

Uses Blake as a model for creative entrepreneurship.

Whitehead, Fred. “William Blake and the Radical Tradition.” Weapons of Criticism: Marxism in America and the Literary Tradition. Ed. Norman Rudich. Palo Alto: Ramparts Press, 1976. 191-214.

A political reading, with references to twentieth-century labor movements.

Wilson, Eric G. My Business Is to Create: Blake's Infinite Writing. Iowa City: University of Iowa Press, 2011. <WBHC 2871>

On Blake, creating, and creative writing.

Art (Including Introductions; General Studies; Aesthetic Theory; Materials, Media, and Methods; and Blake and Artists)

Introductions

Alexander, David. "Print Makers and Print Sellers in England, 1770-1830." The Painted Word: British History Painting, 1750-1830. Ed. Peter Canon-Brookes. Woodbridge, Suffolk, and Rochester, NY: Boydell Press, 1991. 23-28. <WBHC 2929>

An accessible overview of engravers and the print market from the 1760s to the early nineteenth-century collapse of the Shakespeare Gallery. Includes references to William Wollett, William Wynne Ryland, Jonathan Spilsbury, Francesco Bartolozzi, Caroline Watson, and Thomas Macklin.

Bindman, David. "Blake as Painter." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 85-109. <WBHC 1969-72>

An overview of Blake's career as a painter.

Bindman, David. "William Blake: Prophet and History Painter." The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come. Ed. Frances Carey. Toronto and Buffalo: University of Toronto Press, 1999. 219-23. <WBHC 1283>

The section on Blake appears in a wider chapter by Bindman titled, "The English Apocalypse," which provides a useful context for Blake's apocalyptic paintings. The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come is the catalogue for exhibition held at the British Museum Department of Prints and Drawings from 17 Dec. 1999 to 24 Apr. 2000.

Blunt, Anthony. The Art of William Blake. New York: Columbia University Press, 1959. Rpt. 1969. <BB #1235, WBHC 1771-72>

Although dated in its understanding of Blake's artistic techniques and technologies, a still useful study of Blake as an artist and his relationship to the world of eighteenth-century art.

Crosby, Mark. "Engraving." William Blake in Context. Ed. Susan Haggerty. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 23-34. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Essick, Robert N. William Blake's Relief Inventions. Los Angeles: The Press of the Pegacycle Lady, 1978. <BBS 466, WBHC 2003>

A useful primer in preparation for Essick's William Blake Printmaker and Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book.

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Blake and British Art: The Gifts of Grace and Terror." Images of Romanticism: Verbal and Visual Affinities. Ed. Karl Kroeber and William Ealling. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1978. 61-80. <BBS 498>

A good overview of Blake in relationship to the art of Barry, Fuseli, Romney, Flaxman, Stothard, Mortimer, and Banks.

Herrmann, Luke. Nineteenth Century British Painting. London: DLM (Giles de la Mare Publishers Limited), 2000. <WBHC 2144>

A very useful discussion of British painting in Blake's era. In addition to the chapter, "William Blake (1757-1827) and Samuel Palmer (1805-81)" (66-83), there are also chapters on many members of Blake's circle, including Henry Fuseli, Thomas Lawrence, and John Varley.

Irwin, David. "William Blake and His Circle." English Neoclassical Art. London: Faber and Faber, 1966. 81-86. <BB #1920, WBHC 2196>

On Blake's artistic circle (particularly Fuseli and Romney), with subsequent references to Blake's view of the Venetian and Florentine art and his relationship to Flaxman.

Jones, John H. "Blake's Production Methods." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 25-41. <WBHC 2867-68>

A good preliminary overview of engraving in the eighteenth century and of Blake's own practices in the illuminated books and in the large color prints.

Lukacher, Brian. "Visionary History Painting: Blake and His Contemporaries." Nineteenth Century Art: A Critical History. Ed. Stephen F. Eisenman. London: Thames & Hudson, 1994. 2nd ed. 2004. 3rd ed. 2007. 102-18. <WBHC 2351>

A good overview, with references to James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and the sublime.

Myrone, Martin. The Blake Book. London: Tate Publications, 2007. <WBHC 2446>

A solid introduction to Blake and his career as a visual artist. A very good starting point.

Todd, Ruthven. William Blake the Artist. London: Studio Vista, 1971. <BB #2857, WBHC 2773>

Though dated, a good biographical overview of Blake's work as an artist, arranged by year. There are numerous black and white illustrations.

Vaughan, William. William Blake. London: Tate Gallery Publishing Ltd., 1999. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1999. Rpt. 2000. London: Tate Publishing, 2013. <WBHC 2800>

"A standard summary of Blake's art" (WBHC 2800).

Visconti, Joseph. "Illuminated Printing." The William Blake Archive. Apr. 2019.

A well-illustrated introduction to Blake's method of illuminated printing. It is based on Visconti's "Illuminated Printing" in The Cambridge Companion to Blake, ed. Morris Eaves. The essay is a good starting point before tackling Essick's William Blake Printmaker and Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book.

General Studies (See also A Descriptive Catalogue and "Public Address")

Baker, C.H. Collins. "The Sources of Blake's Pictorial Expression." The Huntington Library Quarterly 4.3 (1941): 359-67. <BB #1116>

Traces sources for Blake's "Rest on the Flight into Egypt" in Alexander Brown's Ars pictoria (1675); for "Death of the Wicked Man" in Caracci's "Three Maries"; for Job Sacrifices in Flaxman's "Giant on Mount Ida"; and for "Elohim Creating Adam" in Dalton's "The Frieze on the Temple of the Winds."

Beer, John. "Influence and Independence in Blake." Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 164-95. <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

Considers the difficulties of pinpointing influences on Blake, but still lays out several tenable sources for many different works, both visual and poetic.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Careless Archers." Notes and Queries 64.1 (2017): 52-57. <Blake (2018)>

On Blake's depictions of archers.

Bindman, David. Blake as an Artist. Oxford: Phaidon, 1977. <BBS 373, WBHC 1631-32>

A still important study of Blake's work as an artist that, along with Myrone's Blake Book, would be a good starting point.

Blunt, Anthony. The Art of William Blake. New York: Columbia University Press, 1959. Rpt. 1969. <BB #1235, WBHC 1771-72>.

Although dated in its understanding of Blake's artistic techniques and technologies, a still useful study of Blake as an artist and his relationship to the world of eighteenth-century art.

Blunt, Anthony. "Blake's Pictorial Imagination." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 6 (1943): 190-212. <BB #1240>

An early account of Blake's art, positioning Blake among traditions of "Ancient art," "Medieval art," "Renaissance and Mannerist art," and "Oriental and primitive art" (196).

Carretta, Vincent. "Monarchy is the Popery of Government." George III and the Satirists from Hogarth to Byron. Athens: University of Georgia Press, 1990. 154-241. <BBS 433>

Considers Blake's use of visual political satire of George III, especially in America and Europe. Important for Blake's relationship to radical circles and their iconography.

Castanedo, Fernando. "'O what a scene is here': Visual References in Blake's An Island in the Moon." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 257-78. <Blake (2025)>

Suggests that in Island Blake alludes "to several works of art, mostly by using very short, at times almost epigrammatic, parodical ekphrases" (abstract).

Crosby, Mark. "A Minute Skirmish: Blake, Hayley, and the Art of Miniature Painting." Blake and Conflict. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 164-84. <WBHC 2113-15>

Definitively considers Blake's brief career as miniaturist in terms of his technique, including the use of stipple; his relationship with William Hayley; and other miniaturists Blake or Hayley knew.

Dörrbecker, D.W. "Innovative Reproduction: Painters and Engravers at the Royal Academy of Arts." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 125-46. <WBHC 1869-71>

An important consideration of the denigration of engravers as copyists by the Royal Academy and their exclusion from the body until 1928. Highlights the views of Joshua Reynolds, Robert Strange, and John Landseer in particular.

Doskow, Mina. “The Shape of Limitation: A Visual Pattern in the Illuminated Work of William Blake.” Colby Library Quarterly 17.3 (1981): 121-40. <BBS 456>

On the visual pattern of double arches, often representing the two tablets of the Ten Commandments. Touches on many of the illuminated books, but focuses primarily on Urizen.

Eaves, Morris. “Blake and the Artistic Machine: An Essay in Decorum and Technology.” PMLA 92.5 (1977): 903-27.²²³ <BBS 458>

“A stimulating account of the technical means of multiplying designs and their implications for the artist” (BBS 458).

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

See Essick’s response, “Blake and the Production of Meaning.”

Eaves, Morris. “Inquiry into the Real and Imaginary Obstructions to the Acquisition of the Arts in England: The Comedy of the English School of Painting.” Huntington Library Quarterly 52.1 (1989): 125-38.²²⁴ <BSS 517-18, WBHC 2175-76>

Sketches the historical contexts of Blake’s artistic discourses, emphasizing their importance over the literary ones more familiar to English professors.

Eaves, Morris. “National Arts and Disruptive Technologies in Blake’s Prospectus of 1793.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 119-35. <WBHC 1866-69>

Compares Blake’s 1793 Prospectus with the pronouncements of Joshua Reynolds on the foundation of the Royal Academy and John Boydell on the Shakespeare project.

Eaves, Eaves, Morris. William Blake’s Theory of Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. <BBS 459, WBHC 1974-75>

An influential articulation of Blake’s theory of art in relationship to Neoclassicism and Romanticism, with a consideration of Blake’s notion of audience.

²²³ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 175-209, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

²²⁴ Eaves’s argument is developed in his Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake (1992), <WBHC 1972-74>.

Eaves, Morris. "What is the 'History of Publishing'?" Publishing History 2 (1977): 57-77. <WBHC 2337>

A review of Lister's Infernal Methods: A Study of William Blake's Art Techniques (1975) that challenges his account on several fronts.

Erle, Sibylle. "Blake, Colour and the Truchsessian Gallery: Modelling the Mind and Liberating the Observer." Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net 52 (Nov. 2008): 17 pars. <WBHC 1995>

"This article explores the significance of Blake's delayed response to the viewing experience of the Truchsessian Gallery" (abstract).

Essick, Robert N. "A Question of Attribution: The 'Felpham Rummer' and William Blake's Graphic Inventions." Journal of Glass Studies 31 (1989): 90-100. <BBS 464>

Suggests, ultimately, that the "Felpham Rummer," a glass goblet with the inscriptions, "THOU HOLDER OF IMMORAL DRINK / I GIVE THEE PURPOSE NOW I THINK" and "BLAKE IN ANGUISH FELPHAM 1803" (90), was by Blake.

Essick, Robert N., ed. The Visionary Hand: Essays for the Study of William Blake's Art and Aesthetics. Los Angeles: Hennessey and Ingalls, 1973. <BB #A1583, WBHC 1998>

An important collection of mostly previously printed essays on Blake's methods as an artist. The first section contains historical texts with still useful headnotes by Essick, though Todd's account of illuminated printing has displaced by Essick's own William Blake Printmaker (1980) and Joseph Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book (1993).

Essick, Robert N. "Visual/Verbal Relationships in Book Illustration." British Art 1740-1820: Essays in Honor of Robert R. Wark. Ed. Guillard Southerland. San Marino: Huntington Library, 1992. 169-204. <WBHC 1998-99>

Positions Blake as working within, rather than against, the conventions of his time: "Blake's development of illustrative techniques is an exploitation of conventions he shared with contemporaries more than a revolt against them" (185).

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. <BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

Essick, Robert N., and Donald Pearce, ed. Blake in His Time. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Important collection of essays that highlights both Blake's designs and his relationship to his time.

Gage, John. “An Early Exhibition and the Politics of British Printmaking.” Print Quarterly 6.2 (1989): 123-39.²²⁵

A useful article in sketching out the relationship of engravers to the Royal Academy, Landseer’s efforts to gain entry to the RA, the formation of the Chalcographic Society and its activities, arguments over stipple and line engraving, and the responses of William Sharp and Blake.

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks (“Hidden Dreams,” 31-67) and John Flaxman (“Poetic Departures,” 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Hamlyn, Robin. “Blake’s Fate at the Tate.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.4 (spring 1990): 211-13. <BBS 406>

An account of Blake’s exhibition at the Tate and, particularly, “the Blake Rooms,” and how the space and exhibition practices are changing to better preserve Blake’s works.

Heppner, Christopher. Reading Blake’s Designs. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1995.²²⁶ <WBHC 2142-43>

An important study that discusses how to read Blake’s designs in general and examines specifically “the Twelve Large Colour Prints, the Night Thoughts designs, ‘Blake’s Bible’ watercolours, and the work called ‘The Sea of Time and Space’ or the Arlington Court Picture” (WBHC 2142).

Heppner, Christopher. “Bathsheba Revisited.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.3 (winter 2002-03): 76-91. <WBHC 1692>

Reconsiders his reading of the painting in Reading Blake’s Designs and “revisit[s] the complex interactions between already existing narratives and Blake’s own thoughts and mythology” (76).

Haywood, Ian, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon, ed. Romanticism and Illustration. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

²²⁵ Not recorded in BBS.

²²⁶ Incorporates Heppner’s “Reading Blake’s Designs: Pity and Hecate,” Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 84.3 (1981), 337-61, <BBS 428>; “Blake as Humpty-Dumpty: The Verbal Specification of Visual Meaning,” Word and Visual Imagination, ed. K.J. Höltgen, P.M. Daly, and W. Lottes (1988); “Blake’s ‘The New Jerusalem Descending’: A Drawing \(Butlin #92\) Identified,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (1986), 4-11, <BBS 399, WBHC 1639>; “The Good \(In Spite of What You May Have Heard\) Samaritan,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.2 (1991), 64-69, <BBS 408, WBHC 1641>; and “The Chamber of Prophecy: Blake’s ‘A Vision’ \(Butlin #756\) Interpreted,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.3 (1991-92), 127-31, <BBS 408, WBHC 1641>.

An important recent collection of Romantic illustration, with two essays on Blake specifically and many others on figures closely associated with Blake.

Howard, Seymour. "William Blake: The Antique, Nudity, and Nakedness: A Study in Idealism and Regression." Artibus et historiae: rivista internazionale di arti visive e cinema 6 (1982): 117-49. <BBS 516>

A useful essay that considers Blake's use of the nude, positioning him within late eighteenth-century aesthetics (with references to Fuseli and Reynolds) and explicating his changing ideas of nakedness and his presentations of nudes.

Ibata, Hélène. ""Blotting and Blurring Demons": The Paradoxical Place of Colour Printing in Blake's Theory of Art." XVII-XVIII: Revue de la Société d'études anglo-américaines des XVII^e et XVIII^e siècles 75 (2018): 42 pars. <Blake (2020)>

"Blake's colour-printed works of the years 1794 and 1795 reveal an appreciation of colour and textural effects that would not readily be associated with a linearist approach. While this apparent tension between the artist's writings and some of his most significant productions has at times been accounted for in terms of a perceptual evolution, this essay argues for a continuity in Blake's conception" (abstract).

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke's "Philosophical Enquiry" to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

On Burke's notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled "Against and beyond Burke: Blake's 'sublime Labours'" (235-66).

Lister, Raymond. Infernal Methods: A Study of William Blake's Art Techniques. London: G. Bell & Sons Ltd., 1975. <BBS 552-53, WBHC 2337>

An account of Blake's artistic methods across many media, which elicited a lengthy review by Eaves that challenged Lister on many fronts.

Mazzeo, Tilar J. "William Blake and the Decorative Arts." The Regency Revisited. Ed. Tim Fulford and Michael E. Sinatra. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2016. 63-80. <WBHC 2384>

With references to Jane Austen, Thomas Phillips's portrait, and George Cumberland's Thoughts on Outline, asserts Blake's place among the fashionable, stressing his interest "at particular moments of his career in both portrait miniature and in interior design, especially interior design inflected by themes" and arguing "that this constellation of 'commercial' investments shaped Jerusalem, in particular, in significant ways" (64).

McCue, Maureen, and Sophie Thomas, ed. The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. <Blake (2024)>

A collection of essays that examines British Romanticism and the visual arts, frequently touching on Blake, members of his circle, or practices associated with them.

Mellor, Anne. Blake's Human Form Divine. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1974. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2022. UC Press's Voices Revived. <BB #A2211, WBHC 2397-98, Blake (2023)>

A classic study that largely considers Blake's poetry from Songs of Innocence to Jerusalem but also devotes two chapters to Blake's art.

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Chaoethetics: Blake's Sense of Form." Huntington Library Quarterly 58:3-4 (1995) 441-58.²²⁷ <WBHC 2176-77>

"My aim [. . .] is not to decide, once and for all, whether Blake was mad or not, or whether his art makes sense or doesn't, but just the opposite: I want to make it harder to decide these questions, and to undermine the confidence that allows us to draw firm boundaries between form and chaos, sanity and madness, the 'hygienic' and the 'excremental,' or to see the one as containing or controlling the other" (448). Reads the Newton color print.

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Style as Epistemology: Blake and the Movement toward Abstraction in Romantic Art." Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (spring 1977): 145-64. <BBS 649>

"It is this view of painting as an exploration of perception, I think, that provides our firmest basis for seeing Blake in relation to the art of his time" (163).

Myrone, Martin. "Conclusion: Genius, Madness and the Fate of Heroic Art: Blake and Fuseli in the Nineteenth Century." Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006. 305-14, 367-69. <WBHC 2446>

Considers Blake and Fuseli and the fate of the "Grand Manner" in art and its arguments regarding masculinity.

Myrone, Martin. "Painting." The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Ed. Jeffrey W. Barbeau. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. 311-30. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

Rather than exploring Blake's accomplishments, Myrone highlights the relative neglect of Blake in art history and ends the essay calling for "recovering some of the lost histories of religious painting" (329).

Myrone, Martin. "William Blake as a Student of the Royal Academy: A Prosopographical Perspective." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.1 (summer 2018): 18 par. + Biographical Dictionary. <Blake (2018)>

Considers Blake's time as a student and includes a very useful "Biographical Dictionary of Students of Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving Who Attended the Royal Academy Schools, 1774–85."

O'Rourke, Stephanie. "Art after Self Evidence: Fuseli, Blake, and Banks." European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 497-513. <Blake (2023)>

"[C]onsiders how models of artistic neoclassicism and scientific experimental procedures shared an investment in the evidentiary authority of an idealized male body" (abstract).

²²⁷ WBHC mistakenly gives the date of the issue as 1996.

Paley, Morton D. "The Fourth Face of Man: Blake and Architecture." Articulate Images: The Sister Arts from Hogarth to Tennyson. Ed. Richard Wendorf. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1983. 184-215. <BBS 598>

Highlights Blake's lifelong concern with architecture.

Paley, Morton D. "The Truchsessian Gallery Revisited." Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (spring 1977): 165-77. <BBS 649>

On what Blake saw at the Truchsessian gallery in Oct. 1803 ("a gallery of fakes" [167]) and how it affected him. Remains the key study of this experience.

Paley, Morton D. "'Wonderful Originals'—Blake and Ancient Sculpture." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 170-97. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers the sources from which Blake would have learned about classical sculpture and his references to it in his works and in his circle.

Parisi, Frank M. "Emblems of Morality: For Children: The Gates of Paradise." Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 70-110. <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

A useful essay that examines the designs "in comparison with traditional and contemporary analogues" (73-74) in poetry (including Young, Harvey, and Blair); visual art (including emblems and designs by Thomas Bewick); and Blake's other works.

Pointon, Marcia R. "William Blake and Milton (1801-1825)." Milton and English Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1970. 135-66. Rpt. Toronto: Toronto University Press, 2019. <BB #2426, Blake (2023)>

A section on Blake's illustrations to Milton in a wider book on visual representations of Milton's works between, chiefly 1688 and 1860. Many references to Blake's precursors and contemporaries, including Fuseli's Milton Gallery.

Pressly, William L. The Artist as Original Genius: Shakespeare's "Fine Frenzy" in Late-Eighteenth-Century British Art. Newark: University of Delaware Press, 2007. <WBHC 2998>

On illustrations of Shakespeare by many members of Blake's artistic circle, with a discussion of Blake's Albion rose in relationship to Chatterton.

Richey, William. "Not Angles but Angels': Blake's Pictorial Defense of English Art." European Romantic Review 7.1 (1996): 49-60. <WBHC 2584>

"Blake's design of 'Non Angeli Sed Angli,' based on James Barry's Inquiry (1775), refutes the idea that 'British artists were incapable of artistic excellence' (49)" (WBHC 2584).

Rose, Edward J. "'Mental Forms Creating': 'Fourfold Vision' and the Poet as Prophet in Blake's Designs and Verse." Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 23.2 (1964): 173-83. <BB #2556>

On the fourfold in Blake's poetry (largely Milton) and the designs (Michael and the Dragon and the Illustrations of the Book of Job), with Rose pointing out the circle within the square pattern Blake often used.

Rosenblum, Robert. Transformations in Late Eighteenth Century Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1967. Second printing with a new preface, 1969. 1974.

An early attempt to position Blake within traditional narratives of art history. Blake and his circle figure most prominently in the last chapter, “Toward the Tabula Rasa.”

Saklofske, Jon. “Conscripting Imagination: The National ‘Duty’ of William Blake’s Art.” Romanticism on the Net 46 (May 2007): 20 pars. <WBHC 2631>

“[E]xplores William Blake’s creative and commercial positioning relative to late-eighteenth-century galleries, exhibition culture and artistic spectacle” (abstract).

Siegel, Jonah. “Blake.” Material Inspirations: The Interests of the Art Object in the Nineteenth Century and After. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2020. 171-80. <Blake (2021)>

Although Blake is addressed directly only in a short section on “the value of reading his response to main lines of art-thought in his period as deeply enmeshed in the institutional and intellectual structures in which they arose” (172), he is referenced throughout Siegel’s “study of the power of evocations of the material in influential reflections on art” (viii).

Siegel, Jonah. “‘United, Completer Knowledge’: Barry, Blake, and the Search for the Artist.” Desire and Excess: The Nineteenth-Century Culture of Art. Princeton and Oxford: Princeton University Press, 2000. 30-89. <WBHC 2675>

On Barry’s and Blake’s engagement with antiquity, with discussions of Joseph of Arimathea and Laocoön.

Townsend, Joyce H., ed. William Blake: The Painter at Work. London: Tate Publishing, 2003. <WBHC 2775-79>²²⁸

An important collection of essays on the more technical features of Blake’s painting, with sections devoted to the watercolors, the large color prints, and the temperas. The book also analyzes Blake’s use of paper, paints and other materials; his practices of framing; the materials he used; and the contexts of his exhibitions.

Trodd, Colin. “William Blake, the Arts and Crafts Movement and the Mythography of Manufacture.” Art versus Industry? New Perspectives on Visual and Industrial Cultures in Nineteenth-Century Britain. Ed. Kate Nichols, Rebecca Wade, and Gabriel Williams. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2018)>

“This essay [...] concentrates on the interpretative schema that allowed commentators to put forward the view that the future belonged to the artist-as-manufacturer; that authentic manufacture was one of the key elements in the aesthetic ideal of society; and that Blake’s art accelerated progress toward this truth” (81). Highlights Ruskin, Gilchrist, and the Rossetti circle.

²²⁸ See the overview of the book and its methodology in Townsend and Bronwyn A. Ormsby’s “Blake’s Painting Materials, Technical Art History, and the Legacy of G.E. Bentley, Jr” in Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr., ed. Karen Mulhallen (2010).

Viscomi, Joseph. Blake and the Idea of the Book. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1993. <WBHC 2805-08>

The definitive study of Blake's method of illuminated printing. It elucidates Blake's studio practices, describing in detail Blake's use of artistic materials and the production of the illuminated books, touching on their relationship to Blake's other projects. The appendix dates the printing sessions for all known copies of the illuminated books and supersedes all previous datings.

Viscomi greatly abridged the book's argument for Morris Eaves's Cambridge Companion to William Blake. This served as the basis for Viscomi's "Illuminated Printing," which is found in the Blake Archive's exhibition section.²²⁹

Viscomi, Joseph. William Blake's Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. London: Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake's "printed paintings" (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.²³⁰ It includes important information on Blake's illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

The two appendices ("Blake Redefines Fresco" and "Monoprints after Blake's Death, 1827–1863") are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book's list of abbreviations (vi) and at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake's collectors.

Ward, Aileen. "sr Joshua and His Gang': William Blake and the Royal Academy." Huntington Library Quarterly 52.1 (1989): 75-95. <BSS 517-18, WBHC 2175-76>

A useful account of Blake's relationship to Joshua Reynolds and the Royal Academy, particularly in regard to his time as a student at the Academy and his favorable view of James Barry.

Wardle, Judith. "The Influence of Wynne's Emblems on Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 46-47. <BBS 377>

Responding to the references to Wynne's Choice Emblems in the Erdman edition of Blake's Notebook, corrects some details and highlights different possible uses of Wynne.

Wardle, Judith. "William Blake's Iconography of Joy: Angels, Birds, Butterflies and Related Motifs from Poetical Sketches to the Pickering Manuscript." Blake Studies 9.1-2 (1980): 5-44. <BBS 412>

"Blake's iconography of winged creatures draws on a wide variety of traditional materials' (41)" (BBS 412). Most examples from the Night Thoughts designs.

²²⁹ See also Bentley's summary "of some of [Viscomi's] more important findings" (146) in "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 1994," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.4 (spring 1995), 145-56.

²³⁰ An excerpt was published as "Impressions of Colors: On William Blake's Monoprints," Lapham's Quarterly (20 Jul. 2021).

Warner, Janet. Blake and the Language of Art. Kingston and Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1984.²³¹ <BBS 672, WBHC 2835-36>

An important study of Blake's designs in the illuminated books and his illustrations for Young, Milton, and Gray that argues Blake had a set "visual language" (185). Warner treats Blake's use of iconography and offers many probable sources for the designs.

Aesthetic Theory (Including the Gothic and the Sublime)

General Studies

Adams, Hazard. William Blake on His Poetry and Painting: A Study of A Descriptive Catalogue, Other Prose Writings and Jerusalem. Jefferson, NC: McFarland, 2011. <WBHC 1474>

Offers an idea of Blake's post-1803 aesthetic vision.

Barrell, John. "A Blake Dictionary." The Political Theory of Painting From Reynolds To Hazlitt: "The Body of the Public." London and New Haven: Yale University Press, 1986. 222-57. <BBS 360, WBHC 1583>²³²

An important explication of Blake's artistic theory around the terms originality, character, individuality, and public, with references to Reynolds, Barry, Fuseli, and Milton.

Carr, Stephen Leo. "Visionary Syntax: Nontryrannical Coherence in Blake's Visual Art." The Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation 22.3 (1981): 222-48. <BBS 433>

"I proposed to describe his revisionary practices as a visual artist, especially the ways he organized parts into a coherent whole" (222). Considers many works, including the annotations to Reynolds, On Homers Poetry, and several designs from Jerusalem, and contrasts Blake's linear aesthetics with those of Flaxman and Cumberland.

Clinton, Daniel. "Line and Lineage: Visual Form in Herman Melville's Pierre and Timoleon." Nineteenth-Century Literature 73.1 (2018): 1-29. <Blake (2019)>

Considers Melville's idea of form and outline in relationship to Blake, George Cumberland, John Flaxman, and John Ruskin.

Crosby, Mark. "'minutely Appropriate Execution': Variation and Pentimento in Blake's Title Pages." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 111-32. <Blake (2025)>

"This chapter argues that despite Blake's strictures on the significant differences in theory and practice between what he considered true 'inspiration and imagination'

²³¹ Incorporates her "Blake and the Language of Art: From Copy to Vision," Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977), 99-114, <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>; "Blake and English Printed Textiles," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.4 (spring 1973), 84-92, <BB #1217.118>; "Blake's Use of Gesture," Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic, ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant (1970), 174-95, <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>; and "Blake's Figures of Despair: Man in his Spectre's Power." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes, ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973), 208-24, <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>.

²³² The beginning page number in WBHC misstated as "22."

pictorially rendered via the ‘bounding outline’ and an inferior aesthetic predicated on memory executed via ‘blotting and blurring’, there was some leeway in his creative process for variation and artistic second thoughts” (abstract).

Eaves, Morris. William Blake's Theory of Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. <BBS 459, WBHC 1974-75>

An influential articulation of Blake’s theory of art in relationship to Neoclassicism and Romanticism, with a consideration of Blake’s notion of audience.

Green, Matthew. “Outlining the ‘Human Form Divine’: Reading Blake’s Thoughts on Outline and Response to Locke alongside Lavater and Cumberland.” European Romantic Review 15 (2004): 511-32. <WBHC 2103>

“[O]ur understanding of Blake’s thoughts on redemptive form, both human and artistic, can benefit from a consideration of Lavater’s Aphorisms (1788) and Essays on Physiognomy (1789–98),² as well as George Cumberland’s Thoughts on Outline (1796)” (512).

Johansen, Ib. “William Blake and the Gothic Sublime.” Romanticism in Theory. Ed. Lis Møller and Marie-Therese Svane. Aarhus, Denmark: Aarhus University Press, 2001. 176-91. <WBHC 2210>

On the Gothic Sublime in Poetical Sketches, Tiriel, and The French Revolution.

Gothic (See also Antiquarianism)

Bindman, David. “Blake’s ‘Gothicised Imagination’ and the History of England.” William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 29-49. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

On Blake’s history paintings and their depictions of medieval England, with references to his time as an apprentice in Westminster Abbey, the medieval designs in the Notebook, and Milton’s History of Britain.

Bindman, David. “New Light on the Mathews: Flaxman and Blake’s Early Gothicism.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr.. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 95–104. <WBHC 2436-40>

Inscriptions by A.S. Mathew on early Flaxman drawings of Gothic subjects, especially for Chatterton, “strongly suggest that Mathew was directly involved in Flaxman’s early attempts at illustrating Chatterton” (96).

Bundock, Chris, and Elizabeth Effinger, ed. William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

An important collection of essays engaging with Blake and the Gothic. The book aims “to recognise aspects of Blake’s art that [...] productively intersect with the Gothic horror taking shape contemporaneously with Blake’s career” (1).

Brylowe, Thora. “Of Gothic Architects and Grecian Rods: William Blake, Antiquarianism and the History of Art.” Romanticism 18.1 (April 2012): 89-104. <WBHC 1806>

Considers Blake’s relationship to “competing strains of antiquarianism” (89).

Easson, Roger R. "Blake and the Gothic." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 145-54. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers Blake's notion of the Gothic. A good introduction.

Higuchi, Hiroyuki. Kyofu no Bigaku: Naze hito wa zokuzoku shitainoka [Aesthetics of Horror: Why do people want to be frightened?] Tokyo: Atelier Third, 2022. In Japanese. <Blake (2024)>

Blake is briefly discussed in the context of Gothic Revivals in the sixth chapter "Kyofu no bijutsukan [A Museum of Horror]" (pp. 143-49).

Howard, Seymour. "Blake: Classicism, Gothicism, and Nationalism." Colby Library Quarterly 21.4 (1985): 156-87.²³³ <BBS 516>

Examining both his designs and poetry, as well as other artists, considers Blake's embrace of the Gothic and criticism of the classical tradition: "In brief, then, although Neo-Classicism, the revolutionary Republican style of his youth, used as an initial means of self-identification by early modern idealists on both sides of the Atlantic, remained an important element in his eclectic production, [...] Blake, like other of his contemporaries, turned increasingly to Neo-Gothicism" (187).

Khachaturov, Sergei. "Gotitsizmy istoricheskoi zhivopisi epokhi romantizma. Bruni, Ivanov, Fuseli, Bleik" [Gothicism in Romantic Historical Painting. Bruni, Ivanov, Fuseli, Blake]. Russkoe iskusstvo. II. Neuchtennye detali. Sbornik statei [Russian Art. II. Overlooked Details. Digest of Articles]. Saint Petersburg: Aleteia, 2020. 75-94. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The era of Romanticism made its main themes "overlooked details," difficult and "incorrect," "Gothic," and "Romantic" signs of historical time, and personal understanding of incidents, accomplishments, and human deeds.

Myrone, Martin. "Fuseli to Frankenstein: The Visual Arts in the Context of the Gothic." Gothic Nightmares: Fuseli, Blake and the Romantic Imagination. London: Tate Publishing, 2006. 31-40. <WBHC 1329-32>

Considers Fuseli, Blake, and James Gillray in relationship to the Gothic: "what brings the perverse, strange and supernatural art of Fuseli, Blake, and Gillray and their contemporaries into meaningful association with the Gothic in literature is also that they share the same range of new strategic possibilities regarding audiences, marketing and the power of sensation" (35).

Otto, Peter. "'second Birth' and Gothic Fictions in Matthew Lewis's The Monk, Catherine Blake's 'Agnes,' and William Blake's Vala, or The Four Zoas." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 77-102. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

²³³ Rpt. in Howard's collection Antiquity Restored: Essays on the Afterlife of the Antique (Vienna: IRSA, 1990), 210-12, <BBS 516>.

With substantial analysis of Catherine's painting of Agnes from The Monk, Otto reads The Four Zoas "as a Gothic fiction that takes ruin [...] and the dynamics of ruination [...] as its primary themes" (77).

Richey, William. "The Neoclassical Gothicism of Blake's Early Poetry and Art." Poetica 39-40 (1994): 73-91.²³⁴ <WBHC 2584> Examining Blake's early visual works (Joseph of Arimathea, The Landing of Brutus, The Keys of Calais, and The Penance of Jane Shore) and Poetical Sketches, argues that, "instead of seeing the Gothic and classical as rival, mutually exclusive traditions, Blake suggests that they may be twin branches of the same trunk" (77).

Rose, Edward J. "Blake and the Double: The Spectre as Doppelgänger." Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977): 127-39. <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>

"In anticipation of Romantic and post-Romantic literary concerns, Blake employed the Doppelgänger in his work both allegorically and psychologically" (128).

Rose, Edward J. "The 'Gothicized Imagination' of 'Michelangelo Blake.'" Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 155-69. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Shows how Blake could square his admiration of Michelangelo and the Gothic, when Michelangelo rejected the Gothic.

Neoclassical (See Blake and Members of His Circle, Laocoön, Milton a Poem and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Sublime

Introduction

Baulch, David. "Sublimity." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 147-54. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Baulch, David M. "Relative Aesthetics and the Last Judgment: Blake's Sublime and Kant's Third Critique." European Romantic Review 12.2 (2001): 198-205. <WBHC 1588>

On Blake's use of the sublime in the context of Kant: "Blake's sublime aesthetic [...] can be brought into a productive critical dialogue with contemporary readings of Kant's Critique of Judgment" (199).

Beal, Pamela. "Trembling before the Eternal Female: Blake's Call to a Transcendental Eros." Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 75-91. <WBHC 1589>

With references to Kant's notion of the sublime, argues that Blake's conception of eros in Jerusalem must navigate between the Female Will and the Eternal Female. In Jerusalem, Blake charts a way to live erotically, with passion, without being caught in what he calls the 'web of desire'" (75). Ideally, "[s]uch an eros does not seek to eliminate or deny the empirical world but to have relations with it and its subjects without violating them" (90).

²³⁴ Incorporated in Richey's Blake's Altering Aesthetic (1996), <WBHC 2583-84>.

Colebrook, Claire. “The Gothic Sublime.” William Blake’s Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncle and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 85-106. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Positions Blake in ideas of the sublime in eighteenth-century aesthetics.

De Luca, Vincent A. “‘Crouding After Night’: Troping and the Sublime in Poetical Sketches.” Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake’s Poetical Sketches. Ed. Mark L. Greenberg. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1996. 153-64. <WBHC 2104-05>

On Blake’s early efforts at the sublime, with references to Lowth’s Hebraisms and Burke.

Hobby, Blake. “Urizen and the Fragmentary Experience of the Sublime in The Four Zoas.” The Sublime. Ed. Blake Hobby. Gen. Ed. Harold Bloom. New York: Bloom’s Literary Criticism, 2010. 55-64. <WBHC 2154>

Suggests that “Urizen parallels the reader of [T]he Four Zoas” since “[i]n the end, readers confront, through Blake’s interpreter/creator, Urizen, the external and internal world with all their sublime contradiction” (56).

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke’s “Philosophical Enquiry” to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

On Burke’s notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled “Against and beyond Burke: Blake’s ‘sublime Labours’” (235-66).

Ibata, Hélène. “William Blake’s Visual Sublime: The ‘Eternal Labours’.” European Romantic Review 21.1 (2010): 29-48. <WBHC 2181>

“[E]xamines Blake’s visual aesthetics in the light of recent theories of the sublime” (abstract).

La Cassagnère, Christian. “The Sublimity of the Tyger.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 75-84. <WBHC 2190-91>

Considers the poem’s sublimity through its status as a speech act.

Morris, David B. “‘The Egoistical Sublime’: Blake, Wordsworth, and Coleridge.” The Religious Sublime: Christian Poetry and Critical Tradition 18th Century England. Lexington: University of Kentucky Press, 1972. 180-96. <BBS 578>

A good introduction to the development of the sublime in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The section on Blake (182-87) suggests his notion of the sublime was “profoundly personal” (182).

Otto, Peter. “From the Religious to the Psychological Sublime: The Fate of Young’s Night Thoughts in Blake’s The Four Zoas.” Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 225-62. <WBHC 2095-98>

Suggests that Blake transforms Young's religious sublime into the psychological sublime: "My argument will move from a consideration the religious sublime of reason in Night Thoughts, to a critique of Young's sublime in Blake's watercolor designs, and then briefly to Blake's humanist or psychological sublime in The Four Zoas" (226).

Otto, Peter. "A Sublime Allegory: Blake, Blake Studies, and the Sublime." Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation 43 (2002): 61-84. <WBHC 2491>

Focusing on "Urizen's plight" in Night the Sixth of The Four Zoas, offers "a reassessment of the role played by the sublime in Blake studies and in Blake's oeuvre" (63).

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake." The Apocalyptic Sublime. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1986. 71-100. <BBS 598>

Considers Blake's visual depictions of apocalyptic imagery, including the early paintings, War unchained by an Angel, Pestilence, and A Breach in the City; Europe; the Night Thought designs; and the paintings of Revelation in the Bible watercolors. (The wider book details well how other artists of Blake's era, e.g., Benjamin West, Philippe Jacques de Loutherbourg, J.M.W. Turner, and John Martin, depicted similar subjects. It also discusses millenarian figures like Thomas Spence, John Wright, William Bryan, and William Sharp.)

Twichell, James B. "Blake: The Anti-Sublime." Romantic Horizons: Aspects of the Sublime in English Poetry and Painting, 1770-1850. Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1983. <BBS 665>

Argues that Blake "had little use for the sublime either as a moral or aesthetic category" (40), using diagrams of "The Mental Traveller" and The Arlington Court Picture as evidence.

Vine, Steve. "William Blake's Materialities." Reinventing the Sublime: Post-Romantic Literature and Theory. Brighton, Chicago, Toronto: Sussex Academic Press, 2013.²³⁵ 22-38. <WBHC 2804>

Positions Blake's notion of the sublime, with references to John Martin, Burke, and Kant. Mostly references A Descriptive Catalogue and Jerusalem. "Each book—and perhaps even each plate, each mark, each printing—has the character of a 'minute articulation' or 'minute particular' whose very singularity, for Blake, is sublime" (38).

Vine, Steven. "Blake's Material Sublime." Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 237-57.²³⁶ <WBHC 2713-15, 2803>

On how "minute particulars" create the sublime in the illuminated books.

Weiskel, Thomas "Darkning Man: Blake's Critique of Transcendence." The Romantic Sublime: Studies in the Structure and Psychology of Transcendence. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 1976. 63-79.²³⁷ <BBS 675>

²³⁵ Incorporates Vine's "Blake's Material Sublime," Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (2002), 237-58, <WBHC 2713-15, 2803>.

²³⁶ Rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005), <WBHC 2217-18>.

²³⁷ Rpt. in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 117-32, <BBS 415>.

On “the confrontation of Blake and Kant” (BBS 675).

Materials, Media, and Methods (Painting, Printmaking, and Paper) (See Specific Works by Blake for Studies of Particular Works)

Painting

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Pictura Ignota: Blake’s Most Seen, Least Known Painting.” Descant 41.4 (winter 2010): 73-103. <WBHC 1608>

On Blake’s only known sign painting for the Talbot Inn in Southwark, which depicted Chaucer and the Canterbury pilgrims.

Blunt, Anthony. “Blake’s Pictorial Imagination. “Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 6 (1943): 190-212. <BB #1240>

An early account of Blake’s art, positioning Blake among traditions of “Ancient art,” “Medieval art,” “Renaissance and Mannerist art,” and “Oriental and primitive art” (196).

Chayes, Irene H. “The Presence of Cupid and Psyche.” Blake’s Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 214-43. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Traces Blake’s depictions of Cupid and Psyche in both the poetry and designs.

Clark, Kenneth. “Blake.” The Romantic Rebellion: Romantic versus Classic Art. New York: Harper & Row, 1973. London: Futura Publications Limited, 1976. New York: Harper & Row, 1986. 147-75. <BBS 438>

Positions Blake in terms of Romantic-era painting. There is also a chapter on Giovanni Battista Piranesi (1720-1778) and Fuseli.

Crosby, Mark. “A Minute Skirmish: Blake, Hayley, and the Art of Miniature Painting.” Blake and Conflict. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 164-84. <WBHC 2113-15>

Definitively considers Blake’s brief career as miniaturist in terms of his technique, including the use of stipple; his relationship with William Hayley; and other miniaturists Blake or Hayley knew.

Dörrbecker, D. W. Konvention und Innovation: Eigenes und Entliehenes in der Bildform bei William Blake und in der britischen Kunst seiner Zeit. Berlin: Kommissionsvertrieb Wasmuth Buchhandlung und Antiquariat, 1992. In German. <BBS 455, WBHC 1959>

“A careful and extensive study of ‘the iconography of style and forms, . . . Blake’s strategies in the choice of compositional treatment of the picture plane, his outline and shading techniques, his colouring, and so on’” (WBHC 1959).²³⁸

Erle, Sibylle. “Blake, Colour and the Truchsessian Gallery: Modelling the Mind and Liberating the Observer.” Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net 52 (Nov. 2008): 17 pars. <WBHC 1995>

²³⁸ Bentley’s italics and elision.

“This article explores the significance of Blake’s delayed response to the viewing experience of the Truchsessian Gallery” (abstract).

Essick, Robert N. “Blake’s 1812 Exhibition.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993): 36-42. <WBHC 1646>

Considers the context of the 1812 Associated Painters in Water-Colours exhibition, in which Blake displayed Jeffery Chaucer and the Nine and Twenty Pilgrims on Their Journey to Canterbury, The Spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth, The Spiritual Form of Nelson Guiding Leviathan, and plates from Jerusalem. Essick suggests that plates 6, 28, 51 were displayed.

Maheux, Anne. “An Analysis of the Watercolor Technique and Materials of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 124-29. <BBS 396>

An early technical analysis based on the paintings and palette at the Fogg Museum (Harvard), though the claim that the paints on the palette are Blake’s has been disputed by Townsend et al.’s “Blake’s Only Surviving Palette?”

Myrone, Martin. “Exhibitions Culture, Consumerism and the Romantic Artist.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 184-200. <Blake (2024)>

“I would propose that the phenomenon of exhibitions culture helped institute a structurally precarious, inherently competitive and individualist artistic field, revealing a still larger set of transformations accompanying social, economic and political modernization” (189). Positions Blake in this context (pp. 197-98), with references to Royal Academy, Reynolds, Fuseli, Boydell, Macklin, Bowyer, Romney, and Barry.

Paley, Morton D. “The Last Judgment by B. Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.3 (winter 2007-08): 135. <WBHC 1715>

On the significance of the misattribution of Blake’s Last Judgment by the compiler(s) of the 1808 exhibition catalogue of the Royal Academy. See also BR 250n.

Paley, Morton D. “William Blake’s ‘Portable Fresco’.” European Romantic Review 24.3 (2013): 271-77. <WBHC 2502-03>

On why Blake used the word “fresco” even though he must have known his own frescoes were created differently than those of Raphael and Michelangelo.

Smith, Greg. The Emergence of the Professional Watercolourist: Contentions and Alliances in the Artistic Domain, 1760-1824. Aldershot: Ashgate, 2002. Rpt. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2018.

On the status of watercolorists in relationship to the Academy and other institutions. Includes a discussion of Blake.

Stemmler, Joan K. “Cennino, Cumberland, Blake and Early Painting Techniques.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 145-49. <BBS 396>

Argues that Blake could have learned about “Il Libro dell’Arte or The Craftsman’s Handbook by Cennino Cennini” (145), which contained information about fresco techniques, from George Cumberland, who saw the manuscript in Italy in the late 1780s. This challenges John Linnell's claim that he showed Blake Cennino's work for the first time in 1821.

Todd, Ruthven. “‘Poisonous Blues’ and Other Pigments.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.1 (1980): 31-34. <BBS 389>

Suggests that Blake's phrase, “‘poisonous blue’ was merely the nitric acid with which Blake bit his copperplate” (34).

Townsend, Joyce. “William Blake (1757-1827), Moses Judgment at the Golden Calf c. 1799-1800.” Paint and Purpose: A Study of Technique in British Art. Ed. Stephen Hackney, Rica Jones, and Joyce Townsend. London: Tate Gallery Publishing, 1999. 66-69. <WBHC 2775>

A technical analysis of the pigments of Blake's tempura painting (i.e., what Blake called “fresco”), with considerations of what the analysis suggests about Blake's techniques.

Townsend, Joyce H., ed. William Blake: The Painter at Work. London: Tate Publishing, 2003. <WBHC 2775-79>²³⁹

An important collection of essays on the more technical features of Blake's painting, with sections devoted to the watercolors, the large color prints, and the temperas. The book also analyzes Blake's use of paper, paints and other materials; his practices of framing; the materials he used; and the contexts of his exhibitions.

Townsend, Joyce H., and Bronwyn A. Ormsby. “Blake's Painting Materials, Technical Art History, and the Legacy of G.E. Bentley, Jr.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2010. 79-92. <WBHC 2436-40>

Reviews the key technical issues considered in Townsend's collection, William Blake: The Painter at Work (2003), and examines Blake's use of metal supports in his tempera paintings.

Townsend, Joyce H., Bronwyn Ormsby, Julia Jönsson, and Mark Evans. “Blake's Only Surviving Palette?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.2 (fall 2005): 100-03. <WBHC 1704>²⁴⁰

“The only certain conclusion is that the paint on the palette could not have been used by William Blake” (103).

Whitehead, Angus. “The Arlington Court Picture: A Surviving Example of William Blake's Framing Practice.” The British Art Journal 8.1 (2007): 30-33. <WBHC 2849>

“The Arlington Court Picture is [...] a Blake painting not merely in its original frame, but also in a frame the style of which Blake probably played some role in deciding upon, through his friend and patron John Linnell and the framer of the painting, James Linnell” (32).

²³⁹ See the overview of the book and its methodology in Townsend and Bronwyn A. Ormsby's “Blake's Painting Materials, Technical Art History, and the Legacy of G.E. Bentley Jr” in Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr., ed. Karen Mulhallen (2010).

²⁴⁰ A shorter version of the article appears in Victoria & Albert Conservation Journal 49 (2005), 20-21, <WBHC 2779>.

Useful Works on Painting not Focused on Blake

Dostal, Alexandra Zoë. “Rope, Linen, Thread: Gender, Labor, and the Textile Industry in Eighteenth-Century British Art.” PhD diss., Columbia University, 2024. “The second chapter, ‘Linen,’ is about the structure, materiality and hidden histories embedded in linen painting canvas. First, by comparing linen weaves, thread counts, stamps, and fiber content, I demonstrate the material connections between the world of coarse linen goods and the textile supports of oil paintings. I then argue that the texture of canvas was crucial to the ‘unfinished’ aesthetic of portraiture that became fashionable in the late eighteenth century and attend to the racialized and gendered discourses intrinsic to this painting style” (abstract, no full text available).

Printmaking (including Engravings, Etchings, Woodcuts, and Lithography) (See also Illuminated Books, Commercial Book Illustrations, Separate Prints and Prints in a Series, and “Public Address to the Chalcographic Society”)

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

An exceedingly useful resource that, in addition to its biographies of engravers contemporary with Blake (including most members of his circle), contains a historical overview of the profession and a list of apprentices.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake Copperplates in the Thomas Ross Archive.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.3 (winter 2009-10): 107-08. <WBHC 1723>

Demonstrates that the Blake plates held by “[t]he print-making and -selling firm of Thomas Ross Limited in Binfield, Berkshire” (107) are copies rather than originals, and that many of them were likely made for the two editions of Gilchrist’s Life.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake’s Heavy Metal: The History, Weight, Uses, Cost, and Makers of His Copper Plates.” University of Toronto Quarterly 76 (2007): 714-70. <WBHC 1605>

Among the definitive studies of Blake’s use of copper plates. See also Bentley’s “What is the Price of Experience,” Viscomi’s Blake and the Idea of the Book, and Mei-Ying Sung’s William Blake and the Art of Engraving.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “William Blake’s Techniques of Engraving and Printing.” Studies in Bibliography 34 (1981): 241-53. <BBS 369-70>

Useful contextual information regarding Cumberland and Hayley, but refer to Essick’s William Blake Printmaker and Viscomi’s Blake and the Idea of the Book for more accurate accounts.

Binyon, Laurence. The Engraved Designs of William Blake. London: Ernest Benn Limited and New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1926. Rpt. New York: Da Capo Press, 1967. <BB #627, WBHC 1099-1100>

A dated catalogue of the illuminated books, separate prints, and some of the commercial engravings, but the description of the designs in the catalogue can be useful.

Carr, Stephen Leo. "Illuminated Printing: Toward a Logic of Difference." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 177-96. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

Applies a deconstructive logic to illuminated printing. Robert N. Essick's "How Blake's Body Means" responds to Carr's essay.

Carr, Stephen Leo. "William Blake's Print-Making Process in Jerusalem." ELH 47.3 (1980): 520-41. <BBS 433>

Analyzes "[t]he uncolored versions [of Jerusalem since they] best reveal the informing logic of the entire print-making process, especially the ways in which earlier stages create possibilities for further development and re-vision of a design" (521).

Davies, Keri. "‘O Nancy’s hair is yellow as gowd’: Blake, Border ballads, and the Reinvention of Relief Etching."²⁴¹ Index Rerum. 26 Mar. 2024. <Blake (2025)>

An essay with two parts. The first focuses on Blake's ideas of music and identifies the probable source of the "Border Melody" sang by Mrs. Linnell, which according to Alexander Gilchrist, affected Blake emotionally. The second considers Scottish members of Blake's late circle, particularly William Home²⁴² Lizars and Thomas Sivright, and makes the claim that both Lizars' and Charles Pye's relief inventions were modelled on the men's knowledge of Blake's method of illuminated printing.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake and the Traditions of Reproductive Engraving." Blake Studies 5.1 (fall 1972): 59-103. <BB #1218.68>

A very useful essay that positions Blake in relationship to Romantic-era engraving. A good introduction to Essick's William Blake Printmaker.

Essick, Robert N. "How Blake's Body Means." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 197-217. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

An important essay that responds to Carr's "Illuminated Printing: Toward a Logic of Difference" with "a more historically orientated view of graphic production" (197).

Essick, Robert N. "John Linnell, William Blake, and the Printmaker's Craft." Huntington Library Quarterly 46.1 (1983): 18-32. <BBS 517, WBHC 2175>

On what Blake learned from Linnell about engraving.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. <BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

²⁴¹ "A version of this paper was read at "Romanticism's Debatable Lands": the British Association for Romantic Studies Biennial Conference, 28-31 July 2005, Newcastle upon Tyne" (Davies's Acknowledgment).

²⁴² As Davies points out, "Home" was Lizars' middle name and not "Hone" as Bentley has it in Blake Records (2004).

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

Essick, Robert N., and Jenijoy La Belle. "The Blakes at Their Press." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.3 (winter 2015-16): 8 pars. <WBHC 1746>

Reexamines the pencil sketch in Blake's Dante in the Empyrean, Drinking at the River of Light (Butlin 812.98) as a portrait of William and Catherine at their press.

Gage, John. "Boydell's Shakespeare and the Redemption of British Engraving." The Boydell Shakespeare Gallery. Ed. Walter Paper and Frederick Burwick Bottrop: Peter Pomp, 1996. 27-31.

Includes reference to Blake's Public Address to the Chalcographic Society.

Hults, Linda C. "England: Barry, Stubbs, and Blake." The Print in the Western World: An Introductory History. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1996. 358-79. <WBHC 2173>

"Both as a poet and as a printmaker, Blake was a curious and grand anomaly' (375)" (WBHC 2173).

Jackson, John [& William A. Chatto.] A Treatise on Wood Engraving, Historical and Practical. London: Charles Knight and Co., 1839. 715-17. 2nd ed. with a New Chapter on the Artists of the Present Day by Henry G. Bohn. London: Henry G. Bohn, 1861.²⁴³ <BB #1932, BBS 523-24, WBHC 745, 1837>

A near-contemporary account of Blake's method of relief engraving that is authored "apparently by Jackson" (BBS 523-24). Michael Phillips explicates this account in detail in his essay, "The Printing of Blake's America a Prophecy." It refers to a version of Thel with "seven quarto pages" (715n), which Bentley identifies with copy E (WBHC 176).

The 2nd edition of 1851 uses "W.J. Linton's plate of 'Death's Door' which first appeared in his Thirty Pictures by Deceased British Artists (1860)," either as the edition's "frontispiece or 'at p. 632' (591)" (BBS 523).

McCue, Maureen. "A Point to Aim at in a Morning's Walk': Encounters at the Print Shop." The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 335-55. <Blake (2024)>

While there are no reference to Blake and Parker's short-lived shop, it is a good examination of the spaces, practices, and social significance of London print shops.

Phillips, Michael. "Printing in the Infernal Method." Interfaces 30 (2010): 21-34. <WBHC 2190-91>

²⁴³ The "1851 edition" listed by Hathi Trust (and listed there as being held by the University of California Library and digitized by Google) is actually the 1861 edition.

An overview of Blake's experimental work in printing.

Phillips, Michael. “Printing in the infernal method': William Blake's Method of 'Illuminated Printing.” Interfaces: Image—Texte—Language 39 (2018): 30 pars.²⁴⁴ <Blake (2019)>

A well-illustrated discussion of Blake's printing method, with references to J.T. Smith, John Linnell, and Jackson and Chattoo's A Treatise on Wood Engraving (1839).

Sung, Mei-Ying. “Blake and the Chinamen.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 63-76. <WBHC 1857-62>

Details how “Chinamen,” that is, pottery manufacturers like Josiah Wedgwood I (1730-95) and II (1769-1834), used “copper-plate engraving techniques [...] from which Blake failed to benefit” (63), even though the Spode pottery factory and Blake “sourced their copper plates from the same copper-plate makers,” including G. Harris of 31 Shoe Lane, London (64).

Sung, Mei-Ying. William Blake and the Art of Engraving. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2009. <WBHC 2720-21>

A key study of Blake's methods as an intaglio engraver rooted in examinations of Blake's existing copperplates and those of his contemporaries. She examines Ruthven Todd's influence on critical notions of Blake's invention, execution, and conception, and considers the commercial engravings, the Virgil woodcuts, and the Illustrations of the Book of Job.

Tanaka, Minne. “Colour Printing in the West and the East: William Blake and Ukiyo-e.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 77-86. <WBHC 1857-62>

“[D]iscuss[es] how colour printing developed independently in Europe, with specific reference to Britain, and in Japan in the eighteenth century, and to suggest certain points of convergence between these geographically distant traditions” (77). “Ukiyo-e is a form of popular art which saw its golden age in the late eighteenth and nineteenth centuries” (84).

Wright, John. “Blake's Relief-Etching Method.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.4 (spring 1976): 94-115. <BB #1217.128>

An effort to explain Blake's method of engraving utilizing the copies of the electrotype copies of Songs. See Visconti's criticisms in Blake and the Idea of the Book (esp. pp. 82-88).

Useful Works on Printmaking not Focused on Blake

Alexander, David, ed. Affecting Moments: Prints of English Literature Made in the Age of Romantic Sensibility 1775-1800. York: University of York, 1993. <WBHC 2930-31>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in 1993 at the University of York. The catalogue contains prints “from David Alexander's collection” (WBHC 2931), and includes engravings by Francesco Bartolozzi, James Parker, William Wynne Ryland, Louis Schiavonetti, Robert Thew, and Caroline Watson.

²⁴⁴ Adapted from Phillips's catalogue, William Blake Apprentice & Master (2014), 89-105, <WBHC 1413-20>.

Alexander, David, and Richard T. Godfrey. Painters and Engraving: The Reproductive Print from Hogarth to Wilkie. New Haven: Yale Center for British Art, 1980.

Both a historical and technical survey of the eighteenth-century print and its makers. It is the catalogue for the exhibition held at the Yale Center for British Art from 26 Mar. to 22 Jun. 1980.

Avery-Quash, Susanna, and Christian Huemer, ed. London and the Emergence of the European Art Market, 1780-1820. Los Angeles: The Getty Research Institute, 2019. <Blake (2025)>
Includes:

Murgia, Camilla. "From Private to National: Exhibiting Fine Arts in London around 1800." 105-17. Blake is mentioned on p. 113.

Alexander, David. "The Evolution of the Print Market and Its Impact on the Market, 1780-1820." 118-30.

Roworth, Wendy Assyng. "Angelica Kauffman: The Acquisition and Dispersal of an Artist's Collection, 1783-1825." 131-44.

Clayton, Timothy. The English Print, 1688-1802. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1997.

On the development of the print market in Britain.

Diaz, Rosie. "'A World of Pictures': Pall Mall and the Topographies of Display, 1780-1799." Georgian Geographies: Essays on Space, Place and Landscape in the Eighteenth Century. Ed. Miles Ogborn and Charles Withers. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2004. 92-113.

On the practices of display in Pall Mall.

Donald, Diana. The Age of Caricature: Satirical Prints in the Reign of George III. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1996.

Focused primarily on Gillray.

Hyde, Sarah. "Printmakers and the Royal Academy Exhibitions, 1780-1836." Art on the Line: The Royal Academy Exhibitions at Somerset House, 1780-1836. Ed. David. H. Solkin. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2001. 217-28.

On the role of prints in marketing exhibitions and paintings even though engravers themselves were not allowed to become members of the Academy.

Poortenaar, Jan. The Technique of Prints and Art Reproduction Processes. London: John Lane The Bodley Head LTD, 1933.

Paper \(Papermakers, Stationers, and Paper Mills\)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Watermarks in Paper Used by Blake." [William Blake and His Circle: Publications and Discoveries from 1992 \[to 2016\] Including Addenda to Blake Records, Second Edition \(2004\)](#). 142-155.

Enumerates all the known watermarks, incorporating previous lists in BB, BBS, and Butlin.

Bower, Peter. “The Evolution and Development of ‘Drawing Papers’ and the Effect of This Development on Watercolour Artists, 1750-1850.” The Oxford Papers: Proceedings of the British Association of Paper Historians Fourth Annual Conference, Held at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, 17-19 September 1993. Ed. Peter Bower. London: British Association of Paper Historians, 1996. 61-74. <WBHC 1779-80>

Includes table, “Blake’s Papermakers: Watermarks Found in Papers Used by William Blake (1757-1827)” (72-73).

Bower, Peter. “The Vivid Surface: Blake’s Use of Paper and Board.” William Blake: The Painter at Work. Ed. Joyce H. Townsend. London: Tate Publishing, 2003. 54-60, 178. <WBHC 2775-79>

Efficiently examines the different papers and boards that Blake used, detailing their qualities and their makers.

Davies, Keri. “William Blake and the Straw Paper Manufactory at Millbank.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 233-61. <WBHC 2436-40>

Explores how the paper-making factory of Matthias Koops at Millbank influenced Blake’s conception of the new industrial system.

Riccardi, Silvia. “The Page Embodied in The Four Zoas.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 135-47. <Blake (2025)>

The chapter “examine[s] Blake’s practice in selected pages of the manuscript, focusing on the way layout, calligraphy, and symbols are embedded in his style as well as the extent to which the boundaries between paper and copperplate become permeable” (abstract).

Stijnman, Ad. Engraving and Etching 1400-2000: A History of the Development of Manual Intaglio Printmaking Processes. London: Archetype, 2012.

A technically informed history with a “Bibliography of Practical Manuals.” Passing references to William and Catherine Blake.

Yates, Mark. “Notes on William Blake’s Paper Makers c. 1789-1795.” ANQ: A Quarterly Journal of Short Articles, Notes, and Reviews 26.3 (2013): 169-79. <WBHC 2902>

On those who made paper with the watermarks of “J Whatman,” “E & P,” “C Ball,” and “I Taylor.”

Blake and Artists (Art History and Individual Artists)

General (Different Artists from Different Periods)

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth century and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Paley, Morton D. "Blake's Poems on Art and Artists." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and John Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 210-27. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers the satirical Notebook poems on different artists and artistic concepts.

Ancient Artists

Chayes, Irene H. "Blake's Ways with Art Sources II: Some Versions of the Antique." Colby Library Quarterly 26.1 (1990): 28-58. <BBS 435>

Considers "Blake's uses of images, mainly figural, from a necessarily limited selection of antique sculpture, which he could have seen" in eighteenth-century books (30).

Paley, Morton D. "'Wonderful Originals'—Blake and Ancient Sculpture." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 170-97. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers the sources from which Blake would have learned about classical sculpture and his references to it in his works and in his circle.

Medieval Artists (450-1499) (See also Gothic and Antiquarianism)

General

Nanavutty, Piloo. "Blake & Medieval Christian Iconography." Aligarh Journal of English Studies 10.1 (1985): 49-65. <BBS 585>

On possible Medieval sources for drawings in the Notebook and The Four Zoas.

Onodera, Reiko. "Soshoku no yorokobi—William Blake to chusei shahon [The Delight of Ornament—William Blake and Illuminated Manuscripts in the Middle Ages]." Yuko Arakawa, Reiko Onodera, Kazusa Kume, Akiko Kato, and Masayuki Tanaka. Design to Decoration—William Blake kara Edward M. Kauffer e (Designatio et Ornamentum: Ex William Blake ad Edward M. Kauffer) [Design and Decoration—From William Blake to Edward M. Kauffer].²⁴⁵ Tokyo: Arina Shobo, 2018. 13-50. In Japanese. 14 pls. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Cennini, Cennino (1360-1427) (See the Annotations to Cennini)

Stemmler, Joan K. "Cennino, Cumberland, Blake and Early Painting Techniques." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 145-49. <BBS 396>

Argues that Blake could have learned about "Il Libro dell'Arte or The Craftsman's Handbook by Cennino Cennini" (145), which contained information about fresco techniques, from George Cumberland, who saw the manuscript in Italy in the late 1780s. This challenges John Linnell's claim that he showed Blake Cennino's work for the first time in 1821.

²⁴⁵ A note from Hikari Sato: The book has a title in Latin, which is shown in parentheses. It does not have the title in English. I have chosen "Decoration" in the English translation because they use the transliteration of the English word "Decoration" in the title in Japanese. Split between "Decoration" and "Ornamentum," I followed their Japanese title.

Sixteenth-Century Artists (1500-1599)

Dürer, Albrecht (1471-1528)

Ott, Judith. "The Bird-Man of William Blake's Jerusalem." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.2 (fall 1976): 47.48-51. <BBS 380>

Suggests the image of the bird-man on pl. 78 echoes Dürer's Melancholia and the depictions of St. John with an eagle head.

Rose, Edward J. "Blake and Dürer." Colby Library Quarterly 16.3 (1980): 166-76. <BBS 625>

"The actual resemblances between the works of Blake and Durer are slight when compared to the obvious similarities between Blake and Michelangelo. Blake's relation to Durer is essentially doctrinal and theoretical" (176).

Michelangelo (1475-1564)

Chayes, Irene H. "[Blake's Ways with Art Sources \[I\]: Michelangelo's The Last Judgment](#)." Colby Library Quarterly 20.2 (1984): 60-89. <BBS 435>

Considers Blake's borrowings from Michelangelo's The Last Judgment, with references to Reynolds's Discourse VI.

La Belle, Jenijoy. "Blake's Visions and Re-visions of Michelangelo." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 13-22. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

On Blake's copying of and use of Michelangelo's designs from the Sistine Chapel from engravings of Adam Ghisi (more properly, Adamo Scultori [fl. 1547-1587]).

La Belle, Jenijoy. "Michelangelo's Sistine Frescoes and Blake's 1795 Color-Printed Drawings: A Study in Structural Relationships." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 66-83. <BBS 390>

"Blake not only borrowed motifs and styles from Michelangelo for the creation of his great color-printed drawings, but also based their organization on the pictorial program of the Sistine Ceiling" (66).

Østermark-Johansen, Lene. "Eighteenth-century Overture: An Introduction." Sweetness and Strength: The Reception of Michelangelo in Late Victorian England. Aldershot and Brookfield: Ashgate, 1998. 1-20.²⁴⁶

Introduction discusses Michelangelo's reception in the late eighteenth century, with a substantial focus on Blake and Reynolds (6-16) as well as other members of Blake's circle.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake's 'Portable Fresco'." European Romantic Review 24.3 (2013): 271-77. <WBHC 2502-03>

On why Blake used the word "fresco" even though he must have known his own frescoes were created differently than those of Raphael and Michelangelo.

²⁴⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

Paulson, Ronald. "Blake's Bible." Books and Painting: Shakespeare, Milton and the Bible: Literary Texts and the Emergence of English Painting. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1982. 115-24. <BBS 600>

On Blake's poetic and visual uses of the Bible, especially as mediated by Milton and Michelangelo.

Rose, Edward J. "The 'Gothicized Imagination' of 'Michelangelo Blake.'" Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 155-69. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Shows how Blake could square his admiration of Michelangelo and the Gothic, when Michelangelo rejected the Gothic.

Tannenbaum, Leslie. "Transformations of Michelangelo in William Blake's The Book of Urizen." Colby Library Quarterly 16.1 (1980): 21-43. <BBS 657>

On Blake's borrowings from Michelangelo.

Raphael Sanzio da Urbino \(1483-1520\)

Baine, Rodney M., and Mary R. Baine. "Bromion's 'Jealous Dolphins.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.4 (spring 1981): 206-07. <BBS 391>

"[T]he dolphin-related legend which most closely fits the situation in Visions of the Daughters of Albion is that of the nymph Galatea and her lovers Acis and Polyphemos." "Though in the Galatea legend Polyphemos is yet to be blinded by Odysseus, he is already blinded by his jealousy, like the spiritually blind Bromion and Theotormon" (206). Also references Raphael's "Triumph of Galatea."

Tibaldi, Pellegrino \(1527-1596\)

Chayes, Irene H. "Blake and Tibaldi." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 81 (1978): 113-25. <BBS 435>

Suggests visual borrowing from Tibaldi as found in Le Pitture di Pellegrino Tibaldi (Venice, 1756).

Seventeenth-Century Artists \(1600-1699\)

Rubens, Peter Paul \(1577-1640\)

Rose, Edward J. "'A Most Outrageous Demon': Blake's Case Against Rubens." Bucknell Review 17.1 (1969): 35-54.²⁴⁷ <BB #2558>

On why Blake rejected Rubens.

[Poussin, Nicolas \(1594-1665\) \(See also the \[Annotations to Reynolds\]\(#\)\)](#)

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Idolatry: Nietzsche, Blake, Poussin." Seeing through Race. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2422>

Considers idolatry and the process of othering in the religions of the Book as constituent of race and racism, with discussions of Nietzsche, Blake, and Poussin.

²⁴⁷ Rpt. in The Visionary Hand: Essays for the Study of William Blake's Art and Aesthetics, ed. Robert N. Essick (1973), 311-36, <BB #A1583, WBHC 1998>.

Toomey, Deirdre, and Morton D. Paley. “Two Pictorial Sources for Jerusalem 25.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 185-90. <BB #1217.87>

Paley argues that the design echoes Joseph Marie Mitelli’s engraving of Nicolas Poussin’s The Martyrdom of St. Erasmus; Toomey, that it echoes Rene Boyvin’s engraving of Il Rosso Fiorentino’s Le Tr Parche.

Eighteenth-Century Artists (1700-1799) (See also Blake and Members of His Circle, A Descriptive Catalogue, the Annotations to Reynolds, and “Public Address”)

General (See also the Royal Academy)

Agranovskii, Nikita. ““salon otvergnuvshego”: Dzhon Singlon Kopli i amerikanskii vzgliad na khudozhestvennye institutsii XVIII veka” [‘Exhibition of the Rejected’: John Singleton Copley and the American View of Eighteenth-Century Artistic Institutions].” Vestnik Sankt-Peterburgskogo universiteta. Iskusstvovedenie [Vestnik of Saint Petersburg University. Arts] 10.1 (2020): 106-31. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The article examines the painting The Death of the Earl of Chatham by John Singleton Copley and the experience of exhibiting it, undertaken by the artist in 1781 in opposition to the newly formed Royal Academy of Arts.

Alexander, David. A Biographical Dictionary of British and Irish Engravers, 1714–1820. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

An exceedingly useful resource that, in addition to its biographies of engravers contemporary with Blake (including most members of his circle), contains a historical overview of the profession and a list of apprentices.

Barrell, John. “A Blake Dictionary.” The Political Theory of Painting From Reynolds To Hazlitt: “The Body of the Public.” London and New Haven: Yale University Press, 1986. 222-57. <BBS 360, WBHC 1583>²⁴⁸

An important explication of Blake’s artistic theory around the terms originality, character, individuality, and public, with references to Reynolds, Barry, Fuseli, and Milton.

Bowden, Betsy. “Reading/Riding between the Lines: Mortimer, Stothard, and Blake.” The Ellesmere Chaucer: Essays in Interpretation. Ed. Martin Stevens and Daniel Woodward. San Marino: Huntington Library; Tokyo: Yushodo Co., Ltd, 1995. 193-200. <WBHC 1778>

Part of the chapter, “Visual Portraits of the Canterbury Pilgrims 1484(?)–1809” (171-204).

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke’s “Philosophical Enquiry” to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

On Burke’s notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled “Against and beyond Burke: Blake’s ‘sublime Labours’” (235-66).

²⁴⁸ The beginning page number in WBHC misstated as “22.”

Lenihan, Liam. "Wollstonecraft's Reading of Milton and the Sublime of Barry, Fuseli and Blake." The Writings of James Barry and the Genre of History Painting, 1775-1809. Farnham: Ashgate, 2014. 127-52. <WBHC 2318>

Considers the response to Milton by Wollstonecraft, James Barry, Henry Fuseli, and Blake, with references to Visions of the Daughters of Albion, Edmund Burke, and William Godwin.

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Metamorphoses of the Vortex: Hogarth, Turner, and Blake." Articulate Images: The Sister Arts from Hogarth to Tennyson. Ed. Richard Wendorf. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1983. 125-68. <BBS 576>

On the spiral or vortex in the works of the three artists.

Ward, Aileen. "'sr Joshua and His Gang': William Blake and the Royal Academy.'" Huntington Library Quarterly 52.1 (1989): 75-95. <BSS 517-18, WBHC 2175-76>

A useful account of Blake's relationship to Joshua Reynolds and the Royal Academy, particularly in regard to his time as a student at the Academy and his favorable view of James Barry.

Watson, Sheila. "The British Museum and the Royal Academy: The Nation State, English and British Identities, and the Constitution in the Eighteenth Century." Museum and Society 17.1 (2019): 66-82. <Blake (2020)>

"During the mid-eighteenth century two museum institutions the British Museum and the Royal Academy of Arts were established, the former by Parliament, the latter by artists under the patronage of the Crown. In their origins and their early development they illustrate and help shape ideas relating to the growth of the notion of Britishness and English national identity. They were the theatres in which ideas about the kind of political nation Britain imagined itself to be were played out between loyalists (supporters of a reformed monarchy) and Whigs (mistrustful of the crown and jealous of the hard won rights of Parliament)" (abstract).

Hogarth, William (1697-1764)

Carlson, Marvin A. "A Fresh Look at Hogarth's Beggar's Opera." Educational Theatre Journal 27.1 (1975): 30-39. <BBS 432>

A still useful essay that gives an account of Blake's engraving in relationship John Boydell's Shakespeare Project (including a reproduction of Boydell's "Key to the Engraving" [1790]) and emphasizes that Hogarth's painting was "pointed satire" (34) and not a neutral representation of a stage performance.

Cohen, Michael. "Engaging Metaphors: Comparative Figures in Hogarth and Blake." Engaging English Art: Entering the Work in Two Centuries of English Painting and Poetry. Tuscaloosa and London: University of Alabama Press, 1987. 56-76. <BBS 439>

"[I]n this chapter[,] we will look at engagement strategies of these two great English artists and examine how the poets' devices of comparison and metaphor function in their work. At the same time[,] we will see how the reader/spectator's role changes in moving from Hogarth's work to Blake's" (49). The analysis of Blake focuses on "The Fly."

Gilpin, George H. "Blake, Hogarth, and the Engraver's Art of Line." Carrell: Journal of the Friends of the University of Miami Library 17 (1976): 1-7. <BBS 485>

"Clearly Blake's "bounding line" derives from Hogarth's "Line of Beauty" (4)" (BBS 485).

Kroeber, Karl. "Inventing the Unconscious." "Ditties of No Tone." British Romantic Art. Berkeley, Los Angeles, London: University of California Press, 1986. 9-33. 59-81. <BBS 541>

"Inventing the Unconscious" compares Blake and Hogarth, using The Book of Urizen and Industry and Idleness as primary examples. "Ditties of No Tone" compares Blake and Burns, using The Songs of Innocence and of Experience and Poems Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect as primary examples.

Paulson, Ronald. "Blake: The Harlot and the Lamb." Hogarth's Harlot: Sacred Parody in Enlightenment England. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2003. 326-54. <WBHC 2509>

On Blake's depictions of "harlots" in "London" and other works, often in comparison with Hogarth's "A Harlot's Progress."

Jeffreys, James \(1751-1784\)

Catalogue

The Rediscovery of an Artist: The Drawings of James Jefferys. London: Victoria and Albert Museum, 1976.

A catalogue for the exhibition from Feb. to May 1976.

Studies

Butlin, Martin. "The Rediscovery of an Artist: James Jefferys 1751-1784." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 123-24. <BBS 381>

Notes Jeffreys as one of the "artist whose work lies behind the proto-Romantic Neo-Classicism of much of Blake's work" (123).

Butlin, Martin. "James Jeffreys Update." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 298.²⁴⁹

An update on Jeffreys after the publication of recent scholarship.

Clifford, Timothy, and Susan Legouix. "James Jefferys, Historical Draughtsman \(1751-84\)." Burlington Magazine 118 (1976): 148-57.

A foundation account of Jefferys's life and career, which includes a list of lost works.

Pressley, Nancy L. "James Jefferys and the 'Master of the Giants'." Burlington Magazine 119 (1977): 280-84.

Surveys new information about Jefferys. "The linear style emanating from Rome during this period with its attenuated, abstract contours and inclination toward bizarre and heroic subject-matter was to have a great impact on the art of the next generation, in particular, Flaxman and Blake. Jefferys was an extremely important figure within this milieu” (284).

²⁴⁹ Not recorded in BBS.

Sunderland, John. “Two Self-Portraits by James Jefferys?” Burlington Magazine 119 (1977): 279-80.

Notes that Jefferys was apprenticed to the engraver William Woollett, exhibited at the Society of Artists in 1771, and was admitted to the Royal Academy Schools in 1772. Also considers Jefferys’s relationship to Mortimer and his influence on Jeffreys.

Reynolds, Joshua (1723-92) (See also Annotations to Reynolds)

Introductions and Biographies (ODNB, Martin Postle)

Writing

Ingamells, John, and John Edcumbe, ed. The Letters of Sir Joshua Reynolds. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2000.

Wark, R.R, ed. Sir Joshua Reynolds: Discourses on Art. San Marino: Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, 1959. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1975. 1981. 1988.

The standard modern edition. The appendix includes Blake’s Annotations.

Catalogue

Mannings, David, and Martin Postle. Sir Joshua Reynolds: A Complete Catalogue of his Paintings. 2 vols. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2000.

Studies

Blake and Reynolds

Adams, Hazard. “Revisiting Reynold[s]’s Discourses and Blake’s Annotations.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 128-44.²⁵⁰ <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Reviews Blake’s arguments with Reynolds.

Apesos, Anthony. “Visionary Anatomy: Blake’s Bodies.” Romantik: Journal for the Study of Romanticisms 10 (2021): 57-82. <Blake (2023)>

“I will explore the origin and significance of Blake’s divergence from anatomical correctness” (abstract). Also references William Hunter, Joshua Reynolds, and Luigi Schiavonetti.

Behrendt, Stephen C. “The Best Criticism: Imitation as Criticism in the Eighteenth Century.” Eighteenth-Century Theory and Interpretation 24 (1983): 3-22. <BBS 362>

On Blake’s and Reynolds’s similar ideas of copying and of imitation, with a discussion of how Blake’s commercial engravings (of, especially, Stothard) were a type of imitation.

Blunt, Anthony. “Blake’s ‘Glad Day.’” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 2.1 (1938): 65-68. <BB #1239>

²⁵⁰ “Reprinted in Adams’s Antithetical Essays in Literary Criticism and Liberal Education (1990), 184-98, <BBS 330>, and revised in his Blake’s Margins: An Interpretive Study of the Annotations (2009), 109-38, (WBHC 2003).

An early reading of the print, showing that Blake based his design on Vincent Scamozzi's Proportional Figure in his Idea dell' Architettura Universale (1615) and contrasting Blake's and Reynolds's theory of copying.

Chayes, Irene H. “Between Reynolds and Blake: Eclecticism and Expression in Fuseli's Shakespeare Frescoes.” Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 85.2 (1982): 140-68. <BBS 428>

While focused primarily on Henry Fuseli and his use of “eclecticism” and “expression” (terms he used in his Lectures on Painting), also considers Fuseli's relationship to Reynolds and Fuseli's influence on Blake.

Eaves, Morris. “National Arts and Disruptive Technologies in Blake's Prospectus of 1793.” Blake, Nation and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 119-35. <WBHC 1866-69>

Compares Blake's 1793 Prospectus with the pronouncements of Joshua Reynolds on the foundation of the Royal Academy and John Boydell on the Shakespeare project.

Gourlay, Alexander S., and John E. Grant. “The Melancholy Shepherdess in Prospect of Love and Death in Reynolds and Blake.” Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 85.2 (1982): 169-89. <BBS 428>

Suggests that the depiction of Thel on Thel's titlepage was influenced by Reynold's portrait of Anne Dashwood as a shepherdess and that both artists were working in the tradition of Et in Arcadia Ego in which pastoral figures contemplate death.

Hipple, Walter. “General and Particular in the Discourses of Sir Joshua Reynolds.” Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 11.3 (1953): 231-47. <BB #A1849>

On Reynolds, with slight mention of Blake, arguing that “The primary and ubiquitous principle in Reynolds' aesthetic system is the contrariety of universal and particular” (234).

Hopkins, David. “The General and the Particular: Paradox and the Play of Contraries in the Criticism of Pope, Johnson, and Reynolds.” A Clubbable Man: Essays on Eighteenth-Century Literature and Culture in Honor of Greg Clingham. Ed. Anthony W. Lee. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2022. 22-38. <Blake (2023)>

“But what Blake saw as mere contradiction [in Reynolds's Discourses] might be more usefully considered as an acknowledgement by Reynolds and his contemporaries of the inevitably ambiguous potential of most critical terms and statements” (25).

Miner, Paul. “Blake's Word-Play and Sir Joshua.” Notes and Queries 64.1 (March 2017): 29-33. <Blake (2018)>

On the wordplay in Blake's annotations.

Postle, Martin. “‘sir Joshua and his Gang’: Blake, Reynolds and the Royal Academy.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 111-22. <WBHC 2190-91>

A detailed discussion on Blake and Reynolds, including Blake's time as a student at the Royal Academy, Reynolds's Discourses, and Blake's annotations to it.

Postle, Martin. Sir Joshua Reynolds: The Subject Pictures. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1995.

A major study: “In this book, the subject pictures are shown as playing a vital role in shaping attitudes to high art during the major transitions in British culture of late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries” (abstract). Slight mention of Blake, including positioning Blake’s annotations to Reynolds’s Discourses in relationship to their editor, Edmund Malone.

Uphaus, Robert W. “The Ideology of Reynolds’ Discourses on Art.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 12 (1978): 59-73. <BBS 59-73>

Examines Reynolds’s Discourses in relationship to Burke and Blake.

Yates, Frances A. “Transformations of Dante’s Ugolino.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 14.1-2 (1951): 92-117.²⁵¹

A useful survey of eighteenth-century and early nineteenth-century depictions of Ugolino, including those by Reynolds, Fuseli, Blake, and John Flaxman.

Reynolds without Blake

Duffy, Michael H. “Michaelangelo and the Sublime in Romantic Art Criticism.” Journal of the History of Ideas 56.2 (1995): 217-38.

Highlights Reynolds’s Discourses and Fuseli’s Lectures.

Esposito, Donato. “Artist in Residence: Joshua Reynolds at No 47, Leicester Fields.” The Georgian London Town House: Building, Collecting and Display. Ed. Susanna Avery-Quash and Kate Retford. New York: Bloomsbury Publishing, 2019. 191-210. <Blake (2020)>

A description of his residence including its studio and exhibition spaces.

Fay, Jessica. “Sketching and the Acquisition of Taste: Wordsworth, Reynolds, and Sir George Beaumont.” Review of English Studies 69 (Sept. 2018): 706-24. <Blake (2019)>

“Using evidence from the unpublished correspondence of Sir George Beaumont, this essay establishes that the patronage, friendship, and eventual collaboration between Beaumont and William Wordsworth were rooted in a shared appreciation for the moral and aesthetic principles articulated in Sir Joshua Reynolds’s Discourses on Art” (abstract).

Folesani, Giovanna Perini. “Sir Joshua Reynolds in Rome, 1750–1752: The Debut of an Artist, an Art Collector or an Art Dealer?” The Art Market in Rome in the Eighteenth Century: A Study in the Social History of Art. Ed. Paolo Coen. Leiden: Brill, 2019. 131-45. <Blake (2020)>

“I still do not believe that [Reynolds] was engaged in a systematic activity of trade and possibly forgery of graphic works, although this was more financially viable, but also somehow trickier than the trade in paintings. I rather believe that on occasions he may have earned some money this way as well” (144).

²⁵¹ Not recorded in BB.

Germann, Jennifer. “Other Women Were Present': Seeing Black Women in Georgian London.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 54.3 (2021): 535-53. <Blake (2022)>

Considers the representation in visual art of Black women, including Dido Elizabeth Davinier (c. 1760-1804), Elizabeth Sancho (1766–1837), and Jane Harry Thresher (c. 1758–84), with a substantial focus on Joshua Reynolds and slight mention of Joseph Nollekens.

Hallett, Mark. “The Academy Quartet: Joshua Reynolds in 1769.” Living with the Royal Academy: Artistic Ideals and Experiences in England, 1768-1848. Ed. Sarah Monks, John Barrell, and Mark Hallett. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2013. 25-52.

Hilles, Frederick Whiley. The Literary Career of Sir Joshua Reynolds. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1936. Rpt. Archon Books, 1967.

Though dated, a still important account of Reynolds' writing, including the Discourses.

Hunter, Matthew C. “The Cunning of Sir Sloshua: Reynolds, the Sea, and Risk.” Grey Room 69 (fall 2017): 80-107. <Blake (2019)>

Hunter, Matthew C. Painting with Fire: Sir Joshua Reynolds, Photography, and the Temporally Evolving Chemical Object. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

Ibata, Hélène. “Reynolds, the Great Style and the Burkean Sublime.” The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke's “Philosophical Enquiry” to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 85-108. <Blake (2020)>

McPherson, Heather. “Tragic Pallor and Siddons.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 48.4 (summer 2015): 479-502. <Blake (2019)>

Includes a discussion of Siddons's portrait by Reynolds and his effort representing her skin's pallor.

O’Quinn, Daniel. “Sir Joshua Reynolds, Decolonization, and the Pictorial Dialectics of Crisis.” Studies in English Literature 1500–1900 58.3 (summer 2018): 673-701. <Blake (2019)>

“This article argues that Sir Joshua Reynolds's martial portraiture from the closing year of the American War of Independence constitutes not only a complex diagnostic of cultural humiliation and social decay, but also an intrepid attempt to clear the ground for the emergence of representational paradigms suitable to the post- American era” (abstract).

Wood, Gillen D’Arcy. “Prints and Exhibitions.” The Shock of the Real: Romanticism and Visual Culture, 1760-1860. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2001. 67-97.

Mostly on the Reynolds's reliance on prints.

Royal Academy and Other Artistic Institutions (The Free Society of Artists, The Society of Artists of Great Britain, and The Society of Arts)

Bennett, Susan, ed. Cultivating the Human Faculties: James Barry \(1741-1806\) and the Society of Arts. Bethlehem, PA: Lehigh University Press, 2008. <WBHC 2933-36>

A collection of essays on Barry and the Society of Arts.

Dörrbecker, D.W. "Innovative Reproduction: Painters and Engravers at the Royal Academy of Arts." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 125-46. <WBHC 1869-71>

An important consideration of the denigration of engravers as copyists by the Royal Academy and their exclusion from the body until 1928. Highlights the views of Joshua Reynolds, Robert Strange, and John Landseer in particular.

Graves, Algernon. The Society of Artists of Great Britain, 1760-1791. The Free Society of Artists, 1761-1783. A Complete Dictionary of Contributors and their Work from the Foundation of the Societies to 1791. London: George Bell and Sons, 1907.

A still useful list of artists and works.

Hallett, Mark. "Reading the Walls: Pictorial Dialogue at the Eighteenth-Century Royal Academy." Eighteenth-Century Studies 37.4 (2004): 581-604.

Explores how paintings, "being placed in aesthetic and narrative dialogue with each other and gaining fresh meanings through their juxtaposition on the Great Room's walls" (582).

Hallet, Mark, Sarah Victoria Turner, and Jessica Feather, eds. The Royal Academy Summer Exhibition: A Chronicle, 1769–2018. Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2018.

A digital compilation of the Royal Academy catalogues, with essays and images. Blake exhibited in 1780, 1784, 1785, 1799, 1800, and 1808. His portrait by Thomas Phillips was exhibited in 1807. Blake is also mentioned substantially in catalogues from 1947, 1974, and 1988.

Harding, Robert. "The Library of the Royal Academy of Arts, London: Selected Treasures—Part I." British Art Journal 19.1 (2018): 29-34.

A descriptive bibliography of items that include John Boydell's A Collection of Prints Engraved After the Most capital Paintings in England (2 vols., 1769-72) and John Flaxman's Anatomical Studies of the Bones and Muscles (1833).

Harding, Robert. "The Library of the Royal Academy of Arts, London: Selected Treasures—Part II." British Art Journal 19.2 (2018): 20-25.

Includes references to William Roscoe, William Upcott, and Ozias Humphrey.

Hoock, Holger. The King's Artists. The Royal Academy of Art and the Politics of British Culture 1760-1840. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003.

A study of the Royal Academy in its political and cultural context—"from the Academy core activities and its relations with other art institutions to its wider politico-cultural agenda and its interaction with various wider constituencies and with political institutions" (11).

Hudson, Derek, and Kenneth Luckhurst. The Royal Society of Arts 1754-1954. London: John Murray, 1954.

Hutchison, Sidney C. The History of the Royal Academy 1768-1986. 2nd ed. London: Robert Royce Ltd., 1986.

The first eight chapters are widely relevant to Blake and members of his circle.

Monks, Sarah, John Barrell, and Mark Hallett, ed. Living with the Royal Academy: Artistic Ideals and Experiences in England, 1768-1848. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2013. New York: Routledge, 2017.

A collection highlighting the relationship of artists to the Royal Academy.

Monks, Sarah. "Introduction: Life Study: Living with the Royal Academy, 1768-1848." 1-24.

Hallett, Mark. "The Academy Quartet: Joshua Reynolds in 1769." 25-52.

Monks, Sarah. "'Un peu Gascon': Dominic Serres and the Spectre of Alienation." 53-74.

McCalman, Iain. "Conquering Academy and Marketplace: Philippe de Loutherbourg's Channel Crossing." 75-88.

Bonehill, John. "'The eye of delicacy': Joseph Wright of Derby Reviewed." 89-110.

Dias, Rosie. "Venetian Secrets: Benjamin West and the Contexts of Colour at the Royal Academy." 111-30.

Barrell, John. "Thomas Banks and the Society for Constitutional Information." 131-52. On Banks's radicalism, arguing that he was more radical than James Barry.

Birmingham, Ann. "Apocalypse at the Academy: Death on the Pale Horse and the Revelation of Benjamin West." 153-70.

Myrone, Martin. "William Etty: 'a child of the Royal Academy.'" 171-94.

Edwards, Jason "By Abstraction Springs Forth Ideal Beauty?: The 'Real Academy' and John Gibson's Anglo-Roman Modernity." 195-220. On Gibson's career, his critical neglect, and the contemporary resurgence of interest in him.

Myrone, Martin. Making the Modern Artist: Culture, Class and Art-Educational Opportunity in Romantic Britain. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2020.

A key study of the Royal Academy students. Myrone focused on Blake as a student in his "William Blake as a Student of the Royal Academy: A Prosopographical Perspective."

Pears, Iain. The Discovery of Painting: The Growth of Interest in the Arts in England, 1680-1768. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1988.

On the period before the founding of the Royal Academy; includes discussions of the Free Society of Arts and the Society of Artists.

Postle, Martin. "The Royal Academy at Somerset House: The Early Years." The British Art Journal 2.2 (winter 2000-01): 29-35.

On roughly the first decade of the Somerset House, focusing especially on exhibition space.

Price, Dorothy, et al. Entangled Pasts, 1768-Now: Art, Colonialism and Change. London: Royal Academy of Arts, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Royal Academy of Arts, London, from 3 Feb. to 28 Apr. 2024. An exhibition on the legacies of racism and colonialism on the Royal Academy. It includes works by Joshua Reynolds, Thomas Stothard, Thomas Banks, Benjamin West, and William Wollett, and portraits of Olaudah Equiano and Ignatius Sancho. There are very slight references to Blake and Richard Cosway. Especially relevant chapters include:

Esther, Chadwick. “‘All Beautiful in Woe’: The Royal Academy and Enslavement, 1768-1840.” 18-27.

Gilroy-War, Cora. “Repairing the Sable Venus.” 28-37. Partly on Thomas Stothard.

Solkin, David H., ed. Art on the Line: The Royal Academy at Somerset House, 1780–1836. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2001.

An important collection of essays on the Royal Academy, with descriptions of the exhibition space Somerset House and the practices of the Royal Academy, including its exclusion of engravers. Produced in connection with the exhibition at Courtauld Institute Gallery held from 18 Oct. 2001 to 20 Jan. 2002.

Stephens, Richard. “The Minute Books of the Royal Academy Under Sir Joshua Reynolds, 1768-92.” Volume of the Walpole Society 81 (2019): 1-454.

Detailed transcriptions of the Royal Academy’s Minute Books, with references to many members of Blake’s circle who were involved with the Royal Academy.

Zimmerman, Sarah. “Taken by Storm: Multisensory Learning in the Lecture Room.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 255-71. <Blake (2024)>

On the spaces of the public lecture, referencing the Royal Academy and other institutions.

Strange, Robert (1721-1792), engraver

Dennistoun, James. Memoirs of Sir Robert Strange, Knt., Engraver. London: Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, 1855. (Vol. 1 Vol. 2.)

Hopkinson, Martin. “Sir Robert Strange.” Print Quarterly 25.4 (2008): 408-23.

On Strange in newspaper announcements and advertisements.

Woolett, William (1735-1785), engraver (See also the Notebook and “A Public Address”)

Fagan, Louis. A Catalogue Raisonné of the Engraved Works of William Woolett. London: London Fine Art Society, Limited, 1885.

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth century and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake Printmaker. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980.
<BBS 465, WBHC 2001-02>

A very important study of Blake's career as a printmaker, which traces his training and his work in various forms of printing (intaglio, relief, etc.).

Essick's account of Blake's method of illuminated printing has been superseded on several points by Visconti's Blake and the Idea of the Book. See also Mei-Ying Sung's William Blake and the Art of Engraving for a detailed consideration of Blake's practices as a commercial engraver.

Visconti, Joseph. "William Blake, Illuminated Books, and the Concept of Difference." Essays on Romanticism. Ed. Karl Kroeber and Gene Ruoff. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, 1993. 63-87. <WBHC 2812>

An important article on understanding how the differences among copies of the illuminated books were produced and what the differences can mean and not mean, with an articulation of Blake's arguments against Woollett and Bartolozzi regarding engraving.

Useful Contextual Studies Not on Blake

Carlson, Julia S. "Historical Poetics, Poetics of History: Priestley's Time Charts and the Visualization of Meter." Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 1-33. <Blake (2022)>

Argues that Joseph Priestley's innovative use of charts "facilitated a new way of representing time in poetry and scanning it on the page" (13).

Coltman, Vicci. Fabricating the Antique: Neoclassicalism in Britain, 1760-1800. Chicago: Chicago University Press, 2006.

"Fabricating the Antique deals [...] with the packaging and repackaging of the material culture of the ancients; how ancient culture came to be isolated and dislocated from its original contexts in Italy for the purposes of possession and exhibition by a British audience" (15).

Germann, Jennifer. "'Other Women Were Present': Seeing Black Women in Georgian London." Eighteenth-Century Studies 54.3 (2021): 535-53. <Blake (2022)>

Considers the representation in visual art of Black women, including Dido Elizabeth Davinier (c. 1760/1-1804), Elizabeth Sancho (1766–1837), and Jane Harry Thresher (c. 1758–84), with a substantial focus on Joshua Reynolds and slight mention of Joseph Nollekens.

Roach, Catherine. "'The Higher Branches': Genre and Race on Display at the British Institution, London, 1806." Art History 44.2 (2021): 312-40. <Blake (2022)>

An important article that digitally reconstructs the 1806 exhibition of the British Institution for Promoting the Fine Arts to examine its arguments regarding race and "the ranking of various peoples from throughout the British Imperial sphere" (313).

Robinson, Terry F., and John Savarese. “Introduction: Romanticism and Vision.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 451-60. <Blake (2023)>

The introduction to their special issue, “Romanticism and Vision”: “The essays in this issue catch sight of that variety [of scholarship on Romanticism and vision] through their focus on acts of looking; on the production of visual art; on the imaginative landscapes pictured in maps and panoramas; on the affective impact of spectatorship; and on the visuality of race” (455).

Rovee, Christopher. Imagining the Gallery: The Social Body of British Romanticism. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 2006.

The study “approaches portraiture for its symbolic and social valences, instead of what is signified in a given portrait” (8). Passing reference to Blake in the introduction in relationship to Reynolds.

Nineteenth-Century Artists (1800-1899)

General

Trodd, Colin. “Emanations and Negations of Blake in Victorian Art Criticism.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 39-57. <WBHC 2862-63>

On the Victorian reception of Blake’s art (not on Blake’s concepts of “emanations” and “negations”).

Trodd, Colin. Visions of Blake: William Blake in the Art World, 1830-1930. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2782>

A very substantial examination of Blake’s reception as an artist in the century after his death.

Bewick, Thomas (1753-1828)

Chadwick, Esther. “Bewick’s ‘Little Whimsies’: Printmaking, Paper Money and Currency Radicalism in Early Nineteenth-Century Britain.” Art History 41.1 (2018): 42-71.²⁵²

Cleaver, James. “William Blake and Thomas Bewick.” A History of Graphic Arts. New York: Philosophical Library, 1963. London, 1963. Rpt. New York: Greenwood Press, Publishers, 1969. Rpt. 1977? <BB #1401>

“Throughout the history of graphic art there can hardly be two men so dissimilar as William Blake and Thomas Bewick” (95).

Pedley, Colin. “Blake’s Tiger and the Discourse of Natural History.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.1 (summer 1990): 238-46. ²⁵³ <BBS 406>

²⁵² Incorporated in Chadwick’s Radical Print: Art and Politics in Late Eighteenth-Century Britain (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2024), <Blake (2025)>.

²⁵³ As BBS points out (406n1), the pagination for Blake should have started anew with this issue. “[Correction to Pagination]” in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990), 75, offers the correct pagination, but as the both the html and the pdf version retained the erroneous pagination, I have retained the erroneous pagination here.

On late eighteenth-century references to tigers in newspapers and in works of natural history, including Thomas Bewick's engraving for the General History of Quadrupeds (1790).

Brown, Ford Maddox (1821-93)

Trodd, Colin. "Ford Maddox Brown and the William Blake Brotherhood." Visual Culture in Britain 15.3 (2014): 277-98. <WBHC 2781>

On Blake's, and particularly Gilchrist's Blake's, influence on Brown.

Copley, John Singleton (1738-1815)

Behrendt, Stephen C. "A Possible Corollary Source for The Gates of Paradise 10." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.3 (winter 1994-95): 92-94. <WBHC 1655>

Suggests that the design of the drowning figure is similar to John Singleton Copley's "Watson and the Shark" (1778).

Farington, Joseph (1747-1821)

Farington, Joseph. The Diary of Joseph Farington [1793-1820]. Ed. Kenneth Garlick and Angus Macintyre [Vol. I-VI] or Kathryne Cave [Vol. VII-XVI]. (New Haven and London: Published for the Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art by Yale University Press, 1978 [Vol. I-II], 1979 [Vol. III-VI], 1982 [Vol. VII-X], 1983 [Vol. XI-XII], 1984 [Vol. XIII-XVI], 1999 [Index by Evelyn Newby]). <WBHC 2012-13>

Farington's diary is a rich source of information about art, artists, and Romantic-era Britain in general. References to Blake are dated 19 Feb. and 24 Jun. 1796, 12 Jan. 1797, and 30 Nov. 1805. As Bentley writes, "The thousand-page index is extraordinarily detailed and useful about art and many other matters such as Food, Illness, Travel, and Inns" (WBHC 2013).

The 8 vol. James Greig edition (1922-28) <BB #1592> is often inaccurate. "The manuscript of the diary is now in the Royal Library at Windsor Castle; a typescript of the entire diary has been deposited in the British Museum; and the EP Group of Companies [formerly Micro Method] has produced a microfilm of the manuscript" (BB #1592).

Goya, Francisco (1746-1828)

Broeke, Isabelle van den. "Visual Anti-Tales: The Phantasmagoric Prints of Francisco Goya and William Blake." Anti-Tales: The Uses of Disenchantment. Ed. Catriona McAra and David Calvin. Newcastle upon Tyne: Cambridge Scholars, 2011. 142-51. <WBHC 1788>

Gillray, James (1756-1815)

Behrendt, Stephen C. "Europe 6: Plundering the Treasury." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.3 (winter 1987-88): 85-94. <BBS 401>

Connects Blake's images of famine and cannibalism with those of James Gillray.

Bogen, Nancy. "Blake's Debt to Gillray." American Notes and Queries 6 (1967): 35-38. <BB #1247>

"Some more associations between Europe pl. 4 and Fox and Burke" (BB #1247). See Erdman's "William Blake's Debt to James Gillray."

Butler, Marilyn. "Art for the People in the Revolutionary Decade: Blake, Gillray and Wordsworth." Romantic Rebels and Reactionaries: English Literature and Its Background 1760-1830. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1981. 39-68. <BBS 430>

Mostly on Marriage, 41-53.

Chadwick, Esther. The Radical Print. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

"Across five chapters, this book brings printmakers James Barry, John Hamilton Mortimer, James Gillray, Thomas Bewick, and William Blake together as artists of the 'Paper Age' for the first time. From Barry's experiments in aquatint at the time of the American Revolution to Blake's visionary engravings of the post-Napoleonic period, Chadwick shows how the print medium provided artists with special purchase on the major political issues of their age" (Publisher's description).

Erdman, David V. "William Blake's Debt to James Gillray." Art Quarterly 12.2 (1949): 165-70. <BB #1576>

Shows the influence of Gillray's visual satires on Europe (the two pages of "The Preludium"), "I Want! I Want!" from The Gates of Paradise, and Orc in America.

McCreery, Cindy. "Sentiment, Motherhood and the Sea in Gillray and Blake." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 148-58. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Compares Blake's Little Tom the Sailor to James Gillray's The Nancy Packet for their depictions of "sentiment, motherhood and the sea" (156).

Monteyne, Joseph. Media Critique in the Age of Gillray: Scratches, Scraps, and Spectres. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

Considers how satire reflects anxieties over traditional concepts of subjective agency spurred by new reproductive print technologies, with a chapter devoted to The [First] Book of Urizen and its negation of the page and the book.

Myrone, Martin. "Fuseli to Frankenstein: The Visual Arts in the Context of the Gothic." Gothic Nightmares: Fuseli, Blake and the Romantic Imagination. London: Tate Publishing, 2006. 31-40. <WBHC 1329-32>

Considers Fuseli, Blake, and James Gillray in relationship to the Gothic: "what brings the perverse, strange and supernatural art of Fuseli, Blake, and Gillray and their contemporaries into meaningful association with the Gothic in literature is also that they share the same range of new strategic possibilities regarding audiences, marketing and the power of sensation" (35).

Warner, Nicholas. "Visual Analogues to Blake's "The Dog"." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.3 (winter 1984-85): 140-43. <BBS 397>

Offers parallels between the design of "The Dog" and emblem 41 from Sambucus' Emblemata, (Antwerp, 1564), which was reprinted in Geffrey Whitney's A Choice of Emblemes (Leynden, 1586), and James Gillray's "The Republican Rattle-Snake Fascinating the Bedford Squirrel" (1795).

Holst, Theodor von (1810-44)

Browne, Max. "A Blake Source for von Holst." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.3 (winter 1995-96): 78-81. <WBHC 1660>

Documents newly discovered sketches by Holst based on designs found in Jerusalem.

Mckay, Charles. Through the Long Day, or Memorials of a Literary Life during Half a Century. 2 vols. London, 1887. <BB #2171>

"Theodore von Holst (1810-1844) 'often suggested to my mind, as I looked upon him, what his erratic predecessor, Blake, must have appeared in the eyes of his contemporaries, when the semi- or demi-semi fits of his highly poetical lunacy were upon him' (I.389)" (BB #2171).

Kauffman, Angelica [Angelika Kauffmann] (1741–1807) (See Angelica Kauffman in Members of Blake's Circle)

Landseer, John (1761 or 1769-1852)

Brylowe, Thora. Romantic Art in Practice: Cultural Work and the Sister Arts, 1760–1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

An important study of the Sister Arts in the Romantic era. It includes discussions of Blake and Antiquarianism, the Portland Vase (including Blake's engravings), the Hunts, John Landseer, and the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.

Dörrbecker, D.W. "Innovative Reproduction: Painters and Engravers at the Royal Academy of Arts." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 125-46. <WBHC 1869-71>

An important consideration of the denigration of engravers as copyists by the Royal Academy and their exclusion from the body until 1928. Highlights the views of Joshua Reynolds, Robert Strange, and John Landseer in particular.

Eaves, Morris. The Counter-Arts Conspiracy: Art and Industry in the Age of Blake. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1992. <WBHC 1972-74>

An illuminating study that positions Blake within several artistic traditions and controversies, including the development of the English School of Art between the seventeenth and nineteenth century and the aesthetic issues created by new technologies of mechanical reproduction.

Gage, John. "An Early Exhibition and the Politics of British Printmaking." Print Quarterly 6.2 (1989): 123-39.²⁵⁴

A useful article in sketching out the relationship of engravers to the Royal Academy, Landseer's efforts to gain entry to the RA, the formation of the Chalcographic Society and its activities, arguments over stipple and line engraving, and the responses of William Sharp and Blake.

²⁵⁴ Not recorded in BBS.

Lawrence, Thomas (1769-1830)

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake and Sir Thomas Lawrence.” Notes and Queries 25 (1978): 211-13. <BBS 465>

Notes the discovery of an 1830 letter in which the painter William Etty reports that Lawrence had sent Blake £100.

Linton, William James (1812-97)

Primary

Linton, W.J. [Blake's proofs, photos, tracings]. Beinecke Library, Yale University.

“A scrapbook with both printed and ms. ills. by William Blake, some accompanied by poems.” Call no. 2003 +189.

Linton, W.J. Threescore and Ten Years 1820 to 1890. London: Lawrence and Bullen, 1894. <BBS 552>

Offers an anecdote about visiting John Linnell with Alexander Gilchrist when working on the illustrations for the Life of Blake (pp.181-82).

“W.J. Linton, ‘Death’s Door,’ The Ladies’ Drawing Room Book (N.Y. [1852]) and Anon., ‘Death and Immortality,’ Illustrated Exhibitor and Magazine of Art, I (12 June 1852), 369-71, signed on the threshold with a WJL monogram, design-size of each 13.7 x 21.9 cm; the old man moves to the right” (WBHC 744).

“W.J. Linton, Thirty Pictures by Deceased British Artists (1860) (design-size 12.05 x 20.8 cm), reprinted in John Jackson, A Treatise on Wood Engraving, Second Edition (1861) (design-size 12.05 x 20.8 cm) and in the New Edition [?1881]. The old man faces left. This version is different from that printed in 1852” (WBHC 1860).

Secondary

Butlin, Martin. “A Rare Group of Early Twentieth-Century Watercolors by a Follower of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.3 (winter 1995-96): 76-77. <WBHC 1660>

“A further link [of the painter Henry John Stock] with William Blake, and perhaps at least a partial explanation for this paradoxical illustration of Blakean subjects in totally un-Blakean style, was the commissioner of these watercolors, Francis P. Osmaston (1857-1925),” who “owned a number of works by Blake” (70).

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 2005.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 178-79. <WBHC 1705>

Discusses and reproduces William James Linton’s wood-engraved title page for Bryant’s Thanatopsis (New York and Boston: H.M. Caldwell Co, n.d.), which is modelled on Blake’s unique separate plate, Deaths Door.

Gleckner, Robert F. “W.J. Linton, a Latter-day Blake.” Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 85.2 (1982) 208-27. <BBS 428>

An overview of Linton's career with an emphasis on Linton's place in Blake's nineteenth-century reception.

Jackson, John [& William A. Chatto.] A Treatise on Wood Engraving, Historical and Practical. London: Charles Knight and Co., 1839. 715-17. 2nd ed. with a New Chapter on the Artists of the Present Day by Henry G. Bohn. London: Henry G. Bohn, 1861.²⁵⁵ <BB #1932, BBS 523-24, WBHC 745, 1837>

A near-contemporary account of Blake's method of relief engraving that is authored "apparently by Jackson" (BBS 523-24). Phillips explicates this account in detail in his essay, "The Printing of Blake's America a Prophecy." It refers to a version of Thel with "seven quarto pages" (715n), which Bentley identifies with copy E (WBHC 176).

The 2nd edition of 1851 uses "W.J. Linton's plate of 'Death's Door' which first appeared in his Thirty Pictures by Deceased British Artists (1860)," either as the edition's "frontispiece or 'at p. 632' (591)" (BBS 523).

Kitton, Fred. G. "William James Linton, Engraver, Poet, and Political Writer." English Illustrated Magazine 8.91 (April 1891): 491-500. <WBHC 859>

A biographical sketch.

Visconti, Joseph. "Blake after Blake: A Nation Discovers Genius." Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 214-50. <WBHC 1866-69>

An important description of the production of Gilchrist's Life that considers how Blake's reception before 1863 shaped the book and how the illustrations for the book were produced by W.J. Linton.

Martin, John (1789-1854)

Gedge, Samuel. Catalogue XX. Norwich, England, 2015. <WBHC 1424>

Contains a 12 Feb. 1830 letter from John Martin to Bernard Barton, mentioning reading Cunningham's The Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters, Sculptors and Architects and offering his opinion of Blake, including the Night Thoughts engravings. Not in BR.

Merchant, W. Moelwyn. "The Romantics." Shakespeare and the Artist. London, New York, and Toronto: Oxford University Press, 1959. 77-94. <BB #2215>

Discusses Blake's Shakespeare illustrations on pp. 81-86, with the chapter also addressing other Romantic illustrations of Shakespeare, including those by Fuseli and John Martin. The previous chapter is on the Boydell Shakespeare project.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake." The Apocalyptic Sublime. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1986. 71-100. <BBS 598>

Considers Blake's visual depictions of apocalyptic imagery, including the early paintings, War unchained by an Angel, Pestilence, and A Breach in the City; Europe; the Night

²⁵⁵ The "1851 edition" listed by Hathi Trust (as being held by the University of California Library and digitized by Google) is actually the 1861 edition.

Thought designs; and the paintings of Revelation in the Bible watercolors. (The wider book details well how other artists of Blake's era, e.g., Benjamin West, Philippe Jacques de Loutherbourg, J.M.W. Turner, and John Martin, depicted similar subjects. It also discusses millenarian figures like Thomas Spence, John Wright, William Bryan, and William Sharp.)

Treadwell, James, “Blake, John Martin, and the Illustration of Paradise Lost.” Word & Image 9 (1993): 363-82. <WBHC 2780>

Without performing “a full reading of Blake’s twelve watercolours and Martin’s twenty-four mezzotints[,]” [m]y initial aim is to use these two sets of Paradise Lost illustrations to question and complicate some commonplace assumptions about the translation of text into image” (abstract), with references to the Sister Arts.

Vine, Steve. “William Blake’s Materialities.” Reinventing the Sublime: Post-Romantic Literature and Theory. Brighton, Chicago, Toronto: Sussex Academic Press, 2013.²⁵⁶ 22-38. <WBHC 2804>

Positions Blake’s notion of the sublime, with references to John Martin, Burke, and Kant. Mostly references A Descriptive Catalogue and Jerusalem. “Each book—and perhaps even each plate, each mark, each printing—has the character of a ‘minute articulation’ or ‘minute particular’ whose very singularity, for Blake, is sublime” (38).

Rowlandson, Thomas \(1756-1827\)

Paulson, Ronald. “Burke’s Sublime and the Representation of Revolution.” Culture and Politics from Puritanism to the Enlightenment. Ed. Perez Zagorin. Berkeley, Los Angeles, London: University of California Press, 1980. 241-70. <WBHC 2509>

On Blake’s depiction of revolution in America largely in relationship to Burke and Rowlandson.

Runge, Otto \(1777-1810\)

Bindman, David, and Esther Chadwick, eds. William Blake’s Universe. London: Philip Wilson, 2024. Also published in German as William Blakes Universum. Berlin : Hatje Cantz Verlag, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

The English and German versions of the catalogue for the exhibition held at the Fitzwilliam Museum from 23 Feb. to 19 May 2024 and at the Hamburger Kunsthalle from 14 June to 8 Sept. 2024. The exhibition and catalogue highlight Blake in a European and, especially, German context, pairing Blake’s works with those of the German artist, Otto Runge (1777-1810). There are also significant discussions of John Flaxman, Henry Fuseli, Dante, Henry Crabb Robinson, Jacob Boehme, and Dionysius Andreas Freher. The German exhibition also included gratis a graphic novel, William Blake Universum, by Noëlle Kröger.

Schiavonetti, Luigi \(1765-1810\) \(See also Robert Blair, The Grave\)
ODNB, Vivienne W. Painting.

²⁵⁶ Incorporates Vine’s “Blake’s Material Sublime,” Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (2002), 237-58, <WBHC 2713-15, 2803>.

Alexander, David, ed. Affecting Moments: Prints of English Literature Made in the Age of Romantic Sensibility 1775-1800. York: University of York, 1993. <WBHC 2930-31>

The catalogue for the exhibition held in 1993 at the University of York. The catalogue contains prints “from David Alexander’s collection” (WBHC 2931), and includes engravings by Francesco Bartolozzi, James Parker, William Wynne Ryland, Louis Schiavonetti, Robert Thew, and Caroline Watson.

Apesos, Anthony. “Visionary Anatomy: Blake’s Bodies.” Romantik: Journal for the Study of Romanticisms 10 (2021): 57-82. <Blake (2023)>

“I will explore the origin and significance of Blake’s divergence from anatomical correctness” (abstract). Also references William Hunter, Joshua Reynolds, and Luigi Schiavonetti.

Scott, William Bell (1811-1890)

Primary

Minto, William, ed. Autobiographical Notes of the Life of William Bell Scott. 2 vols. London: James R. Osgood, 1892.

Contains references to Blake.

Secondary

Allentuck, Marcia. “William Blake and William Bell Scott: Unpublished References to Blake’s Late Nineteenth-Century Reputation.” Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 55-56. <BB #1218.32>

A few references to Blake in Scott’s letters.

Bindman, David. “An Unpublished Pencil Drawing of the Lambeth Period.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.2 (autumn 1970): 38-40. <BB #1217.63>

Documents the sale and purchase (by Bindman himself) of “The Dead Bad-Doers” (Butlin #232), which “been sold with the William Bell Scott collection under the same title in 1892” (38). It is on the recto on a sketch for the title page of The Song of Los.

Goyder, George. “An Unpublished Poem about Blake by William Bell Scott.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 125. <BBS 381>

A poem by Scott in the copy of The Grave that once belonged to William Bell Scott’s father, Robert Scott.

Greenberg, Mark L. “William Michael Rossetti’s Transcription and William Bell Scott’s Tracings from Blake’s Notebook.” The Library 6 (1984): 254-70. <BBS 495>

“A catalogue and analysis of their contents” (BBS 495).

Turner, J.M.W. (1775-1851)

Banta, Martha. “Adonais and the Angel: Light, Color, and the Occult Sublime.” Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 113-20. <BBS 360>

“Turner and Shelley (with Blake as their foil) are the leading human figures of this paper, but the conceptions and visualizations of the sun form its true center” (113).

Butlin, Martin. “The Very William Blake of Living Landscape Painters!” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.1 (summer 1976): 33-34. <BBS 379>

On the comparison of Blake and Turner in The Illustrated London News for 10 May 1845.

Dodgson, Campbell. Aquarelles de Turner Oeuvres de Blake; Austellung von Englischen Graphiken und Aquarellen: W. Blake und J.M.W. Turner. Paris, 1937. <BB #642, WBHC 1119>

Finley, Gerald. Angel in the Sun: Turner's Vision of History. Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1999.²⁵⁷

Some comparisons of Blake and Turner (pp. 177-79).

Franson, J. Karl. “Christ on the Pinnacle: Interpretative Illustrations of the Crisis in Paradise Regained.” Milton Quarterly 10 (1976): 48-53. <BBS 475>

“Comparison of the illustrations of Blake, J.M.W. Turner (1835), and William Harvey (1843)” (BBS 475).

Twentieth-Century Artists \(1900-1999\)

General

Antliff, Mark. “Pacifism, Realism, and Pathology: Alex Comfort, Cecil Collins, and Neo-Romantic Art during World War II.” Modernism/Modernity 27.3 (Sept. 2020): 519-49. <Blake (2021)>

Some references to the influence of Blake and Samuel Palmer on the Neo-Romantics.

Hopkins, David. “Avant-Garde Blake: From Francis Bacon to Oz Magazine.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 55-73. <Blake (2023)>

Examines “the way the artistic reception of William Blake changed in Britain between the 1950s and the early 1970s” (55).

Leveton, Jacob Henry. “William Blake and Art against Surveillance.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 140-59. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Argues that abstraction in Blake and twentieth-century artists like “Jackson Pollock, Clyfford Still, Ad Reinhardt, and Sam Francis” worked against state surveillance” (141).

Trodd, Colin. “Celebration and Censure: William Blake and Stories of Masterliness in the British Art World, 1930-59.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 91-101. <WBHC 1871-73>

“This chapter proposes that arguments over Blake’s relation to Masterliness became the rocket fuel for his take-off in art historical and curatorial discourses during the 1930s and 1940s” (92). (A good postscript to Trodd’s Visions of Blake: William Blake in the Art World 1830-1930 [2012].)

²⁵⁷ Not recorded in WBHC.

Trodd, Colin. Visions of Blake: William Blake in the Art World, 1830-1930. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2782>

A very substantial examination of Blake's reception as an artist in the century after his death.

Trodd, Colin. "William Blake and the Spiritual Forms of Citizenship and Hospitality." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 39-54. <Blake (2023)>

Examines Blake's reception in Britain between the 1910s and the 1940s, highlighting Blake's association with citizenship and ending with Blake's influence on the Neo-Romantics.

Bacon, Francis (1909-1992)

Courdert [i.e., Coudert], Pierre-Yves. "Enclosure and Expansion: Blake, Science, and the Body." Interfaces 30 (2010): 47-56. <WBHC 2190-91>

On what Blake saw wrong in the science of Newton, Locke, and Bacon, and his affinities with the twentieth-century painter, Francis Bacon (1909-1992).

Boyd, Arthur (1920-1999)

Otto, Peter. "Nebuchadnezzar's Sublime Torments: William Blake, Arthur Boyd and the East." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 260-71. <WBHC 1857-62>

Compares depictions of Nebuchadnezzar by Blake and the Australian painter, Arthur Boyd (1920-99).

Dadaism

Hopkins, David. "William Blake and British Surrealism: Humphrey Jennings, the Impact of Machines and the Case for Dada." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 305-20. <Blake (2017)>

"This article addresses an issue that has eluded focused scholarship: the reception of William Blake within the British surrealist movement from the mid-1930s onwards. A significant difference can be seen between Blake as understood by the critic Herbert Read, and Blake as conceived by the surrealist writer and film maker Humphrey Jennings" (abstract).

Dali, Salvador (1904-1989)

Hammacher, Abraham M. "The Divine Imagination." Phantoms of the Imagination: Fantasy in Art and Literature from Blake to Dali. Trans. Tony Langham and Plym Peters. New York, 1981. 29-35. <BBS 499, WBHC 2123>

Reid, Joshua. "Gender, Nature, and Desire in Dali's Paradise Lost." Global Milton and Visual Art. Ed. Angelica Duran and Mario Murgia. Lanham, Boulder, New York, and London: Lexington Books, 2021. 199-223. <Blake (2024)>

Some comparison of Dali's illustrations of Paradise Lost with Blake's.

Greenaway, Kate \(1846-1901\)

Essick, Robert N. “Blake and Kate Greenaway.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.1 (summer 2006): 44. <WBHC 1708>

On children book illustrator, Kate Greenaway, and her notebook sketch (in Essick’s collection) for a “front cover, dust jacket, or both” (44) that would have been produced for an ultimately unexecuted book illustrating Blake’s Songs.

Jugaku Bunshō \(1900-1992\)

Sato, Hikari. “Jugaku Bunsho to William Blake kenkyū: Nichijo seikatsu no shisoka (Jugaku Bunsho and His Blake Studies: A Philosopher of Everyday Life).” Choiki Bunka Kagaku Kiyo (Interdisciplinary Cultural Studies) 24 (2019): 5-37. In Japanese. 1 plate. <Blake (2020)>

Kondor, Béla \(1931-1972\)

Agnes, Peter. “The Reception of Blake in Hungary.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.3 (winter 2000-01): 68-81. <WBHC 1685>

Considers Blake’s reception in Hungary in the twentieth century, highlighting particularly the etchings of Béla Kondor (1931-72).

Meidner, Ludwig \(1884-1966\)

Erle, Sibylle. “Blake, Ludwig Meidner and Expressionism.” Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: “William Blake: The Man from the Future?” Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 335-49. <Blake (2017)>

Considers Blake’s influence on the criticism and art of the German Expressionist Ludwig Meidner (1884-1966).

Muir, William (1819-1905)²⁵⁸ (See also Studies of Facsimiles of Illuminated Books)

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. “William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England.” PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Davies, Keri. “William Muir and the Blake Press Edmonton with Muir’s letter to Kerrison Preston.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.1 (summer 1993): 14-25. <WBHC 1645>

A biographical sketch of William Muir (1845-1938), including accounts of Muir’s Blake Press at Edmonton and of the early twentieth-century Blake Society and transcriptions of Muir’s letters to the collector, Kerrison Preston.

Nettleship, John Trivett \(1841-1902\)

Paley, Morton D. “John Trivett Nettleship and his ‘Blake Drawings’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.4 (spring 1981): 185-94. <BBS 391>

On Nettleship’s Blake-like drawings.

²⁵⁸ See WBHC 495-502 for a list of all the facsimiles Muir produced and the copy he employed.

Paolozzi, Eduardo \(1924-2005\)²⁵⁹

Armstrong, Christopher and Meriel; John Beer; Colin St John Wilson; Patricia Fara. "William Blake and Paolozzi's Newton." TLS 19 Mar. 1993 p. 15; 26 Mar. 1993, p. 15; 9 Apr. 1993, p. 15. <WBHC 1594>

A controversy about the statue.

Butlin, Martin. "Paolozzi's Newton." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993): 44-45. <WBHC 1646>

On the controversies surrounding the statue outside of the British Library.

Crosby, Mark. "'The Sculptor Silent Stands before His Forming Image': Blake and Contemporary Sculpture." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 120-31. <WBHC 1871-73>

In addition to tracing Blake's influence on sculptors Alastair Noble, Helen Martins, Eduardo Paolozzi, and Antony Gormley, sketches Blake's own relationship to discourses of sculpting through John Flaxman and his vocation as an engraver, which was aligned with sculpting.

James, Nicholas Philip. "William Blake." Eduardo Paolozzi: Newton Figures. London: Cv Publications/Visual Arts Research, 2005. <WBHC 2205>.

"A recorded conversation (1990) with Paolozzi (1924-2005)" (WBHC 2205).

Wilmott, Richard; Brian Alderson; Colin A. St John Wilson; Michael Saunders. "Newton statue." Times [of London], 10 Aug. 1992, p. 11 (Wilmott and Alderson), 13 August 1993, p.11 (Wilson and Saunders). <WBHC 2870>

On the statue.

Ryusei, Kishida \(1891-1929\)

Matsushita, Tetsuya. "Mushakoji Saneatsu saku, Kishida Ryusei ga Kachi Kachi Yama to Hanasakajiji no soga ni mirareru William Blake no kansogakuteki jintaizoeki no eikyo [The Physiognomic Influence of William Blake on the Modeling of a Human Body in Kishida Ryusei's Illustrations for Mt. Kachi Kachi and an Old Man Who Made the Dead Trees Blossom Written by Mushakoji Saneatsu]." Bigaku (Aesthetics) 68.2 (2017): 148. In Japanese. <Blake (2020)>

Stock, Henry John \(1853-1930\)

Butlin, Martin. "A Rare Group of Early Twentieth-Century Watercolors by a Follower of William Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.3 (winter 1995-96): 76-77. <WBHC 1660>

"A further link [of the painter Henry John Stock] with William Blake, and perhaps at least a partial explanation for this paradoxical illustration of Blakean subjects in totally un-Blakean style, was the commissioner of these watercolors, Francis P. Osmaston (1857-1925)," who "owned a number of works by Blake" (70).

²⁵⁹ A smaller version of the Newton statue was part of the exhibition, William Blake (1757-1827): Visiones en el arte británico, held at the Caixa Forum Madrid from 2 Jul. to 21 Oct. 2012. See Michelle Ferreira's review in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.2 (2013), 12 pars.

Surrealism

Hopkins, David. "William Blake and British Surrealism: Humphrey Jennings, the Impact of Machines and the Case for Dada." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 305-20. <Blake (2017)>

"This article addresses an issue that has eluded focused scholarship: the reception of William Blake within the British surrealist movement from the mid-1930s onwards. A significant difference can be seen between Blake as understood by the critic Herbert Read, and Blake as conceived by the surrealist writer and film maker Humphrey Jennings" (abstract).

Sung, Mei-Ying. "Blake and Surrealism." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 102-19. <WBHC 1871-73>

Traces "the Surrealists' use of Blake's art, and Surrealism's oddly neglected yet long-lasting counter-impact on Blake Studies" (102).

Twenty-first-Century Artists (2000-Present)

General

Crosby, Mark. "'The Sculptor Silent Stands before His Forming Image': Blake and Contemporary Sculpture." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 120-31. <WBHC 1871-73>

In addition to tracing Blake's influence on sculptors Alastair Noble, Helen Martins, Eduardo Paolozzi, and Antony Gormley, sketches Blake's own relationship to discourses of sculpting through John Flaxman and his vocation as an engraver, which was aligned with sculpting.

Morgan, Paige. "The Hinges on the Doors of Marriage: The Body's Openness to Information in the Art of Stelarc and Blake." Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 177-92. <WBHC 1803-04>

On the Blakean work of "the Cypriot-Australian performance artist Stelarc" (178).

Becher, Lorenz (1961-)

Becher, Lorenz. "Lorenz Becher: An Artist in Berne, Switzerland." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.1 (summer 1997): 22-24. <WBHC 1669>

On his Blake-inspired paintings.

Eldridge, Aethelred (1930-2018) and Alexandra (1948-)

Primary

"[\[Aethel-Gram\].](#)" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 37.

An illustration.

"Golgonooga." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.1 (summer 1976): 4-7.

An account of the building of the Scriptorium; pictures of “[b]ronze life masks of Blake, cast by Aethelred Eldridge,” of the Church and School, of an outhouse, and of a bell; and designs for a wall [of the Scriptorium?].

"Golgonooga." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.2 (fall 1976): 47.

Another Aethel-gram: “There is only one endangered Species: Me!”

One Tooth on the Petrific Key to William Blake’s System: (‘Adam New Created in Edam’), the Work in Progress. Millfield [Ohio]: The Author, 1976. <WBHC 1980>

“Scripting a City of Art: Golgonooga.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.3 (winter 1976-77): 69-70.

On the designs of the Scriptorium by David Calahan and the other artists and craftspeople working on it, with pictures, as well as the publishing goals of Golgonooga Press.

"Golgonooga Beastiary." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 130.

An announcement of Alexandra Eldridge’s Animal Forms of Wisdom: A William Blake Bestiary: “The edition is limited to 35 copies, handbound in quarter calf and Nideggen paper. There are 25 pages, silk-screen on rag paper, illuminated and hand-colored by the author (130). Two illustrations with Blake quotations are reproduced.

"Golgonooga, Ohio." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 57.

An Aethel-gram: “A Gigantic World; pitifully, humanly scaled!”

"Golgonooga News." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.3 (winter 1982-83): 184.

Reports that “there have been eight couples married and thirteen babies baptized at Golgonooga” (184).

[“\[Reply to Morris Eaves’ Review of The Dick and Jane.\]”](#) Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.1 (summer 1988): 19. <BBS 403>

An Athel-gram-like response.

Eldridge, Aethelred. Albion Awake! Millfield, OH: Golgonooga, The Church of William Blake, 1977.

Blakean verse and visions.

Secondary

Murphy, John P. “Building Golgonooga in the Age of Aquarius.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 160-81. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Chronicles Aethelred and Alexandra Eldridge’s Church of William Blake in Golgonooga, Ohio.

Olivetti, Katherine. “Soul Mapping: A Conversation with Alexandra Eldridge.” Jung Journal 7.2 (2013): 87-104.

An interview in which “[s]he describes her time as a co-founder and long-time resident of an artistic community based on the principles of William Blake, a community that she and her husband called Golgonooza after Blake’s City of Art” (abstract).

Pajdic, Predrag. “Alexandra Eldridge Interview.” Visions West Contemporary n.d.

An interview that references Blake and the Church of Blake.

Prabhu, David. “[Ministry Continues . . ..]” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.2 (fall 1988): 74.²⁶⁰ <BBS 403>

A description of the arson of the Church of William Blake.

“Publications Received.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 68.²⁶¹

Notes receiving Peter Russell’s The Golden Chain / Lyrical Poems 1964-1969 (Venice, 1970) and Aethelred Eldridge’s The Golgonooza Organ #1, highlighting the Blakean content of both and printing Eldridge’s “Golgonooza Organ.”

Emin, Tracey (1963-)

Connolly, Tristanne. “‘Fear not / To unfold your dark visions of torment’: Blake and Emin’s Bad Sex Aesthetic.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 116-39. <WBHC 1801-03>

Explores “what kind of art does Blake see resulting [. . .] from a messy male-male relationship” (117), reading The Book of Urizen in relationship to the work of the artist Tracey Emin (b. 1963) and Jessica Benjamin’s The Bounds of Love (1988).

“Tracey Emin and William Blake in Focus.” Tate Gallery.²⁶²

A description of the exhibition, which ran from 16 Sep. 2016 to 3 Sep. 2017.

Evans, Cerith Wyn (1958-)

Whittaker, Jason. “Trannies, Amputees and Disco Queens: Blake and Contemporary Queer Art.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 87-96. <WBHC 1801-03>

Shows Blake’s influence on Queer artists Cerith Wyn Evans (b. 1958) and Joel-Peter Witkin (b. 1939).

²⁶⁰ Rpt. from News, Athens, Ohio, 6 Jun. 1988.

²⁶¹ Not recorded in BB.

²⁶² See Sibylle Earle’s review in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.3 (winter 2018-19), 13 pars, <Blake (2020)>.

Gopalkrishnan, Carl²⁶³

Gopalkrishnan, Carl. “[An Artists \[sic\] Exploration of the Mythic, Subconscious and Literary Constructions of Military Interventions in the Indo-Pacific.](#)” Critical Military Studies (2022): 5 pp. <Blake (2023)>

“I share my experience of using William Blake’s 1793 poem America a Prophecy as a lens to explore the mythic, subconscious and literary constructions of military interventions in the Indo-Pacific for my painting Australia a Prophecy” (abstract).

Paolozzi, Eduardo (1924-2005)

Butlin, Martin. “Paolozzi’s Newton.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993): 44-45. <WBHC 1646>

On the controversy over Paolozzi’s statue of Newton, now outside of the British Library, which was conducted in The Times between Aug. 1992 and Mar. 1993.

Porter, Melinda Camber (1953-2008)

Hamlyn, Robin. William Blake Illuminates the Works of Melinda Camber Porter: Lecture by Robin Hamlyn [to accompany] An Exhibition of Twenty-three Works on Paper by Melinda Camber Porter from the LUMINOUS BODIES Series. New York: Blake Press, 2006. <WBHC 2122-23>

A catalogue of Porter’s illustrations of Blake with a lecture by Robin Hamlyn: “‘What Melinda has done . . . is to really centre on what is the essence of not only Blake’s writings and his meanings in his writings but also of the way he lived his life’ (5)”²⁶⁴ (WBHC 2123).

Sendak, Maurice (1928-2012) (See also Maurice Sendak in Blake’s Collectors)

Crosby, Mark. “Sendak, Blake, and the Image of Childhood.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 182-97. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

On Sendak’s enthusiasm for Blake.

Essick, Robert N. “Introduction.” Sendak and Blake: Illustrating “Songs of Innocence.” New York: Society of Illustrators, 2018. <Blake (2019)>

An introduction to the catalogue for the exhibition of Sendak’s work at the Society of Illustrators, which was held from 23 Oct.to 3 Nov. 2018.

Flory, Wendy Stallard. “‘The diving and ducking moralities’: Sendak’s Pierre, Blake, and the Vulnerabilities of the Artist.” Melville Society Extracts 111 (1997): 7-11. <WBHC 2022>

Considers Blake’s influence on Sendak’s drawings for a 1995 illustrated edition of Melville’s Pierre.

Glykeria, Selimi. “The Deployment of Myth towards Childhood Representation in Maurice Sendak’s Where the Wild Things Are and Outside Over There.” Keimena/Texts 40 (2024). In English. Abstract in Greek and English. <Blake (2025)>

²⁶³ See also Gopalkrishnan’s essay in Vala 4 and his presentation to the Blake Society in 2023.

²⁶⁴ Bentley’s ellipses.

“Influenced by William Blake’s artistic style and his mythopoeia aiming at the interpretation of the conflicting psychological aspects of human existence, Sendak makes use of the mythic motif of the adventure journey to illustrate the challenges of the child’s course towards maturation” (abstract).

Waller, Jenifer R. “Maurice Sendak and the Blakean Vision of Childhood.” Children’s Literature 6 (1977): 130-40. <BBS 671, WBHC 2826>

Compares their vision of childhood and traces Blake’s influence on Sendak.

Witkin, Joel Peter \(1939- \)

Whittaker, Jason. “Trannies, Amputees and Disco Queens: Blake and Contemporary Queer Art.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 87-96. <WBHC 1801-03>

Shows Blake’s influence on Queer artists Cerith Wyn Evans (b. 1958) and Joel-Peter Witkin (b. 1939).

Blake's Collectors and Collections (See also Collections: Digital Collections, Collection Catalogues, Collections Guides, and Scholarship; and Major Exhibition and Sale Catalogues)²⁶⁵

General Studies

Cleaver, Laua. “George D. Smith \(1870–1920\), Bernard Alfred Quaritch \(1871–1913\), and the Trade in Medieval European Manuscripts in the United States ca. 1890–1920.” Manuscript Studies: A Journal of the Schoenberg Institute for Manuscript Studies 8.1 (2023): 61-94. <Blake (2024)>

Compares the lives of Smith and Quaritch and their role in shaping the holdings of medieval manuscripts in the Huntington, Morgan, and Walters collections. There is only one mention of Blake, though both were major Blake dealers.

Davies, Keri. Bibliotheca Splendidissima.: A Blog about Rebekah Bliss, Her Library, Her Circle, and Other Women Book Collectors. (2013, 2107).

Includes many informative posts, including a biographical list detailing female collectors of Blake and the book binders used by Bliss.

Essick, Robert N. “Collecting Blake.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2010. 19-34. <WBHC 2436-40>

Highlights important collectors of Blake, with personal anecdotes of his own experience as a collector.

Hargraves, Matthew. “America’s Blake.” William Blake: Visionary. Ed. Edina Adam. Los Angeles: J. Paul Getty Museum, 2020. 29-35. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

A survey of major American Blake collectors, from the Transcendentalists to Robert N. Essick.

Conservatorship

Rayner, Judith. “Rehousing of Print Collections at the British Museum—The William Blake Post Binder Project and Other Recent Approaches.” Paper Conservator 27 (2003): 35-45.

“[D]iscusses the considerations involved in some recent rehousing projects” that “uses a current example involving some of William Blake’s illuminated books” (summary).

Collectors Contemporary with Blake (See also Blake and Members of His Circle)²⁶⁶

General Studies

Paley, Morton D. “George Romney and Ozias Humphry as Collectors of William Blake’s Illuminated Printing.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 50.3 (winter 2016-17): 49 pars. <Blake (2017)>

²⁶⁵ The index of Butlin’s The Paintings and Drawings of William Blake (1981) represents owners of Blake’s works in bold font.

²⁶⁶ For a complete list of Blake’s contemporary patrons, see the appendix to Bentley’s William Blake in the Desolate Market (2014), 106-92. Bentley’s Sale Catalogues (2017) reproduces every documented record of a Blake sale.

“Taken together, the two artists’ purchases compose a substantial portion of Blake’s known sales of illuminated books and associated material in the period from his initial prospectus ‘To the Public’ (E 692-93), dated 10 October 1793, to 1796” (par. 1).

Viscomi, Joseph. “The Myth of the Commissioned Illuminated Book: George Romney, Isaac D’Israeli, and ‘ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY Designs . . . of Blake’s.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989): 48-74. <BBS 404>

An important article that uses the example of Isaac D’Israeli, who, Viscomi suggests, obtained his illuminated books not from Blake himself but from the collection of George Romney, to argue that the illuminated books were not produced individually on commission but in printing sessions.

Balmanno, Robert (1780-1863)

Catalogues

Mr Sotheby and Son. [Rare and Valuable Engravings, Pictures, Bronzes, &c. Catalogue of a Very Valuable Collection of Prints, Drawings, Pictures, &c. &c. The Property of a Collector \[Robert Balmanno\], Consisting of A most Select Collection of the Works of the Modern English School ever submitted for Public Sale, The Greatest Part Presentation Proofs on India Paper . . . Works of Stothard and Fuseli, Nearly complete, including a Valuable Collection of Drawings by Tho. Stothard, R.A. A Few Choice and Original Pictures, By Distinguished Artists of the Modern School, Particularly of Stothard, Fuseli . . .](#) London, 1830.²⁶⁷

Mr. Sotheby and Son. Catalogue of a Select and Elegant Library, the Property of a Collector Robert Balmanno . . . to which is added The Topographical Portions of the Library of a Gentleman. London, 1830. <BB #541>

Beckford, William (1760-1844)

Catalogue

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. The Hamilton Palace Libraries. Catalogue of The First Portion of The Beckford Library, removed from Hamilton Palace. London, 1882. <BB #577-79>

Studies

Châtel, Laurent. “‘One Must Become Half-Catholic’: William Beckford (1760-1844) as ‘Impolite and Uncommercial’ Aesthete.” Marketing Art in the British Isles, 1700 to the Present: A Cultural History. Ed. Charlotte Gould and Sophie Mesplède. Farnham, Surrey, and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2012. 195-210.

“I seek to demonstrate that Beckford’s attitudes to collection and patronage engendered an aesthetics that may be called impolite and uncommercial by the standards of late eighteenth-century Britain. I wish to chart his misgivings about trade, his refusal of worldliness, his radical isolation, and the meaning of his ‘half-Catholicism’” (197).

Châtel, Laurent. “W.B. & W.B.: ‘A Long Story’—Sublime Congruences between Gray, Beckford and Blake.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 57-74. <WBHC 2190-91>

On the Blake collector and Gothic novelist, William Beckford (1760-1844), and his possible first- or secondhand connections to Blake, with a discussion of their possible

²⁶⁷ Bentley’s Sale Catalogues erroneously gives the date of publication as 1828 instead of 1830.

intellectual and creative similarities, especially in regard to Thomas Gray. (Beckford owned the illustrations.)

Bliss, Rebekah (1747-1819)

Catalogue

Bibliotheca Splendidissima: A Catalogue of a Select Portion of The Library of Mrs. Bliss, Deceased, Removed from her Residence at Kensington. Saunders and Hodgson, April 26-29 1826. <BB #537, WBHC 984>

Studies

Davies, Keri. Bibliotheca Splendidissima.: A Blog about Rebekah Bliss, Her Library, Her Circle, and Other Women Book Collectors. (2013, 2107).

Includes many informative posts, including a biographical list detailing female collectors of Blake and the book binders used by Bliss.

Davies, Keri. "Mrs Bliss: A Blake Collector of 1794." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd, 1999. 212-30. <WBHC 1863>

A key article on one of Blake's earliest collectors that demonstrates Blake's works were sold at Joseph Johnson's bookshop. The article also details her library, references to her and her Blake collection in the correspondence of Francis Douce and Richard Twiss, her long relationship with Ann Whitaker, and the Dissenting Carey Street Chapel to which she belonged. Further developed in Davies' "Rebekah Bliss: Collector of William Blake and Oriental Books".

Davies, Keri. "Rebekah Bliss: Collector of William Blake and Oriental Books." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. London: Continuum, 2006. 38-62. <WBHC 1857-62>

An elaboration of Davies's "Mrs. Bliss: A Blake Collector of 1794," with much added about her collection of "oriental books" and those owned by members of Blake's circle. Points out probable sources in Bliss's copy of Antiquités Etrusques, Grecques et Romains (1766-1767) for Blake's "The Apotheosis of Bacchus" (Butlin #174); in Edward Moor's The Hindu Pantheon (1810) for several designs in Jerusalem and "Lucifer" (Butlin #812:69) in the Dante illustrations; and F. Balthazard Solvyns's Les hindous (1808) for the title page of Milton.

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. "William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England." PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Burney, Charles Parr (1785-1864)

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Charles Parr Burney as a Blake Collector." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.1 (summer 1983): 16. <BBS 395>

Tries to account for a reference by Burney in a 29 Sep. 1862 letter to “a Volume of ‘Blake’s’ eccentric, but very interesting Drawings, accompanied by Verses, written with great care and in very minute characters,—which is now in my possession” (qtd. 16).

Butts, Thomas, and His Family (See Butts under Blake and Members of His Circle)

Cumberland, George (See George Cumberland in Blake and Members of Blake’s Circle)

Curry, James (1756-1805)

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Dr. James Curry as Patron of Blake.” Notes and Queries 27.1 (1980): 71-73. <BBS 367>

Details about James Curry and his friend, Ozias Humphry, with possible works that Curry may have owned.

D’Israeli, Isaac (1766-1848) See also Benjamin Disraeli \(1804-1881\)

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The First Printed Reference to the Publication of Job: Disraeli\(?\) in The Star Chamber \(1826\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 69-70. <BBS 384>

Notes a reference to Job “in the obscure and short-lived satirical political weekly The Star Chamber for Wednesday 3 May 1826” (69). Bentley suggests that Benjamin D’Israeli, who would have seen his father’s collection, was likely the author.

Dibdin, Thomas F. The Library Companion. 2 vols. London, 1824. 1 vol. 1824. 2nd ed. 1825. <BB #1484>

Alludes to “the Blake collection of ‘My friend Mr. D’Israeli’ [I.334, 1st ed.]” (BB #1484).

Visconti, Joseph. “The Myth of the Commissioned Illuminated Book: George Romney, Isaac D’Israeli, and ‘ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY Designs . . . of Blake’s.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989): 48-74. <BBS 404>

An important article that uses the example of Isaac D’Israeli, who, Visconti suggests, obtained his illuminated books not from Blake himself but from the collection of George Romney, to argue that the illuminated books were not produced individually on commission but in printing sessions.

Douce, Francis (1757-1834)

Catalogue

Catalogue of the Printed Books and Manuscripts bequeathed by Francis Douce, Esq. to the Bodleian Library. Oxford, 1840. <BB #553>

Studies

Barush, Kathryn. “Visions of Mortality.” Apollo 177.605 (Jan. 2013): 56-62. <WBHC 1584>²⁶⁸

“The vast collection of antiquarian Francis Douce incorporated a wide range of images of death and the afterlife. These included a set of William Blake’s designs for The Grave,

²⁶⁸ Note WBHC’s “Barusch” is an error.

now in Oxford's Ashmolean Museum, resonant Romantic additions to an age-old pictorial tradition" (56).

Davies, Keri. "Mrs Bliss: A Blake Collector of 1794." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd, 1999. 212-30. <WBHC 1863>

A key article on one of Blake's earliest collectors that demonstrates Blake's works were sold at Joseph Johnson's bookshop. The article also details her library, references to her and her Blake collection in the correspondence of Francis Douce and Richard Twiss, her long relationship with Ann Whitaker, and the Dissenting Carey Street Chapel to which she belonged. Developed in "Rebekah Bliss: Collector of William Blake and Oriental Books".

Mertz, J.B. "Blake v. Cromeek: A Contemporary Ruling." Modern Philology 99.1 (2001): 66-77. <WBHC 2401>

Considers the implications of the fact that Francis Douce owned the prospectuses for both Blake and Stothard's Chaucer prints (see Mertz, "Unrecorded"), but only bought Blake's. Reproduces copy B of Blake's Chaucer: The Canterbury Pilgrims (1809).

Mertz, J.B. "A Contemporary Reference to William Blake in the Notebooks of Francis Douce." Notes and Queries 47.3 (2000): 306-08. <WBHC 2401>

Douce likens "Blake's figures" to "Procrustes' men" (307).

Mertz, J.B. "An Unrecorded Copy of Blake's 1809 Chaucer Prospectus." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.3 (winter 1998-99): 73-74. <WBHC 1676>

Records Francis Douce's copy of Blake's 1809 Chaucer Prospectus, with references to Stothard and Cromeek.

Stemmler, Joan K. "Undisturbed above once in a Lustre" Francis Douce, George Cumberland and William Blake at the Bodleian Library and Ashmolean Museum." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 9-18. <BBS 409>

A rich examination of the Francis Douce papers that reveals two new references to Blake as well as offering new information about Cumberland, Richard Twiss, and James and Richard Edwards.

Dyer, Gilbert \(b. 1776\)

Study

Mertz, J.B. "Gilbert Dyer: An Early Blake Vendor?" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.4 (spring 2007): 147-49. <WBHC 1711>

"Gilbert Dyer [b. 1776], the son of the active Exeter bookseller Gilbert Dyer [1743-October 1820], is probably the vendor in April 1821 of Marriage [B] and 'Accusers' [B]" (WBHC 1711).

Edwards, Thomas \(1762-1834\)

Catalogues

Thomas Edwards. A Catalogue of a Very Valuable and Select Collection of Books in Most Languages, and Every Branch of Literature; Containing many Unique and Splendid Articles, collected from various Parts of Europe, generally in good Condition, and many in elegant Bindings . . . Now on Sale (for Ready Money only) The Prices printed in the Catalogue, and marked in the first Leaf of every Book. Halifax, 1815.

Thomas Edwards. Part II. Being the Appendix and Supplement to Thomas Edwards's Catalogue, Halifax; Containing all the rarest Articles from the Cabinet of an eminent Collector; Consisting of Early French Poetry, Mysteries, Books of Emblems, Early Printed Books, Missals on Vellum with Miniatures, and Other Fine Articles; Together With The Mathematics, Arts and Sciences Law and Medical Books: Now on Sale (for Ready Money only) The Prices printed in the Catalogue and marked in the first Leaf of every book. M.DCCC.XVI. Halifax, 1816.

A Catalogue of A Valuable and Select Collection of Bo[oks] Containing Several Unique and Rare Articles [. . .]. Thomas Edwards's Book Seller in Halifax. 1821. <BB #534, WBHC 982-83>

Messrs. Thomas Winstanley & Co. A Catalogue of the Very Valuable, Extensive and Genuine Collection of Books (Selected from the Stock in Trade) of Mr. Thomas Edwards, Bookseller of Halifax (Who Is Retiring from Business) . . . Which Will Be Sold by Auction. Halifax: Printed by N. Whitley, for Thomas Edwards, Bookseller, 1826.

Messrs. Stewart, Wheatley, & Adlard. A Catalogue of the Splendid and Valuable Collection of Books, Manuscripts, and Missals, the property of Thomas Edwards, Esq. (Late of Halifax, Yorkshire.) Comprising . . . Young's Night Thoughts, with Original Drawings by Blake (London, 1828).

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The 1821 Edwards Catalogue.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 154-56. <BBS 396>

Describes the catalogue which had been lost since T.W. Hanson cited it in his 1912-13 article, “Edwards of Halifax. Books Sellers, Collectors and Book-Binders” (Halifax Guardian Dec. 1912 and Jan. 1913).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Thomas Edwards, an Important Provincial Bookseller.” The Edwardses of Halifax: The Making and Selling of Beautiful Books in London and Halifax, 1749-1826. 2 vols.²⁶⁹ Toronto, Buffalo, London: University of Toronto Press, 2015. 193-200. <WBHC 2968>

On Edwards's career, highlighting his ownership of the Night Thoughts watercolors.

Evans, Edward \(1789-1835\)²⁷⁰

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Good Evans. William Blake and the Evans Family of Print Sellers.” Notes and Queries 64.4 (Dec. 2017): 572-83. <Blake (2018)>

²⁶⁹ The second volume is only available digitally at the University of Toronto Press's entry for the book at its website's catalogue.

²⁷⁰ For the numerous Evans family catalogues, see Bentley's Sale Catalogues.

On the print seller, Edward Evans, and the 1821 catalogue which listed the illuminated books and other prints that Blake had sold to him.

Ferguson, James (1790-1871)

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Peripatetic Painter and the Stroke of Genius: James Ferguson (1790-1871) as a Patron of William Blake." The Blake Journal 5 (2000): 7-22. <WBHC 1746>

Identifies Ferguson as "the first collector" [of Blake] 'in the North of England' (18) (WBHC 1776).

Hanrott, Phillip Augustus (1776-1856)

Catalogues

Mr. Evans. Catalogue of the Splendid, Choice, and Curious Library of P.A. Hanrott, Esq. Part the First . . . London, 1833. <BB #544>

Mr. Evans. Catalogue of the Fifth and Concluding Portion of the Valuable and Extensive Library of P.A. Hanrott, Esq. Which Will Be Sold by Auction. London, 1834. <WBHC 987>

Holgate, William

Catalogue

S. Leigh Sotheby. Catalogue of the Valuable Library of the Late William Holgate, Esq. of the General Post Office. London, 1846. <WBHC 994>

Iremonger, Elizabeth (1759-1826)

Catalogue

King & Lochee, Books. A Catalogue of the Valuable and Elegant Library, the property of Mrs. E. Iremonger, Of Upper Grosvenor-Street; including some of the Best Authors in History, and Belles Lettres; in the French, Italian, German, and English Languages; many of them enriched by valuable MS notes and observations; and the whole in the finest possible preservation. London, 1813. <BB #532>

Study

Davies, Keri. "'My little Cane Sofa and the Bust of Sappho': Elizabeth Iremonger and the Female World of Book-Collecting." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 221-35. <WBHC 1801-03>

Highlights the book collecting of Iremonger, who, like the majority of women who collected illuminated books in Blake's lifetime, was unmarried and who, like Rebekah Bliss and Ann Whitaker, had a long same-sex intimate relationship.

Jolley, Thomas (1802-1854)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue of the Second Portion of the Extensively Curious and Valuable Library of Thomas Jolley, Esq. F.S.A. Containing The First Division of . . . The Early English Poets . . . London, 1843. <WBHC 993>

Lamb, Charles (1775-1834)

Catalogue

[Charles Welford], "Charles Lamb's Library in New York." Literary World 3 (5 Feb. 1848): 10-11. B. [Catalogue of Charles Lamb's Library for Sale by Bartlett & Welford, Booksellers and Importers, 7 Astor House, New York \[21 Oct. 1848\].](#)

Lawrence, Thomas (1769-1830)

Catalogue

Mr. Christie. A Catalogue of the First Part of the Valuable Collection of Original Drawings, by Distinguished modern artists, the property of the late Sir Thomas Lawrence. London, 1830.

<BB #542>

Linnell, John (See John Linnell in Members of Blake's Circle)

Ottley, William Young (1771-1836)

Catalogues

Christie & Manson. A Catalogue of Italian Pictures . . . Collected . . . by . . . William Young Ottley. London, 1837.

Sotheby. Catalogue of the Valuable Collection of Books of Prints, and Works Connected with Literature and the Fine Arts, the property of the late William Young Ottley, Esq. London, 1837.

<BB #551>

Reed, Isaac (1742-1807)

Catalogue

Messrs King and Lochee. Bibliotheca Reediana: A Catalogue of the Curious & Extensive Library of the late Isaac Reed, Esq. of Staple Inn. Deceased . . . London, 1807.

Study

Minnick, Thomas L. "Blake Items in the Library of Isaac Reed." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.4 (May 1970): 89. <BB #1217.52>

Notes that Bibliotheca Reediana (1807), the catalogue of Reed's library, shows that Reed owned both copy F of Poetical Sketches (1783) and Designs to a Series of Ballads (1802).

Romney, George (See George Romney in Blake and Members of His Circle)

Sivright, Thomas (1783-1835)

Catalogue

[Catalogue of the Extensive and Valuable Collection of Books, Pictures, Drawings, Prints, and Painters' Etchings, Ancient Bronzes and Terracottas, Etruscan Vases, Marble Busts, Antique Carvings and Chasings in Wood and Metal, Coins, Minerals, Gems, and Precious Stones, Philosophical Instruments, Wines, Spirits, &c. &c. of the late Thomas Sivright Esq. \[. . . \].](#)

Edinburgh: Thomas Constable, 1836. <WBHC 989>

The watercolors for The Grave, lot 1835, p. 84.

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Thomas Sivright and the Lost Designs for Blair's Grave." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.3 (winter 1985-86): 103-06. <BBS 399>

Traces the then lost designs for The Grave to the 1835 sale catalogue of Thomas Sivright's collection, in which the designs are referred to as "Black Spirits and White, Blue Spirits and Grey." There is also a discussion of the designs in terms of the original project and their likely provenance after Cromeck's death. See WBHC 638-40.

Tilloch, Alexander (1759–1825)

Study

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. "William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England." PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Twiss, Richard (1747–1821)

Studies

Davies, Keri. "Mrs Bliss: A Blake Collector of 1794." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd, 1999. 212-30. <WBHC 1863>

Key article on one of Blake's earliest collectors that demonstrates Blake's works were sold at Joseph Johnson's bookshop. The article also details her library, references to her and her Blake collection in the correspondence of Francis Douce and Richard Twiss, her long relationship with Ann Whitaker, and the Dissenting Carey Street Chapel to which she belonged. Developed in "Rebekah Bliss: Collector of William Blake and Oriental Books."

Davies, Alan Philip Keri. "William Blake in Contexts: Family, Friendships, and Some Intellectual Microcultures of Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England." PhD diss. University of Surrey, 2003. <WBHC 1921-23>

A dissertation bursting with new information about William and Catherine Blake, their families, and their circle (James Parker, Rebekah Bliss, Richard Twiss, Alexander Tilloch, Samuel Varley, and William Muir), some of which has been published as articles.

Stemmler, Joan K. "Undisturbed above once in a Lustre" Francis Douce, George Cumberland and William Blake at the Bodleian Library and Ashmolean Museum." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26.1 (summer 1992): 9-18. <BBS 409>

A rich examination of the Francis Douce papers that reveals two new references to Blake as well as offering new information about Cumberland, Richard Twiss, and James and Richard Edwards.

Upcott, William (See William Upcott in Members of Blake's Circle)

Vine, James (d. 1837) <BR 383n>

Catalogue

Christie & Manson. A Catalogue of the Valuable and Very Interesting Collection of Pictures; Modern Drawings, and Books of Prints; Made During a Series of Years by James Vine, Esq., Deceased . . . Which (by Order of the Executors) Will be Sold by Auction. London, 1838. <BB #A551>

Study

Warner, Janet. “James Vine.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 106-07. <BB #1217.70>

On Blake’s patron who owned Milton copy D, Thel copy O, and Job, and dined with Blake and Linnell.

Visconti, Joseph. “William Blake’s 1818 Letter to Dawson Turner and Later Career as Graphic Artist.” BRANCH: Britain, Representation, and Nineteenth-Century History. Ed. Dino Franco Felluga. Extension of Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net. Mar. 2022. <Blake (2022)>

An examination of Blake’s 9 Jun. 1818 letter to Turner that aims “to reveal why [Blake] refused Turner’s request [to produce a new copy of the Large Book and Small Book of Designs], had stopped printing most of his illuminated books, and stopped color printing and monoprinting altogether” (abstract). Refers also to Blake’s patron, James Vine.

Wainewright, Thomas Griffiths (See Thomas Griffiths Wainewright in Members of Blake Circle)
Wyndham, George, 3rd Earl of Egremont (Lord Egremont) (1751-1837) and Elizabeth Wyndham, the Countess of Egremont (1769-1822)

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake’s shadow.” Times Literary Supplement (17 Mar. 1978): 320. <BBS 366>

Prints Catherine’s 1 Aug. and 4 Aug. 1829 letters to Lord Egremont.

Gore, St. John. “Three Centuries of Discrimination.” Apollo 105.103 (1977): 346-57. <WBHC 2092>

On William’s and Catherine’s patron and art collector, Lord Egremont. It includes the first publication of Catherine’s Aug. 1829 letters to him (357n15).

Loukes, Andrew. “Under a fortunate star’: The Petworth Blakes in Context.” William Blake in Sussex: Visions of Albion. Ed. Andrew Loukes. London: Paul Holberton Publishing, 2018. 46-61. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Considers the works by Blake held by Earl of Egremont and his wife, Elizabeth Wyndham, at the Petworth House and Egremont’s collecting practices and his relationship to Hayley and Romney.

Mcevansoneya, Philip. “Lord Egremont and Flaxman’s ‘st Michael overcoming Satan.’” Burlington Magazine 143 (2001): 351-59. <WBHC 2985>

“It quotes letters from Lord Egremont to Flaxman, his sister Mary Ann, and his assistant and brother-in-law Thomas Denman (pp. 358-59)” (WBHC 2985).

Nineteenth-Century Collectors (See also Blake and Members of His Circle)

General Studies

Lister, Raymond. “The National Gallery & Blake’s ‘spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 105-06.

Records “letters written by George Richmond and Samuel Palmer to William Boxall, director of the National Gallery, concerning the proposed sale of Blake’s tempera, ‘The Spiritual Form of Pitt Guiding Behemoth’” (105).

Visconti, Joseph. William Blake’s Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake’s “printed paintings” (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.²⁷¹ It includes important information on Blake’s illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

The two appendices (“Blake Redefines Fresco” and “Monoprints after Blake’s Death, 1827–1863”) are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book’s list of abbreviations (vi) and at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake’s collectors.

Individual Collectors

Bicknell, Elhanan (1788-1861)

Catalogues

Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of Elhanan Bicknell, Esq. London, 1863.

Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of the Splendid Collection of Water-Colour Drawings, Formed by that distinguished Patron of Art, Elhanan Bicknell, Esq., deceased. London, 1863.
<BB #567>

Blamire, George (1788–1863)

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue of the late George Blamire. London, 1863.

Studies

Butlin, Martin. “William Rossetti’s Annotations to Gilchrist’s Life of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.3 (Dec. 1968): 39-40. <BB #1217.25>

Highlights the annotations in William Rossetti’s 1863 copy of Gilchrist, held by the Houghton Library, including additions to his list of Blake’s works.

Whitehead, Angus. “this extraordinary performance’: William Blake’s Use of Gold and Silver in the Creation of His Paintings and Illuminated Books.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.3 (winter 2008-09): 84-108. With supplementary illustrations. <WBHC 1718-19>

“Between c. 1831 and 1863 the Cumbrian barrister, landowner, and collector George Blamire (1788-1863) purchased The Ancient of Days copy F from Tatham, who had acquired the work from Blake just before the latter’s death (BB [p.] 109). In addition to Jerusalem copy E, Blamire also owned two other works by Blake which feature metal material, the color print Naomi Entreating Ruth and Orpah and the tempera The Virgin and Child, the latter acquired after Blake's death, almost certainly via Catherine or Tatham (see B[utlin] #299, 674)" (88n46).

²⁷¹ An excerpt was published as “Impressions of Colors: On William Blake’s Monoprints,” Lapham’s Quarterly (20 July 2021).

Burton, William Evan

J. Sabin & Co. Bibliotheca Dramatica. Catalogue of the Theatrical and Miscellaneous Library of the Late William Evans Burton, the Distinguished Comedian, Comprising an Immense Assemblage of Books Relating to the Stage . . . To Be Sold at Auction . . . On Monday, October 8, 1860, and following days. New York, 1860. <WBHC 1011>

Cunliffe, Henry (1826-1894)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue of Miscellaneous Prints and Drawings. London, 1895.

Dilke, Charles Wentworth (1789-1864)

Catalogues

Christie. Catalogue. London, 1910.

"Collection of Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke, deceased." Lots 125-28.

Christie. Catalogue. London, 1911.

D'Israeli, Benjamin (1804-1881) See also Isaac Disraeli (1766-1848)

Catalogue

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of Engravings and Etchings, the Property of the late Rt. Hon. the Earl of Beaconsfield . . . comprising among other rarities A Series of the Works of William Blake . . . which will be sold by auction (by order of the executors). London, 1882.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The First Printed Reference to the Publication of Job: Disraeli\(?\) in The Star Chamber \(1826\)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 69-70. <BBS 384>

Notes a reference to Job "in the obscure and short-lived satirical political weekly The Star Chamber for Wednesday 3 May 1826" (69). Bentley suggests that Benjamin Disraeli, who would have seen his father's collection, was likely the author.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Selling of Blake's Night Thoughts Designs in the 1870s." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 70-71. <BBS 384>

On the purchase of the designs from the Edwards family by James Bain in 1874 and his attempt to sell the designs to the British Museum with the encouragement of, but without real assistance from, Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli.

Lister, Raymond. "A Letter from Benjamin Disraeli to Anne Gilchrist." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 99. <BBS 390>

On a 5 Nov. 1862 letter.

Gaisford, Thomas (1779-1855)

Catalogue

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of a Portion of the Important Library of Thomas Gaisford, Esq. . . . Important Series [including an] of Works Illustrated by W. Blake . . . London, 1890. <BB #585>

Gilchrist Family (See Gilchrist in Blake Criticism)

Giles, John

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue. 2-5 February 1881. London, 1881.

Grahame, Barron

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue. 15 March 1878. London, 1878.

Study

Butlin, Martin. “Five Blakes from a Nineteenth-Century Scottish Collection.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.1 (summer 1973): 4-8. <BB #1217.125>

Includes a sketch for “War unchained by an Angel, Fire, Pestilence, and Famine following” and a sketch for Malkin (Butlin #186); a study for Jerusalem pl. 51; a study for Theotormon (Butlin #574); and a sketch for “The Witch of Endor: Saul and the Ghost of Samuel” (Butlin #74).

Hogarth, Joseph (1801-1879)

Catalogue

Southgate and Barret. Ancient and Modern Pictures, Part by direction of the Executors. Catalogue of the very extensive, highly important Stock of Engravings, Water-Colour Drawings, and Books of Prints, of Mr. [Joseph] Hogarth of the Haymarket. London, 1854. <BB #562>

Study

Visconti, Joseph. William Blake's Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. London: Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2021. <Blake \(2022, 2025\)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake’s “printed paintings” (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.²⁷² It includes important information on Blake’s illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

The two appendices (“Blake Redefines Fresco” and “Monoprints after Blake’s Death, 1827–1863”) are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book’s list of abbreviations (vi) and can be found at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake's collectors, Frederick Tatham (and his relationship to William Michael Rosetti), Joseph Hogarth, and John Ruskin.

²⁷² An excerpt was published as “Impressions of Colors: On William Blake’s Monoprints,” Lapham’s Quarterly (20 July 2021).

Locke, Lampson, Frederick (1821-1895)

Catalogue

The Rowfant Library. A Catalogue of the Printed Books, Manuscripts Autograph Letters, Drawings and Pictures, collected by Frederick Locker-Lampson. London, 1886.

Mayer, Joseph (1803-1886)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue. 19, 21-25 July 1887. London, 1877.

Crosby, Mark. "A Copy of Richard Bentley Edition of Paradise Lost in William Hayley's Library c. 1802." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.3 (winter 2023-24): 14 pars. <Blake (2024)>

Sherlock, Lisa. "William Blake's Annotations to Milton's Paradise Lost: New Evidence for Attribution." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.2 (fall 2023): 17 pars. <Blake (2024)>

Munro, Hugh Andrew Johnstone (1797-1864)

Catalogue

A Complete Catalogue of the Paintings, Water-Colour Drawings, and Prints in the Collection of the Late Hugh Andrew Johnstone Munro, Esq., of Novar [. . .]. [London], 1865. <WBHC 1020-21>

Blake works ("9 Drawings") listed on p. 126.

Palmer, A.H.

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue. 20 March 1882. London, 1882.

Pickering, William (1796-1854)

Catalogue

Keynes, Geoffrey. William Pickering Publisher: A Memoir & a Hand-list of his Editions. London: At the Office of the Fleuron, 1924. Rev. ed. New York: B. Franklin, 1969.

References the 1839 edition of Blake by J.J. Garth Wilkinson, which Pickering published.

Piggott, John Hugh Smyth (c. 1792-1853)

Catalogues

Messrs. English & Son. Catalogue of the Costly and Highly Interesting Effects of John Hugh Smyth Pigott, Esq. Comprising The Very Select and Valuable Library of Several Thousand Volumes . . . The Live and Dead Stock, &c. &c. Oct. 9-Nov. 7 1849. (1849).

Messrs. English & Son. Catalogue of the Costly and Highly Interesting Effects of John Hugh Smyth Pigott, Esq., Comprising The Very Select and Valuable Library of Several Thousand Volumes . . . The Live and Dead Stock, &c. &c., Sold by Auction. (1853).

Messrs. S. Leigh Sotheby & John Wilkinson. Catalogue of the Remaining Portion of the Valuable Library of the Late John Hugh Smyth Pigott, Esq., of Brockley Hall, Somerset . . . London, 1853. <WBHC 999-1000>

Burke, James. “The Custodial History of the Sadler Partbooks \(Oxford, Bodleian Library MSS MUS. E.1-5.\)” Music & Letters 104.1 (2022): 1-30.

The auctions of Pigott’s collection are discussed pp. 11-13.

Scott, William Bell (1811-1890)

Catalogues

Scott, W[illiam] B[ell]. A Descriptive Catalogue of Engravings, Brought Together with a View to Illustrate the Art of Engraving on Copper and Wood from the Florentine Niello Workers in the XVth Century to that of William Blake. [London:] Privately Printed, [1880?].

Sotheby. Catalogue of the Choice Collection of Engravings & Etchings, formed by W.B. Scott, Esq. . . . also a Number of Beautiful Drawings by William Blake. London, 1885.²⁷³ <BB #581>

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of Engravings, Modern Etchings & Drawings, the property of the late William Bell Scott, Esq. London, 1892

Smith, Albert George Dew (1848-1903)

Catalogue

Manuscript Library Catalogue—Cambridge University Library.

Study

Visconti, Joseph. “Two Fake Blakes Revisited; One Dew-Smith Revealed.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2010. 35-78.²⁷⁴ <WBHC 2436-40>

Confirms Bentley’s claim that plates 4 and 9 of America copy B are, indeed, “excellent photolithographic facsimiles” (BBS 54) (51), and demonstrates that they were produced by Albert George Dew Smith (1848-1903). The essay also provides a biographical sketch of Smith and a description of his Blake collection (60) and his other important books.

Smith, George A. (1817-1875)

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue of the Valuable Library of George [A.] Smith, Esq. Deceased, Late of Paddockhurst, Crawley, comprising County Histories and Topography, Archaeological Works, Biography, Voyages and Travels, Works Relating to the Fine Arts, Books of Prints, Architectural Works, and General Literature. London, 1880. <BB #573>

Wilkinson, James John Garth (1812-99)

Studies

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “Blake’s ‘Poetical Sketches’ Finally Arrive in America.” Review of English Studies 31.122 (1980): 183-92. <BBS 449>

Adding to Michael Phillips’s “The Reputation of Blake’s Poetical Sketches 1783-1863” and G.E. Bentley, Jr.’s The Critical Heritage, illuminates via “a newly discovered collection of letters” (184) how seven poems from Poetical Sketches passed from J.J.

²⁷³ BB gives the date of the auction as 1885, and Bentley’s Sale Catalogues positions the catalogue accordingly but, erroneously, gives 1881 as the date of the catalogue.

²⁷⁴ This essay corrects Visconti’s previous claims in his “Facsimile or Forgery? An Examination of America, Plates 4 and 9, Copy B,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983), 217-23.

Garth Wilkinson to Henry James, Sr. for publication in the American magazine, Harbinger, in 1848. References to Emerson and Robinson as well.

Peet, Malcolm. Medicine, Mysticism and Mythology: Garth Wilkinson, Swedenborg and Nineteenth-Century Esoteric Culture. Foreword by Robert Rix. London: Swedenborg Society, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

Discusses the rise of Swedenborg and Wilkinson's role in publishing Blake's poetry.

Phillips, Michael. “The Reputation of Blake's Poetical Sketches 1783-1863.” The Review of English Studies 26.101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume's reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.'s sequel, “Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America.”

Rose, Edward. “The 1839-Wilkinson Edition of Blake's Songs in Transcendental America.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 79-81. <BB #1217.66>

On copies owned by Ralph Waldo Emerson and Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who was a tutor to Emily Dickinson.

Wilkinson, Clement John. James John Garth Wilkinson: A Memoir of his Life, with a Selection from his Letters. London: Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., 1911. <BB #2970>

Includes references to his interest in Blake and his editions.

Twentieth-Century Collectors

General Studies

Individual Collectors

The American Blake Foundation (See also Roger and Kay Easson)

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The American Blake Foundation.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.4 (spring 2009): 155-58. <WBHC 1720>

On Roger and Kay Easson's American Blake Foundation; its journal, Blake Studies (1968-1981); the Easson Blake collection; and the Blake facsimiles they produced.

Catalogue

Windle, John. William Blake: A Catalogue of Books by and about Blake and his Circle from 1775-2008 Mainly from the Collections of Roger and Kay Easson and Roger Lipman with Additions from Stock. Catalogue 46. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 2009. <WBHC 1383-84>

Arthington, Robert \(1823-1900\)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue chiefly of Robert Arthington of Leeds. London, 1866. <BB 569>

Brooke, Stopford A. (1832-1916)

Writing on Blake

Brooke, Stopford A. "William Blake." Studies in Poetry. London, 1907. Port Washington, NY: Kennikat Press, 1967. Great English Poetics and their Works. Delhi: Shubhi, 2002. <BB #1291, WBHC 1791>

Catalogue

James Tregaskis. Caxton Head Catalogue 796. London, 1917.

Bucknell, Emma W. (1853-1927)

Catalogue

Bucknell, Emma W. [The Important Library of Press Books Library Sets Formed by the Late Emma W. Bucknell Philadelphia, Pa.\[....\]](#) New York: American Art Association, 1928.

Studies

Paley, Morton D. "Blakes at Buffalo." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 81-86. <BB #1217.67>

Records that SUNY Buffalo owns Europe pl. 18; a pencil sketch, "A Boxer Holding a Cestus" (Butlin #179); and The Beggar's Opera; "the Buffalo and Erie County Library has Europe pl. 4" (BB #1217.67).

Christie-Miller, S.R. (1874-1931)

Catalogue

Sotheby & Co. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books and a Few Manuscripts from the Renowned Library Formerly at Britwell Court, Burnham, Bucks, The Property of the Trustees of the late S.R. Christie-Miller, Esq. London, 1971.

Crew, Robert Offley Ashburton Crew-Milnes, Marquis of, (1858-1945)

Catalogues

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of a Choice Selection of the Original Productions of William Blake, the Property of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Crewe. London: Dryden, [1903]. <BB #596, WBHC 1057-58>

"The Crewe Collection of Blake's Works." Times [London] (31 Mar. 1903), p. 10. <WBHC 1059>

"Earl of Crewe's Blake's Collection. A Sensational Total of £9,776 5s." Daily News 31 Mar. 1903. <BBS 344>

"Lord Crewe's Collection of Blake's Works." Athenaeum 3928 (1903): 185 <BB #977>

Messrs. Sotheby & Co. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books, Illuminated and Other Manuscripts, Autograph Letters, Topographical Drawings of American Interest, etc.: Comprising the Library of Sir Algernon Methuen, Bt. (Decd.) . . . Including: the Magnificent Butts-Crewe Copy of Songs of Innocence and Experience (the [of] Second Largest Known, and the Only One with Tinted Wash Borders); the Famous Copy of Young's Night Thoughts Coloured Throughout by Blake, also from the Butts-Crewe Collections; Very Fine Copies of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion . . . London, 1936.

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1943.

“Property of the Marquess of Crewe.” Lot 312.

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1962.

“The Marchioness of Crewe.” Lots 98 and 99.

Dew-Smith, A.G. (1848-1903)

Catalogue

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of a Very Choice Library, and of a small but rich collection of Ancient Engravings and Modern Drawings, the property of A. G. Dew-Smith, Esq. 29-30 January 1878.

Studies

Viscomi, Joseph. “Facsimile or Forgery? An Examination of America, Plates 4 and 9, Copy B.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983): 219-23. <BBS 394>

Identifies the plates as intentional forgeries, but see his “Two Fake Blakes Revisited; One Dew-Smith Revealed” for a correction and an elaboration.

Viscomi, Joseph. “Two Fake Blakes Revisited; One Dew-Smith Revealed.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2010. 35-78.²⁷⁵ <WBHC 2436-40>

Confirms Bentley’s claim that plates 4 and 9 of America copy B are, indeed, “excellent photolithographic facsimiles” (BBS 54) (51), and demonstrates that they were produced by Albert George Dew Smith (1848-1903). The essay also provides a biographical sketch of Smith and a description of his Blake collection (60) and his other important books.

Easson, Roger (1945-2016) and Kay (born Long)

Catalogue

Windle, John. William Blake: A Catalogue of Books by and about Blake and his Circle from 1775-2008 Mainly from the Collections of Roger and Kay Easson and Roger Lipman with Additions from Stock. Catalogue 46. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 2009. <WBHC 1383-84>

“Kay and Roger Easson Library of William Blake.” University of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Emerson, Francis White (born White and, for a time, Moffatt)²⁷⁶ (died c. 1958)

Catalogue

Catalogue of the Celebrated Collection of Books Illuminated & Illustrated by William Blake[.] The Property of the late Mrs. William Emerson which will be sold by Sotheby & Co. 19 May 1958. New York, 1958. <BB #682>

“15 Blake entries and 12 plates; there was also another (otherwise identical) edition without the plates” (BB #682).

²⁷⁵ This essay corrects Viscomi’s previous claims in his “Facsimile or Forgery? An Examination of America, Plates 4 and 9, Copy B.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983), 217-23.

²⁷⁶ Often referred to as “Mrs. Emerson White.” Her father was William Augustus White \(1843-1927\).

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Bibliomania: The Felicitous Infection and the Comforting Cure.” Papers of the Bibliographical Society of Canada: Cahiers de la société bibliographique du Canada 45.1 (spring 2007): 7-41. <WBHC 1599>

An account of G.E. and Elizabeth Bentley’s book collecting.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Rosenbach and Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.3 (winter 2017-18): 7 par. + listing. <Blake (2018)>

A list of “every contemporary Blake that Rosenbach is known to have dealt with” (par. 7) in both alphabetical and chronological order.

Davies, Keri. “William Muir and the Blake Press Edmonton with Muir’s letter to Kerrison Preston.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.1 (summer 1993): 14-25. <WBHC 1645>

A biographical sketch of William Muir (1845-1938), including accounts of Muir’s Blake Press at Edmonton and of the early twentieth-century Blake Society and transcriptions of Muir’s letters to the collector, Kerrison Preston.

Forman, H. Buxton (1842–1917)

Catalogue

Anderson Galleries. The Library of the Late H. Buxton Forman . . . Manuscripts, First Editions, Autograph Letters and Association Copies of . . . William Blake. New York, 1920. <BB #614>

Francis, John Deffett (1815-1901)

Catalogue

Sotheby Parke Bernet & Co. Catalogue of English Illustrated Books of the 19th & 20th Centuries. 13 July 1978. London, 1978.

Lot 147. On the verso of America pl. 7 is the signature of “[John Deffett Francis, 1824.]”

Study

Skretkowicz, Victor, Jr. “J. Deffett Francis: The Swansea Blakes.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 52-54. <BB #1217.47>

Describes Francis’s relationship with Frederick Tatham and his Blake items. He donated 7 pencil drawings by Blake to the British Museum in 1873; sent “Woe cried the muse” to William Michael Rossetti in 1875; gave 60 more pieces by Blake to the British Museum in 1878; and gave America a Prophecy pls. 2, 5, and 15, Europe pls. 6-7, 12, “He descended into Hell,” and “Michael Angelo (Buonarroti)” (from Fuseli’s Lectures on Painting [1801]) to the Swansea Public Library by 1890. The last are now held by the Glynn Vivian Art Gallery, Swansea.

Fringall, Earl of

Catalogue

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. Catalogue of Choice and Rare Books and Illuminated and Other Manuscripts, including selections from the Library of the Rt. Hon. The Earl of Fringall . . . Original Drawings by Wm Blake. London, 1908. <BB #601>

Goyder, George (1908-97)

Catalogues

Christie. Catalogue. 26 Jun. 1997. London, 1997.

Christie. Valuable Printed Books and Manuscripts including . . . A rare proof sheet of Blake's Marriage of Heaven and Hell. London, 1999.

"Books from the Library of the Late George Goyder C.B.E." Lots 101-05, 166-69.

Phillip Pirages. Catalogue 44. 1999.

Studies

Cadogan Peter. "George Goyder, President of the Blake Society, Born on June 22nd 1908, died on January 19th 1997, aged 88." The Journal of the Blake Society at St. James 3 (1998): 60-62. <WBHC 2224>

An obituary.

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 1997." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 31.4 (spring 1998): 109-37. <BBS

On Goyder's passing and the sale of his Blake items.

Goyder, George, with additional chapters by Rosemary Goyder. "Geoffrey Keynes & William Blake." Signs of Grace London: The Cygnet Press, 1993. 84-86. <WBHC 2099>

"Autobiographical account of Sir Geoffrey Keynes, who 'took me in hand and taught me all I know about Blake' (85), and of the Blake Trust" (WBHC 2099).

Hanley, Thomas Edward (1893-1969), and Tullah Innes Hanley (also known as Mrs. T.E. Hanley) (c. 1923-1992)

Catalogue

Sotheby Parke-Bernet. Fine Books; with Drawings by William Blake, George Cruikshank and Others. New York, 1970.

House of El Dieff [Lew David Feldman]. Seventy: The World of Books Arts and Letters circa 1455-1968. 1970.

Christie. Catalogue. London, 1977.

Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Anton G., and Peter Hardy

Catalogue

The Splendid Library of Mr and Mrs Anton G. Hard including The Important Painting in Tempera 'Faith, Hope, and Charity' By William Blake. Parke-Bernet Gallery, January 14th, 1942. <BB #652>

Harvey, Francis (fl. 1863-1922)

Catalogue

[Francis Harvey], [F. Harvey's Catalogue of Books]. London, [1864?].²⁷⁷ <BB #568, WBHC 1018>

“On pp. 3-6 (known to me only from a fragment in the Anderdon Collection in the BMPR) are 22 Blake lots, including the ‘Pickering [Ballads] Manuscript’ and at least 24 drawings” (BB #568).

Hoe, Robert

Catalogue

Anderson Auction Company. No . 905 Catalogue of The Library of Robert Hoe of New York. Illuminated Manuscripts, Incunabula, Historical Bindings, Early English Literature, Rare Americana, French Illustrated Books, Eighteenth Century English Authors, Autographs, Manuscripts, Etc. Part I--A to K. New York, 1911. <BB #602>

Hofer, Philip (d. 1984)

Writing on Blake

Hofer, Philip. “Blake Exhibition in America.” Burlington Magazine 84 (1939). 82-85. <BB #1865>

Review of the 1939 Philadelphia Museum of Art exhibition.

Hofer, Philip. Parnassus 8.1 (Jan. 1936): 28. <WBHC 623>

Review of Illustrations of the Book of Job by William Blake: Being all the Water-Colour Designs Pencil Drawings and Engravings Reproduced in Facsimile (1935). <BB #374, WBHC 623>

Studies

Duroselle-Melish, Caroline. 2013. “‘Containers of ideas’: The Collection of Printmaking Artifacts of Philip Hofer.” Harvard Library Bulletin 24.1 (2013): 45-64.²⁷⁸

Includes references to Hofer’s Blake collection, the facsimile of his copy of Illustrations of the Book of Job, and the copperplate of The Beggar’s Opera.

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 1985.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986): 12-13. <BBS 399>

Details the works owned by Hofer that were accessioned by the Houghton Library, Harvard University.

²⁷⁷ William Michael Rossetti writes in a 27 Nov. 1864 letter to Horace Elisha Scudder, “If it would be in your way to pick up any designs or sketches of Blake (as well as engravings, which you refer to) I may perhaps inform you that Mr. Harvey Bookseller of 30 Cockspur Street, London, S.W., had—and I doubt not still has—some, varying from important water-colours to slight scraps: one of his tolerably recent catalogues specifies 33 of the latter sort, to be had in a lump for £1.16” (Selected Letters of William Michael Rossetti, ed. Rober W. Peattie, Pennsylvania State University Press, 1990), 134.

²⁷⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

Holland, Joseph (1910-1994)

Catalogue

Windle, John. The Blake Collection of Joseph Holland & Vincent Newton With Additions from our Inventory. John Windle List Twenty-Six. San Francisco: John Windle, 1995. <WBHC 1258-59>

Study

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 1995, Including a Survey of Blakes in Private Ownership.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.4 (spring 1996): 108-30.²⁷⁹ <WBHC 1162>

Horne, Herbert P. (1864-1916)

Study

Butlin, Martin. “William Blake in the Herbert P. Horne Collection.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.1 (summer 1972): 19-21. <BB #1217.100>

Documents an early sketch on the verso of an engraving of the Moore & Co. advertisement and a leaf with sketches on both sides for the Dante designs (Butlin #821).

Hughes, Henry D. (d. 1928)

Catalogues

American Art Galleries. Sale of the Collection of a Philadelphia Collector. New York, 1923.

American Art Association. Catalogue of Works of a Prominent Pennsylvania Collector. New York, 1924.

Jackson, Richard C. (d. 1923)²⁸⁰

Catalogue

Catalogue of the Valuable Contents 185, Camberwell Grove, Denmark Hill, S.E., at the Residence By Order of the Executor of R.C. Jackson [. . .] London, 1923. <WBHC 1084-91>

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “All the Evidence That's Fit to Print.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.1 (Jun. 1968): 11-13. <BB #1217.19>

On biographical claims regarding Blake by R.C. Jackson (BB #1934-41) and which are credible.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Richard C. Jackson, Collector of Treasures and Wishes: Walter Pater, Charles Lamb, William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.3 (winter 2002-03): 92-105. <WBHC 1692>

On the eccentric Blake collector and president of the early twentieth-century, William Blake Society of Arts and Letters, Richard C. Jackson (d. 1923). The article includes an appendix with Jackson's publications.

²⁷⁹ The sections missing from the print edition and provided in “The Missing Portions of ‘Blake in the Marketplace, 1995,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.2 (fall 1996), 62-63, are restored in the digital edition.

²⁸⁰ See also WBHC 1085-91 for a biographic sketch of Jackson.

Johnson, Richard

Catalogues

Platt. Catalogue. 1912.

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1934.

“Collection of the late Richard Johnson.” Lots 166-73.

Jones, Herschel V.

Catalogue

Anderson Galleries. Catalogue of The Library of Herschel V. Jones [A-H]. New York, 1918. <BB #609>

Keynes, Geoffrey Langdon (1887-1982) (See also Geoffrey Keynes and William Blake Trust under Studies of Blake Criticism and the Fitzwilliam Museum under Collection Catalogues)

Catalogues (of his Collections)

Bindman, David. William Blake: Catalogue of the Collection in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. Cambridge: Heffer, 1970. <BB #703, BBS 292>

Keynes’s collection, now bequeathed to the Fitzwilliam, is listed in an appendix, pp. 65-84.

Keynes, Geoffrey. Bibliotheca Bibliographici: A Catalogue of the Library Formed by Geoffrey Keynes. London, 1964. <BB #687>

The catalogue of Keynes’s art and book collection. Most of his Blake holdings are now housed at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge University.²⁸¹ It also reprints his “Religio Bibliographici.”

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Keynes and Blake at Cambridge.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.2 (fall 1985): 69-71. <BBS 398>

On Keynes’s Blake collection, which is found at Cambridge University, and includes Keynes’s annotations to scholarly work on Blake and his references to other Blake collectors.

Goyder, George. “Geoffrey Keynes & William Blake.” and “The Great Blake Sale—22 July 1949.” Signs of Grace. London: The Cygnet Press, [1993]. 84-88. <WBHC 2099>

“Autobiographical account of Sir Geoffrey Keynes, who ‘took me in hand and taught me all I know about Blake’ (85) and of the Blake Trust” (WBHC 2099). “An account of the secret manoeuvres by which the Blake Trust secured 20 pictures at Graham Robertson’s sale at Christie’s for English institutions.” (Blake [1996]).

²⁸¹ For exceptions, see Bindman’s William Blake: Catalogue of the Collection in the Fitzwilliam Museum (1970), <BB #703>, and the description in BBS 292.

Lambert, Grace Lansing (1899-1993)

Study

Ryskamp, Charles. "A Blake Collection for Princeton." Princeton University Library Chronicle 21 (1960): 172-75. <BB #2605>

"A description of the Lambert Collection" given to Princeton University (BB #2605).

MacDonald, Greville (1856-1944)

Writing on Blake

MacDonald, Greville. "Abbreviated Paper on William Blake, Practical Idealist." The First Meeting of the Blake Society: Papers Read before The Blake Society at the First Annual Meeting, 12th August, 1912. Olney, 1912. <BB #3016>

MacDonald, Greville. "The Sanity of William Blake." Saint George 11 (1908): 1-31. The Sanity of William Blake. London, 1908. London: George Allen and Unwin, Limited, 1920. <BB #863>

Catalogues

Anderson. Catalogue. New York, 1923.

Francis Edwards. William Blake. London, 1927.

William Blake: Original Drawings, Engraved Work, Poetical Works, Books about Blake, Etc. Mainly from the Collection of Dr. Greville Macdonald. London: Francis Edwards [?1930]. <BB #638>

Macgeorge, Bernard Buchanan (1845-1924)

Catalogues

A Catalogue of the Library of Bernard Buchanan Macgeorge. Privately Printed. 1892. 1906. <BB #589>

Catalogue of The Well-Known and Valuable Library of the Late Bernard Buchanan Macgeorge, Esq. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, 1924. <BB #623>

Studies

Keynes, Geoffrey L. "The Macgeorge Blakes." TLS 26 June 1924. P. 403. <BB #2031>

"A description of [Macgeorge's] Blakes to be sold at Sotheby's" (BB #2031), but, note, it is no longer believed that Isaac Disraeli bought from Blake directly.

Mason, Thomas. Public and Private Libraries of Glasgow. Glasgow: Thomas D. Morison, 1885. 291-93.

An account of Macgeorge's Blake collection.

Mackay, Mrs. Alexander

Catalogue

Christie Manson & Woods. Catalogue of Rare Books by William Blake . . . the Property of Mrs. Alexander Mackay Deceased . . . April 26, 1921. London, 1921. <BB #615>

Marsh, Edward Howard (1872-1953)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue. 17-18 July 1905. London, 1905.

Study

Butlin, Martin. “William Blake in the Herbert P. Horne Collection.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.1 (summer 1972): 19-21. <BB #1217.100>

Mackay, Mrs. Alexander (Caroline Hansen McKay)

Catalogue

Christie, Manson & Woods. Catalogue of Rare Books By William Blake . . . the Property of Mrs. Alexander Mackay Deceased. London, 1921.

Melchett, Lady Gwen

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue of Fine English Drawings and Watercolours. London, 1971.

Mellon, Paul (1907-1999)

Catalogues

Baskett, John. English Drawings and Watercolors 1550-1850 In the Collection of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon. New York: Harper and Row, 1972. <WBHC 1177-78>

Includes works by Blake and many members of his circle.

Hargraves, Matthew. Great British Watercolors: From the Paul Mellon Collection at the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2005.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Richmond, from 11 Jul. to 30 Sep. and at the State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, from Oct. to Dec. 2007. Includes works by Blake (pp. 69-77), Samuel Palmer (pp.178-81), and John (pp. 124-29) and Cornelius Varley (pp. 130-31).

Noon, Patrick. The Human Form Divine: William Blake from the Paul Mellon Collection. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1997.²⁸² <WBHC 1274-76>

An exhibition of Blake's work from the Paul Mellon Collection held at the Yale Center for British Art from Apr. 2 to Jul. 6 1997.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Paul Mellon as a Blake Collector.” Notes and Queries 64.1 (Mar. 2017): 62-72. <Blake (2018)>

Details Mellon's Blake collecting.

Hargraves, Matthew. “William Blake and Paul Mellon: The Life of the Mind.” OpenGLAM 7 Oct. 2014. <WBHC 2128>

An overview of Mellon's interest in Blake (and Jung).

²⁸² Incorporates Noon's essay, “A ‘Mad’ but Compelling Vision,” Yale Alumni Magazine (Apr. 1997), which details the Mellon collection and its Blakes.

Noon, Patrick. "Paul Mellon, 1908-1999." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.4 (spring 1999): 151-52. <WBHC 1678>

An obituary describing Mellon's Blake acquisitions.

Allen, Brian, John Baskett, and Mary Anne Stevens, ed. Paul Mellon's Legacy: 4: Masterpieces from the Yale Center for British Art. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2007.

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Yale Center for British Art from 18 Apr. to 29 Jul. 2007 and at the Royal Academy of Art from 20 Oct. 2007 to 27 Jan. 2008. The works by Blake exhibited were Songs copy L, the Gray illustrations, The Horse from Hayley's Animal Ballads, and Jerusalem copy E. The Blake items in the catalogue are nos. 69-76.

The essays reference Mellon's collecting of Blake:

Baskett, John. "Paul Mellon: A Remembrance." 1-11.

Prown, Jules David. "Paul Mellon and the Architecture of the Yale Center for British Art." 15-24.

Robinson, Duncan. "Paul Mellon and the Yale Center for British Art." 29-39.

Allen, Brian. "Paul Mellon and Scholarship in the History of British Art." 43-53.

Ryskamp, Charles. "Paul Mellon and William Blake." Essays in Honor of Paul Mellon: Collector and Benefactor. Ed. John Wilmerding. Washington D.C., 1986. 328-37. <BBS 629-30>

"A chronological account of [Mellon's] Blake acquisitions" (BBS 630).

Methuen, Algernon \(1856-1924\)

Catalogue

Messrs. Sotheby & Co. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books, Illuminated and Other Manuscripts, Autograph Letters, Topographical Drawings of American Interest, etc.: Comprising the Library of Sir Algernon Methuen, Bt. (Decd.) . . . Including: the Magnificent Butts-Crewe Copy of Songs of Innocence and Experience (the [of] Second Largest Known, and the Only One with Tinted Wash Borders); the Famous Copy of Young's Night Thoughts Coloured Throughout by Blake, also from the Butts-Crewe Collections; Very Fine Copies of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion . . . London, 1936.

Moss, William Edward \(1874-1953\)

Catalogues

Sotheby & Co. Catalogue of the Very Well-Known and Valuable Library The Property of Lt. Col. W.E. Moss . . . comprising A Most Important and Extensive Collection of the Works of William Blake and of Books and MSS. relating to him. London, 1937. <BB #643>

Sotheby. Catalogue of Valuable Printed Books, Illuminated Manuscripts, Autograph Letter and Historical Documents. London, 1938.

Study

Gourlay, Alexander. ""Man on a Drinking Horse": A Print by Thomas Butts, Jr." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.1 (summer 2003): 35-36. <WBHC 1695>

A description of a newly discovered print dated 22 Jan. 1806, which was likely executed by Thomas Butts, Jr. (who was a student of Blake's at the time) but possibly by Thomas Butts, Sr. The plate was once owned by the Blake collector Lt. Col. W.E. Moss, and it was printed in the 1940s. See Robert N. Essick's description of the print in "Blake in the Marketplace," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.4 (spring 2003), 127.

Newton, A. Edward (1864-1940), and Caroline Newton (1893-1975)

Papers

A. Edward Newton Papers at the University of Denver. Caroline Newton Papers, 1868-1980 at Princeton University Library.

Catalogues

Anderson Galleries. The Books of a Busted Bibliophile alias A. Edward Newton. New York, 1926.

Parke-Bernet Galleries Inc. Rare Books, Original Drawings Autograph Letters and Manuscripts Collected by the late A. Edward Newton, Removed from His Home Oak Knoll Daylesford, Pa. for Public Sale By Order of the Executors Under the Will of A. Edward Newton Deceased E. Swift Newton and Brandon Berringer. New York, 1941. [Part i.] <BBS 650>

Studies

Bucknell, Katherine and Nicholas Jenkins., ed. "In Solitude, for Company": W.H. Auden after 1940. Unpublished Prose and Recent Criticism. Auden Studies 3. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1995. 66n2.

Details Caroline Newton's psychiatric career and her relationships with Thomas Mann and W.H. Auden.

Newton, A. Edward. The Act of Creation. By William Blake. Berwyn, PA: Oak Knoll, 1925.

A facsimile of the frontispiece to Europe.

Newton, A. Edward. The Amenities of Book-Collecting and Kindred Affections. Boston: The Atlantic Monthly Press, 1918.

References collecting Blake (80-83). The 1919 second edition with some notes and corrections can be found here.

Rosenblum, Joseph, ed. The Uncollected A. Edward Newton. New Castle, DE: Oak Knoll Press, 2017.

Ryskamp, Charles. "Songs of Innocence and of Experience and Miss Caroline Newton's Blake Collection." The Princeton University Library Chronicle 29.2 (1968): 150-55.²⁸³

Notes Newton's gift of Songs copy U to the Princeton University Library and other Blake items in her collection (including the monochrome wash drawing "Moses and Aaron (?)

²⁸³ Not recorded by BB.

Flanked by Angels”), which were on display at a 1968 exhibition at the Princeton University Library.

Newton, Vincent

Catalogue

Windle, John. The Blake Collection of Joseph Holland & Vincent Newton With Additions from our Inventory. John Windle List Twenty-Six. San Francisco: John Windle, 1995. <WBHC 1258-59>

Osmaston, Francis P. (1857-1925)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1905.

Study

Butlin, Martin. “A Rare Group of Early Twentieth-Century Watercolors by a Follower of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.3 (winter 1995-96): 76-77. <WBHC 1660>

“A further link [of the painter Henry John Stock] with William Blake, and perhaps at least a partial explanation for this paradoxical illustration of Blakean subjects in totally un-Blakean style, was the commissioner of these watercolors, Francis P. Osmaston (1857-1925),” who “owned a number of works by Blake: a copy of The Book of Thel and a color-printed copy of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, together with three individual works, the watercolor of Christ raising the Son of the Widow of Nain, the tempera Bathsheba at the Bath and the color-printed Dream of Thiralatha (Butlin nos. 483, 390 and 267 respectively)” (70).

Palmer, George Herbert (1842-1933)

Catalogue

A Catalogue of Early and Rare Editions of English Poetry Collected and Presented to Wellesley College by George Herbert Palmer. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1923. <BB #622>

Perry, Marsden J. (1850-1935)

Catalogue

American Art Association. The Library of the Late Marsden J. Perry. New York, 1936.

Preston, Kerrison (1871-1972)

Papers

“Kerrison Preston, Papers relating to William Blake.” National Archive, UK. Reference no. Accession 924.

Catalogues

[Goff, Phyllis.] [William Blake: Catalogue of the Preston Blake Library Presented by Kerrison Preston in 1967 \[to the\] Westminster City Libraries](#). London, 1969.²⁸⁴ <BB #701, BBS 292>

²⁸⁴ An overview of the Preston Blake Collection is available at the Special Collections page of the City of Westminster Archives Centre webpage.

William Blake: Supplement to the Catalogue of the Preston Blake Library. [London], 1972. <BB #701>

Sotheby. Catalogue of Fine Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century English Paintings including the Property of . . . the late Kerrison Preston. London, 1974.

Rinder, Frank (1863-1937) and Mrs. Ramsay Harvey (daughter, d. 1993)

Catalogue

Christie's. Books and Prints by William Blake from the Collection formed by the late Frank Rinder, Esq. 30 November 1993. <WBHC 1249>

Included Marriage copy M; Jerusalem copy C; Milton pl. 38; Jerusalem pl. 25; “4 Virgil pulls”; “The Man Sweeping the Interpreter’s Parlour”; and “George Richmond’s copy of Job (1826) and Job ([1874])” (WBHC 1249).

Study

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 1993, Including a Report on the Sale of the Frank Rinder Collection.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.4 (spring 1994): 104-07.

Documents the sale of Rinder collection “Christie’s in London on 30 November” 1993 (104).

Robertson, W. Graham (1866-1948)

Catalogues

Russell, Archibald G.B. “The Graham Robertson Collection.” Burlington Magazine 37 (1920): 27-39. <BB #614>

“A catalogue of 98 Blake pictures” (BB #614).

An Exhibition of Original Works by William Blake (1757-1827) from the Graham Robertson Collection. Bournemouth, 1949. <BB #658>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Bournemouth Arts Club from 7 to 21 Apr. and at Southampton from 25 Apr. to 5 May and at Brighton from 11 May to 6 Jun. 1949.

[Keynes, Geoffrey.] The Famous Collection of Works by William Blake the Property of the late Graham Robertson . . . 1949. London: Christie, Manson & Woods, Ltd., 1949. <BB #659>

The Blake Collection of W. Graham Robertson. Ed. Kerrison Preston. London: Faber and Faber for the William Blake Trust, 1952. <BB #664, WBHC 1143-44>

Pp. 17-20 identifies the institutions that received works from Robertson.

William Blake: Poet. Prophet. Prophet. Foreword, Francis W. Hawcroft. Intro., Lessing J. Rosenwald. 1969. <BB #698>

The catalogue for the exhibition held from 14 May to 21 Jun. 1969 at the Whitworth Art Gallery at the University of Manchester, Manchester, UK. The exhibition included both selections from the illuminated books and watercolors and drawings from the W. Graham Robertson collection. The foreword and introduction touch on the Blake Trust and its relationship to Robertson, and Kerrison Preston has a note in the catalogue on Robertson’s collection of Blakes and their auction on 22 Jul. 1949.

Studies

Carey, Frances. “Graham Robertson Color Prints.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 61.²⁸⁵

On the display of “some of the original blocks, executed by W. Graham Robertson, in imitation of Blake’s monotype technique” by “Abbott and Holder, the London dealers” (61).

Eason, Roger R. “Blake and the Contemporary Market.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.4 (spring 1971): 137-39. <BB #1217.74>

Describes the rise in prices in Blake’s since the end of World War II, comparing the prices offered for the biblical watercolors “Joseph and Potiphar’s Wife” and “Felix and Drusilla” (Butlin #439 and #508) which sold for £220.21.0 and £275 in 1949 in the sale of the W. Graham Robertson collection, and for $25, 000 each in 1970. Notes that a drawing of the Last Judgment (Butlin #644) sold for $10,000.

Ironside, R.²⁸⁶ “The Tate Gallery: Wartime Acquisitions.” Burlington Magazine, 78.455 (Feb. 1941): 52-55, 57. <WBHC 2195>

About the Blake collections of W. Graham Robertson and Miss A.E. Carthew” (WBHC 2195).

Rosenbach, A.S.W. (1876-1952) and Philip H. (1863-1953)

Catalogues

Dr A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue #23 Collected Catalogues of Dr. A.S.W. Rosenbach. 1911.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue #38: Catalogue of Rare and Important Books and Manuscripts in English Literature Collected Catalogues of Dr. A.S.W. Rosenbach. 1913.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue 17. 1916.

Rosenbach. Catalogue A Remarkable Collection of Rare and Choice Books Manuscripts and Autograph Letters [18]. Philadelphia, 1916.

Rosenbach. Catalogue 24. Philadelphia, 1916.

A.S.W. Rosenbach & Co. Catalogue 20. London, 1920.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue of an Exhibition of Rare Books, Autograph Manuscripts, and Literary Documents. 1921.

A.S.W. Rosenbach Company. Catalogue of an Exhibition of Manuscripts and Rare Books. Philadelphia, 1931.

A.S.W. Rosenbach Company. Five Centuries of Bookmaking: An Exhibition. Philadelphia, 1931.

A.S.W. Rosenbach Company. Catalogue of Rare Books of Six Centuries Collected Catalogues of Dr. A.S.W. Rosenbach. Philadelphia, 1935.

²⁸⁵ Not recorded in BBS.

²⁸⁶ WBHC mistakenly gives the author’s name as “A. Ironside” (2195).

Dr A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue #28 Five Hundred Rare Books Manuscripts and Autograph Letters. Philadelphia, 1936.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. The March of Books Through the Ages. 1939.

Rosenbach Company. Catalogue #30: The World of Yesterday: Rare Books, Manuscripts and Autograph Letters Collected Catalogues of Dr. A.S.W. Rosenbach. Philadelphia, 1939.

The Rosenbach Company. Catalogue #32: A Bibliophile's Miscellany: Rare Books and Manuscripts. Philadelphia and New York, 1941.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. The March of Books Through the Ages: Early Printing, Science, The Arts, Medicine, Law, Literature, Grammars and Dictionaries. Philadelphia [1944/45?].

A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue 47. 1947.

A.S.W. Rosenbach. Catalogue. 1947.

Sotheby Parke-Bernet. Fine Natural History Books Early Printed Books & Illuminated Manuscripts . . . The Property of The Pierpont Morgan Library, The Philip and A.S.W. Rosenbach Foundation, the Arents Collection of the New York Public Library and Other Owners. New York, 1977.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Rosenbach and Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.3 (winter 2017-18): 7 par. + listing. <Blake (2018)>

A list of “every contemporary Blake that Rosenbach is known to have dealt with” (par. 7) in both alphabetical and chronological order.

Bodmer, George R. “A.S.W. Rosenbach: Dealer and Collector.” The Lion and the Unicorn 22.3 (1998): 277-88.

Wolf, Edwin, with John F. Fleming. Rosenbach: A Biography. Cleveland and New York, 1960. <BB #3002>

“A biography of the man [. . .] who probably sold more important Blake books than any other has or will” (BB #3002).

Rosenbloom, Charles J. \(1898–1973\)

Catalogue of a Loan Exhibition: Prints from the Collection of Charles J. Rosenbloom, February 8th to March 31st, MCMXXXVIII. Pittsburgh: Carnegie Institute, [1938].

Kutter, Suzanne, and Donald Gallup. “A Check-List of the Bequest [of Charles J. Rosenbloom].” Yale University Library Gazette. 49.4 (April 1975): 311-43.

On his bequest to Yale University, including his proofs of Job.

Rosenwald, Lessing J. \(1891-1979\)

Papers

Rosenwald, Lessing J. “Papers, 1932-79.” The Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress. <WBHC 2609>

Catalogues

Illustrated Books and Original Drawings of William Blake [. . .] Loaned by Lessing J. Rosenwald. Philadelphia, 1930. <BB 636>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Print Club of Philadelphia from 17 Feb. to 1 Mar. 1930.

Millard, Mrs. George M. A Descriptive Hand-List of a Loan Exhibition of Books and Works of Art by William Blake, 1757-1827, chiefly from the Collection of Mr. Lessing J. Rosenwald. 1936. <BB #639>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the Little Museum of La Miniatura, Pasadena CA, from 16 to 28 Mar. 1936.

Goff, Frederick R. “Catalogue of Fine Books and Manuscripts Selected for Exhibition at the Library of Congress from the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection October 1945.” Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress 3 (1945): 5-51. <BB #655>

Schild, Marion. The Rosenwald Collection. A Catalogue of Illustrated Books and Manuscripts, of Books from Celebrated Presses, and of Bindings and Maps 1150-1950 The Gift of Lessing J. Rosenwald to the Library of Congress. Ed. Frederick R. Goff. Washington DC, 1954. <BB #668>

“William Blake” The Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection: A Catalogue of the Gifts of Lessing J. Rosenwald to the Library of Congress, 1943-1975. Washington [DC]: Library of Congress, 1977. 323-42. <BBS 294>

Mang, Kathleen, and Peter Van Wingen, ed. “William Blake.” Vision of a Collector: The Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection in the Library of Congress Rare Book Room and Special Collections Division. Washington: Library of Congress, 1991. 289-301. <BBS 558>

Descriptions, with some remembrance of Lessing Rosenwald, of Songs of Innocence (copy B) and Songs of Innocence and of Experience (copy C and Z) by David Bindman; The Book of Urizen (copy G) by Robert N. Essick; Night Thoughts engravings (colored copy B) by Nelson Hilton; and Milton a Poem (copy D) by Martin Butlin.

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Growth of the Rosenwald Blake Collection.” Notes and Queries 64.4 (Dec. 2017): 583-89. <Blake (2018)>

“[I]t is possible that White and Rosenwald had more copies of Blake’s works in Illuminated Printing than Blake himself ever had at one time” (583).

Fine, Ruth. “[Update to ‘A Checklist of Blake Material in the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection.’]” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 111. <BBS 391>

“With Mr. Rosenwald’s death and the transfer of the collections to Washington, these items have become the property of either the National Gallery of Art (NGA) or the Library of Congress (LC)” (111). See “A Checklist of Blake Material in the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection.”

Lehre, Ruth Fine. "A Checklist of Blake Material in the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection, Alverthorpe Gallery, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.3 (winter 1975-76): 58-85. <BBS 377>

Very useful enumeration. See "[\[Update to 'A Checklist of Blake Material in the Lessing J. Rosenwald Collection'\]](#)" for details on the collection's transference after Rosenwald's death.

Matheson, William. "Lessing J. Rosenwald: 'A Splendidly Generous Man.'" Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress 37.1 (winter 1980): 2-24. <Blake (2012)>

Chronicles Rosenwald's giving, including his Blakes.

"28,000 items of papers," including "about 500 pp. of correspondence concerning the Rosenbach Foundation (1946-1979), of which Rosenwald was president" (WBHC 2609).

Van Wingen, Peter. "Into the Mystic: Rare Books Division Acquires Important Addition to Blake Collection." Library of Congress Information Bulletin 53 (1994): 443-44. <WBHC 2796>

"The Library of Congress acquired in 1994 a copy of Mary Wollstonecraft, Original Stories ([1791]), with Blake's prints coloured 'contemporary with the time of publication' in keeping with Blake's 'concept of the completed book' [though the "vibrant colors" described are not at all characteristic of Blake's works in Illuminated Printing in 1791]" (WBHC 2796, Bentley's emendation).

Rossetti, William Michael (See William Michael Rossetti in Blake and Writers)

Shaw, E.J. (fl. 1879-1919)

Catalogue

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1925.

Sherman, Philip D. (d. 1957)

Study

Gourlay, Alexander S. "Philip D. Sherman's Blakes at Brown University." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.3 (winter 1994-95): 94-99. <WBHC 1655>

"Previously untraced copies of Europe [c] pl. 11, 17[;] Songs [o] pl. 13, 20-21 [;] a posthumous pull from Thornton's Virgil, Job [1874] pl. 15, 20[;] and 'Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims' fifth state" (WBHC 1655).

Smith, George D. (1870-1920)

Papers

Smith \(George D.\) Papers. Huntington Library. Collection no. mssHM 49652-49686.

Catalogues

Anderson Gallery. Catalogue of the late George D. Smith. New York, 1921.

Anderson Galleries. Part I of Books and Autographs Sold by Order of the George D. Smith Book Company Inc in Liquidation. New York, 1928.

Anderson Galleries. Part IV of Books and Prints Sold by Order of the George D. Smith Book Company Inc In Liquidation. New York, 1928.

Smith, George Campbell, Jr. (1892-1937)

Catalogues

William Blake: The Description of a Small Collection of His Works In the Library of a New York Collector. New York: George Campbell Smith, 1927. <BB #631>

Privately printed.

William Blake: The Renowned Collection of First Editions, Original Drawings, Autograph Letters and an Important Painting in Oils. [. . .] Collected by the Late George C. Smith, Jr.
New York: Parke-Bernet Galleries Inc., 1938. <BB #644>

Studies

Brooks, Phillip. "Notes on Rare Books." New York Times Book Review 30 Oct. 1938. p. 35. <BB #1293>

On the sale of George C. Smith, Jr. collection.

"Blake Collection Sold for $66,807." New York Times 3 Nov. 1938.

Regarding the 1938 sale.

Taylor, H. Robert (d. 1985)

Studies

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 1985." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986): 13.

Identifies the works now held by the Princeton University Library that were given by Taylor.

Thorne, Mrs. Landon K.

Catalogue

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Intro. Charles Ryskamp. The Blake Collection of Mrs. Landon K. Thorne. New York The Piermont Morgan Library, 1971. <BB #706, WBHC 1175-76>

Compiled for the exhibition held 19 Nov. 1971 to 22 Jan. 1972 at the Piermont Morgan Library. The catalogue includes Bentley's very useful essay and list, "The Great Collections of Blake's Books," pp. 11-15.

Tinker, Chauncey Brewster (1876-1963)

Catalogue

Metzdorf, Robert F. The Tinker Library: A Bibliographical Catalogue of the Books and Manuscripts Collected by Chauncey Brewster Tinker. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1959. <BB #683>

See also the current digital description of the collection.

Tonner, Mrs. William T. (d. 1971)

Study

Butlin, Martin. “The Blake Collection of Mrs. William T. Tonner.” Philadelphia Museum of Art Bulletin 67.307 (Jul.-Sep. 1972): 2, 5-31. <BB #1325, WBHC 1817>

A description of eleven items, most of which were donated to the Philadelphia Museum of Art, including monochrome wash drawings of biblical subjects.²⁸⁷

Wall, A.C.J.

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue. London, 1970.

Weston, Gould

Catalogue

Christie's. Collection of the late Col. Gould Weston. (1957). <BB #672, WBHC 1149-50>

Weston, Mrs. Anderdon

Catalogue

Christie. Catalogue. London, 1904.

White, William Augustus (1843–1927), and Alfred T. White (See also Francis White Emerson)

Papers

“White, William Augustus (1843–1927) who collected more Blakes than anyone else ever has. White’s extraordinarily detailed acquisition notes are in the Houghton Library, Harvard University (MS Am 2087), in six volumes. White’s acquisition books are not recorded in the Catalogue of Manuscripts in the Houghton Library, Harvard University, 8 vols. (Alexandria: Chadwyck-Healey, 1986–87). [. . .] Each volume has been digitized and is available online.” <Blake (2015)>

Catalogues

Anderson Auction Company. Selections from the Important Private Library of a Brooklyn Collector. 27 Oct. 1911. [Alfred T. White, brother of W.A. White].

Studies

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “The Growth of the Rosenwald Blake Collection.” Notes and Queries 64.4 (Dec. 2017): 583-89. <Blake (2018)>

“[I]t is possible that White and Rosenwald had more copies of Blake’s works in Illuminated Printing than Blake himself ever had at one time” (583).

²⁸⁷ Part of her collection also passed to the Lutheran Church in America, including Night Thoughts colored copy G, “two recorded impressions of the color-print ‘Newton’ (Butlin #307), an early state of copper engraving, ‘The Canterbury Pilgrims,’ and a drawing, ‘Moses striking the rock’ (Butlin #445).” See Thomas V. Lange, “A Rediscovered Copy of Young’s Night Thoughts,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.3 (winter 1981-82), 134.

Whitney, John Hay (1904-1982) and Betsey Maria Whitney (born Cushing, previously Roosevelt) (1908-1998)

Catalogues

Sotheby. The Estate of Mrs. John Hay Whitney. New York, 1999. <WBHC 1278-79>

Sotheby. William Blake's Good and Evil Angels. Property of the Greentree Foundation from the Collection of Mr. & Mrs. John Hay Whitney, New York May 5, 2004. 2004. <WBHC 1319-20>

Studies

Bentley, E.B. “Urizen in New York City.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.1 (summer 1999): 27-30.

A first-person account of the Sotheby auction of Urizen copy E, which brought $2,532,000.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake in the Marketplace, 1998.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.4 (spring 1999): 100-34. <WBHC 1677>

Notes Betsey Cushing Whitney's death and her Blake holdings.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake in the Marketplace, 1999.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.4 (spring 2000): 100-34. <WBHC 1681-82>

On the sale of Betsey Cushing Whitney's Urizen copy E.

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 2004.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 38.4 (spring 2005): 134-150. <WBHC 1701>

Describes the Betsey Cushing Whitney estate sale at Sotheby's on 5 May 2004.

Wolf, Edwin II (1911-1991)

Catalogue

William Blake: The Blake Library of Renowned Bibliography and Blake Scholar Edwin Wolf II: An Outstanding Collection of 400 Items Including Books[,] Pamphlets[,] and Wolf's Archive of Unpublished Correspondence. [Bristol, 1990.] <BBS 310>

Twenty-First-Century Collectors (See also Victoria University, University of Toronto in Collection Catalogues)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. (1930-2017) and Elizabeth Bentley (born Budd) (1930-2011)

Study

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Bibliomania: The Felicitous Infection and the Comforting Cure.” Papers of the Bibliographical Society of Canada: Cahiers de la société bibliographique du Canada 45.1 (spring 2007): 7-41. <WBHC 1599>

An account of G.E. and Elizabeth Bentley's book collecting.

Harris, Maureen Scott. “William Blake Illuminated: Victoria Library receives Bentley Collection of Blake Masterpieces.” *Vic Report*²⁸⁸ 35.1 (2006): 6-10. <WBHC 2130>

²⁸⁸ The journal of the Alumni Association of Victoria University in the University of Toronto.

Berland, Abel E. (1915-2010)

Catalogue

Christie's. The Library of Abel E. Berland: Part I: Important English Literature, Science and Philosophy. New York: Christie's, 2001. <WBHC 1310>

Reproduces front cover and Bentley plates 3, 5,8, 11, 17 of Innocence copy J.

Bradley, Martin H. (d. 1988)

Catalogue

Sotheby. The Library of H. Bradley Martin: Highly Important English Literature. New York, 1990.

Essick, Robert N. (1942-)

Catalogue

Essick, Robert N. William Blake and His Contemporaries and Followers: Selected Works from the Collection of Robert N. Essick: An Exhibition Catalogue. San Marino: Huntington Library, 1987. <BBS 304>

Lyle, Janice S. “Handlist of the Essick Blake Collection.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.4 (spring 1978): 21-35. <BBS 384>

Status of the collection at the time, with reproductions of several of Essick's pieces.

Studies

Essick, Robert N. “Collecting Blake.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2010. 19-34. <WBHC 2436-40>

Highlights important collectors of Blake, with personal anecdotes on his own experience as a collector.

Hargraves, Matthew. “America’s Blake.” William Blake: Visionary. Ed. Edina Adam, with Julian Brooks, and an essay by Matthew Hargraves. Los Angeles: J. Paul Getty Museum, 2020. 29-35. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

A survey of major American Blake collectors, from the Transcendentalists to Robert N. Essick.

Register, Kathy. “Passion in His Work: Professor Finds Pleasure in Studying Artwork of Writer.” Star News 5 Nov. 1987. B1. <BBS 620>

“Journalistic account of Professor Essick’s Blake collecting” (BBS 620).

Keynes, Stephen (1927-2017)

“The Cause of Bibliomania”: Fine Editions from the Library of Stephen Keynes OBE FLS. Type & Forme Twenties No. 2. The Roxburghe Club, the William Blake Trust, and Clover Hill Editions: Grantham, 2019.²⁸⁹

²⁸⁹ Not recorded in Blake.

The catalogue lists the William Blake Trust edition of Blake's Illustrations of Dante (1978), but also contains biographical essays on Stephen Keynes and his involvement with the Blake Trust by his nephew, Simon Keynes.

Lipman, Roger

Catalogue

Windle, John. William Blake: A Catalogue of Books by and about Blake and his Circle from 1775-2008 Mainly from the Collections of Roger and Kay Easson and Roger Lipman with Additions from Stock. Catalogue 46. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 2009. <WBHC 1383-84>

Parker, Alan

Brooks, Richard. "Bring Me My Buyers: Blake Homes for Sale." Sunday Times [London], 16 March 2014. <WBHC 1791-92>

"The public relations guru Sir Alan Parker is weighing plans to buy the former London home of the poet [17 South Molton Street] . . . and preserve it for the nation.' He 'would need to raise £7m'" (WBHC 1791-92).

Ryskamp, Charles \(1928-2010\)

Hamilton, William H. "Dürers Near the Kitchen, William Blake in the Bedroom." New York Times (18 Oct. 2004). <WBHC 2122>

"On the collection of Charles Ryskamp in Princeton" (WBHC 2122).

Property from the Collection of Charles Ryskamp Sold for the Primary Benefit of Princeton University. Auct. cat., Sotheby's, New York. New York: Jan. 25, 2011. No. 149.

William Blake's World: "A New Heaven Is Begun." The Morgan Library and Museum. 2009-10. <WBHC 1379-83>

The online catalogue for the exhibition at the Piermont Morgan Library and Museum, New York, held from 11 Sep. 2009 to 3 Jan. 2010. No print catalogue was produced, but the webpage linked to in the title includes descriptions of the objects displayed and a YouTube presentation by the former director Charles Ryskamp on the Blake items that he donated to the Piermont.

Sendak, Maurice \(1928-2012\) \(See also Maurice Sendak in Blake and Artists\)

Christie, New York. 21 Jan. 2015. <WBHC 1421-22>

A description of the proposed sale.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 2012." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.1 (summer 2013): par. 9.

Provides list of items held by Sendak.

Shiller, Just G. \(1943- \)

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 1985." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.1 (summer 1986): 13.

Vershbow, Arthur E. (1922-2012), and Charlotte Vershbow (born Zimmerman) (1924-2000)

Catalogues

Christie's. The Collection of Arthur and Charlotte Vershbow. New York, 2013. <WBHC 1403-04>

The print catalogue and the website (linked to in the title) includes Songs copy p, Bentley plates 1, 8, and 46, and watercolor sketch, "The Waking of Lenora" <Butlin #338>.

Christie. The Collection of Arthur & Charlotte Vershbow, Part Four: The Neoclassical, Romantic, Symbolist and Modern Periods. 29 October 2013. New York, 2013. <WBHC 1406-07>

Commercial book engravings lots 784-89; Virgil watercolor lot 790; Virgil plates lot 791; Job lot 792; facsimiles lots 793-95.

Windle, John

Windle, John. "A Blake Collector's Vade Mecum." A Troubled Paradise: William Blake's Wood Engravings. San Francisco: John Windle Antiquarian Bookseller, 1999. 33-41. <WBHC 1997-98>

The afterword to Essick's book containing advice for collecting Blake.

Windle, John. "Introduction to Blake: A Personal View from John Windle on the Roots of His Collection." (8 Nov. [2000]). <WBHC 2873>

No longer available at the website.

Comics, Graphic Novels, and Video Games

Studies

Atkinson, Rosalind. “A Japanese Blake: Embodied Visions in William Blake’s The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790) and Tezuka Osamu’s Phoenix (1967–88).” British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Ed. Alex Watson and Laurence Williams. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. 341-60. <Blake (2020)>

Focusing on Blake and Tezuka Osamu’s ongoing manga, Phoenix, argues that, taken outside his immediate historical context, Blake can function as “a free-floating figure” who “can also facilitate creative appropriation in cultures outside the one of origin” (356).

Green, Matthew J.A. ““The end of the world. That’s a bad thing right?: Form and Function from William Blake to Alan Moore.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 175-86. <WBHC 1871-73>

On Blake in Moore’s Promethea.

Green, Matthew J. A. “‘she Brings Apocalypse’: Sex, Imagination and Redemptive Transgression in William Blake and the Graphic Novels of Alan Moore.” Literature Compass 8.10 (Oct. 2011): 739-56. <WBHC 2103>

“[I]nvestigates the representations of gender and sexuality in Moore’s work, situating these in relation to Blake’s equation of eroticism and imaginative transformation” (abstract).

ImageText: Interdisciplinary Comics Study 3.2 (winter 2007). Special Issue: “William Blake and Visual Culture.” Ed. Roger Whitson and Donald Ault. <WBHC 2184-85>

Original essays that often draw on comics as an analogue of Blake’s own practices.

Marchetto Santorun, M. Cecilia. “‘Terrible monsters Sin-bred’: Blakean Monstrosity in Alan Moore’s Graphic Novels.” Palgrave Communications 6 (2020). <Blake (2021)>

“This article will discuss Blake and Moore’s use of visual and verbal aesthetics to identify as monstrous characters like Satan, Urizen and Orc in Blake and William Gull, Asmodeus and Cthulhu in Moore to pinpoint the meanings that underlie them and how the direct or indirect Blakean influence operates in Moore’s works” (abstract).

Marchetto Santorun, María Cecilia. “The War ‘twixt Sun and Moon’: Evil and Gender in William Blake’s Early Illuminated Books and Alan Moore’s From Hell.” English Studies 100.4 (Jun. 2019): 387-406. <Blake (2020)>

“This article explores evil as repression in Blake and in Moore, and addresses Moore’s treatment of evil and its connections with Blake’s ideas about gender” (abstract).

Paris-Popa, Andreea. “Breaking the Contract between God and the Visual-Literary Fusion: Illuminated Manuscripts, William Blake and the Graphic Novel.” American, British and Canadian Studies 30.1 (June 2018): 133-52. In English (published in Romania). <Blake (2019)>

“William Blake’s late eighteenth-century illuminated books moved towards an individual, personal literature conveyed via unique pieces of art that asserted the importance of individuality in the process of creation,” leading, ultimately, to the graphic novel” (abstract).

Riordan, John. “Blake/Morrison.” Vala 4 (2023): 88-96. <Blake (2024)>

On Blake in the work of comic book writer Grant Morrison.

Shteynbrekher, Andrey, and Konstantin Savel'ev. “Bleykovskie motivy v sovremennom mediaprostranstve \(na primere komp'yuternoy igry ‘Devil May Cry 5’ i animatsionnogo seriala ‘Patriotizm Moriarti’\) [Blake’s Motives in the Modern Media Space (the Example of the Computer Game Devil May Cry 5 and the Animated Series Patriotism of Moriarty)].” Mirovaya literatura glazami sovremennoy molodezhi. Tsifrovaya epokha. Sbornik materialov VIII mezhunarodnoy molodezhnoy nauchno-prakticheskoy konferentsii [World Literature in the Eyes of Modern Youth. The Digital Age. Collection of Materials of the VIII International Youth Scientific and Practical Conference]. Magnitogorsk, 2022. 157-62. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2023)>

The article examines the phenomenon of Blake in the modern gaming and media space based on the material of the game project Devil May Cry 5 and the animated series Patriotism of Moriarty. It also analyzes the main layer of the poet’s texts and engravings appearing in the products of popular culture.

Spooner, Catherine. “My Friend the Devil: Gothic Comics, the Whimsical Macabre and Rewriting William Blake in Vehlmann and Kerascoët’s Satania.” Gothic Studies 25.3 (2023): 318-34. <Blake (2024)>

“I propose that Fabien Vehlmann and Kerascoët’s graphic novel Satania (2016) extends the whimsical macabre in new directions, by drawing on the work of Romantic poet and artist William Blake, whose illustrated books are often cited as forerunners of modern comics” (abstract).

Whitlark, James. “Blake: Visionary against the Commonplace.” Illuminated Fantasy: From Blake’s Visions to Graphic Fiction. Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck: Farleigh Dickinson Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1980. 38-51. <BBS 677>

“Despite the obvious uniqueness of Blake’s visionary works, they share common features with other illuminated fantasy, even with such popular members of that genre as modern comic books” (50).

Whittaker, Jason. “From Hell: Blake and Evil in Popular Culture.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 192-204. <WBHC 2862-63>

“[H]ow Blake’s critical of the Moral Law influenced a number of writers at the end of the twentieth century,” including Thomas Harris, J.G. Ballard, Michael Dibdin, and Alan Moore.

Whittaker, Jason. “Romantic Caricature and Comics.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 471-85. <Blake (2024)>

On Romantic caricature's contribution to modern comics, closing on Blake's depiction in comics (pp. 479-85).

Composite Art, Editorial Theory, Print Culture, and Media Studies (Also “Sister Arts” and Ekphrasis)

Introductions

Eaves, Morris. “Editing and Editions.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 94-101. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Otto, Peter. “Blake’s Composite Art.” Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 132-66. <WBHC 2867-68>

Traces the development of the phrase, “composite art,” in Jean H. Hagstrum, W.J.T. Mitchell, and Vincent De Luca, before considering examples from There is No Natural Religion and Jerusalem.

Paley, Morton D. “Editing Blake.” The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley, ed. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. I.25-34. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

A history of editing Blake in facsimiles, typeset editions, and digital editions.

Ripley, Wayne C. “Introduction: Editing Blake.” Editing and Reading Blake. Ed. Wayne C. Ripley and Justin Van Kleeck. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2010. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume. 35 pars. <WBHC 2587-89>

“[S]urveys how editors have represented William Blake’s diverse range of media productions over the last century and a half” (abstract).

Studies

Altick, Richard D. Paintings from Books: Art and Literature in Britain, 1760-1900. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1985.

A good overview of literary paintings. Blake is referenced often, especially in the chapter, “Eighteenth-Century Book Illustrations,” pp. 37-55, which also considers Boydell’s Shakespeare, Macklin’s Poet’s, and Fuseli’s Milton galleries.

Bass, Eben. “Songs of Innocence and of Experience: The Thrust of Design.” Blake’s Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 196-213. <BB #1580>

On the wider design elements of the Songs.

Baulch, David M. Blake’s “Vala or The Four Zoas Hypertext and Multiple Plurality.” Wordsworth Circle 30.3 (summer 1999): 154-160. <WBHC 2880-81>

Argues for a hypertext edition of Vala or The Four Zoas to capture the multiple narrative layers “with an eye to the various interpretative possibilities” (156).

Beer, John. “Words or Images—Blake’s Representation of History.” Romanticism, Revolution and Language: The Fate of the Word from Samuel Johnson to George Eliot. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2009. 81-98. <WBHC 1594>

Surveying Blake’s career through America and Europe, suggests that, by 1793, Blake was “torn in allegiance, divided between word and image” (97).

Behrendt, Stephen C. “‘something in My Eye’: Irritants in Blake’s Illuminated Texts.” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steven Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. 78-95. <WBHC 2812-13>

On reading Blake’s “illuminated pages” (78) and how “Blake characteristically invokes and manipulates our expectations about determinacy (of word, of image, of ‘meaning’) to force us to recognize and appreciate the multiplicity of potential signification that resides in seemingly every word, every line, every suggestion” (90).

Bender, John and Anne Mellor. “Liberating the Sister Arts: The Revolution of Blake’s ‘Infant Sorrow’.” ELH 50.2 (1983): 297-319. <BBS 365>

“In ‘Infant Sorrow’ Blake denies the necessity of ranking the arts and thus breaks sharply with the tradition of the paragone [or debate between poetry and painting] that Lessing had revived” (298) and “explores the possibility that the two arts may neither conflict nor interact” (300).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake and ‘the Wondrous Art of Writing’: Letter Faces, Letter Formation, Capitalization.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 21-46. <Blake (2025)>

“This chapter documents and examines Blake’s myriad ‘hands’ evident across his works, from manuscripts to illuminated printing, showing there to be considerable variety in letter formations, capitalizations, and extra-textual features such as catchwords, colophons, and letter sizes. Such differences in writing are difficult to represent typographically, even if facsimiles were included in letterpress editions of Blake’s works” (abstract).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake’s Loose Canons.” Language. Philology. Culture 1 (2013): 20-45. <WBHC 2306>

“About editing Blake, chiefly William Blake’s Writings (1978)” (WBHC 2306).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake’s Works as Performances: Intentions and Inattentions.” Text 4 (1988): 319-41. <BBS 366>

Argues for considering each copy of Blake’s “work as a separate performance” (334).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Final Intention or Protean Performance: Classical Editing Theory and the Case of William Blake.” Editing in Australia. Ed. Paul Eggert. Campbell: South Wales University Press, 1990. <BBS 367>

“An ‘examination of the protean works of William Blake’ in search of ‘the best editorial solution’ to the problem of how to edit his work (170)” (BBS 367).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “William Blake’s Protean Text.” Editing Eighteenth-Century Texts. Ed. D.I.B. Smith. Toronto, 1968. 44-58. <BB #1182>

While ostensibly on editing, lays out Bentley’s bibliographic program for the unique difficulties presented by Blake’s texts.

Bigwood, Carol. "Seeing Blake's Illuminated Texts." The Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 49.4 (1991): 307-15. <BBS 372>

Uses Merleau-Ponty to "show how [Blake's illuminated books] frustrate the usual cognitive reading of texts and encourage a fuller perceptual experience. His books, thereby, not only slightly disengage us from the epochal perspective, but alert us to the restrictive character of our thinking, intimating a more flexible thinking that is at once more in-sight-ful²⁹⁰ and more open to the prelinguistic movements of perception" (307).

Brylowe, Thora. Romantic Art in Practice: Cultural Work and the Sister Arts, 1760–1820. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

An important study of the Sister Arts in the Romantic era. It includes discussions of Blake and Antiquarianism, the Portland Vase (including Blake's engravings), the Hunts, John Landseer, and the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery.

Burkett, Andrew. "Blake's Moving Images." Romantic Mediations: Media Theory and British Romanticism. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2019)>

Ties Blake's illuminated books to experimental cinema.

Burkett, Andrew. "William Blake and the Emergence of Romantic Media Studies." Literature Compass 12.9 (Sep. 2015): 439-47. <WBHC 1813>

"While Blake's poetry, painting, and printmaking have proven to be extremely generative of digital scholarly projects, Romantic media studies' implicit investment in his work (and especially the nature and function of his illuminated manuscripts) requires further investigation" (abstract).

Butlin, Martin. "Word as Image in William Blake." Romanticism and Millenarianism. Ed. Tim Fulford. New York and Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2002. 207-17. <WBHC 1818>²⁹¹

On the religious and technical aspects of the word and image relationship.

Calè, Luisa. "Blake and the Literary Galleries." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 185-209. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers "how Blake responded to the rhetoric and aesthetics of the literary galleries," with a focus on "Fuseli's Satan Bursts From Chaos, a Milton Gallery picture which Blake was commissioned to engrave" (186), a design that echoes in The [First] Book of Urizen and the illustrations to Night Thoughts.

Calè, Luisa. "Blake, Young, and the Poetics of the Composite Page." Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 453-79. <Blake (2018)>

"Blake's Night Thoughts laboratory explores the potential of letterpress printing and the changing possibilities of the book and the composite page. In this essay, I will rematerialize the notion of Blake's 'composite art,' paying attention to the materials and practices involved in his engagement with Night Thoughts and in that ‘radical form of mixed art,’ the manuscript of Vala or The Four Zoas” (454).

²⁹⁰ The hyphens are Bigwood's.

²⁹¹ Blake (2003) references the different articles on Blake but not the collection as such.

Calè, Luisa. “A Dream of Thiralatha': Promiscuous Book Gatherings and the Wanderings of Blake's Separate Plates.” Studies in Romanticism 59.4 (2020): 431-45. <Blake (2021)>

“This essay explores the dynamics of illustration in William Blake’s illuminated printing through an example that questions and disorders the boundaries between books. I will piece together the complex bibliographic history of a “separate plate,” now known under the title “A Dream of Thiralatha,” which exists in two copies, one currently at the British Museum Department of Prints and Drawings, the other at the National Gallery of Art in Washington” (432).

Carr, Stephen Leo. “Visionary Syntax: Nontryrannical Coherence in Blake's Visual Art.” The Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation 22.3 (1981): 222-48. <BBS 433>

“I proposed to describe his revisionary practices as a visual artist, especially the ways he organized parts into a coherent whole” (222). Considers many works, including the annotations to Reynolds, On Homers Poetry, and several designs from Jerusalem, and contrasts Blake’s linear aesthetics with those of Flaxman and Cumberland.

Castanedo, Fernando. “‘O what a scene is here’: Visual References in Blake’s An Island in the Moon.” William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 257-78. <Blake (2025)>

Suggests that in Island Blake alludes “to several works of art, mostly by using very short, at times almost epigrammatic, parodical ekphrases” (abstract).

Chayes, Irene H. “Picture and Page, Reader and Viewer in Blake's Night Thoughts Illustrations.” Studies in Romanticism 30.3 (fall 1991): 439-71. <BBS 436, WBHC 1840>

“[T]he peculiar format of the illustrations to Edward Young’s Night Thoughts bring the spectator, or beholder, or viewer into an usually intimate relation to both the literary text and the water color drawing,” and, thereby, “the viewer is required to be a reader first, but his response to the drawing may take him far from the original text” (442).

Chayes, Irene H. “Words in Pictures: Testing the Boundary: Inscriptions by William Blake.” Word & Image 7 (1991): 85-97. <BBS 436, WBHC 1840>

Blake’s “literary or Bible illustrations are associated with verbal passages that often appear as captions or inscriptions on the pictures, or as separate descriptions, which may amount to condensed commentaries on the original texts” (abstract).

Clark, David L. “Blake’s Decomposite Art: On the Image of Language and the Ruins of Representation.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 233-61.²⁹² <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

²⁹² A revised and shortened version of his “How to Do Things with Shakespeare: Illustrative Theory and Practice in Blake's Pity.” The Mind in Creation: Essays in English Literature in Honour of Ross G. Woodman, ed. J. Douglas Kneale (1992), 106-33, <BBS 537, WBHC 1853>.

Discusses how Blake rejects conventional models of illustration, reading Pity as “beautifully ruinous for illustrative theory and practice” (235).

Crosby, Mark. “‘minutely Appropriate Execution’: Variation and Pentimento in Blake’s Title Pages.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 111-32. <Blake (2025)>

“This chapter argues that despite Blake’s strictures on the significant differences in theory and practice between what he considered true ‘inspiration and imagination’ pictorially rendered via the ‘bounding outline’ and an inferior aesthetic predicated on memory executed via ‘blotting and blurring’, there was some leeway in his creative process for variation and artistic second thoughts” (abstract).

Dane, Joseph A. Out of Sorts: On Typography and Print Culture. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2011. 136-40. <WBHC 1920>

Examines issues tied to the Blake Archive’s theory and practice of diplomatic transcription.

De Luca, Vincent Arthur. “The Changing Order of Plates in Jerusalem, Chapter II.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.4 (spring 1983): 192-205. <BBS 394>

A very useful account of the two orderings in Chapter II of Jerusalem, with much attention to the interplay of text and design in the sequences as a whole. The first sequence is found in copies A, B, and C, and the second, in copies D and E. There is an appendix on copy F’s order and the change in page numbers.

Dilworth, Thomas. “The Hands of Milton: Blake’s Multistable Image of Self-Annihilation.” Mosaic 16.3 (1983): 11-27. <BBS 453>

Considers the visual depiction of Milton’s journey on pl. 36 as a “multistable” image in which “two different visual interpretations [...] are nearly equally clear or compelling so that the viewer perceives sometimes the one and sometimes the other” (11).

Easson, Kay Parkhurst. “Blake and the Art of the Book.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 35-52. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers how Blake played on, incorporated, and rejected the conventions of book and illustration publishing.

Eaves, Morris. “Crafting Editorial Settlements.” Romanticism on the Net 41-42 (2006): 33 pars. <WBHC 1974>

Positions the Blake Archive in the history of efforts to edit Blake.

Eaves, Morris. “The Editorial Void: Notes toward a Study of Oblivion.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 517-38. <Blake (2018)>

Ruminates on how editorial practices “help to reveal the broader outlines of perception, control, desire, and memory that make editing a paradigm of human effort” (517).

Eaves, Morris. "Graphicality: Multimedia Fables for 'Textual' Critics." Reimagining Textuality: Textual Studies in the Late Age of Print. Ed. Elizabeth Bergmann Loizeaux and Neil Fraistat. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 2002. 99-122. <Blake (2003)>

"[G]raphicality is as relevant to authority, transmission, and representation as is textuality, and [. . .], for all but the most abstract philosophical purposes, graphicality is inextricable from textuality" (99).

Eaves, Morris. "Picture Problems: X-Editing Images 1992-2010." Digital Humanities Quarterly 3.3 (summer 2009): 42 par. <WBHC 1976>

Coins the term "X-editing" to represent the difficulties of editing images in digital humanities projects.

Eaves, Morris, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi. "The William Blake Archive: The Medium When the Millennium is the Message." Romanticism and Millenarianism. Ed. Tim Fulford. New York: Palgrave, 2002. 219-33. <WBHC 603, 2811>

"We believe that it is helpful to perceive the Blake project [i.e., the Blake Archive] as an extension of ongoing archival, cataloguing, and editorial enterprises into a new medium in order to exploit its radical advantages" (233).

Essick, Robert N. "Blake and the Production of Meaning." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. 7-26. <WBHC 1863-65>

A key essay responding to Eaves's Counter-Arts Conspiracy and Viscomi's Blake and the Idea of the Book and grappling with "the divergence of [Blake's] general concept and [his] artistic performance" (22) from the perspective of the collector or bibliographer.

Essick, Robert N. "How Blake's Body Means." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 197-217. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

An important essay that responds to Carr's "Illuminated Printing: Toward a Logic of Difference" with "a more historically orientated view of graphic production" (197).

Essick, Robert N. "Preludium: Meditations on a Fiery Pegasus." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 1-10. <BBS 467, WBHC 2003-04>

Considers what literary scholars and art historians can bring to Blake working together.

Essick, Robert N. "Representation, Anxiety, and the Bibliographic Sublime." Huntington Library Quarterly 59 (1998): 503-28. <WBHC 1997>

On the anxiety of representation, with references to Marriage (copy L) and Tristram Shandy: "That response to semiotic uncertainty, when inscribed within the physical features of a book, I term the bibliographic sublime" (513). Reproduces Marriage copy L.

Essick, Robert N. "Visual/Verbal Relationships in Book Illustration." British Art 1740-1820: Essays in Honor of Robert R. Wark. Ed. Guillard Sutherland. San Marino: Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, 1992. 169-204. <WBHC 1998-99>

Positions Blake as working within, rather than against, the conventions of his time: “Blake’s development of illustrative techniques is an exploitation of conventions he shared with contemporaries more than a revolt against them” (185).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, William Hamilton, and the Materials of Graphic Meaning.” ELH 52.4 (1985): 833-72. <BBS 466>

A key essay for understanding how Blake worked with graphic media and what chalcographic principles should be applied when analyzing them. Uses William Hamilton’s illustrations to James Thomson’s The Seasons to highlight the complexities of graphic production and interpretation.

Fox, Michael. “Graphing VALA, or The Four Zoas: Toward a Dynamic Edition.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 205-30. <Blake (2025)>

Offers a model of editing The Four Zoas and other literary texts using graph technology.

Frye, Northrop. “Poetry and Design in William Blake.” The Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 10.1²⁹³ (Sep. 1951): 35-42.²⁹⁴ <BB #1648>

A short but prescient article that stresses the importance of attending to Blake’s combination of words and design, along with Blake’s experiments in different media.

Glazer-Schotz, Myra, and Gerda Norvig. “Blake’s Book of Changes: On Viewing Three Copies of the Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Blake Studies 9.1-2 (1980): 100-21. <BBS 413>

An early example of a detailed comparison of different copies. They compare Songs copies A, B, and T.

Goode, Mike. “Blakespotting” and “The Joy of Looking: What William Blake’s Pictures Want.” Romantic Capabilities: Blake, Scott, Austen, and the New Messages of Old Media. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2020. 35-98.²⁹⁵ <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023)>

Both chapters highlight the fragmentation of Blake’s texts and images and their widespread circulation in ways in order to further theorize reception theory.

Greenberg, Mark L. “Romantic Technology: Books, Printing, and Blake’s Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Literature and Technology. Ed. Mark L. Greenberg and Lance Schachterle. Bethlehem: Lehigh University Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1992. 154-76. <WBHC 2104>

Largely focuses on Marriage and its critique of print conventions. “Viewed especially from within Blake’s project, we can witness technology and prophecy interpenetrate reciprocally and dynamically” (157).

²⁹³ Not recorded as a collection by WBHC.

²⁹⁴ Rpt. under same title in Blake: A Collection of Critical Essays, ed. Northrop Frye (1965), and Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angela Esterhammer (2005).

²⁹⁵ Incorporates Goode’s “Blakespotting,” PMLA 121.3 (2006), 769-86, <WBHC 2091>, and “The Joy of Looking: What Blake’s Pictures Want,” Representations 119.1 (2012), <WBHC 2091>, 1-36.

Guest, Harriet, and John Barrell. “Who Ever Perished, Being Innocent? Some Plates from the Songs of Innocence.” Style 22 (1988): 238-62. <BBS 496>

Considers the “Introduction” and “Infant Joy” from Innocence to suggest “[t]hese two conjunctions of word and image [. . .] produce two different constructions of innocence” (239).

Hagstrum, Jean H. “Blake and the Sister-Arts Tradition.” Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 82-91. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Argues “Blake [. . .] did in fact remain profoundly influenced by the pictorialist masters of his youth” and the Sister-Arts tradition (82).

Hagstrum, Jean H. William Blake, Poet and Painter: An Introduction to the Illuminated Verse. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1964. 1978. <BB #1770, BBS 498, WBHC 2117-18>

A classic study of the poetry and the designs of the illuminated books. See Hagstrum’s defense of associating Blake with the Sister-Arts Tradition in his “Blake and the Sister-Arts Tradition.”

Heffernan, James A.W. “Text and Design in Blake Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Imagination on a Long Rein: English Literature Illustrated. Ed. Joachim Möller. Marburg [Germany]: Jonas Verlag, 1988. 94-109. <BBS 504>

A useful consideration of how the texts and designs relate in the Songs.

Holly, Grant. “William Blake and the Dialogue of Discourse and Figure.” Compendious Conversations: The Method of Dialogue in the Early Enlightenment. Ed. Kevin L. Cope. Frankfurt am Main, Bern, New York, Paris, 1992. 15-34. <WBHC 2160>

“Holly sees in the works of this ‘Early Enlightenment’ figure ‘a dialogue between figural and discursive elements such that discourse becomes figures, writing becomes picture’ (15)” (WBHC 2160).

Höltgen, Karl Josef. “Religious Emblems (1809) by John Thurston and Joseph Thomas, and its Links with Francis Quarles and William Blake.” Emblematica 10 (1996 [1999]): 107-43. <WBHC 2162>

A revised version can be found online at “William Blake and the Emblem Tradition.” (Feb. 2002). This also includes a “Biographical Note” on Joseph Thomas (1765-1811).

ImageTexT: Interdisciplinary Comics Study 3.2 (winter 2007). Special Issue: “William Blake and Visual Culture.” Ed. Roger Whitson and Donald Ault. <WBHC 2184-85>

Original essays that often draw on comics as an analogue of Blake’s own practices.

Jakobson, Roman. “On the Verbal Art of William Blake and Other Poet Painters.” Linguistic Inquiry 1.1 (1970): 3-23.²⁹⁶ <BB #1943>

²⁹⁶ Rpt. in Jakobson’s Selected Writings. Vol. 3. Poetry of Grammar and Grammar of Poetry. The Hague: Mouton, 1981.

A concentrated linguistic reading of “Infant Sorrow” that concludes: “The eight lines of ‘Infant Sorrow’ are remarkably rich in what Gerald Manley Hopkins infers by ‘figures of grammar’ and ‘figures of sound,’ and it is to their eloquent symmetry and palpable interplay imbued with diaphanous symbolism that this succinct, ingenuous story owes most of its mythological power and suggestiveness” (10).

James, G. Ingli. “Blake’s Mixed Media: A Mixed Blessing.” Essays and Studies 30 (1977): 61-69. <BBS 525>

On the difficulties of access and reproducibility created by Blake’s fusion of word and image, with the water-color illustrations serving as a case study.

Jelsbak, Torben. “Visual Language: The Graphic Signifier in Avant-garde Literature.” Acta Linguistica Hafniensis 42 (2010): 177-88.²⁹⁷

In an essay concerned with Roman Jakobson’s notion of “the graphic signifier in written language” (187), addresses Jakobson’s 1970 essay on “Infant Sorrow,” “On the Verbal Art of William Blake and other Poet Painters,” pointing out that “what Jakobson does not comment on, is the visual makeup, the graphic lay-out of the text as it originally appeared in Blake’s own engraving” (181).

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “Emblem and Symbol in Blake.” Huntington Library Quarterly 37.2 (1974): 151-70. <BB #A1963>

Using “Aged Ignorance” as her primary example, she argues that Blake transformed the emblem tradition “into a Romantic form, fusing his own ideas with conventional conceits to create rich and strange new symbols” (152).

Jones, John H. “Blake’s Production Methods.” Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 25-41. <WBHC 2867-68>

A good preliminary overview of engraving in the eighteenth century and of Blake’s own practices in the illuminated books and in the large color prints.

Kaplan, Nancy. “Blake’s Problem and Ours: Some Reflections on the Image and the Word.” Readerly Writerly Texts 3.2 (summer 1996): 115-33.²⁹⁸ <WBHC 2238-39>

Argues that Blake critiques the Sister Arts.

Kemper, Claudette. “The Interlinear Drawings in Blake’s Jerusalem.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 64.11 (Nov. 1960): 573-87. <BB #1573>

Reads the interlinear designs as commentary.

Kooistre, Lorraine Janzen. “From Blake to Beardsley: ‘On Some of the Characteristics of Modern Poetry.’” Victorian Poetry 48.1 (2010): 1-9. <WBHC 2262>

²⁹⁷ Not recorded in WBHC.

²⁹⁸ Also published in “Blake’s Problem and Ours: Some Reflections on the Image and the Work,” The Emerging Cyberculture: Literacy, Paradigm, and Paradox, ed. Stephanie B. Gibson and Ollie O. Oviedo. (2000), 25-43, <WBHC 2238-39>.

The introduction to a special issue on “Victorian Poetry and the Book Arts.” The essay takes Blake’s Songs of Innocence as its point of departure, asking: “How do we ‘read’ Blake’s graphic ornaments in the midst of poetic lines? Do semantics always trump iconic and graphic elements? How much close attention do nonreferential squiggles require? Does color signify? What is the meaning of paper, layout, calligraphy and sequence? In this most material of poetic productions, how much does matter actually matter?” (1-2).

Kroeber, Karl. “Graphic-Poetic Structuring in Blake’s Book of Urizen.” Blake Studies 3.1 (fall 1970): 7-18. <BB #1218.37>

An attempt to elucidate “the formal systems by which he makes his multi-media multi-plate prophetic works cohere” (7).

Larrissy, Edward. “Spectral Imposition and Visionary Imposition: Printing and Repetition in Blake.” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steven Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. 61-77. <WBHC 2812-13>

Brings together Blake’s reflections on and vocabulary for his printing method (e.g., “imposition”) with “the idea of redemption” (61).

Levy, Michelle. “Afterword: Blake’s Digitised Printed Script.” Literary Manuscript Culture in Romantic Britain. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2020. 259-67. <Blake (2021)>

Coda on Blake regarding his efforts to replicate the manuscript and on the Blake Archive’s efforts to present that digitally.

Mandell, Laura. “Imagining Interiority: Photography, Psychology, and Lyric Poetry.” Victorian Studies 49.2 (2007): 218-27. <WBHC 2369>

Uses the Songs and Wordsworth’s “Tintern Abbey” to suggest that “the romantic lyric anticipates the photograph” (218).

Lee, Rachel. “Editing in Technicolor: The Blake Archive’s Edition of the Vala or The Four Zoas Manuscript.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 499-515. <Blake (2018)>

Offers an account of the Blake Archive’s efforts to edit the manuscript of Vala, or The Four Zoas.

Mann, Paul. “Apocalypse and Recuperation: Blake and the Maw of Commerce.” ELH 52.1 (1985): 1-32. <BBS 558-59>

Important essay on Blake’s relationship to commodity culture and the aesthetics of production: “I have attempted to show that if Blake’s book can be opened it cannot be opened without ceasing to be Blake’s, without becoming an object precluded by the production-aesthetic” (27).

Mann, Paul. "The Book of Urizen and the Horizon of the Book." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 49-68.²⁹⁹ <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

An influential essay on how Blake critiques textuality, the production of meaning, and modes of book production: "The hypothesis I will test is that the book is an ontological horizon, the horror-zone of the fallen world" (50).

McGann, Jerome. "Literature by Design Since 1790." Victorian Poetry 48.1 (2010): 11-40.³⁰⁰

Beginning with Blake, considers authors (e.g., Dickinson, Whitman, Byron, Rossetti) who were concerned with challenging the established "Book Order."

McGann, Jerome. "Reflections on Textual and Documentary Media in a Romantic and Post-Romantic Horizon." Studies in Romanticism 53.4 (winter 2014): 481-507. <WBHC 2388>

"So what is Blake's argument for those who would strip away those apparent surfaces in a quest for Blake's meaning? It is that they will not discover meaning, they will discover more images, more spectacular than ever: 'the infinite, which was hid'" (496).

McGann, Jerome. The Textual Condition. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1991. <BBS 568-69>

A key study of the materiality of texts produced by Blake and other Romantics and its implication for editorial theory. Analyzing Erdman's Complete Poetry and Prose, McGann surveys Blake's reception in how his texts were presented in different "bibliographical codes," and how these codes preclude a simplistic notion of authorial intention.

Mitchell, W.J.T. Blake's Composite Art: A Study of the Illuminated Poetry. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1978. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2019.³⁰¹ <BBS 575-76, WBHC 2420-22>

A key study on the interplay of the visual and verbal in Blake's works. The phrase, "composite art," while popularized by Mitchell, was coined by Jean Hagstrum.

Mitchell, W. J. T. "Metamorphoses of the Vortex: Hogarth, Turner, and Blake." Articulate Images: The Sister Arts from Hogarth to Tennyson. Ed. Richard Wendorf. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1983. 125-68. <BBS 576>

On the spiral or vortex in the works of the three artists.

²⁹⁹ First distributed in the papers prepared for the Blake & Criticism conference at Santa Cruz, May 20-22, 1982, <BBS 375-76>.

³⁰⁰ Not recorded in WBHC.

³⁰¹ Incorporates Mitchell's "Blake's Composite Art," Visionary Forms Dramatic, ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant (1970), 57-81, <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>; "Style as Epistemology: Blake and the Movement toward Abstraction in Romantic Art," Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (1977), 145-64, <BBS 649>; and "Poetic and Pictorial Imagination in Blake's The Book of Urizen," Eighteenth-Century Studies 3.1 (1969), 83-107, <BB #2233>. Rpt. in Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 111-34, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>.

Mitchell, W. J. T. "Visible Language: Blake's Wondrous Art of Writing." Romanticism and Contemporary Criticism. Ed. Morris Eaves and Michael Fischer. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1986. 46-95.³⁰² <BBS 576, WBHC 2422-23>

An important essay on Blake's rejection of the dichotomy between the written and visual and on his representation of writing in books and scrolls.

Nanavutty, Piloo. "Blake and Emblem Literature." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3/4 (1952): 258-61. <BB #2268>

Points out examples in Gates of Paradise where Blake was drawing on emblem designs.

Nelms, Ben F. "Text and Design in Illustrations of the Book of Job." Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 336-58. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

An accessible reading of the text and designs in light of the Bible and Blake's other works.

Pashchenko, M. "Vzaimodeistvie slova i izobrazheniiia v khudozhestvennykh proizvedeniakh s avtorskimi illiustratsiiami \(na materiale poezii U. Bleika\)" [The Interaction of Words and Images in Works of Art with Author's Illustrations (Based on the Poetry of W. Blake)]." Aktual'nye problemy lingvistiki i literaturovedeniia. Sbornik materialov VI (XX) Mezhdunarodnoi konferentsii molodykh uchenykh [Actual Problems of Linguistics and Literary Criticism. Collection of Materials of the VI (XX) International Conference of Young Scientists]. Tomsk: STT, 2020. 215-16. In Russian. <Blake (2021)>

The author analyzes the mechanisms of interaction between text and images in Blake's poem "The Clod and the Pebble."

Purinton, Marjean D. "An Act of Theological Revisioning: William Blake's Pictorial Prophecy." Colby Quarterly 29.1 (Mar. 1993): 33-42. <WBHC 2553>³⁰³

"Blake's pictorial prophecy similarly challenges us to new ways of seeing" (33).

Riccardi, Silvia. "The Page Embodied in The Four Zoas." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 135-47. <Blake (2025)>

The chapter "examine[s] Blake's practice in selected pages of the manuscript, focusing on the way layout, calligraphy, and symbols are embedded in his style as well as the extent to which the boundaries between paper and copperplate become permeable" (abstract).

Ripley, Wayne C., and Justin Van Kleeck, ed. Editing and Reading Blake. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2010. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume. <WBHC 2587-89>

³⁰² Also published in Mitchell's Picture Theory: Essays on Verbal and Visual Representation (Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1994), 111-50, <WBHC 2422-23>, and in William Blake, ed. David Punter (1996), 123-28, <WBHC 2551-53>.

³⁰³ Both WBHC and Blake (1995) misspell "Purinton" as "Purington."

A collection on editing Blake. David Fuller, W.H. Stevenson, and Mary Lynn Johnson all have edited annotated editions of Blake's work, and their essays elaborate on their editorial choices.

Rocco, Emilia Di. "Homer has nothing so sublime!": Ugolino tra Illuminismo e Romanticismo." Strumenti critici 57.1 (2023): 73-90. In Italian (online abstract in English). <Blake (2024)>

"This article explores the reception history of the story of Ugolino in Dante's Inferno from the Enlightenment to Romanticism. The analysis focuses on the relationship between literature and the arts in the works of Jonathan Richardson, Joshua Reynolds, Johann Jakob Bodmer, Lord Byron, and William Blake" (abstract).

Rose, Edward J. "Blake's Biblical Consciousness and the Problem of Interpretation of Text and Design." The Bucknell Review 31.1 (1988): 113-23. <BBS 625>

"Blake understands the pictorial to be related to the verbal as the Divine Body is related to Jesus" (115).

Saklofske, J. "Thoughtless Play: Using William Blake to Illuminate Authority and Agency Within Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas." Games and Culture 2.2 (2007): 134-48. <WBHC 2630>

"[C]ompare[s] how William Blake's "The Fly" and Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas differently enable and disable the authority and agency of storytellers and readers" (abstract).

Saklofske, Jon. "Remediating William Blake: Unbinding the Network Architectures of Blake's Songs." European Romantic Review 22.3 (2011): 381-88. <WBHC 2630>

"Overall, this paper will examine how network structures within the meaningful excesses and shifting functions of Blake's Songs invite and justify a metaphoric reconsideration of Blake's work through computer and social network models, then discuss how digital technologies can productively engage with this overlap between eighteenth-century ideas and twenty-first century perceptions." (382). Chief among the "digital technologies" he mentions is his and Jean-Mar Giffin's "data visualization application," New Radial, "an online workspace in which users can rearrange, group, and connect various pages from one or many editions of Blake's Songs, and add commentary to such groupings and connections which then becomes part of a shared database of critical work" (387).

Sanchez Perez, Aquilino. Blake's Graphic Work and the Emblematic Tradition. Murcia: 1982. <BBS 630-31, WBHC 2633>

Examines Blake within the emblem tradition, though he recognizes that Blake "can obviously not be considered a writer of emblems" (BBS 361).

Santa Cruz Study Group. Rev. of The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.1 (summer 1984): 4-28.³⁰⁴ <BBS 396>

³⁰⁴ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 301-33, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

A key review of David V. Erdman's The Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake (1982) that examines how Blake's work is and could be represented.

Santos, Fernando Glaybson do Nascimento. "Os traços do paraíso em William Blake: matrizes barrocas na linguagem emblemática de 'For Children: The Gates of Paradise' de 1793." Temporalidades – Revista de História 15.2 (2023-2024): 717-40. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2025)>

"[. . .] This article aims to investigate the relationship between Blake's pictorial universe and the cultural, visual, mythical and religious matrices of the Baroque through the emblematic language expressed in the engravings of For Children: The Gates of Paradise from 1793, analysing them in starting from the iconographic-iconological method of Erwin Panofsky and establishing a dialogue with authors who undertook similar research" (abstract).

Sengupta, Oishani, Helen Davies, Alexander J. Zawacki, Christina Duffy, Eric Loy, and Samuel Allen. "All that we See is Vision": William Blake's Four Zoas Manuscript and Multispectral Imaging (MSI)." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 231-54. <Blake (2025)>

"This chapter offers a case study of the Blake Archive's recent collaborative enterprise in multispectral imaging with the British Library and the Lazarus Project. [. . .] Our discussion ultimately focuses on the methods of our project and the potential of spectral imaging for the editorial field as a whole" (abstract).

Stevens, Bethan. "News from the Thames (Blake! There's Something in the Water)." Beastly Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2018. 225-52. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

"Stevens rethinks and redeploys the concept of the caption to invite different ways of reading the relation of text and image" (30).

Toki, Koji. "Blake to 'Fukugo Geijutsu' [Blake and Composite Art]." Toki, Koji. Sho-o to Sogo: Toki Koji chosaku-shu + symposium [Correspondence and Synthesis: Koji Toki Collection of Essays + Symposium]. Ed. Tomonao Yoshida. Tokyo: Takanashi Shobo, 2020. 51-54.³⁰⁵ In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

Tolley, Michael J. "Words Standing in Chariots: The Literalism of Blake's Imagination." Imagining Romanticism: Essays on English and Australian Romantics. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill, 1992. 73-84. <BBS 440, WBHC 1878>

Shows many examples of "the literalism of Blake's imagination" (141), particularly in the Night Thoughts designs.

Treadwell, James. "Blake, John Martin, and the Illustration of Paradise Lost." Word & Image 9 (1993): 363-82. <WBHC 2780>

³⁰⁵ Originally published in Eigo Seinen [Rising Generation] 119.4 (1973), 12-13, <BSJ 117, BBS 662>, and reprinted in Metropolitan 58 (2016), 174-80.

Without performing “a full reading of Blake’s twelve watercolours and Martin’s twenty-four mezzotints[,]” “[m]y initial aim is to use these two sets of Paradise Lost illustrations to question and complicate some commonplace assumptions about the translation of text into image” (abstract), with references to the Sister Arts.

Viscomi, Joseph. Blake and the Idea of the Book. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1993. <WBHC 2805-08>

The definitive study of Blake’s method of illuminated printing. It elucidates Blake’s studio practices, describing in detail Blake’s use of artistic materials and the production of the illuminated books, touching on their relationship to Blake’s other projects. The appendix dates the printing sessions for all known copies of the illuminated books and supersedes all previous datings.

Viscomi greatly abridged the book’s argument for Morris Eaves’s Cambridge Companion to William Blake. This served as the basis for Viscomi’s “Illuminated Printing,” which is found in the Blake Archive’s exhibition section.³⁰⁶

See Essick’s response, “Blake and the Production of Meaning.”

Viscomi, Joseph. “Blake’s Illuminated Word.” Art, Word and Image: Two Thousand Years of Visual/Textual Interaction. Ed. John Dixon Hunt, David Lomas, and Michael Corris. London: Reaktion Books Ltd., 2010. 87-109. <WBHC 2808>

An overview of Blake’s career, focused primarily on illuminated printing.

Viscomi, Joseph. “William Blake, Illuminated Books, and the Concept of Difference.” Essays on Romanticism. Ed. Karl Kroeber and Gene Ruoff. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, 1993. 63-87. <WBHC 2812>

An important article on understanding how the differences among copies of the illuminated books were produced and what the differences can mean and not mean, with an articulation of Blake’s arguments against Woollett and Bartolozzi regarding engraving.

Westerweel, Bart. “Some Reflections on William Blake and the Emblem.” Configuring Romanticism: Essays Offered to C. C. Barfoot. Ed. Theo D’haen et al. Amsterdam: Rodopi, 2003. 11-25. <WBHC 2846>

“What [this essay] does set out to do is to explore to what extent the application of the term ‘emblem’ or ‘emblematic’ actually contributes anything worthwhile to our understanding of Blake’s work” (11-12).

Whitson, Roger and Jason Whittaker. William Blake the Digital Humanities: Collaboration, Participation, and Social Media. New York: Routledge, 2013. <WBHC 2852>

An important book on digital appropriations and manifestations of Blake that make him a still-living figure.

³⁰⁶ See also Bentley’s summary “of some of [Viscomi’s] more important findings” (146) in “William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 1994,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.4 (spring 1995), 145-56.

Williams, Nicholas M. “Blake Dead or Alive.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 63.4 (Mar. 2009): 486-98. <WBHC 2865>

“William Blake’s interests in the living body and its aesthetic analogue, “Living Form,” underlie his attempt at representing motion” (abstract).

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. “Painted Prophecies: The Tradition of Blake’s Illuminated Books.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 101-15. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Positions Blake in a tradition of visual representations of Revelation.

Useful Contextual Studies

Cheeke, Stephen. Writing for Art: The Aesthetics of Ekphrasis. Manchester and New York: Manchester University Press, 2008.

“Stephen Cheeke offers close readings of poems and prose from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries alongside a generous amount of illustrations, covering a broad range of writing and theory about the relation of literary texts to the visual arts, and extending the subject of ekphrasis to include literary works on photography, as well as celebrated prose descriptions of artworks” (publisher abstract).

Dillard, Leigh G. “Material Intersections: Image and Text in the Eighteenth-Century Commonplace.” Journal of Illustration 8.2 (2021): 221-50. <Blake (2023)>

“Ranging from decorative flourishes and echoes of printers’ marks to richly scrolled title pages and evocative vignettes, the materiality of the commonplace book offered in these moments signals a heightened concern by readers to consider the visual potential of the text as part of their reading experience. This analysis looks at scattered remnants of eighteenth-century commonplace books for compelling examples of image and text relationships that reflect illustrative models from the print market” (abstract).

Robinson, Terry F., and John Savarese. “Introduction: Romanticism and Vision.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 451-60. <Blake (2023)>

The introduction to their special issue, “Romanticism and Vision”: “The essays in this issue catch sight of that variety [of scholarship on Romanticism and vision] through their focus on acts of looking; on the production of visual art; on the imaginative landscapes pictured in maps and panoramas; on the affective impact of spectatorship; and on the visuality of race” (455).

Taylor, David Francis. “Picturing Ekphrasis: Image and Text in Shakespeare Painting.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022): 461-78. <Blake (2023)>

On William Martin’s and James Barry’s paintings of Shakespeare’s Cymbeline: “Martin and Barry, I wish to suggest, show ekphrasis in order to interrogate and eschew both its rhetorical imperative (image as word) and its iconophobic implication (image as less than word)” (464).

Thomas, Sophie. Romanticism and Visuality: Fragments, History, Spectacle. New York: Routledge, 2008.

“This study investigates further the potent cross-currents between popular visual culture and the discourse of the visual in literary contexts, and I contend that the division between literature’s apparent emphasis on the imagination over spectacle, often configured as a form of idealism versus materialism, is not at all clear-cut” (n.p.).

Digital Humanities (See also Composite Art and William Blake Archive)

Broglio, Ron, ed. Digital Designs on Blake. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2005. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume. <WBHC 1789>

“Contributors explore how new media representation of William Blake’s work provides a heuristic for another mode of inquiry into Blake’s complex verbal and visual texts” (About This Volume). Unfortunately, many links are no longer active.

Colebrook, Claire. Blake, Deleuzian Aesthetics and the Digital. London and New York: Continuum, 2012. <WBHC 1877-78>

Explores Blake using Deleuze, with much on Modernity, Plato, the body, and digital media.

Copeland, Ann. “Works and Digital Resources in the Catalog: Electronic Versions of Book of Urizen, the Kelmscott Chaucer and Robinson Crusoe.” Classification Quarterly 33.3-4 (2002): 161-80. <WBHC 1884>

“[A]ddresses issues regarding the cataloging of digital manifestations of works” (abstract).

Curtis, Francis, and Richard Dean. Blake: A Software Package. West Sussex Institute of Higher Education, Bishop Otter College, College Lane, Chichester, West Sussex, England, PO19 4PE, 1987.

See David Worrall’s review.

Dent, Shirley. “Rob & Plunder . . . Translate & Copy & Buy & Sell & Criticise, but not Make’: Blake and Copyright Today.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 56-68. <WBHC 1871-73>

Reflects on the Blake Archive’s statements on copyright with “the fast and loose attitude to copyright we live with in the age of digital reproduction” that enables “the transmission of Blake’s work far beyond the reach of previous media” (67), and offers a fascinating account of the copyright issues at play in the Victorian Blake revival.

Eaves, Morris. “Crafting Editorial Settlements.” Romanticism on the Net 41-42 (2006): 33 pars. <WBHC 1974>

Positions the Blake Archive in the history of efforts to edit Blake.

Eaves, Morris. “The Editorial Void: Notes toward a Study of Oblivion.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 517-38. <Blake (2018)>

Ruminates on how editorial practices “help to reveal the broader outlines of perception, control, desire, and memory that make editing a paradigm of human effort” (517).

Eaves, Morris. "Multimedia Body Plans: A Self-Assessment." Electronic Textual Editing. Ed. Lou Burnand, Katherine O'Brien O'Keefe, and John Unsworth. New York: Modern Language Association of America, 2006. 210-23. <WBHC 1974>³⁰⁷

Using his experience on the Blake Archive as an example, poses questions and reflections about producing electronic editions.

Eaves, Morris. "Picture Problems: X-Editing Images 1992-2010." Digital Humanities Quarterly 3.3 (summer 2009): 42 par. <WBHC 1976>

Coins the term "X-editing" to represent the difficulties of editing images in digital humanities projects.

Eaves, Morris, et al. "Prototyping an Electronic Edition of William Blake's Manuscript of Vala or the Four Zoas: A Progress Report." 19: Interdisciplinary Studies in the Long Nineteenth Century 21 (2015): 28 pp. <WBHC 1976>

On the issues arising from preparing the digital edition of Vala or The Four Zoas at the Blake Archive.

Eaves, Morris et al. "Standards, Methods, and Objectives in the William Blake Archive: A Response to Mary Lynn Johnson, Andrew Cooper, and Michael Simpson." Wordsworth Circle 30.3 (summer 1999): 135-44. <WBHC 2881>

A history of the Blake Archive and a response to the preceding essays in the volume, particularly Cooper and Simpson's "The High-Tech Luddite of Lambeth: Blake's Eternal Hacking." Cooper and Simpson would answer in "Looks Good in Practice, But Does it Work in Theory? Rebooting the Blake Archive."

Eaves, Morris, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi. "The William Blake Archive: The Medium When the Millennium is the Message." Romanticism and Millenarianism. Ed. Tim Fulford. New York: Palgrave, 2002. 219-33. <WBHC 603, 2811>

"We believe that it is helpful to perceive the Blake project [i.e., the Blake Archive] as an extension of ongoing archival, cataloguing, and editorial enterprises into a new medium in order to exploit its radical advantages" (233).

Fitzsimons, Andrew. "Blessed William Skullbullet: Blake, Thomas Kinsella and Digital Humanities." Kanto Review of English 4 (2012): 191-99. <WBHC 2021>

"[D]oes Blake's work still have impact on contemporary poets, whether in its original form of illuminated book or in textual or digital reproduction? If so, in what way does this influence manifest itself? This is the question I wish to bring to bear on a discussion of the contemporary Irish poet, Thomas Kinsella, on whose poetry Blake is an acknowledged but so far little examined influence" (191).

Fox, Michael. "Graphing VALA, or The Four Zoas: Toward a Dynamic Edition." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 205-30. <Blake (2025)>

³⁰⁷ WBHC and Blake (2008) mistakenly gives 210-13.

Offers a model of editing The Four Zoas and other literary texts using graph technology.

Good, Mike. “Google Blake.” William Blake and Pedagogy. Ed. Andrew Burkett and Roger Whitson, ed. Pedagogies Edition. Romantic Circles. 2016.³⁰⁸

Describes the “atomization” of Blake that occurs on the Internet, and provides two assignments he designed to explore the circulation and interpretations of Blake’s proverbs.

Hilton, Nelson. “Blake Digital Text Project.” IMEJ: Interactive Multimedia Electronic Journal of Computer-Enhanced Learning (1999).³⁰⁹

Hilton discusses the goals of the Project to create an accessible digital version of David V. Erdman’s Concordance, to offer a hypertext version of Songs of Innocence and of Experience, to provide multimedia annotations for users, and to use this material in the classroom. The concordance is now housed at Arizona State University.

Hilton, Nelson. “www.english.uga.edu/wblake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.1 (summer 1999): 11-16. <WBHC 1678>

On Hilton’s “Blake Digital Text Project,” based on the desire to create an electronic, online, interactive, enhanced version of the long out-of-print 1967 Concordance to the Writings of William Blake, edited by David V. Erdman” (11). The concordance is now housed at Arizona State University.

Ide, Nancy Marie. “Identifying Semantic Patterns: Time Series and Fourier Analyses.” Revue Informatique et Statistique dans les Sciences Humaines 24 (1988), 193-200 <BBS 519-20, WBHC 2181>

“A study of ‘images of labor’ and ‘pastoral images’ in The Four Zoas is said to show that ‘the pattern of image distribution in the Zoas is both rhythmic and simple’” (BBS 519).

Ide, Nancy M. “Image Patterns and the Structure of William Blake’s The Four Zoas.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.4 (spring 1987): 125-32. <BBS 400>

An early semantic analysis of the imagery of The Four Zoas, which includes data visualizations of “image distribution in the text” (127).

Ide, Nancy Marie. “Meaning and Method: Computer-Assisted Analysis of Blake.” Literary Computing and Literary Criticism: Theoretical and Practical Essays on Theme and Rhetoric. Ed. Rosanne G. Potter. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 1989. 123-41. <BBS 519, WBHC 2181>

Ide, Nancy Marie. “Patterns of Imagery in William Blake’s Four Zoas.” PhD diss., Pennsylvania State University, 1982. <BBS 519>

An early analysis of Blake using techniques now associated with digital humanities. She analyzes thematic categories frequently used in The Four Zoas, with charts visualizing the recurrence of related image clusters throughout the poem.

³⁰⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

³⁰⁹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Ide, Nancy Marie. "A Statistical Measure of Theme and Structure." Computers and the Humanities 23 (1989): 277-83. <BBS 519>

"This paper describes a computer-assisted analysis of semantic patterning in William Blake's The Four Zoas and considers the way in which such patterns contribute to the structure and meaning of the work." "Fourier analysis revealed striking patterns in the distribution of imagery in the Zoas, which suggests that Blake may have used such patterns to help convey the poem's powerful thematic statements" (abstract).

Komisaruk, Adam. "Introducing The Blake Model." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 38.2 (winter 2004-05): 92-102. <WBHC 1700>

On creating his "Blake Model": "an immersive digital environment through which users might navigate to encounter Blake's characters, places and objects in the configuration his works describe" (93). See also Komisaruk's "Blake and Virtuality".

Lee, Rachel and J. Alexandra McGhee. "'The productions of time': Visions of Blake in the Digital Age." Ed. Wayne C. Ripley and Justin Van Kleeck. Editing and Reading Blake. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2010. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume. 46 par. <WBHC 2587-89>

"[D]iscusses the preparation of an electronic edition of Blake's An Island in the Moon, the first manuscript to be published by the William Blake Archive" (abstract).

Morgan, Paige. "The Minute Particulars in the Immensity of the Internet: What Coleridge, Hartley and Blake Can Teach Us about Digital Editing." Romanticism 15.3 (Oct. 2009): 265-75. <WBHC 2427>

"[M]y purpose in this essay is to raise a few questions and observations about the labour of putting Blake's largest work [i.e., The Four Zoas] online [even at the Blake Archive]; questions and observations that I believe will be useful in a broader context to many editors as interest in digital archiving continues to increase" (265).

O'Gorman, Marcel. "The Hypericonic De-Vise: Peter Ramus Meets William Blake." E-Crit: Digital Media, Critical Theory, and the Humanities. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2006. <WBHC 2476>

Examines Blake and digital humanities through the lens of the sixteenth-century humanist, Peter Ramus.

Poetica: An International Journal of Linguistic-Literary Studies 79 (2013). Special Issue: "Digital Romantics." Ed. Steve Clark.³¹⁰

A collection of interesting essays on Blake and the Digital Humanities.

Reed, Ashley, Jon Saklofske, and Roger Whitson. Essays in Romanticism 23.1 (2016). Special Issue: "Blake and Digital Making: A Critical Cluster." Ed. Ashley Reed, Jon Saklofske, and Roger Whitson. <Blake (2016)>

Three essays and responses, which all address the Blake Archive.

³¹⁰ Not recorded in WBHC.

Ross, D. "An EYEBALL view of Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." Computers in the Humanities. Ed. J.L. Mitchell. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 1974. 94-108. <BBS 627>

An early discussion of using computer-based stylistic analysis on the Songs.

Ross, Donald, Jr. "The Use of Word-Class Distribution Data for Stylistics: Keats' Sonnets and Chicken Soup." Poetics 6.2 (1977): 169-95.³¹¹ <BBS 627>

"A 'discussion of 'the style of Blake's Songs' to indicate the techniques being developed for [Ross's] 'procedure for the description of style named EYEBALL' (94)" (BBS 627).

Saklofske, J. "Thoughtless Play: Using William Blake to Illuminate Authority and Agency Within Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas." Games and Culture 2.2 (2007): 134-48. <WBHC 2630>

"[C]ompare[s] how William Blake's "The Fly" and Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas differently enable and disable the authority and agency of storytellers and readers" (abstract).

Sengupta, Oishani, Helen Davies, Alexander J. Zawacki, Christina Duffy, Eric Loy, and Samuel Allen. "All that we See is Vision": William Blake's Four Zoas Manuscript and Multispectral Imaging (MSI)." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 231-54. <Blake (2025)>

"This chapter offers a case study of the Blake Archive's recent collaborative enterprise in multispectral imaging with the British Library and the Lazarus Project. [...] Our discussion ultimately focuses on the methods of our project and the potential of spectral imaging for the editorial field as a whole" (abstract).

Visconti, Joseph. "Digital Facsimiles: Reading the William Blake Archive." Computers and the Humanities 36 (2002): 27-48. <WBHC 602, 2810>

On the goal of the Blake Archive to provide facsimiles "accurate enough to be studied at a level heretofore impossible without access to the originals" (32).

Whitson, Roger. "Digital Blake 2.0." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 41-55. <WBHC 1871-73>

A critique of the Blake Archive for using "digital materials to do what literary scholars have done for over a century" (42), and a push for a "Blake 2.0 [that would expand] the awareness of what William Blake means beyond what Blake would have thought as a historical actor or a literary author into networks of human and non-human actors" (43). Offers the examples of Guilherme Marcondes's short film, Tyger (2006), which was inspired by "The Tyger"; Steve Guynup, Ron Broglio, and Thomas Tulis's Virtual Crystal Cabinet (2002) (now a Youtube video); Whitson and Jason Whittaker's Zoamorphosis:

³¹¹ See also Donald Ross and David Hunter, "μ-EYEBALL: An Interactive System for Producing Stylistic Descriptions and Comparisons," Computers and the Humanities 28.1 (1994), 1-11.

The Blake 2.0 Blog, “a hub whose relation with other sites, universities, programs, individuals, and otherwise independent content constitute its substance” (51).

Whitson, Roger and Jason Whittaker. William Blake and the Digital Humanities: Collaboration, Participation, and Social Media. New York: Routledge, 2013. <WBHC 2852>

An important book on the digital appropriations and manifestations of Blake that make him a still-living figure. (A discussion of the Blake Archive is found on pp. 26-51.)

Whittaker, Jason. “Blake’s Books and Digital Ecosystems.” William Blake and Pedagogy. Ed. Andrew Burkett and Roger Whitson, ed. Pedagogies Edition. Romantic Circles. 2016.³¹²

Explores what it will mean for Blake to be read in e-books and other digital forms.

Whittaker, Jason. “Everyday Blake and the Digital Humanities.” Poetica: An International Journal of Linguistic-Literary Studies 79 (2013). Special Issue: “Digital Romanticisms.” Ed. Steve Clark. 1-15.³¹³

Suggests ways in which digital humanities can further the study of Blake through data visualization and text-mining, highlighting Blake’s reception on Twitter [now X].

Worrall, David. Rev. of Francis Curtis and Richard Dean. Blake: A Software Package. 1987. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.4 (spring 1989): 133-34.³¹⁴

An early reflection on digitizing Blake and its use in the classroom: “The title of the program, Blake: A Software Package, is rather misleading as it is based entirely on ‘London’ and does not offer an introduction to the rest of the Songs let alone Blake’s other works. My first impression on using the program was how odd it seemed to go back to the printed word (even in electronic form) after looking quite intensively at the combination of Blake’s word and image. Perhaps one would need to look forward to a new age of electronics (and a new age of funding) for software which could incorporate high-quality visuals with some sort of enhancement to explore the detail of Blake’s between-the-line illuminations. Nevertheless, loading the floppy disc is easy and you soon have another ‘person’ in the seminar room as the T.V. monitor’s ice-cold eye awaits appeasement and suggestion” (133).

³¹² Not recorded in WBHC.

³¹³ Not recorded in WBHC.

³¹⁴ The review is not recorded in BBS, but the software package is mentioned among the types of material not to be considered by BBS, p.6.

Ecological Studies (Animal Studies, Anthropocene, Climate Change, Posthuman Studies)

Introduction

Fosso, Kurt. "Animals." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 237-44. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Aberbach, David. "Industry and the Romantics: Blake, Wordsworth, and Goethe." The Environment and Literature of Moral Dilemmas: From Adam to Michael K. Abingdon: Routledge, 2022. 126-32. <Blake (2023)>

Albernaz, Joseph. "Nonsovereign Circulations: William Blake" and "Sunray of the Negative: Blake and Bataille." Common Measures: Romanticism and the Groundlessness of Community. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 2024. 139-87 and 188-202. <Blake (2025)>

On community in Jerusalem: "Community must circulate among us, among the spilled excess of fragile attachments, in the everyday" (186). The comparison of Blake and Bataille focuses on their conception of energy, with references to Marriage, Jerusalem, A Descriptive Catalogue, and The Ancient Britons.

Bauer, Liza. "Am not I / A fly like thee?": Human-Animal Relations in William Blake's Songs of Innocence and [of] Experience. Marburg: Büchner-Verlag, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

"This study seeks to reveal that an ecocritical reading—or even a literary animal studies reading of Blake's work—can be worth its while" (13).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Blake Bestiary: Animals, Birds, Fish, Insects, and Supernatural Beings in Blake's Words and Designs—Part I: Blake's Acquaintance with Animals." Notes and Queries 67.1 (2020): 47-57. <Blake (2024)>

On Blake's experience with animals in his life, in the books he owned, and his own depictions of them. It contains a bibliography of scholarly works that address Blake's representations of animals.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Blake Bestiary—Part II: Blake's Hybrid Monsters." Notes and Queries 67.1 (2020): 57-71. <Blake (2024)>

Details Blake's monsters, both animal hybrids and human-animal hybrids.

Bruder, Helen P., and Tristanne Connolly, ed. Beastly Blake. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

The collection focuses on real and symbolic animals and offers important contributions to the fields of ecocriticism, animal studies, and posthuman studies.

Cecire, Natalia. "Environmental Innocence and Slow Violence." Women's Studies Quarterly 43.1-2 (2015): 164-87.³¹⁵

Examines, in part, the allusion to Blake's "The Little Black Boy" in the film, Beasts of the Southern Wild (2012), and what it suggests about environmental racism.

³¹⁵ Not recorded in WBHC.

Clark, Steve. "Blake and the Pastoral-Georgic Tradition." Romantic Environmental Sensibility: Nature, Class and Empire. Ed. Ve-Yin Tee. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. 211-29. <Blake (2023)>

Considers Milton "from the perspective of a more historically engaged environmental poetics, drawing on its indebtedness to the tradition of sensibility and focusing in particular on James Thomson, Mark Akenside, and Iolo Morganwg" (212-13).

Cohen, Tom, and Claire Colebrook. "Vortices: On 'Critical Climate Change' as a Project." South Atlantic Quarterly 116.1 (Jan. 2017): 129-43. <Blake (2018)>

Uses Blake's concept of vortices to discuss climate change.

Colebrook, Claire. "The Twilight of the Anthropocene: Sustaining Literature." Literature and Sustainability: Concept, Text and Culture. Ed. Adeline Johns-Putra, John Parham, and Louise Squire. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2017. 115-36. <Blake (2018)>

Uses Blake's practices as an engraver as a touchstone in her wider discussion of sustainability.

Connolly, Tristanne. "Human Grapes in the Wine-Presses: Vegetable Life and the Violence of Cultivation in Blake's Milton." Wild Romanticism. Ed. Markus Poetzsch and Cassandra Falke. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2021. 17 pp. <Blake (2024)>

"In Milton, Blake purposely leaves unresolved whether the violence of the Vintage leads to the transformation of the human grapes or to tragic disaster; he avoids justifying violence by a redeeming result, and recognizes the contingency of all work of cultivation" (p.3).

Dauphin, Caroline. "Histoire(s) naturelle(s) du tigre: reconstruire l'animal dans l'œuvre de William Blake." Hobbes, Blair, Blake: Hommage à François Piquet. Paris: Michel Houidiard Éditeur, 2018. In French. <Blake (2021)>

Economides, Louise. "Blake, Heidegger, Buddhism, and Deep Ecology: A Fourfold Perspective on Humanity's Relationship to Nature." Romanticism and Buddhism. Ed. Mark Lussier. Feb. 2007. Romantic Circles Praxis Series. 17 pars. <Blake (2012)>

"Blake's monistic art demonstrates the vital importance of human identification with nature" (par. 6).

Fosso, Kurt. "'Feet of Beasts': Tracking the Animal in Blake." European Romantic Review 25.2 (2014): 113-38. <WBHC 2023>

"Repeatedly, Blake's illuminated works put us on the track of the animal and of the animal's relation to the human and to our embodied animality" (abstract).

Garber, Frederick. "City, Swain and Subtext in Blake's Songs." City Images: Perspectives from Literature, Philosophy, and Film. Ed. Mary Ann Caws. New York, Philadelphia, London, Paris, Montreux, Tokyo, and Melbourne: Gordon and Breach, 1991. 197-208. <WBHC 2051>

Examines the pastoral (along with the "neo-pastoral" and "urban pastoral") in the Songs.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's Swans." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.4 (spring 1982): 164-69. <BBS 393>

A description of Blake's swan imagery in Island, Visions, America, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem.

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. "Reluctant Ecology in Blake and Arendt: A Response to Robert Mitchell and Richard Sha." Wordsworth Circle 46.3 (summer 2015): 143-56. <WBHC 2089>

"In this essay, I respond to Robert Mitchell's and Richard Sha's searching inquiries into the risks and promises of Romantic(ist) enthusiasm for "the experience of the experiment" by exploring the surprising commitment to addressing the Earth in Arendt and Blake, two punishing critics of experimentalism who would otherwise seem to converge, if at all, in their undisguised (not to say unromantic) contempt for Nature" (143).

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. "William Blake and the Time of Ontogeny." Systems of Life: Biopolitics, Economics, and Literature on the Cusp of Modernity. Ed. Richard A. Barney and Warren Montag. New York: Fordham University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2021, 2023)>

"Blake joins contemporary zoologists Erasmus Darwin and Jean-Baptiste Lamarck in casting epigenesis as a work of acute historical and circumstantial dependency, rather than of autotelic power" (abstract).

Hagan, Jade. "Network Theory and Ecology in Blake's Jerusalem." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.3 (winter 2019-20): 38 par. <Blake (2020)>

Compares Blake's "network of correspondences" in Jerusalem to actor network theory.

Hannah, Daniel. "Invitations and Withdrawals: Queer Romantic Ecologies in William Blake's The Book of Thel and John Clare's 'The Nightingale's Nest.'" Essays in Romanticism 20.1 (2013): 1-18. <WBHC 2125>

Examines the poems through the lens of Queer Ecology.

Heagy, Angela. "Blake's Green Symbols of Humanity, Society, and Spirituality." Criterion: A Journal of Literary Criticism 17.1 (2024): 16 pp. <Blake (2025)>

"An eco-critical analysis of Songs of Innocence and of Experience reveals that Blake's depictions of nature are no less notable than those of his peers. Blake's use of green imagery symbolizes human development, gendered and social inequalities, and divinity throughout his masterwork, all of which illustrate his continual awe for the natural world and his relevance to the broader discussions on Green Romantic poets."

Herriman, Noah. "William Blake, the Ballad Revival, and the Deep Past of Poetry." Deep Time: A Literary History. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2023. 120-75. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

Considers Blake's notion of deep time in relationship to the eighteenth-century ballad revival and especially to Joseph Ritson's A Select Collection of English Songs (1783), with a focus on the "Introduction" and "Earth's Answer" from the Songs of Experience and on the "contact zone between geology and prehistory" (169) in Milton and Jerusalem. There are also comparisons between Blake and Herder.

Heymans, Peter. “Eating Girls: Deleuze and Guattari’s Becoming-Animal and the Romantic Sublime in William Blake’s Lyca Poems.” Humanimalia 3.1 (fall 2011): 1-30.³¹⁶ <WBHC 2145>

“[A]n ecocritical reading of William Blake’s Lyca poems, ‘The Little Girl Lost’ and ‘The Little Girl Found’ (1).

Hutchings, Kevin. “Gender, Environment, and Imperialism in William Blake’s Vision of the Daughters of Albion.” Romantic Ecologies and Colonial Cultures in the British Atlantic World, 1770-1850. Montreal: McGill-Queen’s University Press, 2010. 70-91.³¹⁷ <WBHC 2178>

“Oothoon represents both a person and a landscape in Visions, and nothing can happen to her human portion that does not also affect the environmental aspect of her identity. Hence, while Blake’s poem deals primarily with the related issues of women’s subjugation and human slavery, it is also concerned with the figurative enslavement of nature” (71).

Hutchins, Kevin. Imagining Nature: Blake’s Environmental Poetics. Montreal: McGill-Queen’s University Press, 2002. <WBHC 2178>

An important work applying ecological criticism to Blake. It breaks from the longstanding critical assumptions that Blake was hostile to the nature world and, instead, articulates Blake’s positive ecological vision.

Hutchings, Kevin. “Nature, Ideology, and the Prohibition of Pleasure in Blake’s ‘Garden of Love.’” Romanticism and Pleasure. Ed. Thomas H. Schmid and Michelle Faubert. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 187-207. <WBHC 2179>

Considers pleasure and nature in “The Garden of Love,” “Ah! Sunflower,” and “The Earth’s Answer.”

Hutchings, Kevin. “Pastoral, Ideology, and Nature in William Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” ISLE: Interdisciplinary Studies in Literature and Environment 9.1 (2002): 1-24. <WBHC 2179>

“In [Visions of the Daughters of Albion], the protagonist, Oothoon, attempts to refute the socially and ecologically destructive dualisms underpinning pastoral technology” (2).

Hutchings, Kevin D. “William Blake and ‘The Nature of Infinity’: Milton’s Environmental Poetics.” Nineteenth-Century Contexts 25 (2003): 55-77. <WBHC 2179>

Milton offers “‘Blake’s alternative vision of nature’ (71)” (WBHC 2179).

James, John Patrick. “Blake’s Debt: Artisanship and the Future of Labor.” Literature Compass 19.3-4 (2022): 15 pp. <Blake (2023)>

“Investigates William Blake’s poetic response to the problems of religious and financial debt within the context of his own environmentally compromised era” (abstract).

³¹⁶ Also published as “The Cute and the Cruel: Taste, Animality and Sexual Violence in Burke and Blake,” Animality in British Romanticism: The Aesthetics of Species (New York and London: Routledge, 2012), 101-17, <WBHC 2145>.

³¹⁷ Incorporates Hutchings’s article of the same name, Romanticism & Ecology: Colonial Cultures in the British Atlantic World, 1770-1850, ed. James C McKusick. Romantic Circles Praxis Series. Nov. 2001.

Janowitz, Anne. "The Sublime of Ruin: Blake's Jerusalem." England's Ruins: Poetic Purpose and the National Landscape. Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1990. 145-76. <BBS 526>

On figurations of ruins in Jerusalem, with references to the urban sublime and Wordsworth's Prelude.

Kauvar, Elaine. "Landscape of the Mind: Blake's Garden Symbolism." Blake Studies 9.1-2 (1980): 57-73. <BBS 413>

Surveys the garden imagery throughout the poetry, which, she contends, represents "Higher Innocence" (BBS 413).

Keir, John. "The Grasshopper and the Ant in Blake's 'The Fly.'" English Language Notes 38.3 (2001): 56-68. <WBHC 2247>

A close reading of the poem and the design of "The Fly," with references to Thomas Gray's "Ode on the Spring."

Khalip, Jacques. "Flea Trouble." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joe Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 262-83. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Examines Behemoth and Leviathan and The Ghost of a Flea in light of Derrida's The Animal That Therefore I Am.

Lefcowitz, Barbara F. "Blake and the Natural World." PMLA 89.1 (1974): 121-31. <BB #A2108>

"Indeed, the only valid generalization one can make about Blake's overall attitude toward nature is that he almost never treats it apart from a human context" (121).

Leveton, Jacob Henry. "Of 'Combustion, blast, vapour, and cloud': William Blake's Urizen as Steam Engine, Albion Mill, & Notes Towards a Materialist Method for the Anthropocene." Essays in Romanticism 29.2 (2022): 131-54. <Blake (2023)>

The depictions of pollution in The [First] Book of Urizen "invites readers to make connections with Albion Mill as a resonant site of industrial production where steam engines were first deployed in a process of mass manufacture in Romantic-period London" (abstract).

Leveton, Jacob Henry. "Seeing Ecology: Pollination and the Resistance to Adam Smith's Theory of Political Economy in William Blake's Book of Thel \(1789\)." Nineteenth-Century Contexts 42.5 (2020): 537-52. <Blake (2022)>

Pollination in The Book of Thel offers an alternative model to that in Adam Smith's theory of political economy.

Lussier, Mark. "Blake, Deleuze, and the Emergence of Ecological Consciousness." Ecocritical Theory: New European Approaches. Ed. Axel Goodbody and Kate Rigby. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2011. 454-80. <WBHC 2354>

Uses Deleuze to articulate Blake's sense of "ecological consciousness" (455).

Lussier, Mark. "Blake's Deep Ecology, or the Ethos of Otherness." Romantic Dynamics: The Poetics of Physicality. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd; New York: St. Martin's Press Inc., 2000. 47-63.³¹⁸ <WBHC 2354>

On Blake's ecological vision.

Lussier, Mark. "Blake's Vortex, or the Quantum Bridge in Milton." Romantic Dynamics: The Poetics of Physicality. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd; N.Y.: St Martin's Press Inc, 2000. 82-104.³¹⁹ <WBHC 2354>

"About the 'juxtaposition of Blake and scientific languages' by physicists and quantum mechanics" (WBHC 2355).

Makdisi, Saree. "Empire and Human Energy." PMLA 126.2 (2011): 318-20.³²⁰

"[W]e ought to recognize the transformations captured by Blake not only because they set the stage for the fully integrated, inescapably globalized world that we inherited from the 1700s but also because the transformations and dislocations of human energy initiated in his time have continued unabated into our own" (318-19).

McKusick, James C. "The Ends of Nature: Environmental Apocalypse in William Blake and Mary Shelley." Green Writing: Romanticism and Ecology. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2000. 95-112. <WBHC 2390>

"Blake's poetry [...] engages in a sustained and bitter critique of the material conditions of production" (95).

Morkan, Joel. "Blake's 'Ancient Forests of Europe.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.4 (spring 1973): 93. <BB #1217.119>

Suggests "Ancient Forests of Europe" (l.93, E 290) is tied to restrictions on the use of forests by peasants.

Morris, David B. "Dark Ecology: Bio-anthropocentrism in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell." Interdisciplinary Studies in Literature and Environment 19.2 (2012): 274-91.³²¹

Marriage "offers less a forecast of contemporary deep ecology than a prophetic and revolutionary and still enormously challenging dark ecology" (275).

Morton, Timothy. Hell: In Search of a Christian Ecology. New York: Columbia University Press, 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Blake figures prominently in Morton's reflections.

³¹⁸ Originally published as "Blake's Deep Ecology," Studies in Romanticism 35 (1996), 393-408, <WBHC 2354>. Rpt. as "Blake's Deep Ecology, or the Ethos of Otherness," Romantic Dynamics: The Poetics of Physicality (Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd; N.Y.: St Martin's Press Inc, 2000), 47-63, <WBHC 2354>.

³¹⁹ Developed from Lussier's "Blake's Vortex: The Quantum Tunnel," Nineteenth-Century Contexts 18.3 (1994), 263-91, <WBHC 2354-55>

³²⁰ Not recorded in WBHC.

³²¹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Morton, Timothy. “Romantic Disaster Ecology: Blake, Shelley, Wordsworth.” Romanticism and Disaster. Ed. Jacques Khalip and David Collings. Romantic Circles Praxis Series (2012).³²²

In “The Tyger,” “Blake comes close to articulating a theory of disaster that is highly relevant to this essay’s proposal that we think beyond disaster. This is unsurprising, since his work is ideology critique through and through, and since the materialism and capitalism that spawn disaster, and disaster thinking, were operational by the time he was writing” (n.p.).

Osborne, Catherine. “Introduction: On William Blake, Nature, and Mortality.” Dumb Beasts and Dead Philosophers: Humanity and the Humane in Ancient Philosophy and Literature. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2007. 3-24. <WBHC 2483>

Uses Auguries of Innocence as a jumping off point for her study of humanity’s moral relationship to animals.

Parrish, Susan Scott. “Embodying African Knowledge in Colonial Surinam: Two William Blake Engravings in Stedman’s 1796 Narrative.” Slave Portraiture in the Atlantic World. Ed. Agnes Lugo-Ortiz and Angela Rosenthal. New York: Cambridge University Press, 2013. 257-81. <WBHC 2508>

Focuses on “A Private Marine of Col. Fourgeoud’s Corps” and “The Celebrated Gramman Quacy”: “Together, Stedman and Blake practiced a form of Romantic containment of African authority to the forest environment” (277).

Patenaude, Troy. “‘nourished by the spirits of the forests and floods’: Blake, Nature, and Modern Environmentalism.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 180-206. <WBHC 1899-1900>

Explicates Blake’s environmental views, traces his reception in environmental writings and movements, and suggests that “Blake scholars and environmentalists stand to learn a great deal from one another” (206).

Perkins, David. “Animal Rights and ‘Auguries of Innocence.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 33.1 (summer 1999): 4-11. <WBHC 1678>

The couplets on animals, then, display the strong, confused, appalled reaction of the innocent mind as it encounters the world of experience, in which innocence is victimized (10).

Punter, David. “Blake: His Shadowy Animals.” Studies in Romanticism 36.2 (summer 1997): 227-38. <WBHC 2551>

Suggests “a context in which Blake’s work with animals might be framed; or, perhaps, the whole of the ‘representation’—in the aesthetic and the political senses—of animals might take on a new light” (228).

Rigby, Kate. “‘the wrong dream’: Prophetic Ecopoetics.” Reclaiming Romanticism: Towards an Ecopoetics of Decolonization. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2020. 113-47. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

³²² Not recorded in WBHC.

"I identify a specifically ecopoetic variant of the prophetic mode of Romantic literature, as exemplified above all by Blake" (113).

Rose, Edward J. "Blake's Human Insect: Symbol, Theory, and Design." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 10.2 (1968): 215-32. <BB #2553>

Although older, an illuminating analysis of Blake's descriptions of humanity as a worm and a seed.

Sato, Hikari. "W.H. Hudson no Kyosei Shiso to Jugaku Bunsho: William Blake no Keifu nouede [Ecological Consciousness of W. H. Hudson and Bunsho Jugaku: Following the Tracks of William Blake]." Kojitsuan [Sunward Cottage] 5 (2022): 1-7. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

The essay points out that W.H. Hudson, an author and ornithologist, mentions "Auguries of Innocence" in Birds in a Village (London: Chapman & Hall, 1893, 124-25), Birds in Town & Village (London: J. M. Dent, 1919, 172), Nature in Downland, 2nd ed. (London: Longmans, Green, 1900, 272), and The Land's End: A Naturalist's Impressions in West Cornwall (London: Hutchinson, 1908, 274), and "The Tyger" in Nature in Downland (244-45) and Birds and Man (London: Duckworth, 1915, 168-69). In W.H. Hudson: A Portrait (New York: E. P. Dutton, 1924) Morley Roberts records their conversation as follows: "R. 'What do you think of Blake?' / H. 'I can't read his long mystical stuff, but of course I like Songs of Innocence'" (192).

Schulz, Max F. "Blake and the Unending Dialectic of Earth and Eden." Paradise Preserved: Recreations of Eden in Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1985. 42-56. <BBS 635, WBHC 2660>

Blake's "city-bred temperament and his election to live out his life in London is readily prefigurative of the symbolic centrality of the city as paradise" (56).

Schwartz, Janelle A. "Art Thou but a Worm?": Blake and the Question concerning Taxonomy." Worm Work: Recasting Romanticism. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2012. 113-48.³²³

"[I]t is my goal to produce here a concentrated study of particular worm sightings in Blake—worm sightings which, while not exhaustive, are meant to inspire continued investigation into the significance of vermiforms for this early Romantic mind' (115). Focuses on The Gates of Paradise, Thel, "The Sick Rose," and Jerusalem.

Sturrock, June. "Eve, Eden, and the Flowers of Experience: Milton, Blake, and Botany." Renaissance Ecology: Imagining Eden in Milton's England. Ed. Ken Hiltner. Pittsburgh: Duquesne University Press, 2008. 91-105. <WBHC 2715>

On the influence of Paradise Lost on the flowery imagery of the Songs, with some references to Erasmus Darwin.

Sturrock, June. "Lark, Wild Thyme, Crowing Cock, and Waterfall: The Natural, the Moral, and the Political in Blake, Milton and Vaughan's Silex Scintillans." Of Paradise and Light: Essays on Henry Vaughan and John Milton in Honor of Alan Rudrum. Ed. Donald R. Dickson and Holly Faith. Newark: Delaware University Press, 2004. 329-50. <WBHC 2715-16>

³²³ Not recorded in WBHC.

Compares Vaughan's Silex Scintillans and Blake's Milton, especially in their representation of nature.

Warren, Leland E. "Poetic Vision and the Natural World: The Spider and His Web in the Poetry of William Blake." Enlightenment Essays 6 (1975): 50-62. <BBS 673>

On Blake's spiders.

Film, Television, and Video Studies

Warner, Janet. "A Videotape of America Produced at York University." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 65-66.³²⁴

Details the making of Blake's America, a videotape produced at York University by Warner, John Sutherland, and Robert Wallace, which would allow to students "to see all the plates of America, hear the whole poem read dramatically, and at the same time interpret the poem for them in a way that would link it to past and present historical events" (65). "We [...] used pictures of modern student riots and other political events which bore out the themes of political and psychological revolution" (65-66).

Studies

Bergvall, Åke. "The Blake Syndrome: The Case of 'Jerusalem'." Literature/Film Quarterly 41.4 (2013): 254-65. <WBHC 1625>

Considers the "Jerusalem" hymn from Milton in film.

Blaydes, Sophia B., and Philip Bordinat. "Blake's 'Jerusalem' and Popular Culture: The Loneliness of the Long-Distance Runner and Chariots of Fire." Literature/Film Quarterly 11 (1983): 211-14. <BBS 413>

On the use of the "Jerusalem" hymn and its setting by Parry in the films, The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner (1962) and The Chariots of Fire (1981).

Bloom, Harold. "Visionary Cinema." Partisan Review 35 (1968): 557-70.³²⁵ <BB #1231>

"The rough outlines of a visionary cinema in Blake, Wordsworth and Shelley" (557), though the connection with cinema seems very tenuous" (BB #1231).

Cecire, Natalia. "Environmental Innocence and Slow Violence." Women's Studies Quarterly 43.1-2 (2015): 164-87.³²⁶

Examines, in part, the allusion to Blake's "The Little Black Boy" in the film, Beasts of the Southern Wild (2012), and what it suggests about environmental racism.

Curnutt, Rick, "Mad Poets: William Blake, Jim Jarmusch and Dead Man." Film Journal 1 (2002): n.p. <WBHC 1913>

"The American Indian idea that 'life [is] a journey even after death . . . is at the core of the relationship between William Blake and Dead Man" (WBHC 1913).

da Silva, Suellen Cordovil, and Teófilo Augusto da Silva. "A tradução intersemiótica em Frankenstein, de Mary Shelley, The Little Girl Lost, de William Blake, e a série The Frankenstein Chronicles [The Intersemiotic Translation in Frankenstein by Mary Shelley, 'The Little Girl Lost' by William Blake, and The Frankenstein Chronicles Series.]" Tabuleiro de Letras 11.2 (Dec. 2017): 140-57. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2019)>

³²⁴ Not recorded in BB.

³²⁵ Rpt. in Bloom's Ringers in the Tower (1971), 37-52, <BB #1231>.

³²⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

De Angelis, Michael. "Gender and Other Transcendences: William Blake as Johnny Depp." Ladies and Gentlemen, Boys and Girls: Gender in Film at the End of the Twentieth Century. Ed. Murray Pomerance. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2001. 283-99. <WBHC 1931>

On the significance of casting Johnny Depp to play William Blake and how it aids in "the construction of a version of heroic masculinity defined by a nurtured respect for human difference" (283). Some discussion of Visions of the Daughters of Albion and Blake's relationship to America and revolution.

Dmitrieva, Tatiana. "Tvorchestvo i mifologiya Uil'iama Bleika v kontekste kinoproizvedenia Dzh. Dzharmusha 'Mertvets' [William Blake's Works and Mythology in the Context of J. Jarmusch's Film Dead Man]." Sibirskii antropologicheskii zhurnal [Siberian Journal of Anthropology] 4.4 (2020): 201-11. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The author analyzes the film Dead Man, comparing it with the poems and graphic works by William Blake, particularly the Visionary Heads, The Ghost of a Flea, and "The Little Boy Lost."

Douglas, Mark. "Film in a Time of Crisis: Blake, Dead Man, The New Math(s), and Last Days." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 162-74. <WBHC 1871-73>

"[W]ithin the confines of generic depictions[,] Blake offers his own call to break through the restriction and impositions of another form" (174).

Douglas, Mark. "Queer Bedfellows: William Blake and Derek Jarman." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 113-26. <WBHC 2862-63>

On Blake's influence on the filmmaker.

Escobar, Armando. "Un camino a través del infierno: la presencia de William Blake en Dragón rojo." Ágora. Revista estudiantil del Centro de Estudios Internacionales de El Colegio de México 7, no. 11 (2011). In Spanish. <Blake (2018)>

Fairchild, B.H., Jr. "Songs of Innocence and Experience: The Blakean Vision of George Lucas." Literature / Film Quarterly & (1979): 112-19. <BBS 469>

"I have described Lucas' vision as Blakean not because it imitates Blake's or is influenced by it but rather because they are visions of shared archetypes: innocence, experience, initiation, the pastoral" (113).

Harley, Alexis. "America a Prophecy: When Blake Meets Blade Runner." Sydney Studies in English 31 (2005): 61-75. <WBHC 2128>

“The world Blade Runner depicts is everything Blake would have abhorred, a Romantic dystopia, from which all the Romantic medicines-nature, feeling, poetry-are progressively removed” (75).

Hellwig, Harold Henry. “William Blake’s Jerusalem and the Los Angeles of Film Noir.” Philosophy and Literature 38.1 (April 2014): 223-41. <WBHC 2140>

“Blake and film noir apparently had the same problem with the urban landscape” (abstract).

Hopkins, David. “William Blake and British Surrealism: Humphrey Jennings, the Impact of Machines and the Case for Dada.” Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: “William Blake: The Man from the Future?” Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 305-20. <Blake (2017)>

“This article addresses an issue that has eluded focused scholarship: the reception of William Blake within the British surrealist movement from the mid-1930s onwards. A significant difference can be seen between Blake as understood by the critic Herbert Read, and Blake as conceived by the surrealist writer and film maker Humphrey Jennings” (abstract).

Hosney, Jim, Jacquelyn Wallman, and Jesse Ward Engdahl. “The Passion of St. Charles: Martin Scorsese’s Mean Streets.” South Atlantic Quarterly 91 (1992): 409-18. <WBHC 2168>

“In his movie, ‘Scorsese acknowledges the importance of energy through a direct reference to Blake’s “The Tyger”’ (415)” (WBHC 2168).

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. “Blood in Blake’s Poetry of Gender Struggle.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 47-63. <WBHC 1803-04>

“I will explore the ways in which Blake’s blood becomes sexualized and gains multiple meaning, sometimes conflicting, in gender struggle scenes in The Book of Urizen, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem,” and “I draw attention to the fact that a similar kind of blood appears in examples of Japanese film and literature [by Yukio Mishima and Hayao Miyazaki]” (47).

Leonard, Garry. “‘Without Contraries There is No Progression’: Cinematic Montage and the Relationship of Illustration to Text in William Blake’s The [First] Book of Urizen.” University of Toronto Quarterly 80.4 (2011): 918-34. <WBHC 2788-91>

Argues the relationship between the text and image in Urizen is akin to the cinematic technique of montage.

Lussier, Mark and Kaitlin Gowan. “The Romantic Roots of ‘Blade Runner.’” The Wordsworth Circle 43.3 (summer 2012): 165-72.

Blake exemplifies “the hermeneutic tendency” (168) in the film.

Matthews, Susan. “And did those feet?: Blake and the Role of the Artist in Post-War Britain.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark,

Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 149-61. <WBHC 1871-73>

On Joyce Cary's The Horse's Mouth (1944), Ronald Neame's film version (1958), and Geoffrey and John Keynes.

Morrison, Rachela. "Casablanca Meets Star Wars: The Blakean Dialectics of Blade Runner." Literature/Film Quarterly 18 (1990): 2-10. <BBS 579>

On Blake's influence on Philip Dick's novel and Ridley Scott's film.

O'Brien, Tom. "A Song of Innocence: Blake and 'Chariots of Fire.'" Commonweal 109.8 (Apr. 23, 1982): 230-31. <BBS 589>

"About the relation between the 'Jerusalem' lyric in Milton and the film" (BBS 589).

Piskorska, Anna. "Jedna rodzina duchowa: intertekstualna obecność natchnionej poezji Williama Blake'a w Truposzu Jima Jarmuscha [One Spiritual Family: The Intertextual Presence of William Blake's Inspired Poetry in Dead Man Directed by Jim Jarmusch]." Rodzina: naturalna, duchowa, społeczna. Ed. Jan Zimny. Wrocław: Akademia Wojsk Lądowych imienia generała Tadeusza Kościuszki, 2020. 99-108. In Polish (abstract in Polish and English). <Blake (2021)>

Salyer, Gregory. "Poetry Written with Blood: Creating Death in Dead Man." Imag\(in\)ing Otherness: Filmic Visions of Living Together. Ed. S. Brent Plate and David Jasper. Atlanta, Georgia: Scholars Press, 1999. 17-36. <WBHC 2631-32>

"I examine Dead Man in light of the following three themes: mythology, technology, and capitalism. I will use these themes as lenses for seeing what Dead Man contributes to the imagination and imaging of otherness and the negotiations necessary for living together in America" (19).

Schelkle, Rainer "Stranger on a Train: William Blake and Jim Jarmusch's Dead Man--Media and Violence, Poetry and Politics." Zeitschrift für Anglistik und Americanistik 58.4 (Dec. 2010): 335-49. <WBHC 2650>

"Jim Jarmusch's film Dead Man (1995), a reworking of the Western genre and perhaps the most original of the many contemporary works of popular culture which reference Blake, takes up Blake's and McLuhan's thoughts by focusing on the violence trains, guns, watches, and factories wrought upon 1870s North America" (abstract).

Thomas, Troy. "William Blake and Dead Man." Adaptation: The Journal of Literature and Screen Studies 5.1 (2012): 57-87. <WBHC 2760>

"Jarmusch's film catches the spirit of Blake's irony and his negative views of matter, materialism, and human existence on earth, and touches on his positive, highly developed, and personal philosophy of religion" (abstract).

Whittaker, Jason. "Dark Angels: Blake, Milton, and Lovecraft in Ridley Scott's Prometheus." William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Bundock and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 109-28. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

On how Scott used Blake and Milton in his film.

Accounts, Notices, Reviews, and Videos of Blake in Film, Television, and Video
“Blake Docudrama.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.1 (summer 1983): 43.³²⁷

“Global Concepts/The Media Group, Inc. has produced a half-hour television docudrama on Blake: The Marriage of Heaven and Hell for the Swedenborg Foundation of New York. According to a press release from Global Concepts, ‘the final script is set in 1827, during Blake’s last days, painting his final version of the engraving of Urizen spanning the heavens with a giant compass. From the microcosm of the simple rooms shared by William and Catherine Blake, the action expands into a series of visions of what Catherine is reported to have deemed their “children with bright fiery wings.”’ There are pictures of the production. [Rev. by Tim Hoyer, Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.2 (fall 1986), 68-70, <BBS 400>.]

“Blake and Ginsberg on ABC-TV’s ‘Directions.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 164.³²⁸

“Two films, both produced and directed by Aram Boyajian, were shown 16 and 23 January on ABC-TV’s Directions. Allen Ginsberg sings and reads from Blake’s works in illuminated printing as plates from those works are shown” (164).

“The Muggeridge Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.2 (fall 1976): 44.³²⁹

“Public television in the U.S. recently offered a series of six hour-long programs based on the hypothesis that the ideas of St. Augustine, Pascal, Blake, Kierkegaard, Tolstoy, and Bonhoeffer add up to a kind of Third Testament (which is thus the title of the series). The host for the series was Malcolm Muggeridge, who devoted one hour of broadcast time to the ideas of each of the six men” (44).

William Blake’s An Island in the Moon. Adapted by Joseph Visconti, directed by Visconti and Evamarii Johnson, with music by Margaret LaFrance, 1983. First performed at Cornell, 8-9 April 1983; videotaped before a live audience 11-12 May 1983. 3/4” videocassette, 48 minutes. [Rev. by Tim Hoyer, Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.2 (fall 1986), 68-70, <BBS 400>.]

Available at Joseph Visconti’s website.

³²⁷ Not recorded in BBS.

³²⁸ Not recorded in BB.

³²⁹ Not recorded in BB.

Gender and Sexuality Studies

Introductions

Bruder, Helen P. "Blake and Gender Studies." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 132-66. <WBHC 2867-68>

Sketches a history of feminist criticism in Blake studies from Irene Tayler's "The Woman Scaly" (1973) to turn-of-the-century Queer readings as well as highlighting key feminist readings of specific illuminated books.

Bruder, Helen P., and Tristanne Connolly. "Introduction: 'What is now proved was once only imagin'd.'" Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 1-20. <WBHC 1801-03>

Reviews the emergence of a Queer approach to Blake in scholarship and highlights Queer moments in Blake's life and work.

Effinger, Elizabeth, and Helen P. Bruder. "A Conversation with Helen Bruder." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.2 (fall 2023). <Blake (2024)>

An interview with Bruder on the twenty-fifth anniversary of her William Blake and the Daughters of Albion (1997) and its (and Feminism's) impact on Blake studies.

Matthews, Susan. "Sex, Sexuality, and Gender." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 317-24. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Ackland, Michael. "The Embattled Sexes: Blake's Debt to Wollstonecraft in The Four Zoas." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16 (winter 1982-83): 172-83. <BBS 394>

Argues for Wollstonecraft's influence on the Emanations in The Four Zoas, with discussion of women in the Lambeth prophecies as well.

Adlard, John. "The Age and Virginity of Lyca." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.3 (winter 1972-73): 73. <BB #1271.116>

Suggests that Lyca's age of seven alludes to "the Commentary of Hierocles on the Golden Verses of Pythagoras" in which "the number seven itself is a virgin" (73).

Aers, David. "Blake: Sex, Society and Ideology." Romanticism and Ideology: Studies in English Writing 1765-1830. Ed. David Aers, Jonathan Cook, and David Punter. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1981. 27-43. <BBS 333>

"[I]n Blake's work we can follow the evolution of an original and profound understanding of the dialectics of sexual conflict and the internalization of repressive ideologies by their victims. Yet we can also see, as Blake himself did, how even the most radical penetration of dominant ideology or practice is likely to include some perpetuation of the forms being strenuously negated" (27).

Ault, Donald. "Where's Poppa? Or, the Defeminization of Blake's 'Little Black Boy.'" Out of Bounds: Male Writers and Gender. Ed. Laura Claridge and Elizabeth Langland. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1990. 75-91. <BBS 356, WBHC 1572>

A detailed reading of the poem's arguments about gender and race, emphasizing the disappearance of the mother from the poem and the boy's fantasy of the father. The essay includes a postscript by Ault that reflects on his use of "antipatriachal" and 'feminist' discourse" (87).

Ankarsjö, Magnus. William Blake and Gender. Jefferson, NC: McFarland and Company, 2006. <WBHC 1490-91>

A defense of Blake against the charge of sexism. Focused largely on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem.

Beal, Pamela. "Trembling Before the Eternal Female: Blake's Call to a Transcendental Eros." Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 75-90. <WBHC 1589>

In Jerusalem, Blake charts a way to live erotically, with passion, without being caught in what he calls the 'web of desire'" (75).

Billigheimer, Rachel V. "Conflict and Conquest: Creation, Emanation and the Female Will in William Blake's Mythology." Modern Language Studies 30 (2000): 93-120. <WBHC 1629>

On the concept of the emanation in the epic poems, with several references to the Kabbala.

Billigheimer, Rachel V. "The Female in Blake and Yeats." CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 137-44. <BBS 434, WBHC 1630>³³⁰

"In this essay the archetypal Female in Yeats is viewed as illuminating Blake's eternal Female" (137). "In both [Blake and Yeats], through biblical and romantic allusion, woman is associated with the terror and destruction and final redemption through inspiration that is linked to the origin of the Sphinx" (144).

Bizzarro, Patrick. "The Symbol of the Androgyne in Blake's Four Zoas and Shelley's Prometheus Unbound: Marital Status Among the Romantic Poets." Joinings and Disjoinings: The Significance of Marital Status in Literature. Ed. Joanna Stephens Mink and Janet Doubler Ward. Bowling Green, OH: Bowling Green State University Popular Press, 1992. 36-51. <WBHC 1634-35>

"The androgynous state in Blake, then, becomes a symbol of freedom from the restraint of rationalistic dogma" (45)" (WBHC 1635).

Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.3 (winter 1982-83).

Offers four essays focused on Blake and women: Anne K. Mellor's "Blake's Portrayal of Women" [pp. 148-55]; Alicia Ostriker's "Desire Gratified and Ungratified: William Blake and Sexuality" [pp. 156-65]; Nelson Hilton's "Some Sexual Connotations" [pp. 166-71]; and Michael Ackland's "The Embattled Sexes: Blake's Debt to Wollstonecraft in The Four Zoas" [pp. 172-83].

³³⁰ The date in WBHC should be 1986.

Bolton, Betsy. ““A Garment dipped in blood”: Ololon and Problems of Gender in Blake’s Milton.” Studies in Romanticism 36.11 (1997): 61-101. <WBHC 1775>

“I will argue that gender and sexuality in particular run through the fabric of [Milton] as a frayed and contradictory strand” (61).

Brewster, Glen E. “Blake and the Metaphor of Marriage.” Nineteenth-Century Contexts 16.1 (1992): 69-93. <BBS 424-25>

“In his references to marriage, ‘Blake was more progressive than Godwin, Byron, Shelley, Owen, and most of the other male writers who took up male-female relations as a major theme’” (BBS 424-25).

Brogan, Howard O. “Blake on Woman: Oothoon to Jerusalem.” CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 125-36. <BBS 434>

“I may be able at least to explain Blake’s attitude toward women as a consistent development by looking at it in a much broader mythological context” (126). Also suggests that “Blake’s attitude toward woman can be illuminated by considering it in light of Neoplatonic and Gnostic influence upon him” (125).

Bruder, Helen. “The Sins of the Fathers: Patriarchal Criticism and The Book of Thel.” Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 147-58. <WBHC 1869-71>

Critiques patriarchal readings of Thel, calling particular attention to those Robert F. Gleckner, to suggest that, with few exceptions, “no one has pursued any of the feminist implication of this luminously woman-centered poem” (156).

Bruder, Helen P. William Blake and the Daughters of Albion. New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1997. <WBHC 1795-96>

An important feminist critique of both Blake and Blake criticism, focused primarily on the early illuminated books. Bruder reflected on the book in Vala issue 3 and was interviewed about the book and its legacy by Elizabeth Effinger in “A Conversation with Helen Bruder.”

Bruder’s work continued in her collection, Women Reading Blake (2007), and a series of collected essays, co-edited with Tristanne J. Connolly, that highlight issues of gender, sexuality, animal studies, and posthuman studies (Queer Blake [2010], Blake, Gender and Culture [2012], Sexy Blake [2013], and Beastly Blake [2018]).

Bruder, Helen P., ed. Women Reading William Blake. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. <WBHC 1795-1800>

The first collection on Blake featuring exclusively female contributors. It includes both academic essays and more personal and popular reflections on reading Blake as well critiques of masculinist Blake criticism and critics. Several female Blake scholars recount their early experiences with both the criticism and male Blake critics.

Bruder, Helen P. and Tristanne J. Connolly, ed. Blake, Gender and Culture. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. <WBHC 1800-01>

Important collection on gender, often touching on gender identities and sexuality.

Bruder, Helen P., and Tristanne Connolly, ed. Queer Blake. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. <WBHC 1801-03>

An important set of essays, largely examining Blake from a Queer Studies perspective.

Bruder, Helen P., and Tristanne Connolly, ed. Sexy Blake. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.³³¹ <WBHC 1803-04>

A collection addressing gender and sexuality.

Chapman, Wes. “Blake, Wollstonecraft, and the Inconsistency of Oothoon.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly (summer 1997): 4-17. <WBHC 1662>

“Blake decentred a woman-centered undertaking, appropriating parts of it for his own political purposes and projecting upon it his own reimaginings of female character” (4).

Cherry, Charles L. “William Blake and Mrs. Grundy: Suppression of Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 6-10. <BB #1217.58>

Details Victorian views of Visions and its depictions of sexuality that kept it from being published in print until the Yeats and Ellis edition of 1893. Focuses much on Swinburne’s anger at Macmillan (the publisher of Gilchrist’s Life), and Anne Gilchrist’s efforts to mediate between Swinburne and the Rossettis, on the one hand, and Macmillan, on the other.

Clark, S.H. “Blake and Female Reason.” Sordid Images: The Poetry of Masculine Desire. London and New York: Routledge, 1994. 138-87. <WBHC 1856>

“‘Blake’s work cannot be reduced to a simplistic opposition between masculine activity and feminine passivity’ (187)” (WBHC 1856).

Cogan, Lucy. “Rending the ‘soft Plains’ of America: Rape and Liberation in the Poetry of William Blake.” European Romantic Review 32.4 (2021): 377-97. <Blake (2022)>

“[T]he representations of sexual assault in Blake’s work are neither an endorsement nor an evasion of the gendered dynamics of forced sex, but are instead evidence of his efforts to work through his own uncertainty regarding what limits, if any, the drive for personal liberty should observe” (abstract).

Colebrook, Claire. “Blake and Feminism: Romanticism and the Question of the Other.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.1 (summer 2000): 4-13. <WBHC 1682>

“We might see Blake, then, as an exception to a romanticism that has, from Mary Shelley to Mellor, been diagnosed as narcissistic and hubristic in its striving for totality” (6).

³³¹ Many papers were delivered at the conference “Blake, Gender and Sexuality in the Twenty-First Century, aka The Sexy Blake Conference, 15-16 July 2010, St Aldate’s, Oxford” (17n1).

Colebrook, Claire. "Blake, Literary History and Sexual Difference." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 16-25. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Reading primarily Milton, "argue[s] that Blake's poetry, with its explicit figures of sexual binaries and its apocalyptic imagery, provides a new way for feminist criticism to approach the politics of literary history (16).

Connolly, Tristanne. "Nourished with milk ye serpents': Blake, Infant Nursing, and Female Bloods." Yuruginaki Shinnen: Igirisu Roman Shugi Ronshu (A Firm Perswasion: Essays in British Romanticism). Ed. Hatsuko Niimi and Masashi Suzuki. Tokyo: Sairyusha, 2012. 353-79. <WBHC 1881>

Connolly, Tristanne. "Transgender Juvenilia: Blake's and Christall's Poetical Sketches. Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 26-34. <WBHC 1795-1800>

"Both poets assimilate, but not just tradition; they ingeniously assimilate the other gender, taking on, and blending, male and female voices at will" (33).

Connolly, Tristanne J. William Blake and the Body. Hounds mills and New York: Palgrave, 2002.³³² <WBHC 1881-82>

An influential book on Blake's various notions of and representations of the body, addressing the influence of anatomical art, physical bodies and birth (including miscarriages and abortions), parent and child relationships, and resurrected bodies. She suggests that Catherine Blake was listed as a patient on 26 August 1796 at the Lambeth lying-in hospital and posits it as likely that Catherine experienced many miscarriages.

Den Otter, A. G. "Displeasing Women: Blake's Furies and the Ladies of Moral Virtue. European Romantic Review 9.1 (1998): 35-58. <WBHC 1934-35>

Considers Blake's address to "The Ladies" in the Vision of the Last Judgment and Blake's idea of the Furies.

Drake, Dee. Searing Apparent Surfaces: Infernal Females in Four Early Works of William Blake. Stockholm: Almqvist & Wiksell International, 2000. <WBHC 1963>

Brings a feminist, post-Jungian approach to The Book of Thel, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Hectate, and The Visions of the Daughters of Albion.³³³

Elfenbein, Andrew. "Genius and the Blakean Ridiculous." Romantic Genius: The Prehistory of a Homosexual Role. Columbia: Columbia University Press, 1999. 149-76, 245-48. <WBHC 1981>

³³² Incorporates Connolly's "Miscarriage Imagery in Blake," Romanticism 7.2 (2001), 145-62, not recorded in WBHC; "William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy," Spectres of Romanticism: The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics, ed. Sarah Ruston with assistance by Lidia Garbin. (Lewiston, NY, Queenston, ON, Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999), 19-42, <WBHC 1882>.

³³³ For the implications of Dee's arguments regarding feminist analysis of Blake, see Nancy Moore Goslee's detailed review in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.4 (spring 2004), 144-48.

An early Queer reading of Blake focused on Milton that argues Blake “punctures constricting gender roles” and “revises the old assumption that any sexuality other than heterosexuality is inherently ridiculous” (153).

Erle, Sibylle. “William Blake’s Lavaterian Women: Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 44-52. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Analyzes how Blake used Lavater’s physiognomy to depict “Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania” (44).

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake’s ‘Female Will’ and Its Biographical Context.” Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 31 (1991): 615-30. <BBS 466, WBHC 2003>

An important essay that examines Blake’s relationship to Catherine Blake, Elizabeth Butts, Mary Wollstonecraft, and the engraver Caroline Watson in order “[t]o understand how Blake’s interactions with them influenced his poetic representations of women” (615).

Fallon, David. “‘she Cuts his Heart Out at his Side’: Blake, Christianity and Political Virtue.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 84-104. <WBHC 2113-15>

Examines the conflict between “republican discourse and Christian principles” (84) in Europe, The [First] Book of Urizen, and Jerusalem and its implication for gender.

Fox, Susan. “The Female as Metaphor in William Blake’s Poetry.” Critical Inquiry 3.3 (1977), 507-19.³³⁴ <BBS 474>

An important early essay on Blake’s depiction of women: “One cannot apologize away Blake’s occasional shrillness towards women” (508).

Freed, Eugenie R. A Portion of His Life”: William Blake’s Miltonic Vision of Woman. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 1994.³³⁵ <WBHC 2028-29>

Emphasizing that Blake’s views of women was central in his engagement with Milton, analyzes some of Blake’s major female characters: Thel, Oothoon, Enitharmon, and Jerusalem for what they suggest about his views of gender and female sexuality.

Freed-Isserow, Eugenie. “Building the Stubborn Structure of the Language’: The Dynamic of Blake’s Poetic Art.” English Studies in Africa 41 (1998): 11-28. <WBHC 2027>

On the women weaving on Jerusalem pl. 59 (WBHC 2027): “I will look at some aspects of this complex process of ‘building’ an artistic ‘structure’, not only from verbal components, but using visual elements as well” (11).

³³⁴ “Parts of this essay are elaborations of material included in” her Poetic Form in Blake’s Milton (1976) (Fox, “Female,” 507n).Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986) 75-90, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

³³⁵ Incorporates Freed’s “Sun-Clad Chastity’ and Blake’s ‘Maiden-Queens’: Comus, Thel and ‘The Angel,’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.3 (winter 1991-92), 104-16, <BBS 408>.

Freed-Isserow, Eugenie. “This Free Born Joy: William Blake’s Vision of Emancipation.” EAR: English Academy Review [of Southern Africa] 17 (2000): 111-30. <Blake (2003)>³³⁶

With references to Blake’s use of Ossian’s Oithona’s rape plot and Blake’s arguments with Wollstonecraft, examines the connection between rape and slavery in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and in abolitionist debates.

Gamer, Michael. “Blake, Mythologizing, and Misogyny.” Michigan Feminist Studies 7 (1992-93): 127-52. <WBHC 2050>

Seeks to answer why “did Blake’s treatment of [women] seem to change so noticeably with The Four Zoas and the major works that followed?” (129).

George, Diana Hume. “Is She Also the Divine Image? Feminine Form in the Art of William Blake.” Centennial Review 23.2 (1979): 129-40.³³⁷

On Blake’s depiction of women across his works, concluding “In her fully human form, woman was indeed the divine image for Blake. But in the fallen world, she was most often the servant of nature and the vehicle as well as the victim of repression” (140).

Gibbons, B.J. Gender in Mystical and Occult Thought: Behmenism and Its Development in England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1996. 191-98. <WBHC 2060>

A study of gender in the thought of Jacob Boehme, with its reception in England. One section is on Blake.

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. “[Reluctant Ecology in Blake and \[Hannah\] Arendt: A Response to Robert Mitchell and Richard Sha.](#)” Wordsworth Circle 46.3 (summer 2015): 143-56. <WBHC 2089>

“In this essay, I respond to Robert Mitchell’s and Richard Sha’s searching inquiries into the risks and promises of Romantic(ist) enthusiasm for “the experience of the experiment” by exploring the surprising commitment to addressing the Earth in Arendt and Blake, two punishing critics of experimentalism who would otherwise seem to converge, if at all, in their undisguised (not to say unromantic) contempt for Nature” (143).

González-Treviño, Ana Elena. “Female Spaces and the Gothic Imagination in The Book of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” William Blake’s Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncle and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 189-209. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Reads how Thel and Oothoon engage with their own bodies and the natural world.

Greco, Norma A. “Mother Figures in Blake’s Songs of Innocence and the Female Will.” Romanticism Past and Present 10 (1986): 1-15. <BBS 494>

“In Innocence, Blake . . . [shows] that the maternal bond can be possessive and repressive” (11) (BBS 494).

³³⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

³³⁷ Not recorded in BBS or WBHC.

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Babylon Revisited, or the Story of Luvah and Vala." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 101-18. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Examines Blake's later ideas of sexuality, largely through an analysis of Luvah and Vala's relationship. His conclusion, "Some modern women may have much to object to in Blake's latest thoughts about the relations of the sexes" (118), anticipates still on-going feminist debates about Blake.

Hagstrum, Jean H. "William Blake: 'Arrows of Desire' and 'Chariots of Fire.'" The Romantic Body: Love and Sexuality in Keats, Wordsworth, and Blake. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1985. 109-45. <BBS 498, WBHC 2116-17>

Considers gender, desire, and sexual love in Blake's poetry, moving from Poetical Sketches to a discussion of Beulah and Eden in the later epics. In addition to the chapter, Blake is addressed in the introduction, along with the artists Fuseli, James Barry, and William Etty.

For a more contemporary approach to similar issues, see the Bruder and Connolly's collection, Sexy Blake, or the recent Fuseli catalogue, Fuseli and the Modern Woman: Fashion, Fantasy, Fetishism.

Haigney, Catherine. "Vala's Garden in Night the Ninth: Paradise Regained or Woman Bound?" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.4 (spring 1987): 116-24. <BBS 400>

"This paper will argue (against a number of scholars) that through its female figures the dream subverts rather than celebrates pastoral as usually defined, and that this subversion compromises the rest of Blake's Ninth Night" (116).

Hannah, Daniel. "Invitations and Withdrawals: Queer Romantic Ecologies in William Blake's The Book of Thel and John Clare's 'The Nightingale's Nest'." Essays in Romanticism 20.1 (2013): 1-18. <WBHC 2125>

Examines the poems through the lens of Queer Ecology.

Hannah, Daniel. "'Panting Struggling': William Blake's Transatlantic Erotics." Symbiosis 16.1 (2012): 57-75. <WBHC 2125>

On Visions and America: "In the end, Blake's ambivalent transatlantic imaginary, [...] erotically interpellates an audience whose reading necessarily replicates the structures of sexual violence that the poem refuses to name, condemn or, even, explain" (71).

Hayes, Tom. "William Blake's Androgynous Ego-Ideal." ELH 71.1 (2004): 141-65. <WBHC 2135>

Argues that the drawing, Visionary Head Drawing of the Man Who Instructed Blake in His Dreams (c. 1819-20), represents Blake's androgynous "ego-ideal" (142).

Heymans, Peter. “Eating Girls: Deleuze and Guattari’s Becoming-Animal and the Romantic Sublime in William Blake’s Lyca Poems.” Humanimalia 3.1 (fall 2011): 1-30.³³⁸ <WBHC 2145>

“[A]n ecocritical reading of William Blake’s Lyca poems, ‘The Little Girl Lost’ and ‘The Little Girl Found’ (1).

Hilton, Nelson. “Some Sexual Connotations.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.3 (winter 1982-83): 166-71. <BBS 394>

A reading of sexual imagery from Poetic Sketches to Jerusalem and For the Sexes. See Hilton’s “Pudendaddendum” in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.4 (spring 1985), 235-36 for further thoughts.

Hoeveler, Diane Long. Romantic Androgyny: The Women Within. University Park, 1990.³³⁹ <BBS 512, WBHC 2156>

Considers “the symbolic feminine [...] whose persistent subtext presents the androgynous unification of masculine and feminine qualities” (xiv). Blake is discussed in three sections that survey most of his poetry (“Blake: ‘Thou Mother of my Mortal Part,’” 34-50; “Blake: ‘on the verge / Of Non-entity,’” 125-39; and “Blake: ‘Jerusalem in every Man / A Tent & Tabernacle,’” 210-25), with less developed references to him throughout.

Hobson, Christopher Z. Blake and Homosexuality. Basingstoke: Palgrave McMillan, 2000. <WBHC 2154>

Foundational study of Blake’s works and contexts from the perspective of Queer Studies, focusing more on the later epics.

Hobson, Christopher Z. The Chained Boy: Orc and Blake’s Idea of Revolution. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 1999.³⁴⁰ <WBHC 2155, Blake (2003)>

An important study for both its challenge to Northrop Frye’s influential idea of the Orc Cycle, in which revolutionaries are destined to become tyrants, and its early Queer approach to Blake.

Hobson, Christopher Z. “What is Liberty without Universal Toleration’: Blake, Homosexuality, and the Cooperative Commonwealth.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 136-52. <WBHC 1866-69>

Traces ideas of homosexuality in Blake’s time and works, concluding his views “cannot be assimilated to an antihomosexual consensus” (150).

³³⁸ Also published as “The Cute and the Cruel: Taste, Animality and Sexual Violence in Burke and Blake,” Animality in British Romanticism: The Aesthetics of Species (New York and London: Routledge, 2012), 101-17, <WBHC 2145>.

³³⁹ Incorporates Hoeveler’s “Blake’s Erotic Apocalypse: The Androgynous Ideal in Jerusalem,” Essays in Literature 6.1 (1979), 29-41, <BBS 511>.

³⁴⁰ Incorporates Hobson’s “The Myth of Blake’s ‘Orc Cycle,’” Blake, Politics, and History, ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson (1998), <WBHC 1950-53>, and “Unbound from Wrath: Orc and Blake’s Crisis of Vision in The Four Zoas,” Studies in English Literature, 33.4 (1993), 725-54, <WBHC 2155-56>.

Hopkins, Steven P. ““I Walk Weeping in Pangs of a Mothers Torment for Her Children’: Women’s Laments in the Poetry and Prophecies of William Blake.” Journal of Religious Ethics 37.1 (2009): 39-81. <WBHC 2218-19>

“Tracing the performative function of Enion, Jerusalem, Vala, and Erin in Blake’s later epics, The Four Zoas and Jerusalem, I argue for the close connection between the female laments and the possibility of redemption” (abstract).

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. “The Female Voice in Blake Studies in Japan, 1910s-1930s.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 195-211. <WBHC 1857-62>

Analyzes how the female characters in Blake’s poetry and Catherine Blake were interpreted by Yanagi and Jugaku, pairing the latter’s praise of Catherine with the film, Broken Lullaby (a.k.a. The Man I Killed) (1932).

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. “The Impact of Feminism on Blake Studies in Japan.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 91-99. <WBHC 1795-1800>

A very accessible overview.

Ishizuka, Hisao. “‘Why Wilt Thou Create a Female Will?’ Blake’s Idea of ‘Female Will’ and the Cultural Sensibility.” Studies in English Literature [Japan] 46 (2005): 1-18. <WBHC 2197>

James, G. Ingli. “William Blake and Feminist Theology: Some Observations on the Affinities.” Feminist Theology 4.11 (Jan. 1996): 72-85. <WBHC 2204>

“Chiefly concerned with ‘how much there is in Blake which particularly resonates with feminist theology, both . . . Christian and post-Christian’ (73)” (WBHC 2204).³⁴¹

Kaplan, Marc. “Blake’s Milton: The Metaphysics of Gender.” Nineteenth-Century Contexts 19 (1995): 151-78. <WBHC 2238>

“[T]he poet’s mythic cosmos is not only gendered, but hierarchical and masculinist in character” (151).

Kaplan, Marc. “Jerusalem and the Origins of Patriarchy.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.3 (winter 1996-97): 68-82. <WBHC 1666>

“Jerusalem reveals, I believe, that Blake offers a perceptive critique of masculine gender-roles without a similar rethinking of the role of the female” (68).

Krueger, Misty. “The Rhetoric of Rape: William Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion as Eighteenth-Century Rape Trial.” Interpreting Sexual Violence, 1660–1800. Ed. Anne Greenfield. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2013.³⁴²

“Blake creates an imaginative text that turns ‘the courtroom’ on its end and envisions a redemptive space in which a seemingly disempowered rape victim—a ruined woman—vocalizes society’s rather than a rapist’s crimes against her person” (abstract).

³⁴¹ Bentley’s emendation.

³⁴² Not recorded in WBHC.

Kruger, Kathryn Sullivan. "The Loom of Language and the Garment of Words in William Blake's The Four Zoas." Weaving the Word: The Metaphorics of Weaving and Female Textual Production. Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 87-107, 158-64. <WBHC 2296>

On weaving and the power of the female divine.

Langland, Elizabeth. "Blake's Feminist Revision of Literary Tradition in 'The SICK ROSE.'" Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 225-43. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

A critically self-aware examination of how Blake offers a feminist critique of the literary tradition evoked by "The Sick Rose."

Lattin, Vernon E. "Blake's Thel and Oothoon: Sexual Awakening in the Eighteenth Century." Literary Criterion 16 (1981): 11-24. <BBS 545>

"[I]n both Thel and the Vision[s] of the Daughters of Albion, Blake speaks very clearly about the centrality of woman's sexual awakening as the way of vision and freedom, as well as about society's psychological and physical enslavement of women" (12).

Lee, Judith. "Ways of their Own: The Emanations of Blake's Vala, or The Four Zoas." ELH 50.1 (1983): 131-53. <BBS 547>

Gives an important emphasis to the agency of the Emanations and their relationship to Wollstonecraft: "Inheriting a social vision that places women as witnesses rather than as participants in social change, and a model of the imagination that subordinates the 'feminine' aspect as the source or barrier to inspiration rather than as the creative impulse itself, critics have not considered the possibility that the emanations of Vala function as characters as well as symbols" (131).

Lee, Monika. "'Happy Copulation': Revolutionary Sexuality in Blake and Shelley." "And Never Know the Joy": Sex and the Erotic in English Poetry. Ed. C. C. Barfoot. Amsterdam: Rodopi, 2006. 189-205. <WBHC 2317>

Contends that, in Shelley and Blake, "readers "are not invited into the sexual poem as a voyeur, but rather as a desiring subject in a complex interplay of eros and thanatos—an experience of the body as text and text as body" (189).

Lincoln, Andrew. "Alluring the Heart to Virtue: Blake's Europe." Studies in Romanticism 38.4 (1999): 621-39. <WBHC 2329>

On the association between women and orthodox Christianity in Europe.

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. "Transfigured Maternity in Blake's Songs of Innocence: Inverting the 'Maternity Plot' in 'A Dream.'" Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G. A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York and London: Garland Press, 1998. 325-38. <WBHC 1950-53>

Blake "offers a more subtle and perhaps sympathetic recognition of a greater variety of maternal positions than contemporary cultural idealizations of the mother allow" (327).

Łuczyńska-Holdys, Małgorzata. “The Experience of Female Embodiment in William Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” Nordic Journal of English Studies 19.1 (2020): 1-27. <Blake (2022)>

“I hope to demonstrate that through his criticism of thinking that perceives the body as inferior in the gendered binary Blake not only rehabilitates the body as equally important as the mind, but also succeeds in delivering the psychologically viable and progressive message that the divorce between the mind and the body can only create a virtually torn, unhappy subject” (3-4).

Łuczyńska-Holdys, Małgorzata. “'Life exhal'd in milky fondness'—Becoming a Mother in William Blake's The Book of Thel.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.4 (spring 2013): 29 pars. <WBHC 1735>

“I intend to focus on the problems of motherhood and childcare” (par. 1).

Marchetto Santorun, María Cecilia. “‘The War ‘twixt Sun and Moon’: Evil and Gender in William Blake’s Early Illuminated Books and Alan Moore’s From Hell.” English Studies 100.4 (Jun. 2019): 387-406. <Blake (2020)>

“This article explores evil as repression in Blake and in Moore, and addresses Moore’s treatment of evil and its connections with Blake’s ideas about gender” (abstract).

Matthews, Susan. “Blake, Hayley and the History of Sexuality.” Blake, Nation and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 83-101.³⁴³ <WBHC 1866-69>

“This essay looks at one set of contexts for Blake’s writing about sexuality, attempting to set the passage from the Preludium to America within existing discourses of femininity, nationhood and sexuality in order to ask whether Blake changes the familiar tropes he seems to use” (84).

Matthews, Susan. Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Politeness. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2011. <WBHC 2381>

An important book that positions Blake’s use of “sex” against the changing meaning of the term and provides rich readings of Blake and gender primarily in relationship to William Hayley and other significant members of Hayley’s circle, and includes discussions of Fuseli and Wollstonecraft.

Matthews, Susan. “‘Hayley on his Toilette’: Blake, Hayley and Homophobia.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 209-20. <WBHC 1801-03>

“[T]race[s] Blake’s use of the satirical figure of the effeminate man in post-1800 references to William Hayley” (209), with discussion of Cowper and Fuseli. (See her Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Sexuality [2011] for an extension of these arguments.)

Matthews, Susan. “Impurity of Diction: The ‘Harlots Curse’ and Dirty Words.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 65-83. <WBHC 2113-15>

³⁴³ Incorporated in Matthews’s Blake, Sexuality and Bourgeois Politeness (2011), <WBHC 2381>.

On the context surrounding “harlot” in Blake’s culture and its significance in his works.
Important engagement with feminist criticism.

Mayberry, Tommy. “‘Composite Gender’ as the Book of Oothoon: Dress, Drag, and the Transgender Marygold Flower-Nymph.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 301-28. <Blake (2025)>

“Examining the historically documented transgender phenomenon of “Molly Houses” and the cross-dressing Chevalier D’Éon as well as fashion styles post-French Revolution, I establish a background that supports a drag/trans- reading of Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion” (abstract).

McClenahan, Catherine L. “Albion and the Sexual Machine.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G. A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York and London: Garland Press, 1998. 301-24. <WBHC 1950-53>

Surveys Blake’s depiction of gender in many works: “Blake’s image of a sexual machine [a phrase from Jerusalem pl. 39 [44]:25] indicates his interest in gender as a fundamental component of this cultural machinery” (301).

McClenahan, Catherine L. “Blake’s Erin, The United Irish and ‘sexual Machines.’” Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 149-70. <WBHC 2095-98>

On Erin in Jerusalem and Blake’s views on Irish nationalism, suggesting that the figure on the right side of the titlepage of Jerusalem is Erin.

McClenahan, Catherine L. “‘Endless Their Labour’: Women in Blake’s Illuminated Works and in the British Workforce.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 137-47. <WBHC 1795-1800>

On Blake’s depiction of women working.

McClenahan, Catherine L. “No Face Like the Human Divine? Women and Gender in Blake’s Pickering Manuscript.” Spirits of Fire: English Romantic Writers and Contemporary Historical Methods. Ed. G.A. Rosso and Daniel P. Watkins. Rutherford: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 1990. 189-207. <BBS 567>

Reads “The Mental Traveller,” “Auguries of Innocence,” “The Crystal Cabinet,” and “The Golden Net” from the Pickering Manuscript as “particularly important examples of how acutely the later Blake understood the social construction of gender and, even more, of why a poet struggling to find a voice in those troubled times may have learned from women how to exploit the contradictions and loopholes of a ‘feminized’ position” (189-90).

Mellor, Anne K. “Blake, the Apocalypse and Romantic Women Writers.” Romanticism and Millenarianism. Ed. Tim Fulford. New York and Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2002. 139-52. <WBHC 2397>

Considers female Romantic writers (Joanna Southcott, Mary Shelley, and Mary Ann Browne).

Mellor, Anne K. "Blake, Gender and Imperial Ideology: A Response." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 350-53. <WBHC 1950-53>

A response to the essays in the collection on gender that emphasizes Blake's complicity in racism and sexism.

Mellor, Anne K. "Blake's Portrayal of Women." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16.3 (winter 1982-83): 148-55. <BBS 393, WBHC 1638>

"[I]n Blake's apocalyptic human form divine, the female elements continue to function in subordination to the male elements" (148).

Mellor, Anne K. "Sex, Violence, and Slavery: Blake and Wollstonecraft." Huntington Library Quarterly 58:3-4 (1995): 345-70. <WBHC 2176-77>

Key examination of Visions in relationship to Wollstonecraft. "I will explore what Blake meant by 'slavery' in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and what he considered to be the best way to 'free' oneself from that condition. And I will compare Blake's 'solution' to the problem of female slavery with that proposed by Wollstonecraft" (345). Also considers Stedman's view of slavery.

Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000). Ed. Josephine A. McQuail. Special Section: "Mysticism and Misogyny: Contraries and Their Mystical/Metaphysical Background in the Works of William Blake."³⁴⁴

Original essays that grew out of papers from the Blake panels held intermittently at the NEMLA conferences in the 1990s, first chaired by Pamela Beal. All the essays engage with Blake's depictions of women and the question of his sexism.

Moyer, James F. "The Daughters Weave their Work in loud cries': Blake, Slavery, and Cotton." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 48.3 (winter 2014-15): 33 par. <WBHC 1741>

Emphasizes the place of cotton and textiles in Blake's depictions of slavery, especially in Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Myrone, Martin. Bodybuilding: Reforming Masculinities in British Art 1750-1810. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2005. <WBHC 2446>

While Blake is only addressed directly in the conclusion, the important study focuses on major artistic figures in his circle and the representations of masculinity in history painting.

Myrone, Martin. "William Blake's Sodomites." Burning Bright: Essays in Honour of David Bindman. Ed. Diana Deethloff et al. London: UCL Press, 2015. 136-45. <WBHC 2446-47>

Examines Blake's depiction of sodomites in Dante and Virgil Among the Blasphemers and Vanni Fucci 'Making Figs' against God from the Dante illustrations.

³⁴⁴ Not recorded as a collection in WBHC.

Nelson, Cary. "Blake's Jerusalem: A Fourfold Vision of the Human Body." The Incarnate Word: Literature as Verbal Space. Urbana, Chicago, London: University of Illinois Press, 1973. 129-59. <BB #D2278>

"Jerusalem dramatically enacts Blake's self-deliverance from the womb of this world" (159).

Niimi, Hatsuko. "The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion: Oithona, Oothoon, and Mary Wollstonecraft." Blake's Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 93-127. ³⁴⁵ <WBHC 2460-63> .

An examination of Visions in light of Oithona from Ossian and Wollstonecraft's writing.

Norvig, Gerda S. "Female Subjectivity and the Desire of Reading In(to) Blake's Book of Thel." Studies in Romanticism 34.2 (1995): 255-71. <WBHC 2468-69>

"[F]or Blake in The Book of Thel, this power of interrogativity regarding ideologically determined male and female roles remains the property of a feminine perspective—a view shared by many contemporary feminist critics who claim woman's place on the margins as a privileged site of cultural critique" (255).

Nosková, Martina. "The Eternal Female: A Contribution to the Gendered Readings of William Blake's Thel and Oothoon." Brno Studies in English 30 (2004): 159-77. <WBHC 2469>

"Thel and Oothoon, as the earliest elaborated female figures of his prophetic writings, reveal important moments in the development of Blake's attitude towards the role of women and their sexuality" (159).

Ostriker, Alicia. "Desire Gratified and Ungratified: William Blake and Sexuality." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 16 (1982): 156-65. ³⁴⁶ <BBS 394, WBHC 2296>

Identifies four of Blake's attitudes towards sexuality and gender relationships.

Paley, Morton D. "The Female Babe and 'The Mental Traveller.'" Studies in Romanticism 1.2 (1962): 97-104. ³⁴⁷ <BB #2348>

Reads the poem in light of Blake's other works: "The Female Babe unites in one form the numerous evil females of Blake's pantheon" (101).

Paley, Morton D. "'A Virgin of Twelve Years': Ololon in Blake's Milton." Huntington Library Quarterly 72.1 (2009): 106-12. <WBHC 2501-02>

³⁴⁵ Translated by Niimi from her "Albion no musume tachi no urei—Wollstonecraft to Blake no joseitachi: The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion—Women in the Works of Wollstonecraft and Blake," Toho Gakuen Daigaku Kenkyu Kiyo: Faculty Bulletin, Toho Gakuen School of Music 14 (1988), 99-120, <BBS 587>.

³⁴⁶ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 211-36, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>; Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 90-110, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>; and Romantic Poetry: Recent Revisionary Criticism, ed. Karl Kroeber and Gene U. Ruoff (1993), 102-20, <WBHC 2295-96>.

³⁴⁷ Rpt. in Kettle's Literature and Liberation: Selected Essays [of] Arnold Kettle, ed. Graham Martin and W.R. Owens, (Manchester: Manchester University Press; New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988), 51-58, <BBS 534>. This version is cited in the annotation.

On the traditions that explain why Blake identifies Oolon as twelve years old.

Paulson, Ronald. "Blake: The Harlot and the Lamb." Hogarth's Harlot: Sacred Parody in Enlightenment England. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2003. 326-54. <WBHC 2509>

On Blake's depictions of "harlots" in "London" and other works, often in comparison with Hogarth's "A Harlot's Progress."

Persyn, Mary-Kelly. "No Human Form but Sexual': Sensibility, Chastity, and Sacrifice in Blake's Jerusalem." European Romantic Review 10 (1999): 53-83. <WBHC 2513>

"[T]he discourse of sacrifice forms an absolutely necessary subtext to Blake's treatment of gender" (53).

Punter, David. "Blake, Trauma and the Female." New Literary History 15.3 (1984): 475-90. <BBS 610>

A reading of Visions that "discloses a limit in the history of literary discourse about women; and [...] suggests an interpretation of this limit, located in the Freudian concept of trauma" (475).

Punter, David G. "Romanticism and the Self: An Engagement with Blake." The Romantic Unconscious: A Study in Narcissism and Patriarchy. New York: Harvester Wheatsheaf, 1989.³⁴⁸ <BBS 611>

Highlighting gender, patriarchy, and trauma, examines "How sweet I roam'd," "Then she bore pale desire," Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and The Four Zoas.

Rajan, Tilottama. "En-Gendering the System: The Book of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion." The Mind in Creation: Essays in English Literature in Honour of Ross G. Woodman. Ed. J. Douglas Kneale. Montreal and Kingston: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1992. 74-90, 155-57. <BBS 537, WBHC 2570-71>³⁴⁹

On Blake's and the reader's construction and deconstruction of his texts and their systems of gender.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "Blake's 'Mr. Femality': Freemasonry, Espionage, and the Double Sexed." Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 22 (1992), 51-71. <WBHC 2657>

Suggests Mr. Femality in Island can be identified with the transgendered Chevalier D'Éon.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. Why Mrs. Blake Cried: William Blake and the Sexual Basis of Spiritual Vision. London: Random House, 2006. <WBHC 2657-58>

³⁴⁸ Incorporates Punter's "Blake, Trauma and the Female," New Literary History 15.3 (1984), 475-90, <BBS 610>, and "The Sign of Blake," Criticism 26.4 (1984), 313-34, <BBS 611>.

³⁴⁹ BBS and WBHC mistakenly titles the essay, "Un-Gendering" (BBS 537, WBHC 2570), and WBHC comments: "It is 'abridged' from her Supplement of Reading (1990), but none of the essays there has this title or this length" (WBHC 2571).

An important biography of Blake within the context of religious radicalism and esoteric traditions, often highlighting their sexual practices.

Senaha, Eijun. "Autoeroticism and Blake: O Rose Art Thou Sick!?" Sex, Drugs, and Madness in Poetry, from William Blake to Christina Rossetti: Women's Pain, Women's Pleasure. Lewiston NY, Queenston, ON, and Lampeter, WLS: Mellen University Press, 1996. 11-28. <WBHC 2664-65>

Suggests "The Sick Rose" is about masturbation: "the critics have failed to notice that Blake deals with a woman's rejection of mutual love in favor of autoeroticism" (11).

Sha, Richard C. ""Fiery Joys Perverted to Ten Commands": William Blake, the Perverse Turn, and Sexual Liberation." Perverse Romanticism: Aesthetics and Sexuality in Britain, 1750-1832. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 2009. 183-240. <WBHC 2669-70>

"To the extent that perversion in Blake would allow him to harness the liberating capacities of text and of bodies, not to mention the text's multiple bodies, the many twists and turns of perversion could help the reader reclaim and incarnate the divine imagination within the body" (240). For a response to Sha's idea of perversity, see Christopher Z. Hobson's "Normalizing Perversity: Blake and Homosexuality in 2013."

Stevens, Bethan. "'Woes & . . . sighs': Fantasies of Slavery in Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 140-52. <WBHC 1801-03>

Important reading that decenters white, heterosexual interpretations of the poem to suggest: "Much remains to be discovered about the curious moments of interface between queer desire and queer race in Visions" (150).

Stevenson, Warren. "Blake's Myth of Divine Analogy." Romanticism and the Androgynous Sublime. Madison and Teaneck: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press; London: Associated University Press, 1996. 23-48. <WBHC 2707>

The first section of the chapter considers works before 1795, while the remaining three are devoted, respectively, to The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem, the last of which culminates in a "valedictory mythic statement, at once imaginatively androgynous and sublime" (48).

Storch, Margaret. "Blake and Women: Nature's Cruel Holiness." American Imago 38.2 (1981), 221-46.³⁵⁰ <BBS 647>

Considers a wide range of works, concluding: Women are benevolent only if they are under male domination" (246).

Storch, Margaret. Sons and Adversaries: Women in William Blake and D.H. Lawrence. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1990. <BBS 647, WBHC 2711>

Uses a psychoanalytic approach to examine Blake's and Lawrence's conceptions of women and gender. Considers Blake's Songs, Milton, and the illustrations of Virgil and ³⁵⁰ Rpt. in Narcissism and the Text: Studies in Literature and the Psychology of the Self, ed. Lynn Layton and Barbara Ann Shapiro (New York and London: New York University Press, 1986), 97-115.

of Job as well as Lawrence's The White Peacock, The Plumed Serpent, and Lady Chatterley's Lover.

Sturrock, June. "Blake and the Women of the Bible." Literature and Theology 6.1 (Mar. 1992): 23-32. <WBHC 2715>

Focuses on how Blake adopts biblical narratives of women and especially Rahab, to conclude: "Thus in earlier, more politically oriented works, Blake observes the suffering of individual women in his society, while in later works with a more religious orientation as he considers more closely the spiritual origins of social evil" (31).

Sturrock, June. "Maenads, Young Ladies, and the Lovely Daughters of Albion." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G. A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York and London: Garland Press, 1998. 339-49. <WBHC 1950-53>

Compares Vala, Rahab, and Tizrah in Jerusalem with iconography of women who represented the bloody violence of the French Revolution.

Sturrock, June. "Protective Pastoral: Innocence and Female Experience in William Blake's Songs and Christina Rossetti's Goblin Market." Colby Quarterly 30.2 (1994): 98-108. <WBHC 2716>

"Both Goblin Market and Songs of Innocence and of Experience deal with the emergence from childhood or a childlike state" (98).

Swearingen, James E. "The Enigma of Identity in Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Journal of English and Germanic Philology 91.2 (Apr. 1992): 203-15. <BBS 652, WBHC 2733>

"The end of the Visions, like the figure of Oothoon, is both transitional and a dead end. [...] One face looks back in recapitulatory understanding of an old social order, while the other face anticipates ways of thinking that have not arrived" (215).

Tayler, Irene. "The Woman Scaly." Bulletin of the Midwest Modern Language Association 6.1 (1973): 74-87.³⁵¹ <BBS 657>

A groundbreaking examination of Blake's portrayal of women.

Van Kleeck, Justin. "'Tenderness & Love Not Uninspired': Blake's Re-Vision of Sentimentalism in The Four Zoas." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.2 (fall 2005): 60-77. <WBHC 1703>

"[T]he harmful effects that radical writers censured [in sentimental literature] shed light on The Four Zoas because they correspond in significant ways to Blake's portrayal of the fallen world and its sexually divided inhabitants" (63).

Veseley, Susanne Araas. "The Daughters of Eighteenth-Century Science: A Rationalist and Materialist Context for William Blake's Female Figures." Colby Library Quarterly 34.1 (1998): 5-24. <WBHC 2802>³⁵²

"Blake uses female figures in unexpected and often nonstereotypical ways to promote the cause of vision and to limit the authority of materialist philosophy" (7).

³⁵¹ Rpt. in Blake's Poetry and Designs, 1st ed. (1980), 539-53, <BBS 149-50, WBHC 472-74>.

³⁵² WBHC mistakenly gives the starting page as "15."

Vine, Stephen. “‘That Mild Beam’: Enlightenment and Enslavement in William Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” The Discourse of Slavery: Aphra Behn to Toni Morrison. Ed. Carl Plasa and Betty J. Ring. New York: Routledge, 1994. 40-63. <WBHC 2804>

“[E]xamines the critical energies in Visions’ account of the body, sexuality and slavery, and maps the struggle of the poem to expose structures of sexual and colonial enslavement in the name of a visionary enlightenment” (41).

Volpone, Annalisa. “From out the Portals of My Brain: William Blake’s Partus Mentis and Imaginative Regeneration.” Humanities 13 (2024): 13 pp. <Blake (2025)>

“The article examines various instances of mental impregnation and parturition in William Blake’s works, specifically through Urizen, Los, Enitharmon, and the Nameless Shadowy Female” (2).

Webster, Brenda S. “Blake, Women, and Sexuality.” Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 204-24. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

An important examination of Blake’s view of women that highlights the tension between Blake’s critique of patriarchy and his own sexism.

Welch, Dennis M. “Blake and the Web of Interest and Sensibility.” South Atlantic Review 71.3 (2006): 29-56.³⁵³

“[T]his essay shows that [Blake] understood deeply what the culture of sensibility has done, what its dangers are, and what creative and respected labor by women can do to help counter such danger” (33). Engaged discussion of Blake’s female characters and what they represent about Blake’s attitude towards sensibility.

Welch, Dennis M. “Essence, Gender, Race: William Blake’s Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” Studies in Romanticism 49.2 (spring 2010): 105-31. <WBHC 2844>

“Oothoon possesses both an enduring identity (a personal ‘essence’), inherent and manifest in her imaginative body and its significant valuations, and? consistent with her essence—a self oppressed by, yet capable of resisting and even developing in response to, such constraints as slavery, rape, cultural ideology and social judgment” (109).

Welch, Dennis M. “In the Throes of Eros: Blake’s Early Career.” Mosaic 11.4 (summer 1978): 101-13. <BBS 676>

“Blake’s attitudes toward energy and desire in the first half of his career are extremely ambiguous” (103).

Wilkie, Brian. Blake’s Thel and Oothoon. Victoria, British Columbia: University of Victoria, 1990. <BBS 678, WBHC 2861>

Compares Thel and Oothoon in terms of Blake’s conception of women. Includes black and white reproductions of The Book of Thel copy G and The Visions of the Daughters of Albion copy P.

³⁵³ Not recorded in WBHC or Blake.

Worrall, David. "Thel in Africa: William Blake and the Post-colonial, Post-Swedenborgian Female Subject." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 17-28.³⁵⁴ <WBHC 1857-62>

Argues that "The Book of Thel's structure, which is organized around a narrative of her modes of refusal, can be contextualized with reference to Swedenborgian principles of conjugal love and their proposed west African colony" (17).

³⁵⁴ The same essay is also published in Blake, Nation and Empire, ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall (2006), <WBHC 1866-69>.

Literature and Language (Including Introductions; General Studies; Handwriting; Prosody, Style, and Diction; Myth and Symbolism; and Blake and Writers)

Introductions (See also General Introductions, Handbooks, Glossaries, and Classic Studies)

Beer, John. "Blake's Poetry and Prophecies." The Cambridge History of English Poetry. Ed. Michael O'Neill. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010. 440-55. <WBHC 1592>

An overview that focuses mainly on Poetical Sketches and Songs.

Butler, Marilyn. "Blake in his Time." William Blake. London: Tate, 2000; New York: Harry Abrams, 2000. 15-25. <WBHC 1286-1308>

Surveys Blake's major works (mostly the illuminated books) within the context of their time.

Davies, Peter. William Blake. London: Greenwich Exchange, 1996. Rpt. 2002. <WBHC 1928>

An overview of Blake's life and poetry for students.

Esterhammer, Angela. "Blake and Language." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 63-84. <WBHC 2867-68>

Surveys major treatments of Blake's language from Ostriker's Vision and Verse (1965) to Esterhammer's own Creating States (1994).

Hilton, Nelson. "[Symbols] & the Play of Textuality." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 85-105. <WBHC 2867-68>

Considers Blake's use of textual in light of post-Structuralist readings of Blake, such as Hilton's Literal Imagination (1983), Hilton and Thomas Vogler's collection Unnam'd Forms (1986), Vincent De Luca's Words of Eternity (1991), and Molly Rothenberg's Rethinking Blake's Textuality (1993).

Ferber, Michael. The Poetry of William Blake. New York: Penguin, 1991. <BBS 470, WBHC 2015>

A well-received introduction to Blake's poetry aimed at an undergraduate audience, highlighting mostly the early illuminated books.

General Studies

Adams, Hazard. "Must a Poem be a Perfect Unity?" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.2 (fall 1987), 74-77. <BBS 401>³⁵⁵

"[F]rom the point of view of unity, the sort of literary work of which Blake approved is not unified" (75).

Adams, Hazard. William Blake: A Reading of the Shorter Poems. Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1963. <BB #780, BBS 332, WBHC 1475-76>

³⁵⁵ BBS erroneously gives the issue as "XXXI" (330).

Considers “The Mental Traveller,” “My Spectre around me,” “The Crystal Cabinet,” “The Golden Net,” Auguries of Innocence, two letter poems, “The Everlasting Gospel,” and Songs of Innocence and of Experience.

There is also a useful “Bibliographical Appendix,” which lists significant extant commentary on the shorter poems by author and page number.

Adlard, John. The Sports of Cruelty: Fairies, Folk-Songs, Charms and Other Country Matters in the Work of William Blake. London: Cecil and Amelia Woolf, 1972. <BB #A792, WBHC 1477>

Traces Blake’s sources in traditional English folklore.

Ando, Kiyoshi. “Blake no meishi saidoku: ‘sanka Jerusalem,’ ‘shinsei naru sugata,’ ‘Muku no yochō,’ ‘Mary’ (Rereading Blake’s Celebrated Poems: ‘Jerusalem: Hymn,’ ‘The Divine Image,’ ‘Auguries of Innocence,’ and ‘Mary’).” Kanto Gakuin Daigaku Jimbun Gakkai Kiyo (Bulletin of the Society of Humanities, Kanto Gakuin University) 137 (2017): 13-43. In Japanese. 15 pls. <Blake (2019)>

Ansari, A. A. William Blake’s Minor Prophecies. Lewiston-Queenston-Lampeter: Edwin Mellen Press, 2001. <WBHC 1557>

A reading of the works of the early 1790s, including “The Mental Traveller.”

Beer, John. Blake’s Humanism. Manchester and New York: Manchester University Press, 1968. <BB #1143>

An overview of Blake’s poetry and thought, with many references to Milton and Wordsworth.

Beer, John. “Influence and Independence in Blake.” Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 164-95. <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

Considers the difficulties of pinpointing the influences on Blake, before laying out several tenable sources for many different works, both visual and poetic.

Behrendt, Stephen C. “something in My Eye’: Irritants in Blake’s Illuminated Texts.” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steven Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. 78-95. <WBHC 2812-13>

On reading Blake’s “illuminated pages” (78) and how “Blake characteristically invokes and manipulates our expectations about determinacy (of word, of image, of ‘meaning’) to force us to recognize and appreciate the multiplicity of potential signification that resides in seemingly every word, every line, every suggestion” (90).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake as Inebriate.” Notes and Queries 66.2 (Jun. 2019): 243-51. <Blake (2020)>

On Blake’s depictions of drunkenness and his own drinking.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “William Blake and the Sports of Innocence.” Notes and Queries 64.1 (2017): 47-52. <Blake (2018)>

On Blake’s depiction of games and sports of children in his early works.

Bloom, Harold. Blake's Apocalypse: A Study in Poetic Argument. New York: Anchor Books, 1963. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1970. <BB #1227, BBS 414, WBHC 1761-62>

A one-time very influential study of Blake's poetic career. The book's argument shaped Bloom's commentary to David V. Erdman's edition The Complete Poetry and Prose of William (1965, 1982, 1988).

Bloom, Harold. "William Blake." The Visionary Company: A Reading of English Romantic Poetry. New York: Doubleday, 1961. 1-119. Rev. ed. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1971. 7-123. <BB #1232, BBS 415-16, WBHC 1765>

A reading of the poetry from Poetical Sketches to Jerusalem, including "The Crystal Cabinet" and "The Mental Traveller."

Chandler, Eric V. "The Anxiety of Production: Blake's Shift from Collective Hope to Writing Self." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 53-79. <WBHC 1950-53>

Blake "attempted to find a verbal cohesiveness for revolutionary collectivity" (74).

Childers, Joseph. "Opposing the Paradigm: The Example of Blake." Dalhousie Review 66 (1986): 201-10. <WBHC 1849>

"An investigation of that very tension" between Blake's "own way of seeing the world and his society's" "should elucidate Blake's relation to the discursive practices of his time, and thereby assist us in a rethinking of the ways epistemic, and thus literary, change takes place" (303).

Clark, Steve, and David Worrall, ed. Historicizing Blake. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, and New York: St. Martins' Press, 1994. <WBHC 1869-71>

An important collection that argues for historically and materially grounded readings of Blake. Clark and Worrall edited two subsequent collections on the same themes, Blake in the Nineties (1999) and Blake, Nation and Empire (2006). See Esterhammer's "'Historicizing Blake' at Strawberry Hill" for a description of the conference that spurred the collection.

Connolly, Tristanne J. William Blake and the Body. Hounds mills and New York: Palgrave, 2002.³⁵⁶ <WBHC 1881-82>

An influential book on Blake's various notions of and representations of the body, addressing the influence of anatomical art, physical bodies and birth (including miscarriages and abortions), parent and child relationships, and resurrected bodies. She suggests that Catherine Blake was listed as a patient on 26 August 1796 at the Lambeth lying-in hospital and posits it as likely that Catherine experienced many miscarriages.

³⁵⁶ Incorporates Connolly's "Miscarriage Imagery in Blake," Romanticism 7.2 (2001), 145-62, not recorded in WBHC; "William Blake and the Spectre of Anatomy," Spectres of Romanticism: The Influence and Anxiety of the British Romantics, ed. Sarah Ruston with assistance by Lidia Garbin. (Lewiston, NY, Queenston, ON, Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen University Press, 1999), 19-42, <WBHC 1882>.

Cooper, Andrew M. “Blake and Madness: The World Turned Inside Out.” ELH 57.3 (1990): 585-642. <BBS 442>

A useful consideration of Blake’s relationship to discourses of madness and his depictions of it in his work.

Cooper, Andrew M. William Blake and the Productions of Time. Farnham: Ashgate, 2013.³⁵⁷ <WBHC 1886>

Rejecting New Historicist approaches to Blake, reads the illuminated books for their different figurations of time and systems, with references to eighteenth-century neurology and physiology.

Cox, Stephen. Love and Logic: The Evolution of Blake’s Thought. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1992. <BBS 444, WBHC 1892-93>

Reads the illuminated books from Songs to Jerusalem as a “simultaneous evolution of a theory of love and a practice of logic” (1).

Curran, Stuart. Poetic Form and British Romanticism. New York and Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1986. 111-17, 175-79. <BBS 446>

Especially good on Blake’s use of pastoral in Poetical Sketches and Songs and on the influence of the Miltonic epic.

Damon, S. Foster. William Blake: His Philosophy and Symbols. 1924. Gloucester, Mass.: Peter Smith, 1958. 1969. <BB #1455, BBS 447, WBHC 1917-18>

A profoundly influential study that laid the foundation for his Blake Dictionary. In Bentley’s words, it “is the first thoroughly scholarly book about Blake, and as such it is of great importance” (BB #1455).

De Luca, Vincent Arthur. “A Wall of Words: The Sublime As Text.” Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 218-41.³⁵⁸ <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

“I want to pursue this notion of a Blakean ‘wall of words’ [i.e., pages of the illuminated books covered in writing] in the context of the Romantic sublime, in which natural walls, steep and lofty cliffs, have a preeminent place” (218).

³⁵⁷ Incorporates Cooper’s “Freedom from Blake's Book of Urizen,” Studies in Romanticism 48.2 (2009), 187-218, <WBHC 1883, 1885>, and Cooper and Michael Simpson’s “The High-Tech Luddite of Lambeth: Blake's Eternal Hacking,” Wordsworth Circle 30 (1999), 125-31, <WBHC 1886>. Note that WBHC 1884-85 misalphabetizes Copeland to Cormack after the Coopers before starting again with Coman, Connolly, and Cooper.

³⁵⁸ First distributed in the papers prepared for the Blake & Criticism conference at Santa Cruz, May 20-22, 1982, <BBS 375-76>. Incorporated into his Words of Eternity (1991), <BBS 450, WBHC 1932-34>. Excerpted in Blake's Poetry and Designs, 2nd ed., ed. Mary Lynn Johnson and John E. Grant (2007), 591-98, <BBS 149-50, WBHC 472-74>.

Erdman, David V. Blake: Prophet Against Empire. A Poet's Interpretation of the History of His Own Times. 1954. 3rd ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977.³⁵⁹ <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>

A key study that examines Blake within his historical context. Erdman's approach was so influential that historicist readings of Blake are sometimes categorized as "The School of Erdman."

The book and Erdman's legacy in historical scholarship on Blake is considered in the special issue of Studies in Romanticism, ed. Morris Eaves (1982), dedicated to Erdman; in Steven Clark and David Worrall's introduction to their Historicizing Blake (1994); and in Eric K.W. Yu's "Blake as Prophet Against Empire: Erdman's Interpretive Legacy Reexamined," The International Blake Conference: "Blake in the Orient" Conference Programme (2003).

Erdman, David V. "Blake: The Historical Approach." English Institute Essays 1950. Ed. Alan S. Downter. New York: Columbia University Press, 1951. 197-223. <BB #1645>

On Blake's use of historical allegory.

Erdman, David V., and John E. Grant, ed. Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2017. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

An influential collection of essays.

Erdman, David V. "William Blake's Exactness in Dates." Philological Quarterly 28 (1949): 465-70. <BB #1578>

A still important article on how Blake employed dates.

Essick, Robert N., and Donald Pearce, ed. Blake in His Time. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Important collection of essays that highlights both Blake's designs and his relationship to his time.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake and the Language of Adam. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1989. <BBS 465, WBHC 1999-2000>

A study of Blake's conception of language with an analysis of the paintings, Adam Naming the Beasts and Eve Naming the Birds, and most of the poetry. Includes a discussion of the Kabbalah and Hebrew, Blake's notion of the linguistic sign, his notion of the Fall, and Blake and other Romantic-era writers on language.

Esterhamer, Angela. Creating States: Studies in the Performative Language of John Milton and William Blake. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1994. <WBHC 2006-07>

³⁵⁹ Incorporates Erdman's "Blake's Vision of Slavery," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3/4 (1952), 242-52, <BB #1569>.

On Milton's and Blake's use of performative language, with the Blake section highlighting the Songs, Marriage, Urizen, and Jerusalem.

Esterhammer, Angela. "Locationary Acts: Blake's Jerusalem and Hölderlin's Patmos." Placing and Displacing Romanticism. Ed. Peter Kitson. Aldershot, Hampshire: Scolar Press, 2001. 178-90. <WBHC 2387, Blake (2002, 2003)>³⁶⁰

The two poems "unite a focus on place with a distinctive illocutionary or performative dimension of language" (178).

Fisher, Peter F. "Blake's Attack on the Classical Tradition." Philological Quarterly 40 (1961): 1-18. <BB #1609>

"Chiefly on Blake's attacks on the abuses of the classical tradition" (BB #1609).

Fisher, Peter F. The Valley of Vision: Blake as Prophet and Revolutionary. Ed. Northrop Frye. Studies and Texts 9. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1961. Toronto, 1971.³⁶¹ <BB #1611, WBHC 2021>

Though dated, a still useful explication of Blake's thought and his historic and intellectual contexts. Discussions of Greek philosophy; the history of the Christian Church; Newton, Locke, and Berkeley; Swedenborg; and the Methodists, lead to Fisher's analysis of the three epics.

Frosch, Thomas R., The Awakening of Albion: The Renovation of the Body in the Poetry of William Blake. <BB #A1637, BBS 476, WBHC 2033-35>

"A study of 'the conviction that the transformation of man needed to include what can be described as a resurrection of his body through a remaking of its sensory organization'" (BB #A1637). Focused on the later epics.

Frye, Northrop. Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1947. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969. Northrop Frye's Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Ed. Nicholas Halmi. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2004. Vol. 14 of the Collected Works of Northrop Frye.³⁶² <BB #1646, BBS 478, WBHC 2037-39>

A profoundly influential study, which dominated twentieth-century Blake scholarship. Frye considered Blake primarily as a poet and artist (rather than a mystic), and his work led to Blake's canonization as a Romantic poet as well as shaping Frye's own Archetypal Criticism. Frye's positioning of Blake in terms of British Empiricism (primarily John ³⁶⁰ Blake (2003) recognized that Blake (2002) had misattributed the essay to Thomas McFarland, but the error remains in WBHC.

³⁶¹ Frye's "Preface," rpt. in Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angelica Esterhammer (2005), 313-15, <WBHC 2040-43>.

³⁶² Chapter 2, "The Rising God," 30-54, is rpt. as "The Religious Vision of William Blake," in Toward a New Christianity: Readings in the Death of God Theology, ed. Thomas J. J. Altizer (1967), 19-42; Chapter 1, "The Case Against Locke," 14-29, is rpt. as "Blake's Case Against Locke," in English Literature and British Philosophy: A Collection of Essays, ed. S.P. Rosenbaum (1971), 119-35, <BB #973>; Chapters 5 and 12, 189-91, 418-28, are excerpted in Modern Literary Criticism, ed. Lawrence I Lipking and A. Walton Litz (1972), 189-91 and 191-97; excerpts are rpt. in William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 23-35, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>.

Locke and George Berkeley) remains key, and his reading of the prophetic works showed the profundity of what previous generations had dismissed as evidence of Blake's madness.³⁶³

Fuller, David. Blake's Heroic Argument. London: Croom Helm, 1988. Abingdon: Routledge, 2016. <BBS 480, WBHC 2045-46, Blake (2017)>

A solid introduction to Blake's works, with attention to how his thought changed. The Four Zoas and Jerusalem receive the most attention, and there is an eye on Milton's influence.

Gardner, Stanley. Infinity on the Anvil: A Critical Study of William Blake's Poetry. Oxford: Blackwell, 1954. 1965.³⁶⁴ <BB #1664, WBHC 2053-54>

"In this slim (152 pp.) volume Gardner effectively analyses the dramatic conflicts in Blake's early poetry (to 1794), but finds his later Prophecies 'barren of poetry'" (BB #1664).

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's 'Double Dark Vision of Torment' Unfolded: Innocence to Jerusalem." South Atlantic Quarterly 105 (1996): 700-28. <WBHC 2081>

On Blake's use of Milton.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Most Holy Forms of Thought: Some Observations on Blake and Language." ELH 41.4 (1974): 555-77.³⁶⁵ <BBS 487>.

On Blake's fallen notion of language and his struggle "toward a transcendent or translucent syntax, whose formulations invite us to imaginatively perceive their own self-destructiveness" (563).

Gleckner, Robert F. The Piper and the Bard. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1959. <BB #1702, BBS 487, WBHC 2083>

A venerable study of The Songs of Innocence and of Experience, Tiriel, The Book of Thel, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, and The Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Green, Matthew J. A. ""He Who has Suffered You to Impose on Him": Blake, Derrida and the Question of Theory." Literary Compass 4.1 (2007): 150-71. <WBHC 2103>

"The paper argues in favour of a historically sensitive consideration of Blake as a theorist, contextualising his work not only within a larger history of ideas, but also within its social and political context. The final section of the article specifically examines the interconnectedness of key aspects of the works of Blake and Derrida" (abstract).

³⁶³ See Classic Studies the complete annotation.

³⁶⁴ Pp. 123-30 are rpt. in William Blake: The Tyger, ed. Winston Weather (1969), 26-33, <BB #2937>.

³⁶⁵ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 91-117, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>, and in ELH Essays for Earl R. Wasserman, ed. Ronald Paulson and Arnold Stein (1976), 262-84. The annotation cites the original publication.

Green, Matthew J. A. Visionary Materialism in the Early Works of William Blake: The Intersection of Enthusiasm and Empiricism. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. <WBHC 2103-04>

A reading of the early works through the idea of “visionary materialism.” It discusses Blake’s relationship to Locke, Newton, and Bacon via Reynolds; the Songs (particularly, “The Human Abstract” and “The Divine Image”); All Religions are One; Moravians, antinomians, Swedenborgians, and other enthusiasts; Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and Lavater.

Haggarty, Sarah. Blake's Gifts: Poetry and the Politics of Exchange. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010. <WBHC 2112-13>

An important and original study on how Blake’s poetry and art functioned within his social and local commercial networks and how he conceived of and depicted value and exchange. Useful for understanding Blake and Hayley’s relationship.

Hagstrum, Jean H. “The Wrath of the Lamb: A Study of William Blake’s Conversions.” From Sensibility to Romanticism: Essays Presented to Frederick A. Pottle. Ed. Frederick W. Hilles and Harold Bloom. New York: Oxford University Press, 1965. 311-30. <BB #1773>

Analyzes Blake’s early and late depictions of Christ in his poetry (chiefly the Songs and the later epics) to understand Blake’s sense of Christianity.

Hilton, Nelson. “Blakean Zen.” Studies in Romanticism 24 (1985): 183-200. <BBS 507>

On the play of different levels of meaning chiefly in The Book of Urizen.

Hilton, Nelson. ed. Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984. Hamden: Anchor Books, 1986. <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>

Reprints of important essays, with slight revision in some cases, and an original preface laying out the rationale for selecting these essays.

Hirst, Desiree. Hidden Riches: Traditional Symbolism from the Renaissance to Blake. London: Eyre and Spottiswoode, 1964. <BB #1855, WBHC 2152>

A still useful study of Blake’s more esoteric sources, with chapters on Jacob Boehme, the Cambridge Platonist, William Law, the Swedenborgian Movement, and Free Masons. Her “List of Leading Characters” (xiii-xv) is a good starting point for the uninitiated.

Howard, John. Infernal Poetics: Poetic Structures in Blake's Lambeth Prophecies. Rutherford: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 1984. <BBS 516, WBHC 2169>

A study of the Lambeth Prophecies (Marriage through The Book of Los) and The Four Zoas, with some references to the Songs, Poetical Sketches, and the illuminated tractates.

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. “Blood in Blake’s Poetry of Gender Struggle.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 47-63. <WBHC 1803-04>

“I will explore the ways in which Blake’s blood becomes sexualized and gains multiple meaning, sometimes conflicting, in gender struggle scenes in The Book of Urizen, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem,” and “I draw attention to the fact that a similar kind of blood appears in examples of Japanese film and literature [by Yukio Mishima and Hayao Miyazaki]” (47).

Johnston, Kenneth R. “Blake’s Cities: Romantic Forms of Urban Renewal.” Blake’s Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2017. 413-42. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Examines how cities are represented in Blake’s works.

Jones, John H. Blake on Language, Power, and Self-Annihilation. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010.³⁶⁶ <WBHC 2213>

On Blake’s concepts of otherness and self-annihilation from the Songs to Jerusalem, with many references to Bakhtin and the dialogic: “Throughout this search for the dialogic ideal, Blake employs multi-voiced genres—including the lyric collection, the Menippean satire, and an epic form that places renewed emphasis on the invocation as a moment of dialogic interaction and inspiration—to annihilate any tendency toward monologic authorial Selfhood, and to engage the reader’s participation in the creation of the poem’s meaning” (214).

Kawasaki, Noriko. “Form and Worm in William Blake.” Centre and Circumference: Essays in English Romanticism. Association of English Romanticism in Japan. Ed. Kenkichi Kamijima. Tokyo: Kirihara Shoten, 1995. 96-113. <WBHC 2233-34>

““The co-relation of these two terms gives us some crucial clues by which to clarify the seeming ambiguity of ‘Form’ and even to clarify Blake’s symbolic world as a whole’ (96)” (WBHC 2234).

Keynes, Geoffrey. Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

A collection of some of Keynes’s most important essays on Blake, all of which were published elsewhere but were revised for both editions of the collection. The first edition (1949) had 17 essays, and the second edition (1971) had 29 (see BB #2010).

Lansverk, Marvin D. L. The Wisdom of Many, The Vision of One: The Proverbs of William Blake. New York: Peter Lang, 1994. <WBHC 2309-10>

An examination of Blake’s use of proverbs that, first, considers Blake in relationship to the use of proverbs in the Bible, Bunyan, Swedenborg, and Milton, and secondly, examines the function of proverbs in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Visions of the Daughters of Albion, The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem.

³⁶⁶ Incorporates Jones’s “Self-Annihilation and Dialogue in Blake’s Creative Process: Urizen, Milton, Jerusalem,” Modern Language Studies 24.2 (1994), 3-10, <WBHC 2214>, and “[Printed Performances and Reading The Book\[s\] of Urizen: Blake’s Bookmaking Process and the Transformation of Late Eighteenth-Century Print Culture](#),” Colby Quarterly 35.2 (1999), 73-89<WBHC 2214>.

Larrissy, Edward. William Blake. Editor's Preface by Terry Eagleton. Rereading Literature. Oxford: Blackwell, 1985.³⁶⁷ <BBS 544-45, WBHC 2312-13>

An overview of the poetry, focused on the illuminated books between 1789 and 1795. Three of the eight chapters are on the Songs, and the last chapters considers the works between Ahania and Jerusalem.

Lowery, Margaret. Windows of the Morning. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1940. <BB #2149, WBHC 2347>

Despite its age, a key study of Poetical Sketches and of Blake's early literary influences.

Lundeen, Kathleen. Knight of the Living Dead: William Blake and the Problem of Ontology. Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2000. ³⁶⁸ <WBHC 2352-53>

Reads the poetry between Songs and Jerusalem, and sees the relationship between text and design as analogous to that of body and spirit: "I will contend that Blake's challenge to the presumed ontological differences between text and design is linked to his challenge to the whole matter/spirit dualism upon which Western culture is based" (17).

Lussier, Mark S. "Eternal Dictates: The 'Other' of Blakean Inspiration." 1650-1850: Ideas, Aesthetics, and Inquiries in the Early Modern Era 2 (1997): 61-74. <WBHC 2355>

On Blake's willingness to take "dictation from those resurrected in the infinite and eternal regions of the imagination by willfully placing himself under erasure to allow an 'other' to speak" (63). In Lussier's argument, this practice is shaped by Blake's experience of his brother Robert's death, and Lussier examines Blake's moments of taking dictation and self-erasure across his poetry.

Makdisi, Saree. "William Blake, Charles Lamb, and Urban Antimodernity." SEL: Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 56.4 (2016): 737-56. <Blake (2017)>

Considers Blake and Lamb's relationship to mapping and representing urban spaces.

Mann, Paul. "Apocalypse and Recuperation: Blake and the Maw of Commerce." ELH 52.1 (1985): 1-32. <BBS 558-59>

Important essay on Blake's relationship to commodity culture and the aesthetics of production: "I have attempted to show that if Blake's book can be opened it cannot be opened without ceasing to be Blake's, without becoming an object precluded by the production-aesthetic" (27).

³⁶⁷ Incorporates Larrissy's "Blake and Ideology," red letters: Communist Party Literature Journal 8 (1978), 63-66, <BBS 544>, and "A Description of Blake: Ideology, Form, Influence." 1789: Reading, Writing, Revolution: Proceedings of the Essex Conference on the Sociology of Literature July 1981, (1982), 101-09, <BBS 544>.

³⁶⁸ Incorporates Lundeen's "Urizen's Quaking World," Colby Library Quarterly 25.1 (1989), 12-17, <BBS 555, WBHC 2353>, and "Words on Wings: Blake's Textual Spiritualism," Word and Image 10 (1994), 343-65, <WBHC 2353>.

McGann, Jerome. "The Failures of Romanticism." Romanticism, History, and The Possibilities of Genre: Re-forming Literature 1789-1837. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Julia M. Wright. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998. 270-87. <WBHC 2388>

Considers moments of ultimate failure in Blake and other Romantics.

McGann, Jerome J. Social Values and Poetic Acts: The Historical Judgment of Literary Work. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1988.³⁶⁹ <BBS 568>

An important study of Blake and other Romantics and their engagement with the social and material.

McGann, Jerome J. "William Blake Illuminates the Truth." Towards a Literature of Knowledge. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1989. 9-37.³⁷⁰ <BBS 569, WBHC 2388>

Focusing on "To the Public" in Jerusalem (pl. 3), reads the damage to the plate in terms of Blake's concept of imagination.

McLane, Maureen. "Ballads and Bards: British Romantic Orality." Modern Philology 98 (2001): 423-43.

Considers written representations of bardic orality in Romantic writers, with a section on "Introduction" of Songs and its related plates.

Mellor, Anne. Blake's Human Form Divine. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1974. Berkeley: University of California Press, 2022. UC Press's Voices Revived. <BB #A2211, WBHC 2397-98, Blake (2023)>

A classic study that largely considers Blake's poetry from Songs of Innocence to Jerusalem but also devotes two chapters to Blake's art.

Michael, Jennifer Davis. Blake and the City. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2006.³⁷¹ <WBHC 2403-04>

Focusing on the Songs and the epics, Michael examines Blake's "urban visions" (23). "The humanity of Blake's city does not mean that the city exists only in the human mind; on the contrary, [...] the city's form and function mirror those of the human body" (21).

Moskal, Jeanne. Blake, Ethics and Forgiveness. Tuscaloosa and London: University of Alabama Press, 1994.³⁷² <WBHC 2431-33

³⁶⁹ Incorporates McGann's "The Idea of an Indeterminate Text: Blake's Bible of Hell and Dr. Alexander Geddes," Studies in Romanticism 25.3 (1986), 303-24, <BBS 568>.

³⁷⁰ Incorporates McGann's "William Blake Illuminates the Truth," Critical Studies 1.1 (1989), 43-60, not recorded in BBS.

³⁷¹ Incorporates Michael's "The Corporeal City in Blake's Milton and Jerusalem," Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 29 (2000), 105-22, <WBHC 2404>. [Vol. 23 mistakenly given in WBHC.]

³⁷² Incorporates Moskal's "Forgiveness, Love and Pride in Blake's The Everlasting Gospel," Religion and Literature 20.2 (1988), 19-39, <BBS 579, WBHC 2433>; "The Problem of Forgiveness in Blake's Annotations to Lavater," Studies in Philology 86.2 (1989), 65-86, <BBS 580, WBHC 2433>; "Friendship and Forgiveness in Blake's Illustrations to Job," South Atlantic Review 55.2 (1990), 15-31, <BBS 580, WBHC 2433>; and "Blake, Dante, and 'Whatever Book is for Vengeance,'" Philological Quarterly 70 (1991), 310-38, <BBS 579, WBHC 2430>.

On the evolution Blake's concept of forgiveness, highlighting the annotations to Lavater, The Everlasting Gospel, Illustrations of the Book of Job, and the illustrations to Dante.

Nurmi, Martin K. "Negative Sources in Blake." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 303-18. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

An important early essay on how Blake utilized the thought and systems of writers to which he was hostile (e.g., Isaac Newton, René Descartes, and Thomas Burnet).

Otto, Peter. Constructive Vision and Visionary Deconstruction: Los, Eternity, and the Productions of Time in the Later Poetry of William Blake. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1991. <BBS 596, WBHC 2488-90>³⁷³

Focuses primarily on Milton and Jerusalem, claiming: "I will therefore be arguing against the assumption held by the vast majority of Blake critics that Blake's apocalypse is a matter of perception and not a question of being" (22).

Paley, Morton D. The Continuing City: William Blake's Jerusalem. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1983.³⁷⁴ <BBS 598, WBHC 2495-97>

A key study of the poem and Blake's later thought in general.

Paley, Morton D. Energy and the Imagination: A Study in the Development of Blake's Thought. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1970.³⁷⁵ <BB #2347, WBHC 2497-98>

An essential study of Blake's poetry between the Songs and Jerusalem; eminently readable.

Paley, Morton D. The Traveller in the Evening: The Last Words of William Blake. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003.³⁷⁶ <WBHC 2499-2501>

The best study of the often overlooked, visual and literary works of Blake's last decade. These include the illustrations to Virgil, Laocoön, the illustrations to the Dante, and his late works related to the Bible (The Everlasting Gospel, The Ghost of Abel, Illustrations of the Book of Job, the Genesis manuscript, the Enoch designs, and his Annotations to Thornton's translation of the Lord's Prayer), and the Visionary Heads.

Paley, Morton D. William Blake. Oxford: Phaidon Press, 1978. <BBS 182>

An overview of Blake and career, highlighting the art as much as the poetry.

³⁷³ Incorporates Otto's "Visionary Deconstruction: The Bard's Song in Blake's Milton," Philological Quarterly 66.2 (1987), 207-30, <BBS 597>.

³⁷⁴ "Spectre and Emanation," is rpt. in Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 150-63, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>.

³⁷⁵ Incorporates Paley's "The Female Babe and 'The Mental Traveller,'" Studies in Romanticism 1.2 (1962), 97-104, <BB #2348>; "Method and Meaning in Blake's Book of Ahania," Bulletin of the New York Public Library 70 (1966), 27-33, <BB #2649>; "The Tygers of Wrath," PMLA 81.7 (1966), 540-51, <BB #2350>.

³⁷⁶ Incorporates Paley's "In & His Two Sons Satan & Adam." Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 201-35, and "William Blake and Dr. Thornton's 'Tory Translation' of the Lord's Prayer," Prophetic Character, ed. Alexander S. Gourlay (2002), 263-86, <WBHC 2095-98>.

Paley, Morton D., and Michael Phillips, ed. William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

A very influential set of essays.

Percival, Milton. William Blake's Circle of Destiny. New York: Columbia University Press, 1938. 1964. New York: Octagon Books, 1970. <BB #2379, WBHC 2511-12>

A classic study of Blake's myth, which highlights esoteric and Kabbalistic elements.

Pinto, Vivian de Sola, ed. The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. London: Gollancz, 1957. <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

A still relevant collection.

Phillips, Michael, ed. Interpreting Blake. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

An important collection of original essays based on papers presented at the May 1974 Blake Symposium at the University of Edinburg.

Punter, David. “Blake: Creative and Uncreative Labor.” Studies in Romanticism 16.4 (1977): 535-61.³⁷⁷ <BBS 610>

On “Blake’s depiction of labour, its economic forms and its social effects” (536).

Punter, David. “Blake, Marxism, and Dialectic.” Literature & History 6 (1977): 219-42.³⁷⁸ <BBS 610>

A comparison of the figures that attempts to recognize their differences.

Punter, David. “Blake and the Shapes of London.” Criticism 23.1 (1981): 1-23. <BBS 610>

Aims “to investigate some of the relations between Blake and the town of London,” particularly in the later poems (1).

Raine, Kathleen. Blake and the New Age. London, Boston, Sydney: G. Allen & Unwin, 1979. Hoboken: Taylor and Francis, 2011. <BBS 612-13, WBHC 2559-60>

A collection of essays by Raine, many of which appeared earlier.

Raine, Kathleen. Blake and Tradition. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1968. London: Routledge, 2002.³⁷⁹ (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>

³⁷⁷ Developed in Punter’s “Blake, Marxism and Dialectic,” Literature & History 6 (1977), 219-42, <BBS 610>.

³⁷⁸ The essay builds on the argument of Punter’s “Blake: Creative and Uncreative Labour,” Studies in Romanticism 16.4 (1977), 535-61, <BBS 610>.

³⁷⁹ Incorporates Raine’s “Blake’s ‘Cupid and Psyche’,” Listener 58 (1957), 832-35, <BB #2481>; “Blake’s Debt to Antiquity,” Sewanee Review 75 (1963), 352-450, <BB #2482>; “The Sea of Time and Space,” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 20.3/4 (1957), 318-37, <BB #2486>; “Some Sources of Tiriel,” Huntington Library Quarterly 21.1 (1957), 1-36, <BB #2487>; and “Who Made the Tyger?” Encounter 2.9 (Jun. 1954), 43-50, <BB #2490>.

A once very influential study of Blake's thought, literature, and art, largely in relationship to Platonism, Hermeticism, and Gnosticism. The book collects much of Raine's work on Blake delivered or published elsewhere in the 1950 and 1960s.

The Routledge edition of 2002 is a facsimile (WBHC 2560). A shorter version of the book was published as Blake and Antiquity (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977; London and New York: Routledge, 2002. Paperback. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2023.) (WBHC 2563).

Raine, Kathleen. Golgonooza, City of Imagination: Last Studies in William Blake. Hudson: Lindisfarne Press, 1991. <BBS 614, WBHC 2564-66>

A collection of Raine's essays on Blake, most of which were originally published elsewhere between 1981 and 1990, with a new introduction.

Rajan, Tilottama. “Blake's Body without Organs: The Autogenesis of the System in the Lambeth Books.” European Romantic Review 26.3 (2015): 357-66. <WBHC 2570>

“[E]xplores Urizen's body as a figure for Blake's own corpus and the disfiguration of its idealistic ambitions” (abstract).

Rajan, Tilottama. “Canon and Heresy: Blake's Intertextuality.” The Supplement of Reading: Figures of Understanding in Romantic Theory and Practice. Ithaca and London, 1990. 197-274. <BBS 616-17>

This section on Blake has three chapters, which, respectively, theorizes Blake's idea of a canon, considers the relationship of texts to culture, and examines the epics (and particularly Jerusalem) for how they challenge ideas of structure.

Rawlinson, Nick. William Blake's Comic Vision. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003. <WBHC 2572-73>

A key examination of Blake's use of the comic throughout his career, including, but going well beyond, An Island in the Moon.

Reilly, Susan P. “Blake's Poetics of Sound in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Romanticism On the Net 16 (Nov. 1999): 14 pars. <WBHC 2577>

“What I want to argue is that Blake's epithalamic prophecy is a monologic bricolage which contains poetic subgenera integral to his privileging of oral media—parable, prophecy, and proverb” (par. 9).

Richey, William. Blake's Altering Aesthetic. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1996.³⁸⁰ <WBHC 2583-84>

An important study of the changes in Blake's mythic systems and aesthetic beliefs in the poetry between Songs and Jerusalem.

³⁸⁰ Incorporates Richey's “The Neoclassical Gothicism of Blake's Early Poetry and Art,” Poetica 39-40 (1994), 73-91, <WBHC 2584>, and “The French Revolution: Blake's Epic Dialogue with Edmund Burke,” ELH 59 (1992), 817-37, <WBHC 2584>.

Rix, Robert. William Blake and the Cultures of Radical Christianity. Hampshire: Ashgate, 2007. <WBHC 2593-94>

A very useful study for understanding Blake's relationship to both Enlightenment-grounded radicals and Swedenborgians, especially in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Rix, Robert W. "William Blake and the Prophetic Marketplace." Romantic Generations: Text, Authority and Posterity in British Romanticism. Ed. Lena Østermark-Johansen. Copenhagen: Museum Tusculanum Press, University of Copenhagen, 2003. 47-61. <WBHC 2594>

"About 'what Blake believed his art could tell his contemporaries' (47)" (WBHC 2594).

Rosenfeld, Alvin H., ed. William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

An important set of essays.

Rotenberg, Bettina. "Blake's Contraries: A Poetics of Visionary Perception." European Romantic Review 2.1 (1991): 81-98. <BBS 628>

"William Blake constructs a mythology that embodies the dynamics of visionary perception with poetry, a visionary poetry by nature involved in an antagonism with itself" (81).

Rothenberg, Molly Anne. Rethinking Blake's Textuality. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1993. <WBHC 2613-14>³⁸¹

The first part considers Blake's problematizing of authority, with references to Immanuel Kant and Blake's knowledge of Higher Criticism, while the second part focuses on Jerusalem "within a philosophical context informed by skepticism, associationism, and Kant's transcendentalism" (6).

Saklofske, Jon. "Between History and Hope: The Urban Centre of William Blake and William Wordsworth." City Limits: Perspectives on the Historical European City. Ed. Glenn Clark, Judith Owens, and Greg T. Smith. Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 2010. 300-24. <WBHC 2361>

Explores the "contrasts and connections between the Londons of Blake and Wordsworth" (321). Largely on Jerusalem rather than "London."

Shaviro, Steven. "Striving with Systems': Blake and the Politics of Difference." boundary 2 10.3 (spring 1982): 229-50.³⁸² <BBS 636-37>

"In Blake's poetry, it is not subversion by means of irony, but rather precisely the contradiction between an ironic and self-limiting rhetorical and dramatic stance, on the one hand, and the conceptual, totalizing thrust of a mythopoeic system, on the other, which most needs to be explored" (231). Reads "The Tyger."

³⁸¹ Incorporates Rothenberg's "The Provisional Vision of Blake's Jerusalem," Word and Image 3.4 (1987), 305-11, <BBS 628>; "Jerusalem's 'Forgotten Remembrances': A Blakean Analytic of Narrativity and Ideology," Genre 23 (1990), 205-26, <BBS 628>; and "Blake Reads 'The Bard': Contextual Displacement and Conditions of Readability in Jerusalem," Studies in English Literature, 1500-1900 27.3 (1987), 489-502, <BBS 628>.

³⁸² Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1986, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 271-99, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>, and excerpted in Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 164-74, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>.

Simpson, David. Irony and Authority in Romantic Poetry. Totowa, NJ: Rowman and Littlefield, 1979. <BBS 639>

Blake is discussed throughout, mostly Songs and later epics.

Simpson, David. "Reading Blake and Derrida: Our Caesars Neither Praised Nor Buried." Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. 11-25. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

Compares Blake and Derrida, speculating what the comparison means for the future of Blake studies.

Smith, K.E. An Analysis of William Blake's Early Writings and Designs to 1790, Including Songs of Innocence. Lewiston, NY; Queenston, ON; and Lampeter, Wales: Edwin Mellen Press, 1999. <WBHC 2687-88>

Reads Blake's early artistic and literary works as culminating in Songs of Innocence.

Smith, Mark Trevor. "All Nature Is But Art": The Coincidence of Opposites in English Romantic Literature. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 1993. <WBHC 2688-89>

Considers "The Mental Traveller" and Jerusalem.

Spector, Sheila A. The Evolution of Blake's Myth. New York: Routledge, 2020. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

A major reassertion of Blake's place in the esoteric tradition, which Spector sees as central to the development of Blake's myth. Argues that Blake's changing poetic diction and symbolism were struggles to represent hermetic and Kabbalistic truths.

Stempel, Daniel. "Blake, Foucault, and the Classical Episteme." PMLA 96 (1981): 388-407. <BBS 646>

"The assimilation of Blake's oeuvre into Foucault's classical episteme enriches and expands Foucault's model of the period; it also offers a model of the transformation from classical to modern that may clarify some of the difficulties of Foucault's scheme of historical change" (abstract).

Stevenson, W.H. "Blake's Progress." Essays in Criticism 49 (1999): 195-218. <WBHC 2707-08>

On the change of Blake's thought, with an emphasis on Vala or The Four Zoas.

Storch, Margaret. "The Very Image of Our Conceptions: Blake's Allegory and the Role of the Creative Poet." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 83 (1980): 262-79. <BBS 647>

"In Blake's later verse there is 'a penetration of self and non-self which begins to erode the organized forms of allegory' (279)" (BBS 647).

Symons, Arthur. William Blake. London: Archibald Constable and Company, 1907. <BB #2804, WBHC 2737>

An early biographical study, reprinting many nineteenth-century accounts of Blake.

Tolley, Michael J. "Blake's Songs of Spring." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 96-128. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

On Blake's references to spring from "To Spring" in Poetical Sketches to Jerusalem.

Vine, Steve. "William Blake's Materialities." Reinventing the Sublime: Post-Romantic Literature and Theory. Brighton, Chicago, Toronto: Sussex Academic Press, 2013.³⁸³ 22-38. <WBHC 2804>

Positions Blake's notion of the sublime, with references to John Martin, Burke, and Kant. Mostly references A Descriptive Catalogue and Jerusalem. "Each book—and perhaps even each plate, each mark, each printing—has the character of a 'minute articulation' or 'minute particular' whose very singularity, for Blake, is sublime" (38).

Vogler, Thomas A. "Intertextual Signifiers and the Blake of That Already." Romanticism Past and Present 9.1 (1985): 1-33. <BBS 669>

Arguing against Eaves's notion of Blake's expressive theory (William Blake's Theory of Art), reads Milton's pl. 38/42 (Bentley 38) as "exemplary of some general features of the dynamics of intertextuality" (4).

Wagenknecht, David. Blake's Night: William Blake and the Idea of Pastoral. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1973.³⁸⁴ <BB #A2908, WBHC 2822-23>

On the influence of Edmund Spencer and John Milton on Blake's depictions of the pastoral.

Whittaker, Jason. William Blake and the Myths of Britain. Basingstoke and London: Macmillan Press, 1999. <WBHC 2856-57>

A study of Blake's mythologizing of Britain, especially as it is related to antiquarianism, Druids, and Albion.

Williams, Nicholas M. Ideology and Utopia in the Poetry of William Blake. Cambridge: University Press, 1998. <WBHC 2866>

Reads Blake's literary works between the Songs and Jerusalem in conjunction with different utopian texts: the Songs with Rousseau's Emile; Visions of the Daughters of Albion with Wollstonecraft's Vindication of the Rights of Woman; America, The Song of Los, and The Four Zoas with Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution, Milton with Paine's Rights of Man; and Jerusalem with the writings of Robert Owen.

³⁸³ Incorporates Vine's "Blake's Material Sublime," Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (2002), 237-58, <WBHC 2713-15, 2803>.

³⁸⁴ Excerpted in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 171-79, <BBS 415>, and William Blake: Comprehensive Research and Study Guide, ed. Harold Bloom (2003), 72-74, <WBHC 1766-70>.

Wolfreys, Julian. "Blake's London: London's Blake: An Introduction to the Spirit of London or, on the way to Apocalypse." Writing London: The Trace of the Urban Text from Blake to Dickens. Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1998.32-58, 213-19. <WBHC 2877>

"About 'the ways in which William Blake writes himself into his vision of London'; 'Blake is London: London is Blake' (31, 34)" (WBHC 2877).

Worrall, David. "Blake and the Night Sky I: The 'Immortal Tent.'" Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 84 (1981): 273-95. <BBS 428, WBHC 1809-10>

A study of astronomical imagery in his poetry: "Most fundamental, perhaps, is the need to orient Blake's language in its cosmological or astronomical sense of meaning" (274).

Youngquist, Paul. Madness and Blake's Myth. University Park, PN and London: Penn State University Press, 1989. <BBS 694, WBHC 2909-10>

Reconsiders both the idea of Blake's madness, arguing that Blake may have been schizophrenic, and Blake's notion of madness.

Handwriting

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and 'the Wondrous Art of Writing': Letter Faces, Letter Formation, Capitalization." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 21-46. <Blake (2025)>

"This chapter documents and examines Blake's myriad 'hands' evident across his works, from manuscripts to illuminated printing, showing there to be considerable variety in letter formations, capitalizations, and extra-textual features such as catchwords, colophons, and letter sizes. Such differences in writing are difficult to represent typographically, even if facsimiles were included in letterpress editions of Blake's works" (abstract).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Sinister 'g', from 1789-93 to ?1803." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.2 (Sep. 1969): 43-45. <BB #1217.44>

An important response to Erdman's "Dating Blake's Script: The 'g' Hypothesis," which recognizes the general tendency of Blake's "g"s to have left facing serifs for a period, but Bentley questions when this period began and ended.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Unnecessary Letter." Papers of the Bibliographical Society of Canada / Cahiers de la Société bibliographique du Canada 53.2 (2015): 293-302. <Blake (2017)>

On Blake's use of the long "s" and its lack of representation by Blake's editors (including those of the Blake Archive). A list records every usage.

Douglas, Aileen. "Printing the Author's Hand." Work in Hand: Script, Print, and Writing, 1690-1840. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2017. 123-51. <Blake (2019)>

While not exclusively about Blake, the chapter has a substantial discussion of Blake's work in relationship to script and print.

Erdman, David V. "Dating Blake's Script: The 'g' Hypothesis." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.1 (Jun. 1969): 8-13. <BB #1217.40>

Noting that in works produced between 1791 and 1805 Blake often used “g”s with left facing serifs, proposes that this type of “g” can assist in dating Blake’s works. Erdman’s Dating Blake’s Script: A Postscript offers both a correction of the original article regarding the use of inscriptions as evidence and further consideration of the hypothesis.

The leftward direction of the serif led Bentley to call Erdman’s theory the “sinister ‘g,’ hypothesis,” and in his article, “Blake’s Sinister ‘g’, from 1789-93 to ?1803,” he suggests that the dating of the change in the “g”s and Blake’s commitment to it are not as clear cut as Erdman would have it and that it sometimes relies on circular reasoning.

Eaves, Essick, and Viscomi’s Introduction to The Book of Thel in the Princeton/Blake Trust edition of The Early Illuminated Books embraces Bentley’s critique of Erdman’s hypothesis, rejecting the implication that the different “g”s in The Book of Thel meant that Blake worked on the book for up to two years.

Erdman, David V. “Dating Blake’s Script: A Postscript.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.2 (Sep. 1969): 42. <BB #1217.43>

See Erdman’s “Dating Blake’s Script: The ‘g’ Hypothesis.”

Levy, Michelle. “Afterword: Blake’s Digitised Printed Script.” Literary Manuscript Culture in Romantic Britain. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2020. 259-67. <Blake (2021)>

A coda regarding Blake’s efforts to replicate the manuscript in his prints and on the Blake Archive’s efforts to present them digitally.

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. “The Destabilizing Materiality of the Autograph for Blake, Coleridge, and Tighe.” Material Transgressions: Beyond Romantic Bodies, Genders, Things. Ed. Kate Singer, Ashley Cross, and Suzanne L. Barnett. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2020. 31-52. <Blake (2024)>

“Blake, Coleridge, and Tighe deliberately disrupt the potential erasures effected by commercial print through the destabilizing materiality of their hand-imprinted signatures” (33).

Pierce, John B. The Wond’rous Art: William Blake and Writing. Madison, Teaneck, NJ: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2003. <WBHC 2532-33>³⁸⁵

On Blake’s representations of writing and orality.

Riccardi, Silvia. “The Page Embodied in The Four Zoas.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 135-47. <Blake (2025)>

The chapter “examine[s] Blake’s practice in selected pages of the manuscript, focusing on the way layout, calligraphy, and symbols are embedded in his style as well as the extent to which the boundaries between paper and copperplate become permeable” (abstract).

³⁸⁵ Incorporates Pierce’s “Rewriting Milton: Orality and Writing in Blake’s Milton,” Studies in Romanticism 39.4 (2000), 449-70, <WBHC 2532>.

Prosody, Style, and Diction

Introductions

Attridge, Derek. "Rhythm." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 120-28. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Hurley, Michael D. "Sound." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 139-46. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Wolfson, Susan J. "Blake's Language in Poetic Form." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 63-84. <WBHC 1969-72>

On Blake's innovative use of form and poetic language.

Studies

Adams, Hazard. "Synecdoche and Method." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 41-71.³⁸⁶ <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

Stresses the importance of an open-ended synecdoche to Blake: "Blake's intellectual allegory shaped by synecdoche is an endless exfoliating potentiality of identities, carrying ethical implications of the greatest urgency" (51).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Pronunciation." Studies in Philology 107.1 (2010): 114-29.³⁸⁷

A comprehensive overview, including a discussion of Blake's rhymes.

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. William Blake's Conversations: A Compilation, Concordance, and Rhetorical Analysis. Foreword. Mary Lynn Johnson. Lewiston: Edwin Mellen Press, 2008. <WBHC 1622>

A collection of William and Catherine's reported conversations from various sources, with analysis of the speech, rhymes, and vocabulary.

Fogel, Aaron. "Pictures of Speech: On Blake's Poetic." Studies in Romanticism 21.2 (1982): 217-42. <BBS 473>

Highlighting "London" and Milton, calls attention to Blake's use of voice and of the play of language and names to create concrete realities.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's Verbal Technique." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 321-32. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

On Blake's style and, particularly, his use of adjectives.

³⁸⁶ Rpt. in Adams's collection, Antithetical Essays in Literary Criticism and Liberal Education (1990), 21-51, <BBS 330, WBHC 1489>.

³⁸⁷ Not recorded in WBHC. Similar in content to the chapter on the same topic in Bentley's William Blake's Conversations (2008), <WBHC 1622>.

Hollander, John. "Blake and the Metrical Contract." From Sensibility to Romanticism: Essays Presented to Frederick A. Pottle. Ed. Frederick W. Hilles and Harold Bloom. New York: Oxford University Press, 1965. 293-310. <BB #1874>

A general account of Blake's meter in an overview beginning with the ancient Greeks.

Holloway, John. Vision and Resonance: Two Senses of Poetic Form. 1975. 2nd ed. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1985. 204-09. <BBS 513>

A good, concise overview of Blake's use of rhyme and meter.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. "The Devil's Syntax and O.E.D." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.4 (May 1970): 94-96. <BB #1217.54>

An attempt to explicate "Damn. Braces: Bless relaxes" (MHH pl. 9:57, E 37).

Kellett, Lucy. "Crooked roads without improvement': Rhyming and Unrhyming in Blake." Romanticism 23.2 (July 2017): 133-44. <Blake (2018)>

"This essay posits rhyme as an important locus of invigorating 'Contraries' in Blake's spiritual ideology and poetic practice. It explores tensions in Blake's conception of rhyme as unthinking abandon and over-reasoning rigidity, a trivialising indulgence yet rife with Urizenic implications" (abstract).

Kumbier, William. "Blake's Epic Meter." Studies in Romanticism 17.2 (1978): 163-92. <BBS 542>

"[A]ttempts to formulate some of the constitutive principles of the meter of Blake's epic line, to show the deliberation behind a meter previously regarded as arbitrary and unpredictable, and, finally, to assert that the claims Blake made for his versification in the preface to Jerusalem were, to a significant extent, realized" (164).

Lussier, Mark. "Beyond Pure Poetics: On the Rhythmic Impulse in Romanticism." Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 94-117. <Blake (2022)>

"In different ways, Blake, Byron, and Shelley undertake rhythmic operations with affective aspirations and in the process express the literal spirit of the age, a rhythmic presence operative at all scales, active in every atom and cell, and manifest in material and mental processes" (113).

Metcalf, Francis Wood. "Reason and 'Urizen': The Pronunciation of Blakean Names." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.1 (summer 1972): 17-18. <BB #1217.98>

Uses scansion to suggest the pronunciation of "Urizen," "Urthona," and "Oolon."

Miles, Josephine. "Blake's Frame of Language." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 86-95. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

An analysis of Blake's vocabulary, which was developed independently of Erdman's Concordance (1966).³⁸⁸

³⁸⁸ See also Miles's Eras and Modes in English Poetry (rev. ed. 1964).

Miles, Josephine. "The Language of William Blake." English Institute Essays 1950. Alan S. Downer. New York: Columbia University Press, 1951. New York: AMS Press Inc., 1965. 141-69.³⁸⁹ <BB #2220, WBHC 1988-89>³⁹⁰

"This pioneering study of Blake's poetic vocabulary points out that Blake used rather conventional words and did not alter his choice very significantly in his later poetry" (BB #2220).

Miller, Dan. "Blake's Allusions: Jerusalem 86." New Orleans Review 13.3 (fall 1986): 22-33. <BBS 586>

A thoughtful engagement with Blake's practice of allusion, using Jerusalem pl. 86 and its echoes of the Bible as the primary example.

Murray, Roger. "Blake and the Idea of Simplicity." Studies in Romanticism 13.2 (1974): 89-104. <BBS 649>

Explores "Blake's stylistic new departure in the prophetic works" (90).

Ness, Richard. "Vibrant Meter: Periods, Pulsations, and Prosody in Blake's Milton." European Romantic Review 34.6 (2023): 711-33. <Blake (2024)>

"This article argues that Milton's metrical experiments are essential for understanding the poem's strange temporal frameworks" (abstract).

Niimi, Hatsuko. "The Book of Ahania: A Metatext." Blake's Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 129-52.³⁹¹ <WBHC 2460-63> .

"The purpose of this paper is to interpret Ahania as a metatext concerned with conflicting and antagonistic linguistic realities" (131).

Ostriker, Alicia S. Vision and Verse in William Blake. Madison and Milwaukee: University of Wisconsin Press, 1965. <BB #2335, WBHC 2485-86>

"A sensitive and responsible commentary on Blake's prosody" (BB #2335). Remains the best study of Blake's versification.

Punter, David. "Blake: Social Relations of Poetic Form." New Literary History 8 (1982): 182-205. <BBS 610>

"About the relevance of the concepts of determinism and choice to the discussion of the problematic relations between society, ideology and poetic form' (182), especially on the connection of Blake's versification and Ossian's" (BBS 610).

³⁸⁹ Rpt. as "The Sublimity of William Blake," in Miles's Eras & Modes in English Poetry (1957), 78-99, <BB #2220>.

³⁹⁰ The individual essays are listed in BB, but the collection, as such, is not recorded until WBHC.

³⁹¹ Originally published with the same title in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.2 (fall 2000), 46-54, <WBHC 1684>.

Punter, David. "Ossian, Blake and the Questionable Source." Exhibited by Candlelight: Sources and Developments in the Gothic Tradition. Ed. Valeria Tinkler-Villani and Peter Davidson with Jane Stevenson. Amsterdam and Atlanta, GA: Rodopi, 1995. 25-41.³⁹²

Building on his "Blake: Social Relations of Poetics Form," Punter returns to the question of "how are we to treat the relationship between Blake and the Ossian poetry" but also considers the nature of the source in relationship to the Gothic and, specifically, in what Punter calls Blake's and Ossian's "heroic gothic" (25).

Raine, Kathleen. "A Note on Blake's 'Unfettered Verse.'" William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 383-92. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

On Blake's versification.

Rosenberg, Marc. "Style and Meaning in The Book of Urizen." Style 4.3 (1970): 197-212. <BB #A2563>

A clear explication of "Blake's poetic method" (197) in Urizen.

Saintsbury, George. "Burns, Blake, and the Close of the Eighteenth Century (with an Excursus on Ossian). A History of English Prosody". Vol. III. London: Macmillan, 1910. 9-42. <BB #2614>

Despite its age, a good overview of Blake in the context of late eighteenth-century prosody, with brief discussions of Burns, Darwin, Hayley, Maria Williams, and Ossian.

Taylor, Ronald Clayton. "Semantic Structures and the Temporal Modes of Blake's Prophetic Verse." Language and Style 12 (1979): 26-49.³⁹³ <BBS 658>

An analysis of Blake's language and its use of time.

Watanabe, Hideki. "Eishi ni okeru shudai teijion bunsan (hypogram) saiko: Herrick to Wordsworth, Shakespeare to Blake no hikaku kara [Hypogram in English Poetry Reconsidered: Through Comparison of Herrick, Wordsworth, Shakespeare and Blake]." Gengo Bunka Kyodo Kenkyu Project (Cultural Formation Studies) 2023 (2024): 15-23. In Japanese. <Blake (2025)>

"The Tyger" and "The Lamb" are phonetically analyzed in the discussion of the effects of alliteration, rhyme and hypogram.

Wolfson, Susan J. "Blake's Politics in Rhyme and Blank Verse" in "'Romantic Ideology' and the Values of Aesthetic Form." Aesthetics and Ideology. Ed. George Levine. New Brunswick, New Jersey: Rutgers University Press, 1994. 188-218.³⁹⁴ <WBHC 2877-78>

Analyzes the genre and prosody of "Gwin, King of Norway" in Poetical Sketches to make a wider point on the ideological arguments of form.

³⁹² Not recorded in WBHC.

³⁹³ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 237-70, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

³⁹⁴ Adapted in Wolfson's "Sketching Verbal Form: Blake's Poetical Sketches," Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake's Poetical Sketches, ed. Mark L. Greenberg (1996), <WBHC 2104-05>, and in her Formal Charges: The Shaping of Poetry in British Romanticism (Stanford: Stanford University Press, 1997), <WBHC 2878>.

Myth and Symbolism (See also General Introductions, Handbooks, Glossaries, and Classic Studies)

Introductions and Guidebooks

Damon, S. Foster. A Blake Dictionary: The Ideas and Symbols of William Blake. 1965. 1988. Rev. ed. with a new foreword and annotated bibliography by Morris Eaves. Hanover, NH: Dartmouth College Press, 2013. <BB #1445, BBS 447, WBHC 1915-17>

Despite its age, remedied somewhat by Eaves's foreword, bibliography, and index, an indispensable reference for a basic understanding of Blake's obscure myth and symbolism.

Freeman, Kathryn S. A Guide to the Cosmology of William Blake. New York: Routledge, 2017. <Blake (2017, 2019, 2020)>

A reference book on Blake's mythic system more recent than Damon's Blake Dictionary, which also includes useful information about Blake's circle and more contemporary bibliographical resources.

Gourlay, Alexander S. “Glossary.” The William Blake Archive. Ed. Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi.

A concise list defining key words in Blake's mythology and symbolism. Adapted from Gourlay's “A Glossary of Terms, Names, and Concepts in Blake,” published in Eaves's Cambridge Companion to William Blake.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “Mapping Blake's London.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 117-22. <BBS 381>

The maps of Britain, the Holy Land, and London in the article, which were also published in Blake's Poetry and Designs (1979, 2008), are very useful for visualizing Blake's syncretic fusion of biblical and British geography.

Rajan, Tilottama. “System, Myth, and Symbol.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 155-62. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Adams, Hazard. “Blake and Philosophy of Literary Symbolism.” Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984. Ed. Nelson Hilton. Hamden: Archon Books, 1986. 1-14.³⁹⁵ <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>

“On the nature of Blake's symbolism, especially as it affects the structure of Jerusalem” (BBS 411).

³⁹⁵ Initially, “offered at a meeting of the Modern Language Association of America in 1972. A later version, principally Part One, appeared in New Literary History in 1973. The discussion of Jerusalem was added for the whole essay's publication in Blake Studies [7.2] (1975)[, 143-66]” (Adams, Thinking Through Blake, 17). This version was further amended and incorporated in Adams's Philosophy of the Literary Symbolic (1983), and it is that version which appears in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 1-14, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

Adams, Hazard. "Synecdoche and Method." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 41-71. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

Building on Roman Jakobson's distinction between metaphor and metonym, offers a notion of synecdoche, which provides a useful approach to understanding the seemingly tenuous connections in Blake's mythology.

Adlard, John. "Mr. Blake's Fairies." Neuphilologische Mitteilungen 65.2 (1964): 144-60. <BB #792>

On Blake's fairies throughout his poetry.

Austin, Deborah. "Threefold Blake's Divine Vision, Intention, and Myth." The Binding of Proteus: Perspectives on Myth and the Literary Process. Ed. Marjorie W. McCune, Tucker Orbison, and Philip M. Withim. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press and London: Associated University Presses, 1980. 79-96. <BBS 356>

"Blake 'uses' myth as the civilized poet must use it, working always at the growing-edge of creativity, where myth and metaphor meet and add their power to each other" (90).

Avni, Abraham. "Blake's 'Tiriel'—The Meaning of 'Ijim'." ³⁹⁶ Notes and Queries 21.2 (1974): 60-61. <BB #C1098>

"Ijim' means 'jackals' in Hebrew" (BB #C1098).

Beer, John. "Blake's Fear of Non-Entity." Romantic Consciousness: Blake to Mary Shelley. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003. 12-20. <WBHC 1591>

On the development of Blake's myth around his sense of non-being: "Terms such as 'Non Ens' and 'Non Existence' betray his deep fear of falling, or being drawn, into negativity" (18).

Beer, John. Blake's Visionary Universe. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1969. <BB #1144>

A still useful examination of what Blake was trying to achieve with his mythic system. The designs for Job and Dante are considered as well as the illuminated poetry, and an appendix considers how Blake read Shakespeare.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Living Creatures: Depictions of Zoas." Notes and Queries 66.2 (Jun. 2019): 234-43. <Blake (2020)>

On Blake's depictions of the Zoas, especially in the visual works.

Billigheimer, Rachel V. "Conflict and Conquest: Creation, Emanation and the Female Will in William Blake's Mythology." Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 93-120. <WBHC 1629>

A detailed reading of the Emanations and the Seven Eyes of God in The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem in light, chiefly, of the Kabbala.

³⁹⁶ See Michael Tolley's reply, Notes and Queries 21.5 (1974), 181. Not noted by BB.

Bogan, James. “Vampire Bats & Blake’s Spectre.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.1 (summer 1976): 32-33. <BBS 378>

Suggests that imagery associated with the Spectre stems from Stedman’s depiction of vampire bats.

Boydaş, Okan. “William Blake, Gustave Moreau, Odilon Redon, Arnold Böcklin, Ernst Fuchs ve H.R. Giger'in Çalışmalarının Ezoterik Semboller Açısından İncelemesi \(Examination of William Blake, Gustave Moreau, Odilon Redon, Arnold Böcklin, Ernst Fuchs and H. R. Giger's Works in Terms of Esoteric Symbols\).” Cumhuriyet Üniversitesi Fen-Edebiyat Fakültesi Sosyal Bilimler Dergisi 48.1 (29 June 2024): 27-34. In Turkish. Abstracts in Turkish and English. <Blake (2025)>

Brogan, Howard O. “Blake on Woman: Oothoon to Jerusalem.” CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 125-36. <BBS 434>

“I may be able at least to explain Blake’s attitude toward women as a consistent development by looking at it in a much broader mythological context” (126). Also suggests that “Blake’s attitude toward woman can be illuminated by considering it in light of Neoplatonic and Gnostic influence upon him” (125).

Butler, Marilyn. “Blake.” Mapping Mythologies: Countercurrents in Eighteenth-Century British Poetry and Cultural History. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2015. 162-88. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Positions Blake in an English tradition of myth making.

Calè, Luisa. “William Blake’s ‘Fourfold Vision’: A Practical Antiquary’s Visionary Contemplations among the ‘Couches of the Dead.’” Modern Philology 120.1 (August 2022). Special Issue: “Ancient Objects and New Media.” Ed. Noah Heringman and Crystal B. Lake. 24-48. <Blake (2023)>

“This essay argues that the artisanal problems of the ‘practical antiquary’ shaped William Blake’s physiological aesthetics and his experience of ‘fourfold vision’” (abstract).

Callaghan, Madeleine. “All is done as I have told': Blake's Eternal Prophecy.” Eternity in Romantic Poetry. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2022. 23-58. <Blake (2023)>

The chapter surveys Blake’s idea of eternity in multiple works.

Cantor, Paul A. Creature and Creator: Myth-Making and English Romanticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1984. <BBS 431>

The section on Blake is largely about the rewriting of the creation myth in Urizen and of the apocalypse in The Four Zoas. The chapters on Shelley often use Blake as a point of comparison.

Curran, Stuart. "Blake and the Gnostic Hyle: A Double Negative." Blake Studies 4.2 (1972): 117-33.³⁹⁷ <BB #1218.62, BBS 410>

Reads the character of Hyle as a Gnostic symbol.

Damrosch, Leopold, Jr. Symbol and Truth in Blake's Myth. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1980. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2014. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2014.³⁹⁸ <BBS 447, WBHC 1918-20>

A study of Blake's philosophy and its expression through symbol and myth.

De Groot, H.B. "The Ouroboros and the Romantic Poets: A Renaissance Emblem in Blake, Coleridge, and Shelley." English Studies 50 (1970): 553-64. <BB #1473>

"Blake uses the traditional symbol of the snake with its tail by its mouth to 'represent the natural and the earth-bound' rather than the eternal' (562)" (BB #1473).

De la Barra van Treек, Erika. "Simbolismo y extravío en el mundo lírico de Beulah de William Blake," Revista de Humanidades 19-20 (June-Dec. 2009): 51-63. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2018)>

De Luca, Vincent Arthur. Words of Eternity: Blake and the Poetics of the Sublime. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1991. Princeton: Princeton Legacy Library, 2014.³⁹⁹ <BBS 450, WBHC 1932-34>

Important study of how Blake's poetics invoked the sublime, both in terms of content and materially. De Luca coins the phrase, "wall of words," to describe pages of the illuminated books full of text.

Deen, Leonard W. Conversing in Paradise: Poetic Genius and Identity-as-Community in Blake's Los. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1983. <BBS 450, WBHC 1931-32>

Considers Los, conceived as Blake's "ideal of art, of prophecy, and of humanity" (1), in the prophetic books and especially in the epics and "The Mental Traveller."

Erle, Sibylle. "And I gave it to my foe": Deadly Games of Creation in Blake's The [First] Book of Urizen and 'A Poison Tree.'" Prudent Crossings: From Milton's Paradise to Canada's Bush Gardens. Ed. Alessandra Boller et al. Augsburg: Wißner-Verlag 2023. 21-38. <Blake (2024)>

³⁹⁷ Rpt. in in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 15-32, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

³⁹⁸ Excerpted in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 159-69, <BBS 415>, and William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 73-74, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>.

³⁹⁹ Incorporates his "Ariston's Immortal Palace: Icon and Allegory in Blake's Prophecies," Criticism 12.1 (1970), 1-19 <BB #1475>; "Blake and the Two Sublimes," Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 11 (1982), 93-105 <BB #1475>; "Proper Names in the Structural Design of Blake's Myth-Making," Blake Studies 8.1 (1978) <BBS 411-12>; "Blake's Wall of Words: The Sublime of the Text" from Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality, ed. Nelson Hilton and Thomas A. Vogler (1986), 49-68, <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>; and "Blake and Burke in Astonishment!" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989), 100-04, <BBS 405>. The first chapter, "Blake's Concept of the Sublime," is reprinted in Romanticism: A Critical Reader, ed. Duncan Wu (1995), 17-54, <WBHC 2888>.

An important consideration of Blake's depiction of creation and the fall, his use of Milton, and Urizen's relationship to Satan, with commentary on Marriage and The Ancient of Days as well as the poems mentioned in the title.

Erle, Sibylle. "Shadows in the Cave: Refocusing Vision in Blake's Creation Myth." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 144-63. <WBHC 2113-15>

On Blake's depictions of the eye and vision in relationship to John Locke and Isaac Newton; Swedenborg and the Swedenborgian optician, George Adams; and John Hunter and Erasmus Darwin.

Erle, Sibylle. "William Blake's Lavaterian Women: Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 44-52. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Analyzes how Blake used Lavater's physiognomy to depict "Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania" (44).

Essick, Robert N. "Erin, Ireland, and the Emanation in Blake's Jerusalem." Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 201-13. <WBHC 1866-69>

Analyzes the character of Erin in Jerusalem against a backdrop of political discussions surrounding Ireland as a case study to reflect on the nature of historicist study.

Evans, James C. "Blake, Locke, & The Concept of 'Generation.'." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 47. <BBS 377>

Suggests that Blake's use of "generation" has its roots in Locke.

Ferber, Michael. "The Orthodoxy of Blake Footnotes." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.1 (summer 1998): 16-19. <WBHC 1674>

A critical look at overconfident footnotes, especially those glossing names.

Folsom, L. Edwin. "Nobodaddy: Through the Bottomless Pit, Darkly." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 45. <BBS 377>

Argues that "Nobodaddy" is an anagram of Abaddon.

Freed, Eugenie R. "A Portion of His Life": William Blake's Miltonic Vision of Woman." Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 1994.⁴⁰⁰ <WBHC 2028-29>

Emphasizing that Blake's view of women was central in his engagement with Milton, analyzes some of Blake's major female characters (Thel, Oothoon, Enitharmon, and Jerusalem) for what they suggest about his views of gender and female sexuality.

⁴⁰⁰ Incorporates Freed's "Sun-Clad Chastity' and Blake's 'Maiden-Queens': Comus, Thel and 'The Angel,'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.3 (winter 1991-92), 104-16, <BBS 408>.

Frye, Northrop. "Blake's Treatment of the Archetype." English Institute Essays 1950. Alan S. Downer. New York: Columbia University Press, 1951. New York: AMS Press Inc., 1965. 170-96.⁴⁰¹ <BB #1645, WBHC 1988-89>⁴⁰²

An influential and often reprinted essay about Blake's four states (Ulro, Generation / Experience, Beulah / Innocence, and Eden) and about the literary archetype in general.

Frye, Northrop. Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1947. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969. Northrop Frye's Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Ed. Nicholas Halmi. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2004. Vol. 14 of the Collected Works of Northrop Frye.⁴⁰³ <BB #1646, BBS 478, WBHC 2037-39>

A profoundly influential study, which dominated twentieth-century Blake scholarship. Frye considered Blake primarily as a poet and artist (rather than a mystic), and his work led to Blake's canonization as a Romantic poet as well as shaping Frye's own Archetypal Criticism. Frye's positioning of Blake in terms of British Empiricism (primarily John Locke and George Berkeley) remains key, and his reading of the prophetic works showed the profundity of what previous generations had dismissed as evidence of Blake's madness.⁴⁰⁴

Frye, Northrop. "The Keys to the Gates." Some British Romantics. Ed. James V. Logan, John E. Jordan, and Northrop Frye. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1966, 3-40.⁴⁰⁵ <BB #1697>.

A schematic sketch of Blake's system, glossing the Zoas, the four levels of vision, and the gates set at the cardinal directions.

Gamer, Michael. "Blake, Mythologizing, and Misogyny." Michigan Feminist Studies 7 (1992-93): 127-52. <WBHC 2050>

Seeks to answer why "did Blake's treatment of [women] seem to change so noticeably with The Four Zoas and the major works that followed?" (129).

⁴⁰¹ Rpt. in Discussion of William Blake, ed. John E. Grant (1961), <BB #1724>; Critics on Blake: Readings in Literary Criticism, ed. Judith O'Neill (1970); Critical Essays on William Blake, ed. Hazard Adams (1991), 39-52, <BBS 331, WBHC 1472>; Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angela Esterhammer (2005), 190-26, 447 <WBHC 2040-43>.

⁴⁰² The individual essays are listed in BB, but the collection, as such, is not recorded until WBHC.

⁴⁰³ Chapter 2, "The Rising God," 30-54, is rpt. as "The Religious Vision of William Blake," in Toward a New Christianity: Readings in the Death of God Theology, ed. Thomas J. J. Altizer (1967), 19-42; Chapter 1, "The Case Against Locke," 14-29, is rpt. as "Blake's Case Against Locke," in English Literature and British Philosophy: A Collection of Essays, ed. S.P. Rosenbaum (1971), 119-35, <BB #973>; Chapters 5 and 12, 189-91, 418-28, are excerpted in Modern Literary Criticism, ed. Lawrence I Lipking and A. Walton Litz (1972), 189-91 and 191-97; excerpts are rpt. in William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 23-35, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>.

⁴⁰⁴ See Classic Studies the complete annotation.

⁴⁰⁵ Rpt. in Frye's The Stubborn Structure: Essays in Criticism and Society (1970), 175-99; in Romanticism and Consciousness: Essays in Criticism, ed. Harold Bloom (1970), 233-54; in Modern Critical Views, ed. Harold Bloom (1985); and as "Blake: The Key to the Gates" in English Romantic Poets, ed. Harold Bloom (1986), 12-39, <BBS 414-15>.

Glausser, Wayne Edward. "A Note on the Twenty Years of Blake's Spectre." English Language Notes 24.2 (1986): 43-44. <BBS 485-86>

"Twenty years [...] appears to be a unit of time Blake associates with mundane: the measure of how long it takes a visionary to overcome worldly obstructions to human life" (44).

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's Swans." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.4 (spring 1982): 164-69. <BBS 393>

A description of Blake's swan imagery in Island, Visions, America, The Four Zoas, and Jerusalem.

Gourlay, Alexander S. "Construing 'Har': Blake's Polygot Roots." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.4 (spring 2024): 5 pars. <Blake (2025)>

About the possible sources for Har, emphasizing the "Har" in Paul Henri Mallet's Edda and the etymology of "hoar" and "hoary."

Greenberg, Mark. "Blake's Vortex." Colby Library Quarterly 14.4 (1978): 198-212.⁴⁰⁶ <BBS 494>

On the word's source in Descartes and its usage in The Four Zoas and Milton.

Grimes, Ronald L. "Time and Space in Blake's Major Prophecies." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 59-81. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Traces Blake's ideas of space and time in the epics.

Groves, David. "Blake, Thomas Boston, and the Fourfold Vision." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.4 (spring 1986): 142. <BBS 399>

Suggests that Blake's idea of fourfold existence may have been influenced by the Presbyterian minister Thomas Boston's Human Nature, in its Four-fold State (1720).

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Babylon Revisited, or the Story of Luvah and Vala." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 101-18. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Examines Blake's later ideas of sexuality, largely through an analysis of Luvah and Vala's relationship. His conclusion, "Some modern women may have much to object to in Blake's latest thoughts about the relations of the sexes" (118), anticipates still on-going feminist debates about Blake.

Hagstrum, Jean H. "William Blake: 'Arrows of Desire' and 'Chariots of Fire.'" The Romantic Body: Love and Sexuality in Keats, Wordsworth, and Blake. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1985. 109-45. <BBS 498, WBHC 2116-17>

⁴⁰⁶ Originally published in Rackham Literary Studies: Published by the Graduate Students in Literature at the University of Michigan 5 (1974), 22-36, <BBS 494>.

Considers gender, desire, and sexual love in Blake's poetry, moving from Poetical Sketches to a discussion of Beulah and Eden in the later epics. In addition to the chapter, Blake is addressed in the introduction, along with the artists Henry Fuseli, James Barry, and William Etty.

Hall, Mary Starritt. "Blake's Tiriel: A Visionary Form Pedantic." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 74 (1970): 166-76. <BB #1774>

Argues that Blake drew his characters' names and their descriptions from Jacob Bryant's descriptions of the Greek Titans.

Helms, Randel. "Another Source of Blake's Orc." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.4 (spring 1982): 198-99. <BBS 393>

Suggests that at least part of the symbolism tied to Orc stemmed from Jacob Bryant's Ancient Mythology, which described "the forest of Orcun" that stood next to a "mountain [that] had once flamed" (Bryant I.210, 211, qtd. in Helms 198).

Hilton, Nelson. "Blake and the Mountains of the Mind." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.4 (spring 1981): 196-203. <BBS 391>

On Blake's mountain symbolism.

Hilton, Nelson. Literal Imagination: Blake's Vision of Words. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1983.⁴⁰⁷ <BBS 507, WBHC 2147-48>

A major study of how Blake used and envisioned words, with many ingenious readings of Blake's word play.

Hilton, Nelson, and Thomas A. Vogler, ed. Unnam'd Forms: Blake and Textuality. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1986. <BBS 508-09, WBHC 2148-49>

Important set of essays on Blake's textual practices at the height of the theory wars.

Hobson, Christopher Z. The Chained Boy: Orc and Blake's Idea of Revolution. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 1999.⁴⁰⁸ <WBHC 2155, Blake (2003)>

A central study for both its challenge to Northrop Frye's influential idea of the Orc Cycle, in which revolutionaries are destined to become tyrants, and its early Queer approach to Blake.

Holley, Michael. "Blake's Atlantis." Colby Library Quarterly 30.2 (1994): 109-18. <WBHC 2159>

On Atlantis in America and Visions of the Daughters of Albion: "Certainly the Atlantis motif plays a minor role in Blake's whole mythology; but tracing its distinctive place in ⁴⁰⁷ Incorporates Hilton's "Blake in the Chains of Being," Eighteenth Century 21.3 (1980), 212-35, <BBS 507>, and "Spears, Spheres, and Spiritual Tears: Blake's Poetry as 'The Tyger' ll. 17-20," Philological Quarterly 59.4 (1980), 515-29, <BBS 507>.

⁴⁰⁸ Incorporates Hobson's "The Myth of Blake's 'Orc Cycle,'" Blake, Politics, and History, ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson (1998), 5-36, <WBHC 1950-53>, and "Unbound from Wrath: Orc and Blake's Crisis of Vision in The Four Zoas," Studies in English Literature, 33.4 (1993), 725-54, <WBHC 2155-56>.

his poetry yields valuable insights into the way Blake adapts popular myth for his own use and how this adaptation reflects his fundamental world vision" (109).

Howard, Darren. "The Search for a Method: A Rhetorical Reading of Blake's Prophetic Symbolism." European Romantic Review 17.5 (2006): 559-74. <WBHC 2169>

"I propose a method of reading that focuses on Blake's rhetorical style, using as a test case two rhetorical techniques in particular—the use of deixis and synonym—which are among the most fundamental to Blake's style and the most overlooked in the pursuit of allegorical consistency" (abstract).

Hungerford, Edward B. "Blake's Albion." The Shores of Darkness. New York: Columbia University Press, 1941. Cleveland and New York: Meridian Books, 1963. 35-62. <BB #1909>

Considers the figure of Albion in different antiquarian traditions.

Kauvar, Elaine. "Los's Messenger to Eden: Blake's Wild Thyme." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.3 (winter 1976-77): 82-84. <BBS 380-81>

An account of why "Wild Thyme" is Los's messenger to Eden.

Larrissy, Edward. "'self-Imposition', Alchemy, and the Fate of the 'Bound' in later Blake." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 59-72. <WBHC 1869-71>

Argues that hermetic and alchemical traditions elucidate Blake's later notions of the bounded, circumference, limit, and energy.

Lezra, Esther. "'Neptune': Literal and Visual Translations of Black Revolution into White." The Colonial Art of Demonizing Others: A Global Perspective. New York: Routledge, 2014. 23-50.

Suggests that Neptune, the man being tortured in the engraving, "The Execution of Breaking on the Rack," is part of the inspiration for Orc.

Lincoln, Andrew. Spiritual History: A Reading of William Blake's Vala, or The Four Zoas. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1995.⁴⁰⁹ <WBHC 2330-31>

Remains the best account of the development of the poem through its manuscript revisions and of Blake's thought and myth between the Lambeth prophecies and the later illuminated epics. Lincoln details Blake's use of universal Enlightenment histories, such as those offered by Comte de Volney and Edward Gibbon.

Lieshout, Jules van. Within and Without Eternity: The Dynamics of Interaction in William Blake's Myth and Poetry. Amsterdam-Atlanta, Georgia: Rodopi, 1994. <WBHC 2795>⁴¹⁰

Maintains the consistency of Blake's mythic system and thought.

⁴⁰⁹ Incorporates Lincoln's "Blake's Lower Paradise: The Pastoral Passage in The Four Zoas, Night the Ninth," Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 84 (1981), 470-78, <BBS 551, WBHC 2329>; "Blake and the Natural History of Creation," Essays and Studies 39 (1986), 94-103, <BBS 551, WBHC 2329>; and "Blake and the 'Reasoning Historian,'" Historicizing Blake, ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall (1994), 73-85, <WBHC 1869-71>.

⁴¹⁰ WBHC alphabetizes under "van."

Linebaugh, Peter, and Marcus Rediker. "Blake's African Orc." "Conclusion: Tyger! Tyger!" The Many-Headed Hydra: Sailors, Slaves, Commoners, and the Hidden History of the Revolutionary Atlantic. Boston: Beacon Press, 2000. 327-54. <WBHC 2334>

The section on Blake in the conclusion reads his depictions of slavery and revolution in the Stedman illustrations and the Continental Prophecies in terms of the Black Atlantic.

Lussier, Mark. "Blake's Golgonoosa [sic]: London and/as the Eternal City of Art." Romanticism and the City. Ed. Larry H. Peer. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011. <WBHC 2354>

"[T]he passage from historical London to visionary Golgonoosa [sic] comes only to be achieved through the deployment of principles associated with 'visionary geography'" (199).

Michael, Jennifer Davis. "Blake's Feet: Toward a Poetics of Incarnation." Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 205-24. <WBHC 2095-98>

"I want to suggest [...] that Blake's symbolic use of feet, beginning with Poetical Sketches, is intrinsic to his artistic project, fusing spiritual, sexual, and poetic acts into a single member" (206).

Miller, Dan, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault, ed. Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

A collection of essays tying Blake to the critical theory debates of the mid-1980s. Miller's introduction and most of the essays reflect on methodology and the future of Blake studies.

Miner, Paul. "The Polyp as a Symbol in the Poetry of William Blake." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 2.2 (1960): 198-205. <BB #2227>

Foundational essay on Blake's use of the Polyp and Polypus in his poetry.

Miner, Paul. "William Blake: Two Notes on Sources." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 62 (1958): 203-07. <BB #2229>

The first note, "Blake's Use of Gray's 'Fatal Sisters,'" considers how Blake used Gray's depictions of the Valkyrie, and the second note, "A Source for Blake's Enion?" records the use of "Enion" in Michael Drayton's Poly-Obion (1612).

Mutis, Guido. "Visión sistemática de la poesía de William Blake." Revista Documentos Lingüísticos y Literarios UACH 37 (Jan. 2019): 169-84. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). Originally published in Estudios Filológicos 25 (1990): 85-100.⁴¹¹ <Blake (2020)>

Nanvutty, Piloo, and Mark Perugini. "Puzzling Names in Blake." Times Literary Supplement 3 (10 Jul. 1937); 496, 512. <BB #2271>

"On possible sources of Or-Udan, Vala, [and] Ahania" (BB #2271).

⁴¹¹ See also D.W. Dörrbecker, "Blake and His Circle: An Annotated Checklist of Recent Publications," Blake 26.3 (winter 1992-93), 103.

Neubauer, John. "The Sick Rose as an Aesthetic Idea: Kant, Blake, and the Symbol in Literature." Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture: Irrationalism in the Eighteenth Century. Ed. Harold Pagliaro. Cleveland: Press of Case Western Reserve University, 1972. 167-79. <BB #A2280>

Uses "The Sick Rose" to illuminate Kant's argument in chapter 59 of Critique of Judgement: "[T]o interpret a poem of pure poetic idiom implies an attempt to transpose its poetry into conceptual language, the way the Kantian symbol asks to be converted into its original concept" (171).

Newman, Marcia. ""Milton's Track' Revisited: Visual Analogues to Blake's Vortex in the 'Law Edition' of Boehme."" Interdisciplinary Literary Studies 5 (2004): 73-93. <WBHC 2456>

Focusing on Milton, argues: "As Blake extends his myth of the fall to include and emphasize the story of redemption, there is strong indication that he is not only indebted to Jacob Boehme, but also to Boehme's follower and illustrator, Dionysius Freher" (76-77).

Okada, Kazuya. "Orc under a Veil Revealed: Family Relationships and their Symbols in Europe and The Book of Urizen." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.2 (fall 2000): 36-45. <WBHC 1684>

Examines the mythological and iconographic imagery surrounding Orc.

Paley, Morton D. "Cowper as Blake's Spectre." Eighteenth Century Studies 1 (1968): 236-52. <BB #2345>

"There is much to suggest that the model for the Spectre of Jerusalem 10 was" William Cowper (237).

Paley, Morton D. "The Figure of the Garment in The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 119-39. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

"An understanding of the figure of the garment is [...] indispensable to an understanding of the later Blake" (119).

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake and Chichester." Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 215-32. <WBHC 2436-40>

Documents Chichester's impact on Blake's imagination, including its architecture, Gothic paintings, and people, many of whom became the heroes and villains of Milton and Jerusalem.

Peterfreund, Stuart. "The Name of Blake's Lyca Re-examined." American Notes & Queries 13 (1975): 133-36. <BBS 603>

"The name be taken from 'laikas,' Greek for harlot, if we take 'into account Blake's tendency to orthographically corrupt' his sources, for 'Lyca's experience certainly smacks of a harlotry' (135)" (BBS 603).

Quasha, George. "Orc as a Fiery Paradigm of Poetic Torsion." Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 263-84. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

An examination of Orc, skeptical of Frye's idea of the Orc cycle.

Ripley, Wayne C. "The Influence of the Moravian Collection of Hymns on William Blake's Later Mythology." Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 481-98. <Blake (2018)>

Shows how Blake's later mythological language in The Four Zoas manuscript drew on John Gambold's 1754 Moravian hymnal.

Rose, Edward J. "Blake and the Double: The Spectre as Doppelgänger." Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977): 127-39. <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>

"In anticipation of Romantic and post-Romantic literary concerns, Blake employed the Doppelgänger in his work both allegorically and psychologically" (128).

Rose, Edward J. "Blake's Human Root: Symbol, Myth, and Design." Studies in English Literature, 1500-1900 20.4 (autumn 1980): 575-90. <BBS 625>

On the "symbolism of the root and of man-as-a-root" in Blake's designs (575).

Rose, Edward J. "Blake's Metaphorical States." Blake Studies 4.1 (autumn 1971): 9-31. <BB #1218.50>

"Concerns what 'Blake is trying to achieve with the metaphorical processes he calls states or classes' (9)" (BB #1218.50).

Rose, Edward J. "'Forms Eternal Exist For-ever': The Covenant of the Harvest in Blake's Prophetic Poems." Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 443-62. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Considers how Blake "employs the seasonal cycle as a symbolic structure" particularly in his three epics (443).

Rose, Edward J. "The Gate of Los: Vision and Symbol in Blake." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 20.1 (1978): 1-14. <BBS 625>

"It is necessary for readers of Blake to understand the relation between the temporal and spatial symbols for the infinitesimal particular: the moment and the grain of sand" (3).

Rose, Edward J. "Good-bye to Orc and All That." Blake Studies 4.2 (spring 1972): 135-51. <BB #1218.63>

"My primary purpose is to examine Orc as a symbol of thwarted creativity" (135) (BB 1218.63): "When the figure of Orc receded into the deep spaces of his art, Blake moved on from social criticism and political revolution to individual apocalypse" (151).

Rose, Edward J. "Los, Pilgrim of Eternity." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 83-99. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Analyzes Los in relationship to time, including the concept of kairos.

Rose, Edward J. “The Meaning of Los.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967): 10-11. <BB #1217.7>

Ties the name to “lo” in the sense of behold.

Rose, Edward J. “The Spirit of the Bounding Line: Blake’s Los.” Criticism 13.1 (1971): 54-76. <BB #A2558>

Discusses Los as the embodiment of that which “circumscribes and determines the outline” (54).

Rosso, G.A. The Religion of Empire: Political Theology in Blake’s Prophetic Symbolism. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2016.⁴¹² <Blake (2017, 2019, 2020)>

An important examination of the figures of Rahab and Tirzah in the later works.

Ryan, Mark. “William Blake The Arch Myth-Maker.” Modern Humanities Research Association Working Papers in the Humanities 5 (2010): 12 pp.⁴¹³

“Myth itself becomes a fluid, unsystematic set of images in Blake’s artistic imagination and, in placing elements of aesthetic, cultural and social life in his dynamic ever-shifting mental landscape, Blake is consciously redefining mythical traditions that structure his visionary system” (p. 5).

Sanzo, Eileen. “Blake’s Beulah & Beulah Hill, Surrey.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 46. <BBS 377>

Notes that Blake would have known of “Beulah Hill, Surrey” in addition to the use of “Beulah” in the Bible and Bunyan.

Schleifer, Ronald. “Simile, Metaphor, and Vision: Blake’s Narration of Prophecy in America.” SEL 19.4 (1979): 569-88. <BBS 634>

“[T]he central device of Blake’s prophecy is the articulation of the transformation of simile to metaphor,” which, ultimately, “marks the inception of Orc in history” (569).

Shaub, Kiel. “The Horror of Rahab: Towards an Aesthetic Context for William Blake’s ‘Gothic’ Form.” William Blake’s Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Bundock and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 64-84. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Analyzes Rahab, in relationship to Urizen, as a figure central to Blake’s sense of the Gothic and horror.

Smith, Mark Trevor. “Striving with Systems.” Blake and His Bibles. Ed. David V. Erdman. West Cornwall: Locust Hill Press, 1990. 157-78. <BBS 463, WBHC 1989-90>

⁴¹² Incorporates Rosso’s “The Religion of Empire: Blake’s Rahab in Its Biblical Contexts,” Prophetic Character, ed. Alexander S. Gourlay (2002), 287-326, <WBHC 2095-98>, and “The Last Strumpet: Harlotry and Hermaphroditism in Blake’s Rahab,” Blake, Gender and Culture, ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly (2012), 25-36, <WBHC 1800-01>.

⁴¹³ Not recorded in WBHC.

On the “tension between Blake’s enthusiastic construction of systems, which makes it easy for us to understand him, and his scornful smashing of systems, which make it impossible for us to understand him” in Jerusalem (158).

Snart, Jason. “‘Orison’: A Possible Source for William Blake’s ‘Urizen.’” Notes and Queries 49.1 (2002): 14-15. <WBHC 2690>

Suggests that “Urizen” is a pun of “orison,” and thus a parody of rationalistic devotional practices.

Spector, Sheila A. The Evolution of Blake’s Myth. New York: Routledge, 2020. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

A major reassertion of Blake’s place in the esoteric tradition, which Spector sees as central to the development of Blake’s myth.

Spector, Sheila A. “The Evolution of Blake’s Myth: Urizen’s Multiple Identities.” Translating Myth. Ed. Ben Pestell, Pietra Palazzolo, and Leon Burnett. Cambridge: Modern Humanities Research Association and Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2016. 60-100. <Blake (2024)>

Traces the development of Urizen through what she calls five phases of Blake’s myth, with references to Blake’s use of the Kabbalah.

Spector, Sheila A. “Hebraic Etymologies of Proper Names in Blake’s Myth.” Philological Quarterly 67 (1988): 345-63. <BBS 644>

On Hebrew roots of Blake’s names, including Rintrah, Urthona, and Enitharmon.

Spector, Sheila A. “The Reasons for ‘Urizen.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.4 (spring 1988): 147-49. <BBS 402>

Suggests that the name “Urizen” draws on the Hebrew word “razon,” and that The Book of Urizen echoes the word’s definition as offered in John Parkhurst’s An Hebrew and English Lexicon, without Points (1762; 4th ed. London, 1799).

Stevenson, W.H. “On the Nature of Blake’s Symbolism.” Texas Studies in Literature and Language 15.3 (1973): 445-60. <BB #A2759>

“Blake did not set out merely to clothe a line of thought or belief in symbolic disguise or ornament. He was a symbolist only because he could express himself in no other way. As he himself so often reiterated, his ‘fables’ are imaginative creations, not schematic devices. The same is true of his symbols; they are meant to appeal to the imagination, not to analysis” (445). Considers examples from Songs to Jerusalem.

Taniguchi, Shigeru. “The Vicissitudes of Spectres and the Development of Blake’s Myth.” Centre and Circumference: Essays in English Romanticism. Association of English Romanticism in Japan. Ed. Kenkichi Kamijima. Tokyo: Kirihara Shoten, 1995. 83-95. ⁴¹⁴ <WBHC 2233-34>

⁴¹⁴ Revised and translated from Taniguchi’s “The Four Zoas’ to ‘Milton’ ni okeru Spectres no ichi kosatsu: Counterpart to Negation nomondai [A Study of ‘Spectres’ in The Four Zoas and Milton: The Problem of ‘Counterpart’ and ‘Negation’],” Reitaku Daigaku Kiyo: Bulletin of Reitaku University 12 [1971], 140-58, <WBHC 2233-34>.

“The features, functions and roles of the spectres in The Four Zoas and Milton have thus changed in a dramatic way complying with the development of Blake’s myth itself” (94)” (WBHC 2233-34).

Vine, Steven. Blake’s Poetry: Spectral Visions. London: Macmillan; New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1993. <WBHC 2803-04>

“It is the purpose of this study to examine the shadowy ironies which gather round . . . [the ‘Reasoning Spectre’], and to consider how they relate to the divided energies of Blake’s poetics’ (xii)” (WBHC 2803). Vine considers most of the illuminated poetry, The Four Zoas, and a number of Notebook poems.

Volpone, Annalisa. “From out the Portals of My Brain’: William Blake’s Partus Mentis and Imaginative Regeneration.” Humanities 13.4 (2024): 13 pp.

“The article examines various instances of mental impregnation and parturition in William Blake’s works, specifically through Urizen, Los, Enitharmon, and the Nameless Shadowy Female” (2).

Wardle, J. “Blake’s Leutha.” English Language Notes 5.2 (1967): 105-06. <BB#2921>

“Derived from Leucothea, goddess of dawn” (BB#2921).

Warner, Nicholas O. “Blake’s Moon-Ark Symbolism.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 44-59. <BBS 390>

A detailed account of the image, which occurs in “one line in Milton, four pictures in Jerusalem, [and] a design from the Dante illustrations” (44).

Blake, Writers, and Publishers (Arranged by Period and Date of Death)

General \(Blake, Writers, and Publishers across Different Time Periods\)

Chambers, John. “Victor Hugo, James Merrill and William Blake: Three Visionaries, One Vision.” Victor Hugo’s Conversations with the Spirit World: A Literary Genius’s Hidden Life. 2nd ed. Rochester, VT: Destiny Books, 2008. <WBHC 1835>

De Groot, H.B. “The Ouroboros and the Romantic Poets: A Renaissance Emblem in Blake, Coleridge, and Shelley.” English Studies 50 (1970): 553-64. <BB #1473>

“Blake uses the traditional symbol of the snake with its tail by its mouth to ‘represent the natural and the earth-bound’ rather than the eternal’ (562)” (BB #1473).

Fuller, David. “Chaucer, Spenser, and Shakespeare.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 173-83. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Larrissy, Edward. “Blake and Postmodernism.” Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 254-73. <WBHC 2867-68>

Considers Blake in terms of Postmodern theory and his reception among Postmodern authors.

Lefcowitz, Barbara F. “Omnipotence of Thought and the Poetic Imagination: Blake, Coleridge, Rilke.” Psychoanalytic Review 59 (1972): 417-32. <BB #B2108, BBS 547>

Considers “A Poison Tree,” “Dejection: An Ode,” and “The Seventh ‘Duino Elegy’ and “Eingag” [‘Initiation’].” “[F]or the artist, [...] the re-created object is all there is and all there needs to be” (430). “A Poison Tree” “clearly demonstrates and resolves a hostile wish-fulfillment fantasy” (419).

McArthur, Murray Gilchrist. Stolen Writings: Blake's Milton, Joyce's Ulysses, and the Nature of Influence. Ann Arbor: U.M.I. Research Press, 1988. <BBS 566, WBHC 2385>

On Blake’s use of Milton in Milton, and how it shaped Joyce’s practices in his novel.

Pettersson, Bo. “Hypothetical Action: Poetry under Erasure in Blake, Dickinson and Eliot.” The Ethics of Literary Communication. Ed. Roger D. Sell, Adam Borch, and Inna Lindgren. Amsterdam: Benjamins, 2013. 129-45. <WBHC 2517-18>

“I have tried to show the techniques by which anything stated in the poems is hypothesized” (140).

Rainsford, Dominic. Authorship, Ethics and the Reader: Blake, Dickens, Joyce. Basingstoke: Macmillan; New York: St Martin’s Press, 1997. <WBHC 2569>

“It is about how Blake, Dickens, and Joyce ‘construct their ethical status as authors’” (WBHC 2570).

Tahyvildary, Negin. “Poetry and the Sensitive World: A Comparative Perspective on the Poetic Course of Sohrab Sepehry, Arthur Rimbaud, and William Blake.” New Readings 7 (2004): 28 pp. <WBHC 2738>

Sees parallels in Rimbaud and Blake for the twentieth-century Iranian poet and painter, Sohrab Sepehry: “Misunderstandings shadowed [Sepehry’s] career as a writer and artist[,] and it is now left to later generations to recognize his importance” (2).

Classical Writers (Before 450 c.e.)

General Studies

Fletcher, Joseph. William Blake as Natural Philosopher, 1788-1795. Anthem Press, 2021.⁴¹⁵ <Blake (2022, 2024, 2025)>

Examines Blake’s relationship to science and philosophy in his early illuminated books, making the case that he was a pantheist who rejected vitalism. Discusses Platonism, Aristotle, Bacon, Descartes, Newton, Locke, Priestley, and Darwin to suggest that Blake’s critique of their thought was ultimately tied to their dualism.

Aristotle (384-322 b.c.e) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution; The Marriage of Heaven and Hell; and [On Homers Poetry \[and\] On Virgil](#))

Irven, Donovan. “Joyce and Heidegger: Appropriations of the Past toward a New Philosophy of Transcendence.” College Literature 45.3 (summer 2018): 487-515. <Blake (2019)>

⁴¹⁵ Incorporates Fletcher’s “Ocean Growing: Blake's Two Versions of Newton and the Emerging Polypus,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.3 (winter 2015-16), 38 pars., <WBHC 1746>; “Unruly Children: Blake's Book of Urizen and Embryology's Break from Newtonian Law,” Essays in Romanticism 23.1 (2016), 113-32, <Blake (2016)>; and “Leibniz, the Infinite, and Blake's Early Metaphysics,” Studies in Romanticism 56.2 (summer 2017), 129-55, <Blake (2018)>.

A study of Aristotle's and Blake's influence on Stephen Dedalus in Ulysses: "Like two cartoon angels on either shoulder, Aristotle and William Blake serve as competitive models for Stephen" (490).

Prather, Russell. "William Blake and the Problem of Progression." Studies in Romanticism 46.4 (winter 2007): 507-40. <WBHC 2543>

On "how Aristotelian logic influences William Blake's fourfold conception of the human" and "how his manuscript epic The Four Zoas uses the figure of synecdoche to confound that logic" (507).

Rupert, Jane. "Reasoning and Knowing in Science and Poetry: Erasmus Darwin, Charles Darwin, and William Blake." Uneasy Relations: Reason in Literature and Science from Aristotle to Darwin and Blake. Milwaukee: Marquette University Press, 2010. <WBHC 2623>

"Blake saw myth, religion and poetry from a perspective made possible by the noetic faculty illuminating the imagination" (185).

Villalobos, John C. "A Possible Source for William Blake's "Great Code of Art."" English Language Notes 26.1 (1988): 36-40. <BBS 668>

Suggests a passage from Robert Lowth's Isaiah, A New Translation (1770) as a source for the phrase: "'Aristotle's Treatise on Poetry . . . still continues to be the Great Code of Criticism (37)" (BBS 668).

White, Harry. "Blake and the Mills of Induction." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 109-12. <BBS 381>

Noting the imagery of a rotating mill in the attacks of Bacon and others on Aristotle and medieval schoolmen, suggests that "[b]y encompassing the logic of experimentalism as well as that of Aristotle, [Blake's use of the] mill serves to deny the very distinctions it served to clarify in the new philosophy" (109-10).

White, Harry. "Cruel Holiness and Honest Virtue in the Works of William Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (fall 2006): 52-65. <WBHC 1704>

"What [Blake's] writings advance is not a normative but a descriptive ethic, detailing the nature of our ideas of good and evil, how they arise, the harmful effects they have on individuals, and why they inevitably lead to conflict" (52).

Cicero (106-43 b.c.e.) (See also Eighteen Heads of the Poets)

Jacobson, Howard. "Blake's Doors of Perception." Notes and Queries 49.4 (2002): 454-55. <WBHC 2203>

Suggests Lucretius and Cicero as sources for the phrase.

Moss, John G. "Structural Form in Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Humanities Association Bulletin 22.2 (1971): 9-18. <BB #2251>

"An impressive argument that Visions 'is meticulously arranged as a forensic [Ciceronian] oration' (12)" (BB #2251).

Democritus (c. 460-c. 370 b.c.e.)

Johnson, Mary Lynn. "Blake, Democritus and the 'Fluxions of the Atom': Some Contexts for Materialist Critiques." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 105-24. <WBHC 1869-71>

Considers the eighteenth-century recovery of atomism and materialism, with significant references to Democritus, Voltaire, Newton, Hutchison, and Priestley.

Demosthenes (383-322 b.c.e.) (See Eighteen Heads of the Poets)

Diogenes (412/408-323 b.c.e.)

Mazella, David. "Diogenes the Cynic in the Dialogues of the Dead of Thomas Brown, Lord Lyttleton, and William Blake." Texas Studies in Language and Literature 48.2 (2006): 102-22. <WBHC 2384>

"In Blake, [...] Diogenes holds a prophetic vocation that would strip away the accretions of the present moment to reveal the infinite and atemporal underneath" (119).

Epicurus (341-270 b.c.e.) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution)

Schouten de Jel, Joshua. Blake and Lucretius: The Atomistic Materialism of the Selfhood. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

Reexamines Blake's relationship to Lucretius by highlighting the reception history of Lucretius and Epicurus in eighteenth-century Britain. Schouten treats the annotations to Bacon, Reynolds, and Spurzheim; Europe; The Book of Thel; Visions of the Daughters of Albion; and The Book of Urizen.

Hesiod (See also John Flaxman, Compositions from the Works Days and Theogony of Hesiod)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Hesiod." Library 20 (1965): 315-20. <BB #1162>

An important account of the engravings, detailing Flaxman's role and the Longmans' account records, which refers to the set as "Blake's Hesiod."

Fosso, Kurt. "Blake's 'Introduction' and Hesiod's Theogony." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.1 (summer 2013): 9 pars. <WBHC 1736>

Argues that Blake alludes to the beginning of Theogony in the "Introduction" to Innocence.

Homer (See [Milton a Poem, On Homers Poetry \[and\] On Virgil, The Iliad of Homer Engraved from the Compositions of John Flaxman, Eighteen Heads of the Poets, and Annotations to Dante](#))

Essick, Robert N. "William Blake's The Death of Hector." Studies in Romanticism 27.1 (1988): 97-107. <BBS 466>

An account of the pencil sketch rediscovered when it was sold at Christie's in 1985. It is contextualized in terms of the Laocoön, Flaxman's illustrations of Homer, and The Sea of Time and Space.

Lucretius (99-55 b.c.e.) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution)

Jacobson, Howard. "Blake's Doors of Perception." Notes and Queries 49.4 (2002): 454-55. <WBHC 2203>

Suggests Lucretius and Cicero as sources for the phrase.

Schouten de Jel, Joshua. Blake and Lucretius: The Atomistic Materialism of the Selfhood. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

Reexamines Blake's relationship to Lucretius by highlighting the reception history of Lucretius and Epicurus in eighteenth-century Britain. Schouten treats the annotations to Bacon, Reynolds, and Spurzheim; Europe; The Book of Thel; Visions of the Daughters of Albion; and The Book of Urizen.

Ovid (43 b.c.e.-17 c.e.)

Antol, Éva. “‘Labour of Love’—Ovidian Flower-Figures in William Blake’s Songs.” Eger Journal of English Studies [Esterházy Károly College, Eger, Hungary] 8 (2008): 23-40. <WBHC 1557>

“I intend to map connections between Ovid’s Metamorphoses and William Blake’s Songs concentrating on their transformed anthropomorphic flower-figures” (24).

Miner, Paul. “Blake: The Birth of Los, Echoes from Hervey and Ovid.” Notes and Queries 58.4 (2011): 525-26. <WBHC 2411-12>

“Blake’s iconography of Los as an embryo in The Book of Los subtly revises James Hervey’s Meditations among the Tombs and Ovid’s Metamorphoses” (525).

Pache, Walter, and Ursula Salacki. “Blake and Ovid.” Blake Studies 4.1 (autumn 1971): 89-92. <BB #1218.56>

Traces the imagery of a vomiting serpent in “I saw a chapel all of gold” to Ovid’s Fasti.

Plato (428-23-348 b.c.e.) (See also \(Neo\)Platonism, Thomas Taylor, Illustrations to Milton)

Chayes, Irene Hendry. “Plato’s Statesman Myth in Shelley and Blake.” Comparative Literature 13 (1961): 358-69. <BB #1375>

Suggests that both Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound and Blake’s “Mental Traveller” allude to “the myth recounted in [Plato’s] Statesman” in which “there are two alternating cycles of order and disorder in the universe, the Age of Kronos, or Saturn, during which the motion of the world is directed by God himself, and the Age of Zeus, or Jupiter, in which the world, unguided, reverses its motion and revolves in the opposite direction” (360).

Colebrook, Claire. Blake, Deleuzian Aesthetics and the Digital. London and New York.: Continuum, 2012. <WBHC 1877-78>

Explores Blake using Deleuze, with much on Modernity, Plato, the body, and digital media.

Gould, Thomas. “Four Levels of Reality in Plato, Spinoza, and Blake.” Arion 7 (1969): 20-50. <BB #1717>

Although one lived in the flush of optimism about mathematical rationalism and the other at a time of the most profound reaction to such rationalism—and indeed, no one was ever more happy with logical thinking than Spinoza, or more unhappy with it than Blake—the similarities of their schemes when they are taken as rediscoveries of Plato’s vision are more impressive than the differences” (34).

Lesser, Harry. “Blake and Plato.” Philosophy 56.216 (1981): 223-30. <BBS 549>

“[T]here is a remarkable parallel between the vision of reality, the ‘philosophical myth’, of Plato and of Blake, obscured by differences in terminology, but once revealed capable of illuminating the work of both” (223). Compares them across several works by both.

Miner, Paul. “Blake: An Unrecognized Allusion to Plato.” Notes and Queries 58.1 (Mar. 2011): 61-63. <WBHC 2410>

The allusion is to Thomas Taylor’s translation of Timaeus.

Raine, Kathleen. “The Crested Cock.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967): 9-10. <BB #1217.6>

Identifies probable sources for “the crested Cock” (M 28 [30]: 24, E 126) in James Macpherson’s Introduction to the History of Great Britain and Ireland (1772) and Thomas Taylor’s Works of Plato (1804).

Raine, Kathleen. “The Little Girl Lost and Found and The Lapsed Soul.” The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 17-63.⁴¹⁶ <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

The first part reads “The Little Girl Lost” and “The Little Girl Found” as Platonic allegories of the soul, emphasizing the supposed influence of Porphyry and the translations of Plato and the Platonists by Thomas Taylor. The second part extends this analysis to the phrase, “the lapsed soul,” from the “Introduction” for Experience.

Shabetsi, Karen. “Blake’s Antifoundationalist Poetics.” SEL 27.4 (1987): 555-70. <BBS 636>

Uses largely Marriage to argue that “Blake uses perception as a language to destroy the ‘Platonic myth’ that he held responsible for the damaging metaphysics of his age” and that “Blake makes use of something like antifoundationalism to make room for his own sense-producing system” (564).

Socrates (See also Henry Crabb Robinson and Jerusalem)

Mellor, Anne K. “Physiognomy, Phrenology, and Blake’s Visionary Heads.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 53-74. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Lucidly explicates the phrenological theories of Johann Caspar Lavater, Franz Joseph Gall, and Johann Caspar Spurzheim, and offers a phrenological reading of Blake’s Visionary Heads.

Rovira, James. “The Moravian Origins of Kierkegaard’s and Blake’s Socratic Literature.” Kierkegaard, Literature, and the Arts. Ed. Eric Zolkowski. Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 2018. 239-60. <Blake (2019)>

A fascinating look at the parallels between Kierkegaard’s and Blake’s Moravian heritage and its impact on their conception of Socrates.

⁴¹⁶ Rpt. in Raine’s Blake and Tradition, <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>.

Sophocles (497/96-406/05 b.c.e.) (See also the Annotations to Sophocles)

Abley, Mark, and G.E. Bentley, Jr. “New Blake Documents: Job, Oedipus, and the Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.3 (winter 1987-88): 104-07. <BBS 402>

New references to Blake in the Ivimy manuscript of John Linnell (named Ivimy after the descendent, Joan Linnell Ivimy, who holds it), including reference to a young patron, Edward Denny and Linnell, Blake's viewing of John Dryden and Nat Lee's Oedipus at the Royal West London Theatre, the printing and reception of Job, and Eliza Aders purchase of Blake's works among which was Songs copy AA.

Downes, Margaret Josephine. “Benediction at Colonus: William Blake and the Vision of the Ancients.” Colby Library Quarterly 27. (1991): 175-83. <BBS 456>

Reads Oedipus at Colonus alongside Jerusalem, suggesting that Blake believed Sophocles' work was among “[t]he glories of the ancients' Golden Age” (174).

Virgil (70-19 b.c.e.) (See also [On Homers Poetry \[and\] On Virgil](#), Virgil Relief Etching, Drawings for the Pastorals of Virgil, Blake's Illustrations of Dante, Eighteen Heads of the Poets and the Annotations to Dante)

Wacker, Norman. “Epic and the Modern Long Poem: Virgil, Blake, & Pound.” Comparative Literature 42.2 (spring 1990): 126-43. <BBS 670>

How Blake and Pound rewrote the Virgilian epic.

Medieval Writers (450-1485)

Chaucer, Geoffrey (c. 1340s-1400) (See also Robert Hartley Cromeck, Thomas Stothard, Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims, Eighteen Heads of the Poets, The Prologue and Characters of Chaucer's Pilgrims, and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Innes, H. “Chaucer's Canterbury Pilgrims.” Mirror of Literature, Amusement, and Instruction. [London], 22 (21 Sep. 1833), 178-79. <WBHC 2189>

A reference to the sign painting of the Canterbury Pilgrims on the Tabard Inn painted by Blake.

Knight, Charles. “The Tabard.” London. London: Charles Knight & Co. 2 vols. 60.

“Immediately over this office, in the centre of the gallery, is a picture, said to be by ‘Blake,’ and ‘well painted,’ of the Canterbury Pilgrimage, though now so dirty or decayed that the subject itself is hardly discernible” (60).⁴¹⁷

“The Old Tabard Inn, Southwark.” The Building News and Engineering Journal 25 (1873): 694.

Quotes Knight, with additional commentary: “[I]n centre the of the gallery, there was a picture, said to be by Blake of the Canterbury Pilgrimage, though even at that date in so dirty and decayed a that the subject is scarcely discernible, though the Gentleman's Magazine, in 1812, pronounced it ‘a well painted picture.’ The thirty years which have since passed away, as might be expected, have not improved its condition, and it now so rotten that it seems likely to fall in pieces before the lease of the inn runs out" (694).

⁴¹⁷ Quoting the Gentleman's Magazine (1812).

P. “[Letter to Mr. Urban.]” The Gentleman’s Magazine 82 pt. 2. (1812): 216-17. <WBHC 2189>

An engraving of the Tabard Inn shows Blake’s painting of the sign.

“The Tabard Inn, High Street, Southwark.” Mirror of Literature, Amusement, and Instruction. [London], 8 (28 Oct. 1826), 265-66. <WBHC 2189>

An engraving of the Tabard Inn shows Blake’s painting of the sign.

Dante, Alighieri (1265-1321) (See [Blake’s Illustrations of Dante \[Omnibus\]](#), Eighteen Heads of the Poets, and the Annotations to Dante)

Hafez (1325-1390)

Oroskhan, Muhammad Hussein. “Devotional Mysticism: An Analogical Study of Hafez-e Shirazi and William Blake.” Theory and Practice in Language Studies 11.5 (May 2021): 475-80. <Blake \(2022\)>

Hafez-e Shirazi was a fourteenth-century Persian poet.

Hildegard of Bingen (1098-1179)

Kraft, Kent. “Hermetic Embodiment in Hildegard of Bingen and William Blake.” Proceedings of the Xth Congress of the International Comparative Literature Association New York, 1982. Ed. Anna Balakian and James J. Wilhem. New York, 1985. <BBS 541>

“He has discovered that ‘certain themes’ in Hildegard (1098-1179) and Blake, such as the relationship of microcosm and macrocosm in the symbolism of the Giant Man, ‘have roots in the occult/Hermetic tradition’ (551)” (BBS 541).

Rumi (1207-1273)

Muhammad, Sardar. “Man or Muse: Affinities in the Inspirational Roles of Rumi’s Shams and Blake’s Milton.” Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences 20.1 (Jun. 2012). <WBHC 2435>

Compares the roles of Shams Tabrizi (1185-1248), a Persian poet, and of John Milton as poetic and mystic mentors for Rumi and Blake.

Renaissance Writers and Publishers (1485-1642)

Ariosto, Ludovico (1474-1533) (See Lodovico Ariosto, Orlando Furioso)

Camões, Luis Vaz de (or Camoens) (1524?-80) (See Eighteen Heads of the Poets)

Cervantes, Saavedra, Miguel de (1547-1616) (See The Novelist’s Magazine)

Ercilla y Zúñiga, Alonso de (1533-94) (See Eighteen Heads of the Poets)

Greene, Robert (1558-1592)

Crossan, Greg. “‘Infant Sorrow’ and Robert Greene’s Menaphon.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 19.4 (spring 1986): 142-43. <BBS 399>

Suggests additional parallels beyond Blake’s echo of Greene’s opening: “The wanton smilde, father wept; / Mother cride, babie lept” (142).

Howard, Henry, Earl of Surrey (1517-1547)

Franson, J. Karl. “A Renaissance Source for Blake’s ‘Tyger.’” Notes and Queries 27.5 (1980): 413-15. <BBS 475>

Sees similar images and rhymes in the Henry Howard, the Earl of Surrey’s “Wyatt Resteth Here.”

Shakespeare, William (1564-1616) (See also John and Josiah Boydell, The Dramatic Works of Shakespeare, The Plays of William Shakespeare, the Illustrations to Shakespeare, and Poetical Sketches)

Beer, John. Blake’s Visionary Universe. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1969. <BB #1144>

A still useful examination of what Blake was trying to achieve with his mythic system. The designs for Job and Dante are considered as well as the illuminated poetry, and an appendix considers how Blake read Shakespeare.

MacPhee, Chantelle. “Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité: Shakespeare and Blake.” Upstart Crow 22 (2002): 51-62. <WBHC 2360>

Mainly on the allusions to Shakespeare in The French Revolution.

McCord, James. “Mixed Motives and Deadly Acts: Historical and Dramatic Character in William Blake’s King Edward the Third.” Eighteenth-Century Studies 19.4 (summer 1986): 480-501. <WBHC 2386>

On Blake’s imitation of Shakespeare: “Blake’s characters are fuller, and more credible and human than has been allowed, and [...] Blake was sensitive to Shakespearean achievements other than those defined technically as action, plot and conflict” (482).

Merchant, W. Moelwyn. “The Romantics.” Shakespeare and the Artist. London, New York, and Toronto: Oxford University Press, 1959. 77-94. <BB #2215>

Discusses Blake’s Shakespeare illustrations on pp. 81-86, with the chapter also addressing other Romantic illustrations of Shakespeare, including those by Henry Fuseli and John Martin. The previous chapter is on the Boydell Shakespeare project.

Miner, Paul. “Wild Blake’s Rewriting of ‘Wild’ Shakespeare.” Notes and Queries 64.1 (Mar. 2017): 33-38. <Blake (2018)>

“Blake wildly reconstructed Shakespearean contexts to suit his own literary strategies” (33).

Pietrini, Sandra, and Enrico Piergiacomi. “Analysing the Meta-Archive Arianna—‘shakespeariana’: Research and Teaching Opportunities with the Iconographical Database.” Humanities 8.2 (Jun. 2019). 16 pp. <Blake (2020)>

Some treatment of Blake’s illustrations to Shakespeare, particularly As If an Angel Dropped Down from the Clouds (1809) and Pity (1795), in a wider discussion regarding Shakespeariana a meta-database drawing together digital images of Shakespeare illustrations by many different artists.

Smith, J.A. “Telling Love: Twelfth Night in Samuel Richardson, Teresia Constantia Phillips, and William Blake.” Studies in Philology 112.1 (2015): 194-212. <WBHC 2686>

The Blake section discusses the Notebook poem, “Never Pain to Tell Thy Love,” in relationship to Shakespeare, Samuel Richardson, and “The Sick Rose.”

Spenser, Edmund (1552-1599) (See also Eighteen Heads of the Poets and The Characters in Spenser's Fairie Queene)

Introductions

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake, William.” The Spenser Encyclopedia. Ed. A.C. Hamilton et al. Toronto, Buffalo, London: University of Toronto Press, 1990. 94-96. <BBS 487>

A summary of Blake’s allusions to and his depictions of Spenser and his works.

Studies

Dixon, Jeffrey John. The Glory of Arthur: The Legendary King in Epic Poems of Layamon, Spenser and Blake. Jefferson, NC: McFarland and Company, 2014. 1-23, 26-32, 35-41, 73-80, 171-82. <WBHC 1954>

Highlights Spenser’s influence, “The Ancient Britons,” and A Descriptive Catalogue (1809).

Gleckner, Robert F. Blake and Spenser. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 1985. <BBS 486, WBHC 2080-81>

The classic study of the figures that remains the most extensive to date. Discusses Blake’s allusion to Spenser in his poetry; suggests Spenser’s influence on The Book of Thel and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell; analyzes the painting, The Characters in Spenser's Fairie Queene; and highlights Spenser’s influence on Blake’s notions of allegory and vision.

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake's 'I Saw a Chapel All of Gold.'” Colby Library Quarterly 15 (1979): 36-47. <BBS 487>

Suggests that the poem was influenced by Edmund Spenser’s “The Ruins of Time” (1591).

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake's Miltonizing of Chatterton.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 27-29.⁴¹⁸ <BBS 382>

Highlights echoes of Chatterton and Spenser in Marriage, which becomes “merely the vehicle for Blake’s manipulation of Milton” (28-29).

Gleckner, Robert F. “Edmund Spenser and Blake's Printing House in Hell.” South Atlantic Quarterly 81 (1982): 311-22. <BBS 487>

Suggests Blake’s source for the Printing House in Hell section of Marriage is Book II of The Faeirie Queene.

Hadfield, Andrew. “William Blake, Edmund Spenser, and William Kent.” Notes and Queries 44.2 (1997): 207-10. <WBHC 2112>

⁴¹⁸ A shorter version of his argument is found in Gleckner’s Blake and Spenser (1985).

Countering Gleckner's dismissal of the designs in Blake and Spenser, contends that "Blake may have known the edition of Spenser edited by Thomas Birch with 32 plates after William Kent (1751) as shown by the 'possible parallels' in his own designs" (WBHC 2112).

Spector, Sheila. "Tiriel as Spenserian Allegory Manqué." Philological Quarterly 71.3 (1992): 313-35. <WBHC 2698>

"Hebrew etymologies are used to bolster the claim that 'Tiriel exists as a negative response to Spenser's Legende of the Knight of the Red Crosse, or of Holinesse' (315)" (WBHC 2698).

Wagenknecht, David. Blake's Night: William Blake and the Idea of Pastoral. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1973.⁴¹⁹ <BB #A2908, WBHC 2822-23>

On the influence of Edmund Spencer and John Milton on Blake's depictions of the pastoral.

Tasso, Torquato (1544-95) (See Eighteen Heads of the Poets)

Adlard, John. "Tasso and the Cock and the Lion in Blake's Milton." Symposium 20 (1966): 5-6. <BB #793>

The cock and the lion [in Milton pl. 28 [30].23-28, E 126] seem to be the result of a fusion, in Blake's mind, of Tasso, Agrippa and Milton" (6).

Seventeenth-Century Writers and Publishers (1643-1699)

General Studies

Cox, Philip T. "Blake, Marvell, and Milton: A Possible Source for a Proverb of Hell." Notes and Queries 38.3 (1991): 292-93. <BBS 443>

Traces Marriage's "Bring out number weight & measure" to Marvell's "On Mr. Milton's Paradise Lost."

Morton, A.L. The Everlasting Gospel: A Study of the Sources of William Blake. 1958. New York: Haskell, 1966. <BB #2251, BBS 579, WBHC 2430>

An effort to tie Blake to seventeenth-century sects, notably the Ranters. Helped to shape the view of Blake by historians such as E.P. Thompson and Christopher Hill.

Rajan, Tilottoma. "The Other Reading: Transactional Epic in Milton, Blake, and Wordsworth." Milton, the Metaphysicals, and Romanticism. Ed. Lisa Low and Anthony Harding. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 20-46. <WBHC 2570>

Considers Blake's and Wordsworth's response to Milton: "Blake's texts do not resemble Paradise Lost stylistically, although 'Milton' is central to his struggle with his spectre, and more obliquely to his struggle with an epic vision that is open to historical revision" (42).

⁴¹⁹ Excerpted in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 171-79, <BBS 415>, and William Blake: Comprehensive Research and Study Guide, ed. Harold Bloom (2003), 72-74, <WBHC 1766-70>.

Rosso, George Anthony, Jr. "Newton's Pantocrator and Blake's Recovery of Miltonic prophecy." Milton, the Metaphysicals, and Romanticism. Ed. Lisa Low and Anthony Harding. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 47-64. <WBHC 2611>

Examines Blake's development of prophecy in relationship to Newton and Milton.

Thompson, E. P. Witness Against the Beast: William Blake and the Moral Law. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1993. ⁴²⁰ <WBHC 2761-66>

A key study of Blake in relationship to antinomian thought, although Thompson's claim to connect Blake to the Muggletonians, a seventeenth-century antinomian sect, through his mother has been disproven by Keri Davies's "William Blake's Mother."

Titleslad, P.J.H. "The 'pretty young man Civility': Bunyan, Milton, and Blake and Patterns of Puritan Thought." Bunyan Studies 6 (1995-96): 35-43. <WBHC 2771>

Briefly touches on Blake and "The Everlasting Gospel" (pp. 41-42) in discussing Puritan notions of civility.

Titlestad, Peter. "William Blake: The Ranters and the Marxists." English Academy Review 21.1 (Dec.2004): 118-29. <WBHC 2771>

On Blake's relationship to seventeenth-century groups, like the Ranters, and the British Marxists, like Thomson, who pushed this connection.

Behn, Aphra (1640-1649)

Michael, Jennifer Davis. "Behn, Bysshe, and the Blakes: Bibliomancy and the Joys of Unbinding." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 89-109. <Blake (2025)>

Considers Catherine Blake's practice of bibliomancy recorded in the Notebook in order to examine it as a "space containing several genres" and as "thus record[ing] a palimpsest of acts of excision which are also acts of pleasure" (abstract).

Bunyan, John (1628-1688) (See also Illustrations to John Bunyan's The Pilgrim's Progress and The Man Sweeping the Interpreter's Parlour)

Collé-Bak, Nathalie. "Spiritual Transfers: William Blake's Iconographic Treatment of John Bunyan's The Pilgrim's Progress." Bunyan Studies 16 (2012): 32-51. <WBHC 1880>

"In his iconographic representation of the pilgrimage of Christian and his companion, Blake acts somewhat like Bunyan's Interpreter, 'taking us by the hand' and showing us 'things rare, and profitable,' and helping us unveil the meaning of the coded scenes presented to us, thereby opening our eyes unto some of the visionary potential of the spiritual text" (49). Also includes a detailed comparison of the Keynes 1941 edition and the Heritage 1942 edition.

McCord, James. "All Human Forms Identified: William Blake's Illustrations to The Pilgrim's Progress." CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (1986): 87-100. <BBS 434-35>

⁴²⁰ Pp. 146-61 rpt. in William Blake, ed. John Lucas (1998), 27-42, <WBHC 2349>. Pp. 106-14 rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005), <WBHC 2217-18>.

“Blake takes strong critical issue with Bunyan’s particular use of allegory” (87).

Sato, Hikari. “The Devil’s Progress: Blake, Bunyan, and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Eibungaku Kenkyū, Nihon Eibungakkai: Studies in English Literature [The English Literary Society of Japan] 78 (2002): 121-46. <WBHC 2639>

“In this essay I would like to demonstrate that The Pilgrim’s Progress is one of the satirical targets in The Marriage and discuss the ambivalent relationship between Blake and Bunyan” (123).

Crashaw, Richard (1612-1649)

Pearcy, Roy J. “Blake’s Tyger and Richard Crashaw’s Paraphrase of Thomas of Celano’s Dies Irae.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.4 (spring 1974): 80-81. <BB #1217.136>

“Crashaw’s ‘Hymn’ helps us, I think, to recognize that imaginative power to fuse time functioning in ‘The Tyger’” (81).

Donne, John (1572-1631) (See also John Donne, The Poetical Works)

Davies, Damian Walford. “Blake, Donne, and Death.” Notes and Queries 43.1 (1996): 40-41. <WBHC 1923>

“The source of ‘I cannot consider death as anything but a removing from one room to another’ is in Donne, ‘Of the Progress of the Soul’ [though of course others said the same thing]” (WBHC 1923).⁴²¹

Kremen, Kathryn R. “Blake’s Fourfold Resurrection and Christianity of the Imagination.” The Imagination of the Resurrection: The Poetic Continuity of a Religious Motif in Donne, Blake, and Yeats. Lewisburg, 1972. <BB #2080>

“A reading of the theological passages in Blake” (BB #2080).

Lindsay, Jack. “Donne and Blake.” TLS (24 Jul. 1937): 544. <BB #2129>

I do not think the influence of Nonconformity on William Blake has been sufficiently realized” (BB #2129).

Milton, John (1608-1674) (See also The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Milton a Poem, and [Illustrations to Milton \[Omnibus\]](#))

Introduction

Rosso, G. A. “Milton.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 184-91. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Apesos, Anthony. “Taking Dictation: Plates 5 and 10 of Blake’s The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.1 (2017): 159-72. <Blake (2018)>

Considers designs depicting dictation and what they mean for Blake’s depiction of Milton, both here and in Milton.

⁴²¹ Bentley’s comment in brackets.

Bindman, David. "Blake's 'Gothicised Imagination' and the History of England." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 29-49. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

On Blake's history paintings and their depictions of medieval England, with references to his time as an apprentice in Westminster Abbey, the medieval designs in the Notebook, and Milton's History of Britain.

Bloom, Harold. "Milton and William Blake: The Human Form Divine." Take Arms against a Sea of Troubles: The Power of the Reader's Mind over a Universe of Death. <Blake (2021)>

Bloom's last reflections on two figures who dominated his work, with comments as well on Northrop Frye, T.S. Eliot, and William Hayley. Quoting plate 41 of Milton, Bloom writes, "If that should be my final quotation from Blake, I am content" (158).

Brisman, Leslie. "Blake and the Eternals' Time." Milton's Poetry of Choice and Its Romantic Heirs. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1973. 192-212. <BB #A1282>

Read the later epics, and particularly Los's relationship to the Spectre and the Fallen World, as elaborations on the Son's rejection of Satan from the pinnacle of the Temple in Paradise Regained.

Castanedo, Fernando. "Blake: Milton Had 'Odd Feelings'—Rather Than None." Notes and Queries 64.4 (Dec. 2017): 549-50. <Blake (2018)>

Suggests that Blake wrote "odd" rather than "no" in the description of Milton's feelings in Island.

Curran, Stuart. "The Mental Pinnacle: Paradise Regained and the Romantic Four Book Epic." Calm of Mind: Tercentenary Essays on Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes in Honor of John S. Diekhoff. Ed. Joseph Anthony Wittreich, Jr. Cleveland: Press of Case Western Reserve University, 1971. 133-62. <BBS 446>

Suggests that Jerusalem's four-book structure is drawn from Paradise Regained.

Davies, J.M.Q. Blake's Milton Designs: The Dynamics of Meaning. West Cornwall: Locust Hill Press, 1993.⁴²² <WBHC 1925-27>

A key study of the illustrations to Milton with close attention to the designs and their relationship to Milton's poetry.

⁴²² Incorporates Davies's "Attempting to be More than Man we Become Less": Blake's Comus Designs and the Two Faces of Milton's Puritanism," Durham University Journal 81 (1989), 197-219, <BBS 448-49, WBHC 1925>; "Blake's Paradise Lost Designs Reconsidered," Imagining Romanticism, ed. Deirdre Coleman and Peter Otto (1992), 143-81, <BBS 440, WBHC 1878>; "Apollo's 'Naked Human Form Divine': The Dynamics of Meaning in Blake's Nativity Ode Designs," Blake and His Bibles, ed. David V. Erdman (1990), 3-40, <BBS 462-63, WBHC 1989-90>; and "Embraces are Cominglings": Passion and Apocalypse in Blake's Paradise Regained Designs," Durham University Journal 74 (1981), 75-96, <BBS 449, WBHC 1927>.

DiSalvo, Jackie. War of Titans: Blake's Critique of Milton and the Politics of Religion. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Press, 1984. ⁴²³ <BBS 454, WBHC 1949-50>

On Blake's relationship to Milton and especially that of Paradise Lost to The Four Zoas (but not Milton).

DiSalvo, Jackie. “William Blake on the Unholy Alliance: Freedom and Godly Repression in Liberal Society.” Wordsworth Circle 3.4 (1972): 212-22. <BB #A1492>

About Blake's rejection of Milton's political theory in The Four Zoas.

Erdman, David V. “Milton! Thou Shouldst Be Living.” Wordsworth Circle 19.1 (1988): 2-8. <BBS 463>

Considers Blake's and Wordsworth's invocation of Milton against the backdrop of the political events of 1802.

Erle, Sibylle. “‘And I gave it to my foe’: Deadly Games of Creation in Blake’s The [First] Book of Urizen and ‘A Poison Tree.’” Prudent Crossings: From Milton’s Paradise to Canada’s Bush Gardens. Ed. Alessandra Boller et al. Augsburg: Wißner-Verlag 2023. 21-38. <Blake (2024)>

An important consideration of Blake's depiction of creation and the fall, his use of Milton, and Urizen's relationship to Satan, with commentary on Marriage and The Ancient of Days as well as the poems mentioned in the title.

Esterhammer, Angela. Creating States: Studies in the Performative Language of John Milton and William Blake. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1994. <WBHC 2006-07>

On Milton's and Blake's use of performative language, with the Blake section highlighting the Songs, Marriage, Urizen, and Jerusalem.

Fisch, Harold. “Blake’s Miltonic Moment.” William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 36-56. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

“I shall endeavor to define rather more narrowly than has been customary hitherto the nature of the affinity between Blake and Milton” (36); “[Blake] joins with [Milton] to divide” (52).

Fresch, Cheryl H. “Milton and Blake: Visualizing the Expulsion.” All in All”: Unity, Diversity, and the Miltonic Perspective. Ed. Charles W. Durham and Kristin A. Pruitt. Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 1999. 156-73. <WBHC 2031>

On visual images that shaped Milton's and Blake's portrayals of the Fall.

Furman-Adams, Wendy, and Virginia James Tufte. “Anticipating Empson: Henry Fuseli’s Re-Vision of Milton’s God.” Milton Quarterly 35.4 (2001): 258-74. <WBHC 2995>

⁴²³ Incorporates DiSalvo's “Blake encountering Milton,” Milton and the Line of Vision, ed. Joseph Wittreich (1975), 143-84, <BBS 454>, and “‘Historical Fact . . . Written by Inspiration’: The Epic Vision of Blake’s Four Zoas,” Blake & Criticism (1982), 236-72, <BBS 375-76>.

Contrasts Fuseli's and Blake's depictions of God, Satan, and the creation of Eve in their illustrations of Paradise Lost.

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake’s ‘Double Dark Vision of Torment’ Unfolded: Innocence to Jerusalem.” South Atlantic Quarterly 95.3 (1996): 699-728. <WBHC 2081>

On the echoes of Milton.

Goldsmith, Steven. “‘Cracked Across’: Blake, Milton, and the Noise of History.” Studies in Romanticism 51.3 (fall 2012): 305-42. <WBHC 2088>

Considers the influence of Samson Agonistes, and asks why Blake never illustrated it.

Hazen, James. “Blake’s Tyger and Milton’s Beasts.” Blake Studies 3.2 (1971): 163-70. <BB #1218.46>

“Perhaps ‘the animal imagery of Paradise Lost is an important source of Blake’s poem’ (165)” (BB #1217.46).

Jackson, J.R. de J. “Milton.” Poetry of the Romantic Period. London, Boston, and Henley: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1980. 235-45. The Routledge History of English Poetry. Vol. 4. <BBS 523>

A summary of the poem, highlighting Blake’s engagement with Milton and his legacy.

John, Donald. “Romantic Regeneration: Blake, Creation, and the Constitutive Imagination.” Temenos Academy Review 9 (2006): 189-206. <WBHC 2211>

Focused largely on Jerusalem, examines Blake’s idea of creation and theodicy, comparing his thought to Milton, Boehme, and William King (1650-1729).

Kiralis Karl. “Blake’s Criticism of Milton’s L’Allegro and Il Penseroso and of its Author.” Milton Reconsidered: Essays in Honour of Arthur E. Barker. Ed. John Karl Franson. Salzburg: Insititut für Sprache und Literatur Universität Salzburg, 1976. 46-77. <BBS 536>

“Blake thought Milton by no means ready for the role of poet-prophet on the strength of these companion poems” (47).

Lewis, Linda. The Promethean Politics of Milton, Blake, and Shelley. Columbia and London: University of Missouri Press, 1992. <BBS 550, WBHC 2321-22>

On the politics of the mythic systems found in Paradise Lost, The Four Zoas, and Prometheus Unbound.

Miner, Paul. “Blake: Re-Visioning Book Six of Paradise Lost.” Notes and Queries 61.4 (Nov. 2014): 486-94. <WBHC 2416>

Newly found allusions to Milton.

Miner, Paul. “Blake’s ‘Tyger’ as Miltonic Beast.” Studies in Romanticism 47.4 (2008): 479-505. <WBHC 2414>

On Miltonic echoes in “The Tyger” and Blake’s other works.

Palieraqui, Mariana dos Reis. “O paralelo entre John Milton e William Blake: aspectos estéticos em Milton a partir de Paradise Lost”, in Caderno de Anais da XV Semana de Letras do CPAN, (org. Carlos Eduardo de Araujo Placido), Campo Grande: Editora Universidade Federal de Mato Grosso do Sul, 2024. 32-40. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese).<Blake (2025)>

(“Ultimately, the challenge for the reader of Blake stems from the difficulties associated with interpreting his narration’s mythological pantheon—and their symbolic meanings—alongside his own textual dialogue with Paradise Lost”) (abstract).

Sandler, Florence. “The Iconoclastic Enterprise: Blake’s Critique of ‘Milton’s Religion.’” Blake Studies 5.1 (fall 1972): 13-57.⁴²⁴ <BB #1218.67, BBS 631>

On Blake’s critique of Milton’s religion in Milton and in other works.

Shears, Jonathon. “Blake.” The Romantic Legacy of Paradise Lost: Reading Against the Grain. Farnham and Burlington: Ashgate, 2009. 59-81. <WBHC 2671-72>

On Blake’s relationship to Milton and Paradise Lost in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell and Milton a Poem.

Sturrock, June. “Eve, Eden, and the Flowers of Experience: Milton, Blake, and Botany.” Renaissance Ecology: Imagining Eden in Milton’s England. Ed. Ken Hiltner. Pittsburgh: Duquesne University Press, 2008. 91-105. <WBHC 2715>

On the influence of Paradise Lost on the flowery imagery of the Songs, with some references to Erasmus Darwin.

Tayler, Irene. “Say First! What Mov’d Blake? Blake’s Comus Designs and Milton.” Blake’s Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 233-58.⁴²⁵ <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Considers why Blake illustrated Comus when he did: “What [Blake] found in Comus was a kind of Dream in one Night, a story of temptation and release deeply appealing to his own visionary grasp of one of man’s major patterns of experience” (248).

Tolley, Michael J. “Europe: ‘To Those Ychain’d in Sleep.’” Blake’s Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 115-45. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

An important reading of the poem incorporating the designs and tracing many allusions to Milton’s On the Morning of Christ’s Nativity.

⁴²⁴ Rpt. in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 33-55, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

⁴²⁵ Developed from Tayler’s “Blake’s Comus Designs,” Blake Studies 4.2 (spring 1972), 45-80, <BB #1218.60>.

Wagenknecht, David. Blake's Night: William Blake and the Idea of Pastoral. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1973.⁴²⁶ <BB #A2908, WBHC 2822-23>

On the influence of Edmund Spencer and John Milton on Blake's depictions of the pastoral.

Wanderlinde, William Weber, and Maria Rita Drumond Viana. “O Diabo em O casamento do céu e do inferno de William Blake: confluências com a recepção do Satã de Paraíso perdido no século XVIII”. Anuário de Literatura 29 (2024): 1-21. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2025)>

“This article aims to analyze how the Devil is depicted in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790), written by English writer William Blake, mainly by comparing it with readings of the character Satan, from John Milton’s Paradise Lost (1667)” (abstract).

Whittaker, Jason. “The Matter of Britain: Blake, Milton and the Ancient Britons.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 186-200. <WBHC 1866-69>

On Milton’s History of Britain as a source for Jerusalem.

Whittaker, Jason. “‘The poetical vigour of history’: Blake’s use of Milton’s History of Britain.” Blake Journal 8 (2004): 50-63. <WBHC 1753>

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. Angel of Apocalypse: Blake's Idea of Milton. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1975.⁴²⁷ <BB #A2993, BBS 682, WBHC 2875-76>

An important study of Milton’s influence on Blake that considers Blake’s portrayals of Milton, the illustrations, and Milton.

Wittreich, Jr., Joseph Anthony. “The Illustrious Dead': Milton's Legacy and Romantic Prophecy.” Milton and the Romantics 4.1 (1980): 17-32.⁴²⁸ <BBS 682-83, WBHC 2876>

“Together Blake and Wordsworth may epitomize the possibilities of prophecy in the Romantic age’ (20)” (BBS 683).

Wittreich, Jr., Joseph Anthony. “Opening the Seals: Blake’s Epics and the Miltonic Tradition.” Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 23-58. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

⁴²⁶ Excerpted in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 171-79, <BBS 415>, and William Blake: Comprehensive Research and Study Guide, ed. Harold Bloom (2003), 72-74, <WBHC 1766-70>.

⁴²⁷ Incorporates Wittreich’s “Divine Countenance': Blake's Portrait and Portrayal of Milton,” Huntington Library Quarterly 38 (1975), 125-60, <BB #A2995, BBS 682>; “William Blake: Illustrator Interpreter of Paradise Regained,” Calm of Mind: Tercentenary Essays on Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes, in Honour of John S. Diekhoff, ed. Joseph Anthony Wittreich, Jr. (Cleveland and London, 1971), 93-132, <BB #2999, BBS 683>; “Sublime Allegory’: Blake’s Epic Manifesto and the Milton Tradition,” Blake Studies 4.2 (1972), 15-44, <BB #1218.59>; and “Domes of Mental Pleasure: Blake's Epics and Hayley's Epic Theory,” Studies in Philology 69.1 (1972), 101-29, <BB #B2995, BBS 682>.

⁴²⁸ Rpt. in John Milton: Twentieth Century Perspectives, Volume I: The Man and the Author, ed. J. Martin Evans (New York: Routledge, 2003), 313-28, <WBHC 2876>.

Examines Milton's influence across all of Blake poetry: "Milton—more so than any other poet—taught Blake what it meant to be a revolutionary artist" (56).

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony. "The Poetry of the Rainbow: Milton and Newton among the Prophets." Poetic Prophecy in Western Literature. Ed. Jan Wojcik and Raymond-Jean Frontain. Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck: Farleigh Dickinson University Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1984. 94-105.

On the conjunction of Milton and Newton in the Romantic era, with significance references to Blake.

More, Henry \(1614-1687\)

Cooper, Andrew M. A Bastard Kind of Reasoning: William Blake and Geometry. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2023.⁴²⁹ <Blake (2024, 2025)>

An ambitious study of Blake and Newton that seeks to challenge the relationship of Blake and Newton expressed in Donald Ault's Visionary Physics (1974). Cooper reads the Newton print, A Vision of the Last Judgment, and most of the illuminated books in relationship to Joseph Priestley, David Hartley, Henry More, George Berkeley, and many twentieth-century scientists, providing many diagrams to illustrate Blake's cosmological ideas.

Hoagwood, Terrence Allan. "The Four Zoas and 'The Philosophick Cabbala.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.2 (fall 1978): 87-90. <BBS 385>

Suggests that "The Philosophick Cabbala" [by the Cambridge Platonist, Henry More (1614-87)] furnishes a long series of parallels to The Four Zoas" (90).⁴³⁰

Quarles, Francis \(1592-1644\) \(See also Composite Art and Gates of Paradise\)

Höltgen, Karl Josef. "Religious Emblems (1809) by John Thurston and Joseph Thomas, and its Links with Francis Quarles and William Blake." Emblematica 10 (1996 [1999]): 107-43. <WBHC 2162>

A revised version can be found online at "William Blake and the Emblem Tradition." (Feb. 2002). This also includes a "Biographical Note" on Joseph Thomas (1765-1811).

Miner, Paul. "Francis Quarles's Influence on Europe 11." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.4 (spring 2014): 5 par. <WBHC 1739-40>

Suggests that Blake used emblem 15 from Quarles's Emblems, Divine and Moral (1635) in Europe pl. 11.

Taylor, John \(1583-1653\) \(See also An Island in the Moon\)

Frost, Everett Calvin. "William Blake's John Taylor." Notes and Queries 26.1 (1979): 48-49. <BBS 476>

⁴²⁹ Incorporates "two or three pages" of Cooper's "Small Room for Judgment: Geometry and Prolepsis in Blake's 'Infant Sorrow,'" European Romantic Review 31.2 (2020), 129-55, and "material amounting to maybe ten pages from" Cooper's William Blake and the Productions of Time (Ashgate 2013/Routledge 2016).

⁴³⁰ Note that More is appropriating "Cabbala" here to describe his own expositions of Genesis. See "The Preface to the Reader."

Identifies the John Taylor mentioned in Island and suggests that the “Introduction” to Songs of Experience “might well have” (48) echoed the opening of Taylor’s Urania.

Vaughan, Henry (1621-1695)

Sturrock, June. “Lark, Wild Thyme, Crowing Cock, and Waterfall: The Natural, the Moral, and the Political in Blake, Milton and Vaughan’s Silex Scintillans.” Of Paradise and Light: Essays on Henry Vaughan and John Milton in Honor of Alan Rudrum. Ed. Donald R. Dickson and Holly Faith. Newark: Delaware University Press, 2004. 329-50. <WBHC 2715-16>

Compares Vaughan’s Silex Scintillans and Blake’s Milton, especially in their representation of nature.

Winstanley, Gerrard (1609-1676) (See also Political and Historical Criticism)

Rowland, Christopher. “Anticipating Postsecularity. The Routledge Handbook of Postsecularity. Ed. Justin Beaumont. Abingdon: Routledge, 2018. <Blake (2019)>

Examines how Gerrard Winstanley and William Blake anticipated “elements of postsecularity today” (abstract).

Rowland, Christopher. “The Common People and the Bible: Winstanley, Blake and Liberation Theology.” Winstanley and the Diggers, 1649-1999. Ed. Andrew Bradstock. London and Portland, OR: Frank Cass, 2000. 149-60.⁴³¹ <WBHC 2618>

On Blake and Winstanley as Christian radicals (149).

Rowland, Christopher. “‘From impulse not from rules’: William Blake’s Apocalyptic Pedagogy.” Radical Prophet: The Mystics, Subversives and Visionaries Who Strove for Heaven on Earth. London: I. B. Tauris, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

“This chapter covers familiar themes in Blake scholarship: prophecy, of course, but also the place of Law, the centrality of ‘Contraries,’ Blake’s juxtaposition of texts and images, and how his work fits into the story of Christian radicalism” (99). The chapter is also part of a section dedicated to comparing Blake and Gerrard Winstanley.

Eighteenth-Century Writers and Publishers (1700-1785)

Introduction

Duff, David. “The Eighteenth Century and Romanticism.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 192-99. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

General Studies

Clark, Steve. “Yet I am an identity / I wish feel & weep & groan”: Blake’s Sentimentalism as (Peri) Performative.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 163-85. <WBHC 1801-03>

A Queer reading of the sentimental tradition that considers Tharmas and Enion in Night the First of The Four Zoas alongside Alexander Pope’s Eloisa to Abelard and the Notebook and Pickering Manuscript poems alongside Della Cruscan poetry of the 1780s.

⁴³¹ Originally published with the same title in Prose Studies 22.2 (1999), 149-60. Not recorded in WBHC.

Cooper, Andrew M. A Bastard Kind of Reasoning: William Blake and Geometry. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2023.⁴³² <Blake (2024, 2025)>

An ambitious study of Blake and Newton that seeks to challenge the relationship of Blake and Newton expressed in Donald Ault's Visionary Physics (1974). Cooper reads the Newton print, A Vision of the Last Judgment, and most of the illuminated books in relationship to Joseph Priestley, David Hartley, Henry More, George Berkeley, and many twentieth-century scientists, providing many diagrams to illustrate Blake's cosmological ideas.

Hartman, Geoffrey H. "Blake and the 'Progress of Poesy'." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 57-68.⁴³³ <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

Considers the season poems from Poetical Sketches in the eighteenth-century tradition of the Progress of Poesy.

Hilton, Nelson. "What has Songs to do with Hymns?" Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin's Press, 1999. 96-113. <WBHC 1863-65>

A critically sophisticated analysis of how Blake's Songs utilized the conventions of eighteenth-century hymnody, with discussions of Isaac Watts, John and Charles Wesley, John Newton, William Cowper, Phillip Doddridge, and the Muggletonians and focusing at greatest length on "To Tizrah."

Jackson, Wallace. "The Grounding of the Songs." Approaches to Teaching Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience. Ed. Robert F. Gleckner and Mark L. Greenberg. New York: Modern Language Association, 1989. 109-14. <BBS 488-89, WBHC 2083-84>

On Blake's relationship to the "Pre-Romantic" poetry of Gray, Collins, Warton, and Goldsmith. A useful introduction to the topic.

Lowery, Margaret. Windows of the Morning. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1940. <BB #2149, WBHC 2347>

Despite its age, a key study of Poetical Sketches and of Blake's early literary influences.

Mazella, David. "Diogenes the Cynic in the Dialogues of the Dead of Thomas Brown, Lord Lyttleton, and William Blake." Texas Studies in Language and Literature 48.2 (2006): 102-22. <WBHC 2384>

"In Blake, [...] Diogenes holds a prophetic vocation that would strip away the accretions of the present moment to reveal the infinite and atemporal underneath" (119).

⁴³² Incorporates "two or three pages" of Cooper's "Small Room for Judgment: Geometry and Prolepsis in Blake's 'Infant Sorrow,'" European Romantic Review 31.2 (2020), 129-55, <Blake (2024)>, and "material amounting to maybe ten pages from" Cooper's William Blake and the Productions of Time (Ashgate 2013/Routledge 2016), <WBHC 1886>.

⁴³³ Rpt. in Hartman's Beyond Formalism: Literary Essays 1957-1970 (New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1970), 193-205.

Parisi, Frank M. "Emblems of Morality: For Children: The Gates of Paradise." Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 70-110. <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

A useful essay that examines the designs "in comparison with traditional and contemporary analogues" (73-74) in poetry (including Young, Harvey, and Blair); visual art (including emblems and designs by Thomas Bewick); and Blake's other works.

Pinto, Vivian de Sola. "William Blake, Isaac Watts, and Mrs. Barbauld." The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 66-87. <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

An early, detailed account of the echoes of Watts and Barbauld in the Songs.

Radner, John B. "The Youthful Harlot's Curse: The Prostitute as a Symbol of the City in 18th-Century English Literature." Eighteenth-Century Life 2 (1976): 59-64. <BBS 611>

Considers depictions of prostitutes in "Goldsmith, Fielding, Wordsworth, and Blake" (BBS 611).

Smallwood, Philip. "Tension, Contraries, and Blake's Augustan Values." Paper, Ink, and Achievement: Gabriel Hornstein and the Revival of Eighteenth-Century Scholarship. Ed. Kevin L. Cope and Cedric D. Reverand II. Lewisburg, PA: Bucknell University Press, 2021. 176-91. <Blake (2022)>

On Blake's use of Augustan-era writers and conventions, from Dryden to Johnson.

Stock, R.D. "Religious Love and Fear in Late Eighteenth Century Poetry: Smart, Wesley, Cowper, Blake." The Holy and the Daemonic from Sir Thomas Browne to William Blake. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. Princeton: Prince Legacy Library, 2014. 314-73. <BBS 467, WBHC 2709-10>

Considers Blake largely as an eighteenth-century religious poet, dismissing Milton and Jerusalem as "but supplementary" (370).

Vogler, Thomas A. "Troping the Seasons: Blake's Helio- Poetics and the 'Golden Load.'" Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake's Poetical Sketches. Ed. Mark L. Greenberg. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1996. 105-52. <WBHC 2104-05>

On Blake's allusions to seventeenth- and eighteenth-century poetry and its meaning, with many references to Gleckner's Blake's Prelude: "Poetical Sketches" (1982).

Wilson, Mona. "The Twilight of the Augustans." Empire Review 45 (1927): 509-17.⁴³⁴ <BB #941>

"An excellent general essay on Blake and the critical tradition of Johnson, the Wartons, et al." (BB #941).

⁴³⁴ Also rpt. in Living Age 343 (1927), 338-43, and in Essays and Studies 20 (1935), 75-86, <BB #941>.

Akenside, Mark (1721-1770)

Clark, Steve. "Blake and the Pastoral-Georgic Tradition." Romantic Environmental Sensibility: Nature, Class and Empire. Ed. Ve-Yin Tee. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. 211-29. <Blake (2023)>

Considers Milton "from the perspective of a more historically engaged environmental poetics, drawing on its indebtedness to the tradition of sensibility and focusing in particular on James Thomson, Mark Akenside, and Iolo Morganwg" (212-13).

Berkeley, George (1685-1753) (See also the Annotations to Berkeley and Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution)

Cox, Philip. "Berkeley, Blake, and the Apocalypse of Pynchon's The Crying of Lot 49." Essays in Literature 7 (1980): 91-99. <BBS 443>

"Concerned with Oedipus's attraction to the ideas of Blake and Berkeley" (BBS 443).

Doskow, Minna. "William Blake and the Wheels of Compulsion." History & Myth: Essays on English Romantic Literature. Ed. Stephen C. Behrendt. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1990. 53-72. <BBS 363>

Blake's engagements with Bacon, Newton, and Locke, with references to Berkeley, Hume, and Voltaire as well.

Fisher, Peter F. The Valley of Vision: Blake as Prophet and Revolutionary. Ed. Northrop Frye. Studies and Texts 9. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1961. Toronto, 1971.⁴³⁵ <BB #1611, WBHC 2021>

Though dated, a still useful explication of Blake's thought and his historic and intellectual contexts. Discussions of Greek philosophy; the history of the Christian Church; Newton, Locke, and Berkeley; Swedenborg; and the Methodists, lead to Fisher's analysis of the three epics.

Martin, Richard G. "Material Differences: The Immaterialisms of Berkeley and Blake." English Studies in Canada 13 (1987): 391-405. <BBS 559>

Criticizes the breezy manner in which Berkeley is referenced in Blake criticism and compares their thought in detail, highlighting their significant differences.

Townsend, Chris. "Spiritual Bodies and Mental Reality in Blake." George Berkeley and Romanticism: Ghostly Language. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2022. 57-86.⁴³⁶ <Blake (2023)>

A long-needed reassessment of Berkeley's impact on Romanticism. The chapter on Blake incorporates material from Townsend's article "Visionary Immaterialism: Berkeleian Empiricism in Blake's Poetry" <Blake (2020)>.

⁴³⁵ Frye's "Preface," rpt. in Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angelica Esterhammer (2005), 313-15, <WBHC 2040-43>.

⁴³⁶ The chapter incorporates material from Townsend's article, "Visionary Immaterialism: Berkeleian Empiricism in Blake's Poetry," Studies in Romanticism 58.3 (fall 2019), 357-82, <Blake (2020)>.

Townsend, Chris. “Visionary Immaterialism: Berkeleian Empiricism in Blake’s Poetry.” Studies in Romanticism 58.3 (fall 2019): 357-82. <Blake (2020)>

“This essay revisits the question of Blake’s relation to materialism by focusing on the figure credited with coining the term materialism itself: George Berkeley” (358).

Trawick, Leonard. “Blake’s Empirical Occult.” Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 161-71. <BBS 663>

“While Blake does have many affinities with the occult traditions, his own view of reality is ultimately inimical to them” (162). Highlights George Berkeley’s influence.

Chatterton, Thomas (1752-1777)

Bindman, David. “New Light on the Mathews: Flaxman and Blake’s Early Gothicism.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 95–104. <WBHC 2436-40>

Inscriptions by A.S. Mathew on early Flaxman drawings of Gothic subjects, especially for Chatterton, “strongly suggest that Mathew was directly involved in Flaxman’s early attempts at illustrating Chatterton” (96).

Folkenflik, Robert. “Macpherson, Chatterton, Blake and the Great Age of Literary Forgery.” Centennial Review 18 (1974): 378-91. <BBS 474>

Positions Blake’s idea of inspiration in terms of Macpherson’s and Chatterton’s forgeries.

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake’s Miltonizing of Chatterton.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 27-29.⁴³⁷ <BBS 382>

Highlights echoes of Chatterton and Spenser in Marriage, which becomes “merely the vehicle for Blake’s manipulation of Milton” (28-29).

Heys, Alistair. “Visionary and Counterfeit.” From Gothic to Romantic: Chatterton’s Bristol. Ed. Alistair Heys. Bristol: Redcliffe Press Ltd., 2005. 80-103.⁴³⁸

Considers Chatterton’s influence on Blake, especially in the presentation of ancient and medieval Britain in Jerusalem.

Pressly, William L. The Artist as Original Genius: Shakespeare’s “Fine Frenzy” in Late-Eighteenth-Century British Art. Newark: University of Delaware Press, 2007. <WBHC 2998>

On illustrations of Shakespeare by many members of Blake’s artistic circle, with a discussion of Blake’s Albion Rose in relationship to Chatterton.

Reisner, Thomas A. “Blake and Chatterton.” Notes and Queries 32.3 (1985): 328-29. <BBS 620>

Notes a parallel between Chatterton’s Bristowe Tragedie, or the Dethe of Syr Charles Bawdin (1768) and Marriage’s “How do you know but ev’ry Bird that cuts the airy way, / Is an immense world of delight, clos’d by your senses five?” but Bentley notes “it has long been a commonplace of Blake scholarship” (BBS 620).

⁴³⁷ A shorter version of his argument is found in Gleckner’s Blake and Spenser (1985).

⁴³⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

Williams, Iolo A. “An Identification of Some Early Drawings by John Flaxman.” Burlington Magazine (1960): 246-50.

The drawings include portraits of the Mathews and versions of the subject, Despair Offering a Bowl of Poison to Chatterton.

Defoe, Daniel (1660-1731)

Baine, Rodney M. “Blake and Defoe.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.2 (fall 1972): 51-53. <BB #1217.108>

Calls attention to the three illustrations of Robinson Crusoe and the Blakean quality of Defoe’s History of the Devil.

Novak, Jane. “Verisimilitude and Vision: Defoe and Blake as Influences on Joyce’s Molly Bloom.” Carrell 8 (1967): 7-20. <BB#1217.108>

References Blake’s drawings for Robinson Crusoe.

Dennis, John (1657-1734)

Strickland, Edward. “John Dennis and Blake’s Guinea Sun.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.1 (summer 1980): 36. <BBS 389>

Highlights a passage in Dennis’s Grounds of Criticism (1704) that anticipates Blake’s passage on the guinea in “A Visions of the Last Judgment.”

Dryden, John (1631-1700)

Abley, Mark, and G.E. Bentley, Jr. “New Blake Documents: Job, Oedipus, and the Songs of Innocence and of Experience.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.3 (winter 1987-88): 104-07. <BBS 402>

New references to Blake in the Ivamy manuscript of John Linnell (named Ivamy after the descendent, Joan Linnell Ivamy, who holds it), including reference to a young patron, Edward Denny and Linnell, Blake’s viewing of John Dryden and Nat Lee’s Oedipus at the Royal West London Theatre, the printing and reception of Job, and Eliza Aders purchase of Blake’s works among which was Songs copy AA.

Crossan, Greg. “Blake’s Maiden Queen in ‘The Angel’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.3 (winter 1981-82): 133-34. <BBS 393>

Suggests that the Maiden Queen comes from John Dryden’s play, Secret Love, or The Maiden Queen (1668).

Kolker, Robert P. “[Blake’s Parody of a Couple from Dryden’s Absalom and Achitophel.]” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.1 (Jun. 1967): 7.⁴³⁹

Identifies an annotation to Reynolds’s Discourses, beginning “When France got free” (E 641), as parody of Dryden.

Miller, Eric. “[Druid Rocks’: Restoration, Originality, Nature and Authority in John Dryden, Titia Brongersma and William Blake’s Visions of Megalithic Monuments.]” Lumen: Selected

⁴³⁹ Not recorded in BB.

Proceedings from the Canadian Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies/Travaux choisis de la Société canadienne d'étude du dix-huitième siècle 36 (2017): 143-59. <Blake (2018)>

Compares Dryden's and Blake's poetic uses of Stonehenge and their desire to produce national monuments that would restore the nation.

Fielding, Sarah (1710-1768) (See The Novelist's Magazine)

Foote, Samuel (1720-1777) (See also Methodism)

England, Martha W. "The Satiric Blake: Apprenticeship at the Haymarket?" Bulletin of the New York Public Library 73 (1969): 440-64, 531-50.⁴⁴⁰ <BB #1553>

Suggests that Island was inspired by the comedic dramatist, Samuel Foote (1720-1777).

Gay, John (1685-1732) (See also The Original Works of William Hogarth and John Gay, Fables)

Dugaw, Dianne. "Lessons of the 'Natural' World from Gay to William Blake: The Animal Fables." "Deep Play": John Gay and the Invention of Modernity. Newark, DE: University of Delaware Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 242-76. <WBHC 1966>

On the popularity of Gay's Fables and illustrations to it, including Blake's (pp. 261-69).

Goldsmith, Oliver (1728-1774)

Reisner, Thomas A., and Mary Ellen Reisner. "A Blake Reference to Goldsmith's 'Citizen of the World.'" Notes and Queries 21.7 (1974): 264-65. <BB #A2508>

Suggests that the lines in Visions and in The Four Zoas that refer to a dog as a "schoolmaster" may originate in a passage of Goldsmith's Citizen of the World describing teachers between Egypt and Ethiopia with dog heads.

Gray, Thomas (1716-1771) (See also Illustrations to Gray's Poems and The Bard)

Annwn, David. "Hear the Voice of the Bard! Who Present, Past, & Future Sees": Three Cores of Bardic Attention: The Early Bards, William Blake & Robert Duncan. Han-on-Wye: WestHouse Books, 1995. <WBHC 1491-92>

Considers the Welsh Bard in Blake, beginning with Gray and ending with Duncan.

Keir, John. "The Grasshopper and the Ant in Blake's 'The Fly.'" English Language Notes 38.3 (Mar. 2001): 56-68. <WBHC 2247>

A close reading of the poem and the design, with references to Thomas Gray's "Ode on the Spring."

O'Donoghue, Heather. "Preromantic Responses: Gray, Blake, and the Northern Sublime." English Poetry and Old Norse Myth: A History. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2014. 65-103. <WBHC 2473>

Largely on Gray's poetry, with a conclusion focused on Blake's use of Norse mythology in his prophetic books and a slight discussion of Blake's illustration to Gray's "The Descent

⁴⁴⁰ A condensed version of England's essay was published as "Apprenticeship at the Haymarket?" in Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic, ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant (1970), 3-29, <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95> of Odin.” She points out that “the Old Norse sibyl, or völv” was anglicized as “Vala” (100-01).

Hartley, David (1705-1757) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution and David Hartley, Observations on Man)

Cooper, Andrew M. A Bastard Kind of Reasoning: William Blake and Geometry. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2023.⁴⁴¹ <Blake (2024, 2025)>

An ambitious study of Blake and Newton that seeks to challenge the relationship of Blake and Newton expressed in Donald Ault’s Visionary Physics (1974). Cooper reads the Newton print, A Vision of the Last Judgment, and most of the illuminated books in relationship to Joseph Priestley, David Hartley, Henry More, George Berkeley, and many twentieth-century scientists, providing many diagrams to illustrate Blake’s cosmological ideas.

Morgan, Paige. “The Minute Particulars in the Immensity of the Internet: What Coleridge, Hartley and Blake Can Teach Us about Digital Editing.” Romanticism 15.3 (Oct. 2009): 265-75. <WBHC 2427>

“[M]y purpose in this essay is to raise a few questions and observations about the labour of putting Blake’s largest work [i.e., The Four Zoas] online [even at the Blake Archive]; questions and observations that I believe will be useful in a broader context to many editors as interest in digital archiving continues to increase” (265).

Hervey, James (1714-1759) (See also An Island in the Moon and Epitome of James Hervey’s Meditations among the Tombs)

Miner, Paul. “James Hervey’s Influence on Blake’s ‘Tyger’ of Experience. Notes and Queries 55.4 (2008): 414-16. <WBHC 2415>

“There are similar questions and images in Hervey’s “Contemplations on the Starry Heavens” (in his Meditations and Contemplations [1789], II, 95-100) and in ‘The Tyger’” (WBHC 2415).

Miner, Paul. “New Implications: Blake and James Hervey’s Meditations.” Notes and Queries 58.4 (Dec. 2011): 523-25. <WBHC 2415>

Unrecognized allusions to Hervey’s Meditations.

Read, Dennis M. “Blake’s Hervey, Thomas Butts, and Methodism.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.3 (winter 2023-24): 32 pars. <Blake (2024)>

On the painting, Epitome of James Hervey’s “Meditations Among the Tombs” (c. 1820), Hervey, and Butts’s Methodism.

⁴⁴¹ Incorporates “two or three pages” of Cooper’s “Small Room for Judgment: Geometry and Prolepsis in Blake’s ‘Infant Sorrow,’” European Romantic Review 31.2 (2020), 129-55, and “material amounting to maybe ten pages from” Cooper’s William Blake and the Productions of Time (Ashgate 2013/Routledge 2016).

Read, Dennis M. “Blake’s ‘Tender Stranger’: Thel and Hervey’s Meditations.” Colby Library Quarterly 18.3 (Sep. 1982): 160-67. <BBS 618>

“I believe specifically that Thel is, on one level, Blake’s anti-Graveyard School argument advanced through ironic references to Hervey’s Meditations” (161).

Johnson, Samuel (1709-1784) (See the An Island in the Moon, Annotations to Reynolds, and Annotations to Wordsworth)

Castanedo, Fernando. “On Blinks and Kisses, Monkeys and Bears: Dating William Blake’s An Island in the Moon.” Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 437-52. <Blake (2018)>

Considers the allusions to Samuel Johnson for dating Island and suggests the possibility that it was written for Blake’s dying brother, Robert.

Hagstrum, Jean H. “The Rhetoric of Fear and Hope.” TriQuarterly 11 (1968): 109-23. <BB #1769>

“A comparison of Samuel Johnson and Blake” (BB #1769). “Blake and Johnson now seem to confront each other across a deep gulf in the landscape of cultural history” (109).

Locke, John (1632-1704) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution and There is No Natural Religion)

Borkowska, Eliza. But He Talked of the Temple of Man’s Body: Blake’s Revelation Un-Locked. Newcastle upon Tyne: Cambridge Scholars, 2009. <WBHC 1776>

“A philosophical consideration of Blake and John Locke” (WBHC 1776).

Clark, S. H. “Blake’s Milton as Empiricist Epic: ‘Weaving the Woof of Locke’.” Studies in Romanticism 36.3 (1997): 457-82. <WBHC 1856>

“Blake’s references to Locke ‘may be seen as part of a more general reinstatement of an empiricist perspective in the poem . . . ultimately Lockean in origin’ (458)” (WBHC 1856).⁴⁴²

Clark, Steve. “‘Labouring at the Resolute Anvil’: Blake’s Response to Locke.” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1999. 133-52. <WBHC 1863-65>

Revisits Blake’s relationship to Locke, suggesting “the philosopher proves a worthy opponent as the most vigorous exponent of error, setting the terms of the debate and proving the most visible ‘body to Falshood’ [sic] (J 12:13 E 155)” (133).

Evans, James C. “Blake, Locke, & The Concept of ‘Generation’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.2 (fall 1975): 47. <BBS 377>

Suggests that Blake’s use of “generation” has its roots in Locke.

Farrell, Michael. “John Locke’s Ideology of Education and William Blake’s ‘Proverbs of Hell’.” Notes and Queries 53.3 (2006): 310-11. <WBHC 2013>

⁴⁴² Bentley’s ellipses.

"In 'Sooner murder an infant in its cradle than nurse unacted desires,' 'Blake may be referring ironically to Locke's' 'Children should . . . go without their longings even from their very Cradles'" (WBHC 2013).

Frye, Northrop. Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1947. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1969. Northrop Frye's Fearful Symmetry: A Study of William Blake. Ed. Nicholas Halmi. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2004. Vol. 14 of the Collected Works of Northrop Frye.⁴⁴³ <BB #1646, BBS 478, WBHC 2037-39>

A profoundly influential study, which dominated twentieth-century Blake scholarship. Frye considered Blake primarily as a poet and artist (rather than a mystic), and his work led to Blake's canonization as a Romantic poet as well as shaping Frye's own Archetypal Criticism. Frye's positioning of Blake in terms of British Empiricism (primarily John Locke and George Berkeley) remains key, and his reading of the prophetic works showed the profundity of what previous generations had dismissed as evidence of Blake's madness.⁴⁴⁴

Glausser, Wayne. Locke and Blake: A Conversation across the Eighteenth Century. Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 1998.⁴⁴⁵ <WBHC 2079-80>

Considers Locke and Blake in light of different topics to suggest their relationship is more than oppositional.

Green, Matthew. "Outlining the 'Human Form Divine': Reading Blake's Thoughts on Outline and Response to Locke alongside Lavater and Cumberland." European Romantic Review 15 (2004): 511-32. <WBHC 2103>

"[O]ur understanding of Blake's thoughts on redemptive form, both human and artistic, can benefit from a consideration of Lavater's Aphorisms (1788) and Essays on Physiognomy (1789-98),² as well as George Cumberland's Thoughts on Outline (1796)" (512).

⁴⁴³ Chapter 2, "The Rising God," 30-54, is rpt. as "The Religious Vision of William Blake," in Toward a New Christianity: Readings in the Death of God Theology, ed. Thomas J. J. Altizer (1967), 19-42; Chapter 1, "The Case Against Locke," 14-29, is rpt. as "Blake's Case Against Locke," in English Literature and British Philosophy: A Collection of Essays, ed. S.P. Rosenbaum (1971), 119-35, <BB #973>; Chapters 5 and 12, 189-91, 418-28, are excerpted in Modern Literary Criticism, ed. Lawrence I Lipking and A. Walton Litz (1972), 189-91 and 191-97; excerpts are rpt. in William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 23-35, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>.

⁴⁴⁴ See Classic Studies the complete annotation.

⁴⁴⁵ Incorporates Glausser's "Locke and Blake as Physicians Delivering the Eighteenth-Century Body," Reading the Social Body, ed. Catherine B. Burroughs and Jeffrey David Ehrenreich (Iowa City: University of Iowa Press, 1993), 218-43, <WBHC 2080>; "Three Approaches to the Slave Trade," Journal of the History of Ideas 51.2 (1990), 197-216, <WBHC 2079>, [on Locke]; "Atomistic Simulacra in the Enlightenment and in Blake's Post-Enlightenment," Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation 32.1 (1991), 73-88, <BBS 485, WBHC 2079-80>.

Kittel, Harald A. "The Book of Urizen and An Essay Concerning Human Understanding." Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 111-44.⁴⁴⁶ <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

Reads The Book of Urizen as a satire of Locke.

Miner, Paul. "Blake's Anti-Lockian 'Bard.'" Notes and Queries 58.4 (Dec. 2011): 530-32. <WBHC 2412>

"‘The Voice of the Ancient Bard’ . . . specifically rebukes the philosophy of John Locke" (WBHC 2412).

Miner, Paul. "Nuances: Blake, Locke and ‘Corporeal Things.’" Notes and Queries 58.4 (2011): 532-33. <WBHC 532-33>

Traces allusions to Locke's Essay on Human Understanding in Blake's 6 Jul. 1803 letter and in There is No Natural Religion pl. 6.

Otto, Peter. Blake's Critique of Transcendence: Love, Jealousy, and the Sublime in The Four Zoas. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2000.⁴⁴⁷ <WBHC 2486-88>

An important reading of The Four Zoas that traces the influences of Emmanuel Swedenborg, John Locke, and Edward Young.

Otto, Peter. "From the English to the French Revolution: The Body, the World and Experience in Locke's Essay, Bentley's 'A Prospect of Vapourland' and Blake's Songs." British Romanticism in European Perspective: Into the Eurozone. Ed. Steve Clark and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2015. 210-29. <Blake (2019)>

Suggests "that Blake's work, along with [John] Locke's Essay [on Human Understanding] and [Richard] Bentley's 'Vapourland,' can profitably be read as engaging with a pan-European phenomenon, namely the gradual shift of emphasis [. . .] from the king to the people, and from the sovereign to the sovereign subject" (211).

Quinney, Laura. "Escape from Repetition: Blake versus Locke and Wordsworth." Ritual, Routine, and Regime: Repetition in Early Modern British and European Culture. Toronto, Buffalo, N.Y., London: University of Toronto Press in Association with the UCLA Center for Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century Studies and William Andrews Clark Memorial Library, 2006. 63-79.⁴⁴⁸ <WBHC 2557>

Sees Blake as explicitly attacking Wordsworth's Lockean view of nature in Milton.

⁴⁴⁶ Incorporated in Kittel's "Perception and Reflection: The Text and Title-Page Design of William Blake's The Book of Urizen," Poetic Knowledge: Circumference and Centre—Papers from the Wuppertal Symposium 1978, ed. Roland Hagenbüche and Joseph T. Swann (Bonn, 1980), 30-41, not recorded in BBS.

⁴⁴⁷ Incorporates Otto's "The Multiple Births of Los in The Four Zoas," Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 31.4 (1991), 631-53, <BBS 596>, and "A Pompous High Priest: Urizen's Ancient Phallic Religion in The Four Zoas," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 35.1 (2001), 4-22, <WBHC 1686>.

⁴⁴⁸ Revised for Quinney's William Blake on Self and Soul (2009), <WBHC 2556>.

Vogler, Thomas A. "The Allegory of Allegory: Unlocking Blake's 'Crystal Cabinet.'" Enlightenment Allegory: Theory, Practice, and Context of Allegory in the Late Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries. Ed. Kevin L. Cope. New York: AMS, 1993. 75-129. <WBHC 2815>

"On the use of John Locke's ideas" (WBHC 2815).

Yoder, R. Paul. "Unlocking Language: Self-Similarity in Blake's Jerusalem." 26 pars. Romanticism & Complexity. Ed. Hugh Roberts. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2001. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume.⁴⁴⁹

"In what follows I argue that a model based on fractal 'self-similarity' can help us to understand how Blake's language opens to these new worlds, and that it can even help us to understand the vexed issue of narrative in Jerusalem" (par. 1). Considerable focus on John Locke.

Newton, Isaac (1648-1727) (See also Science, Enlightenment, and the Industrial Revolution and Eduardo Paolozzi)

Ault, Donald D. Visionary Physics: Blake's Response to Newton. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1974. <BBS 356, WBHC 1571-72>

A very important study of how Blake incorporated the language of Newtonian science into his own symbolism.

Barfoot, C.C. "'A Paradise Unlost': Edward Young among the Stars." Between Dream and Nature: Essays on Utopia and Dystopia. Ed. Dominic Baker-Smith and C.C. Barfoot. Amsterdam, 1987. 139-71. <BBS 360>

On Young's physico-theology and treatment of Newton, with Blake's response.

Christensen, Bryce J. "The Apple in the Vortex: Newton, Blake, and Descartes." Philosophy and Literature 6.1/2 (1982): 147-61. <BBS 437>

Suggests that Blake's argument with Newton is less with the real Newton than that the mechanistic distortion transmitted through figures such as Descartes, Voltaire, Fontenelle, and Hume.

Cooper, Andrew M. A Bastard Kind of Reasoning: William Blake and Geometry. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2023.⁴⁵⁰ <Blake (2024)>

An ambitious study of Blake and Newton that seeks to challenge the relationship of Blake and Newton expressed in Donald Ault's Visionary Physics (1974). Cooper reads the Newton print, A Vision of the Last Judgment, and most of the illuminated books in relationship to Joseph Priestley, David Hartley, Henry More, George Berkeley, and many twentieth-century scientists, providing many diagrams to illustrate Blake's cosmological ideas.

⁴⁴⁹ Only Plotnitsky's essay from this collection is recorded in WBHC.

⁴⁵⁰ Incorporates "two or three pages" of Cooper's "Small Room for Judgment: Geometry and Prolepsis in Blake's 'Infant Sorrow,'" European Romantic Review 31.2 (2020), 129-55, and "material amounting to maybe ten pages from" Cooper's William Blake and the Productions of Time (Ashgate 2013/Routledge 2016).

Dimock, Wai Chee. "Nonbiological Clock: Literary History Against Newtonian Mechanics." South Atlantic Quarterly 102 (2003): 153-77. <WBHC 1941>

"Especially about Blake, Newton, and Dante; 'If physics has anything to tell us, it is that Blake's ideas are worth revisiting' (154)" (WBHC 1941).

Jackson, M.W. "Blake's Appropriation of the Newtonian 'Moment.'" Notes and Queries 51 (2004): 134-36.

"Blake dismantles the mechanical stasis of the Newtonian cosmology by focusing on Newton's mathematical definition of the "moment" as measurable time' (135)" (WBHC 2200).

McNeil, Maureen. "Newton as National Hero." Let Newton Be! Ed. John Fauvel et al. Oxford, New York, Tokyo: Oxford University Press, 1988. Rpt. 1989. 223-39. <BBS 570, WBHC 2391>

On Newton's eighteenth-century reception, with the first half of the essay contrasting Blake's and Erasmus Darwin's views of Newton. (Along with two pictures of Harpo Marx as Newton.)

Miner, Paul. "Newton's Pantocrator." Notes and Queries 8 (1961): 15-16. <BB #2226>

"Argues that Blake took his phrase from Newton's Mathematical Principals of Natural Philosophy, tr. A. Motte (1729), ii.389-92" (BB #2226).

Nicolson, Marjorie Hope. "Epilogue: The Poetic Damnation of Newton." Newton Demands the Muse: Newton's Opticks and the Eighteenth-Century Poets. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1946. Hamden, CT: Archon, 1963. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1966. <BB #2287>

Although dated, a useful introduction to Newton's place in eighteenth-century poetry and why he was such a significant nemesis for Blake.

Niimi, Hatsuko. "Newtonian Influences in Songs of Experience." Blake's Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 213-30.⁴⁵¹ <WBHC 2460-63>

"The purpose of this essay is to discuss the possibility that Newton's philosophy and its reasoning method are an influence on [the Songs] regulating and circumscribing the mental processes of the speakers" (213-14).

Nurmi, Martin K. "Blake's Ancient of Days and Motte's Frontispiece to Newton's Principia." The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 207-16. <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

Suggests the frontispiece to Europe drew on the frontispiece for A. Motte's translation of Newton's Principia (1729), which Motte designed.

Peterfreund, Stuart. William Blake in a Newtonian World: Essays on Literature As Art and Science. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1998. <WBHC 2516-17>

⁴⁵¹ Originally published in Studies in English and American Literature [of Japan Women's University] 33 (1998), <WBHC 2465>.

Reprints Peterfreund's essays on Blake, Newton, and Enlightenment rationality, with a new introduction.

Simpson, David. “Which Newton for the British Library?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.2 (fall 1994): 77-78. <WBHC 1653>

Suggests the possibility that Blake's “Newton” may be partly based on a scene from John Newton's Authentic Narrative (1764) wherein the abolitionist is doing geometry in the sand.

Snart, Jason. “Blake's Awareness of 'Blake in a Newtonian World': William Blake, Isaac Newton, and Writing on Metal.” History of European Ideas 31.2 (2005): 237-49. <WBHC 2689>

“I consider where Blake and Newton were perhaps more similar than has been suggested in the scholarly literature, and, more crucially, how scholarship itself mobilizes (or indeed ‘creates’) its own, subjectively useful, ‘Blake’ and ‘Newton’ in order to make particular arguments” (abstract).

Stevenson, Warren. [Untitled Note.] Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.1 (summer 1995): 24-25. <WBHC 1658>

Builds on David Simpson's “Which Newton for the British Library?” to suggest that the Newton in America may be a conflation of the physicist and the abolitionist as well.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony. “The Poetry of the Rainbow: Milton and Newton among the Prophets.” Poetic Prophecy in Western Literature. Ed. Jan Wojcik and Raymond-Jean Frontain. Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck: Farleigh Dickinson University Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1984. 94-105.

On the conjunction of Milton and Newton in the Romantic era, with significance references to Blake.

Pope, Alexander (1688-1744) (See also Blake's Notebook and Public Address)

Bacon, M.E. “Blake's 'Imitation of Pope: A Compliment to the Ladies' and 'A Pretty Epigram for the Entertainment of Those who Paid Great Sums in the Venetian and Flemish Ooze.'” The Explicator 28.9 (1970): 148-51. <BB #1105>

“Blake's imitation of Pope was intended to ridicule not the style of Pope but the man” (BB #1105).

Clark, Steve. “Yet I am an identity / I wish feel & weep & groan’: Blake's Sentimentalism as (Peri) Performative.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 163-85. <WBHC 1801-03>

A Queer reading of the sentimental tradition that considers Tharmas and Enion in Night the First of The Four Zoas alongside Alexander Pope's Eloisa to Abelard and the Notebook and Pickering Manuscript poems alongside Della Cruscan poetry of the 1780s.

Tolley, Michael J. “Blake's Debt to Pope.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.4 (1969): 62-64. <BB #1217.31>

On allusions to and echoes of Pope.

Yoder, R. Paul. "Blake's Pope." Romantic Generations: Essays in Honor of Robert F. Gleckner. Ed. Ghislaine McDayter, Guinn Batten, and Barry Milligan. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 23-42. <WBHC 2906>

An important essay on Blake's relationship to Alexander Pope: "For Blake Pope was two very different poets. [...] [T]he translator of Homer; a tamer of Homer's passion and imagination" and "a kindred spirit, a satirist and social critics whose vision was little understood by a population whose taste had been corrupted" (24).

Richardson, Samuel (1689-1761) (See also Richard Phillips, The Novelist's Magazine, and Letters)

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Richardson and Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.4 (1985): 236-37. <BBS 398>

Answers Ostriker's review of Hagstrum's Sex and Sensibility (1982), with Hagstrum holding that Blake would not have dismissed Richardson out of hand and that a passage from Clarissa may have inspired "The Sick Rose." See Ostriker's "Reply to Hagstrum."

Ostriker, Alicia. "Reply to Hagstrum." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 18.4 (1985): 238. <BBS 398>

Maintains, against Hagstrum's "Richardson and Blake," that Blake would have been very critical of Richardson on several fronts.

Smith, J.A. "Telling Love: Twelfth Night in Samuel Richardson, Teresia Constantia Phillips, and William Blake." Studies in Philology 112.1 (2015): 194-212. <WBHC 2686>

The Blake section discusses the Notebook poem, "Never Pain to Tell Thy Love," in relationship to Shakespeare, Samuel Richardson, and "The Sick Rose."

Smart, Christopher \(1722-1771\)

Mounsey, Chris. "Christopher Smart and William Blake: A Distinctive Mode." Early Romantics: Perspectives in British Poetry from Pope to Wordsworth. Ed. Thomas Woodman. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press; New York: St. Martin's Press, 1998. 166-81. <WBHC 2434>

"Smart's and Blake's theories of language are similar" (178).

Sterne, Laurence (1713-1768) (See also The Novelist's Magazine and An Island in the Moon)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Sterne and Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.3 (Dec. 1968): 64-65. <BB #1217.32>

See similarities between a passage in Sterne's A Sentimental Journey and America pl. 6.

Essick, Robert N. "Representation, Anxiety, and the Bibliographic Sublime." Huntington Library Quarterly 59 (1998): 503-28. <WBHC 1997>

On the anxiety of representation, with references to Marriage (copy L) and Tristram Shandy: "That response to semiotic uncertainty, when inscribed within the physical features of a book, I term the bibliographic sublime" (513). Reproduces Marriage copy L.

Swedenborg, Emanuel (1688-1772) (See Swedenborg and Swedenborgianism and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell)

Tickell, Thomas (1685-1740)

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake and Percy's Reliques.” Notes and Queries 3.8 (1956): 352-53. <Bb #1153>

On Blake's copy of Percy's Reliques (1765) at Wellsley College and Thomas Tickell's “Lucy and Colin,” which Blake quotes in his 10 Jan. 1802 letter to Butts.

Thomson, James (1700-1748)

Clark, Steve. “Blake and the Pastoral-Georgic Tradition.” Romantic Environmental Sensibility: Nature, Class and Empire. Ed. Ve-Yin Tee. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. 211-29. <Blake \(2023\)>

Considers Milton “from the perspective of a more historically engaged environmental poetics, drawing on its indebtedness to the tradition of sensibility and focusing in particular on James Thomson, Mark Akenside, and Iolo Morganwg” (212-13).

Crisman, William C. “Blake's ‘The Crystal Cabinet’ as a Reworking of Thomson's The Castle of Indolence.” English Language Notes 29.1 (1991): 52-59 <BBS 445, WBHC 1896>

Suggests that Thomson's work is a model and points to parallels.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, William Hamilton, and the Materials of Graphic Meaning.” ELH 52 (1985): 833-72. <BBS 466>

A key essay for understanding how Blake worked with graphic media and what chalcographic principles should be applied when analyzing them. Uses William Hamilton's illustrations to James Thomson's The Seasons to highlight the complexities of graphic production and interpretation.

Pechey, Graham. “The London Motif in Some Eighteenth-Century Contexts.” Literature and History 4 (1976): 2-29. <BBS 601>

Examines contemporary eighteenth-century uses of the imagery and verbiage in “London,” including James Thomson and William Cowper.

Watts, Isaac (1674-1748) (See also Hymns and Songs of Innocence and of Experience)

Blackstock, Alan. “Dickinson, Blake, and the Hymnbooks of Hell.” The Emily Dickinson Journal 20.2 (2011): 33-56. <WBHC 1635>

“[E]xamine[s] the ways in which [Blake's and Dickinson's] common sources—the Protestant hymnodists [and particularly Isaac Watts]—inform both their poetics and their social consciences” (34).

Davie, Donald. “Conclusion.” The Eighteenth-Century Hymn in England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1993. 155-58. <WBHC 1921>

Davie ends his study of the eighteenth-century hymn (stretching from John Byrom and Isaac Watts to John Newton and William Cowper) with a discussion of Blake's relationship to this tradition.

Davie, Donald. A Gathered Church: The Literature of the English Dissenting Interests, 1700-1930. London and Henley, 1976. 49-54. <BBS 448>

Though Blake's familial connection to Dissent has been disproven (see Davies and Worrall's "Inconvenient Truths"), Davie's study is useful for its description of the history and forms of Dissenting and Methodist hymns that did influence Blake. There is much on Isaac Watts, the Wesleys, and Whitefield, and less on Barbauld and the Moravians.

Pinto, Vivian de Sola. "Isaac Watts and William Blake." Review of English Studies 20.79 (1944): 214-23.⁴⁵² <BB #2404>

An important early examination.

Wheatley, Phillis (1753-1784)

Henry, Lauren. "Sunshine and Shady Groves: What Blake's 'Little Black Boy' Learned from African Writers." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.1 (summer 1995): 4-11.⁴⁵³ <WBHC 1656-57>

A reading of "The Little Black Boy" alongside Phyllis Wheatley's "An Hymn to the Morning."

Wolff, Tristram. "Voices of the Ground: Blake's Language in Deep Time." Against the Uprooted Word: Giving Language Time in Transatlantic Romanticism. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 2022. 99-137. <Blake (2023, 2025)>

With some interesting comparisons to Phillis Wheatley, Wolff argues that, "for Blake, desire is configured as material constraint in the production of knowledge, often by way of a geological imaginary" (108).

Young, Edward (1681-1765) (See also [Edward Young, Night Thoughts \[Omnibus\]](#))

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Young." Notes and Queries 199 [old series] (Dec. 1954): 529-30. <BB #1155>

Identifies the allusion to Young in For the Sexes, "Truly My Satan thou art but a Dunce."

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's 'The Tyger' and Edward Young's Book of Job." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21.3 (winter 1987-88): 99-101. <BBS 401-02>

Sees the influence of Young's description of the tiger and of Job's questions in his paraphrase of Job (1719).

Tolley, Michael J. "The Book of Thel and Night Thoughts." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 69.6 (1965): 375-85. <BB #2860>

Identifies probable allusions in Thel to Night Thoughts.

⁴⁵² Revised in Pinto's collection, The Divine Vision (1957), <BB #2402>

⁴⁵³ Incorporated in a longer version published in Romanticism and Colonialism: Writing and Empire, 1780-1830, ed. Tim Fulford and Peter J. Kitson (Cambridge, UK, and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1998), 67-86.

Romantic Writers and Publishers (1786-1850) (See also Blake and Members of His Circle)

Introductions

Simpson, David. "Blake and Romanticism." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 169-87. <WBHC 1969-72>

Focuses on Blake's inclusion into the Romantic canon.

General Studies

Ando, Kiyoshi. "Igirisu Romanha Shijin no Shukyoteki Stance: Blake, Wordsworth, Coleridge [Religious Stances of the English Romantic Poets: Blake, Wordsworth, and Coleridge]." Kanto Gakuin Daigaku Jimbun Gakkai Kiyo [Bulletin of the Society of Humanities, Kanto Gakuin University] 145 (2021): 33-46. <Blake (2023)>

Beer, John. "Blake, Coleridge, and Wordsworth: Some Cross-currents and Parallels 1789-1805." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 231-59. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Positions Blake alongside Coleridge, Wordsworth, Godwin, and Fuseli, with a discussion of Blake's engravings for Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden.

Beer, John. "Lamb, Coleridge, and Blake." Charles Lamb Bulletin 136 (2006): 105-06. <WBHC 1593>

On the men's connections and knowledge of each other.

Beer, John. "Romantic Apocalypses." Wordsworth Circle 32.2 (2001): 109-16.⁴⁵⁴ <WBHC 1593>

On the apocalypse and its relationship to historical moments of crisis, especially in Blake, Coleridge, and Wordsworth who all "internalize[d] their sense of Apocalypse" (113).

Beer, John. "Prophetic Affluence in the 1790s." Romantic Influences Contemporary-Victorian-Modern. New York: St Martin's Press, 1993. 23-48, 257-62. <WBHC 1593>

"Concerns especially Blake, Wordsworth, and Coleridge" (WBHC 1593).

Behrendt, Stephen. "‘A Defect in their Education’: Blake, Haydon, and the Misguided British Audience." Keats-Shelley Review 24.1 (Oct. 2010): 53-65. <WBHC 1595>

Positions Keats's painter friend, Benjamin Robert Haydon, in artistic debates over "the demise of grand-style history painting" (abstract) that also engaged artists like Blake and James Barry.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Spirits of Romanticism: The Supernatural in Coleridge's 'Ancient Mariner,' Wordsworth's Intimations Ode and Blake's Book of Urizen." Dibrugarh University Journal of English Studies 6 (1987): 19-37. <BBS 368-69>

"The Blake section focuses upon 'The daring and achievement' of Urizen. The essay includes the first publication of a Coleridge manuscript on the supernatural" (BBS 369).

⁴⁵⁴ Silently incorporated into Beer's "Romantic Apocalypses" in Romanticism and Millenarianism, ed. Tim Fulford (2002), <Blake (2003)>.

Brewster, Glen E. “Blake and the Metaphor of Marriage.” Nineteenth-Century Contexts 16.1 (1992): 69-93. <BBS 424-25>

“In his references to marriage, ‘Blake was more progressive than Godwin, Byron, Shelley, Owen, and most of the other male writers who took up male-female relations as a major theme’” (BBS 424-25).

Bundock, Christopher M. Romantic Prophecy and the Resistance to Historicism. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2016. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Treats Blake’s notions of prophecy and history in Milton especially, but with many references to the annotations to Watson and A Descriptive Catalogue. He also considers the prefaces of the Lambeth prophecies and considers the poems themselves as prefaces for Blake’s later poems. Some discussion of Blake in relationship to both Mary and Percy Shelley and to Kierkegaard.

Bundock, Chris, and Elizabeth Effinger, ed. William Blake’s Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

An important collection of essays engaging with Blake and the Gothic. The book aims “to recognise aspects of Blake’s art that [...] productively intersect with the Gothic horror taking shape contemporaneously with Blake’s career” (1).

Cardinale, Philip J. and Joseph R. Cardinale. “A Newly Discovered Blake Book: William Blake’s Copy of Thomas Taylor’s The Mystical Initiations; or, Hymns of Orpheus \(1787\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 44.3 (winter 2010-11): 84-102. <WBHC 1726>

Argues that the copy of Thomas Taylor’s The Mystical Initiation held by Bodleian was annotated by Blake. Widely accepted.

Cazeneuve, Elsa. “De l’œil à l’étoile: poétiques du globe chez William Blake, William Wordsworth et Samuel Taylor Coleridge” (“Celestial Eyes: Metaphors of the Globe in the Works of William Blake, William Wordsworth and Samuel Taylor Coleridge”). Etudes Epistémè. Revue de littérature et de civilisation (XVI^e-XVIII^e siècles) 43 (2023): 38 pars. In French (abstract in French and English). <Blake (2024)>

“This paper proposes the idea that astronomy contributed to structure the perceptive philosophy and poetics of the first Romantic generation through the figure of the globe. Indeed, celestial spheres came to serve as a metaphor for the eye globe, which in turn symbolized the possibility of renewed or expanded vision” (abstract).

Cheshire, Paul. “Classical Elements: Darwin, Gilbert, Blake, and Coleridge.” Wordsworth Circle 50.2 (spring 2019): 147-65. <Blake (2020)>

Considers how these writers and Swedenborg used the elements of fire, earth, water, and air.

Esterhammer, Angela. “Romantic Voices, Romantic Curses: Blake’s Tiriel, Hölderlin’s Tod des Empedokles, Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound.” Romantic Voices, Romantic Poetics: Selected Papers from the Regensburg Conference of the German Society for English Romanticism. Ed.

Christoph Bode and Katharine Rennhak. Trier [Germany]: WVT Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Trier, 2005. 21-32. <WBHC 2007>

On Romantic curses.

Ferrer-Ventosa, Roger. “El eterno deleite de la imaginación. Idea de la imaginación en el Romanticismo, especialmente en William Blake.” Aisthesis 68 (2020): 139-59. In Spanish (abstract and keywords in Spanish and English). <Blake (2022)>

Gigante, Denise. Life: Organic Form and Romantics. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2010. <WBHC 2059>

“Analyses of Smart’s Jubilate Agno, Blake’s Jerusalem, Shelley’s Witch of Atlas, and Keats’s ‘Lamia’ in terms of Organic Form” (WBHC 2059).

Goslee, Nancy Moore. “Blake’s Milton: From Marble Landscape to Living Form.” Uriel’s Eye: Miltonic Stationing and Statuary in Blake, Keats, and Shelley. Tuscaloosa: University of Alabama Press, 1985. 29-67. <BBS 491, WBHC 2093>

Examines the engagement with Milton by Blake’s Milton, Keats’s Hyperion, and Percy Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound through metaphors of stationing.

Hagstrum, Jean H. The Romantic Body: Love and Sexuality in Keats, Wordsworth, and Blake. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1985. <BBS 498, WBHC 2116-17>

Emphasizes the sexuality in Blake’s works.

Hanke, Amala M. Spatiotemporal Consciousness in England and German Romanticism: A Comparative Study of Novalis, Blake, Wordsworth, and Eichendorff. Bern, Frankfurt, Las Vegas: Peter Lang, 1981. <BBS 501, WBHC 2125>

“In examining the works of Blake, Novalis, Wordsworth, and Eichendorff, chosen as representative examples of the thought of their age, I intend to prove that forms of spatiotemporal consciousness and man’s mediating position between the dialectic of being and becoming are a central concern and a defining characteristic of English and German Romanticism” (1).

Keynes, Geoffrey. “William Blake with Charles Lamb and His Circle.” Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 74-89.⁴⁵⁵ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Details the knowledge Lamb, Robinson, Hazlitt, Southey, Coleridge, Wainewright, and Cary had of Blake.

King-Hele, Desmond. “Disenchanted Darwinians: Wordsworth, Coleridge, Blake.” Wordsworth Circle 35 (1994), 114-18. <WBHC 2256-57>

On Darwin’s influence on the Romantic poets.

⁴⁵⁵ “A paper read to the Charles Lamb Society, 9 October 1943” (74n1).

Labbe, Jacqueline M. "Towards an Ungendered Romanticism: Blake, Robinson and Smith in 1793." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 118-26. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Examines "questions of gender and expectation" (118) in Blake, Charlotte Smith, and Mary Robinson.

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. "The Destabilizing Materiality of the Autograph for Blake, Coleridge, and Tighe." Material Transgressions: Beyond Romantic Bodies, Genders, Things. Ed. Kate Singer, Ashley Cross, and Suzanne L. Barnett. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2020. 31-52. <Blake (2024)>

"Blake, Coleridge, and Tighe deliberately disrupt the potential erasures effected by commercial print through the destabilizing materiality of their hand-imprinted signatures" (33).

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. "William Blake and Female Romantic Poets: 'Then what have I to do with thee?'" Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 127-39. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Considers how Anne Cristall, Charlotte Smith, Mary Tighe, Felicia Hemans, Lucy Hooper read Blake.

Lussier, Mark. "Beyond Pure Poetics: On the Rhythmic Impulse in Romanticism." Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 94-117. <Blake (2022)>

"In different ways, Blake, Byron, and Shelley undertake rhythmic operations with affective aspirations and in the process express the literal spirit of the age, a rhythmic presence operative at all scales, active in every atom and cell, and manifest in material and mental processes" (113).

Manquis, Robert M. "Holy Savagery and Wild Justice: English Romanticism and the Terror." Studies in Romanticism 28.3 (1989): 365-95. <BBS 558>

On reactions to the Terror in France by Wordsworth, Coleridge, and Blake (pp. 386-90).

McGann, Jerome. "The Failures of Romanticism." Romanticism, History, and The Possibilities of Genre: Re-forming Literature 1789-1837. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Julia M. Wright. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998. 270-87. <WBHC 2388>

Considers moments of ultimate failure in Blake and other Romantics.

McGann, Jerome J. Social Values and Poetic Acts: The Historical Judgment of Literary Work. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1988.⁴⁵⁶ <BBS 568>

An important study of Blake and other Romantics and their engagement with the social and material.

⁴⁵⁶ Incorporates McGann's "The Idea of an Indeterminate Text: Blake's Bible of Hell and Dr. Alexander Geddes," Studies in Romanticism 25.3 (1986), 303-24, <BBS 568>.

Mellor, Anne K. "Blake, the Apocalypse and Romantic Women Writers." Romanticism and Millenarianism. Ed. Tim Fulford. New York and Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2002. 139-52. <WBHC 2397>

Considers female Romantic writers (Joanna Southcott, Mary Shelley, and Mary Ann Browne).

Miner, Paul. "Unexplored Latitudes: Blake and Ossian." Notes and Queries 58.4 (Dec. 2011): 533-35. <WBHC 2416>

On Blake's unnoted allusions to Ossian.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake in 'The Vanguard of the Age.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 185-86. <WBHC 1706>

Notes Blake's place in a now papered over painting alongside Crabb Robinson, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, John Flaxman, Charles and Mary Lamb, Robert Southey, and William Wordsworth.

Pfau, Thomas. "Bringing about the Post Prophetic Memory in Kant, Godwin, and Blake." Romanticism & Conspiracy. Ed. Orrin N.C. Wang. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 1997. A Romantic Circles PRAXIS Volume. 12 pars. <WBHC 2518>

"Blake's Lambeth books predict no plausible or fantasized future, nor do they aim to recover some empirical past. Instead, their mesmerizing visual and rhetorical patterns urge readers to 'illuminate' (or 'retroactivate') a past that has not yet been lived and experienced precisely because it was occluded from vision by the dullness of empirical memory and repressed sensuality" (par. 6).

Potkay, Adam. "Romantic Transformations of the King James Bible: Wordsworth, Shelley, Blake." The King James Bible after Four Hundred Years: Literary, Linguistic, and Cultural Influences. Ed. Hannibal Hamlin and Norman W. Jones. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010. 219-33. <WBHC 2542>

Focuses on allusions to the KJV in "Tintern Abbey," Prometheus Unbound, and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Rajan, Tilottoma. "The Other Reading: Transactional Epic in Milton, Blake, and Wordsworth." Milton, the Metaphysicals, and Romanticism. Ed. Lisa Low and Anthony Harding. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 20-46. <WBHC 2570>

Considers Blake's and Wordsworth's response to Milton: "Blake's texts do not resemble Paradise Lost stylistically, although 'Milton' is central to his struggle with his spectre, and more obliquely to his struggle with an epic vision that is open to historical revision" (42).

Reed, Mark L. "Blake, Wordsworth, Lamb, Etc.: Further Information from Henry Crabb Robinson." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.4 (May 1970): 76-84. <BB #1217.50>

Transcribes Robinson's 10 Aug. 1848 letter to Edward Quillinan with important information regarding Blake, Wordsworth, and Lamb. These include Robinson's remarks that Blake's poetry should be considered "fragments of a shattered intellect"; Lamb's comment that he “used to call [Blake] a ‘mad Wordsworth’”; and Wordsworth’s exclamation about Blake that “There is no doubt that this man is mad, but there is something in this madness which I enjoy more than the Sense of W[alter]: Sc[ott]: or Lord B[yron]” (78).

Serdechnaia, Vera. “Odin iz ‘bol’shoi shesterki’: Uil’jam Bleik kak predstavitel’ angliiskogo romantizma [One of the ‘Big Six’: William Blake as the Representative of English Romanticism].” Uchenye zapiski Orlovskogo gosudarstvennogo universiteta [Scientific Notes of Orel State University] 2.91 (2021): 104-08. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2022)>

Torralbo, Juan de Dios. “Beauty is truth’: Carlos Clementson, traductor de los románticos ingleses” [‘Beauty is truth’: Carlos Clementson, Translator of the English Romantic Poets].” Monteagudo 27 (2022): 379-407. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2023)>

“Examines the translations of the English Romantics by the Cordoban poet Carlos Clementson, who put works by these eight poets into Spanish: William Blake, Robert Burns, William Wordsworth, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, Joseph Blanco White, Lord Byron, Percy Bysshe Shelley and John Keats” (abstract).

Volger, Thomas. Preludes to Vision: The Epic Venture in Blake, Wordsworth, Keats, and Hart Crane. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1971. <BB #2907>

The Blake chapter offers “[a]n intelligent close reading of Milton as a ‘prelude’ to Jerusalem” (BB 2907).

Woodman Ross G. “Nietzsche, Blake, Keats and Shelley: The Making of a Metaphorical Body.” Studies in Romanticism 29.1 (spring 1990): 115-49. <BBS 684>⁴⁵⁷

How Blake, Keats, and Shelley anticipate Nietzsche’s idea of the textual body.

Austen, Jane (1775-1817)

Mazzeo, Tilar J. “William Blake and the Decorative Arts.” The Regency Revisited. Ed. Tim Fulford and Michael E. Sinatra. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2016. 63-80. <WBHC 2384>

With references to Jane Austen, Thomas Phillips’s portrait, and George Cumberland’s Thoughts on Outline, asserts Blake’s place among the fashionable, stressing his interest “at particular moments of his career in both portrait miniature and in interior design, especially interior design inflected by themes” and arguing “that this constellation of ‘commercial’ investments shaped Jerusalem, in particular, in significant ways” (64).

Rainbolt, Martha M. “The Likeness of Austen’s Jane Bennet: Huet-Villiers’ ‘Portrait of Mrs. Q.’” English Language Notes 26.2 (Dec. 1988): 35-43. <BBS 611-12>

Suggests that “Blake’s engraving of ‘Mrs. Q’ may have supplied the physical details for Jane Bennet (40)” (BBS 612).

⁴⁵⁷ BBS erroneously gives the last page as “119.”

Baillie, Joanna (1762-1851) (See also Theater)

Clark, Steve. "Closet Drama: Gender and Performance in Blake and Joanna Baillie." Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 165-75. <WBHC 1800-01>

Compares Blake and Baillie, arguing for the importance of the theater to Blake.

Wright, Julia M. "Baillie and Blake: at the Intersection of Allegory and Drama." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 270-78. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Sketches "some of the ways in which Blake's spectacular displays of dynamic interiority, especially in his early female characters" are "consistent with contemporary dramatic theory, particularly that of Joanna Baillie" in Plays on the Passions (1798) (271).

Barbauld, Anna Laetitia (1743-1825)⁴⁵⁸ (See also Hymns and Songs of Innocence and of Experience)

Kennedy, Thomas C. "From Anne Barbauld's Hymns in Prose to William Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." Philological Quarterly 77.4 (1998): 359-76. <WBHC 2248>

With many references to Island in the Moon, contends that the Songs and Hymns are "inversion[s]" of each other (361).

Rix, Robert. "William Blake's 'The Tyger': Divine and Beastly Bodies in Eighteenth-Century Children's Poetry." ANQ: A Quarterly Journal of Short Articles, Notes, and Reviews 25.4 (2012): 222-27. <WBHC 2595>

Analyzes "The Tyger" in the context of late eighteenth-century children's poetry, with some references to Isaac Watts, Anna Laetitia Barbauld, and the Wesleys.

Williams, Porter, Jr. "The Influence of Mrs. Barbauld's Hymns in Prose for Children upon Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." A Fair Day in the Affections: Literary Essays in Honor of Robert B. White, Jr. Ed. Jack D. Durant and M. Thomas Hester. Raleigh, NC, 1980. 131-46. <BBS 680>

Important essay on Barbauld's influence on the Songs.

Barlow, Joel (1754-1812)

Erdman, David V. "William Blake's Debt to Joel Barlow." American Literature 26.1 (Mar. 1954): 94-98. <BB #1577>

Reads America alongside the Fifth Book of Barlow's The Vision of Columbus (1787).

Bryant, Jacob (1715-1804) (See also Jacob Bryant, A New System and Mythology and Symbolism)

Grant, Philip B. "A Possible Source for a Blake Sketch and Drawing." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.3 (winter 1975-76): 85-87. <BBS 381>

⁴⁵⁸ Lincoln corrected his claim in his facsimile edition of the Songs (1991), 14, that Blake engraved a plate for Anna Letitia Barbauld's Hymns in Prose for Children (1781) in his "To the Editors," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993), 45.

Suggests that dog-headed depiction of Hermes in Bryant's New System is the source for the drawing of a dog-headed man (Butlin #87) documented by Tolley's "Some Blake Puzzles—Old and New."

Hall, Mary Starritt. "Blake's Tiriel: A Visionary Form Pedantic." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 74 (1970): 166-76. <BB #1774>

Argues that Blake drew his characters' names and their descriptions from Jacob Bryant's descriptions of the Greek Titans.

Helms, Randel. "Another Source of Blake's Orc." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.4 (spring 1982): 198-99. <BBS 393>

Suggests that at least part of the symbolism tied to Orc stemmed from Jacob Bryant's Ancient Mythology, which described "the forest of Orcun" that stood next to a "mountain [that] had once flamed" (Bryant I.210, 211, qtd. in Helms 198).

Keynes, Geoffrey. "The Engraver's Apprentice." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 14-30. <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

An account of Blake's apprenticeship and descriptions of his Westminster drawings, an identification of the symbols Blake borrowed from Jacob Bryant's New System, or An Analysis of Ancient Mythology (1774-76), the engraving of Joseph of Arimathea, and his signature in a copy of Fuseli's translation of Winkelmann's Reflections on the Painting and Sculpture of the Greeks (1765).

Roe, Albert S. "Thunder of Egypt." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 158-95. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

On Blake's use of Egyptian art, with references to Jacob Bryant and Erasmus Darwin.

Ryan, Mark. "striving with Systems to deliver Individuals': William Blake's Psychic Re-animation of Greek Myth." Working With English: Medieval and Modern Language, Literature and Drama 7 (2011): 46-58. <WBHC 2624>

"Specifically, for Blake, Greek myth presents a context in which the debasement of poetical vision takes place while involving a reaction of thought that attempts to reinvigorate a 'Golden Age'. However, for Blake, the corruptions of Greek society prevented the redevelopment of a 'Poetic Genius' and Blake's interest in mythography led him to investigate the cultivation of aesthetic ideas in other societies" (46). Discusses Jacob Bryant, Milton, and Laocoön.

Burke, Edmund (1729-97) (See also Mary Wollstonecraft, Thomas Paine, the Sublime, Political and Historical Criticism, The French Revolution, America, and Europe)

De Luca, Vincent A. "'Crouding After Night': Troping and the Sublime in Poetical Sketches." Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake's Poetical Sketches. Ed. Mark L. Greenberg. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1996. 153-64. <WBHC 2104-05>

On Blake's early efforts at the sublime, with references to Lowth's Hebraisms and Burke.

Fairbanks, A. Harris. "Blake, Burke, and the Clanrickard Monument." Blake: an Illustrated Quarterly 31.3 (winter 1997-98): 76-81. <WBHC 1671>

Suggests the phrase, "One King, one God, One Law," in Urizen stems from the inscription, "Un Roy, un Foy, un Loy," on the Westminster monument to Ann, Countess of Clanrickard, a relative of Edmund Burke.

Ibata, Hélène. The Challenge of the Sublime: From Burke's "Philosophical Enquiry" to British Romantic Art. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. <Blake (2020)>

On Burke's notion of the sublime and its reception in artistic circles. There are many relevant chapters on Blake and his circle, including Reynolds, Barry, West, and Fuseli. The chapter on Blake is titled "Against and beyond Burke: Blake's 'sublime Labours'" (235-66).

Lee, Tara. "[Vital Heat and the Organized Body: Burke, Blake, The French Revolution and The \[First\] Book of Urizen](#)." European Romantic Review 34.5 (2023): 527-48. <Blake (2024)>

"This article puts Blake in intimate dialogue with Burke, Sieyès, and other revolutionary and reactionary writers who evocatively updated the body politic metaphor to describe a radically changing political landscape" (abstract).

Mertz, J.B. "Teaching the Revolution Debate: Edmund Burke, His Radical Respondents, and William Blake." Teaching Representations of the French Revolution. Ed. Julia Douthwaite Viglione, Antoinette Sol, and Catriona Seth. New York: MLA, 2019. <Blake 2020>

Describes teaching The French Revolution as a response to Edmund Burke.

Miner, Paul. "Blake and Burke: The Dread Majesty of the Foetus." Notes and Queries 61.1 (Mar. 2014): 22-27. <WBHC 2409>

On the influence of Burke's A Philosophical Enquiry into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful: "Though scholars in pursuing this intellectual thread have firmly established Burke's influence on Blake, important derivations from Burke's famous volume remain undetected" (22).

Paulson, Ronald. "Burke's Sublime and the Representation of Revolution." Culture and Politics from Puritanism to the Enlightenment. Ed. Perez Zagorin. Berkeley, Los Angeles, London: University of California Press, 1980. 241-70. <WBHC 2509>

On Blake's depiction of revolution in America largely in relationship to Burke and Rowlandson.

Burns, Robert (1759-1795) (See also Robert Hartley Cromek)

Damrosch, Leopold, Jr. "Burns, Blake, and the Recovery of the Lyric." Studies in Romanticism 21.4 (1982): 637-60. <BBS 447>

Considers the Romantic recovery of the lyric, using Burns and Blake ("How sweet I roam'd from field to field," "The Sick Rose," and "The Tyger") as his primary examples.

Kroeber, Karl. "Inventing the Unconscious." "Ditties of No Tone." British Romantic Art. Berkeley, Los Angeles, London: University of California Press, 1986. 9-33. 59-81. <BBS 541>

“Inventing the Unconscious” compares Blake and Hogarth, using The Book of Urizen and Industry and Idleness as primary examples. “Ditties of No Tone” compares Blake and Burns, using The Songs of Innocence and of Experience and Poems Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect as primary examples.

Noble, Andrew. “Burns, Blake, and Romantic Revolt.” The Art of Robert Burns. Ed. R.D.S. Jack and Andrew Noble. London and Totowa, 1982. 191-214. <BBS 587-88>

“If [Blake and Burns were] not identical twins, they were certainly spiritual kindred” (193).

Saintsbury, George. “Burns, Blake, and the Close of the Eighteenth Century (with an Excursus on Ossian). A History of English Prosody. Vol. III. London: Macmillan, 1910. 9-42. <BB #2614>

Despite its age, a good overview of Blake in the context of late eighteenth century prosody, with brief discussions of Burns, Darwin, Hayley, Maria Williams, and Ossian.

Byron, George Gordon, Sixth Baron Byron (1788-1824) (See also The Ghost of Abel)

Introduction

McGann, Jerome. “Byron.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 200-10. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Bidney, Martin. “Cain and The Ghost of Abel: Contexts for Understanding Blake’s Response to Byron.” Blake Studies 8.2 (1979): 145-65. <BBS 412>

Suggests that Blake wrote a new ending for Byron’s Cain.

Cocharan, Peter. “Blake, Byron and the Blushing Archangels.” The Blake Journal 6 (2001): 5-17. <WBHC 1749>

Comparison of the writers, with reference to The Ghost of Abel.

Goldberg, Brian. “Byron, Blake, and Heaven.” Romanticism on the Net 27 (Aug. 2002): 34 pars. <WBHC 2086>

Compares Byron and Blake’s “theories of heaven” (abstract).

Green, Matthew J.A. “Voices in the Wilderness: Satire and Sacrifice in Blake and Byron.” Byron Journal 36.2 (Dec. 2008): 117-29. <WBHC 2104>

Views Blake and Byron in “the larger tradition of Menippean satire” (117).

McGann, Jerome. “Blake and Byron; or, Art and Imagination after the Second Fall.” Christianity and Literature 66.4 (Sept. 2017): 609-30. <Blake (2018)>

“[G]ives a close study of their shared preoccupation with the politics, both psychic and historical, of guilt, retribution, atonement, and forgiveness and their respective, specifically imaginative, treatments of these subjects” (abstract).

McKeever, Kerry Ellen. “Naming the Name of the Prophet: William Blake’s Reading of Byron’s Cain: A Mystery.” Studies in Romanticism 34.4 (1995): 615-36. <WBHC 2389>

Offers “a close reading of Elijah’s story” to “more thoroughly inform Blake’s appeal to Byron in the name of the prophet” (616).

Reisner, Thomas A. “Cain: Two Romantic Interpretations.” Culture 31 (1970): 124-43. <BB #2508>

Largely a summary of The Ghost of Abel and Byron’s Cain.

Sorensen, Peter J. “Blake as Byron’s Biographer: An Anthroposophic Reading of The Ghost of Abel.” Wordsworth Circle 30.3 (summer 1999): 161-65. <WBHC 2881>

“Blake wanted to rescue Byron” in The Ghost of Abel (161).

Tannenbaum, Leslie. “Blake and the Iconography of Cain.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 23-34. <BBS 467, WBHC 2003-04>

On Blake’s rewriting of the iconography of Cain.

Tannenbaum, Leslie. “Lord Byron in the Wilderness: Biblical Tradition in Byron’s Cain and Blake’s Ghost of Abel.” Modern Philology 72.4 (May 1975): 350-64. <BBS 657>

Examines the reference to Byron in The Ghost of Abel in light of “Blake’s citation of biblical tradition” (351).

Tayler, Irene. “Blake Meets Byron on April Fool’s.” English Language Notes 16.2 (1978): 85-93. <BBS 657>

“About laughter in Blake, especially in The Ghost of Abel” (BBS 657).

Whitehead, Angus. “A Quotation from Lord Byron’s The Two Foscari in William Blake’s The Ghost of Abel.” Notes and Queries 53.3 (2006): 325-26. <WBHC 2849-50>

“‘Life for Life! Life for Life!’ in Blake’s Ghost of Abel (1822) also appears in Act IV of Byron’s The Two Foscari, which was bound and issued with Byron’s Cain and Sardanapalus (1821)” (WBHC 2850).

Clare, John (1793-1864)

Hannah, Daniel. “Invitations and Withdrawals: Queer Romantic Ecologies in William Blake’s The Book of Thel and John Clare’s ‘The Nightingale’s Nest.’” Essays in Romanticism 20 (2013): 1-18. <WBHC 2125>

Examines the poems through the lens of Queer Ecology.

Coleridge, Samuel Taylor (1772-1834)

Primary

Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Collected Letters of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. Ed. Earl Leslie Griggs. 6 vols. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1959. 4.833-34; 836-38. <BB #1407>

Two letters from 6 and 12 Feb. 1818 to Charles Tulk that record his reaction to the Songs.⁴⁵⁹

Secondary

Barr, Mark L. Coleridge, Blake, and the Autonomous Reader. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

“I would suggest then that Romantic literary production, born in a formative moment for the rule of law, works to uphold that rule or at least attempts to formulate an idea expression of it by framing its poetic subject in a particular way” (9).

Baulch, David M. “Reading Coleridge Reading Blake.” Coleridge Bulletin 16 (2000): 5-14. <WBHC 1588>

On Coleridge’s Feb. 1818 letter on Blake.

Beer, John. “Blake, Coleridge and ‘the Riddle of the World.’” Romanticism, Revolution and Language: The Fate of the Word from Samuel Johnson to George Eliot. Cambridge and New York: Cambridge University Press, 2009. <WBHC 1590-91>

On Blake’s and Coleridge’s sense of contradiction, touching on their relationships to Milton and highlighting the couplet, “Do what you will, this Life’s a Fiction / And is made up of Contradiction,” from “The Everlasting Gospel.”

Beer, John. “Lamb, Coleridge, and Blake.” Charles Lamb Bulletin 136 (2006): 105-06. <WBHC 1593>

On the men’s connections and knowledge of each other.

Ferber, Michael. “Coleridge’s ‘Anacalyptic’ Blake: An Exegesis.” Modern Philology 76.2 (1978): 189-93. <BBS 470>

Explicates Coleridge 1818 remarks on Blake.

Jackson, H.J. “‘swedenborg’s Meaning is the truth’: Coleridge, Tulk and Swedenborg.” Philosophy Literature Mysticism: An Anthology of Essays on the Thought and Influence of Emanuel Swedenborg. Ed. Stephen McNeilly. London: The Swedenborg Society, 2013.⁴⁶⁰ <WBHC 2407>

On what Tulk tried to teach Coleridge about Swedenborg, and Coleridge’s largely skeptical engagement.

Jessen, Elisabeth Engell. “Boehme and the Early English Romantics.” An Introduction to Jacob Boehme: Four Centuries of Thought and Reception. Ed. Ariel Hessayon and Sarah Apetrei. New York: Routledge, 2014. ⁴⁶¹

On Boehme’s influence on Blake and Coleridge.

⁴⁵⁹ Coleridge’s letter is reproduced at the website for 2024 Sotheby’s auction, William Blake: “Poems with very wild and interesting pictures.”

⁴⁶⁰ Originally published in In Search of the Absolute—Essays on Swedenborg and Literature, ed. and intro. Stephen McNeilly (London: Journal of the Swedenborg Society, 2004), 1-14.

⁴⁶¹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Johnson, Mary Lynne. "Coleridge's Prose and a Blake Plate in Stedman's Narrative: Unfastening the 'Hooks & eyes' of Memory." Wordsworth Circle 13.1 (1982): 36-38. <BBS 527>

On Coleridge's references to reading Stedman and his possible reaction to the engraving, "A Negro hung alive by the Ribs to a Gallows."

Lewis, Kevin. "The Impasse of Coleridge and the Way of Blake." The Interpretation of Belief: Coleridge, Schleiermacher and Romanticism. Ed. David Jasper. London, 1986. 225-43. New York: St. Martin's Press, 1986. <BBS 550>

"[W]hile William Blake is effectively a Modern, Coleridge remains an Ancient whose thought, for that reason, remains effectively unavailable for appropriately modern enterprise of theological reformulation" (225).

Lines, Richard. "Coleridge and Charles Augustus Tulk." Charles Lamb Bulletin 140 (2007): 167-79.⁴⁶²

A useful introduction to Tulk and his friendship with Coleridge, with references to Blake, Flaxman, and the Swedenborgian John Clowes.

Lines, Richard. " 'The Inventions of William Blake, Painter and Poet': An Early Appreciation of Blake's Genius." The Journal of the Blake Society at St. James 4 (1999): 56-65. <WBHC 2227>

"An intelligent argument that the author of the essay in London University Magazine (March 1830) is Charles Augustus Tulk" (WBHC 2227).

McElderry, B.R., Jr. "Coleridge on Blake's Songs." Modern Language Quarterly 9 (1948): 298-302. <BB #2199>

On Coleridge's commentary on the Songs in his 1818 letter to Charles Augustus Tulk.

Paley, Morton D. Samuel Taylor Coleridge and the Fine Arts. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2008. 188-93. <WBHC 2499>

"Discusses especially Coleridge's letter of 6 February 1818 about Blake's Songs" (WBHC 2499).

Paley, Morton D. "'Two Congenial Beings from Another Sphere': Blake and Coleridge." Blake Journal 10 (2006): 26-45. <WBHC 1757>

"A rewarding Blake Society lecture" (WBHC 1757).

Schwenger, Peter. "Blake's Boxes, Coleridge's Circles, and the Frame of Romantic Vision." Studies in Romanticism 35.1 (spring 1996): 98-117. <WBHC 2660>

On Romantic framing, especially as exemplified by Blake's drawing "Elisha in the Chamber on the Wall" and by Coleridge's poem, "Kubla Kahn."

Stevenson, Warren. Divine Analogy: A Study of the Creation Motif in Blake and Coleridge. Salzburg: University of Salzburg, 1972. <BB #A2756, WBHC 2708>

⁴⁶² Not recorded in WBHC.

On their depictions of the creation and its implications for their aesthetic theory.

Wheeler, Kathleen. “Blake, Coleridge, and Eighteenth-Century Greek Scholarship.” Wordsworth Circle 30 (1999): 89-94. <WBHC 2847>

“Blake, Coleridge, and to a lesser extent, Wordsworth, took advantage of the advances in Greek textual scholarship after 1700, to imbibe the literature and philosophy of classical Greece” (89).

Cowper, William (1731-1800) (See also William Hayley, The Life and Posthumous Writings of William Cowper, Annotations to Spurzheim, and Letters)

Blake and Cowper

Barry Kevin. “Autonomous Song: Chabanon and Blake.” Language, Music, and the Sign: A Study in Aesthetics, Poetics and Poetic Practice from Collins to Coleridge. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1987. <WBHC 1583>

Positions Blake’s and Cowper’s invocations of music against the musical theories of James Ussher (1720-72) and Michel-Paul Guy de Chabanon (1730-92).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake, Hayley, and Lady Hesketh.” The Review of English Studies 7.27 (Jul. 1956): 264-86. <BB #1157>

Important early article on Hayley’s relationship to Lady Hesketh (Cowper’s cousin) in writing the Life of Cowper and on Lady Hesketh’s views of Blake and of his work for Hayley, which were not as negative as previous work had suggested. Lays out key details about Blake’s time in Felpham.

Davie, Donald. “Conclusion.” The Eighteenth-Century Hymn in England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1993. 155-58. <WBHC 1921>

Davie ends his study of the eighteenth-century hymn (stretching from John Byrom and Isaac Watts to John Newton and William Cowper) with a discussion of Blake’s relationship to this tradition.

Elfenbein, Andrew. “Cowper, Blake, and the Figure of The Invader.” The Friend: Comment on Romanticism 1 (Oct. 1992): 10-19. <WBHC 1980>

Observes that “[b]oth ‘Blake’s ‘A Poison Tree’ . . . and Cowper’s ‘On the Death of Mrs. Throckmorton’s Bullfinch’” use the phrase ‘veild the pole’ (10)” (WBHC 1980) to suggest Blake read Cowper’s poem.

Gill, Frederick C. “The Pre-Romantics.” The Romantic Movement and Methodism: A Study of English Romanticism and the Evangelical Revival. London, 1937. New York: Haskell House, 1966. 146-59. <BB #1685>

Blake is paired with Cowper in the chapter.

Hilton, Nelson. “What has Songs to do with Hymns?” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1999. <WBHC 1863-65> 96-113.

A critically sophisticated analysis of how Blake's Songs utilized the conventions of eighteenth-century hymnody, with discussions of Isaac Watts, John and Charles Wesley, John Newton, William Cowper, Phillip Doddridge, and the Muggletonians and focusing at greatest length on "To Tizrah."

MacDonald, D. L. "Pre-Romantic and Romantic Abolitionism: Cowper and Blake." European Romantic Review 4.2 (1993): 163-82. <WBHC 2357>

On Cowper's "Pity for Poor Africans," Blake's "The Little Black Boy," and their relationship to abolitionism and especially Thomas Clarkson's Essay on the Slavery and Commerce of the Human Species, particularly the African (1786).

McConkey, Matthew. "still Repeated Circles': William Cowper's The Task and the Shape of Habit." Cambridge Quarterly 51.3 (2022): 242-57. <Blake (2023)>

"For Cowper, then, the idea of habit is a means of weighing the oppositional demands of the embodied and the immaterial self" (abstract).

Minnick, Thomas L. "Blake and Cowper's Tame Hares." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 11-12. <BB #1217.60>

Notes the signature on the Weather-House engraving for vol. II of Hayley's Life of Cowper.

Paley, Morton D. "Cowper as Blake's Spectre." Eighteenth Century Studies 1 (1968): 236-52. <BB #2345>

"There is much to suggest that the model for the Spectre of Jerusalem 10 was" William Cowper (237).

Pechey, Graham. "The London Motif in Some Eighteenth-Century Contexts." Literature and History 4 (1976): 2-29. <BBS 601>

Examines contemporary eighteenth-century uses of the imagery and verbiage in "London," including James Thomson and William Cowper.

Ryskamp, Charles. "Blake's Cowperian Sketches." Review of English Studies 9.33 (1958): 48-49. <BB #2607>

Identifies a sketch "for the proposed monument to Cowper at East Dereham" (48) on Hayley's 12 Feb. 1802 letter to Lady Hesketh and "an original pencil sketch of Cowper" (48).

Ryskamp, Charles. "Blake's Drawing of Cowper's Monument." Princeton University Library Chronicle 24.1 (1962): 27-31. <BB #2608>

On Blake's sketch for the monument of Cowper designed by Hayley (Butlin #357) and its impact on Flaxman's monument.

Ryskamp, Charles. "Lawrence's Portrait of Cowper." Princeton University Library Chronicle 20.3 (1959): 140-44. <BB #2609>

On the painting by Lawrence and the drawings and engravings of it by Ridley, Bartolozzi, and Blake, with references to William Hayley, Lady Hasketh, and Samuel Rose.

Whitehead, Angus. "William Blake's Subsidiary Design of a Dog in his 'Heads of the Poets' Tempera of William Cowper \(c. 1800-1803\): An Identification." Notes and Queries 53.3 (2006): 316-20. <WBHC 2850-51>

Identifies the dog as the spaniel described in Cowper's poem, An Epitaph, and suggests that "Night veil'd the pole" in "A Poison Tree" echoes Cowper's "On the Death of Mrs. Throckmorton's Bulfinch" (1789).

Cowper without Blake

Addison, Joan. "William Cowper and George Romney: Public and Private Men." The Cowper & Newton Journal 5 (2015): n.p.

On Cowper and Romney's relationship, touching on Romney's portrait of Cowper but not Blake's engraving of it.

Farrell, Molly. "Data as Poetry in Cowper's Statistical 'Effusions.'" ELH 87.4 (2020): 1025-54. <Blake (2022)>

In a thoughtful article examining poetry's relationship to statistics, Farrell argues that Cowper's "Verses Subjoined to the Bill of Mortality of Northampton" "take the foundational documents of biopolitical governmentality as a source of inspiration and even a model for creative innovation" (1027-28).

Gee, Lisa. "William the Conqueror: The Friendship between William Hayley and William Cowper." The Cowper & Newton Journal 3 (2013): n.p.

A useful overview of the men's friendship.

Oishi, Kaz. "William Cowper and Suburban Environmental Aesthetics." Romantic Environmental Sensibility: Nature, Class and Empire. Ed. Ve-Yin Tee. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2022. 141-56. <Blake (2023)>

"Taking two poems by William Cowper, The Task (1785) and 'Retirement' (1782), this chapter situates their increasing awareness of the relationship between human well-being and the living environment in the context of eighteenth- and nineteenth-century suburbanization" (141).

Ryskamp, Charles. "William Cowper and His Circle: A Study of the Hannay Collection." Princeton University Library Chronicle 24.1 (1962): 2-26.

A description of the Neilson Campbell Hannay Collection of William Cowper at the Princeton Library, which includes books, manuscripts, letters, and the extra-illustration drawings of Cowper's works by William Upcott. The article prints Cowper's previously unpublished letters to John Duncombe (1729-1786).

Stokes, Christopher. "'The solitary saint walks forth to meditate at even-tide': Evangelical Prayer and Interiority in William Cowper." Romantic Prayer: Reinventing the Poetics of Devotion, 1773-1832. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2021. 39-67. <Blake (2025)>

"Anxious attempts to turn inwards towards this deep root of identity involve Cowper in a traumatic experience of self-enquiry as self-division" (41).

Townsend, Chris. “Poetic Injustice: Blank-Versed Abolitionism and Cowper’s The Task.” European Romantic Review 35.3 (2024): 495-510. <Blake (2025)>

“Taking as a case study William Cowper’s The Task of 1785—the poem of Cowper’s that gained him the attention of the Society for Effecting the Abolition of the Slave Trade in 1787—this essay considers some of the reasons why heroic couplets came to be treated with suspicion by politicized poets at the end of the eighteenth century, and thinks through some of the affordances of blank verse, in particular, that marked it out as attractive to abolitionists like Cowper (abstract).

Cristall, Ann Batten (1769-1848) (See also Poetical Sketches)

Connolly, Tristanne. “Transgender Juvenilia: Blake’s and Cristall’s Poetical Sketches. Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 16-25. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Compares Blake’s Poetical Sketches to a volume that shares the same name by Ann Cristall: “Both poets assimilate, but not just tradition; they ingeniously assimilate the other gender, taking on, and blending, male and female voices at will” (33).

Matthews, Susan. “Blake’s Malkin.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 108-29. <WBHC 1899-1900>

A key overview of Malkin’s life, his connections (including Ann Batten Cristall), and his relationship to Blake.

Darwin, Erasmus (1731-1802) (Fletcher chapter 3) (See also Joseph Johnson, Henry Fuseli, and Erasmus Darwin, The Botanic Garden)

Biographies

King-Hele, D. Erasmus Darwin: A Life of Unequalled Achievement. London: Giles de la Mare, 1999.

King-Hele, Desmond, ed. Charles Darwin’s Life of Erasmus Darwin. First Unabridged Edition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003.

Wilson, Philip K., Elizabeth A. Dolan, and Malcolm Dick, ed. Anna Seward’s Life of Erasmus Darwin. Studley, Warwickshire: Brewin Books, 2010.

Originally published 1804.

Writing

Darwin, Erasmus. The Botanic Garden. Illus. William Blake et al. Ed. Adam Komisaruk and Allison Dushane. 2 vols. Abingdon: Routledge, 2017. <Blake (2018, 2019)>

King-Hele, Desmond, ed. The Collected Letters of Erasmus Darwin. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2007.

“Erasmus Darwin: Letters and Related Correspondence, 1768-1819.” Cambridge University Library.

Digitized collection of letters.

Studies

Blake and Darwin

Bernath, Elizabeth. “‘seeking Flowers to Comfort Her’: Queer Botany in Blake’s Visions, Darwin’s Loves and Wollstonecraft’s Rights of Woman.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 111-22. <WBHC 1800-01>

“Alongside Blake’s botany in the 1790s [in Visions], I consider how two authors in Joseph Johnson’s circle of radical intellectuals, Erasmus Darwin and Mary Wollstonecraft, portray gender from botanically informed perspectives that suggest the naturalness of transgender and homoerotic sexualities” (111).

Brylowe, Thora. “Antiquity by Design: Mediating the Portland Vase.” Romantic Antiquarianism. Ed. Noah Heringman and Crystal B. Lake. Romantic Praxis Volume. 2014.

“The Portland Vase serves as a useful example of Romantic-era management of antiquity as both economic and cultural capital, and it points to a multifaceted mediation of ancient artifacts that crosses and complicates the categories of art and craft” (par. 1). Blake, Darwin, Wedgwood, and William Hamilton are discussed.

Connolly, Tristanne. “‘Mistaken for Natives of the Soil’: Translation and Erasmus Darwin’s Loves of the Plants.” British Romanticism in European Perspective: Into the Eurozone. Ed. Steve Clark and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2015. 133-54. <Blake (2019)>

Examines Joseph Philippe Francois Deleuze’s 1800 translation of Loves of the Plants (1789).

Corti, Claudia. “Orti apocalittici. Erasmus Darwin e William Blake tra poesia, arte e scienze naturali.” Rivista di letterature moderne e comparate 71.4 (2018): 349-63. In Italian. <Blake (2020)>

Dauphin, Caroline. “La métamorphose d’Ovide: transformations poétiques et végétales dans la poésie d’Erasmus Darwin et de William Blake.” Inconstances romantiques: Visions et révisions dans la littérature britannique du long XIX^e siècle. Ed. Antonella Braida-Laplace, Sophie Laniel-Musitelli, and Céline Sabiron, Nancy: Presses universitaires de Nancy-Éditions universitaires de Lorraine, 2019. In French. <Blake (2021)>

On Ovid’s Metamorphoses as hypotext for Blake’s hybrid plants in the Songs, The Book of Thel, and Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Doxey, William S. “William Blake and the Lunar Society.” Notes and Queries 18.9 (1971): 343. <BB #1515>

Notes that Darwin wrote in a 5 Apr. 1778 letter that he wouldn’t be able to attend the meeting of the Lunar Society that was being held in Soho.

Erle, Sibylle. “Shadows in the Cave: Refocusing Vision in Blake’s Creation Myth.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 144-63. <WBHC 2113-15>

On Blake's depictions of the eye and vision in relationship to John Locke and Isaac Newton; Swedenborg and the Swedenborgian optician, George Adams; and John Hunter and Erasmus Darwin.

Goldstein, Amanda Jo. "Blake's Mundane Egg: Epigenesis and Milieux." Sweet Science: Romantic Materialism and the New Logics of Life. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2017. 35-71. <Blake (2018)>

"Reading scenes of embryogenesis from The First Book of Urizen (1794), Milton (c. 1804-1811), and Jerusalem (1804-c. 1820) with related poetic prose accounts from Erasmus Darwin and Jean Baptiste Lamarck, this chapter presents a now unfamiliar premise that, I argue, held contemporary experimental life science open to poetic participation" (36).

Gourlay, Alexander S. Rev. of Erasmus Darwin, The Botanic Garden, ed. Adam Komisaruk and Allison Dushane. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.4 (spring 2022): 9 pars. <Blake (2023)>

Includes a short appendix, "Darwin's Anemone and Blake's Thel," which suggests Darwin's influence on the title page of The Book of Thel.

Green, Matthew. "Blake, Darwin and the Promiscuity of Knowing: Rethinking Blake's Relationship to the Midlands Enlightenment." Journal for Eighteenth-Century Studies 30.2 (2007): 193-208. <WBHC 2102>

Reconsiders Blake's knowledge of Erasmus Darwin and his circle.

Hilton, Nelson. "The Spectre of Darwin." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.1 (summer 1981): 36-48. <BBS 391-92>

"This discussion will offer some examples of how Blake could have built on images and concepts supplied by Darwin—images and concepts available elsewhere, to a regular reader of Philosophical Transactions for instance, but most accessible to us, and possibly to Blake, in their strange poetic and annotated guise" (37). Highlights The Four Zoas, Urizen, and Blake's engravings of Darwin.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "Blake and the Wedgwoods." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 59-65. .⁴⁶³ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

On Blake's relationship to the Wedgwoods, with references to Erasmus Darwin and The Botanic Garden, and the first publication of Josiah Wedgwood's and Blake's 1815 correspondence and receipts.

King-Hele, Desmond. "Disenchanted Darwinians: Wordsworth, Coleridge, Blake." Wordsworth Circle 25.2 (1994), 114-18. <WBHC 2256-57>

Short discussion of Darwin's possible influence on Blake's poetry.

King-Hele, Desmond. "Blake." Erasmus Darwin and the Romantic Poets. London: Macmillan Press, 1986. 35-61. <BBS 536>

⁴⁶³ "The great part first printed in" (59n1) TLS (9 Dec. 1926), <BB #2043>.

Surveys Blake's poetry for the influence of Darwin.

King-Hele, Desmond. "A Twist in the Tale of 'The Tyger.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 23.2 (fall 1989): 104-06. <BBS 405>

Points out anticipations of the diction and rhymes of "The Tyger" in Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden.

Kroeber, Karl. "Infirm Persuasion." Studies in Romanticism 21.3 (fall 1982): 428-30. <BBS 649-50>

Argues for a detailed chronology of Blake's life and that more attention be paid to Blake's relationship to science (especially Erasmus Darwin) and art.

Leonard, David Charles. "Erasmus Darwin and William Blake." Eighteenth-Century Life 4.3 (1978): 79-81. <BBS 548-49>

"The account of the evolution of species in Urizen appears to derive from Darwin's Economy of Vegetation (1791) and Zoonomia (1794), Part I" (BBS 549).

McNeil, Maureen. "Newton as National Hero." Let Newton Be! Ed. John Fauvel et al. Oxford, New York, Tokyo: Oxford University Press, 1988. Rpt. 1989. 223-39. <BBS 570, WBHC 2391>

On Newton's eighteenth-century reception, with the first half of the essay contrasting Blake's and Erasmus Darwin's views of Newton. (Along with two pictures of Harpo Marx as Newton.)

McNeil, Maureen. "The Scientific Muse: The Poetry of Erasmus Darwin." Language of Nature: Critical Essays on Science and Literature. Ed. L.J. Jordanova. London, 1986. 223-39. <BBS 570>

An overview of Darwin's career and thought, with references to Isaac Newton, Joseph Priestley, and Blake.

Okada, Kazuya. "'Typhon, the lower nature': Blake and Egypt as the Orient." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. London: Continuum, 2006. 29-37. <WBHC 1857-62>

On Blake's Egyptian imagery, particularly in Blake's commercial engravings, Fertilization of Egypt and Tornado, for Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden (1791).

Porter, Dahlia. "Epistemic Images and Vital Nature: Darwin's Botanic Garden as Image Text Book." European Romantic Review 29.3 (2018): 295-308. <Blake (2019)>

"I argue that the full-page intaglio prints of plants in Darwin's book function as "epistemic images" by propounding a visual argument about organic life. The epistemic values embedded in the images of plants—specifically, the appearance of life and motion—are the result of artists' engraving techniques deployed in the service of eighteenth-century aesthetic conventions" (abstract).

Priestman, Martin. "'Fuseli's Poetic Eye': Prints and Impressions in Fuseli and Erasmus Darwin." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 94-118. <Blake (2020)>

Suggests that Fuseli's illustrations "functioned like meditations on Darwin's complex ideas" (14).

Roe, Albert S. "Thunder of Egypt." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 158-95. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

On Blake's use of Egyptian art, with references to Jacob Bryant and Erasmus Darwin.

Worrall, David. "William Blake and Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 78.4 (summer 1975): 397-417. <BB #A3007>

Foundational survey of Darwin's influence on Blake's works of the late 1780s and first half of the 1790s ("The Sick Rose," Vision, The French Revolution, America, and Urizen).

Wang, Fusun. "Blake's Revolutionary Metaphor." The Smallpox Report: Vaccination and the Romantic Illness Narrative. Toronto, Buffalo, London: University of Toronto Press, 2023. 86-119. <Blake (2024)>

In a wider book on Romantic-era inoculation, Wang reads "the medico-botanical metaphor" (88) of inoculation in Thel, Visions, and "The Sick Rose," building on his previous chapter on Erasmus Darwin.

Wu, Ya-feng. "Blake's Critique of Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden." Wordsworth Circle 50.1 (winter 2019): 55-73. <Blake (2020)>

Argues that Thel and Visions are critiques of Darwin, "Darwin's Evolutionary Metaphor."

Darwin without Blake

Acosta, Rebeca Araya. "Expanding Comparative Views: Erasmus Darwin's The Botanic Garden (1789-1791) and The Temple of Nature (1803)." Compiling Texts in Eighteenth-Century Britain: Mediating the Scottish Enlightenment. Cham: Palgrave, 2024. 207-274. <Blake (2025)>

Some references to Fuseli's designs but not Blake's engravings.

Bailes, Melissa. Regenerating Romanticism: Botany, Sensibility, and Originality in British Literature, 1750–1830. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2023. <Blake (2025)>

Darwin figures in chapters 2 and 6. There is passing mention of Blake and Fuseli.

Bailes, Melissa. "Linnaeus's Botanical Clocks: Chronobiological Mechanisms in the Scientific Poetry of Erasmus Darwin, Charlotte Smith, and Felicia Hemans." Studies in Romanticism 56.2 (summer 2017): 223-52. <Blake (2018)>

The Darwin section is on the "Floral Clock episode" of The Loves of Plants (228).

Bailes, Melissa. "Transformations of Gender and Race in Maria Riddell's Transatlantic Biopolitics." Eighteenth-Century Fiction 32.1 (fall 2019): 123-44. <Blake (2020)>

Reads Maria Riddell's Voyages to the Madeira, and Leeward Caribbean Isles (1792) in relation to Darwin and other naturalists.

Browne, Janet. “Botany for Gentlemen: Erasmus Darwin and The Loves of the Plants.” Journal of the History of Science 80 (1989): 593–621.

Largely on Darwin’s adaptation of Linnaeus and presents tables detailing Darwin’s depictions of women and sexual practices.

Calè, Luisa. “A Female Band Despising Nature’s Law’: Botany, Gender and Revolution in the 1790s.” Romanticism on the Net 17 (Feb. 2000): 29 pars.

On the political implications of women writers and artists (Wollstonecraft, Seward, and Kauffman) using the botanic sexualized language of Linnaeus and Erasmus Darwin, and the anti-Jacobin response.

Coffey, Donna. “Protecting the Botanic Garden: Seward, Darwin, and Coalbrookdale.” Women’s Studies 31.2 (2002): 141–64.

On the tension between Seward and Darwin over the impact of the industrial revolution on Coalbrookdale.

Cogan, Lucy. “Drunkenness, Compulsion, and the Disintegration of the Self: Erasmus Darwin’s Theory of Ebrietas in the Writings of Maria Edgeworth.” Life, Death, and Consciousness in the Long Nineteenth Century. Ed. Lucy Cogan and Michelle O’Connell. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

Blake is referenced slightly in the introduction to the book.

Connolly, Tristanne J. “Flowery Porn: Form and Desire in Erasmus Darwin’s ‘The Loves of the Plants.’” Literary Compass 13.1 (2016): 604–16.

“This article examines how The Loves of the Plants envisions a continuum of life forms and of disciplines by portraying and performing cross-species erotic interaction.

Personification of vegetable reproduction invites readers to conceive of their own desire in botanic terms (as, indeed, readers and parodists did)” (604).

Connolly, Tristanne. “‘Mistaken for Natives of the Soil’: Translation and Erasmus Darwin’s Loves of the Plants.” British Romanticism in European Perspective: Into the Eurozone. Ed. Steve Clark and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2015. 133-54. <Blake (2019)>

Examines Joseph Philippe Francois Deleuze’s 1800 translation of Loves of the Plants (1789).

Couch, Daniel Diez. “Poe, Sympathetic Ink, and Chemical Landscapes in Nineteenth-Century America.” Arizona Quarterly: A Journal of American Literature, Culture, and Theory 75.3 (fall 2019): 1-26. <Blake (2020)>

Includes discussion of Darwin’s depiction of sympathetic ink in The Economy of Vegetation (6-7).

Elliott, Paul A. Erasmus Darwin’s Gardens: Medicine, Agriculture and the Sciences in the Eighteenth Century. Woodbridge: Boydell Press, 2021. <Blake (2022)>

Fara, Patricia. Erasmus Darwin: Sex, Science, and Serendipity. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2012.

Slight discussion of Blake in a popular overview of Darwin.

Fetz, Marcelo. “Negotiating Boundaries: Encyclopédie, Romanticism, and the Construction of Science/Negociando fronteiras: Encyclopédie, romantismo e a construção da ciência.” História, Ciências, Saúde—Manguinhos 24.3 (July-Sept. 2017): 645-63. In English (abstracts in English and Portuguese). <Blake (2018)>

Griffiths, Devin. The Age of Analogy: Science and Literature between the Darwins. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2016. <Blake (2018)>

Considers scientific poetry.

Haut, Asia A. “Reading Flora: Erasmus Darwin’s The Botanic Garden, Henry Fuseli’s Illustrations, and Various Literary Responses.” Word & Image 20.4 (2004): 240-56.

“This essay focuses on a nexus of late eighteenth-century British botanically related texts -both literary and visual -in which the garden is revealed to be a site in which gender-dependent assertions over language are contested” (240). In addition to Fuseli’s illustrations to Darwin, work by Anna Seward (1742-1809) and Richard Polwhele’s The Unsex’d Females (1798) are considered.

Hernández-Avilez, Eva Guadalupe, and Rosaura Ruiz-Gutiérrez. “From One Darwin to Another: Charles Darwin’s Annotations to Erasmus Darwin’s ‘The Temple of Nature.’” Humanities and Social Sciences Communications 10 (2023): 11 pp. <Blake (2024)>

Notes the markings of Charles Darwin in his copy of The Temple of Nature to suggest that his “annotations indicate his and his grandfather’s shared interest in the competition for reproduction (sexual selection) and point to a more remarkable resemblance between Erasmus Darwin’s The Temple of Nature and Charles Darwin’s The Descent of Man (1871) rather than to Charles Darwin’s theory of evolution by means of natural selection (The Origin of Species), to which Erasmus’s ideas are more often compared” (abstract).

Jackson, Noel. “Rhyme and Reason: Erasmus Darwin’s Romanticism.” Modern Language Quarterly 70.2 (2009): 171-94.

“I want to show how The Botanic Garden was identified as a dangerously radical text not solely because of its content but because of the compound logic of its form” (175).

Kelley, Theresa M. Clandestine Marriage: Botany and Romantic Culture. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2012.

Morillo, John. “The Other Darwin: Posthumanism’s Dignified Pantomime, Eleusinian Mysteries of Evolution, and the Descent of Man in Erasmus Darwin’s Temple of Nature.” The Rise of Animals and Descent of Man, 1660–1800: Toward Posthumanism in British Literature between Descartes and Darwin. Newark: University of Delaware Press, 2018. 155-91. <Blake (2020)>

Patsoura, Elliot. "Toward a Genealogy of Geoengineering: Erasmus Darwin and the Little Ice Age." Eighteenth-Century Environmental Humanities. Ed. Jeremy Chow. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2023. <Blake (2023)>

"I explore how Darwin gives expression to the incapacity of nature to be fully domesticated, precisely in and among a proposal propounding the very necessity of its domestication."

Priestman, Martin. "'Fuseli's Poetic Eye': Prints and Impressions in Fuseli and Erasmus Darwin." Romanticism and Illustration. Ed. Ian Haywood, Susan Matthews, and Mary L. Shannon. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 94-118. <Blake (2020)>

Suggests that Fuseli's illustrations "functioned like meditations on Darwin's complex ideas" (14).

Priestman, Martin. The Poetry of Erasmus Darwin: Enlightened Spaces, Romantic Times. Farnham: Ashgate, 2013. <Blake (2018)>

Schwartz, Janelle A. "'Unchanging but in Form': The Aesthetic Episteme of Erasmus Darwin." Worm Work: Recasting Romanticism. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2012. 27-70.

Argues that The Temple of Nature (1803) "discloses Darwin's vision of organic wholeness in the natural world as an essentially vermicular activity" (xxv).

Thomasen, Laura Søvsø. "Showing and Telling Science—The Integrated Use of Literature and Images in the Works of Erasmus Darwin and Alexander von Humboldt." Interdisciplinary Science Reviews 42.3 (2017): 227-40. <Blake (2018)>

Chevalier d'Éon (1728-1810)

Mayberry, Tommy. "'Composite Gender' as the Book of Oothoon: Dress, Drag, and the Transgender Marygold Flower-Nymph." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 301-28. <Blake (2025)>

"Examining the historically documented transgender phenomenon of 'Molly Houses' and the cross-dressing Chevalier D'Éon as well as fashion styles post-French Revolution, I establish a background that supports a drag/trans- reading of Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion" (abstract).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "Blake's 'Mr. Femality': Freemasonry, Espionage, and the Double Sexed." Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 22 (1992), 51-71. <WBHC 2657>

Suggests that Mr. Femality in Island can be identified with the transgendered Chevalier d'Éon.

De Quincey, Thomas (1785-1859)

Primary

De Quincey, Thomas. "Sketches of Life and Manners, from the Autobiography of an Opium Eater." Tait's Edinburgh Magazine 7 (Mar. 1840), 166. <BB #A1478>

Cites the description of death as “a golden gate” from “To the Queen,” which was published in Blake’s edition of The Grave.

Secondary

Groves, David “Blake, The Grave, and Edinburgh Literary Society.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.1 (summer 1990): 251-52. ⁴⁶⁴ <BBS 406-07>

Notes an unrecorded November 1808 review of The Grave in Scots Magazine and touches on Thomas De Quincey’s knowledge of Blake.

Groves, David “Blake and the Edinburgh Literary Gazette—with a Note on Thomas De Quincey.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 25.3 (winter 1991-92): 127-31. <BBS 408>

Highlights two reviews of Allan Cunningham’s Lives of the Most Eminent British Painters (one for each volume), and second’s reference to Blake, which Groves argues could have been by De Quincey.

Godwin, William

Primary

The Diary of William Godwin. Ed. Victoria Myers, David O’shaughnessy, and Mark Philp Oxford: Oxford Digital Library, 2010.

Identifies two of the people named Blake in Godwin’s diary as the poet, painter, and engraver.⁴⁶⁵

On 16 Apr. 1796: “tea miss [Mary] Hayes, w[ith] [Samuel] Hamilton, Blake, [Joshua] Cristall, mrs Gregory [unknown] & dr Crawford [unknown].”

On 4 Apr. 1797: “Dine at [Joseph] Johnson’s, w[ith] [Henry] Fuseli, [Charles] Grignion [the Elder or Younger?], Blake, Dr Anderson [unknown] & A[rthur] Aikin.”

Secondary

Erdman, David V. “Blake and Godwin.” Notes and Queries 1.1 (1954): 66-67. <BB #1558>

Considers it possible that Blake lent Godwin money as implied by Tatham’s Life.

Erdman, David V. “‘Blake’ Entries in Godwin’s Diary.” Notes and Queries [old series] 198 (1953): 354-56. <BB #1559>

Notes that there are few people named “Blake” mentioned in Godwin’s diary.

⁴⁶⁴ As BBS points out (406n1), the pagination for Blake should have started anew with this issue. “[Correction to Pagination]” in Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990), 75, offers the correct pagination, but as the both the html and the pdf version retained the erroneous pagination, I have retained the erroneous pagination here.

⁴⁶⁵ Bentley points out that Lady Caroline Lamb suggested that Godwin’s contact with “Mr and Mrs. Blake” in 1820 and 1821 are William Blake of St. John Herts and his wife (WBHC 3240). The emendations below are mine.

Wada, Ayako. "Visions of the Love Triangle and Adulterous Birth in Blake's The Four Zoas." Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.⁴⁶⁶ 35-46. <WBHC 1803-04>

"This chapter explores a new way to read the relationship of Los, Urizen and Enitharmon in [The Four Zoas] as a love triangle, and further suggests that, to an extent, the poem in this aspect may be regarded as Blake's tribute to Mary Wollstonecraft and possibly her husband William Godwin" (35).

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von (1749-1832)

Bidney, Martin. Blake and Goethe: Psychology, Ontology, Imagination. Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1988. <BBS 372, WBHC 1627-28>

Points to affinities in their works and engagement with myth and the "Romantic inward quest" (xiii), highlighting Faust and The Four Zoas.

Jamosky, Edward, and James B. Robinson. "The Reconciliation of Opposites in Goethe's Faust and in William Blake's Marriage of Heaven and Hell." Occasional Papers in Language, Literature and Linguistics, Series A, No. 30 (1988): 1-14. <BBS 525>

"Both Blake and Goethe . . . realize, though in very different ways literally that the solution to the human dilemma presented by those contraries is to be found not in the glorification of one side and suppression of the other, but in their harmony' (11)" (BBS 525).

Stead, Evanghelia. "First Steps in Britain." Goethe's Faust I Outlined: Moritz Retzsch's Prints in Circulation. Brill, 2023. <Blake (2024)>

On the British reception of Friedrich August Moritz Retzsch's illustrations to Faust, which were given to Henry Crabb Robinson by Friedrich Christoph Perthes, the publisher of Robinson's German biographical sketch of Blake: "Perthes's bond and counter-bond of cultural exchange brings Retzsch's interpretation of Faust to Britain via the very same mediator as had sponsored Blake in Germany, bridging visionary poetry and art in a ritual of give and receive" (n.p.).

Hamann, Johann Georg (1730-1788)

Regier, Alexander. Exorbitant Enlightenment: Blake, Hamann, and Anglo-German Constellations. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Positions Blake and Johann Georg Hamann against a backdrop of unrecognized Anglo-German networks; in addition to Blake and Hamann, it includes chapters on Johann Heinrich Füssli, Lavater, and the London Moravians.

Richter, Helene. "Blake und Hamann: Zu Hamanns 200 Geburtstag." Archiv für das Studium der neuerer Sprachen. 158 and 159 (1930): 36-45 and 195-210. In German. <BB #2519>

⁴⁶⁶ Many papers were delivered at the conference "Blake, Gender and Sexuality in the Twenty-First Century, aka The Sexy Blake Conference, 15-16 July 2010, St Aldate's, Oxford" (17n1).

Hazlitt, William

Primary

Hazlitt, William. Lectures on the English Poets. London: Printed for Taylor and Hessey, 1818. <BB #1816, WBHC 2134>

“The statement: ‘Chaucer, it has been said, numbered the classes of men, as Linnaeus numbered the plants,’ clearly refers to the almost identical statement in Blake’s Descriptive Catalogue” (BB #1816).

Hazlitt, William. The Plain Speaker: Opinion on Books, Men, and Things. 2 vols. London, 1826. I.223-24. <BB #1817, WBHC 2134>

“In ‘Essay IX. On the Old Age of the Artist,’ Blake is mentioned in a list including Flaxman, Cosway, and other artists as ‘a profound mystic’” (BB #1817).

Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich \(1770-1831\)

Punter, David. Blake, Hegel and Dialectic. Amsterdam: Rodopi, 1982. <BBS 610>

“Asserts in particular ‘two points . . . that Blake’s writings can be elucidated by looking at the history of dialectical thinking . . . and . . . that there is a particular advantage to be derived from comparison with Hegel’ (252-53)” (WBHC 610).

Rajan, Tilottama. “Blake, Hegel, and the Sciences.” The Wordsworth Circle 50.1 (2019): 20-35. <Blake (2020)>

Compares Hegel’s and Blake’s depictions of the sciences, with a focus on Urizen, The Song of Los, and The Book of Los.

Hemans, Felicia \(1793-1835\)

Primary

Heman, Felicia. “The Painter’s Last Work.—A Scene.” Blackwood’s Edinburgh Magazine 31 (Feb. 1832): 220-21.⁴⁶⁷ <BB #1830>

“A footnote to the first printing says that this poem was ‘suggested by the closing scene in the life of the painter Blake; as beautifully related by Allan Cunningham’” (BB #1830).

Secondary

Feldman, Paula R. “Felicia Hemans and the Mythologizing of Blake’s Death.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.3 (winter 1993-94): 69-72. <WBHC 1647>

On the two versions of Hemans’ “The Painter’s Last Work,” which was inspired by Allan Cunningham’s account of Blake’s death.

Trawick, Leonard. “William Blake’s German Connection.” Colby Library Quarterly 13.4 (1977): 299-45. <BBS 663>

“Henry Fuseli and Johann Caspar Lavater [. . .] link Blake with the main currents of German literature of his time and confirm the lines of parallel development from earlier sources” (299).

⁴⁶⁷ See BB #1830 for the many subsequent reprintings.

Herder, Johann Gottfried \(1744-1803\)

Herriman, Noah. "William Blake, the Ballad Revival, and the Deep Past of Poetry." Deep Time: A Literary History. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2023. 120-75. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

Considers Blake's notion of deep time in relationship to the eighteenth-century ballad revival and especially to Joseph Ritson's A Select Collection of English Songs (1783), with a focus on the "Introduction" and "Earth's Answer" from the Songs of Experience and on the "contact zone between geology and prehistory" (169) in Milton and Jerusalem. There are also comparisons between Blake and Herder.

Hershel, William \(1738-1822\)

Doxey, William S. "William Blake and William Herschel: The Astronomer and 'The Tyger.'" Blake Studies 2.2 (1970): 5-13. <BB #1218.27>

Suggests that Blake may have drawn on Herschel's scientific writings in "The Tyger."

Lundeen, Kathleen. "On Herschel's Forty-Foot Telescope, 1789." BRANCH: Britain, Representation and Nineteenth-Century History. Ed. Dino Franco Felluga. Extension of Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net (2012).⁴⁶⁸

"Though Herschel and Blake diverge on the value of the telescope, they both reject the idea that seeing is passive, mechanical, and uniform among all people and argue that it engages the imagination" (n.p.).

Hölderlin, Friedrich \(1770-1843\)

Kirwan, Michael. "'A Candle in Sunshine': Desire and Apocalypse in Blake and Hölderlin." Contagion: Journal of Violence, Mimesis, and Culture 9 (2012): 179-204. <WBHC 2257>

On the Blake's and Hölderlin's relationship to Christianity: "For all that each finds orthodox, organized Christianity untenable, Blake's resistance to Hellenism in favor of an adherence to biblical 'prophetic' logic seems to allow for a less self-destructive alternative" (185).

Shanks, Andrew. "A Shaken Sacramentalism: Hölderlin and Blake." What Is Truth?: Towards a Theological Poetics. London and New York: Routledge, 2001. <WBHC 2671>

"What Hölderlin and Blake have in common is that they are both poets of extraordinary sacramental ambition, responding to the new opportunities [...] that had, in their day, been opened up by the great negative impact of the Enlightenment" (67-68).

Hogg, James \(1770-1835\)

Groves, David. "Blake, the Edinburgh Literary Journal, and James Hogg." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.1 (summer 1998): 14-16. <WBHC 1674>

Highlights 1830 notices of Cunningham's "Life of Blake" in the Edinburgh Literary Journal and raises the possibility that they might be by James Hogg, even though "[t]he most that may safely be claimed is that Hogg probably saw, and enjoyed, those reviews, and he probably read their comments on Blake" (16).

⁴⁶⁸ Not in WBHC or Blake.

Groves, David. “W—M B—E, A Great Original’: William Blake, The Grave, and James Hogg’s Confessions.” Scottish Literary Journal 18.2 (Nov. 1991): 27-45 <BBS 496, WBHC 2109>

Suggests the “W—M B—E” in Hogg’s Confessions is William Blake.

Holbach, Paul Henri Thiry, baron d' \(1723-1789\)

Hoagwood, Terrence Allan. “Holbach and Blake’s Philosophical Statement in ‘The Voice of the Devil.’” English Language Notes 15.3 (1978): 181-86. <BBS 510>

Discussing Marriage: “Blake and Holbach use similar antitheses, such as Love and Hate, Attraction and Repulsion” (BBS 510).

Hooper, Lucy \(1816-1841\)

Primary

Keese, John, ed. “The Fairy's Funeral.” The Poetical Remains of the Late Lucy Hooper. New York: Samuel Colman, 1842.

Secondary

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. “Lucy Hooper, William Blake, and 'The Fairy's Funeral'.” Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net 54 (2009): 11 pars. <WBHC 2334>

On Blake’s probable influence on Hooper’s poem.

Hunt, James Henry Leigh (1784-1859), John (1775-1848), and Robert (See also Biographies, Jerusalem, The Grave, and A Descriptive Catalogue)

Erdman, David V. “Blake's 'Nest of Villains'.” Keats-Shelley Journal 2 (1953): 61-71. <BB #1567>

Largely on the hostile reviews of Blake by The Examiner, but also describes Blake’s relationship to Hayley’s friend, John Carr (1772-1832), and Carr’s publishing career with Richard Phillips.

Ripley, Wayne C. “William Blake and the Hunt Circle.” Studies in Romanticism 50.1 (2011): 173-93. <WBHC 2587>

“I want to revisit this contentious relationship [between Blake and the Hunt Circle] in light of an unrecorded reference to Blake by Leigh Hunt in the short lived quarterly The Reflector (1810/11-12)” (173-74).

Hunter, John (1728-1793) and William (1718-1783) (See also Affect, The Royal Academy, [The \[First\] Book of Urizen](#) and An Island in the Moon)

Codsi, Stephanie. “Blake’s Gothic Humour: The Spectacle of Dissection.” William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncock and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 150-62. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Ties Blake’s sense of the Gothic to medical dissection.

Cogan, Lucy. “William Blake’s Monstrous Progeny: Anatomy and the Birth of Horror in The [First] Book of Urizen.” William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncock and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 129-49. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

With references to the anatomist, John Hunter, analyzes the dissection of the universe by Urizen in The [First] Book of Urizen.

Engelstein, Stefani. “The Regenerative Geography of the Text in William Blake.” Modern Language Studies 30.2 (2000): 61-86. <WBHC 1984, 1987>⁴⁶⁹

Considers how Blake represented bodies, with many references to the anatomist, John Hunter.

Lee, T.C. “Anatomy and Academies of Art II—A Tale of Two Cities.” Journal of Anatomy 236.4 (2020): 577-87. <Blake (2022)>

On the teaching of anatomy at both the Royal Academy of Arts (London) and the Royal Hibernian Academy of Arts (Dublin), with substantial discussion of William Hunter, the first professor of anatomy at the Royal Academy.

Oppenheimer, Jane M. “A Note on William Blake and John Hunter.” Journal of the History of Medicine and Applied Sciences 1 (1946): 41-46. <BB #2328>

First association of Jack Tearguts in Island and the surgeon, John Hunter (1728-93).

Kant, Immanuel (1724-1804)

Baulch, David M. “Relative Aesthetics and the Last Judgment: Blake’s Sublime and Kant’s Third Critique.” European Romantic Review 12.2 (2001): 198-205. <WBHC 1588>

On Blake’s use of the sublime in the context of Kant.

Carothers, Yvonne M. “Space and Time in Milton: The ‘Bard’s Song.’” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 116-27. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

On Blake’s idea of space and time, with references to Kant.

Dunn, Allen. “The Spirits of Satire: Kant and Blake Read Emanuel Swedenborg.” Soundings: An Interdisciplinary Journal 102.4 (2019): 325-44. <Blake (2020)>

On how Kant and Blake satirized Swedenborg.

Neubauer, John. “The Sick Rose as an Aesthetic Idea: Kant, Blake, and the Symbol in Literature.” Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture: Irrationalism in the Eighteenth Century. Ed. Harold Pagliaro. Cleveland: Press of Case Western Reserve University, 1972. 167-79. <BB #A2280>

Uses “The Sick Rose” to illuminate Kant’s argument in chapter 59 of Critique of Judgement: “[T]o interpret a poem of pure poetic idiom implies an attempt to transpose its poetry into conceptual language, the way the Kantian symbol asks to be converted into its original concept” (171).

Weiskel, Thomas “Darkning Man: Blake’s Critique of Transcendence.” The Romantic Sublime: Studies in the Structure and Psychology of Transcendence. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 1976. 63-79. <BBS 675>

⁴⁶⁹ WBHC lists the entry twice, with the first being out of alphabetical order.

On “the confrontation of Blake and Kant” (BBS 675).

Keats, John (1795-1821)

Robertson, P.J.M. “Criticism and Creativity IV: Blake and Keats.” Queen’s Quarterly 91 (1984): 941-53. <BBS 624>

“Keats echoes, confirms and illuminates Blake in his own way’ (943)” (BBS 624).

Klopstock, Friedrich Gottlieb (1724-1803) and Margaret (aka, Margareta or Meta; born Möller) (1728-1758) (See also William Hayley, Eighteen Heads of the Poets, the Notebook, and Letters)

Paley, Morton D., and Mark Crosby. “Catherine Blake and Her Marriage: Two Notes.”

Huntington Library Quarterly 78.3 (2015): 479-91. <WBHC 2503>

Two shorter pieces published together: Paley, “The Torments of Love and Jealousy in William and Catherine Blake” (479-85) and Crosby, “The Lamentations of Catherine Blake” (485-91). Paley focuses on 1790s, and Crosby, on William Hayley’s references to Catherine, Blake’s and Hayley’s comparison of her to Margaret Klopstock, and the underlining in Hayley’s Triumph of Temper (British Library, General Reference Collection 11656.g.8), which Crosby argues was done by her.

Pierce, Frederick E. “Blake and Klopstock.” Studies in Philology 25.1 (1928): 11-26. <BB #2394>

Suggests “[w]eak parallels” (BB #2394) with Klopstock and, especially, The Messiah.

Storey, Mark. “Laughing Songs: Blake and Wordsworth.” Poetry and Humour from Cowper to Clough. London and Basingstoke; Totowa, NJ: Rowen and Littlefield, 1979. 19-27. <BBS 648>

Not so much on “Laughing Song” as on “Blake’s sense of the ludicrous” (23) in even his serious poetry and designs. He highlights the Songs, An Island in the Moon, “When Klopstock England defied,” and the harshest reviews of his commercial engravings.

Lamb, Charles (1775-1834) and Mary (1764-1847) (See also Songs of Innocence and of Experience)

Primary

Lamb, Charles. “Analytical Disquisition on Punch and Judy, Found among the Papers of the late Charles Lamb.” Monthly Repository 11 (Feb. 1837): 39-42, 113-17. <WBHC 2301>

“As the mystical and no less gifted artist Blake made a microscopic drawing of a flea, and thereunto a calculation of what would be its powers of mischief if it were as big as a horse, so we may bless our stars that Punch, who seems of the family of Brobdignags, was thus thwarted of his germinant proportions” (WBHC 2301).

Secondary

Beer, John. “Lamb, Coleridge, and Blake.” Charles Lamb Bulletin 136 (2006): 105-06. <WBHC 1593>

On the men’s connections and knowledge of each other.

Keynes, Geoffrey. "William Blake with Charles Lamb and His Circle." Blake Studies: Essays on his Life and Work. 2nd ed. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1971. 74-89.⁴⁷⁰ <BB #2010, WBHC 2249-50>

Details the knowledge Lamb, Robinson, Hazlitt, Southey, Coleridge, Wainewright, and Cary had of Blake.

Lamont, Claire. "Blake, Lamb, and the Chimney-Sweeper." Charles Lamb Bulletin 76 (1991): 109-23. <BBS 543>

On Lamb's use of Blake's poem and his writings on behalf of chimney sweepers.

Makdisi, Saree. "William Blake, Charles Lamb, and Urban Antimodernity." SEL: Studies in English Literature 1500–1900 56.4 (2016): 737-56. <Blake (2017)>

Considers Blake and Lamb's relationship to mapping and representing urban spaces.

Lavater, Johann Caspar (1741-1801) (See also the Annotations to Lavater, Henry Fuseli, and Joseph Johnson)

Carter, Sarah. "The Ambiguities of Translation: Fuseli, Blake, and the Making of Aphorisms on Man." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.2 (fall 2024): 32 pars. <Blake (2025)>

"Aphorisms on Man emerges from my analysis a composite creation—one that registers the competing visions of its several authors and constitutes the idea of self emerging in tandem with Romanticism" (par. 3).

Erle, Sibylle. Blake, Lavater, and Physiognomy. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2010. <WBHC 1995-96>

A key study that examines the background and production of Lavater's Physiognomische Fragmente, Henry Fuseli's English translation, and Blake's illustrations, and which details Lavater's influence on Blake's thought.

Erle, Sibylle. "Leaving Their Mark: Lavater, Fuseli and Blake's Imprint on Aphorisms on Man." Comparative Critical Studies 3.3 (2006): 347-69. <WBHC 1996>

"This paper explores the relationships between the Greek inscription on the frontispiece (the Socratic 'Know thyself'), the heart drawn in ink by Blake onto the title-page around Lavater's printed and Blake's signed names, and that all-important final aphorism" (348).

Erle, Sibylle. "The Myth of the Lost Original: Blake and Lavater's Search for Divine Likeness." In the Embrace of the Swan: Anglo-German Mythologies in Literature, the Visual Arts and Cultural Theory. Ed. Rüdiger Görner and Angus Nicholls. Berlin and New York: Walter De Gruyter, 2010. 211-30. <WBHC 1996>

"Blake was acutely aware of the implications of Lavater's proposal for a science of human character. He responded to Lavater in his annotations to Aphorisms on Man and engaged with the processes of likeness making in his creation myth" (213).

⁴⁷⁰ "A paper read to the Charles Lamb Society, 9 October 1943" (74n1).

Erle, Sibylle. "William Blake's Lavaterian Women: Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 44-52. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Analyzes how Blake used Lavater's physiognomy to depict "Eleanor, Rowena and Ahania" (44).

John, Donald. "Blake and Forgiveness." Wordsworth Circle 17.2 (1986): 74-80. <BBS 526>

Considers the idea of forgiveness in Blake's annotations to Lavater and ties them to Swedenborgian doctrine and Blake's annotations to Swedenborg.

Mellor, Anne K. "Physiognomy, Phrenology, and Blake's Visionary Heads." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 53-74. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Lucidly explicates the phrenological theories of Johann Caspar Lavater, Franz Joseph Gall, and Johann Caspar Spurzheim, and offers a phrenological reading of Blake's Visionary Heads.

Regier, Alexander. "Crossing Channels: Fuseli, Hamann, and Lavater." Exorbitant Enlightenment: Blake, Hamann, and Anglo-German Constellations. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. 93-124. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2022, 2024)>

On Fuseli's relationships to Hamann and Lavater.

Stafford, Barbara Maria. "'Peculiar Mark': Lavater and the Countenance of Blemished Thought." Art Journal 75.1 (1993): 151-68.⁴⁷¹

Referencing Blake's annotations to Reynolds, focuses on caricature and physiognomy and racist ideas of monstrosity.

Stemmler, Joan K. "The Physiognomical Portraits of Johann Caspar Lavater." Art Bulletin 75.1 (1993): 151-68. <WBHC 2705>

On how to read the portraits of Lavater (with reference to Swedenborg), including those engraved by Blake.

Trawick, Leonard. "William Blake's German Connection." Colby Library Quarterly 13.4 (1977): 229-45. <BBS 663>

On Blake's possible knowledge of German literature and art through Fuseli and Lavater.

Lewis, Matthew (1775-1818) (See also Catherine Blake)

Otto, Peter. "'second Birth' and Gothic Fictions in Matthew Lewis's The Monk, Catherine Blake's 'Agnes,' and William Blake's Vala, or The Four Zoas." William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 77-102. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

⁴⁷¹ Not recorded in BBS.

With substantial analysis of Catherine's painting of Agnes from The Monk, Otto reads The Four Zoas "as a Gothic fiction that takes ruin [...] and the dynamics of ruination [...] as its primary themes" (77).

Macpherson, James (1736–96)

Blake and Macpherson

Folkenflik, Robert. "Macpherson, Chatterton, Blake and the Great Age of Literary Forgery." Centennial Review 18 (1974):378-91. <BBS 474>

Positions Blake's idea of inspiration in terms of Macpherson's and Chatterton's forgeries.

Freed-Isserow, Eugenie. "‘This Free Born Joy’: William Blake’s Vision of Emancipation." EAR: English Academy Review [of Southern Africa] 17 (2000): 111-30. <Blake (2003)>⁴⁷²

With references to Blake's use of Ossian's Oithona's rape plot and Blake's arguments with Wollstonecraft, examines the connection between rape and slavery in Visions of the Daughters of Albion and in abolitionist debates.

Mee, Jon. Dangerous Enthusiasm: William Blake and the Culture of Radicalism in the 1790s. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1992. <BBS 571, WBHC 2392-94>

Focused on Blake's early illuminated books, a key study of Blake's relationship to religious enthusiasts of the era who shared his suspicion of Enlightenment-grounded radicalism. The study recasts Blake's relationship to millenarianism and to the polite circle of Joseph Johnson. There is also an important chapter on Norse mythology, druids, and British Antiquities, with discussions of Ossian. Mee was the first to associate Blake with Claude Levi Strauss's notion of the bricoleur.

Miner, Paul. "Unexplored Latitudes: Blake and Ossian." Notes and Queries 58.4 (Dec. 2011): 533-35. <WBHC 2416>

On Blake's unnoted allusions to Ossian.

Niimi, Hatsuko. "The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion: Oithona, Oothoon, and Mary Wollstonecraft." Blake’s Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 93-127. ⁴⁷³ <WBHC 2460-63> .

An examination of Visions in light of Oithona from Ossian and Wollstonecraft's writing.

Punter, David. "Blake: Social Relations of Poetic Form." New Literary History 8 (1982): 182-205. <BBS 610>

"About the relevance of the concepts of determinism and choice to the discussion of the problematic relations between society, ideology and poetic form' (182), especially on the connection of Blake's versification and Ossian's" (BBS 610).

⁴⁷² Not recorded in WBHC.

⁴⁷³ Translated by Niimi from her "Albion no musume tachi no urei—Wollstonecraft to Blake no joseitachi: The Sorrows of the Daughters of Albion—Women in the Works of Wollstonecraft and Blake," Toho Gakuen Daigaku Kenkyu Kiyo: Faculty Bulletin, Toho Gakuen School of Music 14 (1988), 99-120, <BBS 587>.

Punter, David. "Ossian, Blake and the Questionable Source." Exhibited by Candlelight: Sources and Developments in the Gothic Tradition. Ed. Valeria Tinkler-Villani and Peter Davidson with Jane Stevenson. Amsterdam and Atlanta, GA: Rodopi, 1995. 25-41.⁴⁷⁴

Building on his "Blake: Social Relations of Poetics Form," returns to the question of "how are we to treat the relationship between Blake and the Ossian poetry" but also considers the nature of the source in relationship to the Gothic and, specifically, in what Punter calls Blake's and Ossian's "heroic gothic" (25).

Raine, Kathleen. "The Crested Cock." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967): 9-10. <BB #1217.6>

Identifies probable sources for "the crested Cock" (M 28 [30]: 24, E 126) in James Macpherson's Introduction to the History of Great Britain and Ireland (1772) and Thomas Taylor's Works of Plato (1804).

Saintsbury, George. "Burns, Blake, and the Close of the Eighteenth Century (with an Excursus on Ossian). A History of English Prosody." Vol. III. London: Macmillan, 1910. 9-42. <BB #2614>

Despite its age, a good overview of Blake in the context of late eighteenth century prosody, with brief discussions of Burns, Darwin, Hayley, Maria Williams, and Ossian.

Macpherson without Blake

Davis, Leith. "Transnational Articulations in James Macpherson's Poems of Ossian and The History and Management of the East-India Company." Eighteenth Century 60.4 (winter 2019): 441-60. <Blake (2022)>

Considers "how both The Poems of Ossian and the History problematize the construction of the nation in relation to its colonies" (442).

Moulton, Paul F. "A Controversy Discarded and Ossian Revealed: An Argument for a Renewed Consideration of The Poems of Ossian." College Music Symposium 49/50 (2009/2010): 392-401.

Montgomery, James (1771-1854) (See also Robert Hartley Cromeck)

Biography

ODNB, G. Tolley.

Primary

Holland, John, and James Everett. Memoirs of the Life and Writings of James Montgomery. 7 vols. 1854-56. I.38. <BB #1873>

A description of Blake's designs for The Grave as "hardly of such a nature as to render the book proper to lie on a parlour table for general inspection" (I.38).

Montgomery, James, ed. The Chimney Sweeper's Friend, and Climbing-Boy's Album. 1824. <BB #238, WBHC 479>

"The Blake section is reprinted in William Hone's Every-Day Book, and Table Book (1825 ff.)" (WBHC 479).

⁴⁷⁴ Not recorded in WBHC.

Secondary

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake and Cromeck: The Wheat and the Tares.” Modern Philology 71.4 (1974): 366-79. <BB #A1152>

Reexamines the Blake-Cromeck relationship in light of the then newly discovered prospectus for The Grave (Nov. 1805) (see Bentley’s “A Unique Prospectus for Blake's Grave Designs”) and an April 1807 letter from Cromeck to James Montgomery that includes a transcription of Blake’s poem, “To the Queen.”

Davies, Keri. “Jonathan Spilsbury and the Lost Moravian History of William Blake's Family.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (winter 2006-07): 100-09. <WBHC 1710>

Surveys the career of the Moravian artist, Jonathan Spilsbury (1737-1812), and makes a convincing case he was “an associate of William Blake” (100). References to Richard Cosway, Ottobah Cugoano, and James Montgomery.

Lamont, Claire. “Blake, Lamb and the Chimney-Sweeper.” Charles Lamb Bulletin. 76 (1991): 109-23. <BBS 543>

On both the Innocence and Experience version of “The Chimney Sweeper,” and includes references to Blake’s 1784 commercial engraving of “chimney-sweepers and milk-maids celebrating May Day” (111), to James Montgomery’s The Chimney-Sweeper's Friend, and Climbing-Boy's Album <BB #238>, and to Charles Lamb’s role in the volume and to his essay “The Praise of Chimney-Sweepers,” which was originally titled, “A May-Day Effusion.”

Ramsey, Neil. “James Montgomery’s Waterloo: War and the Poetics of History.” Studies in Romanticism 56.3 (fall 2017): 361-78. <Blake (2018)>

Slagel, Judith Bailey. “Literary Activism: James Montgomery, Joanna Baillie, and the Plight of Britain's Chimney Sweeps.” Studies in Romanticism 51.1 (2012): 59-76.⁴⁷⁵

Slight references to Blake, but good contextual information about James Montgomery’s The Chimney-Sweeper's Friend, and Climbing-Boy's Album <BB #238>, which included the Innocence “Chimney Sweeper.”

Opie, Amelia \(1769-1853\)

King, Shelley, and John B. Pierce. “Remarkable both for Genius, & Extravagance': Amelia Opie and Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 54.3 (fall 2020): 11 pars. <Blake (2021)>

Sketches Opie’s probable knowledge of Blake and details the history of the copy of Job now held by the Mead Art Museum at Amherst College. (Their account offers a more likely origin for the copy than G.E. Bentley, Jr.’s speculation that it originated with John Linnell (Blake Records, 1st ed. [1969] 602n3).

⁴⁷⁵ Not recorded in WBHC.

Paine, Thomas (1737-1809)⁴⁷⁶ (See also Mary Wollstonecraft, Edmund Burke, Political and Historical Criticism, America, Annotations to Watson, and The French Revolution)

Blake and Paine

Beale, D.A. “Language, Poetry and the Rights of Man.” Theoria 75 (1990):37-51. <BBS 362>

“Yet, in espousing Reason Commerce, Deism (and a concomitant Providentialism), Paine, for Blake, had conceived of human possibility as dispiritingly less than it might be. He had not gone far enough” (43).

Bindman, David. “My own mind is my own church’: Blake, Paine and the French Revolution.” William Blake. Ed. Gert Schiff et al. Tokyo: Nihon Keizai Shimbun, for the National Museum of Western Art, 1990. 40-51.⁴⁷⁷ <BBS 308-09>

On Blake’s engagement with Paine in the early 1790s.

Erdman, David V. Blake: Prophet Against Empire. A Poet’s Interpretation of the History of His Own Times. 1954. Rev. ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1969. 3rd ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977.⁴⁷⁸ <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>

A key study that examines Blake within his historical context. Erdman’s approach was so influential that historicist readings of Blake are sometimes categorized as “The School of Erdman.”

Erdman, David V. “Treason Trials in the Early Romantic Period.” Wordsworth Circle 19.2 (1988): 76-82.⁴⁷⁹

Largely on the threat to Paine from the government in 1792 and his subsequent trial in absentia, with some consideration of Gilchrist’s account of Blake instructing Paine to flee to Paris.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, Thomas Paine, and Biblical Revolution.” Studies in Romanticism 30.2 (1991): 189-212. <BBS 465-66, WBHC 2003>

With references primarily to Marriage, Urizen, and the annotations to Watson, examines Blake’s complicated relationship with Paine and other Enlightenment radicals, such as Joseph Johnson and Mary Wollstonecraft: “The Johnson circle was at once too secular in its liberalism and not radical enough in its revolutionism to satisfy Blake. The biblical revolution of the past had been replaced by a deistic ideology that was in part a revolution against biblical tradition” (212).

⁴⁷⁶ The sketch on p. 74 of Blake’s Notebook is now believed to be Thomas Paine. See WBHC pp. 310-11.

⁴⁷⁷ Rpt. in Reflections of Revolution: Images of Romanticism, ed. Alison Yarrington and Kelvin Everest (New York: Routledge, 1993), 112-33. (Note adopted from Crosby.)

⁴⁷⁸ Incorporates Erdman’s “Blake’s Vision of Slavery,” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3/4 (1952), 242-52, <BB #1569, WBHC 1993>.

⁴⁷⁹ Not recorded in BBS or WBHC.

Esterhammer, Angela. "Calling into Existence: The Book of Urizen." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin's Press, 1999. 114-32. <WBHC 1863-65>

On Blake's use of performative language in The Book of Urizen and other works including the annotations to Bishop Watson's response to Thomas Paine's Age of Reason (1796), with reference to late eighteenth-century biblical scholarship, such as Robert Lowth's Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews (1787).

Goldsmith, Steven. Unbuilding Jerusalem: Apocalypse and Romantic Representation. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1993. <WBHC 2087>

The central chapters (cf. 85-208) are concerned with Blake, tracing the influence of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century interpreters of Apocalyptic imagery (e.g., Joseph Mede) on Blake and tracing the relationship of Blake's radicalism to the millennial ideas of Enlightenment-grounded radicals like Paine.

Harrison, John R. ""Empire is no More": William Blake, Tom Paine and the American Revolution." Literature and History 7.1 (1998): 16-32. <WBHC 2131>

"Blake withdrew The French Revolution himself, not out of fear of prosecution, but because he had decided to publish a much more seditious work on the American Revolution" (17).

Keane, John. Tom Paine: A Political Life. Boston, New York, Toronto, and London: Little Brown and Company, 1995.

A biography that fleshes out Paine's involvement with Blake's circle.

King, James. "Cowper, Hayley, and Samuel Johnson's 'Republican' Milton." Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 17 (1987): 229-38.

On Cowper's and Hayley's reaction to Johnson's "Life of Milton," and Cowper's letters and unsent poem to Richard Phillips, who had been imprisoned for publishing Paine's Rights of Man.

Kline, Allan. "Blake's A Song of Liberty." The Explicator 15.1 (1956): 8-9.⁴⁸⁰ <BB #2063>

Ties Blake's use of "keys" to a reference in Thomas Paine's Rights of Man in which the keys are "organized religion wedded to antiquated monarchy" (42).

Lee, Haram. "The Critique of Reason and Biopolitics in William Blake's The Four Zoas." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 63.1 (spring 2021): 53-77. <Blake (2022)>

"For Blake, the liberal radicals such as Thomas Paine, John Thelwall, and Joseph Priestley paved the way for a technology of biopolitical governance on the rise in the late 1790s because, not unlike Malthus, they embraced the misconceived notion of reason as a mere instrument for the mastery of self and nature" (55).

⁴⁸⁰Rpt. in The Explicator Cyclopedie (1968), 41-42, <BB #A1587>. Quotation taken from the reprinted version.

Makdisi, Saree. William Blake and the Impossible History of the 1790s. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2003. <WBHC 2365-66>

An influential study focused on the illuminated books of the 1790s and Blake's critique of the Enlightenment, the factory system, and colonialism.

Miner, Paul. “Blake, Paine, and Moses.” Notes and Queries 59.3 (2012): 355-61. <WBHC 2412>

“Blake ‘was influenced by Thomas Paine’s The Age of Reason’ ‘affirmatively as well as negatively’ (357)” (WBHC 2412).

Paley, Morton D. “To Defend the Bible in this Year 1798 Would Cost a Man His Life.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.2 (fall 1998): 32-43. <WBHC 1674>

A lucid overview of the annotations to Watson and why Blake would have defended the Deist, Thomas Paine.

Phillips, Michael. “Flames in the Night Sky: Blake, Paine and the Meeting of the Society of Loyal Britons, October 10th, 1793.” Bulletin de la Société d'Etudes Anglo-Américaines des XVII et XVIII Siècles 44 (1997): 93-110. <WBHC 2520-21>

A detailed examination of the Loyalists in Lambeth who were active at the same time Blake printed his 1793 Prospectus.

Sandler, Florence. “‘Defending the Bible’: Blake, Paine, and the Bishop on the Atonement.” Blake and His Bibles. Ed. David V. Erdman. West Cornwall: Locust Hill Press, 1990. 41-70. <BBS 463, WBHC 1989-90>

A useful detailing Paine’s and Bishop Watson’s arguments to illuminate Blake’s annotations.

Williams, Nicholas M. Ideology and Utopia in the Poetry of William Blake. Cambridge: University Press, 1998. <WBHC 2866>

Reads Blake’s literary works between the Songs and Jerusalem in conjunction with different utopian texts: the Songs with Rousseau’s Emile; Visions of the Daughters of Albion with Wollstonecraft’s Vindication of the Rights of Woman; America, The Song of Los, and The Four Zoas with Burke’s Reflections on the French Revolution, Milton with Paine’s Rights of Man; and Jerusalem with the writings of Robert Owen.

Worrall, David. “Blake and 1790s Plebian Radical Culture.” Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1999. 194-211. <WBHC 1863-65>

Important essay that highlights “Blake proximity to the artisan public sphere of discourse in 1790s London” and examines “the precision with which Blake’s texts accommodate themselves to these neglected radical rhetorics [. . .] in exceedingly complex ways” (207). Discusses William Bryan, Richard “Citizen” Lee, Robert Hawes, and popular political songs. Some of its information, especially about Bryan is updated and emended in Worrall’s “William Bryan, Another Anti-Swedenborgian Visionary Engraver of 1789.

Paine without Blake

Fruchtman, Jack, Jr. “The Revolutionary Millennialism of Thomas Paine.” Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture 13 (1984): 65-77.

Poe, Edgar Allan (1809-1849)

Daniel, John Moncure. “Edgar Allan Poe.” Southern Literary Messenger 16.3 (Mar. 1850): 172-87. <WBHC 1920>

“Like ‘the mad artist Blake,’ Poe ‘is a painter of ideas, not of men and things’ (182)” (WBHC 1920).

Hayes, Kevin A. “Poe’s Knowledge of William Blake.” Notes and Queries 61.1 (March 2014): 83-84. <WBHC 2134-35>

Suggests that evidence found in Poe’s texts indicates that Poe read Blake.

Humma, John B. “Poe’s ‘Ligeia’: Glanville’s Will or Blake’s Will?” Mississippi Quarterly 26 (1973): 55-62. <BB #A1907>

“In Poe’s tale, Ligeia is the incarnation of [Blake’s idea of] female will” (57).

Priestley, Joseph (1733-1804) (See also An Island in the Moon and The Everlasting Gospel.)

Carlson, Julia S. “Historical Poetics, Poetics of History: Priestley’s Time Charts and the Visualization of Meter.” Wordsworth Circle 52.1 (2021): 1-33. <Blake (2022)>

Argues that Joseph Priestley’s innovative use of charts “facilitated a new way of representing time in poetry and scanning it on the page” (13).

Cooper, Andrew M. A Bastard Kind of Reasoning: William Blake and Geometry. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2023.⁴⁸¹ <Blake (2024)>

An ambitious study of Blake and Newton that seeks to challenge the relationship of Blake and Newton expressed in Donald Ault’s Visionary Physics (1974). Cooper reads the Newton print, A Vision of the Last Judgment, and most of the illuminated books in relationship to Joseph Priestley, David Hartley, Henry More, George Berkeley, and many twentieth-century scientists, providing many diagrams to illustrate Blake’s cosmological ideas.

Lee, Haram. “The Critique of Reason and Biopolitics in William Blake’s The Four Zoas.” Texas Studies in Literature and Language 63.1 (spring 2021): 53-77. <Blake (2022)>

“For Blake, the liberal radicals such as Thomas Paine, John Thelwall, and Joseph Priestley paved the way for a technology of biopolitical governance on the rise in the late 1790s because, not unlike Malthus, they embraced the misconceived notion of reason as a mere instrument for the mastery of self and nature” (55).

⁴⁸¹ Incorporates “two or three pages” of Cooper’s “Small Room for Judgment: Geometry and Prolepsis in Blake’s ‘Infant Sorrow,’” European Romantic Review 31.2 (2020), 129-55, and “material amounting to maybe ten pages from” Cooper’s William Blake and the Productions of Time (Ashgate 2013/Routledge 2016).

Peterfreund, Stuart. "Blake, Priestley, and the 'Gnostic Moment.'" William Blake in a Newtonian World: Essays on Literature as Art and Science. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1998. 85-104.⁴⁸² <WBHC 2516-17>

Rimbaud, Arthur (1854-1891)

Peschel, Enid Rhodes. "Themes of Rebellion in William Blake and Arthur Rimbaud." The French Review 46.4 (1973): 750-61. <BB #A2386>

On the parallels in their lives and work.

Staudt, Kathleen Henderson. "The Text as Material and as Sign: Poetry and Incarnation in William Blake, Arthur Rimbaud, and David Jones." Modern Language Studies 14.3 (1984): 13-30. <BBS 646>

Uses Blake and Rimbaud, both of whom "stress the intersection, within the poetic text, between the poet's perception of immediate, everyday reality and his perception of a visionary reality beyond the quotidian," to examine similar issues in "the twentieth century Anglo-Welsh poet David Jones" (19).

Tahyvildary, Negin. "Poetry and the Sensitive World: A Comparative Perspective on the Poetic Course of Sohrab Sepehry, Arthur Rimbaud, and William Blake." New Readings 7 (2004): 28 pp. <WBHC 2738>

Sees parallels in Rimbaud and Blake for the twentieth-century Iranian poet and painter, Sohrab Sepehry: "Misunderstandings shadowed [Sepehry's] career as a writer and artist and it is now left to later generations to recognize his importance" (2).

Ritson, Joseph (1752-1803) (See Joseph Riston, A Select Collection of English Songs)

Shelley, Mary (1797-1851)

Brewster, Glenn. "From Albion to Frankenstein's Creation: The Disintegration of the Social Body in Blake and Mary Shelley." Romantic Generations: Essays in Honor of Robert F. Gleckner. Ed. Ghislaine McDayter, Quinn Batten, and Barry Milligan. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press and London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 64-82. <WBHC 1785>

Compares the social bodies represented by Albion and Frankenstein's monster.

da Silva, Suellen Cordovil, and Teófilo Augusto da Silva. "A tradução intersemiótica em Frankenstein, de Mary Shelley, The Little Girl Lost, de William Blake, e a série The Frankenstein Chronicles [The Intersemiotic Translation in Frankenstein by Mary Shelley, 'The Little Girl Lost' by William Blake, and The Frankenstein Chronicles Series.]" Tabuleiro de Letras 11.2 (Dec. 2017): 140-57. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2019)>

McKusick, James C. "The Ends of Nature: Environmental Apocalypse in William Blake and Mary Shelley." Green Writing: Romanticism and Ecology. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2000. 95-112, 239-42. <WBHC 2390>

"Blake's poetry [...] engages in a sustained and bitter critique of the material conditions of production" (95).

⁴⁸² From Peterfreund's chapter in Literature and Science: Theory and Practice, ed. Stuart Peterfreund (Boston: Northeastern University Press, 1990), 139-66, <BBS 603, WBHC 2515>.

Schouten de Jel, Joshua. “Fathers, Sons, and Monsters: Rousseau, Blake, and Mary Shelley.” Palgrave Communications 5.78 (2019): 1-9. <Blake (2020)>

Examines Blake’s and Shelley’s reading of Rousseau.

Shelley, Percy Bysshe (1792-1822)

Bandy, Melanie. “Mind Forg’d Manacles”: Evil in the Poetry of Blake and Shelley.” Alabama: University of Alabama Press, 1981. <BBS 359, WBHC 1580>

A study of the evil “arising from repressed energy” in Blake and Shelley (1, BBS 359).

Banta, Martha. “Adonais and the Angel: Light, Color, and the Occult Sublime.” Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 113-20. <BBS 360>

“Turner and Shelley (with Blake as their foil) are the leading human figures of this paper, but the conceptions and visualizations of the sun form its true center” (113).

Behrendt, Stephen C. “‘The Consequence on High Powers’: Blake, Shelley, and Prophecy’s Public Dimension.” Papers on Language & Literature 22.3 (1986): 254-75. <BBS 363>

On “Blake’s and Shelley’s notions of the prophet’s role within the external, public world of human affairs,” suggesting that “[e]mbedded in Blake’s works is a tragic vision which is greatly reduced in, or entirely absent from, Shalley’s prose and poetry” (254).

Bizzaro, Patrick. “The Symbol of the Androgyne in Blake’s Four Zoas and Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound: Marital Status Among the Romantic Poets.” Joinings and Disjoinings: The Significance of Marital Status in Literature. Ed. Joanna Stephens Mink and Janet Doubler Ward. Bowling Green, OH: Bowling Green State University Popular Press, 1992. 36-51. <WBHC 1634-35>

“‘The androgynous state in Blake, then, becomes a symbol of freedom from the restraint of rationalistic dogma’ (45)” (WBHC 1635).

Bloom, Harold. Shelley’s Mythmaking. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1959. Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1969. <BB #1230>

Blake is referred to throughout: “Because Blake is a system maker, a mythographer who catalogues his own meanings, I have not hesitated to use him as contrast and iconographer to Shelley in these pages, especially in regard to the archetype of the lower paradise, Beulah-land” (10).

Burdon, Christopher. “Rewriting Apocalypse: Shelley and Blake.” The Apocalypse in England: Revelation Unravelling, 1770-1834. London: Macmillan Press Ltd; New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1997. 174-208. <Blake (1997)>

Cantor, Paul A. Creature and Creator: Myth-Making and English Romanticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1984. <BBS 431>

The section on Blake is largely about the rewriting of the creation myth in Urizen and of the apocalypse in The Four Zoas. The chapters on Shelley often use Blake as a point of comparison.

Chayes, Irene Hendry. “Plato’s Statesman Myth in Shelley and Blake.” Comparative Literature 13 (1961): 358-69. <BB #1375>

Suggests that both Shelley’s Prometheus Unbound and Blake’s “Mental Traveller” allude to “the myth recounted in [Plato’s] Statesman” in which “there are two alternating cycles of order and disorder in the universe, the Age of Kronos, or Saturn, during which the motion of the world is directed by God himself, and the Age of Zeus, or Jupiter, in which the world, unguided, reverses its motion and revolves in the opposite direction” (360).

Hoagwood, Terence Allan. Prophecy and the Philosophy of the Mind: Traditions of Blake and Shelley. University, AL: University of Alabama Press, 1985. <BBS 511, WBHC 2153>

“The following chapters study Jerusalem and Prometheus Unbound, attempting to show that each of these poems” (1) embody the “perfect Unity” Blake refers to On Homers Poetry.

Hughes, Daniel. “Blake and Shelley: Beyond the Uroboros.” William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 69-83. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

A comparison of how Blake and Shelley used the symbol of a snake devouring its own tail.

Lee, Monika. “‘Happy Copulation’: Revolutionary Sexuality in Blake and Shelley.” “And Never Know the Joy”: Sex and the Erotic in English Poetry. Ed. C. C. Barfoot. Amsterdam: Rodopi, 2006. 189-205. <WBHC 2317>

Contends that, “[i]n Shelley and Blake,” readers “are not invited into the sexual poem as a voyeur, but rather as a desiring subject in a complex interplay of eros and thanatos—an experience of the body as text and text as body” (189).

Lewis, Linda. The Promethean Politics of Milton, Blake, and Shelley. London and Columbia: University of Missouri Press, 1992. <BBS 550, WBHC 2321-22>

On the politics of the mythic systems found in Paradise Lost, The Four Zoas, and Prometheus Unbound.

Meller, Horst. “The Parricidal Imagination: Shelley, Blake, Fuseli and the Romantic Revolt against the Father.” The Romantic Imagination: Literature and Art in England and Germany. Ed. Frederick Burwick and Jürgen Klein. Amsterdam and Atlanta: Rodolpi, 1996. 76-94. <WBHC 2396>

On how the figures depicted the death of fathers in relationship to their radical politics.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. “The ‘satanism’ of Blake and Shelley Reconsidered.” Studies in Philology 65 (1968): 816-33. <BB #2998>

A comparison of their views on Milton’s Satan.

Schiller, Johann Christoph Friedrich von (1759-1804)

Brown, Marshall. “Stealing a Self: Schiller and Blake” Preromanticism. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 1991. 104-12. <WBHC 1793>

A section in the chapter, “The Economy of Sensibility” (81-112), in which Blake is used to help explicate Schiller’s The Robbers and sensibility.

Skovoroda, Gregory (Hryhorii) (1722-1794)

Vozdvizsenskij, Vagyim. “William Blake and Grigory Skovoroda Revisited.” Across Borders: The West Looks East. Ed. Joanna Ziobro-Strzepk and Władysław Chłopicki. Krosno: State Higher Vocational School Stanisława Pigonia, 2017. In English. 303-11. <Blake (2018)>

Smith, Charlotte (1749-1806) (See also William Hayley)

King, James. “Charlotte Smith, William Cowper, William Blake: Some New Documents.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.2 (fall 1979): 100-01. <BBS 388>

On references to Blake in letters to Samuel Rose from Smith dated 9 Sep. 1802, 9 Feb. 1803, and 19 Feb. 1803.

Whitehead, Angus. “A Further Reference to William Blake in the Letters of Charlotte Smith.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.2 (fall 2009): 78. <WBHC 1722>

Notes a reference to Blake as “the person who made the drawings” for Hayley’s “last publication about animals” in Smith’s letter of 16 Dec. 1802.

Spurzheim, Johann Gasper (1775-1832)⁴⁸³ See also the [Annotations to Spurzheim]

Mellor, Anne K. “Physiognomy, Phrenology, and Blake’s Visionary Heads.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 53-74. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Lucidly explicates the phrenological theories of Johann Caspar Lavater, Franz Joseph Gall, and Johann Caspar Spurzheim, and offers a phrenological reading of Blake’s Visionary Heads.

Wordsworth, William (1770-1850) (See also Henry Crabb Robinson and the Annotations to William Wordsworth)

Bibliography

Bennett, James R. “The Comparative Criticism of Blake and Wordsworth: A Bibliography.” Wordsworth Circle 14.2 (1983): 99-106. <BBS 365>

“Seventy-three entries comparing Blake and Wordsworth” (BBS 365) through 1980.

Studies

Balfour, Ian. “The Future of Citation: Blake, Wordsworth, and the Rhetoric of Romantic Prophecy.” Writing the Future. Ed. David Wood. London: Routledge, 1990. 115-28. <BB #359>

“About prophecy and references to the Bible” (BB #359).

Benziman, Galia. “Two Patterns of Child Neglect: Blake and Wordsworth.” Partial Answers: Journal of Literature and the History of Ideas 5.2 (2007): 167-97. <WBHC 1624>

⁴⁸³ Spurzheim’s middle name has been anglicized as “Casper” and “Kasper.”

“[U]nravels the residues of Puritan and catechetical thinking in texts by two of the earliest advocates of the child’s perspective as a valuable human and poetic quality” (abstract).

Betz, Paul F. “Wordsworth’s First Acquaintance with Blake’s Poetry.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.4 (May 1970): 85-89. <BB #1217.51>

Dates Wordsworth’s transcription of Blake’s poetry from Malkin in his commonplace book to between March and June of 1809, noting Dorothy’s description of Malkin as “a coxcomb.”

Bidney, Martin. “Solomon and Pharaoh’s Daughter: Blake’s Response to Wordsworth’s Prospectus to The Recluse.” Journal of English and Germanic Philology 85.4 (1986): 532-49. <BBS 372>

A detailed reading of the annotation to The Recluse. Classifies Blake’s annotation as a poem and argues that “Blake’s prose poem on Solomon’s temptation and fall—a vision of ‘paradise lost’—is every bit as thoughtful a rewriting of Milton as is Wordsworth’s better-known prospect of paradise regained” (533-34).

Boland, Tom. “Romantic Subjectivities: Blake, Wordsworth and the Trace of the ‘Other’.” Textual Practice 23.4 (2009): 559-80. <WBHC 1774>

“[T]races subjective transformation through the ‘life-works’ of Blake and Wordsworth (559).

Erdman, David V. “Milton! Thou Shouldst Be Living.” Wordsworth Circle 19.1 (1988): 2-8. <BBS 463>

Considers Blake’s and Wordsworth’s invocation of Milton against the backdrop of the political events of 1802.

Glen, Heather. Vision and Disenchantment: Blake’s Songs and Wordsworth’s Lyrical Ballads. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1983. <BBS 490, WBHC 2084-85>

A comparison of the poets’ two most famous works. She addresses the Songs and children’s literature.

Goldsmith, Steven. Blake’s Agitation: Criticism and the Emotions. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 2013.⁴⁸⁴ <WBHC 2088>

An important work on Blake from the perspective of affect studies, with references to Kenzaburo’s Rouse up O Young Men of the New Age and Wordsworth.

Graver, Bruce E. “New Voice on Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.3 (winter 1990-91): 91-94. <BBS 407>

⁴⁸⁴ Incorporates Goldsmith’s “Blake’s Agitation,” South Atlantic Quarterly 95 (1996), 753-96, <WBHC 2087-88>, and “William Blake and the Future of Enthusiasm,” Nineteenth-Century Literature 63 (2009), 439-60, <WBHC 2089>.

Documents the discovery an anonymous, unpublished manuscript tied to Wordsworth's contribution to The Poems of Geoffrey Chaucer Modernized (1840) that mentions Blake's engraving of Chaucer and details from Cunningham's Life.

Hilton, Nelson. "Wordsworth Illustrates Blake \('All light is mute amid the gloom'\)." ImagTexT: Interdisciplinary Comics Studies 3.2 (winter 2007). <WBHC 2184-85>

Argues that Blake read Wordsworth's Evening Walk (1793) and alludes to it the illustration of "Holy Thursday" in Experience.

Hunnekuhl, Philipp. "'matters of Religion & Morality': Herder, Wordsworth, and Blake." Henry Crabb Robinson: Romantic Comparatist, 1790-1811. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2020. 159-193. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

"Robinson's underlying criteria for the appreciation of Blake the 'Artist, Poet, and Religious Enthusiast' ... echo the concerns of Wordsworth and Herder: through invoking a childlike naivety, or simplicity, Blake frees compassion from religious dogmatism" (192). Hunnekuhl also reproduces the two pages of Robinson's pocket diary that describe his visit to Blake's exhibition and the writing of his 1811 article for Vaterländisches Museum.

Hutton, Ronald. "Interlude: A Pair of Williams." Blood and Mistletoe: The History of the Druids in Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2009. 183-209. <WBHC 2180>

On the use of Druids by Blake and Wordsworth. Includes a chapter on Iolo Morganwg and another on his influence.

Jackson, Noel "The 'sense of history' and the History of the Senses: Periodizing Perception in Wordsworth and Blake." Science and Sensation in Romantic Poetry. Cambridge: University Press, 2008. 64-99. <WBHC 2200-01>

Suggests Romanticism offers a new history of sensation.

Janowitz, Anne. "The Sublime of Ruin: Blake's Jerusalem." England's Ruins: Poetic Purpose and the National Landscape. Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1990. 145-76. <BBS 526>

On figurations of ruins in Jerusalem, with references to the urban sublime and Wordsworth's Prelude.

Lambo, John. "The Imagination as Unifying Principle in the Works of Blake and Wordsworth." Diogenes 41.4 (1993): 59-72. <WBHC 2302>

"Blake and Wordsworth . . . essentially share the same world view' (59)" (WBHC 2302).

Leone, Matthew. "Blake, Wordsworth, and Traditional Popular Culture." McGill Literary Journal 1.1 (1979): 16-39. <BBS 569>

"Blake and Wordsworth . . . flout the old distinctions' (17)" (BBS 569).

Mandell, Laura. "Imagining Interiority: Photography, Psychology, and Lyric Poetry." Victorian Studies 49.2 (2007): 218-27. <WBHC 2369>

Uses the Songs and Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey" to suggest that "the romantic lyric anticipates the photograph" (218).

Newman, Steve. "Ballads and the Problem of Lyric Violence in Blake and Wordsworth." Ballad Collection, Lyric, and the Canon: The Call of the Popular from the Restoration to the New Criticism. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2007. 136-84. <WBHC 2456>

"[U]nlike prior ballad collectors, Wordsworth and Blake worry over the violence involved in collection. They wonder whether collecting popular songs into elite poems might somehow damage the songs or the culture in which they are found, gentling them into a false sentimentality that robs them of their power to alter perception (Blake) or replaying an imperial asymmetry in the meaning between the tourist and the native singer or speaker (Wordsworth)" (138).

O'Keeffe, Bernard. "Comparisons: 'London' and 'Composed upon Westminster Bridge.'" English Review 17.1 (2006): 21-24. <WBHC 2478>

"[E]ach, in different ways, shows characteristics typical of writing of the Romantic period--the effect of the world on the poet's own emotional state and feelings, a concern with the freedom of the individual and a veneration of nature, natural states and the innocence associated with them" (21).

Phillips, Michael. "The Reputation of Blake's Poetical Sketches 1783-1863." The Review of English Studies 26:101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume's reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.'s sequel, "Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America."

Prickett, Stephen. Romanticism and Religion: The Tradition of Coleridge and Wordsworth in the Victorian Church. Cambridge, London, New York, Melbourne, 1976. 72-89. <BBS 609>

"Mostly on Blake's response to Wordsworth's Immortality Ode" (BBS 609).

Quinney, Laura. "Escape from Repetition: Blake versus Locke and Wordsworth." Ritual, Routine, and Regime: Repetition in Early Modern British and European Culture. Toronto, Buffalo, N.Y., London: University of Toronto Press in Association with the UCLA Center for Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century Studies and William Andrews Clark Memorial Library, 2006. 63-79.⁴⁸⁵ <WBHC 2557>

Radner, John B. "The Youthful Harlot's Curse: The Prostitute as a Symbol of the City in 18th-Century English Literature." Eighteenth-Century Life 2 (1976): 59-64. <BBS 611>

Considers depictions of prostitutes in "Goldsmith, Fielding, Wordsworth, and Blake" (BBS 611).

Rajan, Tilottoma. "The Other Reading: Transactional Epic in Milton, Blake, and Wordsworth." Milton, the Metaphysicals, and Romanticism. Ed. Lisa Low and Anthony Harding. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 20-46. <WBHC 2570>

⁴⁸⁵ Revised for Quinney's William Blake on Self and Soul (2009), <WBHC 2556>.

Richardson, Bruce Alan. “The Politics of Childhood: Wordsworth, Blake, and Catechistic Method.” ELH 56 (1989): 853-68. ⁴⁸⁶ <BBS 621, WBHC 2582>

Reads Wordsworth’s “We Are Seven” and Blake’s “The Lamb” in the context of Sarah Trimmer and Isaac Watts on the education of children through catechism.

Roberts, Jonathan. Blake, Wordsworth, Religion. London and N.Y.: Continuum, 2010. <WBHC 2596>

Examines the 2 Oct. 1800 letter poem to Thomas Butts and the vision of the Solitary in Book 2 of The Excursion.

Saklofske, Jon. “Between History and Hope: The Urban Centre of William Blake and William Wordsworth.” City Limits: Perspectives on the Historical European City. Ed. Glenn Clark, Judith Owens, and Greg T. Smith. Montreal: McGill-Queen’s University Press, 2010. 300-24. <WBHC 2361>

Explores the “contrasts and connections between the Londons of Blake and Wordsworth” (321). Largely on Jerusalem rather than “London.”

Ward, Aileen, “Romantic Castles and Real Prisons: Wordsworth, Blake, and Revolution.” Wordsworth Circle 30 (1999): 3-15. <WBHC 2833-34>

“[W]ith the passing of the historical crisis of the Revolution the imagery of castle and prison was depoliticized in both Wordsworth—for a time at least—and Blake, to change into a wider symbolism of the human condition itself” (12).

Wittreich, Jr., Joseph Anthony. “‘The Illustrious Dead’: Milton’s Legacy and Romantic Prophecy.” Milton and the Romantics 4.1 (1980): 17-32. ⁴⁸⁷ <BBS 682-83, WBHC 2876>

“‘Together Blake and Wordsworth may epitomize the possibilities of prophecy in the Romantic age’ (20)” (BBS 683).

Nineteenth-Century Writers and Publishers (1853-1899)

Introduction

Helsinger, Elizabeth. “Pre-Raphaelites and Aesthetes.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 211-18. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

General Studies

McCord, James. “West of Atlantis: William Blake’s Unromantic View of the American War.” Centennial Review 30 (1986): 383-96. <BBS 567>

Connecting Blake to Joel Barlow and Philip Freneau, McCord suggests Blake was critical of war and wary that the “supporters” of the American Revolution not “become ‘dragon forms’ themselves” (390).

⁴⁸⁶ Rpt. as “Children’s Literature and the Work of Culture” in Alan Richardson, Literature, Education, and Romanticism: Reading as Social Practice, 1780-1832 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994), 64-77, <WBHC 2581>.

⁴⁸⁷ Rpt. in John Milton: Twentieth Century Perspectives, Volume I: The Man and the Author. Ed. J. Martin Evans. New York: Routledge, 2003. 313-28

Elliott, Clare Frances. "William Blake's American Afterlives: Transatlantic Poetics in Emerson and Whitman." Transatlantic Literature and Transitivity, 1780–1850: Subjects, Texts, and Print Culture. Ed. Annika Bautz and Kathryn Gray. New York: Routledge, 2017. 195-211. <Blake (2018)>

Blake's influence on Emerson and Whitman.

Rose, Edward. "The 1839-Wilkinson Edition of Blake's Songs in Transcendental America." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 79-81. <BB #1217.66>

On copies owned by Ralph Waldo Emerson and Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who was a tutor to Emily Dickinson.

Browning, Elizabeth Barrett (1806-1861)

Primary

Browning [Barrett], Elizabeth. The Brownings' Correspondence. Ed. Philip Kelley and Ronald Hudson. Vol. 5. Winfield, KS: Wedgestone, 1987. 308. <WBHC 1793>

A 6 Apr. 1842 letter from Barrett Browning to Mary Russell Mitford mentions the Songs of Innocence and Cunningham's Life.

Secondary

Karakuzu, Melih, and Özlem Sayar. "A Comparative Analysis of the Conditions in the Romantic and Victorian Ages and Their Reflection in the Poems, 'The Chimney Sweeper' \(1789, 1794\), by William Blake, and 'The Cry of the Children' by Elizabeth Barrett Browning." Cogito 8.4 (2016): 105-11. <Blake (2024)>

"[A]ims to compare the stated poems of these poets in terms of child labor, social and family relationships, and religion" (abstract).

Stauffer, Andrew M. "Elizabeth Barrett Browning Reads William Blake?" Victorian Poetry 34.1 (1996): 114-17. <WBHC 2702>

Stauffer challenges the suggestion of the editors of The Brownings' Correspondence that Barrett Browning had alluded to either Jerusalem or The Four Zoas.

Browning, Robert (1812-1889)

Primary

Browning Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning. The Letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Browning 1845-1846. Ed. Elvan Kintner. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1969. II.861. <BB #A1298>

Browning makes a reference to Blake's poverty in a 9 Jul. 1846 letter after learning of B.R. Haydon's suicide.

Secondary

Haven, Raymond D. "Blake and Browning." Modern Language Notes 41 (1926): 464-66. <BB #1808>

Argues that Robinson's account of Blake influenced the characterization of Lazarus in Browning's Epistle and notes that the Brownings visited Robinson the same year he was revisiting his Blake material for his Reminiscences.

Hood, Thurman Los. "Browning and Blake." Trinity Review 2.2 (Mar. 1948): 42-50.⁴⁸⁸ <BB #1880>

Suggests that Browning's "Transcendentalism: A Poem in Twelve Books" is a parody of Milton a Poem in Twelve Books.

Bryant, William Cullen \(1794-1878\)

Essick, Robert N. "Blake in the Marketplace, 2005." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 178-79. <WBHC 1705>

Discusses and reproduces William James Linton's wood-engraved title page for Bryant's Thanatopsis (New York and Boston: H.M. Caldwell Co, n.d.), which is modelled on Blake's unique separate plate, Deaths Door.

Childs, Lydia Maria \(1802-1880\)

Stauffer, Andrew M. "The First Known Publication of Blake's Poetry in America." Notes and Queries 43.1 (1996): 41-43. <WBHC 2702>

"The eleven printings of poems by Blake published in the National Anti-Slavery Standard (N.Y., 1842-1849) were probably selected by the editor, Lydia Maria Child" (WBHC 2702).

Dickens, Charles \(1812-1870\)

Leavis, F.R., and Q.D. Leavis. "Dickens and Blake: Little Dorritt." Dickens the Novelist. London, 1970. 213-76. New York: Penguin, 1980. 282-355. <BBS 546>

"There is the closest essential affinity between Dickens and the author of "London" ([300])" (BBS 546).⁴⁸⁹

Rainsford, Dominic. Authorship, Ethics and the Reader: Blake, Dickens, Joyce. Basingstoke: Macmillan; N.Y.: St Martin's Press, 1997. <WBHC 2569>

"It is about how Blake, Dickens, and Joyce 'construct their ethical status as authors'" (WBHC 2570).

Tearle, Oliver. "Blake's 'London' in A Tale of Two Cities." Notes and Queries 53.3 (2006): 335-36. <WBHC 2757>

Suggests imagery in A Tale of Two Cities echoes "London."

Dickinson, Emily \(1830-1886\)

Blackstock, Alan. "Dickinson, Blake, and the Hymnbooks of Hell." The Emily Dickinson Journal 20.2 (2011): 33-56. <WBHC 1635>

⁴⁸⁸ Incorporates Hood's "An Allusion to Blake," Nation 93 (1911), 240, <BB #1879>.

⁴⁸⁹ 1980 New York edition cited.

“[E]xamine[s] the ways in which [Blake’s and Dickinson’s] common sources—the Protestant hymnodists [and particularly Isaac Watts]—inform both their poetics and their social consciences” (34).

Son, Hyesook. “Canon Formation and the Reception of Blake’s and Dickinson’s Poetry in Korea.” Comparative Literature and Culture 16.6 (2014): 10 pp.⁴⁹⁰

“The reception of Blake’s and Dickinson’s work has symptomatically displayed the characteristic Korean interpretive frames working through the last six decades and their limits and inherent possibilities” (9).

Zino, Dominique. “The Invisible Hand of the Lyric: Emily Dickinson’s Hypermediated Manuscripts and the Debate over Genre.” Textual Cultures 10.1 (2016): 1-36. <Blake (2019)>

Includes a substantial discussion of Blake’s American reception and its impact on Dickinson’s own: “By looking at the complexities Dickinson’s first editor and critics faced when classifying her work, we can see the way the allusions to Blake were both efforts at lending a material and informational body to Dickinson’s texts, while also burying them deeper in a lyric tradition” (25).

Emerson, Ralph Waldo (1803-1882)

Elliott, Clare. “‘Backward Glance O'er’ the \(Dis\)United States: William Blake, Ralph Waldo Emerson and the ‘Authentic American Religion.’” European Journal of American Culture 28.1 (2009): 75-93. <WBHC 1982-83>

“A close analysis of Emerson’s early reading of Blake beside a consideration of Blake’s ‘London’ (1794), ‘The Clod and the Pebble’ (1794) and Emerson’s ‘self-Reliance’ (1841) and ‘society and Solitude’ (1870) documents the development of Emersonian self-reliance into a more assured term” (abstract).

O’Keefe, Richard R. Mythic Archetypes in Ralph Waldo Emerson: A Blakean Reading. Kent and London: Kent State University Press, 1995. <WBHC 2495>

Uses archetypal criticism to analyze Emerson.

Fitzgerald, Edward (1809-1883)

Primary

Wright, William Aldis. Letters and Literary Remains of Edward Fitzgerald. 3 vols. London and New York: Macmillan, 1889. 1.21. <BB #1614>

Describes obtaining a copy of Songs of Innocence in a 25 Oct. 1833 letter to W.B. Donne.

Hopkins, Gerard Manley (1844-1889)

Hurley, Michael D. “Theologies of Inspiration: William Blake and Gerard Manley Hopkins.” Constructing Nineteenth-Century Religion. Ed. Joshua King and Winter Jade Werner. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2019. 262-80. <Blake (2020)>

Carroll, Lewis (1832-1898)

Carroll, Lewis. The Diaries of Lewis Carroll. Ed. R.L. Green. 1953. 1.206. <BB #A1346>

⁴⁹⁰ Not recorded in WBHC.

“On 19 Oct. 1863 Dodgson ‘got him [Macmillan] to print me some of Blake’s Songs of Innocence on large paper’; presumably these were made from the electrotypes of Innocence used in Gilchrist’s ‘Pictor Ignotus’ (1863)” (BB #A1346).

James, Henry Sr. (1811-1882)

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “Blake’s ‘Poetical Sketches’ Finally Arrive in America.” Review of English Studies 31.122 (1980): 183-92. <BBS 449>

Adding to Michael Phillips’s “The Reputation of Blake’s Poetical Sketches 1783-1863” and G.E. Bentley, Jr.’s The Critical Heritage, illuminates via “a newly discovered collection of letters” (184) how seven poems from Poetical Sketches passed from J.J. Garth Wilkinson to Henry James, Sr. for publication in the American magazine, Harbinger, in 1848. References to Emerson and Robinson as well.

Phillips, Michael. “The Reputation of Blake’s Poetical Sketches 1783-1863.” The Review of English Studies 26:101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume’s reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.’s sequel, “Blake’s ‘Poetical Sketches’ Finally Arrive in America.”

Kierkegaard, Søren (1813-1855)

Bundock, Christopher M. Romantic Prophecy and the Resistance to Historicism. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2016. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Treats Blake’s notions of prophecy and history in Milton especially, but with many references to the annotations to Watson and A Descriptive Catalogue. He also considers the prefaces of the Lambeth prophecies and considers the poems themselves as prefaces for Blake’s later poems. Some discussion of Blake in relationship to both Mary and Percy Shelley and to Kierkegaard.

Clark, Lorraine. Blake, Kierkegaard, and the Spectre of Dialectic. 1991. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2009. <BBS 438, WBHC 1854-55>

Uses “Kierkegaard’s philosophy to illuminate Blake’s prophecies” (abstract).

Jackson, Timothy P. “Is Isaac Kierkegaard’s Neighbor? Fear and Trembling in Light of William Blake and Works of Love.” Annual of the Society of Christian Ethics 17 (1997): 97-119. <WBHC 2201>

“I compare the views of William Blake, Johannes de Silentio [Kierkegaard’s pseudonym], and Søren Kierkegaard. Blake’s poetry and painting suggest a striking alternative to our usual understanding of the story, but they finally require too radical a departure from the Biblical text” (98).

Quinney, Laura. “Subjectivity and Despair in Blake and Kierkegaard.” Romanticism and Philosophy: Thinking with Literature. Ed. Sophie Laniel-Musitelli and Thomas Constantinesco. New York: Routledge, 2015. 179-93. <WBHC 2558>

Rovira, James. Blake and Kierkegaard: Creation and Anxiety. London: Continuum, 2010.
<WBHC 2615>

On the anxiety of subjectivity, with a discussion of the writers' use of Socrates and of The Book of Urizen.

Rovira, James. “The Moravian Origins of Kierkegaard's and Blake's Socratic Literature.” Kierkegaard, Literature, and the Arts. Ed. Eric Zolkowski. Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 2018. 239-60. <Blake (2019)>

A fascinating look at the parallels between Kierkegaard's and Blake's Moravian heritage and its impact on their conception of Socrates.

Schneider, Matthew. “The Anxiety of Innocence in Blake and Kierkegaard.” European Romantic Review 16.3 (2005): 351-59. <WBHC 2652>

“[E]xamines the subtly melancholic tone that suffuses Blake's Songs of Innocence through the prism of Søren Kierkegaard's concept of anxiety” (abstract).

Melville, Herman (1819-1891)

Clinton, Daniel. “Line and Lineage: Visual Form in Herman Melville's Pierre and Timoleon.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 73.1 (2018): 1-29. <Blake (2019)>

Considers Melville's idea of form and outline in relationship to Blake, George Cumberland, John Flaxman, and John Ruskin.

Hayes, Kevin J. “Edwin E. Slosson and the Melville Revival.” Notes and Queries 67.1 (2020): 133-34. <Blake (2021)>

“Slosson is the first to identify a similarity between Moby-Dick and the poetry of William Blake” (133).

Pfefferkorn, Eli. “The Questions of the Leviathan and the Tiger.” Blake Studies 3.1 (1970): 53-60. <BB #1218.39>

““The technique used by Blake in mystifying [sic] the nature of the Tiger is akin to that used by Melville in describing the Leviathan’ (59)” (BB #1218.39).

Stanton, Michael N. “Blake, 'B.V.,' and Billy Budd.” Melville Society Extracts 71 (1987): 12-16. <BBS 645>

Suggests that Melville might have been inspired by Blake.

Morris, William (1834-96)

Ashton, Nichols. “Liberationist Sexuality and Nonviolent Resistance: The Legacy of Blake and Shelley in Morris's News from Nowhere.” Journal of the William Morris Society 10.4 (Jan. 1994): 20-27. <WBHC 1568>

“My purpose is not to trace a series of direct influences or subtle echoes among Morris, Blake, and Shelley. Rather, I suggest that the sexual politics and revolutionary energy behind the imaginings of Blake and Shelley find another important voice in the future world described in News From Nowhere” (20).

Bidney, Martin. “Slowed-Down Time and the Fear of History: The Medievalist Visions of William Blake and William Morris.” Journal for Early Modern Cultural Studies 2.2 (fall-winter 2002): 100-20. <WBHC 1628>

“I will suggest that Romantic poet William Blake and Victorian poet William Morris counteract the seeming threat of a relentless speeding up of modern industrial time by nostalgically envisioning a dreamlike slow-motion medieval world where time is comfortingly relaxed, or even brought to a halt” (102).

Pater, Walter (1839-1894)

Calè, Luisa. “‘spiritual Form’: Walter Pater’s Encounters with William Blake.” Walter Pater and the Beginnings of English Studies. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2023. 198-215. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

“Blake is a subterranean presence” (198).

Rossetti, Christina (1830-1894) (See also Rossetti in Studies of Blake Criticism)

Armstrong, Isobel. “Christina Rossetti’s Sing-Song: Three Illustrators, Three Readings of Image and Text.” Victorian Poetry 60.4 (2022): 547-80. <Blake (2024)>

“William Blake solved the problem of image and text by attempting to imbricate image and text as nearly as possible so that one becomes the other. [Christina] Rossetti’s solution was Blake-like: tiny images, in soft pencil with dashes of red, heading her handwritten poems and seemingly produced organically from them” (549-50). (The three illustrators of the title are Christiana Rossetti, Arthur Hughes, and Alice Boyd.)

Sturrock, June. “Protective Pastoral: Innocence and Female Experience in William Blake’s Songs and Christina Rossetti’s Goblin Market.” Colby Quarterly 30.2 (1994): 98-108. <WBHC 2716>

“Both Goblin Market and Songs of Innocence and of Experience deal with the emergence from childhood or a childlike state” (98).

Woolford, John. “Christina Rossetti and the ‘Rossetti Manuscript’ of William Blake.” Journal of Pre-Raphaelite Studies 18 (fall 2009): 72-84.

Traces the influence of Blake on Christina Rossetti.

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel (1828-1882) (See also Rossetti in Studies of Blake Criticism)

Primary

Minnick, Thomas L. “A New Rossetti Letter.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 181-82. <BB #1217.84>

Presents an unpublished letter from Dante Gariel Rossetti to a Mr. Ireland (the note discusses the discrepancies in the first name) dated c. Apr. to 24 Oct. 1862, which mentions writing to Anne Gilchrist.

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel. Dante Gabriel Rossetti: His Family-Letters. With a Memoir by William Michael Rossetti. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) London: Ellis and Elvey, 1895. Boston: Robert Brothers, 1895. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) New York: AMS Press, 1970. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2). <BB #2569>

References to Blake (including the finding of the Pickering Manuscript [Vol. 1, 109-10]), Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, John Linnell, and Rossetti’s siblings.

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel. Letters of Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Ed. Oswald Doughty and John Robert Wahl. 4 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2. Vol. 3. Vol. 4.) Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1965-67. <BB #2570>

References to Blake, John Linnell, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist (including letters regarding the first and second edition of the Life of William Blake), Swinburn, and Rossetti's siblings.

Secondary

Essick, Robert N. “Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Frederic Shields, and the Spirit of William Blake.” Victorian Poetry 24.2 (summer 1986): 163-72. <BBS 464>

On Rossetti's sonnet, “William Blake,” and its relationship to the artist Frederic Shields (who sketched Blake's room at 3 Fountain Court) and Blake's Victorian reception.

Pieper, Eleanore Frauke. “Imitation Is Criticism”: Dante Gabriel Rossetti und William Blake (1997).

Pittman, Philip McM. “Blake, Rossetti, and Reynolds: A Detail.” Note and Queries 21.6 (1974): 215-16. <BB #A2412>

Emphasizes that Rossetti would have known Blake's thoughts on Reynolds before the annotations were known given what Blake wrote on Reynolds in the Notebook.

Preston, Kerrison. Blake and Rossetti. London: Alexander Moring Limited, 1944. Rpt. New York: Haskel House Publishers, 1971. <BB #2451, WBHC 2524>

A comparison of their thought, and Blake's influence on Rossetti. Bentley comments, “A product of amateur enthusiasm” (BB #2451).

Waters, Gregory Leo. “Blake and Rossetti.” English Record 29.4 (1978): 23-27. <BBS 673>

An overview of Blake's influence on Rossetti.

Rossetti, William Michael (1829-1919) (See Twentieth-Century Writers and Rossetti in Studies of Blake Criticism)

Ruskin, John (1819-1900) (See Twentieth-Century Writers)

Smethan, James (1821-1889) (See Gilchrist)

Tennyson, Alfred (1809-1892)

Erle, Sibylle. “Lord Tennyson's Copy of Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job \(1826\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.2 (fall 2015): par. 9.

Details Tennyson's copy and his display of the volume, as well as its discovery by Diane Piccitto in 2012.

Erle, Sibylle. Tennyson and Blake: Benjamin Jowett's Copy of Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job on the Island of Wright. Lincoln, England: Tennyson Society, 2016. Tennyson Society Monographs No. 16.

Traces Tennyson's interest in Blake, focusing not only on his copy of the Illustration of the Books of Job, but also on Tennyson place in “a larger network of enthusiasts who wrote about Blake or collected his works. These included Francis Taylor Palgrave, Richard Monckton Milnes, the Rossettis and Benjamin Jowett” (3).

Evetts_Secker, J. “‘Repining restlesnesse’: On the Nature of Desire in Blake, Tennyson, and Fairy Tales.” University of Hartford Studies in Literature 20.2 (1988): 1-17. <BBS 468>

“The central experience I now want to explore is the predicament of finite, earthly man caught up in a necessary discontent, unable to extricate himself” (3). Refers to Blake’s “I want! I want!” from The Gates of Paradise and “My Pretty Rose Tree.”

Kruger, Kathryn Sullivan. Weaving the Word: The Metaphorics of Weaving and Female Textual Production. Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2001. <WBHC 2296>

The two major writers considered in the monograph are Blake and Tennyson.

Whitman, Walt (1819-1892) (See also the Gilchrists)

Primary

Harned, Thomas B., ed. The Letters of Anne Gilchrist and Walt Whitman. New York: Doubleday, Page and Company, 1918.

Contains references to Blake by both.

The Walt Whitman Archive. Ed. Matt Cohen, Ed Folsom, and Kenneth M. Price.

Contains Whitman’s correspondence with Anne Gilchrist, H.H. Gilchrist, and William Michael Rossetti.

Secondary

Bidney, Martin. “Structures of Perception in Blake and Whitman: Creative Contraries, Cosmic Body, Fourfold Vision.” ESQ: A Journal of the American Renaissance 28.1 (1982): 36-47. <BBS 372>

“About the ‘inner logic’ of the ‘poetic psychology which ‘each poet works out’ (36)” (BBS 372).

Ferguson-Wagstaffe, Sarah. “‘Points of Contact’: Blake and Whitman.” Sullen Fires across the Atlantic: Essays in Transatlantic Romanticism. Ed. Lance Newman, Chris Koenig-Woodyard, and Joel Pace. College Park: University of Maryland Press, 2006. 19 pars. <WBHC 2017>

Whitman’s tomb [modelled on ‘Death’s Door’] is a compelling sign of connection between Blake and Whitman” (par. 3).

Pease, Donald. “Blake, Whitman, Crane: The Hand of Fire.” William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 15-38.⁴⁹¹ <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Argues Crane’s The Bridge drew on the tensions between the epic and the prophetic as exemplified in Paradise Lost, Milton a Poem, Leaves of Grass, and The Waste Land.

⁴⁹¹ Adams writes, “This essay follows twenty-six years upon the publication of Blake and Yeats: The Contrary Vision and twelve years upon its second printing with a corrective preface. This essay sets out anew, rather than attempting a retrospective glance at what I said some time ago” (14n.1).

Whittier, John Greenleaf (1807-1892)

Primary

The Supernaturalism of New England. London, 1847. <BB #2953>

Refers to Blake and a fairy funeral on pp. 25-26.

Wilkinson, James John Garth (1812-1899)

Evans, Frederck H. James John Garth Wilkinson: An Introduction. 1912. Rpt. 1936. 11-20. <BB #1586>

Wilkinson, Clement John. James John Garth Wilkinson: A Memoir of His Life, with a Selection of His Letters. London: Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co, Ltd. 1911. 25-35, 95-97.

The 1839 edition of the Songs and its preface is described on pp. 25-29.

Twentieth-Century Writers and Publishers (1900-1999)

Introductions and General Studies

Bertholf, Robert F., and Annette Levitt, ed. William Blake and the Moderns. New York: State University of New York Press. 1983. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

A collection of essays considering Blake's influence on Modernist writers.

Black, Michael. "Wood is a pleasant thing to think about": William Blake and the Hand-Printed Books of the Hogarth Press." Virginia Woolf and the World of Books: The Centenary of the Hogarth Press. Ed. Nicola Wilson and Claire Battershill. Clemson, SC: Clemson University Press, 2018. 40-49. <Blake (2019)>

On Blake's influence on the Bloomsbury Circle's Hogarth Press.

Gillespie, Diane Filby. "Blake and Bloomsbury: Mental Warfare."⁴⁹² English Literature in Transition 1880-1920 33 (1990): 5-28. <BBS 484>

"Just as Blake admired and admonished his predecessors while he recreated them in his own image, so the Bloomsbury artists admired, selectively scrutinized, argued about, and sometimes refashioned Blake" (6).

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Postmodernism." Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 254-73. <WBHC 2867-68>

Considers Blake in terms of Postmodern theory and his reception among Postmodern authors.

Larrissy, Edward. Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. <WBHC 2310-12>

A collection of essays by Larrissy regarding Blake's influence on writers from Yeats to Rushdie.

Lussier, Mark. "Blake beyond Postmodernity." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 151-62. <WBHC 2862-63>

⁴⁹² BBS mistakenly has "Mental Anguish" (484).

On Blake's late twentieth-century reception and appropriation.

Larrissy, Edward. "Yeats, Eliot, and Auden." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 219-26. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Mansanti, Céline. "William Blake in transition Magazine \(Paris, 1927-38\): The Modalities of a Blake Revival in France during the 1920s and 1930s." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.2 (fall 2009): 52-60. <WBHC 1721>

On the Modernist French Revival of Blake in the literary magazine, transition.

Otto, Peter. "Rouze up O Young Men of the New Age!": William Blake, Theodore Roszak, and the Counter Culture of the 1960s-1970s." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 13-26. <WBHC 1871-73>

Uses Theodore Roszak's The Making of Counter Culture: Reflections on the Technocratic Society and its Youthful Opposition (1969) and his Where the Wasteland Ends: Politics and Transcendence in Postindustrial Society (1972) to engage with the question why Blake became so popular in the Counter Culture Movements of the 1960s and 1970s.

Whittaker, Jason. "From Hell: Blake and Evil in Popular Culture." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 192-204. <WBHC 2862-63>

"[H]ow Blake's critical of the Moral Law influenced a number of writers at the end of the twentieth century," including Thomas Harris, J.G. Ballard, Michael Dibdin, and Alan Moore.

Whittaker, Jason. "'The Place Where Contrarieties are Equally True': Blake and the Science-Fiction Counterculture." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 93-106. <Blake (2023)>

"Explores the more detached and ironic view of Blake that emerged in the 1970s compared to appropriations of him in the 1960s, as evident in three science-fiction novels: Ray Nelson's Blake's Progress (1977), Angela Carter's The Passion of New Eve (1977), and J. G. Ballard's The Unlimited Dream Company (1979)" (abstract).

Auden, W.H. \(1907-1973\)

Primary

Auden, W.H.; Kathleen Raine; W.H. Auden. "A Mental Prince." Observer 17, 24 Nov. and 1 Dec. 1957: 12, 23, 6. <BB #1098>

Auden's "bicentenary appreciation" (BB #1098), Raine's response, and Auden's answer.

Secondary

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Oppositional Identity in Yeats, Auden and Dylan Thomas." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 37-55. <WBHC 2311-12>

"For Yeats, Auden and Thomas[,] Blake is a kind of sage who, more than his Romantic contemporaries, is able to speak essential truths to the modern world" (55).

McClellan, Jane Martha. "Auden's Creative Relationship to Blake, Coleridge, and Wordsworth." North Dakota Quarterly 47.1 (1979): 41-54. <BBS 567>

"Certainly, Auden's debt to Blake is large' (45)" (BBS 567).

Bataille, Georges (1897-1962)

Albernaz, Joseph. "Nonsovereign Circulations: William Blake" and "Sunray of the Negative: Blake and Bataille." Common Measures: Romanticism and the Groundlessness of Community. Stanford: Stanford University Press, 2024. 139-87 and 188-202. <Blake (2025)>

On community in Jerusalem: "Community must circulate among us, among the spilled excess of fragile attachments, in the everyday" (186). The comparison of Blake and Bataille focuses on their conception of energy, with references to Marriage, Jerusalem, A Descriptive Catalogue, and The Ancient Britons.

Chen, Kang-Po. "The Knife of flint passes over the howling Victim': Rethinking Sacrificial Violence in William Blake's Jerusalem." Tamkang Review 54.2 (2024): 47-75. <Blake (2025)>

"Engaging with Georges Bataille's conception of the sacred, I would propose that ritualistic violence and bodily consumption proffer an alternative route to Romantic artistic imagination, challenging the critical consensus that Blake leans towards the spiritual and renounces the corporeal in his late works" (abstract).

McConnell, Will. "Blake, Bataille, and the Accidental Processes of Material History in Milton." Clio 26 (1997): 449-71. <WBHC 2386>

On differences between the mythologies of Blake and Bataille.

Serdechnaia, Vera. "Uil'iam Bleik i F. M. Dostoevskii: istoriia sopostavleniiia [William Blake and F. M. Dostoevsky: A History of Comparison]." Dostoevskii i mirovaya kul'tura. Filologicheskii zhurnal [Dostoevsky and World Culture. Philological Journal] 3 (2020): 158-68. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The article is devoted to the history of comparing the works of William Blake and Fyodor Dostoevsky: the lectures of André Gide; the works of Jean Wahl, Georges Bataille, Melvin Rader, and D. Gustafsson; Czesław Miłosz's The Land of Ulro; and the opera The Book of Seraphim in Moscow (2020).

Beat Generation and Counter Culture (See also Allen Ginsberg and Michael Horovitz)

Eisenman, Stephen F., ed. William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at Northwestern University from 23 Sep. 2017 to 11 Mar. 2018. Blake is positioned in the American counterculture of the 1960s and 1970s.

Kripal, Jeffrey John. "Reality against Society: William Blake, Antinomianism, and the American Counterculture." Common Knowledge 13 (2007): 98-112. <WBHC 2294>

Explores "how the historical Blake's Neoplatonic, dissenting, Kabbalistic, and erotic-mystical thought was picked up by American countercultural actors during the antinomian moment of the fifties and sixties" (101).

Walker, Luke. "Tangled Up in Blake: The Triangular Relationship among Dylan, Blake, and the Beats." Rock and Romanticism: Blake, Wordsworth, and Rock from Dylan to U2.⁴⁹³ Lanham: Lexington Books, 2018. 1-18. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Considers Blake's place in Dylan's relationship with the Beats.

Beckett, Samuel (1906-1989)

Kay, Wallace G. "Blake, Baudelaire, Beckett: The Romantics of Nihilism." The Southern Quarterly 9.3 (1971): 253-59. <BB #1990>

"These three all exhibit nihilistic characteristics, but these characteristics, I intend to demonstrate, are also variations of romantic characteristics" (253).

Bester, Alfred (1913-1987)

McCarthy, Patrick A. "Science Fiction as Creative Revisionism: The Example of Alfred Bester's The Stars My Destination." Science-Fiction Studies 10 (1983): 58-69. <BBS 566>

"Bester's use of Blakean images not only may determine our reading of The Stars My Destination [in Britain, published as Tiger, Tiger (1956)] but may affect our reading of Blake's poem itself" (59).

Bierce, Ambrose (1842-1914)

Lindsann, Olchar E. Two Cities: On Carcosa and Golgonooza. Monocle-Lash Anti-Press, 2018. <Blake (2024)>

Rhapsodic comparison of Golgonooza and Carcosa, an ancient city in Ambrose Bierce's story, "An Inhabitant of Carcosa."

Borges, Jorge Luis (1899-1986)

Baulch, David M. "Time, Narrative, and the Multiverse: Post-Newtonian Narrative in Borges's The Garden of the Forking Paths and Blake's Vala or The Four Zoas." Comparatist 27 (2003): 56-78. <WBHC 1582>

"Jorge Luis Borges's compact short story, 'The Garden of Forking Paths,' and William Blake's sprawling manuscript poem, The Four Zoas, will serve as the focus of my argument for the useful potential of a many-worlds notion of narrative" (58).

Brecht, Bertolt (1898-1956)

O'Regan, Keith. Towards a Productive Aesthetics: Contemporary and Historical Interventions in Blake and Brecht. Leiden and Boston: Brill, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

"[C]ompare[s] the political-aesthetic strategies of William Blake (1757-1827) and Bertolt Brecht (1898-1956)" (abstract). The chapters on Blake appear to focus on the Songs and Milton.

Brodkey, Harold (1930-1996)

Bidney, Martin. "A Song of Innocence and of Experience: Rewriting Blake in Brodkey's 'Piping Down the Valleys Wild'." Studies in Short Fiction 31.2 (1994): 237-45. <WBHC 1629>

⁴⁹³ The descriptions of the chapters at Rovira's blog have an iTunes Playlist for each chapter.

“[Harold] Brodkey, [the American writer (1930-96),] I am suggesting, alludes freely in his story to Blakean visions of both innocence and experience” (238).

Burke, Kenneth (1897-1993)

Rutland, Laura E. “The Romantic in the Attic: William Blake’s Place in Kenneth Burke’s Intellectual Circle.” Kenneth Burke and His Circles. Ed. Jack Selzer and Robert Weiss. West Lafayette, IN: Parlor Press, 2008. 109-19. <WBHC 2623>

“This essay will explore the notion that a shade of William Blake lives in Kenneth Burke’s intellectual attic, like a bothersome mad cousin, perhaps, hidden away, but finally acknowledged in the end” (109).

Butts, Mary (1890-1937) (See also the Butts Family)

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “‘A Secret Common to our Blood’: The Visionary Erotic Heritage of Blake, Thomas Butts and Mary Butts.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 71-82. <WBHC 1800-01>

Examines the religious and erotic ideas of Mary Butts (the great-granddaughter of Thomas Butts) in light of Swedenborg, Moravianism, and Blake.

Carter, Angela (1940-92)

Hallab, Mary T. “Carter and Blake: The Dangers of Innocence.” Function of the Fantastic: Selected Essays from the Thirteenth International Conference on the Fantastic in the Arts. Ed. Joe Sanders. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1995. 177-84. <WBHC 2121>

“In the three novels I will discuss, Love, Heroes and Villains, and The Infernal Desire Machines of Dr. Hoffman, a number of allusions and parallels suggest indebtedness to those works of William Blake in which this theme [of Innocence confronting reality] is also prominent, particularly his Songs of Innocence and of Experience, The Book of Thel, and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell” (177).

Larrissy, Edward. “Postmodern Myths and Lies: Iain Sinclair and Angela Carter.” Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 125-45. <WBHC 2311-12>

Examines how Blake influences both writers and their understanding of postmodernity.

Ranger, Christopher. “Friendly Enemies: A Dialogical Encounter between William Blake and Angela Carter.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 140-50. <WBHC 2862-63>

Traces Blake’s influence on the novelist.

Cary, Joyce (1888-1957)

Adams, Hazard. “Blake and Gulley Jimson: English Symbolists.” Critique 3.1 (1959): 3-14. <BB #774>

“Traces parallels in their careers, art, and aesthetic theories” (BB #774).

Heffernan, James A.W. “Politics and Freedom: Refractions of Blake in Joyce Cary and Allen Ginsberg.” Romantic and Modern: Revaluations of Literary Tradition. Ed. George Bornstein. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Pres, 1977. 177-95. <BBS 504>

Beginning with the Vietnam War, suggests that “Blake remains enduringly relevant” “because he turned politics into myth, and thus created a paradigm for all poet who would write of politics without ceasing to be poets” (178) and outlines how Cary and Ginsberg followed Blake’s example.

Larrissy, Edward. “Joyce Cary: Getting It from the Horse’s Mouth.” Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 100-07. <WBHC 2311-12>

On Blake’s influence on Cary.

Latane, David Eaton, Jr. “A Blakean Reference in Joyce Cary’s Except the Lord.” English Language Notes 24.3. (1987): 57-61. <BBS 545>

“Cary’s fictional Blake Man Tor in Devon, the site of the Second Coming, may be related to Mam Tor in Derbyshire, which Blake names thrice in Jerusalem” (BBS 545).

Levitt, Annette S. “‘The Mental Traveller’ in The Horses Mouth: New Light on the Old Cycle.” William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 186-211. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

“Gulley traces the entire cycle of the poem in his own life, while individual artists are equated in his mind with specific stages in the cycle” (187).

Levitt, Annette Shandler. “Joyce Cary’s Blake: The Intertextuality of The Horse’s Mouth.” Mosaic 25.3 (1992): 47-63.⁴⁹⁴ <WBHC 2320>

“Joyce Cary has absorbed Blake and transformed him—along with his varied manifestations, his complex systems—in ways which fully validate Kristeva’s concept of mosaic” (62).

Matthews, Susan. “And did those feet?: Blake and the Role of the Artist in Post-War Britain.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 149-61. <WBHC 1871-73>

On Joyce Cary’s The Horse’s Mouth (1944), Ronald Neame’s film version (1958), and Geoffrey and John Keynes.

Miller, Hugh. Blake & Gulley Jimson in Joyce Cary’s The Horse’s Mouth.” Antigonish Review 33 (1978): 79-81. <BBS 574>

Wright, Andrew. “The Blake Quotations in The Horse’s Mouth.” Joyce Cary: A Preface to His Novels. New York: Harper, 1958. 165-73. <BBS 685>

Provides the source of the quotations.

Chesterton, G.K. (1874-1936)

Chesterton, G.K. William Blake. London: Duckworth and Co. and New York: E.P. Dutton and Co., 1910. Rpt. 1920. <BB #, WBHC 1844-45>

⁴⁹⁴ Incorporates Levitt’s “‘The Mental Traveller’ in The Horse’s Mouth: New Light on the Old Cycle,” William Blake and the Moderns, ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt (1982), 186-211, <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>.

Chesterton, G.K. "William Blake and Inspiration." Illustrated London News 1929.

Blackstock, Alan. "'With considerable art': Chesterton on Blake, Browning, and Shaw." Renaissance 62.1 (2009): 21-40.

Suggests that Chesterton's biographies were really just opportunities for expressing his own thought: "The early lives of Blake, Browning, and Shaw — their birthdates, parentage, childhood experiences, schooling — are rendered in a few deft strokes which quickly branch off into Chesterton's true concerns: the religious, philosophical, and intellectual context in which they grew" (22).

Crane, Hart \(1899-1932\)

Pease, Donald. "Blake, Whitman, Crane: The Hand of Fire." William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 15-38. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Argues Crane's The Bridge drew on the tensions between the epic and the prophetic as exemplified in Paradise Lost, Milton a Poem, Leaves of Grass, and The Waste Land.

Pease, Donald. "Blake, Crane, Whitman, and Modernism: A Poetics of Pure Possibility." PMLA 96 (1981): 64-85. <BBS 601>

"[I]n the course of this essay we will reevaluate [sic] Blake's placement within a 'modernist' tradition" (64).

Pease, Donald. "Hart Crane and the Tradition of Epic Prophecy." Critical Essays on Hart Crane. Ed. David R. Clark. Boston: G.K. Hall & Co., 1982. 255-74. <BBS 601>

Discusses Milton and Crane's The Bridge.

Dick, Philip K. \(1928-82\)

Hartman, Geoffrey. "Notes toward a Supreme Addiction: The Theology Fiction of William Blake and Philip K. Dick." Religion, Literature and the Imagination: Sacred Worlds. Ed. Mark Knight and Louise Lee. London: Continuum, 2009. <WBHC 2132-33>

On "theology fiction" in both writers and the thresholds between the divine, human, and non-human.

Doolittle, Hilda \(1886-1961\)

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "The 'secret' and the 'Gift': Recovering the Suppressed Religious Heritage of William Blake and Hilda Doolittle." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 209-18. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Compares the Moravian background of Blake and the Modernist poet, Hilda Doolittle (H.D.).

Dreiser, Theodore \(1871-1945\)

Brennan, Stephen C. "The Financier: Dreiser's Marriage of Heaven and Hell." Studies in American Fiction 19 (1991): 55-69. <BBS 424>

Draws parallels between Dreiser's The Financier (1912) and Blake's Marriage.

Duncan, Robert (1919-1988)

Annwn, David. "Hear the Voice of the Bard! Who Present, Past, & Future Sees": Three Cores of Bardic Attention: The Early Bards, William Blake & Robert Duncan. Han-on-Wye: WestHouse Books, 1995. <WBHC 1491-92>

Considers the Welsh Bard in Blake, beginning with Gray and ending with Duncan.

Bertholf, Robert J. "Robert Duncan: Blake's Contemporary Voice." William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 92-110. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Duncan "regards Blake as a poetic companion of the sacramental imagination who has gone before him exploring the difficulties of revealing the holiness of existence, and the integration of existence in the larger spiritual dimensions of cosmic orders" (92-93).

Freedman, Linda. "Blake, Duncan, and the Politics of Writing from Myth." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.2 (fall 2013): 46 pars.⁴⁹⁵ <WBHC 1737>

"Duncan's reading of Blake [...] suggests the discovery of a relevant and restorative romanticism with which to address the modern world" (par. 4).

Larrissy, Edward. "Two American Disciples of Blake: Robert Duncan and Allen Ginsberg." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 108-24. <WBHC 2311-12>

"Both are gay poets who regard Blake as an ally in the reaction against orthodox heterosexuality; both see him as a kind of father; both see in Blake's work images of the bad father who rejects them; both, as Blake did, see the possibility that the bad father is within themselves; both are capable of equating the bad father with political action in the United States, and both employ this interpretation in their critique of Vietnam entanglement" (124).

Einstein, Albert (1879-1955)

Cohen, Adam Max. "Genius in Perspective: Blake, Einstein and Relativity." Wordsworth Circle 31.3 (2000): 164-69. <WBHC 1876>

"Comparing Blake's Marriage of Heaven and Hell with Einstein's theory of relativity reveals a common feature in each one's work that I call 'perspectival lightness,' which has implications for Romantic and Modern conceptions of genius" (164).

Eliot, T.S. (1888-1965)

Primary

[Eliot, T.S.] "The Naked Man." Athenaeum No. 4685 (13 Feb. 1920): 208-09. Revised as "Blake." The Sacred Wood: Essays on Poetry and Criticism. London: 1920. <BB #1544>

Eliot's essay on Blake.

Eliot, T.S. "The Mysticism of Blake." The Nation & Athenaeum 41 (1927), 799. <BB #1543> The Complete Prose of T. S. Eliot: The Critical Edition. Vol. 3: Literature, Politics, Belief, 1927-1929.

⁴⁹⁵ Incorporated in Freedman's William Blake and the Myth of America: From the Abolitionists to the Counterculture (2018), <Blake \(2019, 2020, 2023, 2025\)>.

Frances Dickey and Jennifer Formichelli and Ronald Schuchard. John Hopkins University Press and Faber & Faber, Ltd., 2015. 239-44.

Reviews Keynes's Poetry and Prose of William Blake (1927) and his Pencil Drawings of William Blake (1927); Plowman's facsimile of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1927) and his Introduction to the Study of William Blake (1927); Mona Wilson's Life of William Blake (1927); and Helen C. White's The Mysticism of William Blake (Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1927).

Secondary

Clark, Steve. "There is no Competition": Eliot on Blake, Blake in Eliot." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 78-99. <WBHC 2862-63>

On T.S. Eliot's essays on Blake, and Blake's largely unrecognized influence on Eliot.

Leavis, F.R. "Justifying One's Evaluation of Blake." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 66-85.⁴⁹⁶ <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

On what Blake demands and what he achieved, with references to T.S. Eliot's essay on Blake.

Larrissy, Edward. "Eliot between Blake and Yeats." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 28-36. <WBHC 2311-12>

"In sum, Eliot appears to be offering an implied rebuke to Yeats and Blake by adapting myths which in his estimation are central to European tradition. But he has borrowed Blake's tactic of setting a myth within his own place" (31).

Pease, Donald. "Blake, Whitman, Crane: The Hand of Fire." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 15-38. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Argues that Crane's The Bridge drew on the tensions between the epic and the prophetic as exemplified in Paradise Lost, Milton a Poem, Leaves of Grass, and The Waste Land.

Searle, Leroy. "Blake, Eliot, and Williams: The Continuity of Imaginative Labor." William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 39-72. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

"[T]hese three poets offer an ideal occasion for examining the consequences of art pursued with total dedication" (40).

Todd, Ruthven. "Gilchrist Redivivus." Blake Studies 1.1 (autumn 1968): 95-97. <BB #1218.5>

On a proposed new edition of Gilchrist's Life, with some history of the previous ones edited by Todd, including his lunch with T.S. Eliot. (The proposed edition was never published.)

⁴⁹⁶ Originally, a lecture delivered at Bristol University 15 Nov. 1971. From published version in The Human World (1972), <BB #A2106>.

Watson-Williams, Helen. “The Blackened Wall: Notes on Blake’s London and Eliot’s The Waste Land.” English 10 (1955): 181-84. <BB #2932>

“‘Blake’s poem London may have played its influential part in the creation of The Waste Land’” (BB #2932).

Elytis, Odysseas (1911-1996)

Ozansoy, Esin (trans. from the Greek by Francisco Javier Ortolá Salas). “Proverbios. Aforismos de Lugares Comunes Literarios en Elytis y William Blake”. Litera 28.1 (2018): 101-115. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2025)>

“This article examines the influence of William Blake on Odysseas Elytis and their similarities through an analysis of Proverbs and Aphorisms. [...] Elytis and Blake seem to have many points in common, though independent from each other. In the texts of Blake, Elytis recognized ideas and perspectives that he had himself” (abstract).

Faulkner, William (1897-1962)

Mellard, James M. “Faulkner’s Miss Emily and Blake’s ‘sick Rose’: ‘Invisible World,’ Nachträglichkeit, and Retrospective Gothic.” The Faulkner Journal 2.1 (fall 1986): 37-45. <BBS 571>

Suggests that “The Sick Rose” is alluded to as part of Faulkner’s use of the gothic.

Foster, E.M. (1879-1970)

Daniels, Molly Ann. “The Blakean Double Vision and the Prophetic.” The Prophetic Novel. New York: P. Lang, 1991. 13-19. <WBHC 1920-21>

On the Blakean aspects of A Passage to India.

Gardner, John. (1933-1983)

Ellis, Helen B., and Warren U. Ober. “Grendel and Blake: The Contraries of Existence.” John Gardner: Critical Perspectives. Ed. Robert A. Morace and Kathryn Van Spankeren. Carbondale and Edwardsville: Southern Illinois University Press, 1982. 46-61. <BBS 462>

“The real key to an understanding of the theme of Grendel [...] is to be found in [...] The Marriage of Heaven and Hell” (47).

Gide. André (1869-1951)

Balakian, Anna. “The Literature Fortune of William Blake in France.” Modern Language Quarterly 17.3 (1956): 261-72. <BB #1120>

Covers Blake’s reception in France from Pierre Berger’s William Blake, Mysticisme et Poésie (1907) to Denis Saurat’s William Blake: Critique et Interprétation (1954), including the 1937 exhibition of Blake and Turner at the Bibliothèque Nationale and Gide’s translation of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. There is a bibliography covering French publications on Blake through 1955.

Hill, Charles G. “André Gide and Blake’s Marriage of Heaven and Hell.” Comparative Literature Studies 3 (1966): 21-32. <BB #1845>

“Blake contributed most directly to Gide’s awareness of the devil’s reality, and later to his much more complex view of the nature of the devil. There were no doubt many other factors involved here, but the positive role accorded the demon and the transference of the devil's role to the Angel in Les Faux-Monnayeurs are clearly Blakean" (30).

Nishimura, Akie. "Gide niokeru akuma: William Blake kaishaku wo fumaete [The Devil in Gide: On the Basis of His Interpretation of William Blake]." Stella 37 (2018): 267-80. In Japanese. <Blake (2020)>

Pollard, Patrick. "When Heaven Meets Hell: William Blake and André Gide." English 64.245 (2015): 99-115. <WBHC 2540>

Outlines Gide's reading of Blake and the influence on his thought.

Serdechnaia, Vera. "Uil'iam Bleik i F. M. Dostoevskii: istoriia sopostavleniiia [William Blake and F. M. Dostoevsky: A History of Comparison]." Dostoevskii i mirovaya kul'tura. Filologicheskii zhurnal [Dostoevsky and World Culture. Philological Journal] 3 (2020): 158-68. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The article is devoted to the history of comparing the works of William Blake and Fyodor Dostoevsky: the lectures of André Gide; the works of Jean Wahl, Georges Bataille, Melvin Rader, and D. Gustafsson; Czesław Miłosz's The Land of Ulro; and the opera The Book of Seraphim in Moscow (2020).

Gilbran, Kahlil \(1883-1931\)

Ashūr, Rađwā. Gibran and Blake: A Comparative Study. Cairo: Associated Institution for the Study and Presentation of Arabic Cultural Values, 1978. <BBS 355, WBHC 1568>

El-Hage, George Nicolas. "William Blake and Kahlil Gibran: Poets of Prophetic Vision." PhD diss., 1981.

Ginsberg, Allen (1926-1997) (See also Beat Generation and Counter Culture)

Primary

The Allen Ginsberg Project

A website devoted to Allen Ginsberg, which includes audio and visual files of Ginsberg's courses on Blake at Naropa University and other countercultural references to Blake.

"Blake and Ginsberg on ABC-TV's 'Directions'." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72): 164.⁴⁹⁷

"Two films, both produced and directed by Aram Boyajian, were shown 16 and 23 January on ABC-TV's Directions. Allen Ginsberg sings and reads from Blake's works in illuminated printing as plates from those works are shown" (164).

Clark, Thomas. "Allen Ginsberg." Writers at Work: The Paris Reviews Interviews. 3rd Series. Ed. George Plimpton. New York: Viking Press, 1967. 279-320.⁴⁹⁸ <BB #1391>

An interview in which Ginsberg discusses his Blake visions.

⁴⁹⁷ Not recorded in BB.

⁴⁹⁸ Originally published as "The Art of Poetry VIII: Allen Ginsberg," The Paris Review 37 (spring 1966), 13-55, <BB #1391>.

Ginsberg, Allen. Allen Verbatim: Lectures on Poetry, Politics, Consciousness. Ed. Gordon Ball. New York: McGraw-Hill, 1974. <WBHC 2077>

Many references to Blake.

Ginsberg, Allen. “To Young and Old Listeners: Setting Blake's Songs to Music, and Commentary on the Songs.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 98-103. <BB #1217.68>

A reprint of the liner notes from Ginsberg’s recording, Songs of Innocence and Experiences by William Blake, tuned by Allen Ginsberg, with Peter Orlovsky, variously accompanied. See Morris Eaves’s review of the album in the same issue for commentary.

Ginsberg, Allen. “William Blake.” Deliberate Prose: Selected Essays 1952-1995. Ed. Bill Morgan. New York: HarperCollins Publishers, 2000. 275-84. <WBHC 2077>

“It consists of ‘Liner Notes to Blake Record: To Young Or Old Listeners’ [1982] (pp. 275-79), and ‘Your Reason and Blake’s System’ [1988] (pp. 279-84)” (WBHC 2077). Many scattered references to Blake throughout.

Secondary

Bellarci, Franca. “William Blake and Allen Ginsberg: Imagination as a Mirror of Vacuity.” The Blake Journal 5 (2000): 71-87. <WBHC 1748>

Argues that Ginsberg’s “unpublished William Blake’s Songs of Innocence and Experience [sic] (1974-93) is both Blakean and Buddhist” (WBHC 1748).

Calonne, David Stephen. The Beats in Mexico. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

Slight references to Blake’s influence on Ginsberg, but also, in terms of reception, to Blake’s place in the anthology America a Prophecy: A New Reading of American Poetry from Pre-Columbian Times to the Present (1973) (12).

Diggory, Terence. “Allen Ginsberg’s Urban Pastoral.” College Literature 27.1 (2000): 103-18. <WBHC 1940>

Highlights Blake’s influence on Ginsberg’s sense of the urban pastoral in a special issue on teaching Beat Literature.

Heffernan, James A.W. “Politics and Freedom: Refractions of Blake in Joyce Cary and Allen Ginsberg.” Romantic and Modern: Revaluations of Literary Tradition. Ed. George Bornstein. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Pres, 1977. 177-95. <BBS 504>

Beginning with the Vietnam War, suggests that “Blake remains enduringly relevant” “because he turned politics into myth, and thus created a paradigm for all poet who would write of politics without ceasing to be poets” (178) and outlines how Cary and Ginsberg followed Blake’s example.

Larrissy, Edward. “Two American Disciples of Blake: Robert Duncan and Allen Ginsberg.” Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 108-24. <WBHC 2311-12>

“Both are gay poets who regard Blake as an ally in the reaction against orthodox heterosexuality; both see him as a kind of father; both see in Blake’s work images of the bad father who rejects them; both, as Blake did, see the possibility that the bad father is within themselves; both are capable of equating the bad father with political action in the United States, and both employ this interpretation in their critique of Vietnam entanglement" (124).

Ostriker, Alicia. "Blake, Ginsberg, Madness, and the Prophet as Shaman." William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 111-31. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

"The idea of the prophetic role clearly forms the core of Blake's influence on Ginsberg" (113).

Paris-Popa, Andreea. "The Madmen of Allen Ginsberg's 'Howl' and Their Blakean Roots." British and American Studies/Revista de studii britanice și americane 25 (2019): 161-71. In English. <Blake (2020)>

"This paper has revealed the various manners in which to be 'beat' meant to be 'mad' in a Blakean sense – that is, not clinically ill, but metaphorically, literary, rebelliously, spiritually mad" (169).

Pevateaux, C. J. "Widened Awareness: Allen Ginsberg's Poetic Transmission of a Blakean Inflected Esoteric Dream-Insight." Aries 8.1 (2008): 37-61. In French. <WBHC 2518>

Portugés, Paul. "Allen Ginsberg's Visions and the Growth of His Poetics of Prophecy." Poetic Prophecy in Western Literature. Ed. Jan Wojcik and Raymond-Jean Frontain. Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck: Farleigh Dickinson University Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1984. <BBS 608>

On Ginsberg's vision of Blake and its aftermath.

Portugés, Paul. "Allen Ginsberg's William Blake and the Poetics of Vision, 1948-1963." The Visionary Poetics of Allen Ginsberg. Santa Barbara: Ross-Erikson, 1978. 1-106. <BBS 608>

An account of Ginsberg 1948 vision of Blake and its impact on him.

Santos, Andrio J. R. dos. "Allen Ginsberg e as visões de William Blake." Travessias Interativas 14 (2017): 187-206. In Portuguese (abstracts in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2019)>

Trigilio, Tony. "The 'Moment Satan Cannot Find': Blake's Transferential Language of Vision in Milton." "Strange Prophecies Anew": Rereading Apocalypse in Blake, H.D., and Ginsburg." Madison, N.J.: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2000. 45-81. <WBHC 2781>

"Blake, H.D. and Ginsberg variously reconceive apocalypse as a mode of consciousness—paradoxically redemptive and self-annihilating—rather than of past and future history" (16).

Walker, Luke. "Allen Ginsberg's Blakean Albion." Comparative American Studies 11.3 (2012): 227-42.⁴⁹⁹

Rather than simply pointing out more examples of Blake's already well-known influence on Ginsberg's poetry, I want to argue here that Ginsberg's poetic vision of a Blakean Albion is more complex, and more problematic, than might be supposed. Through ⁴⁹⁹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Ginsberg's poems, Blake and his myth of Albion are placed at the heart of a counterculture that is both transatlantic and transgenerational" (227-28).

§ Walker, Luke. "Psychedelic Romanticism: Ginsberg, Blake and Wordsworth." Psychedelicacies: More Food for Thought from Breaking Convention. Ed. Nikki Wyrd. London: Strange Attractor Press, 2019. 215–224. ⁵⁰⁰

Goulding, William \(1911-1993\)

Jaidka, Manju. "William Golding—A Blake Connection." Notes on Contemporary Literature 18.2 (1988): 2-3. <BBS 524>

"Golding's characters are in a state of experience, which shows that 'Golding, perhaps unconsciously, used certain aspects of the Blakean system' (2)" (BBS 524).

Haniya, Yutaka \(1909-1997\)

Akimoto, Yuko. Takiguchi Shuzo Kenkyū: Eizo Ningen no Keifu [A Study of Shuzo Takiguchi: A Genealogy of a Shadowy Person]. Osaka: Izumi Shoin, 2022. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

Chapter 2, "His Baptism of William Blake: Metaphysics of Light," discusses the influence of Blake on Yutaka Haniya (107-46).

Hardy, Thomas \(1840-1928\)

Beigi, Roohollah Datli. "Tyranny of Conventions: A Comparative Study of Blake's Visions and Hardy's Tess." Kata [Indonesia] 21.2 (2020): 60-67. <Blake (2021)>

On Visions of the Daughters of Albion (1793) and Thomas Hardy's Tess of the d'Urbervilles (1891): "In this paper we argue that, comparatively, the ambivalent treatment of the notion of independent woman is the most significant common feature in Blake's poem and Hardy's novel" (abstract).

Huxley, Aldous \(1894-1963\)

Glausser, Wayne. "What is it Like to be a Blake? Psychiatry, Drugs and the Doors of Perception." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 163-78. <WBHC 2862-63>

On different explanations of Blake's visions by Kay Redfield Jamison (a psychologist), Aldous Huxley (author of The Doors of Perception), and Huston Smith (a religious scholar with an interest in the role of drugs in changing consciousness).

Williams, Nicholas M. "The Sciences of Life': Living Form in William Blake and Aldous Huxley." Romanticism 15.1 (2009): 41-53. <WBHC 2868>

Aims to complicate the relationship between Blake and Huxley.

Jarrell, Randall \(1914-1965\)

Horn, Bernard. "The Tongue of Gods and Children': Blakean Innocence in Randell Jarrell's Poetry." Children's Literature 2.1 (1973): 148-51. <WBHC 2166>

⁵⁰⁰ Not recorded in Blake.

On Blake and Jarrell: “No poet since Blake has brought off so well that quality of ‘innocence,’ that matter-of-fact acceptance of the supernatural, of magic and mystery, that we call ‘childlike’” (148).

Jiménez, Juan Ramón (1881-1958)

Puig Guisado, Jaime. “Lecturas, traducciones, cosmogonías y otros viajes poéticos: un estudio comparado de William Blake y Juan Ramón Jiménez.” Artifara 21.1 (2021): 245-57. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2022)>

Traces how Juan Ramón Jiménez came to read Blake and analyzes the latter’s influence on the Spanish poet.

Young, Howard T. “Blake.” The Line in the Margin: Juan Ramón Jiménez and His Readings in Blake, Shelley, and Yeats. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1980. 163-244. <BBS 694>

On Blake’s influence.

Jones, David (1895-1974)

Larrissy, Edward. “‘Deposits’ and ‘Rehearsals’: Repetition and Redemption in The Anathémata of David Jones: A Comparison and Contrast with Blake.” Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 70-79. <WBHC 2311-12>

“If Jones’s concept of repetition makes him look like Eliot, his view of the artist is more akin to Blake’s” (79).

Joyce, James (1882-1941)

Primary

Joyce, James. “William Blake.” The Critical Writings of James Joyce. Ed. Ellsworth Mason and Richard Ellmann. London: Faber and Faber, 1959. 214-22. <BB#

Joyce’s 1912 lecture translated from Italian. The complete manuscript does not survive.

Toki, Koji. “(honyaku) James Joyce, ‘William Blake’ [(Translation) James Joyce, ‘William Blake’].” [Toki, Koji. Sho-o to Sogo: Toki Koji chosaku-shu + symposium \[Correspondence and Synthesis: Koji Toki Collection of Essays + Symposium\]](#). Ed. Tomonao Yoshida. Tokyo: Takanashi Shobo, 2020. 701-10.⁵⁰¹ In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

Secondary

Adams, Hazard. “Blake and Joyce.” James Joyce Quarterly 35-36 (1998): 683-93. <WBHC 1471>

On Finnegan’s Wake and Jerusalem, and how in the action of narration both narrators [...] are characters in the drama of their respective narrative acts” (683).

⁵⁰¹ Originally published in Sekai Hihyo Taikei 3: Shiron no Tenkai [World Literary Criticism Series 3: The Development of Theories of Poetry], ed. Kazushi Shinoda et al. (Tokyo: Chikuma Shobo, 1975), <BSJ p. 50>. Translated from The Critical Writings of James Joyce, ed. Ellsworth Mason and Richard Ellmann (London: Faber & Faber, 1964).

Adams, Hazard. "From Jerusalem and the Prose to Yeats and Joyce." William Blake on His Poetry and Painting: A Study of A Descriptive Catalogue, Other Prose Writings and Jerusalem. Jefferson, NC: McFarland & Company, 2011. 162-84. <WBHC 1474>

"I am inclined to think Joyce had read Jerusalem" (163).

Boldereff, Frances Motz, A Blakean Translation of Joyce's "Circe." Woodward, PN: Classic Non-Fiction Library, 1965. <BB #1253>

Brivic, Sheldon R. "Structure and Meaning in Joyce's Exiles." James Joyce Quarterly 6.1 (1968), 29-52.⁵⁰²

Sees Blake's influence on Joyce's play, including Hand from Jerusalem and the Prolific and the Devourers from Marriage.

Caspel, Paul P.J. van. "Blake and Joyce: Strange Syzygy." Essays on English and American Literature a Sheaf of Poems. Ed. J. Bakker, J.A. Verleun, and J.v.d. Vriesenaerde. Amsterdam: Brill, 1987. 101-17. <BBS 434>

On the strange unreadability of Blake's Jerusalem and Joyce's Finnegans Wake

Clark, John. "Joyce and the Blakean Vision." Criticism 5.2 (1963): 173-80. <BB #1393>

"My intent here is to note some of the Blakean patterns, symbols, and allusions in Ulysses, but more importantly-and this is what is often neglected-to show that, in spite of Joyce's apparent resemblance, and even indebtedness, to Blake, they are, in fact, operating in mutually exclusive spheres: the one (Blake's), cosmic, eternal, universal, and absolute- the other (Joyce's), social, temporal, typical, and relative" (173).

Clark, John M. "Writing 'Jerusalem' Backwards: William Blake in 'Exiles.'" James Joyce Quarterly 26.2 (1989): 183-97. <BBS 437-38>

Considers Blake's influence on the characters of Bertha and Robert Hand, drawing on Jerusalem but also "The Crystal Cabinet" and Joyce's probable knowledge of Yeats and Ellis's edition of Blake.

Frye, Northrop. "Quest and Cycle in Finnegans Wake." James Joyce Review 1 (1957): 39-47.⁵⁰³ <BB #1649>

Points out major points of comparison and contrast between Blake's myth and Finnegans Wake.

Gandolfo, Anita. "'This is Doubllinnbbayyates': A Further Blake-Joyce Note." A Wake Newsletter 14 (1977): 77-79. <BBS 482>

"The apparent references to Blake and his works which Tidwell and Morgan cite in their article, "[A Blake-Joyce Note,"] belong to a larger pattern of allusions to Yeats and Dublin Blakeans" (BBS 482).

⁵⁰² Not recorded in BB.

⁵⁰³ Rpt. in Frye's Fables of Identity: Studies in Poetic Mythology (New York: Harcourt Brace, 1963), 256-64, <BBS 479>.

Gandolfo, Anita. "Whose Blake Did Joyce Know and What Difference Does It Make?" James Joyce Quarterly 15.3 (1978): 215-21. <BBS 482>

"It can be proven beyond doubt that Joyce relied primarily upon Ellis and Yeats for his knowledge of Blake' (220)" (BBS 482).

Gerard, W.B. "Kinship in Chaos: 'Circe' and William Blake's 'An Island in the Moon.'" James Joyce Quarterly 39.3 (2002): 562-68. <WBHC 2059>

Compares Joyce's story, "Circe," with Blake's Island.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Joyce and Blake: Notes Toward Defining a Literary Relationship." A James Joyce Miscellany. 3rd Series. Ed. Marvin Magalaner. Carbondale: Southern Illinois University Press, 1962. 189-225. <BB #1700>

On Blake's influence on Joyce, highlighting Finnegan's Wake.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Joyce's Blake: Paths of Influence." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 135-63. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

An informative starting point for Joyce's knowledge of and use of Blake and the subsequent critical discussions on their relationship. Many references to Edwin J. Ellis's The Real Blake (1906).

Hecimovich, Gregg A. "With pale blake I write tintingface': The Bounding Line of James Joyce's Aesthetic." James Joyce Quarterly 36 (1999): 889-904. <Blake (2003)> (not in WBHC)

"Joyce's aesthetic appears consistent with Blake's" (894).]

Irven, Donovan. "Joyce and Heidegger: Appropriations of the Past toward a New Philosophy of Transcendence." College Literature 45.3 (summer 2018): 487-515. <Blake (2019)>

A study of Aristotle's and Blake's influence on Stephen Dedalus in Ulysses: "Like two cartoon angels on either shoulder, Aristotle and William Blake serve as competitive models for Stephen" (490).

Jaurretche, Colleen. The Sensual Philosophy: Joyce and the Aesthetics of Mysticism. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1997. 9-12, 39-44, 100-01.

References to Blake and Joyce's lecture on Blake throughout.

Keane, Patrick J. "Times Ruins and the Mansions of Eternity or, Golgonooza and Jerusalem, Yes; Bloomusalem and Beulah, No; Ithaca, Yes and No: Another Joyce-Blake Parallel at the End of Bloomsday." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 86 (1983): 33-66. <BBS 533>

"stephen's acceptance of help and amicable but firm rejection of Bloom's offer of extended hospitality' may be 'patterned . . . on . . . Blake's . . . meeting with, and parting from, William Hayley' (34)" (BBS 533).

Kiralis, Karl. "Joyce and Blake: A Basic Source for 'Finnegans Wake.'" Modern Fiction Studies 4.4 (1958-59): 329-34. <BB #2057>

Points to Jerusalem as a source for Finnegans Wake.

Kirwan, Michael. "Fearful Symmetry, Seventy Years On: Northrop Frye on William Blake." Prophetic Witness and the Reimagining of the World: Poetry, Theology and Philosophy in Dialogue. Ed. Mark S. Burrows, Hilary Davies, and Josephine von Zitzewitz. New York: Routledge, 2020. 13 pp. <Blake (2022)>

On Frye, Blake, and James Joyce.

Kroeber, Karl. "Delivering Jerusalem." Blake's Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 347-67. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

With many references to James Joyce, argues: "Read in the manner I have so rapidly sketched, Jerusalem appears less a labyrinthine hunting-ground for erudite archetypalists than a relatively straightforward exposition of a religious vision pertinent to many current secular issues" (365).

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Joyce." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 56-69. <WBHC 2311-12>

"Joyce's indebtedness operates on more levels than that of most of Blake's disciples: symbolist suggestiveness; an interest in the constructedness of myth; a parallel interest in the deep roots of myth; and a sympathy with Blake's perceived oppositional stance" (69).

Lernout, Gert and Vincent Deane. "Two VI. B. 13 Indexes: Index Two: The Paintings of William Blake." A Finnegans Wake Circular 4 (winter 1995): 26-31. <WBHC 2318>

"James Joyce took extensive notes from the book by Figgis [<BB #408>] for Finnegans Wake but in the end did not use them" (WBHC 2318).

Marvel, Laura. "Blake and Yeats: Visions of Apocalypse." College Literature 13 (1986): 95-105. <BBS 560>

"Yeats' vision is not so much a failure to achieve Blake's apocalypse as a revision and criticism of Blake's focus on intellectual energy" (95).

Mason, Ellsworth, ed. "James Joyce 'William Blake'." Criticism 1.3 (1959): 181-89. <BB #1968>

A transcription of the surviving section of Joyce's 1912 public lecture on William Blake in Italian, which was delivered at the Università Popolare. Mason's introduction is in English.

McArthur, Murray Gilchrist. Stolen Writings: Blake's Milton, Joyce's Ulysses, and the Nature of Influence. Ann Arbor: U.M.I. Research Press, 1988. <BBS 566, WBHC 2385>

On Blake's use of Milton in Milton and how it shaped Joyce's practices in his novel.

McCarthy, Patrick A. "The Jeweled Harlots of His Imagination: Prostitution and Artistic Vision in Joyce." Eire 17 (1982): 91-109. <BBS 566>

"Joyce is compared to Blake" (BBS 566): "the theme of prostitution in A Portrait of the Artist may be analyzed in Blakean terms" (99) and "Stephen becomes much like Blake's Orc" (103).

Novak, Jane. "Verisimilitude and Vision: Defoe and Blake as Influences on Joyce's Molly Bloom." Carrell 8 (1967): 7-20. <BB#1217.108>

References Blake's drawings for Robinson Crusoe.

O'Grady, T.B. "Little Chandler's Song of Experience." James Joyce Quarterly 28.2 (1991): 393-405. <BBS 591>

Argues that Joyce's story, "A Little Cloud," should be read in light of "Infant Sorrow," which "maybe seen to inform both structural and thematic aspects of the story" (404).

Paley, Morton. "Blake in a Nighthtown." A James Joyce Miscellany. 3rd Series. Ed. Marvin Magalaner. Carbondale: Southern Illinois University Press, 1962. 182-87. <BB #2344>

On the allusions to Blake in Ulysses.

Rainsford, Dominic. Authorship, Ethics and the Reader: Blake, Dickens, Joyce. Basingstoke: Macmillan; N.Y.: St Martin's Press, 1997. <WBHC 2569>

"It is about how Blake, Dickens, and Joyce 'construct their ethical status as authors'" (WBHC 2570).

Ruggieri, Frana. Romantic Joyce. Rome: Bulzoni Editore, 2003: Joyce Studies in Italy. Vol 8.

A collection on Joyce and English Romantic poets, with four essays on Blake and Joyce.

Terrinoni, Enrico. "Blakean Ghosts and Shadows in 'Proteus.'" Special Issue: Romantic Joyce. Joyce Studies in Italy 8. Ed. Franca Ruggieri. Rome: Bulzoni Editore, 2003. 47-56.

On Blake and Joyce's shared "aesthetic of the vision" (48), with a discussion of the references to Jackob Boehme in A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man (1916).

Tidwell, Paul Alexander, and Norman Louis Morgan. "A Blake-Joyce Note." A Wake Newsletter 13 (1976): 112-14. <BBS 660>

"About the relation of Finnegans Wake 293 to 'Miltons Track' in Milton pl. 36" (BBS 660). Answered by Gandolfo's "This is Doubllinnbbayyates': A Further Blake-Joyce Note."

Toki, Koji. "Joyce to Blake [Joyce and Blake]." Toki, Koji. Sho-o to Sogo: Toki Koji chosaku-shu + symposium [Correspondence and Synthesis: Koji Toki Collection of Essays + Symposium]. Ed. Tomonao Yoshida. Tokyo: Takanashi Shobo, 2020. 697-700.⁵⁰⁴ In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

Webb, Timothy. "'Planetary Music': James Joyce and the Romantic Example." James Joyce and Modern Literature. Ed. W.J McCormack and Alistair Stead. London: Routledge, 1982. 43-55. Rpt. Routledge, 2017. <BBS 675>

Traces Blake's influence on Joyce.

⁵⁰⁴ Originally published in Yuriika [Eureka] 9.11 (1977), 57-59, and reprinted in Metropolitan 58 (2016), 231-36.

Kaye-Smith, Sheila (1887-1956)

Whittaker, Jason. “By the Voice of the Servant of the Lord’: Blake’s New Jerusalem and Swedenborgianism in the Work of Sheila Kaye-Smith.” William Blake’s Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 329-46. <Blake (2025)>

Examines the engagement with Blake by the twentieth-century novelist, Sheila Kaye-Smith (1887-1956), with references to the influence of Yeats.

Kharms, Daniil (1905-1942)

Brandist, Craig. “Deconstructing the Rationality of Terror: William Blake and Daniil Kharms.” Comparative Literature 49 (1997): 59-75. <WBHC 1783>

Daniil Kharms was a Soviet-era writer: “[B]oth writers thought that presenting an alternative set of moral principles to be passively accepted by the reader simply tended to reproduce the forms of automatized consciousness they tried to oppose” (59).

Lawrence, D. H. (1885-1930)

Colmer, John. “Lawrence and Blake.” D.H. Lawrence and Tradition. Ed. Jeffrey Meyers. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1985. 9- 20, 133-35. <BBS 440, WBHC 1880>

Identifies parallels with the goal of suggesting “a shared tradition” (9).

Glazer, Myra. “Why the Sons of God want the Daughters of Men: On William Blake and D.H. Lawrence.” William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 164-85. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

On Blake’s and Lawrence’s similarities, especially as regards a cisgendered male and female identity rooted in sexuality.

Leavis, F.R. “Introductory: ‘Life’ is a Necessary Word.” Nor Shall My Sword: Discourses on Pluralism, Compassion and Social Hope. London, 1972. 11-37. <BB #A2106>

“Blake (pp. 11-27) and D.H. Lawrence as inspiration for ‘essential human creativity’ (19)” (BB #A2106).

Pinto, Vivian de Sola. “William Blake and D.H. Lawrence.” William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 84-106. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

Parallels between Blake and Lawrence, with a focus on Lawrence’s Women in Love.

Storch, Margaret. Sons and Adversaries: Women in William Blake and D.H. Lawrence. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1990. <BBS 647, WBHC 2711>

Uses a psychoanalytic approach to examine Blake’s and Lawrence’s conceptions of women and gender. Considers Blake’s Songs, Milton, and the illustrations of Virgil and of Job as well as Lawrence’s The White Peacock, The Plumed Serpent, and Lady Chatterley’s Lover.

Wienver, Gary A. “Lawrence’s ‘Little Girl Lost.’” D.H. Lawrence Review 19 (1987): 243-53. <BBS 678>

Suggests that Lawrence's novel is elucidated by Blake's poem of the same name.

Larkin, Philip (1922-1985)

Thompson, Mark. "Some Influences on Philip Larkin's 'Cut Grass.'" Notes and Queries 64.4 (Dec. 2017): 669-71. <Blake (2018)>

Blake, Keats, and Hubert Parry.

Merton, Thomas (1915-1968)

Baird, Sister Mary Julian. "Blake, Hopkins and Thomas Merton." Catholic World 183 (1956): 46-49. <BB #1113>

"The influence of Blake and Hopkins on Merton" (BB #1113).

Gaddy, Holly C. "The Poet as Monk." Massachusetts Studies in English 9 (1984): 1-12. <BBS 481>

"A survey of Blake's influence" (BBS 481).

Higgins, Michael. Heretic Blood: The Spiritual Geography of Thomas Merton. Toronto & N.Y.: Stoddart, 1998.⁵⁰⁵ <WBHC 2146>

Sees Merton as a modern Blake and even uses the names of the four Zoas as chapter titles that frame Merton's thought: "Merton saw in Blake's tenacity of vision the validation of his own resistance to soul-numbing conformity" (4).

Holmes, John R. "The Surprising Orthodoxy of Merton's Blake." Cithara 26.2 (1981): 38-66. <BBS 513>

"Blake is no more Heterodox than any other honest Christian thinker, and Merton's Christianity follows Blake's" (38) (BBS 513).

Myers, Ben. "Blakean Anti-Wisdom in Thomas Merton's Proverbs." Literature & Theology 38.1 (2024): 1-12. <Blake (2025)>

"The paper explores the way Blakean proverbs function in Merton's work as a model of social critique" (abstract).

Petisco, Sonia. "Recovering Our Innocence: The Influence of William Blake on the Poetry of Thomas Merton." Thomas Merton: Poet-Monk-Prophet. Pearson 1998. 109-118.⁵⁰⁶

Rukstelis, Michael. "Thomas Merton and the Grey Man." Merton Annual 3 (1990): 233-250.

Van Dam, Thea. "Thomas Merton's Journey with William Blake." Merton Journal [UK] 4.1 (1997): 2-10.

⁵⁰⁵ Incorporates Higgins's "A Study of the Influence of William Blake on Thomas Merton," American Benedictine Review 35 (1974), 377-88, <BBS 506>, and "Monasticism as Rebellion: Blakean Roots of Merton's Thought," American Benedictine Review 39 (1988), 177-88, <BBS 506>.

⁵⁰⁶ Rpt. in Petisco's collection of her essays on Merton, Thomas Merton's Poetics of Self-Dissolution (Valencia: Publicacions de la Universitat de València, 2016), Chapter 5.

Milner, Marion (1900-98)

Halton-Hernandez, Emilia. “A poet of human nature: Marion Milner’s William Blake.” Critical Quarterly 63.4 (Dec. 2021): 111-25. <Blake (2022)>

Milner (1900–98) was a British psychoanalyst who wrote on Blake (e.g., WBHC p. 2407).

Neruda, Pablo (1904-1973)

Gugelberger, Georg M. “Blake, Neruda, Ngugi wa Thiong'o: Issues in Third World Literature.” Comparative Literature Studies 21.4 (1984): 463-82. <BBS 496>

On Blake’s influence on Neruda and on the parallels between Blake and Thiong’o in Petals of Blood (1977). The Blake section highlights “London,” “The Little Black Boy,” and Visions. “From Blake (and certainly from others as well) Neruda and Ngugi wa Thiong'o have learned the true voice of solidarity, the overcoming of formal isolation as well as human isolation, the move from the ‘I’ through the eye to the ‘WE’” (479).

Nietzsche, Friedreich (1844-1900)

Birenbaum, Harvey. Between Blake and Nietzsche: The Reality of Culture. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press and London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1992. <BBS 374>

A comparison of their thought and critique of culture.

Cauchi, Francesca. “Blake and Nietzsche on Self-Slaughter and the Moral Law: A Reading of Jerusalem.” Journal of European Studies 45.1 (2015): 3-20. <Blake (2022)>

“This essay examines the specific mechanism of moral coercion – a process of sublimation and condensation whereby the agonistic contraries within man are fixed into negating absolutes – and the extent to which such a process shapes the symbolic landscape of Blake’s final prophetic work, Jerusalem” (abstract).

Clark, David L. “The Innocence of Becoming Restored: Blake, Nietzsche, and the Disclosure of Difference.” Studies in Romanticism 29 (1990): 91-113. <BBS 437>

Uses Nietzsche to read Blake, reversing Yeats to ask, “What if Blake completes Nietzsche?” (113).

Davies, J.M.Q. “Reflections on William Blake’s Putative Nietzschean Perspectivism.” Jinbun Shakaikagaku Kenkyu, Waseda Daigaku Rikogakubu Ippankyoiku Jinbunshakai Kagaku Kenkyuki: Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences, Division of Multidisciplinary Studies, School of Science Engineering, Waseda University 40 (2000), 143-53. <WBHC 1927>

Donnellan, Brendan. “Blake and Nietzsche.” Nietzsche Studien 14 (1985): 269-80. <BBS 455>

Reads the aphorisms in Marriage as anticipating Nietzsche.

Ito, Yuki. “Toso no Honoo to Moetsukinu Mono: Blake to Nietzsche wo Tunagu Mono tshiteno Yeats no Jacob Böhme no Juyo nitsuite [A Flame of Battle and Something That Never Burns Out: The Reception of Jacob Böhme in Yeats as a Link between Blake and Nietzsche].” Josai Daigaku Gogaku Kyoiku Kenkyu Center Kenkyu Nenpo [Annual Bulletin of the Center for Language Education in Josai University] 14 (2021): 29-50. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Idolatry: Nietzsche, Blake, Poussin." Seeing through Race. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2422>

Considers idolatry and the process of othering in the religions of the Book as constituent of race and racism, with discussions of Nietzsche, Blake, and Poussin.

Pollard, David. "Self-annihilation and Self-overcoming: Blake and Nietzsche." Exceedingly Nietzsche: Aspects of Contemporary Nietzsche Interpretation. Ed. David Farrell Krell and David Wood. London and New York: Routledge, 1988. 63-79. <BBS 607>

Suggests parallels.

Trodd, Colin. "The Energy Man: Blake, Nietzschean and Cultural Criticism in Britain, 1890–1920." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 289-304. <Blake (2017)>

On Blake's shaping of Nietzsche's reception and Blake's and Nietzsche's influence on cultural criticism.

Okada, Takahiko \(1939-1997\)

Kikui, Takashi. "Meguru hikari no uta: Okada Takahiko wo tsuranuku William Blake [Songs of Encircling Light: Takahiko Okada Inspired by William Blake]." Gendai-shi techo [Contemporary Poetry Magazine] 63.11 (2020): 102-05. In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

An article about Takahiko Okada (1939–97), a Japanese poet and art critic, who wrote his poetry under the influence of Blake.

O'Neill, Eugene \(1888-1953\)

Bagchee, Shyamal. "On Blake and O'Neill." Eugene O'Neill Review 14.1-2 (spring-fall 1990): 25-38. <BBS 357, WBHC 1574>

"I am suggesting merely that some aspects of the playwright's temperament may have found congenial elements in the life and works of Blake" (25).

Keane, Christopher. "Blake and O'Neil." Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 23-34. <BB #1218.29>

Suggests similarities between "The Tyger" and The Hairy Ape.

Pound, Ezra \(1885-1972\)

Glendening, John. "Ezra Pound and Ezra Pound's Blake: Method in Madness, Madness in Method." Paideuma 20.1/2 (1991): 95-106. <WBHC 2085>

"In Canto 16, 'the apparent madness of the Blake passage reflects, parodies, and hence resists the madness Pound saw not only in Blake's method, but also, quite possibly, in himself' (107)" (WBHC 2085).

Miner, Paul. "An Unpublished Letter by Ezra Pound on William Blake." Notes and Queries 56.3 (2009): 424-25. <WBHC 2417>

Miner describes writing to Pound in 1956 while Pound was institutionalized and had been declared "insane" and asking about Blake's sanity. Miner transcribes the response he received.

Wacker, Norman. “Epic and the Modern Long Poem: Virgil, Blake, & Pound.” Comparative Literature 42.2 (spring 1990): 126-43. <BBS 670>

How Blake and Pound rewrote the Virgilian epic.

Woodman Ross G. “Nietzsche, Blake, Keats and Shelley: The Making of a Metaphorical Body.” Studies in Romanticism 29.1 (spring 1990): 115-49. <BBS 684>⁵⁰⁷

How Blake, Keats, and Shelley anticipate Nietzsche’s idea of the textual body.

Powys, John Cowper (1872-1963)

Grenfeel, Michael. “John Cowper Powys and William Blake.” The Blake Journal 7 (2002): 7-17. <WBHC 1751>

On Blake and Powys (1872-1963), the twentieth-century philosopher, poet, and novelist.

Rodríguez, Claudio (1934-1999), Spanish Poet

Mezquita Fernández, María Antonia. William Blake y Claudio Rodríguez: visiones luminosas. Zamora: Instituto de Estudios Zamoranos ‘Florián de Ocampo,’ 2006. 76 pp. In Spanish. <Blake (2020)>

A volume on the poetry of Claudio Rodríguez and Blake. In Spanish.

This is a book, not to be confused with the article in WBHC p. 2403 with a similar title: Mezquita Fernández, María Antonia. “Dos poetas visionarios: William Blake y Claudio Rodríguez.” Anuario del Instituto de Estudios Zamoranos Florián de Ocampo 22 (2005): 399-408.

Roethke, Theodore (1908-1963)

La Belle, Jenijoy. The Echoing Wood of Theodore Roethke. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1976. Princeton Legacy Library. 2015. <BBS 542>

Many references to Blake throughout. Notes that Roethke owned and was influenced by Emily S. Hamblen’s On the Minor Prophecies of William Blake (1930) (92).

La Belle, Jenijoy. “William Blake: Theodore Roethke, and Mother Goose: The Unholy Trinity.” Blake Studies 9.1-2 (1981): 74-86. <BBS 413>

Examines Roethke’s Praise to the End! arguing that “he makes [...] extensive use of the poetry of Blake and of the tradition of nonsense literature” (75).

Parini, Jay. “Blake and Roethke: When Everything Comes to One.” William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 73-91. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

“Blake remains the single most important poet for Roethke, not so much on the level of style (though I shall point to similarities at this level) but at the deeper level of mythopoetic action” (73).

⁵⁰⁷ BBS erroneously gives the last page as “119.”

Rossetti, William Michael (1829-1919) (See also Rossettis in Studies of Blake Criticism)

Primary

Rossetti, William Michael. Letters of William Michael Rossetti Concerning Whitman, Blake, and Shelley to Anne Gilchrist and Her Son Herbert Gilchrist. Ed. Clarence Gohdes and Paull Franklin Baum. 1934. New York: AMS Press, 1968. <BB #254, WBHC 2610>

Useful primary source for early information about Blake's Victorian circulation and the development of the Gilchrist biography.

Rossetti, William Michael. Rossetti Papers 1862 to 1870. New York: Scribner and Sons, 1903. <BB #2577>

References to Blake, Linnell, Tatham, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, Swinburne, and Rossetti's siblings.

Sale Catalogues with Work by Blake

Sotheby. Catalogue. London, 1929.

Studies

Butlin, Martin. “William Rossetti's Annotations to Gilchrist's Life of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.3 (Dec. 1968): 39-40. <BB #1217.25>

An initial description of Rossetti's annotations to the 1863 edition and which suggestions and corrections were incorporated in the 1880 edition. See Wittreich's “Further Observations on William Rossetti's Annotations to Gilchrist's Life of Blake” for additional information. Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. “Further Observations on William Rossetti's Annotations to Gilchrist's Life of Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 3.3 (Dec. 1969): 48-50. <BB #1217.45>

Visconti, Joseph. William Blake's Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. London: Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake's “printed paintings” (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.⁵⁰⁸ It includes important information on Blake's illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

The two appendices (“Blake Redefines Fresco” and “Monoprints after Blake's Death, 1827–1863”) are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book's list of abbreviations (vi) and can be found at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake's collectors, Frederick Tatham (and his relationship to William Michael Rossetti), Joseph Hogarth, and John Ruskin.

⁵⁰⁸ An excerpt was published as “Impressions of Colors: On William Blake's Monoprints,” Lapham's Quarterly (20 July 2021).

Ruskin, John (1819-1900) (See also Songs copy O)

Primary

Essick, Robert N. “Blake in the Marketplace, 2008.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 42.4 (spring 2009): 116-46. <WBHC 1716>

Includes an appendix, “Ruskin on Blake,” listing all of Ruskin’s references to Blake, pp. 142-46.

Secondary

Clinton, Daniel. “Line and Lineage: Visual Form in Herman Melville’s Pierre and Timoleon.” Nineteenth-Century Literature 73.1 (2018): 1-29. <Blake (2019)>

Considers Melville’s idea of form and outline in relationship to Blake, George Cumberland, John Flaxman, and John Ruskin.

Preston, Kerrison. “Fragments from Blake’s Jerusalem.” Apollo 67 (1958): 3-7. <BB #2453>

The four part-pages are not the result of mutilations by Ruskin but coloured proofs from the collection of Tatham” (BB#2453).

Sato, Hikari. “Blake kenkyu ni okeru Ruskin densetsu [An Old Story Concerning Ruskin in Blake Studies]”. Ruskin Bunko Tayori [Ruskin Library Bulletin] 88 (2024): 5-7. 2 plates by Blake. In Japanese. <Blake (2025)>

The relationship between Ruskin and Blake is discussed with a reference to the old story that Ruskin “cut up” one of the copies of Jerusalem.

Trodd, Colin. “William Blake, the Arts and Crafts Movement and the Mythography of Manufacture.” Art versus Industry? New Perspectives on Visual and Industrial Cultures in Nineteenth-Century Britain. Ed. Kate Nichols, Rebecca Wade, and Gabriel Williams. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2018)>

“This essay [...] concentrates on the interpretative schema that allowed commentators to put forward the view that the future belonged to the artist-as-manufacturer; that authentic manufacture was one of the key elements in the aesthetic ideal of society; and that Blake’s art accelerated progress toward this truth” (81). Highlights Ruskin, Gilchrist, and the Rossetti circle.

Visconti, Joseph. William Blake’s Printed Paintings: Methods, Origins, Meanings. London: Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

A definitive reappraisal of Blake’s “printed paintings” (his large color prints, or monoprints) that reconsiders his method of producing them, positions them in the context of his artistic career and of Romantic-era art, and articulates the proper fields for interpreting them.⁵⁰⁹ It includes important information on Blake’s illuminated printing and the Small and Large Book of Designs.

⁵⁰⁹ An excerpt was published as “Impressions of Colors: On William Blake’s Monoprints,” Lapham’s Quarterly (20 July 2021).

The two appendices (“Blake Redefines Fresco” and “Monoprints after Blake’s Death, 1827–1863”) are not included in the printed text, but the link is given in the book’s list of abbreviations (vi) and can be found at the Related Sites page of the Blake Archive. Both the book and its appendices contain much on Blake’s collectors, Frederick Tatham (and his relationship to William Michael Rosetti), Joseph Hogarth, and John Ruskin.

Russell, George William [Æ] (1867-1935)

Marley, Jodie. “‘Invisible Gates Would Open’: W. B. Yeats and William Blake in the 1890s.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022). Special Issue: “The Artist of the Future Age: William Blake, Neo-Romanticism, Counterculture and Now.” Ed. Douglas Field and Luke Walker. 23-38. <Blake (2023)>

“This article examines The Works of William Blake: Poetic, Symbolic, and Critical (1893) and Yeats’s 1890s reviews of his contemporary Blake critics, as well as his relationship with the mystic poet and artist George William Russell (Æ), whom he repeatedly compared to Blake” (abstract).

Saneatsu, Mushakoji (1885-1976), Japanese Novelist

Sato, Hikari. “Mushakoji Saneatsu to William Blake: Kyosei to kyoso no hazama de (MUSHAKOJI [MUSHANOKOJI] Saneatsu and William Blake: Between Symbiotic Cooperation and Hierarchical Competition).” Choiki Bunka Kagaku Kiyo (Interdisciplinary Cultural Studies) 22 (2017): 23-47. In Japanese. <Blake (2018)>

Mushakoji is a Japanese family name commonly also known as Mushanokoji.

Shaw, Bernard (1856-1950), Irish Playwright

Fiske, Irving. Bernard Shaw’s Debt to William Blake. Shavian Tract No. 2. London, 1951. Rpt. “Bernard Shaw and William Blake.” G.B. Shaw: A Collection of Critical Essays. Ed. R.J. Kaufman. Englewood Cliffs: Prentice Hall, 1965. 170-75. Englewood Cliffs: Prentice Hall, 1966. 170-75. <BB 471-72>

“With all allowance for the fact that Blake’s specific talent is lyrical, and Shaw’s dramatic, there is still in the pronouncements of both men a similarity explicable only on the basis of their closely related creative positions” (171).

Hellman, Jesse M. “Grace Gilchrist’s Childish Jealousy and Bernard Shaw’s Idiotic Thoughtlessness.” SHAW: Journal of Bernard Shaw Studies 37.2 (2017): 227-44. <Blake (2018)>

Examines Shaw’s relationship with Grace Gilchrist, the daughter of Blake’s Victorian biographers, Alexander and Anne Gilchrist.

Leary, D.J. “Shaw’s Blakean Vision: A Dialectical Approach to Heartbreak House.” Modern Drama 15 (1972): 89-103. <BB #A2105>

Uses “the writings of William Blake [i.e., The Four Zoas and the idea of the fourfold], not so much to show the direct influence of the Romantic poet on Shaw as to suggest Shaw’s connection with the whole mythopoetic content of English art” (89).

Warner, Nicholas O. “Shaw, Tolstoy and Blake’s Russian Reputation.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 102-04. <BB 395>

Notes Bernard Shaw's reference to Blake in a 1910 letter to Leo Tolstoy, and considers Blake's reception in Russia, including Konstantin Bal'mont, M.N. Gutner, E. A. Nekrasova, Anna Elistratova, S.I. Marshak, and Victor Zhirmunski.

Stead, Christina Ellen \(1902-1983\)

Ackland, Michael. "Breeding 'Reptiles of the Mind': Blake's Dialectics of Vision and Stead's Critique of Pollity in The Man Who Loved Children." Studies in the Novel 38.2 (2006): 234-49. <WBHC 1459>

Examines "the seminal influence of [...] William Blake on [Christina Stead's] thinking" (235).

Stegner, Wallace \(1909-1993\)

Ellis, James. "Wallace Stegner's Art of Literary Allusion: The Marriage of Heaven and Hell and Faust in 'Maiden in a Tower.'" Studies in Short Fiction 17 (1980): 105-11. <BBS 462>

"[T]he two works that make most explicit the meaning of the sexual failure of Kimball Harris are William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell and Goethe's Faust" (105).

Steinbeck, John \(1902-68\)

Carr, Duane R. "Steinbeck's Blakean Vision in The Grapes of Wrath." Steinbeck Quarterly 8.3/4 (1975): 67-73. <WBHC 2133>⁵¹⁰

"Steinbeck moves his principal characters from the innocence of the Oklahoma chapters, to the experience of the highway and California episodes, to the higher innocence of the closing scenes of the novel" (69).

Strniša, Gregor \(1930-87\)

Živković, Dušan. "Mythological Transformations in the Poem 'The Tyger' by William Blake and the Cycle 'There Was a Tiger Here' by Gregor Strniša." Primerjalna književnost 43.2 (2020): 233-45. In English. <Blake (2021)>

Gregor Strniša (1930–87) was a Slovenian poet.

Swinburne, Algernon Charles \(1837-1909\)

Primary

Swinburne, Algernon Charles. "William Blake: A Critical Essay." 1st ed. London, 1868. (University of Michigan copy; University of California Libraries copy.) 2nd ed. London 1868. (University of Toronto copy; Oxford University copy; Harvard University copy; University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign copy) London, 1925. Rpt. of 1st ed. New York: Benjamin Blom, 1967. Ed. with an introduction by Hugh J. Luke. Lincoln: University of Nebraska Press, 1970. <BB #2795, BBS 652, WBHC 2734-36>

An important early critical reassessment of Blake.

⁵¹⁰ Rpt. in Steinbeck's Literary Dimension: A Guide to Comparative Studies, ed. Tetsumaro Hayashi (Metuchen, NJ: Scarecrow Press, 1991), 1-8. WBHC cites this reprint and erroneously lists it under the editor's name.

Studies

Baird, Julian. "Swinburne, Sade, and Blake: The Pleasure-Pain Paradox." Victorian Poetry 9.1-2 (1971): 49-75. <BB #A1113>

Reads Swinburne's "A Ballad of Death" and "Laus Veneris" through "his intellectual combination of Sade with [...] Blake" (50).

Barton, Anna. "Perverse Forms: Reading Blake's Decadence." Decadent Romanticism: 1780–1914. Ed. Kostas Boyiopoulos and Mark Sandy. Farnham: Ashgate, 2015. 15-26. <WBHC 1584>

Considers Blake and decadence through Charles Algernon Swinburne's interpretation of Blake.

Cherry, Charles L. "William Blake and Mrs. Grundy: Suppression of Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 6-10. <BB #1217.58>

Details Victorian views of Visions and its depictions of sexuality that kept it from being published in print until the Yeats and Ellis edition of 1893. Focuses much on Swinburne's anger at Macmillan (the publisher of Gilchrist's Life), and Anne Gilchrist's efforts to mediate between Swinburne and the Rossettis, on the one hand, and Macmillan, on the other.

Dorfman, Deborah. Blake in the Nineteenth Century: His Reputation as a Poet from Gilchrist to Yeats. Yale Studies in English 170. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1969. <BB #1509, BBS 455, WBHC 1957-58>

A foundational study of Blake's nineteenth-century literary reception in Britain from his lifetime to the Yeats-Ellis edition, including the production and reception of Gilchrist's Life of William Blake, the Rossettis, and Charles Algernon Swinburne.

Gosse, Edmund. "Swinburne and Kirkup." London Mercury 3 (1920): 156-65. <BB #1714>

"The chief value of this article is in the history of Swinburne's book on Blake (no. 2795), and in the quotation of a letter from Seymour Kirkup to Swinburne describing his memories of Blake" (BB #1714).

Harrington, Emily. "Time's Intervals, Swinburne's Triumph." Studies in English Literature, 1500–1900 57.4 (autumn 2017): 799-821. <Blake (2018)>

Partly considers Swinburne's writings on Blake.

Paley, Morton D. "The Critical Reception of A Critical Essay." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 8.1-2 (summer and fall 1974): 32-37. <BB #1217.146>

Notes and comments on reviews and records differences on the title pages (two versions of the first edition, with changes in the one for the second edition).

Paley, Morton D. "John Camden Hotten, A.C. Swinburne, and the Blake Facsimiles of 1868." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 79 (1976): 259-96. <BBS 598>

A detailed examination of the facsimiles produced by Henry John Bellars (d. 1868 or 1869) for the publisher John Camden Hotten (1832-73), with references to Hotten's relationship to Swinburne, the place of the facsimiles in the marketplace (with references to collectors, W. Graham Robertson, Kerrison Preston, Rosenbach, and Charles Eliot Norton), the Gilchrists, the Rossettis, and other Victorian facsimile projects. Paley corrects the record that Hotten's facsimiles were not produced to deceive.

Peattie, R.W. “William Michael Rossetti's Aldine Edition of Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 4-9. <BBS 384>

An informative article about Rossetti's The Poetical Works of William Blake, Lyrical and Miscellaneous (1874, Boston ed. 1875, 1890, 1893), referencing unpublished material. References to Anne Gilchrist, Swinburne, and Yeats and Ellis.

Riede, David G. “Blake and the Church Blake.” Oracles and Hierophants: Constructions of Romantic Authority. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1991. 33-91.⁵¹¹ <BBS 623, WBHC 2586>

On Blake's conception of an authoritative imagination in relationship to religion; focused on Milton with a discussion of Swinburne's essay and his alignment of Blake with “the margins of culture” (85).

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel. Letters of Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Ed. Oswald Doughty and John Robert Wahl. 4 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2. Vol. 3. Vol. 4.) Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1965-67. <BB #2570>

References to Blake, John Linnell, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist (including letters regarding the first and second edition of the Life of William Blake), Swinburne, and Rossetti's siblings.

Rossetti, William Michael. Rossetti Papers 1862 to 1870. New York: Scribner and Sons, 1903. <BB #2577>

Includes references to Blake, Linnell, Tatham, Anne and Alexander Gilchrist, Swinburne, and Rossetti's siblings.

Wada, Ayako. “Blake's Oriental Heterodoxy: Yanagi's Perception of Blake.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 161-71. <WBHC 1857-62>

Traces Blake's influence on Muneyoshi Yanagi (1889-1961), with a discussion of the influence of Swinburne and Gilchrist on Yanagi.

Takiguchi, Shuzo (1903-1979)

Akimoto, Yuko. Takiguchi Shuzo Kenkyū: Eizo Ningen no Keifu [A Study of Shuzo Takiguchi: A Genealogy of a Shadowy Person]. Osaka: Izumi Shoin, 2022. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

Chapter 2, “His Baptism of William Blake: Metaphysics of Light,” discusses the influence of Blake on Yutaka Haniya (107-46).

Akimoto, Yuko. “Takiguchi Shuzo to shimpi shugi teki sekaikan: William Blake juyo wo shoten nishite [Shuzo Takiguchi and Mystical Worldview: Focus on the Reception of William Blake].”

⁵¹¹ Incorporates Riede's “Blake's Milton: On Membership in the Church Paul,” Re-membering Milton: Essays in the Texts and Traditions, ed. Mary Nyquist and Margaret W. Ferguson (London: Methuen, 1987), 257-77, <BBS 623, WBHC 2585>.

Hokkai-Gakuen Daigaku Jimbun Ronshu [Hokkai-Gakuen University Studies in Culture] 69 (2020): 165-92. In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

Tanizaki, Jun'ichiro (1886-1965)

Tambling, Jeremy. "Blake's Night: Tanizaki's Shadows." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 237-45. <WBHC 1857-62>

Contrasts "the abyssal western night of Milton, Young, Blake, Blanchot and Levinas with its representation in Japanese culture" (241) and, especially, in Jun'ichiro Tanizaki's In Praise of Shadows (1933).

Teilhard de Chardin, Pierre (1881-1955)

Sanzo, Eileen. "Teilhard, and the Idea of the Future of Man." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 251-59. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

"Blake's myth and symbolism and Teilhard's scientific writing are variations on a common, if sophisticated, millennial theme, which appears in Christian thought" (241).

Thomas, Dylan (1914-1953)

Davies, Damian Walford. ""In the Path of Blake": Dylan Thomas's Altarwise by Owl-Light, Sonnet I." Romanticism 3.1 (1997): 91-110. <WBHC 1924>

On Thomas's relationship to Blake" "The image of a poetic master not standing authoritatively behind the young poet but flying ahead of him defines Blake as a living presence to be caught up with" (91).

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Oppositional Identity in Yeats, Auden and Dylan Thomas." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 37-55. <WBHC 2311-12>

"For Yeats, Auden and Thomas[,] Blake is a kind of sage who, more than his Romantic contemporaries, is able to speak essential truths to the modern world" (55).

Williams, Harry. "Dylan Thomas' Poetry of Redemption: Its Blakean Beginnings." Bucknell Review 20.3 (1972): 107-20. <BB #A2974>

"Thomas' religious development as a visionary writer [...] finds its roots in Blake, and this development is perhaps most evident in Thomas' Notebooks" (107).

Thompson, E.P. (1924-1993) (See also Political and Historical Criticism)

Bidney, Martin. "Neo-Blakean Vision in the Verse of Historian E. P. Thompson: The 'Abstraction' of Labor and Cultural Capital." Science and Society 68 (winter 2004-05): 396-420. <WBHC 1628>

On Blake's influence on Thompson's own poetry.

Todhunter, John (1839-1916)

Fletcher, Ian. "The Ellis-Yeats-Blake manuscript Cluster." To Geoffrey Keynes: Articles Contributed to The Book Collector to Commemorate His Eighty-Fifth Birthday. London: The Book Collector, 1972. 90-112. <BB #1618>

An informative essay on the manuscript and letters tied to the Ellis and Yeats edition of Blake that details the “Brotherhood” of John Butler Yeats; the interest in Blake shown by its members (especially John Todhunter); a biographical sketch of Ellis; and a description of the manuscripts and letters.

Fletcher, Ian. “John Todhunter’s Lectures on Blake, 1872-1874.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 8.1-2 (summer and fall 1974): 4-14. <BB #1217.142>

On John Todhunter, a member of the Rhymers’ Club and friend of John Butler Yeats and William Butler Yeats, printing his lectures on Blake.

Mercier, Vivian. “Blake Echoes in Victorian Dublin.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 32-34. <BBS 382>

On Todhunter’s and W.G. Tyrrell’s imitations of Blake in Kottabos, a literary magazine at Trinity College, Dublin.

Tolley, Michael J. “John Todhunter: A Forgotten Debt to Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 8.1-2 (summer and fall 1974): 15-16. <BB #1217.143>

Notes Blake’s influence on Todhunter’s poetry.

Tolkien, J.R.R. \(1892-1973\)

Hlems, Loyce Randel. “Orc: The Id in Blake and Tolkien.” Literature and Psychology 20.1 (1970): 31-35. <BB #1827>

“Orc as an ‘id projection’ in Blake and Tolkien” (BB #1827).

Noad, Charles E. “Frodo and His Spectre: Blakean Resonances in Tolkien.” Mallorn: The Journal of the Tolkien Society 33 (1995): 58-62. <WBHC 2467>⁵¹²

Rogers, Annise. “Indirect Artistic Influences: The Visual Art of J.R.R. Tolkien and William Blake.” The Romantic Spirit in the Works of J.R.R. Tolkien. Ed. Will Sherwood and Julian Eilmann. Zurich: Walking Tree Publishers, 2024. 175-205. <Blake (2025)>

Considers parallels in their art, though concedes that “any direct link between their artwork was most probably done so unconsciously by Tolkien” (176).

Tolstoy, Leo \(1828-1910\)

Warner, Nicholas O. “Shaw, Tolstoy and Blake’s Russian Reputation.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 102-04. <BBS 395>

Notes Bernard Shaw’s reference to Blake in a 1910 letter to Leo Tolstoy, and considers Blake’s reception in Russia, including Konstantin Bal’mont, M.N. Gutner, E. A. Nekrasova, Anna Elistratova, S.I. Marshak, and Victor Zhirmunski.

Unamuno, Michel de \(1864-1936\)

Valdés, Mario J. “Archetype and Re-creation: A Comparative Study of William Blake and Miguel de Unamuno.” University of Toronto Quarterly 40 (1970): 58-72. <BB #2895>

⁵¹² WBHC associates the article with the same pagination with the journal, Mythlore 21 (1996) (2467).

“A careful article on Blake’s influence” (BB #2895).

Welty, Eudora

Vickery, John B. “William Blake and Eudora Welty’s ‘Death of a Salesman.’” Modern Language Notes 76.7 (1961): 625-32. <BB #2903>

Reads the symbol of Beulah in light of Blake.

Whitehead, Alfred North (1861-1947)

Rubel, William Ilan. “‘The Eye Altering Alters All’: Optics, Haptics, and Ecological Modernity in Alfred North Whitehead and Romanticism.” Process Studies 52.1 (2023): 9-27. <Blake (2024)>

“Blake, more than Shelley, strikes me as the poet who resonates with the idea everywhere in implicit in Whitehead’s writings: that social transformation is only possible in poiesis, or in a mode of attention that undoes the perceptual chains and ‘mind-forg’d manacles’ (Blake, ‘London’) of modern epistemic regimes” (10).

Williams, William Carlos (1883-1963)

Searle, Leroy. “Blake, Eliot, and Williams: The Continuity of Imaginative Labor.” William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 39-72. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

“[T]hese three poets offer an ideal occasion for examining the consequences of art pursued with total dedication” (40).

Yakumo, Koizumi (1850-1904)

Hearn, Lafcadio. Koizumi Yakumo Todai Kogi-roku: Nihon Bungaku no Mirai no tameni [Lectures in Tokyo Imperial University by Koizumi Yakumo: For the Future of Japanese Literature]. Trans. Masayuki Ikeda. Tokyo: Kadokawa Shoten, 2019. 400 pp. In Japanese. <Blake (2020)>

A selection of lectures given by Lafcadio Hearn (Koizumi Yakumo) for the students of Tokyo Imperial University between 1896 and 1903. It includes a lecture entitled “Igirisu saisho no shimpika Blake [Blake: The First English Mystic],” 262-312. This is a much-revised version of the Japanese translation of Hearn’s lectures, which were originally published by the same translator in Samayoeru tamashii no uta [A Song of a Wandering Soul] (Tokyo: Chikuma Shobo, 2004).

Kockum, Keiko. “The Introduction of William Blake to Japan, 1900-1932.” Outstretched Leaves on his Bamboo Staff: Studies in Honour of Göran Malmqvist on his 70th Birthday. Ed. Joakim Enwall. Stockholm: The Association of Oriental Studies, 1994. 159-69. <WBHC 2277>

An early essay on Blake’s Japanese reception from the lectures of Koizumi Yakumo (1850-1904) to Yanagi and Jugaku’s journal, Bureiku to Hoittoman [Blake and Whitman] (1931).

Yeats, William Butler (1865-1939) (See also William Butler Yeats in Studies of Blake Criticism)

Adams, Hazard. Blake and Yeats: The Contrary Vision. Ithaca, N.Y.: Cornell University Press, 1955. 1968. <BB #776, BBS 330-31, WBHC 1470-71>

An important study of the authors, though Adams revisited their relationship in his essay, “The Seven Eyes of Yeats.”

Adams, Hazard. "The Seven Eyes of Yeats." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 3-14.⁵¹³ <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Identifies seven points of influence Blake had on Yeats, while dismissing Yeats as an interpreter of Blake: "he was suffering a fixed idea and a naïve conception of hermeneutic enterprise" (5).

Aman, Yasser. K.R. "The Apocalyptic Image of the Best in William Blake's 'The Tyger' and W.B. Yeats' 'The Second Coming.'" Critical Survey 33.3-4 (2021): 47-61. <Blake (2022)>

"[T]he apocalyptic theory in Christianity has an impact on the development of the image of the beast in both poems" (abstract).

Antonielli, Arianna. "William Butler Yeats's 'The Symbolic System' of William Blake." Estudios Irlandeses: Journal of Irish Studies 3 (2008): 10-28. <WBHC 1557-58>

Reads Yeats's chapter, "The Symbolic System," in his and Edwin John Ellis's 1893 edition of Blake for what it suggests about Blake's influence on Yeats's own theosophic system.

Antonielli, Arianna, and Mark Nixon. "Towards an Edition of Edwin and William Butler Yeats's The Works of William Blake: Poetic, Symbolic and Critical." Variants: The Journal of the European Society for Textual Scholarship 10 (2013): 269-84. <WBHC 1558>

An examination of Ellis and Yeats's manuscript.

Baker, Carlos. "Living It All Again: W.B. Yeats and English Romanticism." The Echoing Green: Romanticism, Modernism, and the Phenomena of Transference in Poetry. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1984. Esp. 171-85. <BBS 359>

Blake features prominently in the chapter on Yeats, but also in the chapters on Eliot and Stevens.

Barry, Caron. "Yeats's Ideal Others: William Blake and Dante Alighieri." New Hibernia Review 22.2 (summer 2018): 128-45. <Blake (2019)>

Considers the influence of Blake and Dante on Yeats.

Billigheimer, Rachel V. "The Female in Blake and Yeats." CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 137-44. <BBS 434, WBHC 1630>⁵¹⁴

"In this essay the archetypal Female in Yeats is viewed as illuminating Blake's eternal Female" (137). "In both [Blake and Yeats], through biblical and romantic allusion,

⁵¹³ Adams writes, "This essay follows twenty-six years upon the publication of Blake and Yeats: The Contrary Vision and twelve years upon its second printing with a corrective preface. This essay sets out anew, rather than attempting a retrospective glance at what I said some time ago" (14n.1).

⁵¹⁴ The date in WBHC should be 1986.

woman is associated with the terror and destruction and final redemption through inspiration that is linked to the origin of the Sphinx" (144).

Billigheimer, Rachel Victoria, Wheels of Eternity: A Comparative Study of William Blake and William Butler Yeats. 1990. <BBS 373, WBHC 1630>

Bloom, Harold. "Blake and Yeats." Yeats. New York: Oxford University press, 1970. 64-82. <BB #1227>

A reading of Yeats's "The Symbolic System" in the Yeats and Ellis edition in relationship to Yeats's A Vision.

Chapman, Wayne K. "Blake, Swedenborg, and A Vision: A Case for Recombine Influence." Yeats's Poetry in the Making: Sing Whatever Is Well Made. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 154-85. <WBHC 1836>

On the influence of Blake and Swedenborg on Yeats's A Vision (1925).

Cribb, J.J.Ll. "Yeats, Blake and The Countess Kathleen." Irish University Register 11.2 (1981): 165-81. <BBS 444>

Argues that Blake and The Book of Thel especially was a large influence on Yeats's play, The Countess Kathleen, which he had laid aside during his work on the 1893 edition of Blake with Ellis.

Ellmann, Richard. The Identity of Yeats. London, 1954. <BB #1549> New York: Oxford University Press, 1964.

Often refers to Yeats's work on Blake and Blake's influence.

Engelberg, Edward. The Vast Design: Patterns in W.B. Yeats's Aesthetic. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1964. 1965. Rpt. with additions. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1974. 96-106. <BBS 462>

Many references to Blake throughout.

Flannery, Mary Catherine. "Yeats and Blake: The Beginning of Confidence and of a System." Yeats and Magic: The Earlier Works. New York: Harper & Row, 1977. 37-58. <BBS 472>

"The real problems which still exist in any discussion of Yeats and Blake are first, why Yeats chose to study him [...] and second, what exactly he took from his study" (39).

Frye, Northrop. "Yeats and the Language of Symbolism." University of Toronto Quarterly 17.1 (1947): 1-17.⁵¹⁵ <BB #1652, BBS 479-80>

Largely on Yeats, but considers the differences between Blake and Yeats.

Hirst, Desiree. "The Theosophical Preoccupations of Blake and Yeats." The Aligarh Journal of English Studies 11.2 (1986): 209-31. <BBS 510>

"[I]n what way did Blake and Yeats use speculation which could be called 'Theosophical' and where are the differences between their uses?" (210).

⁵¹⁵ Rpt. in Frye's Fables of Identity: Studies in Poetical Mythology. New York: 1963, <BBS 479-80>.

Hoshino, Eriko. "William Blake's Influence upon William Butler Yeats, as a Young Poet: From the Gnostic Viewpoint (#1)." Seibu Bunri Daigaku Service Keieigakubu Kenkyu Kiyo: Journal of Bunri University of Hospitality 17 (2010): 57-62. <WBHC 2168>

Ito, Yuki. "Toso no Honoo to Moetsukinu Mono: Blake to Nietzsche wo Tunagu Mono tshiteno Yeats no Jacob Böhme no Juyo nitsuite [A Flame of Battle and Something That Never Burns Out: The Reception of Jacob Böhme in Yeats as a Link between Blake and Nietzsche]." Josai Daigaku Gogaku Kyoiku Kenkyu Center Kenkyu Nenpo [Annual Bulletin of the Center for Language Education in Josai University] 14 (2021): 29-50. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

Keane, Patrick J. "The Human Entrails and the Starry Heavens: Some Instances of Visual Art as Patterns for Yeats's Mingling of Heaven and Earth." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 84.3 (autumn 1981): 366-90. <BBS 428, WBHC 1809-10>

"Blake's Grave designs figure provocatively in connection with Maude Gonne" (BBS 428).

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake: Between Romanticism and Modernism." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 69-77. <WBHC 2862-63>

Considers Blake's influence on Yeats and other early twentieth century poets.

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Oppositional Identity in Yeats, Auden and Dylan Thomas." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 37-55. <WBHC 2311-12>

"For Yeats, Auden and Thomas[,] Blake is a kind of sage who, more than his Romantic contemporaries, is able to speak essential truths to the modern world" (55).

Larrissy, Edward. "Eliot between Blake and Yeats." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 28-36. <WBHC 2311-12>

"In sum, Eliot appears to be offering an implied rebuke to Yeats and Blake by adapting myths which in his estimation are central to European tradition. But he has borrowed Blake's tactic of setting a myth within his own place" (31).

Larrissy, Edward. "Zoas and Moods: Myth and Aspects of the Mind in Blake and Yeats." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 18-27.⁵¹⁶ <WBHC 2311-12>

"This chapter takes a fresh look at the oft-compared couple, Blake and Yeats, comparing and contrasting their use of myth to convey aspects of the mind, and relating the differences between them not only to changing conceptions of the mind, but also to their different political assumptions" (18).

Lenoski, Daniel S. "The Descent from the Mountain: A Study of the Relationship Between the Aesthetic Theory of W.B. Yeats and His Post-1900 Change in Poetic Style." Canadian Journal of Irish Studies 2.1 (1976): 21-31. <BBS 548>

⁵¹⁶ Revised version of essay of the same title in Myth and the Making of Modernity: The Problem of Grounding in Early Twentieth-Century Literature, ed. Michael Bell and Peter Poellner (Amsterdam: Rodopi, 1998), 25-34.

“Blake’s influence on Yeats is treated on pp. 22-[2]6” (BBS 548).

Lenoski, Daniel S. “The Symbolism of the Early Yeats: Occult and Religious Backgrounds.” Studies in the Literary Imagination 14.1 (1981): 85-100. <BBS 548>

Uses The Works of William Blake to explore Blake’s influence on Yeats’s poetic practice and thought regarding occult terms like “correspondence” and “signature” and literary ones like “symbol” and metaphor.”

Marley, Jodie. “‘Invisible Gates Would Open’: W. B. Yeats and William Blake in the 1890s.” Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 23-38. <Blake (2023)>

“This article examines The Works of William Blake: Poetic, Symbolic, and Critical (1893) and Yeats’s 1890s reviews of his contemporary Blake critics, as well as his relationship with the mystic poet and artist George William Russell (Æ), whom he repeatedly compared to Blake” (abstract).

Marvel, Laura. “Blake and Yeats: Visions of the Apocalypse.” College Literature 13.1 (1986): 95-105. <BBS 560>

On “the way in which Yeats has redefined Blakean contraries and the extent to which this redefinition has influenced his visions of apocalypse” (95).

Masterson, Donald, and Edward O’shea. “Code Breaking and Myth Making: the Ellis-Yeats Edition of Blake’s Works.” Yeats Annual 3 (1985): 53-80. <WBHC 2377>

“[W]e will examine a cluster of supporting materials read and annotated by [Yeats and Ellis] while preparing the Works” and How Yeats’s four years labour on this edition served as a formative influence on his own poetry and mythmaking” (54).

Monteith, Ken. “Rewording Madness and Testing a Philosophy: The Ellis-Yeats Works of William Blake.” Yeats and Theosophy. New York and London: Routledge, 2008.115-60. 232-34. <WBHC 2425>

A detailed examination of how Yeats used and departed from the theosophy of H.P. Blavatsky in his analysis of Blake, “The Symbolic System”: “While Yeats may rely upon theosophy to explain Blake, that explanation often exceeds and diverges from the code of belief advanced by Blavatsky’s Isis Unveiled and The Secret Doctrine, as well as Sinnett’s Esoteric Buddhism” (118).

Raine, Kathleen. From Blake to A Vision. Dublin: Dolmen Press, 1979. <BBS 614, WBHC 2564>

On the use of perennial philosophy by both poets, with an emphasis on Blake’s influence on Yeats. Discussions of the occult and Yeats’s and Ellis’s edition of Blake.

Stevenson, W.H. “Yeats and Blake: The Use of Symbols.” 1865 W.B. Yeats 1965: Centenary Essays on the Art of W.B. Yeats. Ed. D.E.S. Maxwell and S.B. Bushrui. Ibadan: Ibadan University Press, 1965. <BB #2763>

““The root of the matter is that Yeats was a disciplined thinker, and Blake was not, although he was the profounder of the two’ (219)” (BB #2763).

Swann, Joseph. "The Breaking of Language: Blake and the Development of Yeats's Imagery." The Internationalism of Irish Literature and Drama. Ed. Joseph McMinn, with Anne McMaster and Angela Welch. Gerrards Cross: Colin Smythe, 1992. 217-31, 344-45. <WBHC 2732-33>

"Blake's whole poetic drift [sic] was to attack and break" "the aesthetic unity of the poem." "This was the way Yeats was to think and write" (220, 223)" (WBHC 2732-33).

Whittaker, Jason. "'By the Voice of the Servant of the Lord': Blake's New Jerusalem and Swedenborgianism in the Work of Sheila Kaye-Smith." William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 329-46. <Blake (2025)>

Examines the engagement with Blake by the twentieth-century novelist, Sheila Kaye-Smith (1887-1956), with references to the influence of Yeats.

Zhou Zuoren (1885-1967)⁵¹⁷

Yan, Hanjin. "Reforming the Relations of the Sexes: Zhou Zuoren's Translation and Imitation of William Blake's Poems about Love and Sexuality." NAN NÜ: Men, Women, and Gender in China 22.2 (2020): 313-41. <Blake (2022)>

"[P]robes into the motivation behind Zhou Zuoren's (1885-1967) translation and imitation of the English poet William Blake's (1757-1827) poems about love and sexuality in the May Fourth era" (abstract).

Twenty-First Century Writers and Publishers (2000-Present)

General Studies

Almond, David (1951-)

Sahm, Danielle. "Contrary to Expectations: Exploring Blake's Contraries in David Almond's Skellig." Children's Literature 38 (2010): 115-32. <WBHC 2626>

"[E]xplores the presence of William Blake's contraries in David Almond's novel, Skellig, bringing Blake scholarship in parallel with Almond's writing" (abstract).

Beagle, Peter (1939-)

Pennington, John. "Innocence and Experience and the Imagination in the World of Peter Beagle." Mythlore 58 (1989): 10-16. <BBS 602>

Alludes to Blake's archetypes and Urizen in an analysis of, chiefly, The Last Unicorn (1968).

Bedard, Michael (1949-)

Jones, Raymond E. "'Different Moments in the One Cycle': Alchemical and Blakean Symbolism in Michael Bedard's Redwork." Children's Literature Association Quarterly 20.1 (1995): 3-8. <WBHC 2215>

"Redwork is intellectually complex, but the alchemical and Blakean symbolism operate within a relatively simple and accessible story" (3).

⁵¹⁷ Chinese writer and translator.

Bellow, Saul (1915-2005)

Billy, Ted. "The Road of Excess: Saul Bellow's Henderson the Rain King." Saul Bellow Journal 3.1 (1983): 8-17. <BBS 373>

"The dynamic philosophy of William Blake informs the action, imagery, and characterization in Bellow's Henderson the Rain King' (8)" (BBS 373).

Weinstein, Mark. "Bellow's Imagination-Instructors." Saul Bellow Journal 2.1 (1982): 19-21. <BBS 675>

On the references to Blake in the later novels.

Brown-spencer, George (1923-2016)

Conrad, Leon. "Roots, Shoots, Fruits: William Blake and J. M. Robertson: Two Key Influences on George Spencer-Brown's Work and the Latter's Relationship to Niklas Luhmann's Work." Kybernetes 51.5 (2022): 1879-95. <Blake (2023)>

"This paper explores two key influences on George Spencer-Brown" (1923–2016), an English polymath (abstract).

Butterworth, Jez (1969-)⁵¹⁸

White, Simon. "The Blakean Imagination and the Land in Jez Butterworth's Jerusalem." Journal of Contemporary Drama in English 7.2 (Nov. 2019): 259-80. <Blake (2020)>

On Butterworth's play, Jerusalem: "The shadow of William Blake hangs heavily over the play" (abstract).

Derrida, Jacques (1930-2004)

Miller, Dan. "Blake and the Deconstructive Interlude." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 139-167. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

On Derrida and Deconstruction, with a reading of The Vision of the Last Judgment.

Celati, Gianni (1937-2022), Italian Critic and Translator

Giorgio, Simone. "Tradurre la visione: Celati, Blake, Michaux." Griseldaonline 22,1 (2023): 27-40. In Italian (abstract in Italian and English). <Blake (2024)>

The essay explores "Gianni Celati's relationship with William Blake and Henri Michaux. Starting from the reproposal of some excerpts of their works on 'Il semplice,' it is exposed how Celati's interest in these writers is linked to themes such as vision and liberation from social constraints—two topics variously treated by Celati in his works" (abstract).

Clementson, Carlos (1944-), Spanish Poet

Torralbo, Juan de Dios. "'Beauty is truth': Carlos Clementson, traductor de los románticos ingleses" ['Beauty is truth': Carlos Clementson, Translator of the English Romantic Poets]." Monteagudo 27 (2022): 379-407. In Spanish (abstract in Spanish and English). <Blake (2023)>

⁵¹⁸ See also Jason Whittaker's review of the play's 2022 production at Zoamorphosis.

“Examines the translations of the English Romantics by the Cordoban poet Carlos Clementson, who put works by these eight poets into Spanish: William Blake, Robert Burns, William Wordsworth, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, Joseph Blanco White, Lord Byron, Percy Bysshe Shelley and John Keats” (abstract).

DeLillo, Don (1936-)

Wreathed, Joakim. “The Invisible Apocalyptic City: The Affectivity of Urbanity, Movement, and Desire in William Blake’s ‘London,’ Don DeLillo’s Cosmopolis, and Ivan Vladislavić’s The Exploded View.” Hungarian Journal of English and American Studies 22.2 (2016): 305-25. In English. <Blake (2018)>

Compares the writers’ views of urban modernity.

Dylan, Bob (1941-)

Clark, Steve, and James Keary. “Only the wings on his heels’: Blake and Dylan.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 209-29. <WBHC 1871-73>

“Considering one song from each album of the mid-1960s trilogy [‘Mr. Tambourine Man,’ ‘Like a Rolling Stone,’ and ‘Visions of Johanna’], we intend to argue that the focus on ‘Innocence’ tends to oversimplify the relationship between Blake and Dylan” (210).

Hilton, Nelson. “Waxed in Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.3 (winter 2009-10): 110-11. <WBHC 1723>

Reads “Blake’s presence” (110) in the manuscript facsimile of Dylan’s “Gates of Eden,” with references to Dylan’s friendship with Allen Ginsberg.

Eldridge, Aethelred (1930-2018) and Alexandra (1948-) (See Blake and Artists)

Harris, Thomas (1940-) (See also Film, Television, and Video Studies)

Gompf, Michelle. Thomas Harris and William Blake: Allusions in the Hannibal Lecter Novels. Jefferson: McFarland, 2014.⁵¹⁹ <WBHC 2090>

A book-length study of Blake and Harris, which includes an overview of Blake’s thought and an examination of Harris’s references to Blake in his novels, with some references to the films.

Williams, Nicholas M. “Eating Blake, or An Essay on Taste: The Case of Thomas Harris’s Red Dragon.” Cultural Critique 42 (1999): 137-62. <WBHC 2865-66>

Uses the incident of the serial killer, Francis Dolarhyde, eating Blake’s watercolor, The Great Dragon and the Woman Clothed with the Sun, to reflect “on the relationships between artistics object, and, in particular, as a figure for the reception, the incorporation, of highbrow culture in mass-market media and, by extension, for the trop of consumption itself" (137).

⁵¹⁹ Incorporates Gompf’s “The Silence of the Lamb and the Tyger: Harris and Blake.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 179-91, <WBHC 2862-63>

Whittaker, Jason. "From Hell: Blake and Evil in Popular Culture." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 192-204. <WBHC 2862-63>

"[H]ow Blake's critical of the Moral Law influenced a number of writers at the end of the twentieth century," including Thomas Harris, J.G. Ballard, Michael Dibdin, and Alan Moore.

Hill, Geoffrey (1934-2016)

Merriman, Emily Taylor. "[Raging with the Truth: Condemnation and Concealment in the Poetry of Blake and \[Geoffrey\] Hill](#)." Journal of Religious Ethics 37.1 (2009): 83-103. <WBHC 2218-19>

Considers Geoffrey Hill's poem, "On Reading Blake: Prophet Against Empire" and the poet's inability to stop war: "as Erdman's book and Hill's poem observe, poet-prophets run the risk of personal confusion, public rejection, and in some cases even punishment" (86). Many references to Hill and Erdman.

Horovitz, Michael (1935-2021)

Horovitz, Michael. "Blake and the Voice of the Bard in Our Time." Books 10 (1972): 18-24. <BB #A1887>

"A defence of 'the children of Albion,' with Blake as a prophet" (BB #A1887).

Horovitz, Michael. "The Blake Renaissance." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 7-15. <Blake (2023)>

Reprints an article originally published in Oxford Opinion (1958) that helped to spur Blake's reception in the British counterculture movement. Horovitz "argues that Blake 'evades appraisal because he was always working for a synthesis of creation far beyond outward forms and genres,' which meant 'he had to invent his own methods to express himself adequately'" (abstract).

Horovitz, Michael. "The Need for the Non-literary." TLS (29 Dec. 1972): 1583. <BB #B1887>

A controversy stemming from Roy Fuller's comments on Horovitz's Poetry of the Children of Albion Underground in Britain (1969).

Horovitz, Michael. "William Blake and (a Few of) His Friends in Our Time." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 17-22. <Blake (2023)>

"Horovitz reflects on his longstanding fascination with William Blake," including "how the spirit of Blake loomed large at the International Poetry Incarnation at the Albert Hall in the summer of 1965, where his fellow travellers, among them Adrian Mitchell, were driven by the nineteenth-century poet" (abstract).

Keery, James. "Children of Albion: Blake and Contemporary British Poetry." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 100-12. <WBHC 2862-63> Considers the Blakean work of Iain Sinclair and J.H. Prynne and their relationship to the British Counterculture.

Riley, James. "Iain Sinclair, William Blake and the Visionary Poetry of the 1960s." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 75-92. <Blake (2023)>

"Considers the use made of William Blake by a range of writers associated with the 'countercultural' milieu of the 1960s, particularly those linked to its London-based literary context," including Iain Sinclair, Michael Horovitz, and Harry Fainlight (abstract).

Kinsella, Thomas (1928-2021)

Fitzsimons, Andrew. "Blessed William Skullbullet: Blake, Thomas Kinsella and Digital Humanities." Kanto Review of English 4 (2012): 191-99. <WBHC 2021>

"[D]oes Blake's work still have impact on contemporary poets, whether in its original form of illuminated book or in textual or digital reproduction? If so, in what way does this influence manifest itself? This is the question I wish to bring to bear on a discussion of the contemporary Irish poet, Thomas Kinsella, on whose poetry Blake is an acknowledged but so far little examined influence" (191).

Lessing, Doris (1919-2013)

Levin, Susan. "A Fourfold Vision: William Blake and Doris Lessing." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 212-21. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

"Certain [of her] novels are clearly structured after Blake" (212).

Meillasoux, Quentin (1967-)

Dushane, Allison. "Speculative Enthusiasm: William Blake's Jerusalem and Quentin Meillassoux's Divine Ethics." Romanticism and Speculative Realism. Ed. Chris Washington and Anne C. McCarthy. New York: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. 93-109. <Blake (2020)>

"Blake's speculative enthusiasm encourages an affective stance that operates through openness to and reciprocal exchange with the other in order to embrace radical contingency" (105).

Miłosz, Czesław (1911-2004)

Primary

Miłosz, Czesłosz. Ziemia Ulro [The Land of Ulro]. Paris, 1977. Paris, 1980. Trans. Louis Iribarne. New York: Farrar, Straus, Giroux, 1984. Trans. Louis Iribarne. New York: Farrar, Straus, Giroux, 1985. <BBS 575, WBHC 2408>

An autobiography with reflections on Blake: "Blake restored me to my earlier rapture, a, perhaps to my true vocation, that of a lover" (31).

Secondary

Borkowska, Eliza. "I inhabited the Land of Ulro long before Blake taught me its proper name': Czeslaw Miłosz's Ziemia Ulro/The Land of Ulro." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.3 (winter 2021-22): 19 pars. <Blake (2022)>

On Blake influence on Miłosz's The Land of Ulro and the limits of translation and language.

Borkowska, Eliza. “Unweaving the National Strand of the ‘Golden String’ of Jerusalem: Blake’s British Myth and its (Polish) Translation.” Translating Myth. Ed. Ben Pestell, Pietra Palazzolo, and Leon Burnett. Cambridge: Modern Humanities Research Association and Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2016. 101-13. <Blake (2024)>

On what has been left out of a partial Polish translation of Jerusalem, and the need for a complete translation (see Borkowska’s “Translating Blake’s Jerusalem into Polish”). Refers to Czesław Miłosz’s Ziemia Ulro [The Land of Ulro] and its claims about translating Blake’s texts that are impossible to translate.

Bukowski, Piotr. “Harmony and Openness to Many Levels of Reality’– The Thought of Emanuel Swedenborg in the Writings of Czeslaw Milosz.” Arcadia 47.2 (2013): 328-44.

Serdechnaia, Vera. “Uil'iam Bleik i F. M. Dostoevskii: istoriia sopostavlenii [William Blake and F. M. Dostoevsky: A History of Comparison].” Dostoevskii i mirovaya kul'tura. Filologicheskii zhurnal [Dostoevsky and World Culture. Philological Journal] 3 (2020): 158-68. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

The article is devoted to the history of comparing the works of William Blake and Fyodor Dostoevsky: the lectures of André Gide; the works of Jean Wahl, Georges Bataille, Melvin Rader, and D. Gustafsson; Czesław Miłosz’s The Land of Ulro; and the opera The Book of Seraphim in Moscow (2020).

Moriarty, Laura (1970-)

Kaufman, Robert. “Everybody Hates Kant: Blakean Formalism and the Symmetries of Laura Moriarty.” Modern Language Quarterly 61.1 (2000): 131-55. <WBHC 2240>

Examines “Laura ‘Moriarty’s relationships to Blake and formal matters” (WBHC 2240).

Morrison, Toni (1931-2019)

Bidney, Martin. “Creating a Feminist-Communitarian Romanticism in Beloved: Toni Morrison’s New Uses for Blake, Keats, and Wordsworth.” Papers on Language and Literature 36.3 (2000): 271-301.⁵²⁰

The first section (pp. 275-78) explores the ways Blake “stimulate Morrison’s psychology of imagination” (275).

Nair, Rukmini Braya (1952-)

Azevedo, Mail Marques de. “William Blake: o gênio oitocentista da intermidialidade como personagem em Mad Girl’s Love Song.” Revista Letras Raras 9.3 (Aug. 2020): 136-53. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2021)>

Discusses “the appropriation of William Blake’s persona as a character in the novel Mad Girl’s Love Song, by the Indian post-colonial writer Rukmini Bhaya Nair” (abstract).

⁵²⁰ Not in recorded in WBHC or Blake.

Ōe, Kenzaburō (1935-2023)

Goldsmith, Steven. "Toward an Auditory Imagination: Interlude on Kenazburo Oe's Rouse up O Young Men of the New Age." Blake's Agitation: Criticism and the Emotions. Baltimore: John Hopkins University Press, 2013.⁵²¹ 219-25. <WBHC 2088>

An important work on Blake from the perspective of affect studies, with references to Kenzaburo's Rouse up O Young Men of the New Age and Wordsworth.

Isherwood, Christopher. "A Prophetic Voice? The Pinch Runner Memorandum in 'Post' 3.11 Japan." Bulletin of the Faculty of Foreign Studies, Sophia University. 50 (2015): 1-27.⁵²²

Contains a section on Ōe and Blake.

Kobayashi, Keiko. "Blake and Kenzaburo Oe". Ritsumeikan Bungaku [Journal of Cultural Science] 615 (2010): 562 -56.⁵²³ <WBHC 2260>

"Blake's epigrammatic sentences always resound through Oe's transfigurative and imaginative world" (556).

Otto, Peter. "Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age!": Ōe Kenzaburō and William Blake on Bodies, Biopolitics, and the Imagination." British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Ed. Alex Watson and Laurence Williams. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. 361-83. <Blake (2020)>

Considers Blake's place in Ōe's Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age! (1983).

Sato, Hikari. "Oe Kenzaburo 'Atarashii hito yo mezameyo' nioite saisozō sareru William Blake (William Blake Re-created in 'Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age' by OE Kenzaburo)," Hikaku Bungaku (Journal of Comparative Literature) 65 (2023): 7-21. In Japanese with English synopsis. <Blake (2024)>

The narrator ('I') in 'Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age!', an enthusiastic reader of Blake and a father of a brain-damaged son, discusses the sorrow of birth, referring to The Book of Thel and the third stanza from "To Tirzah". He also introduces the reader to the design of plate 76 in Jerusalem, giving the text in plate 96 as though it were a dialogue between Jesus and Albion drawn on plate 76. Comparing himself to the aged Jesus and his son to young Albion, the narrator reads Blake, not in Blake's context but in the context of his own personal life. Oe re-creates Blake for his profound story of a father, his disabled son, family and society.

Sato, Hikari. "Oe Kenzaburo no William Blake: Manabi hogushi no katei wo saguru [William Blake in Kenzaburo Oe: A Process of Unlearning]," Yuriika: Shi to Hihyo: Sotokushu Oe Kenzaburo 1935-2023 (Eureka: Poetry and Criticism: Kenzaburo Oe 1935-2023 Special Issue) 55.10 (2023): 594-603. In Japanese. <Blake (2024)>

⁵²¹ Incorporates Goldsmith's "Blake's Agitation," South Atlantic Quarterly 95 (1996), 753-96, <WBHC 2087-88>, and "William Blake and the Future of Enthusiasm," Nineteenth-Century Literature 63 (2009), 439-60, <WBHC 2089>.

⁵²² Not recorded in WBHC.

⁵²³ The page numbers descend.

Oe read Blake under the guidance of the books by Mona Wilson, Geoffrey Keynes, Kathleen Raine, David V. Erdman, E.P. Thompson and Donald Ault in the 1980s, although he did not have sufficient knowledge on Blake in the 1960s. The argument on forgiveness in “Tsumi no yurushi” no aokusa [Green Grass for ‘Forgiveness of Sin’]” (1984), one of his short stories, is hinted not only by Blake’s text but also by the phrase “the indestructibility of human existence as epiphany” which Mircea Eliade wrote in his diary and which Oe says left a deep impression on him. Oe learns and unlearns Blake according to his own interpretation.

Turner, Barnard. “Ōe Kenzaburo’s Reading of Blake: An Anglophonic Perspective.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 246-59. <WBHC 1857-62>

“Ōe shows a detailed first-hand knowledge of much of Blake’s work” (249).

Okri, Ben (1959-)

Green, Matthew J. A. “Dreams of Freedom: Magical Realism and Visionary Materialism in Okri and Blake.” Romanticism 15.1 (2009): 18-32.

On Blake and the Nigerian writer, Ben Okri.

van Schaik, Pamela. “The Significance of ‘Mental Fight’ in Ben Okri and William Blake.” Journal of Literary Studies 28.4 (2012): 87-97. <WBHC 2795>

“Drawing principally from [Okri’s] Mental Fight and Jerusalem, this article explores the ways in which both Ben Okri and William Blake prophesy the redemption of humanity through the power of words and the participation of all people in a new “dream” by means of which a more humane civilisation may be attained” (abstract).

Oliver, Douglass (1937-2000)

Williams, John. “Building a Heaven in Hell’s Despair: The Everlasting Gospel of Revolution According to William Blake and Douglas Oliver.” Romanticism 18.2 (Jul. 2012): 155-64. <WBHC 2865>

Oliver, Mary (1935-2019)

Michael, Jennifer Davis. “Eternity in the Moment: William Blake and Mary Oliver.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 45.2 (fall 2011): 44-50. <WBHC 1728-29>

“Oliver’s deliberate invocations of Blake prod us to look again at his attitude toward nature and the physical body” (44).

Pynne, J.H. (1936-)

Keery, James. “Children of Albion: Blake and Contemporary British Poetry.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 100-12. <WBHC 2862-63>

Considers the Blakean work of Iain Sinclair and J.H. Prynne and their relationship to the British Counterculture.

Pullman, Philip (1946-)

Pullman, Philip. “Soft Beulah’s Night: William Blake and Vision” and “I Must Create a System ...: A Moth’s-Eye View of William Blake.” Daemon Voices: On Stories and Storytelling. New York: Knopf, 2018. 317-23 and 353-72. <Blake (2020)>

The first essay was originally published in the Guardian on 26 Jan. 2015, and the second was delivered to the Blake Society on 25 Oct. 2005.

Matthews, Susan. "Fit Audience Tho Many: Pullman's Blake and the Anxiety of Popularity." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 205-20. <WBHC 2862-63>

An analysis of Phillip Pullman's use of Blake in his Dark Materials trilogy, with trenchant remarks on Marsha Keith Schuchard's Why Mrs. Blake Cried and the positioning of Blake within an esoteric tradition.

Matthews, Susan. "Rouzing the Faculties to Act: Pullman's Blake for Children." His Dark Materials Illuminated: Critical Essays on Philip Pullman's Trilogy. Ed. Millicent Lenz and Carole Scott. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 2005. 125-34. <WBHC 2382>

Argues that His Dark Materials "develops a rereading of Blake that suggests a commentary on the 'future Age' imagined in 'A Little Girl Lost'—the future age of now" (127). In addition to Matthews's essay on Blake and Pullman, Blake's view of Milton figures in Burton Hatlen's "His Dark Materials, a Challenge to Tolkien and Lewis" (pp. 84-91) and Carole Scott's "Revamping Old Traditions in His Dark Materials" (pp.102-05).

Pynchon, Thomas (1937-)

Cox, Philip. "Berkeley, Blake, and the Apocalypse of Pynchon's The Crying of Lot 49." Essays in Literature 7 (1980): 91-99. <BBS 443>

"Concerned with Oedipus's attraction to the ideas of Blake and Berkeley" (BBS 443).

Reed, Ishmael (1938-)

Zamir, Shamoona. "The Artist as Prophet, Priest and Gunslinger: Ishmael Reed's Cowboy in the Boat of Ra." Callaloo: A Journal of Afro-American and African Arts and Letters 17 (1994): 1205-35. <WBHC 2914>

In Cowboy in the Boat of Ra, "Reed engages the poetics of Blake and Yeats, resisting the conflation of the two and finding in this differentiation both a range of possibilities and a set of closures for the black poet" (1208).

Rice, Anne (1941-2021)

Santos, Andrio J.R. dos. "My evil, and my lusty little heart': Tradução intersemiótica de 'The Tyger,' de William Blake, em 'The Tale of the Body Thief,' de Anne Rice." Literartes no. 7 (2017): 266-84. In Portuguese (abstract also in English and Spanish). <Blake (2018)>

Santos, Andrio J.R. dos. "A temível simetria do vampiro: interstício de significação entre William Blake e Anne Rice." Literatura e autoritarismo, Dossiê no. 20 (July 2017): 46-59. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2018)>

Roszak, Theodore (1933-2011)

Otto, Peter. "Rouze up O Young Men of the New Age!": William Blake, Theodore Roszak, and the Counter Culture of the 1960s-1970s." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 13-26. <WBHC 1871-73>

Uses Theodore Roszak's The Making of Counter Culture: Reflections on the Technocratic Society and its Youthful Opposition (1969) and his Where the Wasteland Ends: Politics and Transcendence in Postindustrial Society (1972) to engage with the question why Blake became so popular in the Counter Culture Movements of the 1960s and 1970s.

Rushdie, Salman (1947-)

Green, Matt. "This Angel, who is now become a Devil, is my particular Friend': Diabolic Friendships and Oppositional Interrogation in Blake and Rushdie." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 127-39. <WBHC 2862-63>

On the similar methods of Marriage and Satanic Verses.

Larrissy, Edward. "Salman Rushdie, Myth and Postcolonial Romanticism." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 146-55. <WBHC 2311-12>

Examines "why Salman Rushdie's Satanic Verses weaves the influence of Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell into an already complex handling of the uncanonical verses supposedly dictated to the devil to Muhammad and subsequently excised" (146).

Stähler, Axel. "Writ\(h\)ing Images: Imagination, the Human Form, and the Divine in William Blake, Salman Rushdie, and Simon Louvish." English Studies 89.1 (2008): 94-117. <WBHC 2701>

Examines Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job and explores "some of the ways in which Rushdie engages in The Satanic Verses in a dialogue with the pictorial epic and the Blakean idiosyncrasies it embodies," while suggesting that Simon Louvish's The Days of Miracles and Wonders (1997) serves as a "corrective" to Rushdie (95).

Russell, Peter (1921-2003)

"Publications Received." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 68.⁵²⁴

Notes receiving Peter Russell's The Golden Chain / Lyrical Poems 1964-1969 (Venice, 1970) and Aethelred Eldridge's The Golgonooza Organ #1, highlighting the Blakean content of both and printing Eldridge's "Golgonooza Organ."

Salinger, J.D. (1919-2010)

Kaminski da Silva, Arthur Aroha. "As crianças de Salinger: Inocência e sacralização da infância em Nine Stories \(1953\) [Salinger's Children: Innocence and Childhood Sacredness in Nine Stories (1953)]." Teoliterária 11.24 (2021): 242-69. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2023)>

"There is a strong similarity between the way that the north American writer J. D. Salinger built the various child-characters of Nine Stories (1953)—specially the one named Teddy—and the romantic poetic of childhood, inaugurated by English authors like William Blake and William Wordsworth" (abstract).

⁵²⁴ Not recorded in BB.

Sinclair, Iain (1943-)

Primary

Larrissy, Edward. "Appendix: Ian Sinclair on Blake (email to the author)." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 157. <WBHC 2311-12>

"Blake remains fundamental to any mapping of London" (157).

Secondary

Keery, James. "Children of Albion: Blake and Contemporary British Poetry." Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 100-12. <WBHC 2862-63>

Considers the Blakean work of Iain Sinclair and J.H. Prynne and their relationship to the British Counterculture.

Larrissy, Edward. "Postmodern Myths and Lies: Iain Sinclair and Angela Carter." Blake and Modern Literature. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 125-45. <WBHC 2311-12>

Examines how Blake influences both writers and their understanding of postmodernity.

Riley, James. "Iain Sinclair, William Blake and the Visionary Poetry of the 1960s." Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022): 75-92. <Blake (2023)>

"Considers the use made of William Blake by a range of writers associated with the 'countercultural' milieu of the 1960s, particularly those linked to its London-based literary context," including Iain Sinclair, Michael Horovitz, and Harry Fainlight (abstract).

Whittaker, Jason. "'Walking thro' Eternity': Blake's Psychogeography and other Pedestrian Practices." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 279-87. <WBHC 1857-62>

Compares the psychogeographies of Blake and the Welsh writer and of filmmaker Ian Sinclair.

Smith, Patti (1946-)

Bracewell, Michael. "Touched by the Spirit of Blake." Tate 23 (winter 2000): 26-33. <WBHC 1781>

"On Patti Smith's view of Blake" (WBHC 1781).

Carpenter, Alicia. "'There is no pure evil, nor pure good, only purity': William Blake's and Patti Smith's Art as Opposition to Societal Boundaries." Women in Rock, Women in Romanticism: The Emancipation of Female Will. Ed. James Rovira. New York: Routledge, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

Smith, Zadie (1975-)

Victoria, Arana R. "Intimations of William Blake in On Beauty \(2005\): Zadie Smith's Trans-Atlantic Home to and Critique of Boston Intellectuals." Journal of Philosophy 7.17 (2012): 1-10.⁵²⁵

"Smith's On Beauty, like Blake's America: A Prophecy and Visions of the Daughters of Albion, indicts the reprehensible intellectual discourses of the day that undermine human happiness and corrupt the social order" (abstract).

Thiong'o, Ngũgĩ wa (1938-)

Canel, Robert. "Literary Criticism as Social Philippic and Personal Exorcism: Ngugi wa Thiongo'o's Critical Writing." World Literature Today 59.1 (1985): 26-30.

Notes that during his imprisonment between 31 Dec. 1977 and 12 Dec. 1978, "one of the writers he most often quotes in that diary is William Blake" (30n10).

Gugelberger, Georg M. "Blake, Neruda, Ngugi wa Thiong'o: Issues in Third World Literature." Comparative Literature Studies 21.4 (1984): 463-82. <BBS 496>

On Blake's influence on Neruda and on the parallels between Blake and Thiong'o in Petals of Blood (1977). The Blake section highlights "London," "The Little Black Boy," and Visions. "From Blake (and certainly from others as well) Neruda and Ngugi wa Thiong'o have learned the true voice of solidarity, the overcoming of formal isolation as well as human isolation, the move from the 'I' through the eye to the 'WE'" (479).

Vladislavic, Ivan (1957-)

Wreathed, Joakim. "The Invisible Apocalyptic City: The Affectivity of Urbanity, Movement, and Desire in William Blake's 'London,' Don DeLillo's Cosmopolis, and Ivan Vladislavić's The Exploded View." Hungarian Journal of English and American Studies 22.2 (2016): 305-25. In English. <Blake (2018)>

Compares the writers' views of urban modernity.

Vonnegut, Kurt (1922-2007)

Ullrich, David W. "Deciphering Blake's 'The Angel that presided o'er my birth.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.3 (winter 2012-13): 25 pars. <WBHC 1733-34>

Considers the transcriptions of the poem by Keynes, Erdman, and Bentley to suggest the poem "extend[s] our knowledge of Blake's complex, idiosyncratic, and visionary understanding of angels and their influence on his imaginative world" (par. 25). Also touches on Kurt Vonnegut's relationship to Blake.

Gugelberger, Georg M. "Blake, Neruda, Ngugi wa Thiong'o: Issues in Third World Literature." Comparative Literature Studies 21.4 (1984): 463-82. <BBS 496>

On Blake's influence on Neruda and on the parallels between Blake and Thiong'o in Petals of Blood (1977). The Blake section highlights "London," "The Little Black Boy," and Visions. "From Blake (and certainly from others as well) Neruda and Ngugi wa

⁵²⁵ Not recorded in WBHC.

Thiong'o have learned the true voice of solidarity, the overcoming of formal isolation as well as human isolation, the move from the 'I' through the eye to the 'WE'" (479).

Wilson, Colin (1931-2013)

Curran, Stuart. "Detecting' the Existential Blake." Blake Studies 2.1 (1970): 67-76. <BB #1218.22>

On the Blakean elements of Wilson's novel The Glass Cage (1966).

Yamashita, Sumito (1966-)

Yamashita, Sumito. Kimi tachi wa Shikashi Futatabi Koi [You, however, Come Again]. Tokyo: Bungei Shunju, 2022. 252 pp. In Japanese. <Blake (2024)>

Sumito Yamashita is a novelist, a winner of Akutagawa Prize in 2017, and this is a collection of his short stories, which includes "Hara no inu, ibun. Neko no hara [A Dog in the stomach, a variant. The stomach of a cat]," originally published in Bungakukai [Literary World], Vol. LXXV, No. 6, (2021). In one scene, the narrator quotes the first, second, fifth and sixth stanzas from "The Tyger" in English, thinking of a tiger, a lamb, God, a dog and a cat after he undergoes surgery and before he is shown a part of colon sigmoideum cut out by a man in white.

Music (Including Blake and Musical Settings or Use by Musicians, Blake and Hymns, and Blake and Musicians) (See Bibliographies for Bibliographies of Musical Settings)

Introduction

Newman, Steve. "Songs." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 129-38. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Whittaker, Jason. "Blake and Music." The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. Ed. Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley, ed. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. I. 667-78. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022)>

Studies of Blake and Music, Musical Settings, or the Use of Him by Musicians (See also Studies of ‘Jerusalem’ Hymn under Milton)

Auler, Robert M. "'Martin Bresnick's For the Sexes: The Gates of Paradise': Analysis of a Multi-Media [Musical] Composition." PhD diss. University of Cincinnati, 2006. <WBHC 1570>

Barry Kevin. "Autonomous Song: Chabanon and Blake." Language, Music, and the Sign: A Study in Aesthetics, Poetics and Poetic Practice from Collins to Coleridge. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1987. <WBHC 1583>

Positions Blake's and Cowper's invocations of music against the musical theories of James Ussher (1720-72) and Michel-Paul Guy de Chabanon (1730-92).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "William Blake Musician." Revista Canaria de Estudios Ingleses 12 (1986): 147-51. <BBS 369>

"About the poet's musical context" (BBS 369).

Berkebile, Jennifer. "A Study in Songs: Comparative Analyses of 20th Century Settings of William Blake's ‘Songs of Innocence and of Experience’: Selections from Vaughan Williams's ‘Ten Blake Songs,’ Britten's ‘Songs and Proverbs of William Blake,’ and Rochberg's ‘Blake Songs: For Soprano and Chamber Ensemble.’" PhD diss. West Virginia University, 2017.

"The heart of the discussion lies in the relationship between text and music in the song cycles of Vaughan Williams, Britten, and Rochberg and how their musical settings affect and enhance the Blake texts. The unique obstacles in setting the poetry of William Blake are explored along with a brief overview of Blake's work and cultural/historical environment and a detailed discussion of the poetic fundamentals of the Songs" (abstract).

Chapman, M. "William Blake, Hubert Parry, and the Singing of ‘Jerusalem.’" Hymn 42.2 (2011): 41-51. <WBHC 1836>

Cracchiolo, Margaret Anna. "A Comprehensive Case Study on the Ten Blake Songs by Ralph Vaughan Williams: From ‘Infant Joy’ to ‘London.’" PhD diss. Florida State University, 2009.

"This case study will provide a resource for performers and scholars who are seeking an in-depth knowledge of Vaughan Williams's influences on composing the piece are explored, including William Blake and his poetry (the Songs of Innocence and of Experience), and the film, The Vision of William Blake, for which the Ten Blake Songs were written" (abstract).

Davidson, Peter. “The Music of the Ancients.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.2 (fall 1981): 98-100. <BBS 392>

On the songs and poems sung by the Ancients.

Davies, Keri. “O Nancy's hair is yellow as gowd': Blake, Border ballads, and the Reinvention of Relief Etching.”⁵²⁶ Index Rerum. 26 Mar. 2024. <Blake (2025)>

An essay with two parts. The first focuses on Blake's ideas of music and identifies the probable source of the “Border Melody” sang by Mrs. Linnell, which according to Alexander Gilchrist, affected Blake emotionally. The second considers Scottish members of Blake's late circle, particularly William Home⁵²⁷ Lizars and Thomas Sivright, and makes the claim that both Lizars' and Charles Pye's relief inventions were modelled on the men's knowledge of Blake's method of illuminated printing.

Erdman, David V. “America: New Expanses.” Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 92-114. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Examines America through the designs and the representations of sound and music.

Fairchild, B.H. Such Holy Song: Music as Idea, Form, and Image in the Poetry of William Blake. Kent, OH: Kent State University Press, 1980. <BBS 469, WBHC 2010>

On Blake's idea, presentation, and use of music “musical experience is associated by Blake with inspiration” (106).

Farwell, Bruce. “More than Music Composed after Blake by Arthur Farwell.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 86-103.⁵²⁸ <BBS 383>

An account of the music and art of Farwell (1872-1952) inspired by Blake. He set to music “Love's Secret,” “The Lamb,” “A Cradle Song,” and “The Tyger”; he wrote an original piece entitled, “The Vale of Enitharmon”; he reflected on Blake in his book manuscript, “Intuition in the World Making” (1933-48); and he made Blakean drawings.

Grande, James. “Sound and Vision in Blake's London.” The Edinburgh Companion to Romanticism and the Arts. Ed. Sophie Thomas and Maureen McCue. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 2023. 237-54. <Blake (2024)>

Considers “the relationship between the arts” (238) in Blake's works, highlighting Blake's depictions of music and musical instruments in his work and in biographical sketches of him.

⁵²⁶ “A version of this paper was read at “Romanticism's Debatable Lands”: the British Association for Romantic Studies Biennial Conference, 28-31 July 2005, Newcastle upon Tyne” (Davies's Acknowledgment).

⁵²⁷ As Davies points out, “Home” was Lizars' middle name and not “Hone” as Bentley has it in Blake Records (2004).

⁵²⁸ See the notice of a new recording of Farwell's Piano Quintet in E minor, Op. 103, “Arthur Farwell,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978), 73.

Hughes, John. "Music and Inspiration in Blake's Poetry." The Figure of Music in Nineteenth-Century British Poetry. Ed. Phyllis Weliver. Aldershot: Ashgate, 2005. New York: Routledge, 2016. 85-106. <WBHC 2172>

On Blake's representation of music and songs in his poetry and art.

Mzokova, Violetta. "Vokal'nyy tsikl Desyat' pesen Bleyka Voana Uil'yamsa [Ten Blake Songs Vocal Cycle by Vaughan Williams]." Internauka 25.1 (248) (2022): 29-30. In Russian. <Blake (2023)>

"New Music for Four Zoas." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 8.3 (winter 1974-75): 53.⁵²⁹

Notes that "first concert performance of Robert Starer's "Images of Man" was presented by the Department of Music, Brooklyn College School of Performing Arts, on 15 December 1974 at Whitman Hall" (53).

Roberts, Peter. "On Tame High Finishers of Paltry Harmonies: A Blake Music Review and Checklist." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 7.4 (spring 1974): 90-99. <BB #1217.141>

Considers Blake's view of music, and reviews recently published settings (mostly from the late 1960s).

Rovira, James, ed. Rock and Romanticism: Blake, Wordsworth, and Rock from Dylan to U2.⁵³⁰ Lanham: Lexington Books, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Traces Blake's influence on contemporary or recent musicians, including Martha Redbone (Nicole Lobdell), Jackson Browne (Gary L. Tandy), and Leonard Cohen and U2 (Lisa Crafton).

Sanders, Michael. "God Save the Echoing Green: The Uses of Imaginary Nostalgia in William Blake and Ray Davies." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018): 350-64. <Blake (2017)>

How Blake influenced Ray Davies and the Kinks.

Schneider, Matthew. The Long and Winding Road from Blake to the Beatles. New York: Palgrave-Macmillan, 2008. 135-52. <WBHC 2653>

Sketches Blake's and Wordsworth's careers and influence on Lewis Carroll and on the type of children's literature that ultimately helped to shape the Beatles.

Sly, Gordon Cameron. Britten's Donne, Hardy and Blake Songs. Suffolk: Boydell and Brewer, 2023. 117-59. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

A study of Britten's Songs and Proverbs of William Blake, op. 74 (1965).

Smirnov, Dmitri Nikolaevich. "My Blake \(Part 1: In Russia\)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 51.4 (spring 2018): 19 pars., plus "Blake Set to Music by Dmitri N. Smirnov: Works Written in Russia." <Blake (2019)>

⁵²⁹ Not recorded in BB.

⁵³⁰ The descriptions of the chapters at Rovira's blog have an iTunes Playlist for each chapter.

On how Smirnov learned about Blake and started to set his poetry to music.

Smirnov, Dmitri Nikolaevich. “My Blake \(Part 2: In England\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.1 (summer 2018): 25 pars., plus “Blake Set to Music by Dmitri N. Smirnov: Works Written in England.” <Blake (2019)>

On Smirnov’s time in England, the music he wrote then and afterwards, and his translations of Blake into Russian.

Stepanova, Angelina. “Rodnye dushi: D.N. Smirnov i U. Bleyk \(pamyati D.N. Smirnova\)” (Soul mates: D.N. Smirnov and W. Blake (in memory of D.N. Smirnov)). Muzika i vremya (Music and time) 9: 37-41. In Russian. <Blake (2024)>

The author considers the reception of Blake by Dmitri Smirnov (1948-2020), as a translator and a musician, who created his first two operas based on Blake’s poems and translated his works into Russian; Smirnov has created his own view of Blake’s works.

Stevenson, W.H. “The Sounds of ‘Holy Thursday’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.4 (spring 2003): 137-40. <WBHC 1693>

Details the music sang on Holy Thursday from eyewitness accounts by Joseph Haydn and Gilbert Elliott and from descriptions on handbills.

Whitfield A.D. “A Performer's Guide to Virgil Thomson's Five Songs from William Blake.” Phd Diss. Louisiana State University, 2004.

“The Five Songs from William Blake” represents an impressive composition for the baritone voice. Unfortunately, much of the previous scholarship about Thomson did not award these Blake songs adequate attention, nor was it able to draw upon many of the primary sources about Thomson’s life and work that are now available. The purpose of this study is to amend these omissions with a specific guide for performers, combining recent scholarship, an analysis of Thomson’s setting of Blake’s text to music, and a consideration of the vocal merits and difficulties of Thomson’s vocal writing into one helpful document “(abstract).

Zinter, Erik Andrew. “‘The Tyger’ and ‘The Lamb’: Exploring the Relationship between Text and Music in Selected Contemporary Choral Settings of Two Poems by William Blake (1757-1827).” PhD Diss. North Dakota State University, 2015.

“This dissertation focuses on the choral settings of Blake’s The Tyger and The Lamb by” “John Tavener (1944-2013), René Clausen (b. 1953), and Andrew Miller (b. 1983).” “It offers an understanding of their compositional thought processes, a key element for the interpretation and performance of these works. It is only through careful consideration of these thought processes that choral conductors can ensure an informed performance of this literature” (abstract, iii).

Blake and Hymns (See also Anna Laetitia Barbauld, William Cowper, Moravianism, Methodism, Isaac Watts, and Songs of Innocence and of Experience)

Davie, Donald. “Conclusion.” The Eighteenth-Century Hymn in England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1993. 155-58. <WBHC 1921>

Davie ends his study of the eighteenth-century hymn (stretching from John Byrom and Isaac Watts to John Newton and William Cowper) with a discussion of Blake's relationship to this tradition.

Davie, Donald. A Gathered Church: The Literature of the English Dissenting Interests, 1700-1930. London and Henley, 1976. 49-54. <BBS 448>

Though Blake's familial connection to Dissent has been disproven (see Davies and Worrall's "Inconvenient Truths"), Davie's study is useful for its description of the history and forms of Dissenting and Methodist hymns that did influence Blake. There is much on Isaac Watts, the Wesleys, and Whitefield, and less on Barbauld and the Moravians.

England, Marsha Winburn, and John Sparrow. Hymns Unbidden: Donne, Herbert, Blake, Emily Dickinson, and the Hymnographers. New York: New York Public Library, 1966.⁵³¹ <BB #1552, WBHC 1988>

On Wesley's influence on Blake, with some references to Isaac Watts, Anna Laetitia Barbauld, and Milton.

Hilton, Nelson. "What has Songs to do with Hymns?" Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin's Press, 1999. 96-113. <WBHC 1863-65>

A critically sophisticated analysis of how Blake's Songs utilized the conventions of eighteenth-century hymnody, with discussions of Isaac Watts, John and Charles Wesley, John Newton, William Cowper, Phillip Doddridge, and the Muggletonians and focusing at greatest length on "To Tizrah."

Pinto, Vivian de Sola. "William Blake, Isaac Watts, and Mrs. Barbauld." The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 66-87. <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

An early, detailed account of the echoes of Watts and Barbauld in the Songs.

Ripley, Wayne C. "The Influence of the Moravian Collection of Hymns on William Blake's Later Mythology." Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 481-98. <Blake (2018)>

Shows how Blake's later mythological language in The Four Zoas manuscript drew on John Gambold's 1754 Moravian hymnal.

Sampson, George. "The Century of Divine Songs." Proceedings of the British Academy 29 (1943): 28 pp.

A useful survey of eighteenth-century hymns that uses Blake as a touchstone.

⁵³¹ Incorporates England's "Blake and the Hymns of Charles Wesley," Bulletin of the New York Public Library 70 (1966), 7-26, 93-112, 153-68, 251-64, <BB #1552>.

Blake and Musicians⁵³²
Eighteenth-Century Musicians

General Studies
Barry Kevin. "Autonomous Song: Chabanon and Blake." Language, Music, and the Sign: A Study in Aesthetics, Poetics and Poetic Practice from Collins to Coleridge. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1987. <WBHC 1583>

Positions Blake's and Cowper's invocations of music against the musical theories of James Ussher (1720-72) and Michel-Paul Guy de Chabanon (1730-92).

Simmons, Clare A. "Blake's 'Holy Thursday' and 'The Martyrdom of St. Paul's.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 53.3 (winter 2019-20): 24 pars. <Blake (2020)>

Interesting reexamination of the St. Paul's children processions referenced in the "Holy Thursday" poems.

Nineteenth-Century Musicians

Haydn, Franz Joseph (1732-1809)
Davies, Keri. "Good morning, Doctor Haydn." Index Rerum. 29 Nov. 2024. <Blake (2025)>

Sketches the many overlapping locales and circles of Blake and Haydn without suggesting "a direct link between the poet and the composer" (par. 3). Among the figures and places mentioned are the Swedenborgian composer, François-Hippolyte Barthélemon, John and Ann Hunter, and 28 Leicester Square.

Stevenson, W.H. "The Sounds of 'Holy Thursday.'" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 36.4 (spring 2003): 137-40. <WBHC 1693>

Details the music sang on Holy Thursday from eyewitness accounts by Joseph Haydn and Gilbert Elliott and descriptions on handbills.

Spink, Ian. "Haydn at St Paul's—1791 or 1792?" Early Music 33.2 (2005): 273-80.⁵³³

With references to Innocence's "Holy Thursday," an account of Haydn's visit to the Holy Thursday service, which is established to have occurred in 1791.

Twentieth-Century Musicians

General Studies
Davies, Keri. "Blake Set to Music." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 189-208. <WBHC 1871-73>

On twentieth-century settings of Blake and their importance, including Hubert Parry's "Jerusalem," Ralph Vaughan Williams's Job: A Masque for Dancing, Benjamin Britten's Songs and Proverbs of William Blake, John Tavener's "The Lamb," and Ed Sanders's The Village Fugs. Includes a useful "Appendix 13.1. Blake Set to Music: Selected Recordings."

⁵³² See also the "Global Blake Symposium: Musical Afterlives," which was held on 4 Nov. 2024 on Zoom and is available on YouTube.

⁵³³ Not recorded in WBHC.

Fallon, David. “‘Hear the Drunken Archangel Sing’: Blakean Notes on 1990s Pop Music.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 248-62. <WBHC 1871-73>

Considers Nick Cave, Julian Cope, the Libertines and Pete Doherty, and Billy Bragg.

Britten, Benjamin (1913-1976)

Ford, Boris, ed. Benjamin Britten's Poets: An Anthology of the Poems He Set to Music. Manchester: Carcanet, 1996.

Sly, Gordon Cameron. Britten's Donne, Hardy and Blake Songs. Suffolk: Boydell and Brewer, 2023. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

Morrison, Jim (1943-1971)

Connolly, Tristanne. “‘He Took a Face from the Ancient Gallery’: Blake and Jim Morrison.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Hounds Mills, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 230-47. <WBHC 1871-73>

On Jim Morrison’s knowledge of and use of Blake.

Shepherd, Steve. “Songs of Innocence and of Experience: Blake into Rock.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 91-104. <WBHC 2190-91>

On Blake’s influence on 1960s rock, highlighting Jim Morrison at length.

Parry, Charles Hubert Parry (1848-1918)

Ferber, Michael. “Blake's 'Jerusalem' as a Hymn.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.3 (winter 2000-01): 82-94. <WBHC 1685>

Excellent overview of the context of the “hymn” in Milton, its setting by Parry, the reception of Parry’s version, and adaptations of it. Includes a selected discography.

Williams, Ralph Vaughan (1872-1958)

Cracchiolo, Margaret Anna. “A Comprehensive Case Study on the Ten Blake Songs by Ralph Vaughan Williams: From 'Infant Joy' to 'London.'” PhD diss. Florida State University, 2009.

“This case study will provide a resource for performers and scholars who are seeking an in-depth knowledge of Vaughan Williams’s influences on composing the piece are explored, including William Blake and his poetry (the Songs of Innocence and of Experience), and the film, The Vision of William Blake, for which the Ten Blake Songs were written” (abstract).

Frank Howes, The Music of Ralph Vaughan Williams. London: Oxford University Press, 1954. 299-314. <WBHC 2251>

“[A] transcript of Keynes’ scenario for the ballet and a discussion of Williams’ music” (WBHC 2251).

Keynes, Geoffrey, and Gwendolen Raverat. Job: A Masque for Dancing Founded on Blake's Illustrations to the Book of Job. Music by R. Vaughan Williams. Pianoforte arrangement by Vally Lasker. London, New York, Leipzig, Amsterdam [?1931]. <WBHC 2251>

McFarland, Alison Sanders. "A Deconstruction of William Blake's Vision: Vaughan Williams and Job." Vaughan Williams Essays. Ed. Byron Adams and Robin Wells. Aldershot and Burlington: Ashgate, 2003. 29-54. <WBHC 2387>

Ries, Frank W.D. "Sir Geoffrey Keynes and the Ballet Job." Dance Research 2.1 (spring 1984): 19-34. <WBHC 2586>

"An interview with Keynes--all the words are those of Keynes and his collaborators Gwen Raverat (his sister-in-law) and Vaughan Williams (her cousin)--about the Job ballet (BB 2049), with 'the original scenario' (30-33)" (WBHC 2586).

Weltz, Q. A. "Notes and Lineaments: Vaughan Williams's Job: A Masque for Dancing and Blake's Illustrations." Musical Quarterly 76.3 (1992): 301-36. <WBHC 2845>⁵³⁴

"If the Illustrations [of the Book of Job] are 'hieroglyphs,' then the music of Job provides immediate, intuitional access to them; the notes inspire our understandings of their lineaments" (302).

Twenty-First-Century Musicians

Bolcom, William (1938-)

Gades, Andrew. "Music, Image, and Text: A Multi-Domain Analytical Approach to Bolcom's Songs of Innocence and of Experience." PhD diss., Florida State University, 2013. <WBHC 2048>

Kirzinger, Robert. "William Bolcom: Eighth Symphony for Chorus and Orchestra (2005-2007) in William Blake's Prophetic Books." <WBHC 2258>

Roste, Vaughn. "A Master of Styles: The Choral Music of William Bolcom." The Choral Journal 57.10 (2017): 18-35.

Details Bolcom's Symphony No. 8 "subtitled 'from "Prophetic Books" by William Blake'" (29) and Bolcom's "monumental secular work" (29), Songs of Innocence and of Experience.

Davies, Ray (1944-)

Sanders, Michael. "God Save the Echoing Green: The Uses of Imaginary Nostalgia in William Blake and Ray Davies." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 350-64. <Blake (2017)>

How Blake influenced Ray Davies and the Kinks.

Dickinson, Bruce (1958-)

Hagen, Katharina. "[If you want to learn the secrets, close your eyes': Bruce Dickinson's 'Gates of Urizen' as Contrary Version of The \[First\] Book of Urizen.](#)" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 54.3 (fall 2020). 20 pars. <Blake (2021)>

"Dickinson's adaptation changes the outcome of Urizen and turns the plot into practical advice on how to pass the gates of Urizen" (par. 1).

⁵³⁴ Both WBHC and Blake (1995) mistakenly gives the page numbers as 301-6.

Dylan, Bob

Stelzig, Eugene. Bob Dylan's Career as a Blakean Visionary and Romantic. Geneseo, New York: Milne Library, 2013. <WBHC 2704>

Written in 1976, but never published. “[T]he poetry of Blake and Dylan shares a cluster of fundamental ideas, themes, feelings, images, and modes of expression” (6).

Smirnov, Dmitri (1948-2020)

Baeva, Alla. Otechestvennaya opera poslednikh desyatiletii XX veka v svete vagnerovskikh idey: 'Tiriel' [Russian opera of the last decades of the 20th century through Wagner's ideas: Tiriel by Dmitriy Smirnov].” Theater. Painting. Movie. Music [Theatre. Fine Arts. Cinema. Music] 4 (2023): 72-81. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2024)>

This work touches upon the issues of the opera’s music dramaturgy, stylistic solutions, principles of composition, Smirnov’s work on the libretto, which was based on Blake’s Tiriel, as well as a number of other poems.

Serdechnaia, Vera. “Dmitri Smirnov, 1948–2020.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 54.1 (summer 2020). <Blake (2021)>

A remembrance of the Russian composer.

Stepanova, Angelina. “Rodnye dushi: D.N. Smirnov i U. Bleyk \(pamyati D.N. Smirnova\) (Soul mates: D.N. Smirnov and W. Blake (in memory of D.N. Smirnov)).” Muzyka i vremya (Music and time) 9: 37-41. In Russian. <Blake (2024)>

The author considers the reception of Blake by Dmitri Smirnov (1948-2020), as a translator and a musician, who created his first two operas based on Blake’s poems and translated his works into Russian; Smirnov has created his own view of Blake’s works.

Political and Historical Criticism

Introductions

Lincoln, Andrew. "Blake and the History of Radicalism." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 214-34. <WBHC 2867-68>

A survey of historical criticism that considers Blake's relationship to the radical traditions of his era from Jacob Bronowski's A Man Without a Mask (1943) to Saree Makdisi's William Blake and the Impossible History of the 1790s (2003).

Lincoln, Andrew. "War and Revolution." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 325-32. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake and the Communist Tradition." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 235-53. <WBHC 2867-68>

Reads Blake within the Marxist tradition, with a slight survey of the critical tradition.

Makdisi, Saree. "London." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 277-85. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Makdisi, Saree. "The Political Aesthetic of Blake's Images." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 110-32. <WBHC 1969-72>

How to read Blake's images "as a part of a virtual network of relations" (130).

Mee, Jon. "Blake's Politics in History." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 133-49. <WBHC 1969-72>

Discusses Blake's ambivalent relationship to Romantic-era republicanism in light of his religious enthusiasm and millenarianism.

Rowlinson, Matthew. "Money." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 286-92. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Wright, Julia M. "Nationalism and Imperialism." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 317-24. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Aers, David. "Representations of Revolution: From The French Revolution to The Four Zoas." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 244-70. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

Citing Bakhtin to explain his notion of a text's relationship to its time, reads Blake's depictions of revolution in the Lambeth Prophecies and The Four Zoas. A good essay on Blake's notion of revolution, political change, and agency in the first half of his career.

Alhas, Hüseyin. "The Impact of Newspapers on William Blake's The French Revolution and Tyger." Hacettepe University Journal of Faculty of Letters 40.1 (2023): 262-73. In English (abstract in Turkish and in English). <Blake (2024)>

Alhas delves into the impact of newspapers on William Blake's perception of the French Revolution, drawing from archival materials. He indicates that the newspapers of the era profoundly influenced Blake's poetic output during the early stages of the French Revolution, as evidenced in works such as The French Revolution (1791) and 'The Tyger' (1792-93).

Baulch, David M. "'Like a pillar of fire above the Alps': William Blake and the Prospect of Revolution." European Romantic Review 24.3 (2013): 279-85. <WBHC 1587>

Considers Blake's presentation of the Alps in relationship to the Burkean sublime.

Barr, Mark L. "Blake's Perpetual Revolution" and "The Gospel of Minute Particulars." Romanticism and the Rule of Law: Coleridge, Blake, and the Autonomous Reader. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer Nature, 2021. 153-84 and 185-224. <Blake (2022)>

"I would suggest then that Romantic literary production, born in a formative moment for the rule of law, works to uphold that rule or at least attempts to formulate an ideal expression of it by framing its poetic subject in a particular way" (9).

Beer, John. "Words or Images—Blake's Representation of History." Romanticism, Revolution and Language: The Fate of the Word from Samuel Johnson to George Eliot. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2009. 81-98. <WBHC 1594>

Surveying Blake's career through America and Europe, suggests that, by 1793, Blake was "torn in allegiance, divided between word and image" (97).

Behrendt, Stephen C. "Blake's Bible of Hell: Prophecy as Political Program." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 37-52. <WBHC 1950-53>

An examination of the political argument of The Book of Urizen, The Book of Ahania, and The Book of Los against State Religion.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Napoleon Rediivivus." Notes and Queries 38.3 (1991): 293-94. <BBS 366>

Suggests that William Thompson (who edited Stedman's Narrative for Johnson) may have been source of Blake's notion that the original Napoleon had been killed and replaced.

Bidlake, Steven. "Blake, the Sacred, and the French Revolution: Eighteenth-Century Ideology and the Problem of Violence." European Romantic Review 3.1 (1992): 1-20. <BBS 372, WBHC 1627>

Reads "the dynamic of violence at work" in America, Europe, and The Four Zoas.

Bindman, David. “‘My own mind is my own church’: Blake, Paine and the French Revolution.” William Blake. Ed. Gert Schiff et al. Tokyo: Nihon Keizai Shimbun, for the National Museum of Western Art, 1990. 40-51.⁵³⁵ <BBS 308-09>

On Blake’s engagement with Paine in the early 1790s.

Bindman, David. The Shadow of the Guillotine: Britain and the French Revolution. London: British Museum Publications, 1989. <BBS 374>

The catalogue for the exhibition held at the British Museum. The catalogue is very useful in understanding print and visual culture in wake of the French Revolution. Blake is discussed especially on pp. 66-74 and 170-73.

§ Boer, Roland. “William Blake and the Politics of Radical Dissent.” Criticism of Theology: On Marxism and Theology III. Leiden: Brill, 2010. <WBHC 1772>

Brewster, Glen E. “‘Out of Nature’: Blake and the French Revolution Debate.” South Atlantic Review 56 (1991): 7-22. <BBS 425>

Transforming the terms of the French Revolution debates, “Blake will rethink and reenvision the normative concept of nature that is the dominant and most problematic trope of his day” (20).

Bronowski, Jacob. William Blake and the Age of Revolution. New York: Harper and Row, 1965. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1972. <BB #1288, BBS 426, WBHC 1790-91>

First published as William Blake, 1757-1827: A Man without a Mask in 1943 [i.e., 1944] (BB #1288). Revised and reissued under the new title in 1954.

Along with David V. Erdman’s Blake: Prophet Against Empire, an early and important examination of Blake within his historical and political context.

Bundock, Christopher. “Blake’s Nervous System: Hypochondria, Judaism, and Jerusalem.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 150-71. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Reads the body of Albion in Jerusalem through the lens of the long reaction to the 1753 Jewish Naturalization Bill: “Albion thus seems to become the living embodiment of the anti-Semitic image of the Jew that he himself generates” (165).

Butler, Marilyn. “Art for the People in the Revolutionary Decade: Blake, Gillray and Wordsworth.” Romantic Rebels and Reactionaries: English Literature and Its Background 1760-1830. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1981. 39-68. <BBS 430>

Mostly on Marriage, 41-53.

Calè, Luisa. “William Blake’s Pestilence, Sympathy, and the Politics of Feeling.” European Romantic Review 33.4 (2022). Special Issue: “Romanticism and Vision.” Ed. Terry F. Robinson and John Savarese. 515-33. <Blake (2023)>

⁵³⁵ Rpt. in Reflections of Revolution: Images of Romanticism, ed. Alison Yarrington and Kelvin Everest (New York: Routledge, 1993), 112-33. (Note adopted from Crosby.)

“Blake’s scene of pestilence becomes a virtual test of moral sentiments in which viewers confront an ethics of freedom built on sacrifice” (abstract).

Chandler, Eric V. “The Anxiety of Production: Blake’s Shift from Collective Hope to Writing Self.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 53-79. <WBHC 1950-53>

Blake “attempted to find a verbal cohesiveness for revolutionary collectivity” (74).

Castellano, Katey. “‘The Road of Excess Leads to the Palace of Wisdom’: Alternative Economies of Excess in Blake’s Continental Prophecies.” Papers on Language and Literature 42.1 (2006): 3-24. <WBHC 1832>

Blake “makes use of this [antinomian, Dissenting] tradition to criticize the new phenomena of rational liberalism, empirical science, and utilitarian economics” (n.p.).

Clark, Steve, and David Worrall, ed. Blake, Empire, and Nation. London: Palgrave, 2006. <WBHC 1866-69>

The third collection on Blake and history edited by Steve Clark and David Worrall after Historicizing Blake (1994) and Blake in the Nineties (1999).

Clark, Steve, and David Worrall, ed. Blake in the Nineties. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. <WBHC 1863-65>

Complimenting the methodologies argued for in Clark and Worrall’s previous collection, Historicizing Blake (1994), an important set of essays that offer “an assessment of Blake’s own work in the 1790s but also a consideration of the critical debates of the 1990s” (1). The collection also “seeks to explore the parameters of this editorial revisionism and also broader implications evidence in a more general mood of hermeneutic asceticism” (1-2).

Clark, Steve, and David Worrall, ed. Historicizing Blake. London: Macmillan, 1994. <WBHC 1869-71>

An important collection that argues for historically and materially grounded readings of Blake. Clark and Worrall edited two subsequent collections on the same themes, Blake in the Nineties (1999) and Blake, Nation and Empire (2006).

Cogan, Lucy. Blake and the Failure of Prophecy. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023, 2025)>

“[T]here was never any one stable model of prophecy animating Blake’s work, which was instead motivated by a continual urge to reinterpret the effect and significance of prophecy in the world” (4).

Cooper, Andrew. “Apocalypse Now: The Lives of William Blake.” ANQ: A Quarterly Journal of Short Articles, Notes, and Reviews 6.2-3 (1993): 79-89. <WBHC 1883>

“Could it be that recent criticism’s so-called ‘return to history’ is a secular-humanist version of the end of history, when all the past is resurrected and mingles with the present in a liminal time when time shall have ending, an ongoing eschatological present we confusedly term ‘post-modern’?” (79).

Connolly, Tristanne J. "The Authority of the Ancients: Blake and Wilkins' Translation of the Bhagvat-Geeta." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 145-58. <WBHC 1857-62>

On Blake's lost painting, "The Bramins," suggesting that Blake was "a proponent of an Orientalism outmoded by the time of his exhibition in 1809, but exemplified in the 1785 [translation of the Bhagvat-]Geeta" (146). "Instead of the growing imposition of British culture on Indians, [Blake] opts for outdated syncretism which allows him to see Indians and Britons as originally alike (148).

Crafton, Lisa Plummer. "The 'Ancient Voices' of Blake's The French Revolution." The French Revolution Debate in English Literature and Culture. Ed. Lisa Plummer Crafton. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997. 41-57. <WBHC 1893>

"About 'verbal warfare' in The French Revolution (48)" (WBHC 1893).

Crafton, Lisa Plummer. "Blake's Swinish Multitude: The Response to Burke in Blake's The French Revolution." The Friend: Comment on Romanticism 2.1 (Apr. 1993): 1-12. <WBHC 2539>⁵³⁶

"Blake's work resonates with the words and ideas of Burke' (2)" (WBHC 2539).

Crehan, Stewart. Blake in Context. Dublin: Bill and Macmillan, and Atlantic Highlands: Humanities Press, 1984.⁵³⁷ <BBS 444, WBHC 1894-95>

Offers a historically informed Marxist reading of Blake's poetry and art (i.e., Blake's career offers "a particular moment in the class struggle" [1]), but his reflexive identification of Blake as a republican and "English Jacobin" (18), without engaging with the issues raised by Blake's religious enthusiasm (as Mee does in his Dangerous Enthusiasm), or with his antinomianism (as Thompson does in his Witness Against the Beast), dates the study.

Cronin, Richard. "William Blake and Revolutionary Poetry." The Politics of Romantic Poetry: In Search of the Pure Commonwealth. Basingstoke: Macmillan; N.Y.: St. Martin's Press, 2000. 48-60. <WBHC 1897>

On The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Swedenborg, and the Joseph Johnson Circle.

Davies, Keri, and David Worrall. "Inconvenient Truths: Re-historicizing the Politics and Dissent and Antinomianism." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 30-47. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An important essay that challenges the longstanding associations between Blake and religious Dissent.

Davis, Matthew M. "The House of Aumont and Blake's French Revolution." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 56.2 (fall 2022): 38 pars. <Blake (2023)>

⁵³⁶ WBHC switches Crafton's middle and last name and alphabetizes it according.

⁵³⁷ Incorporates Crehan's "Blake's Tyger and the Tygerish Multitude," Literature and History 6.2 (1980), 151-60, <BBS 444>.

Argues that the Aumont in The French Revolution was the royalist Louis-Alexandre-Céleste d'Aumont (1736–1814) and not his revolution-supporting brother, Louis-Marie Guy d'Aumont (1732–99), as suggested by W.H. Stevenson's Complete Poems.

Dent, Shirley. "Thou readst white where I read black": William Blake, the Hymn 'Jerusalem', and the Far Right." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 48-62. <WBHC 1899-1900>

Examines the use of the "Jerusalem" hymn by the political Right: "Blake's 'Jerusalem,' English nationalism, and the rise of identity politics throws out some challenges to Blake scholars that we should not shy away from" (62).

DiSalvo, Jackie, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson, ed. Blake, Politics, and History. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. <WBHC 1950-53>

An important collection of essays contextualizing Blake in his time.

Doskow, Minna. "The Humanized Universe of Blake and Marx." William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 225-40. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Compares the thought of Blake and Marx.

Erdman, David V. Blake: Prophet Against Empire. A Poet's Interpretation of the History of His Own Times. 1954. 3rd ed. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977.⁵³⁸ <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>

A key study that examines Blake within his historical context. Erdman's approach was so influential that historicist readings of Blake are sometimes categorized as "The School of Erdman."

The book and Erdman's legacy in historical scholarship on Blake is considered in the special issue of Studies in Romanticism, ed. Morris Eaves (1982), dedicated to Erdman; in Steven Clark and David Worrall's introduction to their Historicizing Blake (1994); and in Eric K.W. Yu's "Blake as Prophet Against Empire: Erdman's Interpretive Legacy Reexamined," The International Blake Conference: "Blake in the Orient" Conference Programme (2003).

Erdman, David V. "Blake and the Night Sky II: Art Against Armies." Bulletin of Research in the Humanities 84.3 (Autumn 1981) 296-304. <BBS 428, WBHC 1809-10>

In America, Europe, and "A Song of Liberty" from The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, "[t]he question that disturbed Blake [...] was how the ruling 'angels' of Britain managed to launch a revolutionary war in America, in 1775, and another against France, in 1793, and yet keep the minds of English citizens so beclouded as to benumb their powers of protest and opposition" (298-99).

Erdman, David V. "Milton! Thou Shouldst Be Living." Wordsworth Circle 19.1 (1988): 2-8. <BBS 463>

⁵³⁸ Incorporates Erdman's "Blake's Vision of Slavery," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3/4 (1952), 242-52, <BB #802, WBHC 1993>.

Considers Blake's and Wordsworth's invocation of Milton against the backdrop of the political events of 1802.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, Thomas Paine, and Biblical Revolution.” Studies in Romanticism 30.2 (1991): 189-212. <BBS 465-66, WBHC 2003>

With references primarily to Marriage, Urizen, and the annotations to Watson, examines Blake's complicated relationship with Paine and other Enlightenment radicals, such as Joseph Johnson and Mary Wollstonecraft: “The Johnson circle was at once too secular in its liberalism and not radical enough in its revolutionism to satisfy Blake. The biblical revolution of the past had been replaced by a deistic ideology that was in part a revolution against biblical tradition” (212).

Fallon, David. “By a False Wife Brought to the Gates of Death”: Blake, Politics and Transgendered Performances.” Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 186-98. <WBHC 1801-03>

Reading the prose sketch “Samson,” Europe, and Jerusalem, argues that “[c]haracters and situations in which conventional sexuality is queered help Blake to complicate and interrogate traditional political discourse and the power relations it mediates, even if he may not be able fully to escape its presumptions” (187).

Ferber, Michael. “Blake’s America and the Birth of Revolution.” History and Myth: Essays on English Romantic Literature. Ed. Stephen C. Behrendt. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1990. 73-99. <BBS 363>

On Blake’s idea of revolution, with a reading of America.

Fisher, Peter F. The Valley of Vision: Blake as Prophet and Revolutionary. Ed. Northrop Frye. Toronto: Toronto University Press, 1961. 1971. <BB #1611, WBHC 2021>

“A study of Blake’s context as an intellectual revolutionary” (BB #1611).

Fallon, David. “she Cuts his Heart Out at his Side”: Blake, Christianity and Political Virtue.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 84-104. <WBHC 2113-15>

Examines the conflict between “republican discourse and Christian principles” (84) in Europe, The [First] Book of Urizen, and Jerusalem and its implication for gender.

Fallon, David. “That I may awaken Albion from his long & cold repose”: William Blake Addresses the Nation.” Transnational England: Home and Abroad, 1780-1860. Ed. Monika Class and Terry F. Robinson. Newcastle: Cambridge Scholar, 2009. 146-66. <WBHC 2011>

“This essay will explore some of the complexities and contradictions in Blake’s attempt to construct a subject position from which he as an artist and the prophetic character Los could behold, fashion, and address the nation” (147). Largely on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem.

Fauvet, Paul. “Mind-forg’d manacles—Blake and Ideology.” red letters: Communist Party Literature Journal 6 (19770: 16-39. <BBS 469>

“About ‘ideological apparatuses’ (16), particularly in ‘Holy Thursday’ from Innocence (25-39)” (BBS 469). Responded to by Edward Larrissy.

Ferber, Michael. The Social Vision of William Blake. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1985.⁵³⁹ Rpt. Princeton Legacy Library, 2014. <BBS 471, WBHC 2016-17>

Focusing on the illuminated books, an examination of Blake’s thought about the individual and society, influenced by Marxism (the first two chapters are concerned with ideology), but the study also engages deeply with Christian and especially antinomian thought. Ferber builds to Blake’s notion of “apocatastasis, or the restoration of all things” (xi).

Fulford, Tim, Debbie Lee, and Peter J. Kitson. Britain’s Little Black Boys and the Technologies of Benevolence.” Literature, Science and Exploration in the Romantic Era: Bodies of Knowledge. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004. 228-70. <WBHC 2045>

A very useful examination of the Romantic-era campaigns on behalf of chimney sweepers and their relationship in the campaigns’ rhetoric with Black slaves. The “Chimney Sweeper,” and “The Little Black Boy,” and “Holy Thursday” from Innocence are discussed in detail on pp. 266-70.

Gordon, Robert C. “Apocalypse Improvised: The Prophecies of William Blake.” Arms and the Imagination: Essays on War, Politics, and Anglophone Culture. Lanham: Hamilton Books, 2009. 299-327. <WBHC 2091>

On Blake’s critique of militarism.

Gravil, Richard. “Blake’s America.” Romantic Dialogues: Anglo-American Continuities, 1776-1862. New York: St. Martin’s Press, 2000. 23-31.⁵⁴⁰

A section in the chapter, “Romantic Americas” (23-46), considers Blake’s representation of America in America.

Gross, David. Infinite Indication: Teaching Dialectical Vision and Blake’s The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. College English 42 (1986): 175-86. <BBS 495>

Using Blake to teach Marxist dialectic.

Gross, David. “mind-forg’d manacles’: Hegemony and Counter-Hegemony in Blake.” The Eighteenth-Century 27.1 (1986): 3-25. <BBS 496>

Suggests that Blake anticipates Gramsci’s notion of hegemony, highlighting “London”; the Notebook poem, “How to know Love from Deceit”; and the Lambeth prophecies.

Gurton-Wachter, Lily. “Blake’s Blush: Wartime Shame in ‘London’ and Jerusalem.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 126-49. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

⁵³⁹ Incorporates Ferber’s “Blake’s Idea of Brotherhood,” PMLA 93.3 (1978), 438-47, <BBS 471>.

⁵⁴⁰ Not recorded in Blake or WBHC.

“Blake, I argue, describes a general, national shame that is dispersed, displaced, and collective, that belongs to no one in particular and yet infects everyone, and that is a symptom of—but also a way to critique—the disease called war” (128).

Hampton, Christopher. “Blake’s Witness: Keeping the Divine in Vision in Time of Trouble.” The Ideology of the Text. Milton Keynes and Philadelphia: Open University Press, 1990. 55-97. <BBS 500, WBHC 2124>

“A Marxist analysis” (WBHC 2124).

Harley, Alexis, Claire Knowles, and Chris Murray. “Prophet against Empire? William Blake in Australia.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 56.4 (spring 2023): 32 pars. <Blake (2024)>

“In this essay, we turn to the reception, reproduction, and revisioning of Blake in the settler colonies of Australia, and we find a Blake whose work, mediated through a range of editorial and curatorial lenses, proves unexpectedly amenable to conflicting Australian desires both to affirm cultural fealty to England and empire and to refuse it” (par. 1).

Harrison, John R. ““Empire is no More”: William Blake, Tom Paine and the American Revolution.” Literature and History 7.1 (1998): 16-32. <WBHC 2131>

“Blake withdrew The French Revolution himself, not out of fear of prosecution, but because he had decided to publish a much more seditious work on the American Revolution” (17).

Heffernan, James A.W. “Politics and Freedom: Refractions of Blake in Joyce Cary and Allen Ginsberg.” Romantic and Modern: Revaluations of Literary Tradition. Ed. George Bornstein. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Pres, 1977. 177-95. <BBS 504>

Beginning with the Vietnam War, suggests that “Blake remains enduringly relevant” “because he turned politics into myth, and thus created a paradigm for all poet who would write of politics without ceasing to be poets” (178) and outlines how Cary and Ginsberg followed Blake’s example.

Heinzelman, Kurt. “William Blake and ‘The Price of Experience.’” The Economics of the Imagination. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1980. 110-33. <BBS 504>

An examination of Blake’s ideas of money and economics. Interestingly, Heinzelman reads the Notebook phrase, “23 May 1810 found the Word Golden” in light of the currency crisis that the 1810 Bullion Committee established by Parliament sought to address.

Hobson, Christopher Z. The Chained Boy: Orc and Blake’s Idea of Revolution. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 1999.⁵⁴¹ <WBHC 2155, Blake (2003)>

⁵⁴¹ Incorporates Hobson’s “The Myth of Blake’s ‘Orc Cycle,’” in Blake, Politics, and History, ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson (1998), <WBHC 1950-53>, and “Unbound from Wrath: Orc and Blake’s Crisis of Vision in The Four Zoas,” Studies in English Literature, 33.4 (1993), 725-54, <WBHC 2155-56>.

An important study for both its challenge to Northrop Frye's influential idea of the Orc Cycle, in which revolutionaries are destined to become tyrants, and its early Queer approach to Blake.

James, John Patrick. "Blake's Debt: Artisanship and the Future of Labor." Literature Compass 19.3-4 (2022): 15 pp. <Blake (2023)>

"Investigates William Blake's poetic response to the problems of religious and financial debt within the context of his own environmentally compromised era" (abstract).

Johnston, Kenneth R. "Blake's Cities: Romantic Forms of Urban Renewal." Blake's Visionary Forms Dramatic. Ed. David V. Erdman and John E. Grant. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1970. 413-42. <BB #1580, BBS 464, WBHC 1994-95>

Examines how cities are represented in Blake's works.

Keach, William. "Blake, Violence, and Visionary Politics." Representing the French Revolution: Literature, Historiography, and Art. Ed. James A. W. Heffernan. Hanover, N.H.: University Press of New England, 1992. 24-40. <WBHC 2246>⁵⁴²

On Blake's depiction of and theory of violence.

Kettle, Arnold. "The Mental Traveller." Arena 3 (1949): 46-52.⁵⁴³ <BB #2004, BBS 534>

"A Marxist interpretation of Blake's poem" (BB #2004). "The cycle represented in the poem is acquisitive society" (54).

Kettle, Arnold. "The Progressive Tradition in Bourgeois Culture." [Literature and Liberation: Selected Essays \[of\] Arnold Kettle](#). Ed. Graham Martin and W. R. Owens. Manchester: Manchester University Press; New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988. 21-34.⁵⁴⁴

Ends the essay discussing "London" and Blake's place in a progressive tradition (pp. 31-33).

Joshua, Essaka. "May Day in the City: William Blake." The Romantics and the May Day Tradition. Aldershot and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2007. 89-113. <WBHC 2218>

On "Blake's use of rural May Day images" in Songs, with Blake's knowledge of May Day traditions framed by his engraving, "May-Day in London," for Wit's Magazine.

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and Ideology." red letters: Communist Party Literature Journal 8 (1978): 63-66.⁵⁴⁵ <BBS 544>

A critique of Fauvet's reading of 'Holy Thursday' (BBS 544).

⁵⁴² Incorporated into Keach's Arbitrary Power: Romanticism, Language, Politics (2004), 122-58, <WBHC 2246>.

⁵⁴³ Rpt. in Kettle's [Literature and Liberation: Selected Essays \[of\] Arnold Kettle](#), ed. Graham Martin and W. R. Owens, (Manchester: Manchester University Press; New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988), 51-58, <BBS 534>. This version is cited in the annotation.

⁵⁴⁴ Kettle's collection is noted in BBS for his essay on "The Mental Traveller," but his discussion of "London" is not.

⁵⁴⁵ Incorporated into Larrissy's William Blake (1985), <BBS 544-45, WBHC 2312-13>.

Larrissy, Edward. "A Description of Blake: Ideology, Form, Influence." 1789: Reading, Writing, Revolution: Proceedings of the Essex Conference on the Sociology of Literature July 1981. Ed. Francis Barker et al. Colchester, 1982. 101-09.⁵⁴⁶ <BBS 544>

"Blake's works 'pick up'—or if you like 'lean on,' in a kind of anaclasis—those features of Enlightenment ideology that consort well with the libertarian, communitarian Christian tradition" (102).

Lee, Tara. "[Vital Heat and the Organized Body: Burke, Blake, The French Revolution and The \[First\] Book of Urizen](#)." European Romantic Review 34.5 (2023): 527-48. <Blake (2024)>

"This article puts Blake in intimate dialogue with Burke, Sieyès, and other revolutionary and reactionary writers who evocatively updated the body politic metaphor to describe a radically changing political landscape" (abstract).

Lee-Six, Edward. "Blake's Compasses: Materialist Criticism and Romanticism as a Structure of Feeling." Interdisciplinary Literary Studies 24.1 (2022): 54-79. <Blake (2023)>

A Marxist reading of Blake's and Romanticism's relationship to empiricism and capitalism, using Raymond Williams's phrase, "structure of feeling."

Leveton, Jacob Henry. "Of 'Combustion, blast, vapour, and cloud': William Blake's Urizen as Steam Engine, Albion Mill, & Notes Towards a Materialist Method for the Anthropocene." Essays in Romanticism 29.2 (2022): 131-54. <Blake (2023)>

The depictions of pollution in The [First] Book of Urizen "invites readers to make connections with Albion Mill as a resonant site of industrial production where steam engines were first deployed in a process of mass manufacture in Romantic-period London" (abstract).

Lincoln, Andrew. "Blake, America, and Enlightenment." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 63-82. <WBHC 1899-1900>

"[E]xplores some of the ways in which Blake's America a Prophecy (1793) can be seen to allegorize historical events" (63) in relationship to Enlightenment historians.

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake, America, and the World." Romantic Generations: Essays in Honor of Robert F. Gleckner. Ed. Ghislaine McDayter, Guinn Batten, and Barry Milligan. Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press and London: Associated University Presses, 2001. 83-101. <WBHC 2364>

Countering a "Eurocentric reading" (83) of the Continental Prophecies originating with Erdman's Prophet Against Empire that highlights America and the American Revolution, Makdisi suggests "that to stabilize America into a geographical allegory—in which geographical America allegorically represents freedom—is not just to do it an injustice: it is to some extent to do violence to this unstable text" (91).

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake and Romantic Imperialism." British Romanticism: Criticism and Debates. Ed. Mark Canuel. Abingdon: Routledge, 2015. <Blake (2017)>

⁵⁴⁶ Incorporated into Larrissy's William Blake (1985), <BBS 544-45, WBHC 2312-13>.

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake and the Ontology of Empire." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 12-26. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers Blake's complex relationship to Orientalism and Empire, with references to his view of the Qur'an (14).

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake's Metropolitan Radicalism." Romantic Metropolis: The Urban Scene of British Culture, 1780-1840. Ed. James Chandler and Kevin Gilmartin. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2005. 113-31. <WBHC 2364>

"Blake's version of radicalism [...] involves new ways of imagining past, present, and future within a metropolitan space that is seen no longer as opposed to an exterior world, but rather as opening out to it, and as the terrain on which historical transformation must be mapped (114). Focuses largely on America and Marriage.

Makdisi, Saree. William Blake and the Impossible History of the 1790s. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2003. <WBHC 2365-66>

An influential study focused on the illuminated books of the 1790s and Blake's critique of the Enlightenment, the factory system, and colonialism.

Makdisi, Saree. "William Blake and the Universal Empire." Romantic Imperialism: Universal Empire and the Culture of Modernity. Cambridge: University Press, 1998. 154-72. <WBHC 2366>

Examines "London" and the later epics to posit Blake's relationship to imperial time and space: "The system of relations defining the Universal Empire is virtually planetary in scale, forming one interlocking network" (157).

Makdisi, Saree, and Jon Mee. "'Mutual interchange': Life, Liberty and Community." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 13-29. <WBHC 1899-1900>

A dialogue between Makdisi and Mee over Blake's politics in relationship to both his time and ours.

Manquis, Robert M. "Holy Savagery and Wild Justice: English Romanticism and the Terror." Studies in Romanticism 28.3 (1989): 365-95. <BBS 558>

On reactions to the Terror in France by Wordsworth, Coleridge, and Blake (386-90).

Mann, Annika. "Propagation: Regeneration and William Blake's 'Visible Form.'" Reading Contagion: The Hazards of Reading in the Age of Print. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2018. 109-49. <Blake (2020)>

Considers The Book of Urizen within the political contexts of contagion in the 1790s.

Mauger, Matthew. William Blake and the Visionary Law: Prophecy, Legislation and Constitution. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer Nature, 2023. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

A study of Blake's notion of law in Eternity that seeks to temper antinomian readings of Blake. Examines most of Blake's prophetic poetry, as well as Marriage and the Songs.

McClenahan, Catherine L. "Blake's Erin, The United Irish and 'sexual Machines.'" Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 149-70. <WBHC 2095-98>

On Erin in Jerusalem and Blake's views on Irish nationalism, suggesting that the figure on the right side of the titlepage of Jerusalem is Erin.

McGann, Jerome J. "Did Blake betray the French Revolution? A Dialogue of the Mind with itself: Interlocutors: Anne Mack and J.J. Rome." Presenting Poetry, Composition, Publication, Reception. Ed. Howard Erskine-Hill and Richard A. McCabe. Cambridge: University Press, 1995. 117-37. <WBHC 2387-88>

Wrestles with the question of Blake's political engagement.

Mee, Jon. Dangerous Enthusiasm: William Blake and the Culture of Radicalism in the 1790s. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1992. <BBS 571, WBHC 2392-94>

Focused on Blake's early illuminated books, a key study of Blake's relationship to religious enthusiasts of the era who shared his suspicion of Enlightenment-grounded radicalism. The study recasts Blake's relationship to millenarianism and to the polite circle of Joseph Johnson. There is also an important chapter on Norse mythology, druids, and British Antiquities, with discussions of Ossian. Mee was the first to associate Blake with Claude Levi Strauss's notion of the bricoleur.

Middleton, Peter. "The Revolutionary Poetics of William Blake: Part I: The Critical Tradition." 1789: Reading, Writing, Revolution: Proceedings of the Essex Conference on the Sociology of Literature July 1981. Ed. Francis Barker et al. Colchester 1982. <BBS 573>

"The best way to read Blake in our historical situation is through the practices of recent poets, to read them as explorations of similar problems, conjunctures and issues, especially those also involved with the maintenance of small independent presses and publishing, like Blake" (115).

Middleton, Peter. "The Revolutionary Poetics of William Blake: Part II: Silence, Syntax, and Spectres." Oxford Literary Review 9.1 (1983): 35-51. <BBS 573>

Blake's prophetic works have been silent in the sense that they "have arrived in our history without having acted in it for much of the time since they were written, unlike the texts of other Romantic poets, which have been productive in our history since their inception" (35).

Miner, Paul. "'Bad' Queens, 'Good' Queens, and George III (as His Satanic Majesty)." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 48.4 (spring 2015): pars. 27. <WBHC 1743>

Traces allusions "as they relate to Blake's condemnation of royalty" (par. 1).

Miner, Paul. "Blake's London: Times & Spaces." Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 279-316.⁵⁴⁷ <WBHC 2713-15>

⁵⁴⁷ Rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005), <WBHC 2217-18>.

On Blake's depictions of London and its various locales.

Morkan, Joel. “Blake’s ‘Ancient Forests of Europe.’” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 6.4 (spring 1973): 93. <BB #1217.119>

Suggests that “Ancient Forests of Europe” (l.93, E 290) is tied to restrictions on the use of forests by peasants.

Morton, Timothy. “Romantic Disaster Ecology: Blake, Shelley, Wordsworth.” Romanticism and Disaster. Ed. Jacques Khalip and David Collings. Romantic Circles Praxis Series (2012).⁵⁴⁸

In “The Tyger,” “Blake comes close to articulating a theory of disaster that is highly relevant to this essay’s proposal that we think beyond disaster. This is unsurprising, since his work is ideology critique through and through, and since the materialism and capitalism that spawn disaster, and disaster thinking, were operational by the time he was writing” (n.p).

Mulvihill, James. “‘The History of All Times and Places’: William Blake and Historical Representation in America and Europe.” Clio 29.4 (summer 2000): 373-94. ⁵⁴⁹<WBHC 2442>

Focusing on America and Europe, argues that, for Blake, history is about “mental fight” (394).

Niimi, Hatsuko. “Blake’s Conception of Law: Some Indications of Its Growth (1788-93).” Blake’s Dialogic Texts. Tokyo: Keio University Press, 2006. 47-71.⁵⁵⁰ <WBHC 2460-63>

“My purpose [. . .] is to consider how Blake to hold the changed idea of law” (48).

O’Regan, Keith. Towards a Productive Aesthetics: Contemporary and Historical Interventions in Blake and Brecht. Leiden and Boston: Brill, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

“[C]ompare[s] the political-aesthetic strategies of William Blake (1757-1827) and Bertolt Brecht (1898-1956)” (abstract). The chapters on Blake appear to focus on the Songs and Milton.

Otto, Peter. “From the English to the French Revolution: The Body, the World and Experience in Locke’s Essay, Bentley’s ‘A Prospect of Vapourland’ and Blake’s Songs.” British Romanticism in European Perspective: Into the Eurozone. Ed. Steve Clark and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2015. 210-29. <Blake (2019)>

Suggests “that Blake’s work, along with [John] Locke’s Essay [on Human Understanding] and [Richard] Bentley’s ‘Vapourland,’ can profitably be read as engaging with a pan-European phenomenon, namely the gradual shift of emphasis [. . .] from the king to the people, and from the sovereign to the sovereign subject” (211).

Otto, Peter. “Politics, Aesthetics, and Blake’s ‘bounding line.’” Word and Image 26.2 (Apr.-June 2010): 172-85. <WBHC 2491>

⁵⁴⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

⁵⁴⁹ Rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005), <WBHC 2217-18>.

⁵⁵⁰ Originally published in Toho Gakuen Daigaku Kenkyu Kiyo: Faculty Bulletin, Toho Gakuen School of Music 10 (1984), 103-28, <BSJ 82>.

"I argue that by using the opposition between history and psychology, or politics and aesthetics, as a framework for reading Blake's oeuvre, we misconstrue as a retreat from politics his attempt radically to revise it" (174).

Paley, Morton D. "To Defend the Bible in this Year 1798 Would Cost a Man His Life." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 32.2 (fall 1998): 32-43. <WBHC 1674>

A lucid overview of the annotations to Watson and why Blake would have defended the Deist, Thomas Paine.

Paulson, Ronald. "Blake's Lamb-Tiger." Representations of Revolution \(1789-1820\). New Haven: Yale University Press, 1983.88-110.⁵⁵¹ <BBS 600>

Reads the illuminated books of the early 1790s as a response to Burke's Reflections.

Paulson, Ronald. "Burke's Sublime and the Representation of Revolution." Culture and Politics from Puritanism to the Enlightenment. Ed. Perez Zagorin. Berkeley, Los Angeles, London: University of California Press, 1980. 241-70. <WBHC 2509>

On Blake's depiction of revolution in America largely in relationship to Burke and Rowlandson.

Phillips, Michael. "Blake and the Terror 1792-1793." The Library 16 (1994): 263-97. <WBHC 2519-20>

Important and substantial article on Blake in the context of William Pitt's crackdown on seditious writing, with discussions of the Songs of Experience, "Our End is Come," "A Song of Liberty," the Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Blake's time in Lambeth, and the publication of Blake's prospectus, "To the Public." Reproduces Marriage copy L.

Phillips, Michael. "Flames in the Night Sky: Blake, Paine and the Meeting of the Society of Loyal Britons, October 10th, 1793." Bulletin de la Société d'Etudes Anglo-Amerindiennes des XVII et XVIII Siècles 44 (1997): 93-110. <WBHC 2520-21>

A detailed examination of the Loyalists in Lambeth who were active at the same time Blake printed his 1793 Prospectus.

Piquet, François. "Shadows of Prophecy: Blake and Millenarian Ideology." Yearbook of English Studies 19 (1989): 28-35. <BBS 607>

Positions America and Europe in currents of millenarian thought.

Punter, David. "Blake: 'Active Evil' and 'Passive Good.'" Romanticism and Ideology: Studies in English Writing 1765-1830. Ed. David Aers, Jonathan Cook, and David Punter. London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1981. 7-26. <BBS 610>

"Do the texts [of Blake] advocate a process of individual liberation, or one of revolutionary social action? If both are advocated simultaneously, what are the ⁵⁵¹ Reworks material originally published in Paulson's "Blake's Revolutionary Tiger," Articulate Images: The Sister Arts from Hogarth to Tennyson, ed. Richard Wendorf (1983), which was republished with same title in William Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience, ed. Harold Bloom (1987).

mechanism by means of which the dialectical thrust of the argument is maintained?”
Considers an array of works.

Punter, David. “Blake, Marxism, and Dialectic.” Literature & History 6 (1977): 219-42.⁵⁵² <BBS 610>

A comparison of the figures that attempts to recognize their differences.

Punter, David. “Blake and the Shape of London.” Criticism 23.1 (1981): 1-23. <BBS 610>

Analyzes the later epics in light of factual details regarding the city of London.

Punter, David. “Legends of the Animated Body: Blake's Albion and the Body and Soul of the Nation.” Romanticism 1.2 (1995): 161-76. <WBHC 2551>

“[A]ddresses some aspects of the figure of Albion as it recurs throughout Blake's Prophetic Books” and “is concerned [...] with the concept of an authenticating body of legendry and its role in a national culture” (161).

Richey, William. “The French Revolution: Blake's Epic Dialogue with Edmund Burke.” ELH 59.4 (1992): 817-37. ⁵⁵³ <WBHC 2584>

In The French Revolution, “Blake challenges the underlying assumptions of Burke's counterrevolutionary text [Reflections on the French Revolution (1790)]” (817).

Richey, William. “‘The Lion & Wolf shall cease’: Blake's America as a Critique of Counter-Revolutionary Violence.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 196-211. <WBHC 1950-53>

“Blake retells the story of the Revolution to disassociate it from the bloody series of events that seemed to bear out Burke's narrative and to attribute them instead to the inherent militarism of monarchical government” (208).

Rix, Robert. “Healing the Spirit: William Blake and Magnetic Religion.” Romanticism on the Net (25 Feb. 2002): 37 pars. <WBHC 2593>

“[T]race[s] Blake's intellectual companionship with this renegade branch of Magnetism in relation to the development of some central metaphors and narrative structures in his works” (abstract).

Rix, Robert. William Blake and the Cultures of Radical Christianity. Hampshire: Ashgate, 2007. <WBHC 2593-94>

A very useful study for understanding Blake's relationship to both Enlightenment-grounded radicals and Swedenborgians, especially in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Rosso, G. A. “Empire of the Sea: Blake's ‘King Edward the Third’ and English Imperial Poetry.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 251-72. <WBHC 1950-53>

⁵⁵² The essay builds on the argument of Punter's “Blake: Creative and Uncreative Labour,” Studies in Romanticism 16.4 (1977), 535-61, <BBS 610>.

⁵⁵³ Partly incorporated in Richey's Blake's Altering Aesthetic (1997), <WBHC 2583-84>.

Considers Blake's dramatic fragment in Poetical Sketches in the context of the “imperial crisis of 1778-79” (268).

Rosso, G.A. The Religion of Empire: Political Theology in Blake's Prophetic Symbolism. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2016.⁵⁵⁴ <Blake (2017, 2019, 2020)>

An important examination of the figures of Rahab and Tirzah in the later works.

Schorer, Mark. William Blake: The Politics of Vision. New York: Henry Holt and Company, 1946. New York: Vintage Books, 1959.⁵⁵⁵ <BB #2672, WBHC 2654-55>

An early and important examination of Blake's political context and his own radical views.

Schuchard, Martha Keith. A Concatenation of Conspiracies: “Irish” William Blake and Illuminist Freemasonry in 1798. Alexandria, VA: Plumbstone Academic, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2023)>

Considers Blake's knowledge of antijacobin conspiracy theories surrounding “Ancient” freemasonry, which were offered by Abbé Augustin Barruel and John Robinson, and his and his circle's relationship with Irish radicals.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “Blake's Tiriel and the Regency Crisis: Lifting the Veil on a Royal Masonic Scandal.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 115-35. <WBHC 1950-53>

Reads Tiriel as an allegory of the Regency Crisis.

Simpson, David. “The Struggle with Albion's Angels: William Blake.” Romanticism, Naturalism and the Revolt Against Theory. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1993. 159-67. <WBHC 2677>

“The Book of Urizen . . . does then seem to suggest a specific relation between the fantasy of rational control and the problems of French politics’ (163)” (WBHC 2677).

Stauffer, Andrew M. Anger, Revolution, and Romanticism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2005. 75-86. <WBHC 2702>

Argues that “Blake's work embraces revolution as a correlative (perhaps even a consequence) of an allegiance to particular passions and emotional trajectories” (75). Blake is discussed most directly in the chapter, “Inflammatory Reactions,” but is mentioned throughout. A Poison Tree” and the angry tone in his poetry and annotations are discussed.

⁵⁵⁴ Incorporates Rosso's “The Religion of Empire: Blake's Rahab in Its Biblical Contexts,” Prophetic Character, ed. Alexander S. Gourlay (2002), 287-326, <WBHC 2095-98>, and “The Last Strumpet: Harlotry and Hermaphroditism in Blake's Rahab,” Blake, Gender and Culture, ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly (2012), 25-36, <WBHC 1800-01>.

⁵⁵⁵ Incorporates Schorer's “Blake as a Religious Poet,” Sewanee Review 54 (1946), 241-49, <BB #2664>; “Magic as an Instrumental Value: Blake and Yeats,” Hemispheres 2.5 (1945), 49-54, <BB #2666>; “The Mask of William Blake,” Yale Review 31 (1942), 747-63, <BB #2667>; “Mythology (For the Study of Blake),” Kenyon Review 4 (1942), 366-80, <BB #2668>; “Swedenborg and Blake,” Modern Philology 36 (1938), 157-58, <BB #2669>.

Tomlins, Christopher. “Revolutionary Justice in Brecht, Conrad, and Blake.” Law and Literature 21.2 (summer 2009): 185-213. <WBHC 2774>

Uses Bertolt Brecht’s Threepenny Novel, Joseph Conrad’s Heart of Darkness, and William Blake’s poem “London” “to show that literature as practice lends itself to the strategy of explanation that [Walter] Benjamin termed ‘constellation’ in ways that are suggestive of how legal historians in turn might employ constellation in approaching questions of time and justice” (abstract).

Thompson, E.P. “London.” Interpreting Blake. Ed. Michael Phillips. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1978. 5-31.⁵⁵⁶ <BBS 603-04, WBHC 2521-22>

Important essay on the political context of “London” and its use of “charter’d.” Includes an appendix considering the influence of Swedenborg on the poem.

Ward, Aileen. “The Forging of Orc: Blake and Idea of Revolution.” Tri-Quarterly 23-24 (1972): 204-27.⁵⁵⁷ <BB #A2918, BBS 671>

“Blake’s use of the word ‘revolution’ is conversative” (BB #A2918).

Ward, Aileen. “Romantic Castles and Real Prisons: Wordsworth, Blake, and Revolution.” Wordsworth Circle 30 (1999): 3-15. <WBHC 2833-34>

“[W]ith the passing of the historical crisis of the Revolution the imagery of castle and prison was depoliticized in both Wordsworth—for a time at least—and Blake, to change into a wider symbolism of the human condition itself” (12).

Welch, Dennis M. “Blake, the Famine of 1795, and the Economics of Vision.” European Romantic Review 18 (2007): 597-622. <WBHC 2843>

“This study shows that a significant historical context underlying Blake’s prophecies of 1795 was the famine in that year and the era’s pervasive discourse on market economics” (abstract).

§ Whittaker, Jason. “‘The poetical vigour of history’: Blake’s Use of Milton’s History of Britain.” Blake Journal 8 (2004): 50-63. <WBHC 1753>

Williams, Nicholas M. Ideology and Utopia in the Poetry of William Blake. Cambridge: University Press, 1998. <WBHC 2866>

Reads Blake’s literary works between the Songs and Jerusalem in conjunction with different utopian texts: the Songs with Rousseau’s Emile; Visions of the Daughters of Albion with Wollstonecraft’s Vindication of the Rights of Woman; America, The Song of Los, and The Four Zoas with Burke’s Reflections on the French Revolution, Milton with Paine’s Rights of Man; and Jerusalem with the writings of Robert Owen.

⁵⁵⁶ Pp. 5-8 rpt. as “The Ways in Which Change in ‘London,’” William Blake: Comprehensive Research and Study Guide, ed. Harold Bloom (Broomall, PA: Chelsea House, 2003), 49-51, <WBHC 1766-70>, ⁵⁵⁷ Rpt. in Literature in Revolution, ed. George Abbott White and Charles Newman (1972), 204-27, <BBS 671>.

Worrall, David. “Blake's Jerusalem and the Visionary History of Britain.” Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (spring 1977): 189-216. <BBS 649>

On Jerusalem's use of British myth and history.

Worrall, David. “Resistance and the Conditions of Discourse in the Early 1800s.” Radical Culture: Discourse, Resistance and Surveillance, 1790-1820. Hemel Hempstead, Herts.: Harvester Wheatsheaf / Simon and Schuster, 1992. 43-75. <BBS 684-85, WBHC 2882>

The chapter contains two sections on Blake. The first, “The 1800 London Bread Riots and William Blake” (43-47), juxtaposes Blake's move to Felpham with the concurrent break riots in London. The second, “William Blake's Indictment for Sedition, 1803” (67-75) considers Blake's trial.

Worrall, David. “William Bryan, Another Anti-Swedenborgian Visionary Engraver of 1789.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.1 (summer 2000): 14-22. <WBHC 1682>

Detailed description of William Bryan, a one-time copper-plate printer, (anti-) Swedenborgian, member of the illuminist Society of Avignon, and follower of Richard Brothers. Corrects and adds to Worrall's early account of Bryan in “Blake and 1790s Plebian Radical Culture.”

Wright, Julia. Blake, Nationalism, and the Politics of Alienation. Athens: Ohio University Press, 2004.⁵⁵⁸ <WBHC 2885-86>

An important study of Blake and ideology that surveys most of the poetry from Poetical Sketches to Jerusalem, including The Laocoön.

Wright, Julia. “Greek & Latin Slaves of the Sword’: Rejecting the Imperial Nation in Blake's Milton.” Milton and the Imperial Vision. Ed. Balachandra Rajan and Elizabeth Sauer. Pittsburgh: Duquesne University Press, 1999. 255-72. <WBHC 2886>

“[E]xplore[s] Blake's use of Milton, the new national bard, as an emblem for cultural complicity in and corruption by the imperial project for which the classical nations provided the type. In Milton; A Poem in Two Books [...], Blake begins by representing Milton as an emblematic national poet who has been infected by classical culture (a culture identified with Satan in Milton), and closes by envisaging the poet's apocalyptic purification” (256).

⁵⁵⁸ Incorporates Wright's “The Medium, the Message, and the Line in Blake's Laocoön,” Mosaic 33.2 (Jun. 2000), 101-24, <WBHC 2886>, and “And None Shall Gather the Leaves': Unbinding the Voice in Blake's America and Europe,” European Romantic Review 7 (1996), 61-84, <WBHC 2884-85>.

Psychology and Psychoanalytic Criticism

Introductions

Punter, David. "Blake and Psychology." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 167-85. <WBHC 2867-68>

While highlighting important psychoanalytic studies of Blake, such as Christine Gallant's Blake and the Assimilation of Chaos (1978), Diana Hume George's Blake and Freud (1980), and Mark Bracher's essay "Rouzing the Faculties" in Critical Paths (1987), also discusses Blake as a writer addressing psychoanalytic questions.

Studies

Adams, Will W. "Love, Open Awareness, and Authenticity: A Conversation with William Blake and D.W. Winnicott." Journal of Humanistic Psychology 46.1 (2006): 9-25. <WBHC 1477>

"By reading Blake's work and life in light Winnicott, and explicating Winnicott's theory of development and psychotherapy in light of Blake, I hope to inspire a fruitful inquiry into the interpermeation of love, openness, and authenticity" (10).

Adams, Will W. "William Blake's Integral Psychology: Reading Blake and Ken Wilber Together." Journal of Transpersonal Psychology 38.1 (2006): 55-72. <WBHC 1477>

"Guided by Wilber's model, the article demonstrates that Blake created an integral ('all quadrant, all level') vision of existence and body of artwork" (abstract).

Baker, Samuel, et al. "Romanticism and Consciousness, Revisited: A Roundtable Discussion." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 65.4 (2023): 422-45. <Blake (2024)>

Blake is referenced.

Bowman, Marcia Brown. "William Blake: A Study of His Doctrine of Art." The Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 10.1 (Sep. 1951): 53-66. <BB #1267>⁵⁵⁹

Examines Blake in relationship to the work on mysticism by the French psychologist Théodule Ribot (1839-1916).

Bracher, Mark. "Rouzing the Faculties: Lacanian Psychoanalysis and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell in the Reader." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 168-203. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

A Lacanian reading of Marriage.

Buchsbaum, Julianne. "Abjection and the Melancholic Imagination: Towards a Poststructuralist Psychoanalytic Reading of Blake's The Book of Urizen." Romanticism and Victorianism on the Net 56 (Nov. 2009): 21 pars. <WBHC 1806>

Applies Julia Kristeva's idea of abjection to The Book of Urizen.

Cox, Stephen. "Self as Creative Genius: William Blake." "The Stranger Within Thee": The Concepts of the Self in Late-Eighteenth-Century Literature." 127-56. <BBS 444>

⁵⁵⁹ Not recorded as a collection by WBHC.

On Blake's notion of self in light of late eighteenth-century concepts of genius and sensibility.

Crammer, Patricia. "The Role of Ahania's Lament in Blake's Book of Ahania: A Psychoanalytic Study." The Journal of English and Germanic Philology 83.4 (1984): 522-33. <BBS 444>

A Jungian reading, suggesting that "the mode of being Ahania describes contains all the fertility, exuberance, and joy lacking in Urizen's fallen state" (531).

Dawson, Terence. "Here I Stand: Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell as Confessional Writing." Jung Journal: Culture and Psyche 6.2 (spring 2012): 43-67. <WBHC 1930-31>

"Drawing upon various aspects of Jungian theory, this article suggests that Blake is far more interested in establishing the precise nature of his own convictions and situates The Marriage within the tradition of confessional writing" (abstract).

Dawson, Terence. "A Firm Perswasion': God, Art, and Responsibility in Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell." Jung Journal 7.2 (2013): 62-77. <Blake (2017)>

Considers Blake's use of the imago dei from a Jungian perspective.

Dawson, Terence. "Myth and the Creative Imagination in The Book of Urizen." International Journal of Jungian Studies 4.2 (2012): 87-103. <Blake (2012)>

Show how The Book of Urizen "broadens our understanding of the nature of unconscious processes" (abstract).

Dickstein, Morris. "The Price of Experience: Blake's Reading of Freud." The Literary Freud: Mechanism of Defense and the Poetic Will. Ed. Joseph H. Smith. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1980. 67-111. <BBS 453>

A psychoanalytical reading of the Songs of Experience. "It is scarcely an accident that the gradual discovery of Blake in the twentieth century parallels the gradual ascendancy of Freud" (109).

Digby, George Wingfield. Symbol and Image in William Blake. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1957. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1967. <BB #1488, BBS 453, WBHC 1939-40>

A Jungian interpretation of Blake's art.

DiSalvo, Jackie. "The Future of an Illusion and the Imagining of the Future." Explorations: The Age of the Enlightenment. Ed. J.E. Riehl. Lafayette: Levy Humanities Series, 1987. 58-84. <BBS 454>

"Volney, Blake and Freud converge in their attempts to liberate humanity from a religion of "Moral Cruelty"—but ultimately their perspectives are different' (31)" (BBS 454).

Earle, Bo. "Blake's Infant Smile: Facing Materialism." Post-Personal Romanticism: Democratic Terror, Prosthetic Poetics, and the Comedy of Modern Ethical Life. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2017. 35-62. <Blake (2017, 2018)>

A psychoanalytic reading, despite the title, of The Book of Thel and Visions of the Daughters of Albion, with references to Freud's Beyond the Pleasure Principle.

Eaves, Morris. “Postscript: Blake's Abnormal Psychology.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.4 (spring 1976): 121-22. <BBS 378>

A postscript to Lister’s “Blake's Appearance in a Textbook on Insanity.” Notes the implication of Blake’s madness in Abnormal Psychology, ed. Curtis L. Barrett et al. (1972), 249.

Edinger, Edward F. Encounter with the Self: A Jungian Commentary on William Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job. Toronto, 1986. <BBS 460, WBHC 1977>

“A plate-by-plate analysis of Blake’s 22 plates is used a path to understanding Jungian ideas” (BBS 460).

Effinger, Elizabeth. “‘Or Wilt Thou Go Ask the Mole?’: (Con)Figuring the Feminine in Blake’s Thel.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 123-31. <WBHC 1800-01>

Examines how Thel shows a “matrixial borderspace” for shared subjectivity and “how within the space of the poem it offers an account of intrauterine experience, that mysterious existence gestured at and immediately foreclosed in Freud’s account of the uncanny” (123).

Faflak, Joel. “Blake’s Milton and the Disaster of Psychoanalysis.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 103-25. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

“Milton constitutes and reads as a vast identity crisis” (112).

Frieling, Barbara. “Blake at the Rim of the World: A Jungian Consideration of Jerusalem.” Journal of Evolutionary Psychology 8.3-4 (1987): 211-18. <BBS 476>

Suggests that Jerusalem is “what a Jungian would describe as the emergence of the archetype of the Self” (216).

Frosch, Thomas R. “Blake's 'Book of Thel' and the Stimulus Barrier.” PsyArt 18 (2014): 61-75.⁵⁶⁰

“This article studies [Thel’s] experience [fleeing from her grave] in the light of Freud’s stimulus barrier” (abstract).

Gallant, Christine. Blake and the Assimilation of Chaos. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1978. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2015. <BBS 581, WBHC 2048-49>

A fruitful Jungian psychoanalytic reading of the prophetic books, with special attention to The Four Zoas.

George, Diana Hume. Blake and Freud. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 1980. <BBS 483, WBHC 2057-58>⁵⁶¹

⁵⁶⁰ Not recorded in Blake or WBHC.

⁵⁶¹ Chapter 6 rpt. in Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 181-94, <BBS 415>. Excerpts are published in William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 79-

“[A]s much a reconsideration of Freud as it is of Blake” (BBS 483).

Glausser, Wayne. “What is it Like to be a Blake? Psychiatry, Drugs and the Doors of Perception.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 163-78. <WBHC 2862-63>

On different explanations of Blake’s visions by Kay Redfield Jamison (a psychologist), Aldous Huxley (author of The Doors of Perception), and Huston Smith (a religious scholar with an interest in the role of drugs in changing consciousness).

Goddard, Jerry Caris. Mental Forms Creating: William Blake Anticipates Fred, Jung, and Rank. Lanham, New York, London: University Press of America, 1985. <BBS 490>

“Blake is dealt with particularly in chapters on his anticipation of Freud (Chapter 2, pp. 37-62), Jung (Chapter 4, pp. 81-106), and Rank (Chapter 6, pp. 125-48)” (BBS 490).

Horn, William Dennis. “William Blake and the Problematic of the Self.” William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 260-85. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

Explores Blake’s notion of selfhood in relationship to various intellectual figures, including Kant, Derrida, and Lacan.

Kauvar, Elaine Mozer. “Blake’s Interpretation of Dreams: ‘Mental Forms Creating.’” American Imago 41 (1984): 19-45. <BBS 531>

“Blake’s and Freud’s conception of the psyche’s dynamics is so remarkably similar, they should be read together, for Freud’s rigorous explanation of how the mind works is specifically germane to how Blake’s art works” (21). Reads “A Dream” and “The Angel.”

Kauvar, Elaine. “The Sorrows of Thel: A Freudian Interpretation of The Book of Thel.” Journal of Evolutionary Psychology 5.3-4 (1984): 210-22 [Part 1]. 6.3-4 (1985): 174-88 [Part 2]. <BBS 531>

An extended psychoanalytic reading of Thel using Freud’s Interpretation of Dreams.

Kovel, Joel. “Some Lines from Blake.” The Radical Spirit: Essays on Psychoanalysis and Society. London: Free Association Books, 1988. 277-87. <WBHC 2292>

“The lines from The Marriage: ‘Man has no Body distinct from his soul . . . Energy is Eternal Delight’ ‘are an almost exact enunciation of what Freud held to be most essential about the psyche’ (277)” (WBHC 2292).

Leader, Carol. “Evil, Imagination and the Unrepressed Unconscious: The Value of William Blake’s Satanic ‘Error’ for Clinical Practice.” British Journal of Psychotherapy 31.3 (2015): 311-32. <WBHC 2314>

“While setting this paper within an analytic frame, the writer aims to offer an overview of Blake’s central concepts – particularly those concerning Satan and the state of ‘Error’ –

81, <BBS 416, WBHC 1770>, and in William Blake’s Songs of Innocence and of Experience, ed. Harold Bloom (1987), 73-84, <BBS 416-17>.

that are revealed in their most refined form in his celebrated ‘Illustrations of the Book of Job’” (abstract).

Lefcowitz, Barbara F. “Omnipotence of Thought and the Poetic Imagination: Blake, Coleridge, Rilke.” Psychoanalytic Review 59 (1972): 417-32. <BB #B2108, BBS 547>

Considers “A Poison Tree,” “Dejection: An Ode,” and “The Seventh ‘Duino Elegy’ and “Eingag” [‘Initiation’].” “[F]or the artist, [...] the re-created object is all there is and all there needs to be” (430). “A Poison Tree” “clearly demonstrates and resolves a hostile wish-fulfillment fantasy” (419).

Lister, Raymond. “Blake’s Appearance in a Textbook on Insanity.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.4 (spring 1976): 120-21. <BBS 378>

A reference to Blake’s madness in L. Forbes Winslow’s Mad Humanity its Forms Apparent and Obscure ([London, 1898]). See Eaves’s “Postscript” for an example from 1970s.

Lussier, Mark. Blake and Lacan. New York: Peter Lang, 2008. <WBHC 2353>

“The contents are(1) ‘Blake, Lacan, and the Critique of Culture’; (2) ‘The Contra-Diction of Design’; (3) ‘Textual Dynamics, Mental States: Blakean Mirror Stages; (4) ‘The Four Fundamental Concepts of Blakean Psychoanalysis’; (5) ‘Unveiling the Phallus: Blake’s War with the Symbolic Order’; (6) ‘Beyond the Phallus: Blake’s Jouissance and/as Feminine Sexuality’; (7) ‘Eternal Dictates: The “Other” of Blakean Inspiration’” (WBHC 2353).

Lussier, Mark. “The Horrors of Subjectivity/The Jouissance of Immanence.” William Blake’s Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Buncle and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 213-34. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Considers Marriage and Visions from a Lacanian perspective that posits a notion of the subject constructed by a wound that does not heal.

Lussier, Mark. “Mirrored Text/Infinite Planes: Reception Aesthetics in Blake’s Milton.” Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 13-26. <WBHC 1871-73>

Rethorizes the model of reception represented in Milton by employing the work of Hans Robert Jauss and Jacques Lacan (to counter Harold Bloom and Sigmund Freud), and references Blake’s reception among science fiction and fantasy writers like Michael Moorcock and scientists like Jacob Bronowski.

Lussier, Mark. “‘Vortex’ as Philosopher’s Stone.” New Orleans Review 13.3 (fall 1986): 40-50. <BBS 586>

Stresses Blake’s use of “mirrored text” as a “vortex” (50) that transforms “readers” (48), with references to Lacan and with examples from Jerusalem, Marriage, God Judging Adam, and the Illustrations of the Book of Job.

McQuail, Josephine A. “Passion and Mysticism in William Blake.” Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 121-34. <WBHC 2391>

Responding to the arguments of Brenda Webster’s Blake’s Prophetic Psychology (1983) and Margaret Storch’s Sons and Adversaries (1990) that suggest Blake was sexist, argues, ultimately, that Blake’s mysticism explains his view of women.

Menneteau, Patrick. “William Blake and the Dark Side of the Enlightenment: Toward a Reassessment of the Jungian Contribution.” The Enlightenment by Night: Essays on After-Dark Culture in the Long Eighteenth Century. Ed. Serge Soupel, Kevin L. Cope, and Alexander Pettit. New York: AMS, 2010. 307-42. <WBHC 2400>

“Blake’s poetry challenges traditional literary criticism, and that C. G. Jung’s psychoanalytical phenomenology is probably best suited to account for his bewildering spiritual tenets” (309).

Pearce, Donald. “Preface: ‘. . . & his Resurrection to Unity.’” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. xvii-xix. <BBS 467, WBHC 2003-04>

Lays out three stages “in the modern recovery of Blake” (xvii): 1) “securing a definitive text for the complete poetical works” (xvii); 2) “stressing the pictorial side of Blake’s work” (xviii); and 3) viewing Blake “not in splendid isolation from his contemporaries [. . .] but in direct relation to them” (xviii).

Picón, Daniela. “El libro como soporte de la experiencia visionaria en las profecías iluminadas de William Blake y El libro rojo de Carl Gustav Jung.” Literatura: teoría, historia, crítica 19.1 (2017): 63-85. In Spanish (abstracts also in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2018)>

Punter, David G. “Romanticism and the Self: An Engagement with Blake.” The Romantic Unconscious: A Study in Narcissism and Patriarchy. New York: Harvester Wheatsheaf, 1989. <BBS 611>

Highlighting gender, patriarchy, and trauma, examines “How sweet I roam’d,” “Then she bore pale desire,” Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and The Four Zoas.

Quinney, Laura. William Blake on Self and Soul. Cambridge and London: Harvard University Press, 2009.⁵⁶² <WBHC 2556>

Argues that Blake’s conceptions of “self” and “soul” are still relevant today. Includes chapters on empiricism and despair; on Wordsworth, Plato, and Blake; on each of the three later epics.

⁵⁶² Incorporates Quinney’s “Wordsworth’s Ghosts and the Model of the Mind,” European Romantic Review 9.2 (spring 1998), 293-301, [not listed apart from the book in WBHC]; “Swerving Neo-Platonists,” Wordsworth Circle 37.1 (winter 2006), 31-38, [not listed apart from the book in WBHC]; “Escape from Repetition: Blake versus Locke and Wordsworth,” Ritual, Routine, and Regime: Repetition in Early Modern British and European Culture (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2006), 63-79, <WBHC 2557>.

Raine, Kathleen. "C. G. Jung—A Debt Acknowledged." Harvest: Journal for Jungian Studies 34 (1988-89): 7-22.⁵⁶³ <WBHC 2564>

Traces "Blake's influence on Jung" (WBHC 2564).

Shaddock, David. "Mind-Forg'd Manacles: William Blake and the Emancipation of Consciousness." Poetry and Psychoanalysis: The Opening of the Field. Abingdon: Routledge, 2020. 106-24. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

Uses Blake as a model of psychoanalysis.

Simpson, Philippa. "'Mental Joy & Mental Health / And Mental Friends & Mental Wealth': Blake and Art Therapy." Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Ed. Steve Clark, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker. Houndsill, Basingstoke, Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 132-45. <WBHC 1871-73>

Examines Blake's place in the theory, practice, and literature of art therapy, using as her case study the "William Blake House," a Northamptonshire "residential care institution [...] founded on the principles of Rudolf Steiner" (134).

Singer, June K. The Unholy Bible: A Psychological Interpretation of William Blake. New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons for the C.G. Jung Foundation for Analytical Psychology, 1970. New York, Evanston, San Francisco, London, 1973. The Unholy Bible: Blake, Jung, and the Collective Unconscious. Intro. M. Esther Harding. Boston: Sigo Press, 1986. Blake, Jung, and the Collective Unconscious: The Conflict between Reason and Imagination. York Beach, Maine: Nicolas-Hays, Inc., 2000.⁵⁶⁴ <BB #2707, BBS 640, WBHC 2678-79>

A popular psychoanalytic study applying Jung to Blake's works. These works, Singer contends, "expose his most improbable fantasies and visions which, like dream, illuminate the dark and murky regions of the unconscious" (9).

Storch, Margaret. Sons and Adversaries: Women in William Blake and D.H. Lawrence. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1990. <BBS 647, WBHC 2711>

Uses a psychoanalytic approach to examine Blake's and Lawrence's conceptions of women and gender. Considers Blake's Songs, Milton, and the illustrations of Virgil and of Job as well as Lawrence's The White Peacock, The Plumed Serpent, and Lady Chatterley's Lover.

Sutherland, John H. "Blake's Milton: The Bard's Song." Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977): 142-57. <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>

An important biographical reading of "The Bard's Song" in Milton: "I believe the focus of Milton is most directly and literally on events within Blake's own mind at a time of personal crisis" (142).

⁵⁶³ Rpt. in Jungian Criticism, ed. Richard Sugg (Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 1992), 167-76.

⁵⁶⁴ "The edition of 2000 is a photographic reprint of that of 1970 with minor adjustments such as running-heads and the addition of head-pieces to the chapters" (WBHC 2679).

Wagenknecht, David. “Mimicry against Mimesis in ‘Infant Sorrow’: Seeing through Blake’s Image with Adorno and Lacan.” Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 317-48. <WBHC 2713-15>

Uses Adorno and Lacan to “align [Blake] more generally with modern thought” (318).

Webster, Brenda. “Blake, Sex and Women Revisited.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 254-60. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Returns to the topics of Blake, sexuality, and gender originally explored in her Blake’s Prophetic Psychology,⁵⁶⁵ with stories of her encounters with Blake critics.

Webster, Brenda. Blake’s Prophetic Psychology. Athens: University of Georgia Press and London: Macmillan Press, 1983. <BBS 675, WBHC 2841-42>

A Freudian and feminist reading of Blake’s illuminated books and The Four Zoas.

Whitehead, James. Madness and the Romantic Poet: A Critical History. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

Brief discussion of Blake, but frequently invoked as a touchstone.

Worrall, David. “Blake as Shaman: The Neuroscience of Hallucinations and Milton’s Lark.” Beastly Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Cham: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2018. 135-52. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Likens Blake’s visions of birds in the same poem to the /Xam cave painters.

Wright, Jason. Blake’s Job: Adventures in Becoming. Routledge, 2023. <Blake (2024, Adventures in Becoming)>

“In this unique book, Jason Wright analyses William Blake’s Illustrations of the Book of Job and shows their relevance in clinical psychoanalysis and psychotherapy with groups and individuals, especially while working with patients who have experienced trauma and addiction” (Publisher’s description).

Youngquist, Paul Bruce. “Criticism and the Experience of Blake’s Milton.” SEL 30.4 (1990): 555-71. <BBS 694>

“[Freud] cannot accommodate a poem like Milton precisely because it underestimates [the world of experience]” (555). “An adequate criticism of this activity must begin with Blake, but it cannot stop there. It must continually come to terms with what was and is the experience of Milton” (569).

⁵⁶⁵ London: Macmillan Press (1983), <BBS 675, WBHC 2841-42>.

Race, Slavery, (Post-)Colonialism, and Orientalism

Introductions

Kitson, Peter J. "Romanticism and Colonialism: Races, Places, Peoples, 1785-1800." Romanticism and Colonialism: Writing and Empire, 1780-1830. Ed. Tim Fulford and Peter J. Kitson. Cambridge, UK, and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1998. 13-34.

A good overview of issues tied to British colonialism. Blake is discussed on pp. 27-29.

Studies

Almeida, Joselyn M. "British Romanticism and Latin America, 2: Atlantic Revolution and British Intervention." Literature Compass 7-8 (2010): 731-52.⁵⁶⁶

The first part of the article considers Blake's knowledge and portrayal of Latin America, suggesting that the "Lion in Peru" in America alludes to the "armed campaigns that Tupac Amaru, the Cataris, and Tupac Catari waged against Spanish administrators" in the early 1780s (734).

Ault, Donald. "Where's Poppa? Or, the Defeminization of Blake's 'Little Black Boy.'" Out of Bounds: Male Writers and Gender. Ed. Laura Claridge and Elizabeth Langland. Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1990. 75-91. <BBS 356, WBHC 1572>

A detailed reading of the poem's arguments about gender and race, emphasizing the disappearance of the mother from the poem and the boy's fantasy of the father. The essay includes a postscript by Ault that reflects on his use of "antipatriarchal" and 'feminist' discourse" (87).

Bailey, Penny. "The Aestheticization of Korean Suffering in the Colonial Period: A Translation of Yanagi Sōetsu's Chōsen no Bijutsu." Monumenta Nipponica 73.1 (2018): 27-85. <Blake (2019)>

An introduction to and a translation of Yanagi Sōetsu's Chōsen no Bijutsu that includes a substantial discussion of Blake's influence on critiques of Japanese colonial expansion between 1919 and 1923.

Behrisch, Erika. "The Great Map of Mankind': Corporeal Cartography and the Route to Discovery in William Blake's Milton." English Studies in Canada 27 (2001): 435-58. <WBHC 1597>

In Milton Blake inverts the established conventions of the travel narrative to offer a critique of the genre: in both the text and illuminations Blake shows us the limitations of linearity, the danger of sensationalism, and the problems inherent in defining the 'self' through the 'other'" (abstract).

Bindman, David M. "Blake's Vision of Slavery Revisited." Huntington Library Quarterly 58.3-4 (1995): 373-82. <WBHC 2177>

Considers Blake's portrayal of race in Visions of the Daughters of Albion, "The Little Black Boy," and The Song of Los, challenging, at times, David V. Erdman's influential essay, "Blake's Vision of Slavery."

⁵⁶⁶ Not recorded in WBHC or Blake.

Bindman, David. Mind-Forg'd Manacles: William Blake and Slavery. With an essay by Darryl Pinckney. London: British Museum/Hayward Gallery Publishing, 2007. <WBHC 1359-60>

Catalogue for the exhibition held at the Ferens Art Gallery, Hull, from 7 Apr. to 20 May 2007; at the Burrell Collection, Glasgow, from 3 Nov. 2007 to 6 January 2008; and at the Whitworth Art Gallery, Manchester, from 26 Jan. to 6 Apr. 2008. The exhibition commemorated both the 200 years since the abolishment of the slave trade and the 250 years since Blake's birth. Includes:

Bindman, David. "William Blake and Slavery." 10-21.

Pinckney, Darryl. "In My Original Free African State." 22-28. On Thomas Clarkson and Olaudah Equiano, touching slightly on Blake.

Connolly, Tristanne J. "The Authority of the Ancients: Blake and Wilkins' Translation of the Bhagvat-Geeta." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 145-58. <WBHC 1857-62>

On Blake's lost painting, "The Bramins," suggesting that Blake was "a proponent of an Orientalism outmoded by the time of his exhibition in 1809, but exemplified in the 1785 [translation of the Bhagvat-]Geeta" (146). "Instead of the growing imposition of British culture on Indians, [Blake] opts for outdated syncretism which allows him to see Indians and Britons as originally alike (148).

Davies, Keri. "George Whitefield, the Moravians, and 'Andrew the Negro boy.'" Index Rerum. 18 Jan. 2024.⁵⁶⁷

"The paper explores Whitefield's motives in entrusting 'Andrew the Negro Boy' to Moravian care, expands on previous accounts, and shows how this relates to other episodes in Whitefield's relationship with the Moravian Church before the decisive violent break following the publication of his Expostulatory Letter of 1753. In addition to my text presented in Bethlehem PA, I have added comments (Scholia) not explored on that occasion and a biographical listing (Prosopography) of persons mentioned in the text" (par. 3). These persons include Catherine Blake, Blake's mother.

De Almeida, Hermione, and George H. Gilpin. "Blake's Prophecies Against Empire" and "Blake's 'Indian' Epic." Indian Renaissance: British Romantic Art and the Prospect of India. Adershot and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2005. 271-79. 280-86.⁵⁶⁸

On Blake's views of empire, India, and his use of Hindu mythology and art.

Easton, Will. "William Blake and the Culture of Slavery in the Late 1780s and 1790s." Blake Journal 9.1-2 (2005): 38-60. <WBHC 1755>

"About the extent to which Visions of the Daughters of Albion and "The Little Black Boy" from Innocence 'were influenced by a poetic and cultural context of slavery,' with 'some possible sources of African influence on Blake'" (WBHC 1755).

⁵⁶⁷ "A version of this paper was presented to the Bethlehem Conference on Moravian History & Music in Bethlehem PA in October 2010" (Davies, par. 1).

⁵⁶⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

Edwards, Paul. “An African Literary Source of Blake’s ‘Little Black Boy?’” Research in African Literatures 21.4 (1990): 179-81. <BBS 460>

Suggests that the scene between the child and mother in “The Little Black Boy” is drawn from A Narrative of the Most Remarkable Particulars of the Life of James Albert Ukawsaw, An African Prince (Bath, 1774).

Erdman, David V. “Blake’s Vision of Slavery.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 15.3-4 (1952): 242-52.⁵⁶⁹ <BB #1569, WBHC 1993>

A foundational article on The Visions of the Daughters of Albion and the Stedman commercial engravings and what they suggest about Blake’s views of race and slavery. It is most substantially challenged in David Bindman’s “Blake’s Vision of Slavery Revisited.”

Erle, Sibylle. “Representing Race: The Meaning of Colour and Line in William Blake’s 1790s Bodies.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 87-103. <WBHC 1857-62>

An important essay examining Blake’s depictions of race in light of eighteenth-century race science, with a focus on Patrus Camper (1722-89), Johann Caspar Lavater, and Emanuel Swedenborg in particular. She discusses “The Little Black Boy” and the commercial engravings.

Ford, Talissa J. “‘Jerusalem is scattered abroad’: Blake’s Ottoman Geographies.” Studies in Romanticism 47.4 (2008): 529-48. <WBHC 2023>

“I suggest that the imaginary process proposed in Jerusalem is the move by which the visionary city becomes the material city” (530).

Gallant, Christine. “Blake’s Coded Designs of Slave Revolts.” Wordsworth Circle 42.3 (summer 2011): 212-17.

She suggests that the Continental Prophecies, in their designs especially, depict the Haitian Revolution and were influenced by the Stedman designs.

Gilroy-Ware, Cora. The Classical Body in Romantic Britain. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2020. <Blake (2022)>

An important reexamination of notions and displays of the classical body that engages with religion and race. Blake and many members of his artistic milieu (George Cumberland, Joseph Farington, Henry Fuseli, John Gibson, Thomas Lawrence, Joshua Reynolds, William Sharp, Benjamin West, and Johann Joachim Winckelmann) are referenced throughout, but Thomas Banks (“Hidden Dreams,” 31-67) and John Flaxman (“Poetic Departures,” 69-113) receive extended, detailed analysis.

Griffith, Michael. “William Blake and the Post-Colonial Imagination in Australia.” Literary Canons and Religious Identity. Ed. Erik Borgman, Bart Philipsen, and Lea Verstricht. Aldershot: Ashgate, 2004. 127-39. <WBHC 2107>

⁵⁶⁹ Incorporated in Erdman’s Blake: Prophet Against Empire (1954), <BB #1561, BBS 463, WBHC 1990-93>.

"I want to focus on two late 20th-century authors who embody a post-colonial response to Blake's vision of colonial injustice: Patrick White [(1912-1990)] and David Malouf [(1934-)]" (129).

Gourlay, Alexander S. ""Art Delivered": Stothard's The Sable Venus and Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Journal of Eighteenth-Century Studies 31.4 (2008): 529-50. <WBHC 2095>

Suggests that Visions may be responding to Thomas Stothard's lost painting, "The Voyage of the Sable Venus," which illustrated Isaac Teale's poem, "The Sable Venus: An Ode" (1794).

Gugelberger, Georg M. "Blake, Neruda, Ngugi wa Thiong'o: Issues in Third World Literature." Comparative Literature Studies 21.4 (1984): 463-82. <BBS 496>

On Blake's influence on Neruda and on the parallels between Blake and Thiong'o in Petals of Blood (1977). The Blake section highlights "London," "The Little Black Boy," and Visions. "From Blake (and certainly from others as well) Neruda and Ngugi wa Thiong'o have learned the true voice of solidarity, the overcoming of formal isolation as well as human isolation, the move from the 'I' through the eye to the 'WE'" (479).

Gurton, Wachter, Lily. "Blake's 'Little Black Thing': Happiness and Injury in the Age of Slavery." ELH 87.2 (2020): 519-22. <Blake (2021)>

A very significant reading of the line "because I am happy" from "The Chimney Sweeper" of Experience: "I take the discomfort of trying to make sense of this perplexing line as a prompt for exploring the politics of joy in the 1790s, particularly in British writing about slavery and abolition" (520).

Haresnape, Geoffrey. "William Blake and South Africa." South African National Gallery/Suid Afrikaanse Nasionale Kunsmuseum Quarterly Bulletin (Sep. 1980): 5-10. <WBHC 2128>

Readings of "Little Black Boy" and other works and their implications for apartheid South Africa. "In South Africa today [1980] Blake is disquieting."

Islam, Md. Monirul. "For the darkness of Asia was startled': Blake and the East." Oriental Wells: The Early Romantic Poets and Their Eastern Muse. New Delhi: Bloomsbury Indian, 2021. 73-105. <Blake (2022)>

Considers the influence of Orientalist "scholars, travelers, and painters" (14) on Blake and his views of Hinduism, Indian, Islam, and Mohammad in light of [Blake's] own "Angelo-centric and Christo-centric conception of the world" (15).

Johnson, Mary Lynne. "Coleridge's Prose and a Blake Plate in Stedman's Narrative: Unfastening the 'Hooks & eyes' of Memory." Wordsworth Circle 13.1 (1982): 36-38. <BBS 527>

On Coleridge's references to reading Stedman and his possible reaction to the engraving, "A Negro hung alive by the Ribs to a Gallows."

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake's Orient." Romanticism 11 (2005): 1-13. <WBHC 2312>

Tries "to make sense of Blake's scattered references to 'oriental' phenomena" in light of "modern discussions of 'Orientalism', including, of course, [Edward] Said's" (1).

Lee, Debbie. "Intimacy as Imitation: Monkeys in Blake's Engravings for Stedman's Narrative." Slavery and the Romantic Imagination. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 2002. 66-119. <WBHC 2316>

Examines Blake's engravings of monkeys in light of "the new accounts of race science published in London in the time" (72).

Lezra, Esther. "'Neptune': Literal and Visual Translations of Black Revolution into White." The Colonial Art of Demonizing Others: A Global Perspective. New York: Routledge, 2014. 23-50.

Suggests that Neptune, the man being tortured in the engraving, "The Execution of Breaking on the Rack," is part of the inspiration for Orc.

Linebaugh, Peter, and Marcus Rediker. "Blake's African Orc." "Conclusion: Tyger! Tyger!" The Many-Headed Hydra: Sailors, Slaves, Commoners, and the Hidden History of the Revolutionary Atlantic. Boston: Beacon Press, 2000. 327-54. <WBHC 2334>

The section on Blake in the conclusion reads his depictions of slavery and revolution in the Stedman illustrations and the Continental Prophecies in terms of the Black Atlantic.

MacDonald, D. L. "Pre-Romantic and Romantic Abolitionism: Cowper and Blake." European Romantic Review 4.2 (1993): 163-82. <WBHC 2357>

On Cowper's "Pity for Poor Africans," Blake's "The Little Black Boy," and their relationship to abolitionism and especially Thomas Clarkson's Essay on the Slavery and Commerce of the Human Species, particularly the African (1786).

Makdisi, Saree. "Afterword: Palestine is Everywhere." Studies in Romanticism 62.2 (2023): 311-16. <Blake (2024)>

"Blake's vision of building Jerusalem in England—in lines that are repeated in song to this very day—may be the best known of these references to Palestine in Romanticism, but they are in a sense the exception that proves the rule. For if most gestures to Palestine at the time and through the nineteenth century see it as a blank space that could simply be appropriated, Blake's interests actually lie in England, not in Palestine itself" (312).

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake and the Ontology of Empire." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 12-26. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers Blake's complex relationship to Orientalism and Empire, with references to his view of the Qur'an (14).

Matthews, Susan. "Africa and Utopia: Refusing a 'local habitation.'" The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 104-20. <WBHC 1857-62>

Contrasts Blake's depictions of Africa and Africans within his poetry (including "Little Black Boy") with writers, including George Cumberland, Swedenborgians, William Hayley, John Stedman, Ottobah Cugoano, Olaudah Equiano, and others.

Mitchell, W.J.T. "Idolatry: Nietzsche, Blake, Poussin." Seeing through Race. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2422>

Considers idolatry and the process of othering in the religions of the Book as constituent of race and racism, with discussions of Nietzsche, Blake, and Poussin.

Moyer, James F. “The Daughters Weave their Work in loud cries': Blake, Slavery, and Cotton.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 48.3 (winter 2014-15): 33 par. <WBHC 1741>

Emphasizes the place of cotton and textiles in Blake's depictions of slavery, especially in Visions of the Daughters of Albion.

Nichols, Ashton. “An Empire of Exotic Nature: Blake's Botanic and Zoomorphic Imagery.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 121-33. <WBHC 1857-62>

Looks at representations of Asian flora and fauna as “battlegrounds for ideological and cultural discourse tied to the expansion of empire” (122), and how Blake engages with it, discussing the designs of “The Blossom,” “Infant Joy,” “The Tyger,” and the frontispiece to For the Sexes.

Okada, Kazuya. “‘Typhon, the lower nature’: Blake and Egypt as the Orient.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. London: Continuum, 2006. 29-37. <WBHC 1857-62>

On Blake's Egyptian imagery, particularly in Blake's commercial engravings, Fertilization of Egypt and Tornado, for Erasmus Darwin's Botanic Garden (1791).

Otto, Peter. “Negotiating the ‘Holy Land’: Cross-Cultural Encounters from Bonaparte to Blake.” Postcolonial Studies 23.3 (2020): 404-29. Special issue: “Catalysts of Change: Colonial Transformations of Anglo-European Literary Culture in the Long Eighteenth Century.” <Blake (2021)>

Positions Blake within Napoleonic-era engagements with “the Holy Land.”

Peh, Li Qi. “Stedman's Horror, Blake's Indifference.” ELH 90.2 (2023): 367-91. <Blake (2024)>

Argues that Stedman relied on Blake's engraving to lessen the horror that the pro-slavery William Thompson's rewriting of Stedman's text sought to elicit.

Perris, Jonathan. “God Lives in the Sun: The Critique of Evangelical Abolitionism in William Blake's ‘The Little Black Boy.’” European Romantic Review 34.6 (2023): 629-45. <Blake (2024)>

“The essay argues that Blake's poem speaks not with conventional abolitionist rhetoric, nor with oft-suggested ambiguity, inconsistency, or racism, but rather with intense criticism of the Eurocentric evangelical discourse that came to inform abolitionist campaigns and of the resultant African-European voice constructed in texts such as The Interesting Narrative [of Olaudah Equiano]” (abstract).

Phillips, John. “Blake's Question (from the Orient).” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 288-300. <WBHC 1857-62>

“[A]n attempt to think how a response to the rubric ‘Blake in the Orient’ could avoid begging a question” (298).

Primeau, Ronald. “Blake's Chimney Sweeper as Afro-American Minstrel.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 78.4 (summer 1975): 418-30. <BB #A2462>

“I shall describe Blake’s ways of dealing with oppression primarily as they are depicted in his characterization of the sweep, and suggest, by way of analogy, some tentative connections between Blake’s theme of overcoming servitude and similar themes in the long tradition of Afro-American literature—connections that advance our understanding of both Blake’s poems and modern Afro-American literature” (418).

Richardson, Bruce Alan. “Colonialism, Race, and Lyric Irony in Blake’s The Little Black Boy.” Papers on Language and Literature 26 (1990): 233-48 <BBS 621, WBHC 2581-82>⁵⁷⁰

“In Blake’s representation of a black child’s attempt to challenge a crippling ideology through the creative subversion[,] the English reader—child or adult—could find a discursive site for opposition and a rare lesson in dissent” (246).

Rubenstein, Anne, and Camilla Townsend. “Revolted Negroes and the Devilish Principle: William Blake and Conflicting Visions of Boni’s Wars in Surinam, 1772-1796.” Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 273-98. <WBHC 1950-53>

A very thoughtful essay that, in addition to considering Stedman’s Narrative, Blake’s illustrations, and various anti-slavery discourses, highlights the wars led by Boni and the Aluku and the impact slavery and colonialism still have on their descendants today.

Sato, Hikari. “Blake, Hayley, and India: On Designs to a Series of Ballads (1802).” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 134-44. <WBHC 1857-62>

“Focusing on Designs to a Series of Ballads written by Hayley and published by Blake in 1802, I will work from the initial premise that Hayley used Indian motifs in the Designs to commemorate his son who had died in 1800 and that Blake became familiar with India through the collaboration with his erudite patron” (135).

Simpson, David. “Which Newton for the British Library?” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.2 (fall 1994): 77-78. <WBHC 1653>

Suggests the possibility that Blake’s “Newton” may be partly based on a scene from John Newton’s Authentic Narrative (1764) wherein the abolitionist is doing geometry in the sand.

Smith, Bernard. European Vision and the South Pacific. 2nd ed. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1985. 173-75.⁵⁷¹ <BBS 641-42>

⁵⁷⁰ Rpt. as “Blake, Children’s Literature, and Colonialism.” in Alan Richardson, Literature, Education, and Romanticism: Reading as Social Practice, 1780-1832 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994), 153-66, <WBHC 2581>.

⁵⁷¹ Developed from Smith’s essay with the same title in Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institute 13.1-2 (1950), 65-100, <BB #2717, BBS 641-42>.

A brief but important examination of Blake's commercial engraving, A Family of New South Wales, in the context of European depictions of Pacific Islanders, with references to James Basire, John Hunter, Giovani Battista Cipriani, and Francesco Bartolozzi.

Stevens, Bethan. “‘Woes & . . . sighs’: Fantasies of Slavery in Visions of the Daughters of Albion.
Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 140-52. <WBHC 1801-03>

Important reading that decenters white, heterosexual interpretations of the poem to suggest: “Much remains to be discovered about the curious moments of interface between queer desire and queer race in Visions” (150).

Stevenson, Warren. “The Image of Canada in Blake's America a Prophecy.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.3 (1993-94): 72-74. <WBHC 1647-48>

Suggests the woman's hair on pl. 16 alludes to Niagara Falls and the passage of a 1793 bill by the legislature of the province of Upper Canada (later Ontario) seeking to abolish slavery and to make enslaved persons fleeing to Canada free (in opposition to the U.S.'s 1793 Fugitive Slave Law).

Stevenson, Warren. [Untitled Note.] Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 29.1 (summer 1995): 24-25. <WBHC 1658>

Builds on David Simpson's “Which Newton for the British Library?” to suggest that the Newton in America may be a conflation of the physicist and the abolitionist as well.

Sultan, Muthanna Mohammed. “Colonialism Revisited: Reading in Selected Poems of the Nineteenth Century.” Al-Ustath 224.1 (2018): 165-78. In English (abstracts in English and Arabic). <Blake (2019)>

A reading of Blake's, Coleridge's, Tennyson's, and Kipling's views of colonialism, focusing on, for Blake, “The Tyger” and “The Little Black Boy.” Blake “does his best in revealing and portraying the status quo of his colonial society” (170).

Thomas, Helen. “William Blake: Spiritualism and Abolitionism” in “Romanticism and Abolitionism: Mary Wollstonecraft, William Blake, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, and William Wordsworth” and “John Stedman's Redemption and the Dynamics of Miscegenation” in “Cross-Cultural Contact: John Stedman, Thomas Jefferson and the Slaves.” Romanticism and Slaves Narratives: Transatlantic Testimonies. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2000. 114-24. 125-33. <WBHC 2759-60, 3051>

Blake's and Stedman's relationships to slavery, racism, and abolitionism are discussed briefly in two adjacent sections in different chapters, with Blake's commercial illustrations for Stedman referenced in both.

Vine, Stephen. “‘That Mild Beam’: Enlightenment and Enslavement in William Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion.
The Discourse of Slavery: Aphra Behn to Toni Morrison. Ed. Carl Plasa and Betty J. Ring. New York: Routledge, 1994. 40-63. <WBHC 2804>

“[E]xamines the critical energies in Visions' account of the body, sexuality and slavery, and maps the struggle of the poem to expose structures of sexual and colonial enslavement in the name of a visionary enlightenment” (41).

Welch, Dennis M. “Essence, Gender, Race: William Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion.” Studies in Romanticism 49.2 (spring 2010): 105-31. <WBHC 2844>

“Oothoon possesses both an enduring identity (a personal ‘essence’), inherent and manifest in her imaginative body and its significant valuations, and? consistent with her essence—a self oppressed by, yet capable of resisting and even developing in response to, such constraints as slavery, rape, cultural ideology and social judgment” (109).

White, R.S. “Slavery as Fact and Metaphor: William Blake and Jean Paul Marat.” Natural Rights and the Birth of Romanticism in the 1790s. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave, 2005. 168-95. <WBHC 2848>

“Blake was virtually alone in seeing slavery as a paradigm for all injustice” (169).

Worrall, David. “Thel in Africa: William Blake and the Post-colonial, Post-Swedenborgian Female Subject.” The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 17-28.⁵⁷² <WBHC 1857-62>

Argues that “The Book of Thel’s structure, which is organized around a narrative of her modes of refusal, can be contextualized with reference to Swedenborgian principles of conjugal love and their proposed west African colony” (17).

⁵⁷² The same essay is also published in Blake, Nation and Empire, ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall (2006), <WBHC 1866-69>

Reception Studies (See also Blake and Artists; Blake and Writers and Publishers; and Blake and Musicians)

Introductions

Barbeau, Jeffrey W., ed. The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

An interesting collection of essays, many of which make brief references to Blake.

Clark, Steve. "Asian Romanticism: Construction of the Comparable." British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Ed. Alex Watson and Laurence Williams. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. 387-94. <Blake (2020)>

A useful overview of the reception of Romanticism in Asia, with a well-informed section on Blake.

Erle, Sibylle, and Keri Davies. "Early Reception." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 79-86. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Whittaker, Jason. "Late Reception." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 87-93. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Agnes, Peter. "The Reception of Blake in Hungary." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.3 (winter 2000-01): 68-81. <WBHC 1685>

Considers Blake's reception in Hungary in the twentieth century, highlighting particularly the etchings of Béla Kondor (1931-72).

§ Albu, Paul-Cristian. "The Reception of William Blake's Work by the Eyes of a Romanian post-1989 Literary Critic." Journal of Romanian Literary Studies 38 (2024): 571-75. In Romanian (abstract in English). <Blake (2025)>

"Through this short article, we are interested in observing how Romanian literary critic plans to interpret William Blake's work in a Romanian context. This writer manages to express his objectivity when speaking of the reception of William Blake's work in the current Romanian context. We are astonished to see this writer's analytical thinking, mathematical precision, and how this writer compounds his structural work. By reading his book, we can observe the differences in interpretation in a heteroclitic literary context, Romanian vs English" (abstract).

Almeida, Joselyn M., and Sara Medina Calzada. "Romanticism's Pan-Atlantic Life: Blake, Shelley, and Byron in José Joaquín de Mora's Meditaciones Poéticas (1826)." Painting Words: Aesthetics and the Relationship between Image and Text. Ed. Beatriz González-Moreno and Fernando González-Moreno. New York: Routledge, 2020. 146-60. <Blake (2021)>

"This chapter explores William Blake's first foray in America with the publication of José Joaquín de Mora's Meditaciones Poéticas (London, 1826), a collection of poems about death and the afterlife illuminated and inspired by Blake's designs for Robert Blair's The Grave" (abstract).

Atkinson, Rosalind. “A Japanese Blake: Embodied Visions in William Blake’s The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790) and Tezuka Osamu’s Phoenix (1967–88).” British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Ed. Alex Watson and Laurence Williams. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. 341-60. <Blake (2020)>

Focusing on Blake and Tezuka Osamu’s Phoenix, argues that, taken outside his immediate historical context, Blake can function as “a free-floating figure” who “can also facilitate creative appropriation in cultures outside the one of origin” (356).

Bailey, Penny. “The Aestheticization of Korean Suffering in the Colonial Period: A Translation of Yanagi Sōetsu’s Chōsen no Bijutsu.” Monumenta Nipponica 73.1 (2018): 27-85. <Blake (2019)>

An introduction to and a translation of Yanagi Sōetsu’s Chōsen no Bijutsu that includes a substantial discussion of Blake’s influence on critiques of Japanese colonial expansion between 1919 and 1923.

Baird, John. “Blake’s Painting at the Royal Academy, 1784: A Reference.” Notes and Queries 40.4 (1993): 458. <WBHC 1577>

Records a previously unnoticed review of Blake’s “War Unchained by an Angel, Fire, Pestilence and Famine Following” in the Morning Chronicle on 17 May 1784.

Bakić, Tanja. “William Blake the Designer: The Reception of Robert Blair’s Grave in Serbia.” Literature Compass 19.7 (2022): 13 pp. <Blake (2023)>

“The aim of this article is to bring the figure of William Blake the designer closer to the Serbian reader, and to set it apart from the previously dominant figure of Blake the poet, when it comes to his reception in that country” (abstract).

Balakian, Anna. “The Literature Fortune of Willliam Blake in France.” Modern Language Quarterly 17.3 (1956): 261-72. <BB #1120>

Covers Blake’s reception in France from Pierre Berger’s William Blake, Mysticisme et Poésie (1907) to Denis Saurat’s William Blake: Critique et Interprétation (1954), including the 1937 exhibition of Blake and Turner at the Bibliothèque Nationale and Gide’s translation of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. There is a bibliography covering French publications on Blake through 1955.

For a more recent consideration of Blake’s reception in France, see Gilles Soubigou and Yann Tholoniat’s “The Reception of Blake in France: Literature and the Visual Arts.”

Barton, Anna. “Perverse Forms: Reading Blake’s Decadence.” Decadent Romanticism: 1780–1914. Ed. Kostas Boyiopoulos and Mark Sandy. Farnham: Ashgate, 2015. 15-26. <WBHC 1584>

Considers Blake and decadence through Charles Algernon Swinburne’s interpretation of Blake.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. Blake Records. 1969. 2nd ed. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2004. See also Bentley’s Addenda (2004-2017).

The authoritative source for most of the known, historical facts about Blake’s life. It also includes genealogies, maps, all the pre-1863 biographies of Blake, a description of the residences associated with Blake, Blake's accounts, a list of the engravings by and after Blake, a list of where Blake's poetry was reprinted between 1806 and 1849, and list of other William Blakes living in London between 1740 and 1830. Abbreviated in scholarship as BR or BR (2).

Updates and corrections can be found both in Bentley's Addenda (2004-2017) at Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly and in WBHC (beginning on page 3075).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Vicissitudes of Vision: The First Account of William Blake in Russian." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 112-14. <BBS 381>

Notes the first article on Blake in Russia, which was published in 1834 and adapted Cunningham's Life: "Artist-Poet-Sumassheshii: zhizn Vil'yama Bleka [Artist-Poet-Madman: Life of William Blake]," Teleskop [Telescope: A Journal of Contemporary Enlightenment], Vol.22 (Moscow: Printed by P. Stepanov, Published by Nikolai Nadezhdin, 1834), 69-97" (113).

Bentley, G.E., Jr., ed. William Blake: The Critical Heritage. London and Boston: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1975. <BB #A1181, WBHC 1621-22>

Excerpts contemporary commentary on Blake and his works from the first edition of Blake Records, arranging them here by works rather than by date. It also includes the biographies and obituaries of Blake before Gilchrist's Life of Blake (all of which is now included in the second edition of Blake Records) and the then known references to Blake from 1831 to 1862.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "I hear a voice you cannot hear': Madness, Blake, and the Magazin für die Literatur des Auslandes \(1833\)." Notes and Queries 58.1 (2011): 66-73. <WBHC 1607>

The first reprint of a German article on Blake, derived largely from Smith and Cunningham, that highlights Blake's madness and visions.

Bentley, E.B. "Vision in Fiction: Two Novels about William Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.3 (winter 1978-79): 209-11. <BBS 387>

About William Blake, or The English Farmer (London: John Masters, 1848) by Rev. W.E. Heygate, which is not about Blake, and The Gates of Paradise (London: Oxford University Press, 1974) by Peter Carter, which is.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "The Vicissitudes of Vision: The First Account of William Blake in Russian." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 112-14. <BBS 381>

Notes the first article on Blake in Russia, which was published in 1834 and adapted Cunningham's Life: "Artist-Poet-Sumassheshii: zhizn Vil'yama Bleka [Artist-Poet-Madman: Life of William Blake]," Teleskop [Telescope: A Journal of Contemporary Enlightenment], Vol.22 (Moscow: Printed by P. Stepanov, Published by Nikolai Nadezhdin, 1834), 69-97" (113).

Bertholf, Robert J., and Annette S. Levitt, ed. William Blake and the Moderns. Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

A collection of original essays that consider Blake's influence on Modern literature beginning with Whitman.

Bidney, Martin. "A Russian Symbolist View of William Blake." Comparative Literature 39.4 (1987): 327-39. <BBS 372>

"About Konstantin Bal'mont's short essay on Blake in Gornaja Vershiny [Mountain Summits] (1906)" (BBS 372). Bal'mont suggests Blake was a precursor to Symbolists, and Bidney compares Bal'mont's descriptions of Blake with those of Yeats.

Budziak, Anna. "Genius and Madness Mirrored: Rossetti's and Yeats' Reception of William Blake." Crossroads in Literature and Culture. Ed. Jacek Fabiszak, Ewa Urbaniak-Rybicka, and Bartosz Wolski. Berlin: Springer, 2012. 281-91. <WBHC 1809>

"This paper aims at sketching the vicissitudes of Rossetti's and Yeats's attempts to make Blake's work accessible to a wider readership" (abstract).

Butlin, Martin. "Paolozzi's Newton." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 27.2 (fall 1993): 44-45. <WBHC 1646>

On the controversy over Paolozzi's statue of Newton, now outside of the British Library, which was conducted in The Times between Aug. 1992 and Mar. 1993.

Calonne, David Stephen. The Beats in Mexico. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023)>

Slight references to Blake's influence on Ginsberg, but also, in terms of reception, to Blake's place in the anthology America a Prophecy: A New Reading of American Poetry from Pre-Columbian Times to the Present (1973) (12).

Cherry, Charles L. "William Blake and Mrs. Grundy: Suppression of Visions of the Daughters of Albion." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 6-10. <BB #1217.58>

Details Victorian views of Visions and its depictions of sexuality that kept it from being published in print until the Yeats and Ellis edition of 1893. Focuses much on Swinburne's anger at Macmillan (the publisher of Gilchrist's Life), and Anne Gilchrist's efforts to mediate between Swinburne and the Rossettis, on the one hand, and Macmillan, on the other.

Clark, Steve, and Jason Whittaker, ed. Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. <WBHC 1861-63>

A collection largely focused on Blake's reception.

Clark, Steve, and Masashi Suzuki, ed. The Reception of Blake in the Orient. 2006.

Along with Blake Studies in Japan, a key collection of essays on Blake's reception in east Asia.

Clark, Steve, Tristanne Connolly, and Jason Whittaker, ed. Blake 2.0: William Blake in Twentieth-Century Art, Music and Culture. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. <WBHC 1871-73>

A substantial collection of essays on Blake's twentieth-century reception.

Davies, Keri. “Blake in the Times Digital Archive.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.1 (summer 2007): 45-46. <WBHC 1712>

Notes the reference to Blake in a 3 Jan. 1829 article in the Times.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “An American Original: Mrs. Colman's Illustrated Printings of Blake's Poems, 1843-44.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 4-18. <BBS 382>

“Between 1843 and 1845, Pamela Chandler Colman, an American Swedenborgian active in the production of children's books, was responsible for printing in four separate publications nine different poems from Blake's Songs of Innocence” (4). Shows that the reprintings had illustrations based on Blake's original designs and suggests that Colman may have seen Robert Balmanno's copy U.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “‘Blake, William’ in the New American Cyclopedia \(1861\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.1 (summer 1978): 68-69. <BBS 384>

A pre-Gilchrist biography of Blake that drew on Cunningham and that was “probably” by Charles A. Dana who “had edited the Household Book of Poetry (1857, [1859)], in which he included four of Blake's Songs and “My Silks” from Poetical Sketches (68).

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “Mr. Rudall, The Flautist: An Authentic Blake Anecdote.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 123. <BBS 383>

On an anecdote about Blake during his time living at 3 Fountain Court when he was visited by “Mr. Rudall, the flautist” (123), which was published by the Swedenborgian James Spilling in “Blake the Visionary,” New Church Magazine, 6 (1887), 209. Deck suggests the anecdote came down to Spilling from Charles Augustus Tulk to J.J. Garth Wilkinson.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. “Unnoticed Printings of Blake's Poems, 1825-1851.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 125. <BBS 381>

“In Swedenborgian publications, most U.S.” (BBS 381). For a comprehensive list of poems reprinted between 1806 and 1849, see BR pp. 825-28.

Dent, Shirley, and Jason Whittaker. Radical Blake: Influence and Afterlife from 1827. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press Ltd, 2002. <WBHC 1936>

An important and early example of the current mode of reception studies popular in Blake criticism. It considers Blake in several nineteenth- and twentieth-century contexts, including the Victorian Blake Renaissance, depictions of London, Nationalism, American Antebellum Emancipation, the rights of women, and textual transmission.

Dent, Shirley. “Thou readst white where I read black: William Blake, the Hymn ‘Jerusalem,’ and the Far Right.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 48-62.

Examines Blake's influence on the political right through the “Jerusalem” hymn.

Dorfman, Deborah. Blake in the Nineteenth Century: His Reputation as a Poet from Gilchrist to Yeats. Yale Studies in English 170. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1969. <BB #1509, BBS 455, WBHC 1957-58>

A foundational study of Blake's nineteenth-century literary reception in Britain from his lifetime to the Yeats-Ellis edition, including the production and reception of Gilchrist's Life of William Blake, the Rossettis, and Charles Algernon Swinburne.

Dörrbecker, Detlef W. “Jean Paul Friedric Richter and Blake's Night Thoughts.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 124-25. <BBS 383>

Describes the discovery of the German scholar, Werner Hofmann, that Richter, after being given a copy of Blake's Night Thoughts in 1801, published the earliest notice of Blake in Germany in his Vorschule der Aesthetik, nebst einigen Vorlesungen in Leipzig über die Parteien der Zeit (Hamburg: Friedrich Perthes, 1804), which had a second edition in 1813.

Eisenman, Stephen F., ed. William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

An exhibition catalogue and a collection of essays that considers Blake in relationship to the Counter-Culture movements of the mid- to late-twentieth century (mostly American). Exhibition held at the Mary and Leigh Block Museum of Art, Northwestern University, from 23 Sep. 2017 to 11 Mar. 2018.

Elliott, Clare. “William Blake and America: Freedom and Violence in the Atlantic World.” Comparative American Studies 7.3 (2009): 209-24. <WBHC 1983>

Compares “the absence of a general readership of William Blake’s poetry in nineteenth-century Britain and compare that neglect to the American Transcendentalists’ reading of Songs of Innocence and [of] Experience (1794) in the 1840s” (abstract).

Erdman, David V. “Every Thing Has Its Vermin.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 22.3 (Dec. 1968): 68. <BB #1217.34>

Notes that in the copy of Malkin’s Memoirs bought in 1809 by Jabez Legg has an annotation in the Blake section after “The Tyger”: “This is a little too much about Mr. Blake” (68).

Erle, Sibylle, ed. “Blake in Europe.” Special Issue. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.3 (winter 2021-22). <Blake (2022)>

A collection of eight essays that considers Blake’s reception among European writers and artists.

Erle, Sibylle, and Morton D. Paley, ed. The Reception of William Blake in Europe. 2 vols. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

An extremely comprehensive collection of essays on Blake’s European reception, recording bibliographical facts about European editions, collections, translations, catalogues, and exhibitions.

Essick, Robert N. “Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Frederic Shields, and the Spirit of William Blake.” Victorian Poetry 24.2 (summer 1986): 163-72. <BBS 464>

On Rossetti’s sonnet, “William Blake,” and its relationship to the artist Frederic Shields (who sketched Blake’s room at 3 Fountain Court) and Blake’s Victorian reception.

Ferber, Michael. “Blake for Children.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 35.1 (summer 2001): 22-24. <WBHC 1686-87>

An account of a publisher that commissioned a children’s edition of Blake’s poetry but abandoned the project because of the content in Blake’s poetry.

Ferber, Michael. “Blake’s ‘Jerusalem’ as a Hymn.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.3 (winter 2000-01): 82-94. <WBHC 1685>

Excellent overview of the context of the “hymn” in Milton, its setting by Parry, the reception of Parry’s version, and adaptations of it. Includes a selected discography.

Field, Douglas, and Luke Walker, ed. Bulletin of the John Rylands Library 98.1 (May 2022). Special Issue: “The Artist of the Future Age: William Blake, Neo-Romanticism, Counterculture and Now.” <Blake (2023)>

A collection on Blake’s reception, with many essays highlighting the British counterculture of the 1960s and 1970s.

Fitzpatrick, Donald C. “William Blake’s New Church Critics.” Blake and Swedenborg: Opposition Is True Friendship: The Sources of William Blake’s Arts in the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. Ed. Harvey F. and Darrell Ruhl, ed. New York: Swedenborg Foundation Inc., 1985. 135-40. <BBS 364-65, WBHC 1597-98>

Considers Blake’s reception among nineteenth-century Swedenborgians.

Flores, Cristina. “William Blake Translated: The Creation of Blake’s Literary Fame in Spain.” Comparative Critical Studies 15 (supplement) (2018): 117-29.⁵⁷³ <Blake (2019)>

A survey of Blake’s reception in Spain considering translations from Antonio Balbín de Unquera (1842–1919) to Fernando Castanedo.

Freedman, Linda. William Blake and the Myth of America: From the Abolitionists to the Counterculture. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2023, 2025)>

An accessible overview of Blake’s reception in America from the Transcendentalists to the Twenty-first Century.

Frye, Northrop. “Blake after Two Centuries.” University of Toronto Quarterly 27 (1957): 10-21.⁵⁷⁴ <BB #1642>

On Blake’s reception and the then current condition of Blake studies.

⁵⁷³ “This article is drawn from a much longer essay to appear in the forthcoming volume The Reception of William Blake in Europe, edited by Sibylle Erle and Morton D. Paley” (n1).

⁵⁷⁴ Rpt. in [William Blake: Songs of Innocence and \[of\] Experience: A Casebook](#) (1970), <BB #1261 BBS 423, WBHC 1777>; in English Romantic Poets: Modern Essays in Criticism, ed. M.H. Abrams (1st ed. 1960) <BBS 329>; and in Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angela Esterhammer (2005), <WBHC 2040-43>.

Griffith, Michael. "William Blake and the Post-Colonial Imagination in Australia." Literary Canons and Religious Identity. Ed. Erik Borgman, Bart Philipsen, and Lea Verstricht. Aldershot: Ashgate, 2004. 127-39. <WBHC 2107>

"I want to focus on two late 20th-century authors who embody a post-colonial response to Blake's vision of colonial injustice: Patrick White [(1912-1990)] and David Malouf [(1934-)]" (129).

Groot, H.B. de. "R.H. Horne, Mary Howitt and a Mid-Victorian Version of 'The Echoing Green.'" Blake Studies 4.1 (autumn 1971): 81-88. <BB #1218.55>

Records the reference to Blake by Richard Henry Horne's 1838 "British Artists and Writers on Art" in the British and Foreign Review (VI.610-57) and Mary Howitt's reprinting of part of "The Echoing Green" as "A Summer Evening on a Village Green" in her 1854 edition of Calendar of Nature as well as her other references to Blake.

Groves, David. "Blake and the Sheffield Iris." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.3 (winter 2005-06): 125. <WBHC 1705>

Highlights a review of Cunningham's Lives with a substantial focus on Blake.

Hagan, Jade. "New Age Blake Memes and Other Psychotechnologies of the Self." Configurations 28.2 (spring 2020): 211-53. <Blake (2021)>

"Blake became an emblematic figure of the Hippie and New Age's mode of critique and their vision of a holistic and ecologically attuned way of life" (215).

Harley, Alexis, Claire Knowles, and Chris Murray. "Prophet against Empire? William Blake in Australia." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 56.4 (spring 2023): 32 pars. <Blake (2024)>

"In this essay, we turn to the reception, reproduction, and revisioning of Blake in the settler colonies of Australia, and we find a Blake whose work, mediated through a range of editorial and curatorial lenses, proves unexpectedly amenable to conflicting Australian desires both to affirm cultural fealty to England and empire and to refuse it" (par. 1).

Heppner, Christopher. "Blake and the Novelists." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.4 (spring 1982): 198. <BBS 393>

Calls attention to the Blake characters and Blakean elements in F.R. Nelson's Blake's Progress (1975) and J.G. Ballard's The Unlimited Dream Company (1979).

Hewlett, Henry G. "Imperfect Genius: William Blake." Contemporary Review 28 (1876): 756-84 (Part 1); 29 (1877): 207-28 (Part 2). <BB #1840>

An effort to temper the enthusiasm of the Victorian Blake revival.

Hilton, Nelson. "Blake and the Apocalypse of the Canon." Modern Language Studies 18.1 (1988): 134-49. <BBS 506>

On Blake's place in the literary canon, with much on Blake's reception from Cunningham to the 1980s.

Hoover, Suzanne R. "William Blake in the Wilderness: A Closer Look at His Reputation, 1827-1863." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and

Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 310-48. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

An important early essay on Blake's reception prior to Alexander Gilchrist's 1863 biography.

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. "The Impact of Feminism on Blake Studies in Japan." Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 91-99. <WBHC 1795-1800>

A very accessible overview.

Ima-Izumi, Yoko. "The Female Voice in Blake Studies in Japan, 1910s-1930s." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 195-211. <WBHC 1857-62>

Analyzes how the female characters in Blake's poetry and Catherine Blake were interpreted by Yanagi and Jugaku, pairing the latter's praise of Catherine with the film, Broken Lullaby (a.k.a. The Man I Killed) (1932).

Jing-yu, Gu. "Unlisted Articles on Blake Published in China." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.4 (spring 1984): 157-59. <BBS 396>

Records and summarizes articles not found in Blake Books and Malmqvist's "Blake in China."

Kockum, Keiko. "The Introduction of William Blake to Japan, 1900-1932." Outstretched leaves on his Bamboo Staff: Studies in Honour of Göran Malmqvist on his 70th Birthday. Ed. Joakim Enwall. Stockholm: The Association of Oriental Studies, 1994. 159-69. <WBHC 2277>

An early essay on Blake's Japanese reception from the lectures of Koizumi Yakumo (1850-1904) to Yanagi and Jugaku's journal, Bureiku to Hoittoman [Blake and Whitman] (1931).

La Belle, Jenijoy. "Blake's Insanity: An Unrecorded Early Reference." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.2 (fall 1981): 100-01. <BBS 392>

Notes a reference to Blake as a "master" painter who died insane in Painting Popularly Explained (London, 1859), perhaps deriving from a reference in [A Handbook to the Water Colours, Drawings, and Engravings, in the \[Manchester\] Art Treasures Exhibition, Being a Reprint of Critical Notices Originally Published in "The Manchester Guardian"](#) (London, 1857).

La Belle, Jenijoy. "William Blake's Reputation in the 1830s: Some Unrecorded Documents." Modern Philology 84.3 (1987): 302-07. <BBS 543>

Notes unrecorded references to Blake between 1831 and 1834.

Lange, Thomas L. "Blake in American Almanacs." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 14.2 (fall 1980): 94-96. <BBS 390>

On the reprinting of Stedman plates, "The skinning of the Aboma snake, shot by Capt. Stedman" and "The Sculls of Lieut. Lepper, and Six of his Men," in The People's Almanac (1834, 1836).

Larrabee, Stephen A. “Some Additional American References to Blake 1830-1863.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 61.11 (Nov. 1957): 561-63. <BB #2102>

Newly discovered references to Blake including Lucy Hooper’s 1833 poem, “The Fairy Funeral.”

Linkin, Harriet Kramer. “William Blake and Female Romantic Poets: ‘Then what have I to do with thee?’” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 127-39. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Considers how Anne Cristall, Charlotte Smith, Mary Tighe, Felicia Hemans, and Lucy Hooper read Blake.

Makdisi, Saree. “Blake and the Communist Tradition.” Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 235-53. <WBHC 2867-68>

On Blake’s influence on the Communist left.

Malmqvist, N.G.D. “Blake in China.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 13.1 (summer 1979): 24-28. <BBS 388>

On Blake’s Chinese reception. Focused on the period around 1957 when Blake was named poet of the year by the World Peace Conference.

Mansanti, Céline. “William Blake in Transition Magazine \(Paris, 1927–38\): The Modalities of a Blake Revival in France during the 1920s and 1930s.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 43.2 (fall 2009): 52-60. <WBHC 1721>

“Blake plays a particularly important role in the editorial policy of several neo-romantic magazines developing a specific interest in surrealism” (55).

Marchetto Santorun, M. Cecilia. “William Blake in Spanish Popular Culture and Literature.” Weaving Tales: Anglo-Iberian Encounters on Literatures in English. Ed. Paula García-Ramírez, Beatriz Valverde, Angélica Varandas, and Jason Whittaker. New York and Abingdon: Routledge, 2023. 18-31. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

An important overview of Blake’s reception in different regions of Spain.

McKenzie, D.F. “William Allingham’s Notebook of Poems by Blake.” Turnbull Library Record 1.3 (1968): 9-11. <BB #2203>

Notes the poems from Poetical Sketches and Songs recorded by Allingham (a Victorian poet) and his knowledge of Blake from Alexander Gilchrist and the Rossettis.

Orr, Chris. “The Life of W. Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 28.1 (summer 1994): 34-38. <WBHC 1651>

On the eight colored prints Orr designed based on Blake.

Otto, Peter. “‘Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age!’: Ōe Kenzaburō and William Blake on Bodies, Biopolitics, and the Imagination.” British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Ed. Alex

Watson and Laurence Williams. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. 361-83. <Blake (2020)>

Considers Blake's place in Œ's Rouse Up O Young Men of the New Age! (1983).

Paley, Morton D. "John Camden Hotten, A.C. Swinburne, and the Blake Facsimiles of 1868." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 79 (1976): 259-96. <BBS 598>

A detailed examination of the facsimiles produced by Henry John Bellars (d. 1868 or 1869) for the publisher John Camden Hotten (1832-73), with references to Hotten's relationship to Swinburne, the place of the facsimiles in the marketplace (with references to collectors, W. Graham Robertson, Kerrison Preston, Rosenbach, and Charles Eliot Norton), the Gilchrist, the Rossettis, and other Victorian facsimile projects. Paley corrects the record that Hotten's facsimiles were not produced to deceive.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake in "The Vanguard of the Age."" Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 39.4 (spring 2006): 185-86. <WBHC 1706>

On Blake's place in an Edward Armitage's painting, which was drawn by Herbert Johnson and reproduced in the nineteenth-century journal, The Architect, on 14 Jan. 1887.

Peter, Agnes. "The Reception of Blake in Hungary." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.3 (winter 2000-01): 68-81. <WBHC 1685>

See also Agnes's essay on the same topic in Erle and Paley's The Reception of William Blake in Europe.

Phillips, Michael. "The Reputation of Blake's Poetical Sketches 1783-1863." The Review of English Studies 26:101 (Feb. 1975): 19-33. <BBS 604, WBHC 2524>

A study of the volume's reception with a primary focus on Henry Crabb Robinson and Garth Wilkinson, with references to Flaxman, Henry James Sr., Emerson, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers. See Raymond H. Deck, Jr.'s sequel, "Blake's 'Poetical Sketches' Finally Arrive in America."

Picón, Daniela. Visiones de William Blake: Itinerarios de su recepción en los siglos XIX y XX. Madrid: Calambur Editorial, 2017. In Spanish. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2020)>

Pignard, Simone, trans. "Blake in French: An Interview with Pierre Leyris." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 9.4 (spring 1976): 115-16. <BBS 378>

Pignard conducted the interview. Leyris was the translator for the French edition of Blake's Oeuvres.

Procházka, Martin. "Senses against Proportions: Visuality and Vision in the Czech Modernist Reception of William Blake." Hradec Králové Journal of Anglophone Studies 4.2 (2017): 12-23. <Blake (2019)>

"The impact of Blake's work on the prints, books and paintings of the Czech artist Josef Váchal (1884-1969), and Váchal's controversy with the Czech pioneer of Cubism, Bohumil Kubišta (1884-1918), may help to understand the modernist (and originally romantic) changes of the traditional concept of visuality based on proportions into an expressive notion of vision rooted in the transformation of senses" (abstract).

Reitz, Bernhard. "Dangerous Enthusiasm: The Appropriation of William Blake in Adrian Mitchell's Tyger." Biofictions: The Rewriting of Romantic Lives in Contemporary Fiction and Drama. Ed. Martin Middeke and Werner Huber. Rochester, NY and Woodbridge, Suffolk: Camden House, 1999. 50-63. <WBHC 2579>

On Adrian Mitchell's 1971 play, Tyger, which is about Blake.⁵⁷⁵

Richardson, Alan. "British Romanticism as a Cognitive Category." Romanticism on the Net 8 (1997).

Considers the reception of the "big six" Romantic poets (including Blake) in twentieth-century literary anthologies.

Ritchie, Caroline Anjali. "Diagrammatic Blake: Tracing the Critical Reception of 'The Mental Traveller'." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 54:4 (spring 2021): 30 pars. <Blake (2022)>

Considers and critiques the tradition of using diagrams to understand "The Mental Traveller."

Ritchie, Caroline Anjali. "Symbols of embodied agency': The Reception of William Blake's Engravings for John Gabriel Stedman's Narrative \(1796\) in Contemporary Art and Visual Culture." 30 par. Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 58.2 (winter 2024-25): 30 pars. <Blake (2025)>

Considers the reception of the designs "in the works of British and American contemporary artists Sokari Douglas Camp, Jazzmen Lee-Johnson, and Hew Locke" (par. 6). There is also a thoughtful coda, "On Reproduction," addressing issues associated with reproducing the engravings (pars. 26-30).

Rose, Edward. "The 1839-Wilkinson Edition of Blake's Songs in Transcendental America." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 79-81. <BB #1217.66>

On copies owned by Ralph Waldo Emerson and Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who was a tutor to Emily Dickinson.

Rosenfeld, Alvin. "A Yiddish Poem on Blake." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.1 (Jun. 1968): 9. <BB #1217.17>

Reproduces a poem on Blake by "the American Yiddish poet, Reuben Iceland (Island, 1884-1953)" (9).

Rovira, James, ed. Rock and Romanticism: Blake, Wordsworth, and Rock from Dylan to U2. Lanham: Lexington Books, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Strong collection of essays on Romanticism's influence on Rock Music, with many on Blake.

⁵⁷⁵ See the review of the play by Michael Billington and Morton D. Paley, Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 5.3 (winter 1971-72), 209-10.

Sato, Hikari. "Mushakoji Saneatsu to Sylvia Pankhurst: Eikoku shakai-shugi-kei kikanshi de hodosareta 'Atarashiki mura' [Saneatsu Mushakoji and Sylvia Pankhurst: 'A New Village' Reported in a Socialist Newspaper in Britain]." Hikaku Bungaku [Journal of Comparative Literature] 62 (2020): 7-21. In Japanese. <Blake (2021)>

Although this essay mainly discusses the correspondence between Saneatsu Mushakoji, a Japanese novelist, dramatist, and social reformer, and Sylvia Pankhurst, a British suffragette, it points out that some poems from Songs of Experience were reprinted in Workers Dreadnought, a weekly newspaper edited and issued by Pankhurst in London ("The Chimney Sweeper" and "The Little Vagabond," 2 Dec. 1922, p. 1; "London" and "A Little Girl Lost," 9 Dec. 1922, p. 1; "Holy Thursday" and "A Little Boy Lost," 9 June 1923, p. 1).

Sato, Hikari. "Naze 'Entotsu' wo yakusanakattanoka—Sangu Makoto yaku Blake Senshu to Meiji Taisho kino Blake Rikai: Why Did He Not Translate 'Chimney' into Japanese?: The Translation of Blake by SANGU Makoto and the Reception of Blake in Japan in the Early Twentieth Century." Igirisu Roman ha Kenkyu: Essays in English Romanticism 35 (2011): 1-14. In Japanese, with an English abstract. <WBHC 2641-42>

"The Chimney Sweeper" was translated by Sangu as 'The Dust Sweeper' in Japanese because traditional Japanese houses did not have chimneys" (WBHC 2641-42).

Sato, Hikari. "W.H. Hudson no Kyosei Shiso to Jugaku Bunsho: William Blake no Keifu nouede [Ecological Consciousness of W.H. Hudson and Bunsho Jugaku: Following the Tracks of William Blake]." Kojitsuan [Sunward Cottage] 5 (2022): 1-7. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

The essay points out that W.H. Hudson, an author and ornithologist, mentions "Auguries of Innocence" in Birds in a Village (London: Chapman & Hall, 1893, 124-25), Birds in Town & Village (London: J.M. Dent, 1919, 172), Nature in Downland, 2nd ed. (London: Longmans, Green, 1900, 272), and The Land's End: A Naturalist's Impressions in West Cornwall (London: Hutchinson, 1908, 274), and "The Tyger" in Nature in Downland (244-45) and Birds and Man (London: Duckworth, 1915, 168-69). In W.H. Hudson: A Portrait (New York: E P. Dutton, 1924) Morley Roberts records their conversation as follows: "R. 'What do you think of Blake?' / H. 'I can't read his long mystical stuff, but of course I like Songs of Innocence'" (192).

Serdechnaia, Vera. Uil'yam Bleik v russkoi kul'ture (1834–2020) [William Blake in Russian Culture (1834–2020)]. Moscow: Gorodets, 2021. In Russian (abstract in English). <Blake (2022)>

This book offers the story of Blake's reception in Russian criticism, literature, and music. It covers translations, including the forgotten (Vladimir Elsner, 1912) and the newly discovered (Nikolai Gumilyov, 1919–21, and Serafima Remizova, 1920s–30s), and the way that Blake's poetry influenced such Russian poets as Konstantin Balmont, Jurgis Baltrušaitis, Daniil Kharms, Gumilyov, Joseph Brodsky, Veniamin Blazhenny, Yuri Stefanov, and Andrei Tavrov. Blake also caught the attention of a few Russian composers: Dmitrii Smirnov wrote about forty symphonic works on Blake; in 2020 Leonid Fedorov recorded an album, Blake, and Alexander Belousov created an opera,

The Book of Seraphim, based on The Book of Thel, at the Stanislavsky Electrotheatre, Moscow.

Serdechnaia, Vera. “Uil'iam Bleik v sovetskoi retseptsii: formirovanie obraza ‘revoliutsionnogo romantika’ [William Blake in the Soviet Reception: Forming the Image of ‘Revolutionary Romantic’].” Vestnik Permskogo universiteta. Rossiiskaia i zarubezhnaia filologija [Perm University Herald. Russian and Foreign Philology] 12.4 (2020): 136-46. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2021)>

“Soviet Blake was officially ‘born’ in 1957—after the World Peace Council’s decision on celebrations of the poet’s bicentennial. Blake, with a reputation tainted by the Symbolists, needed serious justification in Soviet literary criticism. The arguments for his justification were the revolutionary pathos of his poems, his democratic background and his humanism” (abstract). (See N.G.D. Malmqvist’s “Blake in China” for a description of how this impacted Blake’s reception in China.)

Serdechnaia, Vera. “Uil'jam Bleik v sovremennoi russkoi literature i kul'ture [William Blake in Contemporary Russian Literature and Culture].” Imagologiya i komparativistika [Imagology and Comparative Studies] 15 (2021): 71-88. In Russian (abstract in Russian and English). <Blake (2022)>

Son, Hyesook. “Canon Formation and the Reception of Blake’s and Dickinson’s Poetry in Korea.” Comparative Literature and Culture 16.6 (2014): 10 pp.⁵⁷⁶

“The reception of Blake’s and Dickinson’s work has symptomatically displayed the characteristic Korean interpretive frames working through the last six decades and their limits and inherent possibilities” (9).

“The Song of Milos.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 129.⁵⁷⁷

An announcement of Alan Rowland’s “illustrated booklet titled The Song of Milos, consisting of halftone reproductions of twelve drawings and line shots of lithographs with illustrations accompanying poetry” (129). “Rowlands states that ‘the influences which motivated Blake have, in a very much more minor key, influenced my own work. At this point I regret the similarity ends as my admiration for Blake far exceeds my own aspirations and my abilities likewise are of a diminutive quality’” (129).

Stauffer, Andrew M. “The First Known Publication of Blake’s Poetry in America.” Notes and Queries 43.1 (1996), 41-43. <WBHC 2702>

“The eleven printings of poems by Blake published in the National Anti-Slavery Standard (N.Y., 1842-1849) were probably selected by the editor, Lydia Maria Child” (WBHC 2702).

Stepanova, Angelina. “Rodnye dushi: D.N. Smirnov i U. Bleyk \(pamyati D.N. Smirnova\) (Soul mates: D.N. Smirnov and W. Blake (in memory of D.N. Smirnov)).” Muzyka i vremya (Music and time) 9: 37-41. In Russian. <Blake (2024)>

⁵⁷⁶ Not recorded in WBHC.

⁵⁷⁷ Not recorded in BBS.

The author considers the reception of Blake by Dmitri Smirnov (1948-2020), as a translator and a musician, who created his first two operas based on Blake's poems and translated his works into Russian; Smirnov has created his own view of Blake's works.

Torres, Alexander. "From Swedenborgianism to Abolitionism: The Reprinting of William Blake in Antebellum America." ESQ: A Journal of Nineteenth-Century American Literature and Culture. 66.2 (2020): 251-89. <Blake (2021)>

Foregrounding Blake's early American reception in Swedenborgian circles, argues that "the Spiritualist strain in Blake's Songs addresses the concerns of nineteenth-century social reformers, who enlisted a Spiritualist ideology to advance their goals" (254).

Trawick, Leonard. "William Blake's German Connection." Colby Library Quarterly 13.4 (1977): 229-45. <BB 663>

On Blake's possible knowledge of German literature and art through Fuseli and Lavater.

Trodd, Colin. Visions of Blake: William Blake in the Art World, 1830-1930. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2012. <WBHC 2782>

A very substantial examination of Blake's reception as an artist in the century after his death.

Trodd, Colin. "William Blake, the Arts and Crafts Movement and the Mythography of Manufacture." Art versus Industry? New Perspectives on Visual and Industrial Cultures in Nineteenth-Century Britain. Ed. Kate Nichols, Rebecca Wade, and Gabriel Williams. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2016. <Blake (2017, 2018)>

"This essay [...] concentrates on the interpretative schema that allowed commentators to put forward the view that the future belonged to the artist-as-manufacturer; that authentic manufacture was one of the key elements in the aesthetic ideal of society; and that Blake's art accelerated progress toward this truth" (81). Highlights Ruskin, Gilchrist, and the Rossetti circle.

Visconti, Joseph. "Blake after Blake: A Nation Discovers Genius." Blake, Empire, and Nation. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Palgrave, 2006. 214-50. <WBHC 1866-69>

An important description of the production of Gilchrist's Life that considers how Blake's reception before 1863 shaped the book and how the illustrations for the book were produced by W.J. Linton.

Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. <Blake (2017)>

Several essays examine Blake's reception in largely a British and European context, mostly in the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Warner, Janet. "A Videotape of America Produced at York University." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.3 (winter 1971): 65-66.⁵⁷⁸

⁵⁷⁸ Not recorded in BB.

Details the making of Blake's America, a videotape produced at York University by Warner, John Sutherland, and Robert Wallace, which would allow to students “to see all the plates of America, hear the whole poem read dramatically, and at the same time interpret the poem for them in a way that would link it to past and present historical events” (65). “We [...] used pictures of modern student riots and other political events which bore out the themes of political and psychological revolution” (65-66).

Warner, Nicholas O. “Shaw, Tolstoy and Blake's Russian Reputation.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 102-04. <BBS 395>

Notes Bernard Shaw's reference to Blake in a 1910 letter to Leo Tolstoy, and considers Blake's reception in Russia, including Konstantin Bal'mont, M.N. Gutner, E. A. Nekrasova, Anna Elistratova, S.I. Marshak, and Victor Zhirmunski.

Watson, Alex, and Laurence Williams, ed. British Romanticism in Asia: The Reception, Translation, and Transformation of Romantic Literature in India and East Asia. Singapore: Palgrave Macmillan-Springer, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

Blake figures in three essays, with a primary focus on Japan.

Wellens, Oskar. “A Dutch Bibliophile Edition of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell \(1928\).” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.3 (winter 2003-04): 104-07. <WBHC 1695>

“The Marriage of Heaven and Hell was edited by P.N. van Eyck, printed by John Enschedé with Jan van Krimpen's Lutetia type, and published by Alexandre Alphonse Marius Stols at his Halcyon Press in 325 copies, ‘a brilliant example of their superior craftsmanship’ (WBHC 1695).

Wilson, Rob. “Hirelings in the Camp, the Court & the University: Some Figurations of US English Departments, Area Studies and Masao Miyoshi as Blakean Poet.” Comparative American Studies 2.3 (2004): 385-96. <WBHC 2873>

“I will build out from some poems, anecdotes and historical memories as well as play upon Kenzaburo Oe's figurations of Blake as visionary poet of geopolitical transformation and a revolutionary will to liberationist energies to connect the work Masao Miyoshi has done and prodded into trans/disciplinary and transnational coalition since the 1970s” (abstract).

Whitehead, Angus. “Visions of Blake, the Artist: An Early Reference to William Blake in the Times.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 41.1 (summer 2007): 46-47. <WBHC 1712>

Records a 27 Jan. 1830 review of Cunningham's Lives that references Blake.

Whittaker, Jason. “‘By the Voice of the Servant of the Lord’: Blake's New Jerusalem and Swedenborgianism in the Work of Sheila Kaye-Smith.” William Blake's Manuscripts: Praxis, Puzzles, and Palimpsests. Ed. Mark Crosby and Josephine A. McQuail. Switzerland: Palgrave Macmillan, 2024. 329-46. <Blake (2025)>

Examines the engagement with Blake by the twentieth-century novelist, Sheila Kaye-Smith (1887-1956), with references to the influence of Yeats.

Whittaker, Jason. "Dark Angels: Blake, Milton, and Lovecraft in Ridley Scott's Prometheus." William Blake's Gothic Imagination: Bodies of Horror. Ed. Chris Bundock and Elizabeth Effinger. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2018. 109-28. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

On how Scott used Blake and Milton in his film.

Whittaker, Jason. "Everyday Blake and the Digital Humanities." POETICA: An International Journal of Linguistic-Literary Studies 79 (2013). 1-15. Special Issue: "Digital Romanticisms." Ed. Steve Clark.⁵⁷⁹

Suggests ways in which digital humanities can further the study of Blake through data visualization and text-mining, highlighting Blake's reception on Twitter.

Whittaker, Jason. Jerusalem: Blake, Parry, and the Fight for Englishness. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2022. <Blake (2023-2025)>

A definitive and detailed reception history of the "Jerusalem" hymn and its setting by Hubert Parry in relationship to English identity from the poem's composition in Milton to the summer of 2020.

Whittaker, Jason. "Newton's Compass: From Blake to Britart." Blake Journal 7 (2002): 33-45. <WBHC 1752>

"Blake's influence on 20th-century British artist" (WBHC 1752).

Whittaker, Jason. "Trannies, Amputees and Disco Queens: Blake and Contemporary Queer Art." Queer Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 87-96. <WBHC 1801-03>

Shows Blake's influence on Queer artists Cerith Wyn Evans (b. 1958) and Joel-Peter Witkin (b. 1939).

Whittaker, Jason. "Zoamorphosis: 250 Years of Blake Mutations." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 207-24. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An overview of Blake's reception that offers a rationale of sorts for Whittaker's webpage on Blake's reception, Zoamorphosis. It includes a brief case study on Blake's reception among spiritualist and occult circles.

Whittaker, Jason. "Zoamorphosis: The Blake 2.0 Blog. William Blake in Art, Music, Film, and Literature."

An ongoing blog that details Blake's contemporary reception. A key resource for how Blake has been referenced in the twenty-first century.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. Nineteenth Century Accounts of William Blake. Gainesville: Scholars' Facsimiles and Reprints, 1970.

Reprints early biographical accounts of Blake (Malkin, Robinson, Smith, Cunningham, and Tatham) along with Yeats' introduction to his Poems of William Blake (1905).

⁵⁷⁹ Not recorded in WBHC.

Zino, Dominique. "The Invisible Hand of the Lyric: Emily Dickinson's Hypermediated Manuscripts and the Debate over Genre." Textual Cultures 10.1 (2016): 1-36. <Blake (2019)>

Includes a substantial discussion of Blake's American reception and its impact on Dickinson's own: "By looking at the complexities Dickinson's first editor and critics faced when classifying her work, we can see the way the allusions to Blake were both efforts at lending a material and informational body to Dickinson's texts, while also burying them deeper in a lyric tradition" (25).

Religion (Including Introductions; General Studies; Antinomianism and Popular Millenarianism; Atheism, Secularization, and Post-Secularization; Bible; Buddhism; Gnosticism; Hinduism; Islam; Judaism; Methodism; Moravianism; Mysticism, Occult, and Alchemy; Norse Mythology; \(Neo\)Platonism; Satan and Satanism; Swedenborg and Swedenborgianism; and Zoroastrianism) (See also Blake and Hymns in Music)

Introductions

Balfour, Ian. "Prophecy." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 113-19. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Hagstrum, Jean H. "Christ's Body." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 129-56.⁵⁸⁰ <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

On Blake's depictions of Christ in both his poetry and designs.

Hagstrum, Jean H. 'What Seems to Be Is': Blake's Idea of God." Johnson and His Age. Ed. James Engell. Cambridge and London, 1984. 425-58.⁵⁸¹ <BBS 498>

Drawing from Blake's writings in toto, a good overview of Blake's ideas of religion and God.

Jewkes, W.T. "Blake's Creation Myths as Archetypes of Art." Directions in Literary Criticism: Contemporary Approaches to Literature. Ed. Stanley Weintraub and Philip Young. University Park and London: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1973. 127-41. <BB #A1960>

A description of Blake's different accounts of creation in light of different Western creation myths.

Mee, Jon. "Blake and the Poetics of Enthusiasm." The Cambridge Companion to English Literature 1740-1830. Ed. Thomas Keymer and Jon Mee. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2004. 194-210 <WBHC 2392>

Positions Blake in the literary-religious culture described at length in Mee's own Dangerous Enthusiasm.

Prickett, Stephen, and Christopher Stratham. "Blake and the Bible." Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 109-31. <WBHC 2867-68>

Surveys Blake's complicated relationship to the Bible, highlighting critical work by Northrop Frye, Harold Bloom, Jerome McGann, and A.D. Nuttall, and Morton D. Paley.

Raz, Yosefa. "Imagining the Hebrew Ode: On Robert Lowth's Biblical Species." Prooftexts 40.1 (2023): 85-109. <Blake (2024)>

⁵⁸⁰ Rpt. in Hagstrum's Eros and Vision: The Restoration to Romanticism (Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 1989), 193-219, <BBS 599>.

⁵⁸¹ Rpt. in Hagstrum's Eros and Vision: The Restoration to Romanticism (Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 1989), 221-44, <BBS 498>.

"I argue that the seemingly neutral presentations of the genres of biblical poetry in the twentieth century, which we have learned to take for granted in our reading of the Bible as a literature, are rooted in an eighteenth-century encounter: the English exegete Robert Lowth's dramatic attempt to fit Greek and Roman generic models to the Hebrew text" (86).

Roberts, Jonathan, and Christopher Rowland. "William Blake." The Blackwell Companion to the Bible in English Literature. Ed. Rebecca Lemon, Emma Mason, Jonathan Roberts, and Christopher Rowland. Chichester: Wiley-Blackwell, 2009. <WBHC 2597>

Ryan, Robert. "Blake and Religion." The Cambridge Companion to William Blake. Ed. Morris Eaves. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003. 150-68. <WBHC 1969-72>

Traces Blake's ideas of religion largely through his mythological system.

Wojcik, Jan, and Raymond-Jean Frontain. "Introduction: The Prophet in the Poem." Poetic Prophecy in Western Literature. Ed. Jan Wojcik and Raymond-Jean Frontain. Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck: Farleigh Dickinson University Press; London and Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1984. 13-30.

Recounts the tradition of the poet as prophet from the Bible to the twentieth century.

General Studies

Altizer, Thomas J. J. "Blake and the French Revolution." History as Apocalypse. Albany: State University New York Press, 1985. 175-207. <BBS 336>

Highlights the importance of the French Revolution to Blake from a religious, political, and artistic perspective, focusing largely on Jerusalem.

Altizer, Thomas J. J. The New Apocalypse: The Radical Christian Vision of William Blake. 1967. Aurora, CO: Davies Group Publishers, 2000. <BB #807, WBHC 1483>

Classic study of Blake's idea of Christianity. The 2000 edition contains a new afterword.

Altizer, Thomas J. J. "The Revolutionary Vision of William Blake." Journal of Religious Ethics 37.1 (2009): 33-38. <WBHC 2218-19>

"Blake's prophetic poetry [...] contributes to the renewal of Christian ethics by a process of subversion and negation of Christian moral, ecclesiastical, and theological traditions" (abstract). Highlights Milton and Jerusalem.

Ando, Eiko. "The Four Zoas: Blake's Jesus." Centre and Circumference: Essays in English Romanticism. Association of English Romanticism in Japan. Ed. Kenkichi Kamijima. Tokyo: Kiriha Shoten, 1995. 114-26. <WBHC 2233-34>

"Blake uses the word "Saviour" 50 times, while "Redeemer" is used only 3 times. This shows that Blake seems not to accept Atonement' (123)" (WBHC 2234).

Ankarsjö, Magnus. William Blake and Religion: A New Critical View. Jefferson: McFarland & Co., 2009. <WBHC 1491>

Considering much of the poetry and prose, incorporates discoveries regarding Blake's mother's connections to Moravianism into his analysis of Blake's religious arguments, with discussions of Swedenborgianism and Unitarianism.

Barbeau, Jeffrey W. The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

An interesting collection of essays, many of which make brief references to Blake.

Behrendt, Stephen C. "History When Time Stops: Blake's America, Europe, and The Song of Los." Papers on Language and Literature 28 (1992): 379-97. <WBHC 1595>

On Blake's early millenarianism: "The liberation (and subsequent individuation or self-realization) of individuals is the real goal of the Blakean millennium" (396).

Behrendt, Stephen C. "The Soul of Sweet Delight': Blake and the Sensual Soul." European Romantic Review 15.3 (2004): 409-23. <WBHC 1596>

"Blake associates soul with the senses" (409). Examines the illustrations to Robert Blair's The Grave.

Billingsley, Naomi. "An 'Apostle of Futurity': William Blake as Herald of a Universal Religious Worldview." Visual Culture in Britain 19.3 (2018). Special Issue: "William Blake: The Man from the Future?" Ed. Colin Trodd and Jason Whittaker. 321-34. <Blake (2017)>

Considers how Blake's notion of universal religion influenced the Australian Blake Prize for religious art.

Billingsley, Naomi. The Visionary Art of William Blake: Christianity, Romanticism and the Pictorial Imagination. London: I.B. Tauris, 2018. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2021)>

Key recent work on the Bible temperas and the Bible watercolors. Discusses Blake's depictions of Christ between the Night Thoughts watercolors and the Illustrations of the Book of Job, considering the intersection of Blake's "religious thought, his aesthetic theories, and his pictorial works and methods" (3).

Bindman, David. "William Blake: Prophet and History Painter." The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come. Ed. Frances Carey. Toronto and Buffalo: University of Toronto Press, 1999. 219-23. <WBHC 1283>

The section on Blake appears in a wider chapter by Bindman titled, "The English Apocalypse," which provides a useful context for Blake's apocalyptic paintings. The Apocalypse and the Shape of Things to Come is the catalogue for exhibition held at the British Museum Department of Prints and Drawings from 17 Dec. 1999 to 24 Apr. 2000.

Bindman, David. William Blake and Popular Religious Imagery. Burlington Magazine 128 (1986): 712-18. <BBS 374>

A short, but important essay highlighting how Blake employed popular visual religious imagery, with Bindman highlighting probable visual sources for designs in There is No Natural Religion, Europe, Jerusalem, and Laocoön.

Bloom, Harold. "Catastrophe Creation: Gnosis, Kabbalah and Blake." Agon: Towards a Theory of Revisionism. New York and Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1982. 72-90. <BBS 414>

Considers Blake's account of the Creation and the Demiurge alongside that of Gnosticism and the Kabbalah.

Brown, Norman O. "The Prophetic Tradition." Studies in Romanticism 21.3 (fall 1982): 367-86. <BBS 649-50>

"We will not get 'Blake and Tradition' right until we see the tradition the Prophetic Tradition, including Judaism, Christianity and Islam; and heresies in Judaism, Christianity and Islam" (367).

Bundock, Christopher M. Romantic Prophecy and the Resistance to Historicism. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2016. <Blake (2019, 2020)>

Treats Blake's notions of prophecy and history in Milton especially, but with many references to the annotations to Watson and A Descriptive Catalogue. He also considers the prefaces of the Lambeth prophecies and considers the poems themselves as prefaces for Blake's later poems. Some discussion of Blake in relationship to both Mary and Percy Shelley and to Kierkegaard.

Callaghan, Madeleine. "All is done as I have told': Blake's Eternal Prophecy." Eternity in Romantic Poetry. Liverpool: Liverpool University Press, 2022. 23-58. <Blake (2023)>

The chapter surveys Blake's idea of eternity in multiple works.

Chen, Kang-Po. "The Knife of flint passes over the howling Victim': Rethinking Sacrificial Violence in William Blake's Jerusalem." Tamkang Review 54.2 (2024): 47-75. <Blake (2025)>

"Engaging with Georges Bataille's conception of the sacred, I would propose that ritualistic violence and bodily consumption proffer an alternative route to Romantic artistic imagination, challenging the critical consensus that Blake leans towards the spiritual and renounces the corporeal in his late works" (abstract).

Clark, David L. "Visibility Should Not Be Visible': Blake's Borders and the Regime of Sight." Wordsworth Circle 25.1 (1994): 29-36. <WBHC 1854>

Analyzes "When the Morning Stars Sang Together" from the Illustrations of the Book of Job: "what I want to argue is that Blake here interrogates the disciplinary mechanism (or 'technology' as Foucault would say) by which the specifically 'theological' subject is framed—at once formed, regulated and ultimately bewitched under the immediate eye of heaven" (29).

Clark, Steve. "Jerusalem as Imperial Prophecy." Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 136-52. 167-85. <WBHC 1866-69>

Suggests the religious and nationalistic concerns of Jerusalem are reflected in the Protestant nationalism of the 1820s as exemplified by William Carey and Edward Irving.

Cogan, Lucy. Blake and the Failure of Prophecy. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2021. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

“[T]here was never any one stable model of prophecy animating Blake’s work, which was instead motivated by a continual urge to reinterpret the effect and significance of prophecy in the world” (4).

Davie, Donald. A Gathered Church: The Literature of the English Dissenting Interests, 1700-1930. London and Henley, 1976. 49-54. <BBS 448>

Though Blake’s familial connection to Dissent has been disproven (see Davies and Worrall’s “Inconvenient Truths”), Davie’s study is useful for its description of the history and forms of Dissenting and Methodist hymns that did influence Blake. There is much on Isaac Watts, the Wesleys, and Whitefield, and less on Barbauld and the Moravians.

Davies, J. G. The Theology of William Blake. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1948. Hamden, CT, 1965. Rpt. Archon Books, 1966. <BB #1466, BBS 448, WBHC 1924-25>

“Davies attempts to assert Blake’s religious orthodoxy, but he is illuminating on Blake’s relations with the Swedenborgians, particularly in demonstrating the impossibility of the legend that Blake’s father and family belonged to the New Church” (BB #1466).

Davies, Keri. “George Whitefield, the Moravians, and ‘Andrew the Negro boy.’” Index Rerum. 18 Jan. 2024.⁵⁸²

“The paper explores Whitefield’s motives in entrusting ‘Andrew the Negro Boy’ to Moravian care, expands on previous accounts, and shows how this relates to other episodes in Whitefield’s relationship with the Moravian Church before the decisive violent break following the publication of his Expostulatory Letter of 1753. In addition to my text presented in Bethlehem PA, I have added comments (Scholia) not explored on that occasion and a biographical listing (Prosopography) of persons mentioned in the text” (par. 3). These persons include Catherine Blake, Blake’s mother.

Essick, Robert N. William Blake and the Language of Adam. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1989. <BBS 465, WBHC 1999-2000>

A study of Blake’s conception of language with an analysis of the paintings, Adam Naming the Beasts and Eve Naming the Birds, and most of the poetry. Includes a discussion of the Kabbalah and Hebrew, Blake’s notion of the linguistic sign, his notion of the Fall, and Blake and other Romantic-era writers on language.

Essick, Robert N. “William Blake, Thomas Paine, and Biblical Revolution.” Studies in Romanticism 30.2 (1991): 189-212. <BBS 465-66, WBHC 2003>

With references primarily to Marriage, Urizen, and the annotations to Watson, examines Blake’s complicated relationship with Paine and other Enlightenment radicals, such as Joseph Johnson and Mary Wollstonecraft: “The Johnson circle was at once too secular in its liberalism and not radical enough in its revolutionism to satisfy Blake. The biblical revolution of the past had been replaced by a deistic ideology that was in part a revolution against biblical tradition” (212).

⁵⁸² “A version of this paper was presented to the Bethlehem Conference on Moravian History & Music in Bethlehem PA in October 2010” (Davies, par. 1).

Fallon, David. “‘she Cuts his Heart Out at his Side’: Blake, Christianity and Political Virtue.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 84-104. <WBHC 2113-15>

Examines the conflict between “republican discourse and Christian principles” (84) in Europe, The [First] Book of Urizen, and Jerusalem and its implication for gender.

Goldsmith, Steven. “Nothing Lost: Blake and the New Materialism.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 212-29. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

“Blake’s unqualified religious enthusiasm (including his redemptive ideal of art) grasps the force and magnitude of loss more persuasively than does the covert, secularized faith characteristic of many materialist discourses today” (221).

Goldsmith, Steven. Unbuilding Jerusalem: Apocalypse and Romantic Representation. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1993. <WBHC 2087>

The central chapters (cf. 85-208) are concerned with Blake, tracing the influence of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century interpreters of Apocalyptic imagery (e.g., Joseph Mede) on Blake and tracing the relationship of Blake’s radicalism to the millennial ideas of Enlightenment-grounded radicals like Paine.

Goslee, Nancy Moore. “‘soul’ in Blake’s Writing: Redeeming the Word.” Wordsworth Circle 33.1 (2002): 18-23. <WBHC 2093>

On the shifting meaning of “soul” from “an individual self” to a “corporate self” (21) in the works of the 1790s.

Goslee, Nancy Moore. “‘soul-shudd’ring Vacuum’: Space for Subjects in Later Blake.” European Romantic Review 15.3 (2004): 391-407. <WBHC 2093>

On Blake’s idea of the soul in his later works.

Gundy, Jeff. “Notes toward the Heretical Sublime.” Cross Currents 60.1 (Mar. 2010): 24-44. <WBHC 2110>

The second half of the essay examines the attacks on religious institutions in Songs and Marriage.

Hagstrum, Jean H. “The Wrath of the Lamb: A Study of William Blake’s Conversions.” From Sensibility to Romanticism: Essays Presented to Frederick A. Pottle. Ed. Frederick W. Hilles and Harold Bloom. New York: Oxford University Press, 1965. 311-30. <BB #1773>

Analyzes Blake’s early and late depictions of Christ in his poetry (chiefly the Songs and the later epics) to understand Blake’s sense of Christianity.

Hobson, Christopher Z. “Blake, Paul, and Sexual Antinomianism.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 52.3 (winter 2018-19): 37 pars. <Blake (2019)>

“The development of Blake’s ideas on sexuality and moral law centers on a sustained appropriative and revisionary, sometimes polemical, engagement with biblical texts” (par. 1).

Holt, Ted. "Blake's 'Elohim' and the Hutchinsonian Fire: Anti-Utopianism and Christian Hebraism in the Work of William Blake." Romanticism 9.1 (2003): 20-36. <WBHC 2161>

On the influence of the Hutchinsonians, an eighteenth-century religious movement critical of Isaac Newton and who used the term "Elohim" for God.

Hurley, Michael D. "William Blake: Destabilized Particulars." Faith in Poetry: Verse Style as a Mode of Religious Belief. London: Bloomsbury, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

"Blake sees the artistic endeavour as vitally connected to the activity of what religion should and can uniquely do, through imaginative investment in the particular over the abstract" (25).

James, G. Ingli. "The Holy and the Heterodox: William Blake's Transformational Use of Religious Language." Studia Mystica 14.1 (1991): 31-44. <BBS 525>

"Examples of 'the subversive implications' of 'Blake's unconventional use of conventional religious imagery'" (BBS 525).

James, John Patrick. "Blake's Debt: Artisanship and the Future of Labor." Literature Compass 19.3-4 (2022): 15 pp. <Blake (2023)>

"Investigates William Blake's poetic response to the problems of religious and financial debt within the context of his own environmentally compromised era" (abstract).

James, G. Ingli. "William Blake and Feminist Theology: Some Observations on the Affinities." Feminist Theology 4.11 (Jan. 1996): 72-85. <WBHC 2204>

"Chiefly concerned with 'how much there is in Blake which particularly resonates with feminist theology, both . . . Christian and post-Christian'" (73)" (WBHC 2204).⁵⁸³

Jarvis, Simon. "Blake's Spiritual Body." The Meaning of "Life" in Romantic Poetry and Poetics. Ed. Ross Wilson. Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2008. 13-32. <WBHC 2207>

Suggests that Blake's conception of the spiritual and natural body highlights "[t]he opposition [...] between the subjective body and the objective body: between the body which I am and the body which I have; between the body which touches and the body which is touched" (14).

Jasper, David. "Desert Theology and Total Presence: The Poets William Blake and Yves Bonnefoy Meet Hegel and Tom Altizer." The Sacred Desert: Religion, Literature, Art, and Culture. Malden, Oxford, and Victoria: Blackwell Publishing, 2004. 142-59. <WBHC 2207>

Considers Blake's notion of Christianity, particularly as filtered through Altizer, in a wider reflection on spirituality, deserts, and the wilderness.

John, Donald. "'They became what they beheld': Theodicy and Regeneration in Milton, Law, and Blake." Radicalism in British Literary Culture 1650-1830. Ed. Timothy Morton and Nigel Smith. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2002. 86-100, 235-40. <WBHC 2211>

⁵⁸³ Bentley's emendation.

Considers Blake's ideas of creation, the Fall, resurrection, and theodicy in relationship to Milton and William Law's notion of Jacob Boehme, with references to Swedenborg and the Gnostics as well.

Kirwan, Michael. "A Candle in Sunshine': Desire and Apocalypse in Blake and Hölderlin." Contagion: Journal of Violence, Mimesis, and Culture 9 (2012): 179-204. <WBHC 2257>

On the Blake's and Hölderlin's relationship to Christianity: "For all that each finds orthodox, organized Christianity untenable, Blake's resistance to Hellenism in favor of an adherence to biblical 'prophetic' logic seems to allow for a less self-destructive alternative" (185).

Korshin, Paul. Typologies in England, 1650-1820. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. <BBS 451>

He discusses Blake's use of typology on pp. 348-58, with references to him throughout.

Kuntz, Paul Grimley. "William Blake and the Ten Commandments." Soundings 83.2 (2000): 427-51. <WBHC 2298>

"William Blake is as great a liberator of the moral imagination" (449).

Larrissy, Edward. "Blake and the Hutchinsonians." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 20.2 (fall 1986): 44-47. <BBS 399>

Sees similarities between Blake's thought and that of John Hutchinson (1674-1737) and his followers who "were the main school of anti-Newtonians with any claim to scientific method in eighteenth-century England" (44).

Larrissy, Edward. "Spectral Imposition and Visionary Imposition: Printing and Repetition in Blake." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steven Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press, 1999. 61-77. <WBHC 2812-13>

Brings together Blake's reflections on and vocabulary for his printing method (e.g., "imposition") with "the idea of redemption" (61).

Leporati, Matthew. "'Mark Well My Words! They Are of Your Eternal Salvation': William Blake's Milton as Missionary against Empire." Romantic Epics and the Mission of Empire. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2023. 183-224. <Blake (2024, 2025)>

"In exploring the power of art to promote a freedom from Selfhood, Blake is subverting the tendency of Christian evangelism, along with the secular civilizing mission, to reify the dichotomy between self and Other upon which imperialism is largely predicated" (219).

Lewis, Kevin. "The Impasse of Coleridge and the Way of Blake." The Interpretation of Belief: Coleridge, Schleiermacher and Romanticism. Ed. David Jasper. London, 1986. 225-43. New York: St. Martin's Press, 1986. <BBS 550>

"[W]hile William Blake is effectively a Modern, Coleridge remains an Ancient whose thought, for that reason, remains effectively unavailable for appropriately modern enterprise of theological reformulation" (225).

Lewis, Kevin. “The Use of Blake and the Recovery of Fideism.” Journal of the American Academy of Religion 54.4 (1986): 741-57. <BBS 550>

“The time is ripe for the proposal of a better way to make use of the visionary artist in theological circles. [. . .] This essay emphasizes the elements of the later Blake (in the poem Jerusalem) that link him with the radical Reformation in England and with evangelical ‘enthusiasm’ and purpose” (741).

Lincoln, Andrew. “Restoring the Nation to Christianity: Blake and the Aftermyth of Revolution.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 153-66. <WBHC 1866-69>

Suggests Milton and Jerusalem reflect widespread evangelical fears of deism that spurred “a willingness to reach across doctrinal differences” (159).

Lincoln, Andrew. “Revisiting Blake’s Innocence.” Interfaces 30 (2010): 35-46. <WBHC 2190-91>

“I want to consider the vision of creation in The Book of Thel in relation to those areas of Blake’s religious ideas that we are likely to have some difficulty with” (36).

Lincoln, Andrew. “Restoring the Nation to Christianity: Blake and the Aftermyth of Revolution.” Blake, Nation, and Empire. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 153-66. <WBHC 1866-69>

Suggests Milton and Jerusalem reflect widespread evangelical fears of deism that spurred “a willingness to reach across doctrinal differences” (159).

Matthews, Susan. “An Alternative National Gallery: Blake’s 1809 Exhibition and the Attack on Evangelical Culture.” Tate Papers 14 (autumn 2010): 28 par. <WBHC 2752>

“This essay suggests that Blake’s 1809 exhibition was haunted by the memory of the Irish painter James Barry (1741–1806) and his concerns about the nation’s visual culture” (abstract).

McGann, Jerome J. “The Aim of Blake’s Prophecies and the Uses of Blake Criticism.” Blake’s Sublime Allegory: Essays on The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem. Ed. Stuart Curran and Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1973. 3-21. <BB #A1437, BBS 446, WBHC 1913>

Considers Blake’s purpose in his epics and the purpose of Blake criticism: “Do we not violate Blake’s poetry by encouraging, in ourselves or in others, an analytic or systematic approach to it? Or is it true, as some readers have hinted, that Blake’s own attack upon Urizenic attitudes are themselves belied by his poetry, and thrown back by his complex ‘system?’” (3).

Miner, Paul. “Blake and the Sinful Arts of Forgiveness.” English Studies 86.5 (2005): 399-423. <WBHC 2409>

“William Blake irrevocably associated the sexual act with the Forgiveness of Sins and artistic Inspiration, and this study assesses the important elements of this perspective for purgation is a crucial dynamic in understanding Blake’s allegory” (399).

Morris, David B. “‘The Egoistical Sublime’: Blake, Wordsworth, and Coleridge.” The Religious Sublime: Christian Poetry and Critical Tradition 18th Century England. Lexington: University of Kentucky Press, 1972. 180-96. <BBS 578>

A good introduction to the development of the sublime in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The section on Blake (pp. 182-87) suggests his notion of the sublime was “profoundly personal” (182).

Moskal, Jeanne. Blake, Ethics, and Forgiveness. Tuscaloosa and London: University of Alabama Press, 1994.⁵⁸⁴ <WBHC 2431-33>

On the evolution Blake’s concept of forgiveness, highlighting the annotations to Lavater, The Everlasting Gospel, Illustrations of the Book of Job, and the illustrations to Dante.

Murphy, John P. “Building Golgonooza in the Age of Aquarius.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 160-81. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Chronicles Aethelred and Alexandra Eldridge’s Church of William Blake in Golgonooza, Ohio.

Okuma, Akinobu. “Beyond ‘spiritual Sensation’: Reconstructing Blake’s Concept of the Soul.” Centre and Circumference: Essays in English Romanticism. Association of English Romanticism in Japan. Ed. Kenkichi Kamijima. Tokyo: Kiriwara Shoten, 1995. 67-82. <WBHC 2233-34>

Attempts “to find out the concept of the soul hidden behind Blake’s fascinatingly entangled narration” (68).

Paley, Morton D. “Blake.” Apocalypse and Millennium in English Romantic Poetry. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1999. 32-90 and passim.⁵⁸⁵ <WBHC 2495>

A key study of Blake in the context of apocalyptic and millenarian thinking and social moments in the Romantic era. Blake is referenced in other chapters as well.

Priestman, Martin. “And did those feet? Blake in the 1790s.” Romantic Atheism: Poetry and Free Thought, 1780-1830. Cambridge: University Press, 1999. 80-121, 268-74. <WBHC 2547>

Emphasizes Blake’s heterodoxy and religious skepticism rather than claiming outright Blake was an atheist.

Raz, Yosefa. “Walking through Blake’s Irregular Bible.” The Poetics of Prophecy: Modern Afterlives of a Biblical Tradition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2024. 56-88. <Blake (2025)>

⁵⁸⁴ Incorporates Moskal’s “Forgiveness, Love and Pride in Blake’s The Everlasting Gospel,” Religion and Literature 20.2 (1988), 19-39, <BBS 579, WBHC 2433>; “The Problem of Forgiveness in Blake’s Annotations to Lavater,” Studies in Philology 86.2 (1989), 65-86, <BBS 580, WBHC 2433>; “Friendship and Forgiveness in Blake’s Illustrations to Job,” South Atlantic Review 55.2 (1990), 15-31, <BBS 580, WBHC 2433>; and “Blake, Dante, and ‘Whatever is for Vengeance,’ ” Philological Quarterly 70.3 (1991), 310-38, <BBS 579, WBHC 2430>.

⁵⁸⁵ Partly “rewritten from” “Milton and the Form of History,” Aligarh Journal of English Studies 10.1 (1985), 66-80 (WBHC 2495).

Suggests that the Bible was a model for Blake's own textual instability: "Rather than functioning as an underlying code or ordering system, the biblical text often generates disorder and further instability. More broadly, the Bible cannot function as a codebook, containing a unified system of symbols or archetypes, which might serve to decipher Blake's puzzling texts; it is itself a fundamentally unstable document" (59). Blake is also considered in "Coda: Blake and Isaiah 6" in the chapter on Robert Lowth, "Seraphic Choirs and Stuttering Prophets: Symmetry, Disorder, and the Invention of the Literary Bible," pp. 27-55.

Rigby, Kate. "'the wrong dream': Prophetic Ecopoetics." Reclaiming Romanticism: Towards an Ecopoetics of Decolonization. London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2020. 113-47. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

"I identify a specifically ecopoetic variant of the prophetic mode of Romantic literature, as exemplified above all by Blake" (113).

Rix, Robert. William Blake and the Cultures of Radical Christianity. Hampshire: Ashgate, 2007. <WBHC 2593-94>

A very useful study for understanding Blake's relationship to both Enlightenment-grounded radicals and Swedenborgians, especially in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Rogal, Samuel J. "Blake's 'And did those feet' as Congregational Hymn." Hymn 44.3 (Jul. 1993): 22-25. <WBHC 2601>⁵⁸⁶

"Includes a history of its composition and performance" (WBHC 2601).

Rosso, G.A. The Religion of Empire: Political Theology in Blake's Prophetic Symbolism. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2016.⁵⁸⁷ <Blake (2017, 2019, 2020)>

An important examination of the figures of Rahab and Tirzah in the later works.

Rowland, Christopher. "Friends of Albion?: The Dangers of Cathedrals." Speaking of God in an Inhumane World: Essays on Liberation Theology and Radical Christianity. Vol. 1. Eugene, OR: Cascade Books, 2024. 180-93. <Blake (2025)>

Uses Blake's views of cathedrals ("[D]espite exceptional prophetic spirits who emerged from some of the cathedrals, he saw that the Christian religion was severely compromised by the cathedrals' cultural ethos and opposed to the way of Jesus" [180-81]) as the starting point for his own reflection on cathedral culture.

Rowland, Christopher. "'From impulse not from rules': William Blake's Apocalyptic Pedagogy." Radical Prophet: The Mystics, Subversives and Visionaries Who Strove for Heaven on Earth. London: I.B. Tauris, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

"This chapter covers familiar themes in Blake scholarship: prophecy, of course, but also the place of Law, the centrality of 'Contraries,' Blake's juxtaposition of texts and images, ⁵⁸⁶ "Rogal" is misspelled in WBHC as "Rogel" and alphabetized according to the error.

⁵⁸⁷ Incorporates Rosso's "The Religion of Empire: Blake's Rahab in Its Biblical Contexts," Prophetic Character, ed. Alexander S. Gourlay (2002), 287-326, <WBHC 2095-98>, and "The Last Strumpet: Harlotry and Hermaphroditism in Blake's Rahab," Blake, Gender and Culture, ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly (2012), 25-36, <WBHC 1800-01>.

and how his work fits into the story of Christian radicalism” (99). The chapter is also part of a section dedicated to comparing Blake and Gerrard Winstanley.

Rowland, William G. “Religious Vocation and Blake’s Obscurity.” Literature and the Marketplace: Romantic Writers and their Audiences in Great Britain and the United States. Lincoln and London: University of Nebraska Press, 1996. 63-88. <WBHC 2621>

“‘Blake in some ways courted oblivion’ (75)” (WBHC 2621).

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake, Apocalyptic Poet and Painter.” “By an Immediate Revelation”: Studies in Apocalypticism, Its Origins and Effects. Tübingen, Germany: Mohr Siebeck, 2022. 629-738. <Blake (2023, 2024)>

A massive study of apocalypticism from the Hebrew Bible to William Blake that draws together many of Rowland’s disparate publications as well as previously unpublished essays.

Ryan, Robert M. “Blake’s Orthodoxy.” The Romantic Reformation: Religious Politics in English Literature, 1789-1824. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1997. 43-79. <WBHC 2623>

Argues that Blake is more of an orthodox Christian than many critics will allow.

Ryu, Son-Moo. “From God as Gift to the Giving Subject: William Blake and God Talk. Journal of English Language and Literature 63.4 (Dec. 2017): 709-27. <Blake (2019)>

“This essay argues that Blake quarried the conceptual resources of Christianity for a viable solution to the ethical and political predicament of his times” (abstract).

Sanzo, Eileen. “Teilhard, and the Idea of the Future of Man.” William Blake and the Moderns. Ed. Robert J. Bertholf and Annette S. Levitt Albany: State University of New York Press, 1982. 251-59. <BBS 370, WBHC 1625-26>

“Blake’s myth and symbolism and Teilhard’s scientific writing are variations on a common, if sophisticated, millennial theme, which appears in Christian thought” (241).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “William Blake and the Promiscuous Baboons: A Cagliostroan Séance Gone Awry.” British Journal for Eighteenth-Century Studies 18 (1995): 185-200. <WBHC 2659-60>

“By referring to the scandal of ‘the promiscuous baboons’ [in Marriage] that erupted when the Masonic adventurer Cagliostro introduced his Swedenborgian recruits to the techniques of erotic and visionary Cabalism, Blake suggested his own immersion in the complex web of international illuminism” (185).

Senior, John. “Hermetic Vessels: Blake and Hugo.” The Way Down and Out: The Occult in Symbolist Literature. Ithaca, 1959. 52-64 <BB #2686>

“An excellent suggestive essay on Blake’s occultism” (BB #2686), with a brief comparison of Blake and Victor Hugo.

Sklar, Susanne. “Sublime Allegory in Blake’s Jerusalem.” Glass 17 (2005): 16-31. <WBHC 2682>

“The first portion of this paper will link Blake’s open sense of allegory to medieval fourfold reading, as well as to the visual theology of Eastern Orthodox icons. It will then apply Isaac Newton’s futuristic apocalyptic insights to Blake’s text. The second portion examines the interrelatedness of Blake’s dynamic characters” (16).

Sorop, Aloysia. “si j’ai tort, j’ai tort en belle compagnie.’ William Blake et ses expériences intimes de la spiritualité.” Au plus profond de soi: quand le spirituel se fait intime. Ed. Sylvie Crinquand and Paloma Bravo. Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium: Éditions EME, 2016. 57-68. In French. <Blake (2022)>

Spector, Sheila A. The Evolution of Blake’s Myth. New York: Routledge, 2020. <Blake (2021, 2022)>

A major reassertion of Blake’s place in the esoteric tradition, which Spector sees as central to the development of Blake’s myth.

Steck, Christopher. “Re-embedding Moral Agency: Linking Theology and Ethics in William Blake.” Journal of Religious Ethics 41.2 (Jun. 2013): 332-53. <WBHC 2703>

Uses Jerusalem to “suggest that there is a parallel between how moral frameworks and literary horizons operate in that both shape moral judgment” (abstract).

Steil, Juliana. “William Blake e as vozes proféticas da tradição dissidente (William Blake and the Prophetic Voices of Dissident Tradition).” Revista da Anpoll 1.47 (Sept.-Dec. 2018): 37-45. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2020)>

Summerfield, H. “Blake and the Names Divine.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.1 (summer 1981): 14-22. <BBS 391>

“There is abundant evidence, both visual and textual, that Blake in his later phase conceives of the Father divorced from the Son as possessing cruel, tyrannical, and destructive attributes” (15).

Tannenbaum, Leslie. Biblical Tradition in Blake’s Early Prophecies: The Great Code of Art. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1982. Princeton Legacy Library. Rpt. 2017. <BB #657, WBHC 2750-51, Blake (2020)>

Remains a key study of Blake’s relationship to late eighteenth-century discourses surrounding the Bible for the illuminated works through 1795.

Tannenbaum, Leslie. “Hirelings and Laborers: Biblical Parable in Blake’s Milton.” Revue LISA/LISA e-journal 5.4 (2007): 19 pars. <WBHC 2750>⁵⁸⁸

“Blake’s epic [...] uses the biblical distinction between laborers and hirelings to advance a theory of narrative, authorship, and readership that centers around the biblical form of the parable” (par. 19).

Trigilio, Tony. “The ‘Moment Satan Cannot Find’: Blake’s Transferential Language of Vision in Milton.” “Strange Prophecies Anew”: Rereading Apocalypse in Blake, H. D., and Ginsberg.

⁵⁸⁸ Repeated on WBHC 2751.

Madison and Teaneck: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press; London: Associated University Presses, 2000. 45-81. <WBHC 2781>

“Blake, H.D. and Ginsberg variously reconceive apocalypse as a mode of consciousness—paradoxically redemptive and self-annihilating—rather than of past and future history” (16).

Welch, Dennis M. “William Blake’s ‘Jesus’: The Divine and Human Reality, Incarnate in the Imaginative Acts of Self-annihilation, Forgiveness and Brotherhood.” Ultimate Reality and Meaning 10 (1987): 101-20. <BBS 676>

Blake argues that “love is God’ (119)” (BBS 676).

White, Harry. “Cruel Holiness and Honest Virtue in the Works of William Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (fall 2006): 52-65. <WBHC 1704>

“What [Blake’s] writings advance is not a normative but a descriptive ethic, detailing the nature of our ideas of good and evil, how they arise, the harmful effects they have on individuals, and why they inevitably lead to conflict” (52).

Whittaker, Jason. “Blake and the Native Tradition.” The Journal of Blake Society at St. James 2 (1996): 48-56. <WBHC 2222-23>

Examines Albion and “his sons, the bards and the druids, for Blake’s religious vision (48)” (WBHC 2223).

Williams, Rowan. ““The human form divine’: Radicalism and Orthodoxy in William Blake.” Radical Christian Voices and Practice: Essays in Honour of Christopher Rowland. Ed. Zoë Bennett and David Gowler. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2012. 151-64. <WBHC 2869>

“Blake’s ‘divine image’ is a matter of how imaginative action or initiative is realized in the world of limits” (155).

Yeager, D.M. “Of Eagles and Crows, Lions and Oxen: Blake and the Disruption of Ethics.” Journal of Religious Ethics 37.1 (2009): 1-31. <WBHC 2218-19>

On Blake’s utility to questions of Christian ethics.

Zhigala, K. G. “Tema bogoborchestva v tvorchestve U. Bleyka [The Theme of Enmity against God in the Works of W. Blake].” Chelovek i priroda: Sbornik materialov studencheskoy nauchno-prakticheskoy konferentsii [Man and Nature: Collection of Materials of the Student Scientific-Practical Conference]. Omsk, 2022. 90-92. In Russian. <Blake (2023)>

Antinomianism and Popular Millenarianism (Including Richard Brothers, William Bryan, Richard “Citizen” Lee, Johanna Southcott)

Introductions

Crosby, Mark. “Prophets, Madmen, and Millenarians.” William Blake and the Age of Aquarius. Stephen F. Eisenman. Princeton: Princeton University Press and the Block Museum of Art, 2017. 78-99. <Blake (2018, 2019, 2022)>

Positions Blake among other millenarian prophets of his era. A good introduction.

Studies

Behrendt, Stephen C. “History When Time stops: Blake's America, Europe, and The Song of Los.” Papers on Language & Literature 28 (1992): 379-97. <WBHC 1595>

“Taken together, these three works constitute both a development from, and a temporal, topical application of, many of the millenarian views of contemporary events which were current in Blake's London in the early 1790s” (380).

Binfield, Kevin. “The French, the ‘Long-wished-for-Revolution,’ and the Just War in Joanna Southcott.” Rebellious Heart: British Women Writers and the French Revolution. Ed. Adriana Carcium and Kari Lokke. State University of New York Press, 2001. 135-59.

Positions Southcott's activities in a political context.

Boer, Roland. “E.P. Thompson, Antinomianism, and the Theology of William Blake.” Sino-Christian Studies [Taiwan] 8 (2009): 31-52. <WBHC 1772>

Chadwick, Esther. “Blake's Millennium.” The Radical Print. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2024. 161-192. <Blake (2025)>

A book on prints and radical politics. “[T]his chapter will focus on the way in which Blake brought an explicit indictment of money as a form of mediation into the open.” “Blake's critique [of commercialism] emerged from a distinctly millenarian culture of prints and printmaking” (164). Considers Laocoön and the two versions of Joseph of Arimathea among the Rocks of Albion.

Garrett, Clarke. Respectable Folly: Millenarians and the French Revolution in France and England. John Hopkins University Press, 1975.⁵⁸⁹

A classic study that includes Blake, Swedenborg, Richard Brothers, Joanna Southcott, William Sharp, John Wright, and William Bryan.

Harrison, J.F.C. The Second Coming: Popular Millenarianism 1780-1850. London and Henley, 1979. <BBS 501>

Remains an excellent survey of millenarianism. In addition to the chapters on Richard Brothers and Johanna Southcott, it discusses Swedenborg, the engraver William Sharp, and Blake.

Hopkins, James K. A Woman to Deliver Her People: Joanna Southcott and English Millenarianism in an Era of Revolution. Austin: University of Texas Press, 1982. <BBS 514>

A good study. Considers Blake's relationship to Southcott and her followers (who included William Sharp, William Own Pugh, and John Pye), with references to Swedenborg and Richard Brothers.

McCalman, Iain. “The Infidel as Prophet: William Reid and Blakean Radicalism.” Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 24-42. <WBHC 1869-71>

⁵⁸⁹ Not recorded in BB or BBS.

Reads parallels in the life and work of Blake and William Hamilton Reid (d. 1826), a one-time radical and author of The Rise and Dissolution of the Infidel Societies in this Metropolis (1800).

Mee, Jon. Dangerous Enthusiasm: William Blake and the Culture of Radicalism in the 1790s. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1992. <BBS 571, WBHC 2392-94>

Focused on Blake's early illuminated books, a key study of Blake's relationship to religious enthusiasts of the era who shared his suspicion of Enlightenment-grounded radicalism. The study recasts Blake's relationship to millenarianism and to the polite circle of Joseph Johnson. There is also an important chapter on Norse mythology, druids, and British Antiquities, with discussions of Ossian. Mee was the first to associate Blake with Claude Levi Strauss's notion of the bricoleur.

Mee, Jon. "The Doom of Tyrants": William Blake, Richard 'Citizen' Lee, and the Millenarian Public Sphere." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 97-114. <WBHC 1950-53>

An important essay comparing Blake to the antinomian radical and printer, Richard Lee.

Mee, Jon. "Is there an Antinomian in the House? William Blake and the After-Life of a Heresy." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 43-58. <WBHC 1869-71>

Traces "other late eighteenth-century antinomians besides Blake [i.e., James Relly, William Huntington, and Garnet Terry, who] gave their theology a similarly radical political dimension" (44).

Mueller, Judith C. "Creatures against the Law: Blake's Antinomian Renderings of Paul." Interdisciplinary Studies in Literature and Environment 19.1 (winter 2012): 123-41. <WBHC 2435>

On Blake's antinomian uses of Romans 8.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake." The Apocalyptic Sublime. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1986. 71-100. <BBS 598>

Considers Blake's visual depictions of apocalyptic imagery, including the early paintings, War unchained by an Angel, Pestilence, and A Breach in the City; Europe; the Night Thought designs; and the paintings of Revelation in the Bible watercolors. (The wider book details well how other artists of Blake's era, e.g., Benjamin West, Philippe Jacques de Loutherbourg, J.M.W. Turner, and John Martin, depicted similar subjects. It also discusses millenarian figures like Thomas Spence, John Wright, William Bryan, and William Sharp.)

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake, the Prince of the Hebrews, and the Woman Clothed with the Sun." William Blake: Essays in Honour of Sir Geoffrey Keynes. Ed. Morton D. Paley and Michael Phillips. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1973. 260-93. <BB #A2350, BBS 598-99, WBHC 2503-05>

Foundational essay on Blake, Richard Brothers, and Johanna Southcott.

Piquet, François. “Shadows of Prophecy: Blake and Millenarian Ideology.” Yearbook of English Studies 19 (1989): 28-35. <BBS 607>

Positions America and Europe in the currents of millenarian thought.

Rosso, G.A. “Popular Millenarianism and Empire in Blake’s Night Thoughts.” Blake, Modernity and Popular Culture. Ed. Steve Clark and Jason Whittaker. Basingstoke: Palgrave, 2007. 12-25. <WBHC 2862-63>

“[C]laims that while Blake applies the pressure of radical millenarianism to Young’s more orthodox eschatology, he also develops Young’s anti-imperial stance in ways that sharpen the radicals’ critique of church and state into a more pointed attack on the British empire” (13).

Rowland, Christopher. “‘Would to God that all the Lord’s people were prophets’: Prophetic Voices.” Glass 19 (spring 2007): 30-40. <WBHC 2621>

Considers Blake, Brothers, and Southcott as “modern prophets” (33).

Thompson, E.P. Witness Against the Beast: William Blake and the Moral Law. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1993. ⁵⁹⁰ <WBHC 2761-66>

A key study of Blake in relationship to antinomian thought, although Thompson’s claim to connect Blake to the Muggletonians, a seventeenth-century antinomian sect, through his mother has been disproven by Keri Davies’s “William Blake’s Mother.”

Topor, Ruxanda. “Mad Prophets in a Mad World: William Blake’s Apocalyptic Vision and the Revival of British Millenarianism.” The Sense and Sensibility of Madness: Disrupting Normalcy in Literature and the Arts. Ed. Doreen Bauschke and Anna Klambauer. Leiden: Brill, 2018. 64-86. <Blake (2019)>

Considering The Four Zoas and Jerusalem, “investigates the dual aspect of madness, by juxtaposing the doctors’ and the monarchy’s notion of madness with the poet’s vision of a mad world. It ultimately arrives at the conclusion that Blake’s and other prophets’ revelations may be considered a form of wisdom, although neither the ruling class nor the common people of their time would have readily accepted this verdict” (abstract).

Worrall, David. “Blake and 1790s Plebian Radical Culture.” Blake in the Nineties. Basingstoke: Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin’s Press, 1999. 194-211. <WBHC 1863-65>

Important essay that highlights “Blake proximity to the artisan public sphere of discourse in 1790s London” and examines “the precision with which Blake’s texts accommodate themselves to these neglected radical rhetorics [...] in exceedingly complex ways” (207). Discusses William Bryan, Richard “Citizen” Lee, Robert Hawes, and popular political songs.

Worrall, David. “William Bryan, Another Anti-Swedenborgian Visionary Engraver of 1789.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 34.1 (summer 2000): 14-22. <WBHC 1682>

⁵⁹⁰ Pp. 106-14 rpt. in William Blake: A Critical Study, ed. T. Joseph and S. Francis (2005), <WBHC 2217-18>.

Building on his “Blake and 1790s Plebian Radical Culture,” discusses the parallels between Blake and William Bryan, “a copper plate printer and bookseller who worked from No. 51 Upper Mary-le-bone Street” (14).

Useful Contextual Studies

Goss, Erin M. “Joanna Southcott (or Southcote) (1750-1814).” The Routledge Companion to Romantic Women Writers. Ed. Ann R. Hawkins, Catherine S. Blackwell, E. Leigh Bonds. 477-86.

A review of Southcott’s life, her reception, her writings, and scholarship on her.

Lockley, Philip. Visionary Religion and Radicalism in Early Industrial England: From Southcott to Socialism. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2013.

The first half focuses on Southcott and her movement.

Niblett, Matthew. Prophecy and the Politics of Salvation in Late Georgian England: Theology and Apocalyptic Vision of Joanna Southcott. London and New York: I.B. Taurus, 2015.

Slight reference to Blake but substantial discussion of William Sharp and his relationship to Southcott.

Nicholson, Michael. “More than Eve: Women and Superior Secondariness in English Poetry, 1751–1810.” Eighteenth-Century Life 46.1 (2022): 79-108. <Blake (2023)>

“Mary Leapor, Mary Scott, Joanna Southcott, Lucy Aikin, and their peers collectively articulate what I call women’s ‘superior secondariness[,]’ which ‘posited the secondary not as inferior or less, but as a necessary, often highly desirable, condition of women’s belatedness’ (abstract).

Shaw, Jane, and Philip Lockley, ed. The History of a Modern Millennial Movement: The Southcottians. London and New York: I.B. Taurus, 2017.

A collection of essays on the Southcottians from 1792 to 2012. The most relevant chapters, which refer to Richard Brother and William Sharp, are:

Niblett, Matthew. “Joanna Southcott’s Apocalyptic Theology, 1792-1814.” 13-33.

Lockley, Philip. “Southcottians in Britain, 1801-51: Revealing a Popular Religion.” 34-60.

Maden, Deborah. “A Southcottian Methodist: The Prophetic Odyssey of George Turner.” 61-77.

Wright, Eugene Patrick. A Catalogue of the Joanna Southcott Collection at the University of Texas. Austin: University of Texas at Austin, 1968.

In addition to Southcott, includes many references to William Sharp and William Owen Pughe.

Atheism, Secularization, and Post-Secularization

Kroeber, Karl. Blake in a Post-Secular Era: Early Prophecies. Ed., with a foreword, Joseph Visconti. 2012. A Romantic Circles Monograph. <WBHC 2294-95>

Lawson, David. “Humanism in Literature: William Blake.” Humanist, 53.5 (Sept.-Oct. 1993): 36-37. <WBHC 2314>

“[W]hat this poet-engraver stands for is something worldly” (36).

Otto, Peter. “William Blake, the Secularization of Religious Categories, and the History of Imagination.” Constructing Nineteenth-Century Religion. Ed. Joshua King and Winter Jade Werner. Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 2019. 281-302. <Blake (2020)>

Interesting essay in a wider collection built around the fluidity of our notion of nineteenth-century religion.

Priestman, Martin. “Atheism.” The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Ed. Jeffrey W. Barbeau. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. 121-38. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

Considers the annotations to Watson to illustrate “how complex and unorthodox some positions we might still broadly describe as ‘Christian’ could be” (127).

Rowland, Christopher. “Anticipating Postsecularity. The Routledge Handbook of Postsecularity. Ed. Justin Beaumont. Abingdon: Routledge, 2018. <Blake (2019)>

Examines how Gerrard Winstanley and William Blake anticipated “elements of postsecularity today” (abstract).

Bible (See also The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Laocoön, Illustrations of the Book of Job, and Water Color Drawings Illustrating the Bible)

Introductions

Prickett, Stephen. “The Bible.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 165-72. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Prickett, Stephen, and Christopher Strathman. “Blake and the Bible.” Palgrave Advances in William Blake Studies. Ed. Nicholas M. Williams. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 109-31. <WBHC 2867-68>

Surveys Blake’s complicated relationship to the Bible, highlighting critical work by Northop Frye, Harold Bloom, Jerome McGann, and A.D. Nuttall, and Morton D. Paley.

Studies

Baulch, David M. “The Sublime of the Bible.” Romanticism On the Net 3 (Aug. 1996): 16 pars. <WBHC 1588>

Rejecting the influence of Robert Lowth, argues that “[w]hat Blake means by the Sublime of the Bible is sufficiently outlined within his own work” (par. 3).

Beenstock, Zoe. “Jerusalem Moves West: Undoing the Hebrew Bible in Blake's Milton and Jerusalem.” European Romantic Review 34.5 (2023): 609-27. <Blake (2024)>

In his prophetic poems, he undoes the temporal and spatial organization of the Hebrew Bible, a possibility first explored in Milton and then fully achieved in Jerusalem, where Blake deconstructs the ancient biblical world to rebuild it in modern Britain” (abstract).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A Jewel in an Ethiop’s Ear: The Book of Enoch as Inspiration for William Blake, John Flaxman, Thomas Moore, and Richard Westall.” Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 213-40.⁵⁹¹ <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

On the influence of The Book of Enoch, a book considered part of the canonical Bible in the Church of Ethiopia, but recovered for Western Europe in the late eighteenth century.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. “A Swedenborgian Bible.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990): 63-64. <BBS 407>

On a Bible published in 1809 and 1813 and abridged by George Hazard “to make it conform to the Swedenborgian canon” (64) (BBS 407).

Bloom, Harold. “Blake’s Jerusalem: The Bard of Sensibility and the Form of Prophecy.” Eighteenth Century Studies 4.1 (1970): 6-20.⁵⁹² <BB #1228, BBS 414>

Argues the book of Ezekiel is the most important model for Jerusalem, suggesting “Blake follows Ezekiel throughout, but always at a distance” (20).

Cantor, Paul A. “Blake and the Archaeology of Eden.” A Walk in the Garden: Biblical, Iconographical, and Literary Images of Eden. Ed. Paul Morris and Deborah F. Sawyer. Sheffield: JSOT Press, 1992. 229-43. <WBHC 1824>

On the influence of speculative mythologists on Blake’s portrayal of Eden, especially in A Descriptive Catalogue.

Carroll, Robert P. “Revisionings: Echoes and Traces of Isaiah in the Poetry of William Blake.” Words Remembered, Texts Renewed: Essays in Honour of John F. A. Sawyer. Ed. Jon Davies, Graham Harvey, and Wilfred G.E. Watson. Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press Ltd, 1995. 226-41. <WBHC 1828>

“It is ‘a simple meditation on aspects of the bible [sic] and aspects of Blake’ (239)” (WBHC 1828).

De Luca, Vincent A. “‘Crowding After Night’: Troping and the Sublime in Poetical Sketches.” Speak Silence: Rhetoric and Culture in Blake’s Poetical Sketches. Ed. Mark L. Greenberg. Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 1996. 153-64. <WBHC 2104-05>

On Blake’s early efforts at the sublime, with references to Lowth’s Hebraisms and Burke.

Ellis, Helen B. “Blake’s ‘Bible of Hell’: Visions of the Daughters of Albion and the Song of Solomon.” English Studies in Canada 12.1 (1986): 23-36. <BBS 461>

“Blake’s use of the relationship of Solomon and his Bride as the perfection of human sexuality against which the fallen world of 1793 could be measured is the source of many of the implicit ironies that twentieth-century readers find in Visions” (24).

⁵⁹¹ A version was published in Aligarh Journal of English 1.1 (1976), 1-16, <BBS 468>.

⁵⁹² Incorporated in Bloom’s The Ringers in the Tower (1971), <BB #1229>. Rpt. in English Romantic Poets, ed. Harold Bloom (1986), 41-53, <BBS 414-15>, and Modern Critical Views: William Blake, ed. Harold Bloom (1985), 83-96, <BBS 415, WBHC 1770>.

Erdman, David V. ed. Blake and His Bibles. West Cornwall: Locust Hill Press, 1990. <BBS 462-63, WBHC 1989-90>

An important collection on Blake's use of the Bible.

Esterhammer, Angela. "Calling into Existence: The Book of Urizen." Blake in the Nineties. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. Basingstoke: Macmillan Press and New York: St. Martin's Press, 1999. 114-32. <WBHC 1863-65>

On Blake's use of performative language in The Book of Urizen and other works including the annotations to Bishop Watson's response to Thomas Paine's Age of Reason (1796), with reference to late eighteenth-century biblical scholarship, such as Robert Lowth's Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews (1787).

Farrell, Michael. "William Blake and the Bible: Reading and Writing the Law." Double Vision: Literary Palimpsests of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries. Ed. Darby Lewes. Lanham: Lexington Books, 2008. 27-36. <WBHC 2013-14>

For Blake, the Bible "is the great code or instructive paradigm of art which enables him to synthesize his political and theological outlook into a coherent, creative vision" (36).

Ferber, Michael. "Blake's Idea of Brotherhood." PMLA 93.3 (1978): 438-47.⁵⁹³ <BBS 471>

Mostly on the later epics, tying their notions of "brotherhood" and related terms to the New Testament rather than to eighteenth-century French political theorists.

Fisch, Harold. "Blake." The Biblical Presence in Shakespeare, Milton, and Blake: A Comparative Study. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1999. 207-325. <WBHC 2019-20>

Blake is the subject of the last third of the study, which is less about tracing allusions than how Blake used the Bible.

Frye, Northrop. "Blake's Bible." Myth and Metaphor: Selected Essays 1974-1988. Ed. Robert D. Denham. Charlottesville and London, 1990. 270-86.⁵⁹⁴ <BBS 477, WBHC 2036>

How Blake uses the Bible.

George, Diana Hume. "Reading Isaiah and Ezekiel through Blake." New Orleans Review 13.3 (fall 1986): 12-21. <BBS 586>

On how Blake read these prophets without the criticism he usually brings to texts, with reflections on how Blake helps George herself approach these biblical books.

Gleckner, Robert F. "Blake's Thel and the Bible." Bulletin of the New York Public Library 64.11 (Nov. 1960): 573-80. <BB #1697>

"What I hope to show here, then, is not a calculated use of Biblical material but rather the general Biblical allusiveness of Blake's poetry and the particular poetic technique of which that allusiveness consists" (574).

⁵⁹³ Incorporated in Ferber's The Social Vision of William Blake (1985), <BBS 471, WBHC 2016-17>. See Tom Dargan's response to Ferber's article, in PMLA 94.1 (1979), 146-47, <BBS 471>.

⁵⁹⁴ Rpt. in Northrop Frye on Milton and Blake, ed. Angela Esterhammer (2005), <WBHC 2040-43>.

Helms, Randel. “Ezekiel and Blake's Jerusalem.” Studies in Romanticism 13.2 (1974): 127-40. <BBS 649>

“A study of Blake's recastings of Ezekiel [sic] will quicken our grasp both of some central themes and of what there is of a narrative pattern in Jerusalem” (127-28).

Herrstrom, David Sten. “Blake's Transformations of Ezekiel's Cherubim Vision in Jerusalem.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 15.2 (fall 1981): 64-75. <BBS 392>

A detailed reading of how Blake transformed Ezekiel's cherubim imagery after 1803, highlighting “Ezekiel's Wheels” and Jerusalem, providing diagrams of the latter.

Jacobson, Howard. “Blake's Proverbs of Hell: St. Paul and the Nakedness of Woman.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly (summer 2005): 48-49. <WBHC 1702>

“Compares Blake's Proverb of Hell, ‘The nakedness of woman is the work of God,’ with St Paul's first letter to the Corinthians: ‘Every woman that prayeth or prophesieth, with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head . . .’[(49)]” (WBHC 1702).

Kaufman, Andrew. “Authority and Vision: William Blake's Use of the Gospels.” University of Toronto Quarterly 57.3 (1987-88): 389-403. <BBS 531>

“Blake's writings come into surprisingly sharper focus once we see how much they are devoted to recasting the traditional Biblical opposition between soul and body, or between truth and error, into the antitheses of visionary and temporal authority, and of imaginative and corporeal understanding, or symbolic and literal perception” (389).

Kamusikiri, Sandra. “Blake and the Tradition of Lamentation.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990): 59-63. <BBS 407>

Ties the lamentations in Jerusalem to the descriptions of the Lamentations of Jeremiah by Robert Lowth in his Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews, 2 vols. (1753, Latin; 1787, English).

Mason, Emma. “Elihu's Spiritual Sensation: William Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job.” The Oxford Handbook of the Reception History of the Bible. Ed. Michael Lieb, Emma Mason, Jonathan Roberts, and Christopher Rowland. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011. 460-76. <WBHC 2376-77>

On the role of Elihu in the Illustrations and “the way the Illustrations forward a reading methodology that enables an emotional connection with them that might form a template for interaction with texts and also with people” (461).

McGann, Jerome. “The Idea of an Indeterminate Text: Blake's Bible of Hell and Dr. Alexander Geddes.” Studies in Romanticism 25.3 (1986): 303-24. <BBS 568>

An influential essay that argues Blake parodied the Bible based on the contemporary biblical scholarship of Alexander Geddes, a Catholic who was a member of the Joseph Johnson circle.

Miner, Paul. "Visions in the Darksom Air: Aspects of Blake's Biblical Symbolism." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 256-92. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

Identifies Blake's many biblical allusions and describes the intertextuality of his poetry with the Bible: "Biblical imagery becomes almost a sine qua non through which Blake's later poetry structured itself" (291).

Miner, Paul. "William Blake's Creative Scripture." Literature and Theology 27.1 (Mar. 2013): 32-47. <WBHC 2417>

On how Blake used the Bible.

Miner, Paul. "William Blake's 'Divine Analogy.'" Criticism 3.1 (1961): 46-61. <BB #2230>

Although dated, a useful essay in understanding Blake's connection of biblical imagery surrounding the ark and the covenant to sexuality.

Otto, Peter. "Nebuchadnezzar's Sublime Torments: William Blake, Arthur Boyd and the East." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 260-71. <WBHC 1857-62>

Compares depictions of Nebuchadnezzar by Blake and the Australian painter, Arthur Boyd (1920-99).

Paley, Morton D. The Traveller in the Evening: The Last Words of William Blake. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003.⁵⁹⁵ <WBHC 2499-2501>

The best study of the often overlooked, visual and literary works of Blake's last decade. These include the illustrations to Virgil, Laocoön, the illustrations to the Dante, and his late works related to the Bible (The Everlasting Gospel, The Ghost of Abel, Illustrations of the Book of Job, the Genesis manuscript, the Enoch designs, and his Annotations to Thornton's translation of the Lord's Prayer), and the Visionary Heads.

Paley, Morton D. "William Blake, Jacob Ilive, and the Book of Jasher." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 30.2 (fall 1996): 51-54. <WBHC 1665>

Argues that Blake may have known of Jacob Ilive's 1751 edition of the Book of Jasher, a lost book of the Bible that Ilive forged.

Paulson, Ronald. "Blake's Bible." Book and Painting: Shakespeare, Milton and the Bible: Literary Texts and the Emergence of English Painting. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1982. 115-24. <BBS 600>

On Blake's poetic and visual uses of the Bible, especially as mediated by Milton and Michelangelo.

Potkay, Adam. "Romantic Transformations of the King James Bible: Wordsworth, Shelley, Blake." The King James Bible after Four Hundred Years: Literary, Linguistic, and Cultural

⁵⁹⁵ Incorporates Paley's "ñ & His Two Sons Satan & Adam." Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 201-35 and "William Blake and Dr. Thornton's 'Tory Translation' of the Lord's Prayer," Prophetic Character, ed. Alexander S. Gourlay (2002), 263-86, <WBHC 2095-98>.

Influences. Ed. Hannibal Hamlin and Norman W. Jones. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010. 219-33. <WBHC 2542>

Focuses on allusions to the KJV in “Tintern Abbey,” Prometheus Unbound, and The Marriage of Heaven and Hell.

Raz, Yosefa. “Robert Lowth’s Bible: Between Seraphic Choirs and Prophetic Weakness.” Modern Language Quarterly 81.2 (2020): 139-67. <Blake (2021)>

Considers Blake’s use of Isaiah 6 in terms of Lowth’s work on biblical poetics.

Raz, Yosefa. “Walking through Blake’s Irregular Bible.” The Poetics of Prophecy: Modern Afterlives of a Biblical Tradition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2024. 56-88. <Blake (2025)>

“Rather than functioning as an underlying code or ordering system, the biblical text often generates disorder and further instability. More broadly, the Bible cannot function as a codebook, containing a unified system of symbols or archetypes, which might serve to decipher Blake’s puzzling texts; it is itself a fundamentally unstable document” (59). Blake is also considered in the chapter on Robert Lowth in the section, “Coda: Blake and Isaiah 6.”

Riede, David G. “Blake’s Milton: On Membership in the Church Paul.” Re-membering Milton: Essays in the Texts and Traditions. Ed. Mary Nyquist and Margaret W. Ferguson. London: Methuen, 1987. 257-77. ⁵⁹⁶ <BBS 623, WBHC 2585>

“Drawing out the neglected threats of Pauline allusion in Milton leads, I think, to a fresh perspective on Blake and on the idea of a Miltonic tradition” (258).

Rix, Donna S. “Milton: Blake’s Reading of Second Isaiah.” Poetic Prophecy in Western Literature. Ed. Jan Wojcik and Raymond-Jean Frontain. Teaneck, Rutherford, Madison: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press; London & Toronto: Associated University Presses, 1984. 106-18. <BBS 623-24, WBHC 2591-92>

Argues that second Isaiah is a generic model for Milton.

Roberts, Jonathan. “St. Paul’s Gifts to Blake’s Aesthetic: ‘O Human Imagination, O Divine Body.’” Glass 15 (2003): 8-18. ⁵⁹⁷ <WBHC 2596>

Blake’s aesthetic “is essentially theological, internally coherent, and founded on a Biblical source [...] : Paul’s epistles to the Corinthians” (9).

Rose, Edward J. “Blake’s Biblical Consciousness and the Problem of Interpretation of Text and Design.” The Bucknell Review 31.1 (1988): 113-23. <BBS 625>

“Blake understands the pictorial to be related to the verbal as the Divine Body is related to Jesus” (115).

⁵⁹⁶ Incorporated in Riede’s Oracles and Hierophants: Constructions of Romantic Authority (Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1991), 33-91, <WBHC 2585>.

⁵⁹⁷ Revised in both Roberts’s William Blake’s Poetry: A Reader’s Guide (2007), <WBHC 2596-97>, and as “St. Paul’s Gift to Blake’s Aesthetic” in Visions and Revisions, ed. Roger Kojecký and Andrew Tate (Newcastle upon Tyne: Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2013), 67-78, <WBHC 2596>.

Rose, Edward J. “Blake’s Jerusalem, St. Paul, and Biblical Prophecy.” English Studies in Canada 11.4 (1985): 396-412. <BBS 625>

“‘The reader of Blake and Paul can only marvel at how well Blake understands Paul, how vital to his own view of Christ Paul’s teaching is, and how important Paul’s metaphors are to Blake’s work’ (405)” (BBS 625).

Rosso, G.A. “Redefining Apocalypse in Blake Studies.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.2 (fall 2023): 43 pars. <Blake (2024)>

On the confusion between eschatological and apocalyptic in Blake studies, with a useful survey of the use of “apocalypse” in both biblical studies and Blake criticism between Northrop Frye and Lucy Cogan. There is also a reading of Milton in order “to show how recent biblical studies can help clarify Blake’s treatment of apocalypse and eschatology” (par. 34).

Rosso, G.A. “The Religion of Empire: Blake’s Rahab in Its Biblical Contexts.” Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 287-326.⁵⁹⁸ <WBHC 2095-98>

On the biblical sources of Rahab and her place in Blake’s epics.

Rowland, Christopher. Blake and the Bible. New Haven: Yale University Press, 2011. <WBHC 2616-17>

An important study of how Blake was influenced by the Bible and depicted scenes in it. Detailed argument about the influence of Paul on Blake. Considers the illuminated books, Bible illustrations, and the illustrations of Job and Enoch.

Rowland, Christopher. “Blake and the Bible: Biblical Exegesis in the Work of William Blake.” International Journal of Systematic Theology 7 (2005): 142-54. <WBHC 2616>

“William Blake’s biblical interpretation [...] is explored through his vision of the divine in Europe: A Prophecy and by exploring his views on the relationships between the testaments” (abstract).

Rowland, Christopher. “Christology, Controversy and Apocalypse: New Testament Exegesis in the Light of the Work of William Blake.” Christology, Controversy and Community: New Testament Essays in Honour of David R. Catchpole. Leiden: Brill, 2000. 355-78. <WBHC 2617-18>

Examines “Blake’s use of particular biblical themes and their significance for biblical interpretation” and “offer[s] some reflections on the hermeneutical opportunities and challenges of Blake’s reading of Scripture” (356).

Rowland, Christopher. “The Common People and the Bible: Winstanley, Blake and Liberation Theology.” Winstanley and the Diggers, 1649-1999. Ed. Andrew Bradstock. London and Portland, OR: Frank Cass, 2000. 149-60. <WBHC 2618>

On Blake and Winstanley as Christian radicals (149).

⁵⁹⁸ Rosso develops these arguments in his Religion of Empire (2016).

Rowland, Christopher. “‘Diversely and in Many Ways God spoke by the Prophets’: New Testament Perspectives and William Blake on the Prophetic Word.” Prophetic Witness and the Reimagining of the World: Poetry, Theology and Philosophy in Dialogue. Ed. Mark S. Burrows, Hilary Davies, and Josephine von Zitzewitz. New York: Routledge, 2020. 15 pp. <Blake (2022)>

On Blake and the prophetic tradition: “The consideration of William Blake’s work and his sense of vocation are an important component of the history of prophecy in Christianity, not least because he stressed the ethical dimension of the life of those with a prophetic vocation as key to their message” (abstract).

Rowland, Christopher. “‘sweet Science Reigns’: Divine and Human Wisdom in the Apocalyptic Tradition.” Where Shall Wisdom Be Found? Wisdom in the Bible, the Church, and the Contemporary World. Ed. Stephen Barton. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1999. 61-73. <WBHC 2619>

Positions “Blake’s promotion of a different kind of wisdom” (62) among biblical and apocryphal apocalyptic literature.

Rowland, Christopher. “Wheels within Wheels”: William Blake and the Ezekiel’s Merkabah in Text and Image. Milwaukee: Marquette University Press, 2007. Père Marquette Lecture in Theology 2007. <WBHC 2619-20>

Considers Ezekiel’s influence, highlighting the Merkabah—Ezekiel’s vision and its interpretation in the first century c.e.

Rowland, Christopher. “‘Why is the Bible more entertaining & instructive than any other book?’: William Blake and the Enhancement of the Literary.” Enlightenment to Romanticism. Ed. Stephen Prickett. London ; New York : T&T Clark, 2024. 209-26. Vol. 3. in the series The Bible and Western Christian Literature: Books and the Book. <Blake (2025)>

On how Blake used, illustrated, and critiqued the Bible There are also two “Passage and Commentary” chapters with selections from works by Blake that engage with the Bible and commentary by Rowland (for Part I) and Susanne Sklar (for Part II—focused on Jerusalem). The wider book has chapters on eighteenth century and the Bible (including Christopher Burdon’s “From Evidence to Praise: The Bible in the Age of Newton”[103-58] and Jan-Melissa Schramm’s “Right, Romantic Radicalism and the Bible” [159-208]) and excerpts from a range of writers, including John Locke, Isaac Watts, and John Wesley.

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake and Ezekiel’s Merkabah.” After Ezekiel: Essays on the Reception of a Difficult Prophet. Ed. Andrew Mein and Paul M. Joyce. New York: T. & T. Clark-Continuum, 2011. 229-46. <WBHC 2620>

“[O]n Ezekiel’s Merkavah in the work of William Blake and Christian art” (summary).

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake and the King James Bible.” Modern Believing 52 (2012): 131-39. <Blake (2022)>

Analyzes Blake’s engagement with the King James Bible largely through the letters to Trusler and the Illustrations of the Book of Job.

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake as leitourgos.” Sacred Modes of Being in a Postsecular World. Ed. Andrew W. Haas. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. 164-82. <Blake (2022)>

“[E]xplores Blake’s vocation to a public role and his exploration of creativity and conformity in his engagement with the Bible, literature and art” (abstract).

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake and the Life in the Divine Body.” Paul, Grace and Freedom: Essays in Honour of John Kirk Riches. Ed. Paul Middleton, Angus Paddison, and Karen Wenell. London and N.Y.: T. and T. Clark, 2009. <WBHC 2620>

On Blake’s concept of the divine body, with references to Paul, The Four Zoas, and Job.

Rowland, Christopher. “William Blake and the New Testament: The Perspectives of the Pictures.” Between the Text and the Canvas: The Bible and Art in Dialogue. Ed. J. Cheryl Exum and Ela Nutu. 2007. 211-38. <WBHC 2620-21>

“A ‘survey of Blake’s biblical hermeneutics in his pictures and engravings’ (236): ‘Blake’s relationship with the Bible is a complex one,’ and ‘Blake’s Christology is complex’ (214, 233)” (WBHC 2620-21).

Smith, Mark Trevor. “All Nature Is But Art”: The Coincidence of Opposites in English Romantic Literature. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 1993. <WBHC 2689>

On the Bible and Jerusalem.

Sturrock, June. “Blake and the Women of the Bible.” Literature and Theology 6.1 (Mar. 1992): 23-32. <WBHC 2715>

Focuses on how Blake adopts biblical narratives of women and especially Rahab, to conclude: “Thus in earlier, more politically oriented works, Blake observes the suffering of individual women in his society, while in later works with a more religious orientation as he considers more closely the spiritual origins of social evil” (31).

Summerfield, Henry. “Blake’s The French Revolution and the Bible.” University of Dayton Review 17.3 (1985-86): 29-39. <BBS 651>

“The French Revolution marks the point at which Blake turns against the legalistic and authoritarian aspect of the Old Testament while continuing to accept much of its prophetic element” (29) (BBS 651).

Tannenbaum, Leslie. “Blake and the Iconography of Cain.” Blake in His Time. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 23-34. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Examines the visual and verbal representations of Cain in Milton, The Ghost of Abel, and “The Body of Abel Found by Adam and Eve, with Cain Fleeing” in light of depictions of Cain by range of artists.

Tolley, Michael J. “Jerusalem 12:25-29—Some Questions Answered.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 3-6. <BB #1217.57>

Sees an allusion in the lines to the tradition that two peaks on Mount Moriah, where God appeared to Abraham, were the sites of Solomon’s Temple and Calvary.

Villalobos, John. "William Blake's 'Proverbs of Hell' and the Tradition of Wisdom Literature." Studies in Philology 87.2 (1990): 74-99. <BBS 668-69>

"Blake's 'Proverbs of Hell' should be categorized as wisdom literature, or rather as a critique and parody of proverbial wisdom" (247).

Welch, Dennis Martin. "Blake, Nehemiah, and Religious Renewal." Christian Scholar's Review 2 (1973): 308-10. <BB #A2942>

"The Little Vagabond' echoes Nehemiah 8:9-10, 12" (BB #A2942).

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. "Blake in the Kitto Bible." Blake Studies 2.2 (spring 1970): 51-54. <BB #1218.31>

Records Blake's prints found in the Kitto Bible, a sixty-volume, extra-illustrated Bible held by the Huntington.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. "Painting Prophecies: The Tradition of Blake's Illuminated Books." Blake in His Time. Ed. Robert N. Essick and Donald Pearce. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1978. 101-15. <BBS 466-68, WBHC 2003-04>

Positions Blake in a tradition of visual representations of Revelation.

Yoder, R. Paul. "Blake and the Book of Numbers: Joshua the Giant Killer and the Tears of Balaam." The Jews and British Romanticism: Politics, Religion, and Culture. Ed. Sheila A. Spector. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. 87-102. <WBHC 2906>

In Jerusalem, Blake "invokes three crucial episodes from Numbers [. . .] to suggest an alternative to war as a means of conquest, and to suggest that the legitimate line of prophecy need not depend on one's nationality" (87).

Ziolkowski, Eric. "Great Code or Great Codex? Northrop Frye, William Blake, and Construals of the Bible." Journal of the Bible and Its Reception 1.1 (Jun. 2014): 3-18. <WBHC 2927>

"My contention is that Blake's engraving of the Laocoön, in which the "Great Code" aphorism appears, is itself a code of sorts, but not in Frye's sense of a key to be used to unlock the meanings of works of art and literature – or to unlock anything else, for that matter. Nothing in the Laocoön, or in any of Blake's other works, suggests that this was what Blake meant by 'code'" (abstract).

Buddhism

Economides, Louise. "Blake, Heidegger, Buddhism, and Deep Ecology: A Fourfold Perspective on Humanity's Relationship to Nature." Romanticism and Buddhism. Ed. Mark Lussier. Feb. 2007. Romantic Circles Praxis Series. 17 pars. <Blake (2012)>

"Blake's monistic art demonstrates the vital importance of human identification with nature" (par. 6).

Ferrara, Mark S. "Ch'an Buddhism and the Prophetic Poems of William Blake." Journal of Chinese Linguistics 24 (1997): 59-73. <WBHC 2018>

"The similarities between William Blake's philosophical system and that of Buddhism (particularly the Ch'an(a) or Zen School) are no less than astonishing" (59).

Lussier, Mark S.S. Romantic Dharma: The Emergence of Buddhism into Nineteenth-Century Europe. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011. <WBHC 2355>

Blake (Marriage and Milton, in particular) figures prominently in this study that “explores the entry of Buddhist knowledge into European awareness and the shared intellectual and ethical affinities connecting Western and Eastern form of enlightenment epistemology” (xi).

Lussier, Mark. “Self-Annihilation/Inner Revolution: Blake’s Milton, Buddhism, and Ecocriticism.” Religion and Literature 40.1 (spring 2008): 39-57. <WBHC 2356>

“Blake’s process of self-annihilation [. . .] clearly intersects with Buddhist ecological thinking” (56).

Rudy, John G. “Blake and the Void of Koan Practice.” Romanticism and Zen Buddhism. Lewiston, Queenston, and Lampeter: Edwin Mellen Press, 2004. 93-126. <WBHC 2622>

“Mostly based on The Marriage of Heaven and Hell” (WBHC 2622).

Sato, Hikari. “Jugaku Bunsho, ‘sotsugyo ronbun William Blake no Jerusalem kenkyu no haikei: Naze Blake wo Bukkyo no kotoba de katattanoka [On the Background of Jugaku Bunsho, ‘Graduation Thesis: A Study of Jerusalem by William Blake’: Why Did He Discuss Blake in Buddhist Terms?]’ Kojitsuan [Sunward Cottage] 6 (2023): 1-9. In Japanese. <Blake (2024)>

Bunsho Jugaku (1900-92), a Blake scholar, made a comparative study of Blake and Buddhism in his graduation thesis in 1923, inspired by Muneyoshi Yanagi and Pierre Berger.

Gnosticism

Bloom, Harold. “Catastrophe Creation: Gnosis, Kabbalah and Blake.” Agn: Toward a Theory of Revisionism. New York: Oxford University Press, 1982. 72-90. <BBS 414>

A comparison of Blake’s creation myth with those of the Gnostics and the Kabbalah.

Brogan, Howard O. “Blake on Woman: Oothoon to Jerusalem.” CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986): 125-36. <BBS 434>

“I may be able at least to explain Blake’s attitude toward women as a consistent development by looking at it in a much broader mythological context” (126). Also suggests that “Blake’s attitude toward woman can be illuminated by considering it in light of Neoplatonic and Gnostic influence upon him” (125).

Curran, Stuart. “Blake and the Gnostic Hyle: A Double Negative.” Blake Studies 4.2 (1972): 117-33.⁵⁹⁹ <BB #1218.62, BBS 410>

Reads the character of Hyle as a Gnostic symbol.

⁵⁹⁹ Rpt. in in Essential Articles for the Study of William Blake, 1970-1984, ed. Nelson Hilton (1986), 15-32, <BBS 507-08, WBHC 2146-47>.

Grenfell, Michael. "Blake and Gnosis." The Journal of the Blake Society at St. James 2 (1996): 19-29. <WBHC 2222>

Argues that Gnosticism is "key to understanding Blake's dense mythologies (19)" (WBHC 2222).

Horn, William Dennis. "Blake's Revisionism: Gnostic Interpretation and Critical Methodology." Critical Paths: Blake and the Argument of Method. Ed. Dan Miller, Mark Bracher, and Donald Ault. Durham: Duke University Press, 1987. 72-98. <BBS 573-74, WBHC 2405-06>

Examines Harold Bloom's theory of influence in both Blake and the Gnostics.

Hoshino, Eriko. "William Blake's Influence upon William Butler Yeats, as a Young Poet: From the Gnostic Viewpoint (#1)." Seibu Bunri Daigaku Service Keieigakubu Kenkyu Kiyo: Journal of Bunri University of Hospitality 17 (2010): 57-62. <WBHC 2168>

Nanavaty, Piloo. "Blake and Gnostic Imagery: A Note." Aligarh Journal of English Studies 9.1 (1984): 43-56. <BBS 584>

Notes suggestive parallels.

Nanavaty, Piloo. "Blake and the Gnostic Legend." Aligarh Journal of English Studies 1 (1976): 168-90. <BBS 584-85>

"A comparison of 'the story of 'the Pistis Sophia [as found in the Church Fathers and in MS] with the ideas [vocabulary] and imagery from the Prophetic Books' (171)" (BBS 585).⁶⁰⁰

Nuttall, A.D. The Alternative Trinity: Gnostic Heresy in Marlowe, Milton, and Blake. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1998. Paperback 2007. 4-21, 192-271. <WBHC 2472>

Offers many parallels between Blake and the Gnostics.

Otto, Peter. "William Blake, the Ancient Gnostics, and the Birth of Modern Gnosticism." The Gnostic World. Ed. Garry W. Trompf, in collaboration with Gunner B. Mikkelsen and Jay Johnston. Abingdon: Routledge, 2019. 464-74. <Blake (2020)>

Revisits and updates Blake's relationship with the Gnostics.

Parslow, Valerie. "Blake and Gnosis—Blake's Great Task?" Journal of the Blake Society at St. James 3 (1998): 20-31. <WBHC 2225>

"Blake's gnostic tendencies, if they indeed existed,' seem 'to reveal the concealed gift of gnosis . . . [which] he calls Jerusalem who . . . is knowledge, liberated and revealed' (29)" (WBHC 2225).

⁶⁰⁰ Bentley's brackets and emendations.

Peterfreund, Stuart. "Blake, Priestley, and the 'Gnostic Moment.'" William Blake in a Newtonian World: Essays on Literature as Art and Science. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1998. 85-104, 204-12.⁶⁰¹ <WBHC 2516-17>

Riehl, Joe. "Gnosticism in Blake's 'I Saw a Chapel All of Gold.'" New Orleans Review 13.3 (fall 1986): 6-11. <BBS 586>

"[I]f we accept the gnostic interpretation of the poem, the serpent in Blake's poem performs the necessary enlightenment of gnosis for Blake just as it was able to do for the first Man and Woman in the gnostic and Manichean myth of the Garden of Eden" (11).

Sorensen, Peter J. William Blake's Recreation of Gnostic Myth: Resolving the Apparent Incongruities. Lewiston, NY and Salzburg, Austria: The Edwin Mellon Press, 1995. <WBHC 2694>

A study of Blake's parallels with Gnosticism that does not engage with where Blake may have obtained his information.

Hinduism

Barlow, Paul. "The Aryan Blake: Hinduism, Art and Revelation in William Blake's Pitt and Nelson Paintings." Visual Culture in Britain 12.3 (2011): 277-92. <WBHC 1581>

Situates the paintings "within the interlinked contexts of Blake's political and spiritual beliefs, the purposefully cross-cultural and visionary dynamic of his work, and contemporary responses to the expansion of British imperial power in India" (abstract).

Connolly, Tristanne J. "The Authority of the Ancients: Blake and Wilkins' Translation of the Bhagvat-Geeta." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 145-58. <WBHC 1857-62>

On Blake's lost painting, "The Bramins," suggesting that Blake was "a proponent of an Orientalism outmoded by the time of his exhibition in 1809, but exemplified in the 1785 [translation of the Bhagvat-]Geeta" (146). "Instead of the growing imposition of British culture on Indians, [Blake] opts for outdated syncretism which allows him to see Indians and Britons as originally alike (148).

De Almeida, Hermione, and George H. Gilpin. "Blake's Prophecies Against Empire" and "Blake's 'Indian' Epic." Indian Renaissance: British Romantic Art and the Prospect of India. Adershot and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2005. 271-79. 280-86.⁶⁰²

On Blake's views of empire, India, and his use of Hindu mythology and art.

Islam, Md. Monirul. "For the darkness of Asia was startled": Blake and the East." Oriental Wells: The Early Romantic Poets and Their Eastern Muse. New Deli: Bloomsbury Indian, 2021. 73-105. <Blake (2022)>

⁶⁰¹ From Peterfreund's chapter in Literature and Science: Theory and Practice, ed. Stuart Peterfreund (Boston: Northeastern University Press, 1990), 139-66, <BBS 603, WBHC 2515>.

⁶⁰² Not recorded in WBHC.

Considers the influence of Orientalist “scholars, travelers, and painters” (14) on Blake and his views of Hinduism, Indian, Islam, and Mohammad in light of [Blake’s] own “Angelo-centric and Christo-centric conception of the world” (15).

Kruger, Kathryn Sullivan. “Blake’s Bower of Bliss: The Gitagovinda, The Four Zoas, and Two Illustrations for L’Allegro.” Sexy Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013. 141-58. <WBHC 1803-04>

“Blake’s illustrations to Milton L’Allegro and Il Pensero (1816), Mirth and A Sunshine Holiday, seem consonant with two [Hindu poems] from [William Jones’s] Asiatick Researches: Mahdew and Purwutee and The Door of the Temple of Junwassoe” (142).

Kruger, Kathryn Sullivan. “The trimurti Meet the Zoas: ‘Hindoo’ Strategies in the Poetry of William Blake.” Women Reading Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2006. 109-17. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Sees the influence of the Hindu Trimurti on Blake’s idea of the Zoas.

Nanavutty, Piloo. “A Title Page in Blake’s Illustrated Genesis Manuscript.” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 10 (1947): 114-22. <BB #2270>

A detailed description of the symbolism, including that of an “an azure lily” around the first “N,” which, she suggests, is drawn from Robert John Thornton’s description in his New Illustration of the Sexual System of Linnaeus and Temple of Flora (1799-1807) and shows Blake using a Hindu symbol of creation.

Nanvutty, Piloo. “William Blake and Hindu Creation Myths.” The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 163-82. <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

An early essay that explores Blake’s allusions to and knowledge of “Hindu philosophy and Hindu cosmogony” (169).

Singh, Charu Sheel. Chariot of Fire: A Study of William Blake in the Light of Hindu Thought. Salzburg: Institut fur Anglistik und Amerikanistik, 1981. <BBS 640, WBHC 2679-80>

An “attempt to demonstrate that ‘William Blake’s poetry . . . manifests an awareness of certain Hindu ideas and myths (175)” (BBS 640).

Weir, David. Brahma in the West: William Blake and the Oriental Renaissance. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 2003. <WBHC 2842-43>

A rewarding study of Blake’s use of Hindu mythology and his place in Romantic-era Oriental discourses.

Islam

Ansari, Humayun. “Islam.” The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Ed. Jeffrey W. Barbeau. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. 86-104. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

“Blake was positive, even sympathetic, in his reevaluation of Islam” (95).

Garcia, Humberto. "Blake, Swedenborg, and Muhammad: The Prophetic Tradition, Revisited." Religion & Literature 44.2 (summer 2012): 35-65. <WBHC 2051>

"Read alongside Swedenborg's works, Blake's scattered references to Islam suggest identification with the Prophet Muhammad and admiration for a polygamous Muslim heaven" (36).

Islam, Md. Monirul. "For the darkness of Asia was startled": Blake and the East." Oriental Wells: The Early Romantic Poets and Their Eastern Muse. New Deli: Bloomsbury Indian, 2021. 73-105. <Blake (2022)>

Considers the influence of Orientalist "scholars, travelers, and painters" (14) on Blake and his views of Hinduism, Indian, Islam, and Mohammad in light of his own "Angelo-centric and Christo-centric conception of the world" (15).

Makdisi, Saree. "Blake and the Ontology of Empire." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 12-26. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers Blake's complex relationship to Orientalism and Empire, with references to his view of the Qur'an (14).

Whitehead, Angus. "A wise tale of the Mahometans': Blake and Islam, 1819-26." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 27-47. <WBHC 2113-15>

Examines Blake's relationship to Islam and his depiction of Mahomet in the Visionary Heads. References Blake's circle, and James De Ville's Phrenological Museum, which was "opposite the mouth of Fountain Court" (36).

Judaism (including Kabbalah and Blake's Use of Hebrew)

Ansari, Asloob Ahmad. "Blake and the Kabbalah." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 199-229. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

An early essay on the influence of the Kabbalah on Blake.

Antonielli, Arianna. "As all men are alike \(tho' infinitely various\) So all Religions': On the Philosophical and Religious Underpinnings of William Blake's Cosmogony." LEA: Lingue e letterature d'Oriente e d'Occidente 6 (2017): 329-43. <Blake (2018)>

"This article aims to analyse how this religious and philosophical traditions may have played on Blake's thought and to what extent it is possible to envisage in his poetical system a transmigration of symbols both from Christian doctrine and the Cabalistic tradition" (abstract).

Avni, Abraham. "Blake's 'Tiriel'—The Meaning of 'Ijim.'" ⁶⁰³ Notes and Queries 21.2 (1974): 60-61. <BB #C1098>

"Ijim' means 'jackals' in Hebrew" (BB #C1098).

⁶⁰³ See Michael Tolley's reply, Notes and Queries 21.5 (1974), 181. Not noted by BB.

Billigheimer, Rachel V. “Conflict and Conquest: Creation, Emanation and the Female Will in William Blake's Mythology.” Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 93-120. <WBHC 1629>

A detailed reading of the Emanations and the Seven Eyes of God in The Four Zoas, Milton, and Jerusalem in light, chiefly, of the Kabbala.

Bloom, Harold. “Catastrophe Creation: Gnosis, Kabbalah and Blake.” Agon: Toward a Theory of Revisionism. New York: Oxford University Press, 1982. 72-90. <BBS 414>

A comparison of Blake’s creation myth with those of the Gnostics and the Kabbalah.

Bogan, James Joseph, Jr. “Apocalypse Now: William Blake and the Conversation of the Jews.” English Language Notes 19.2 (1981): 115-20. <BBS 418>

Contrasts Blake’s address “To the Jews” in Jerusalem with those of the Anglican clergyman, Richard Clarke: “Blake’s contemporary Richard Clarke was insulting to the Jews, while in Jerusalem Blake was not” (BBS 418).

Brisman, Leslie. “Blake’s Comme-bined Cherubim: A Note on Milton, Plate 32.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 21 (1987-88): 95-98. <BBS 401>

On Blake’s use of Hebrew on plate 32[35] in copies C and D of Milton.

Bundock, Christopher. “Blake’s Nervous System: Hypochondria, Judaism, and Jerusalem.” William Blake: Modernity and Disaster. Ed. Tilottama Rajan and Joel Faflak. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2020. 150-71. <Blake (2021, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Reads the body of Albion in Jerusalem through the lens of the long reaction to the 1753 Jewish Naturalization Bill: “Albion thus seems to become the living embodiment of the anti-Semitic image of the Jew that he himself generates” (165).

Cheskin, Arnold. “The Echoing Greenhorn: Blake as Hebraist.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.3 (winter 1978-79): 178-83. <BBS 386>

Surveys Blake’s use of Hebrew to gauge his abilities and concludes that “Blake knew little Hebrew” (183).

Einboden, Jeffrey. “Poetry.” The Cambridge Companion to British Romanticism and Religion. Ed. Jeffrey W. Barbeau. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021. 141-60. <Blake (2022, 2025)>

Blake’s use of Hebrew and Hebrew poetics is considered in the section “Rintrah’s Abyss—Hebraic Blake” (144-48), which focuses on the biblical source of Rintrah in Marriage and Giora Leshem’s Hebrew translation of Marriage (1967–68). There is also a short discussion of The Ghost of Abel at the end of the chapter.

Freed, Eugenie R. “Blake and the ‘Aleph-Bet.’” Notes and Queries 59.3 (Sept. 2012): 361-62. <WBHC 2027>

Claims that Blake did not distinguish between the Hebrew letters “bet” and “vet.”

Rosenfeld, Alvin. “A Yiddish Poem on Blake.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 2.1 (Jun. 1968): 9. <BB #1217.17>

Reproduces a poem on Blake by “the American Yiddish poet, Reuben Iceland (also Island), (1884-1953)” (9).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. “William Blake and the Jewish Swedenborgians.” The Jews and British Romanticism: Politics, Religion, and Culture. Ed. Sheila A. Spector. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. 61-86. <WBHC 2659>

“Blake’s complex and ambivalent attitude toward the Jews was rooted in his early Moravian-Swedenborgian religious background and developed through his access to a Jewish-Christian subculture within Illuminist Freemasonry” (62).

Shabetai, Karen. “The Question of Blake’s Hostility Toward the Jews.” ELH 63.1 (1996): 139-52. <WBHC 2670>

“If I do not think that Blake is anti-Semitic, I remain puzzled and disturbed by the many examples of hostility that pepper his works” (139).

Shiff, Abraham Samuel. “Blake’s Hebrew Calligraphy.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 46.2 (fall 2012): 34 pars. <WBHC 1732-33>

On how Blake wrote Hebrew.

Shiff, Abraham Samuel. “Blake’s Priestly Blessing: God Blesses Job.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 47.3 (winter 2013-14): 29 pars. <WBHC 1739>

On Blake’s portrayal of the Jewish priestly blessing in pl. 17 of Illustrations of the Book of Job and other works: “Blake relied upon the Orthodox Jewish synagogue ritual of the priestly blessing as his model for depicting how God blesses Job” (par. 29).

Shiff, Abraham Samuel. William Blake’s Hebrew in “Milton” and Oolon. Wilton, ME: Liongrass Editions, 2019. <Blake (2020)>

An illuminating deciphering of the Hebrew on plates 15 and 32* of Milton that argues that Blake used Hebrew to make complex puns.

Spector, Sheila A. “The Evolution of Blake’s Myth: Urizen’s Multiple Identities.” Translating Myth. Ed. Ben Pestell, Pietra Palazzolo, and Leon Burnett. Cambridge: Modern Humanities Research Association and Abingdon and New York: Routledge, 2016. 60-100. <Blake (2024)>

Traces the development of Urizen through what she calls five phases of Blake’s myth, with references to Blake’s use of the Kabbalah.

Spector Sheila. “Kabbalistic Sources—Blake’s and His Critics.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 17.3 (winter 1983-84): 84-101. <BBS 395>

An important essay on Blake and the Kabbalah, which reviews what critics have said about Blake and the Kabbalah and Blake, defines the Kabbalah in general and in the late eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century contexts, gives the texts available during that period. A good starting point.

Spector, Sheila A. "Blake as an Eighteenth-Century Hebraist." Blake and His Bibles. Ed. David V. Erdman. West Cornwall: Locust Hill Press, 1990. 179-229.⁶⁰⁴ <BBS 462-63, WBHC 1989-90>

Spector's initial examination of Blake's use of Hebrew.

Spector, Sheila A. "Blake's Graphic Use of Hebrew." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.2 (fall 2003): 63-79. <WBHC 1695-96>

"Blake incorporated Hebraisms into his verbal art, ultimately as the vehicle for expanding consciousness in order to apprehend the One, through whose speech the act of Creation had been accomplished" (78).

Spector, Sheila A. "Blake's Milton as Kabbalistic Vision." Religion and Literature 25.1 (spring 1993): 19-33. <WBHC 2693>

"When viewed from the perspective of the kabbalistic prototypes, Milton emerges as a mystical interpretation of Blake's own life" (30).

Spector, Sheila A. "Glorious Incomprehensible": The Development of Blake's Kabbalistic Language." Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2001. <WBHC 2696-98>

Alongside its companion, "Wonders Divine," an important analysis of Blake's use of Hebrew and the Kabbalah in his poetry and mythic system.

Spector, Sheila A. "Hebraic Etymologies of Proper Names in Blake's Myth." Philological Quarterly 67.3 (1988): 345-63. <BBS 644>

On Hebrew roots of Blake's names, including Rintrah, Urthona, and Enitharmon.

Spector Sheila A. "A Kabbalistic Reading of Jerusalem's Prose Plates." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 219-27. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Reads the prefaces in Jerusalem to illustrate Blake's Kabbalism and to correct misunderstandings of her other work on the topic.

Spector, Sheila A. "Wonders Divine": The Development of Blake's Kabbalistic Myth." Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2001. <WBHC 2698-700>

See "Glorious Incomprehensible."

Stein, Sarah B. "The Jewish Marriage Contract in Blake's Job." Wordsworth Circle 49.1 (winter 2018): 41-46. <Blake (2019)>

Job "provides a series of friendships and antagonisms bound together in what Blake would call marriages" (41).

Stein, Sarah B. "The Laocoön and the Book of Job as Micrography: The Influence of Miniature Hebrew Illumination on the Work of William Blake." European Romantic Review 24.6 (2013): 623-44. <WBHC 2703-04>

⁶⁰⁴ Spector notes that this essay is superseded by her later study, "Glorious Incomprehensible": The Development of Blake's Kabbalistic Language." (Lewisburg: Bucknell University Press, 2001). See her "Blake's Graphic Use of Hebrew," Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 37.2 (fall 2003), n2.

“[A]rgues that the practice of micrography, an art form which creates designs and images using miniature Hebrew text, can be found in two of William Blake’s late works, the Laocoön and Illustrations of the Book of Job” (abstract).

Suzuki, Masashi. “‘signal of Solemn Mourning’: Los/Blake’s Sandals and Ancient Israelite Custom.” The Journal of English and Germanic Philology 100.1 (Jan. 2001): 40-56. <WBHC 2729-30>

“This essay attempts to show the significant ways in which the foot/tarsus and sandal imagery relates to the thematic issues of [Milton]” (41).

Whitson, Roger. “Jerusalem and ‘the Jew’: Biopolitics between Blake and Spinoza.” Romanticism on the Net no. 40 (Nov. 2005): 23 par. <WBHC 2852>

Using Spinoza to highlight the place of the body in reading, argues that “whatever comments Blake makes about Jewish identity cannot be read outside of the complicated biopolitical contexts emerging from the address [“To the Jews” in Jerusalem]” (abstract).

Methodism (See also Thomas Butts and Milton)

Boyles, Helen. Romanticism and Methodism: The Problem of Religious Enthusiasm. Abingdon: Routledge, 2017. <Blake (2018)>

Slight engagement with Blake in the introduction and conclusion.

England, Martha Winburn. “Blake and Hymns of Charles Wesley.” Bulletin of the New York Public Library 70.1 (1966): 7-26, 93-112, 153-68, 251-64.⁶⁰⁵ <BB #1552>

On Wesley’s influence on Blake, with some references to Isaac Watts, Anna Laetitia Barbauld, and Milton.

Farrell, Michael. Blake and the Methodists. Hounds mills, Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2014. <WBHC 2013>

Substantial study that treats the influence of Methodist thought (mostly John Wesley’s) on Blake, with some references to the Moravians. It includes an analysis of the Night Thoughts designs.

Gill, Frederick C. “The Pre-Romantics.” The Romantic Movement and Methodism: A Study of English Romanticism and the Evangelical Revival. London, 1937. New York: Haskell House, 1966. 146-59. <BB #1685>

Blake is paired with Cowper in the chapter.

Gleckner, Robert F. “Blake and Wesley.” Notes and Queries 3.12 (1956): 522-24. <BB #1692>

Reads the two “Holy Thursday” poems in light of John Wesley’s hymns on charity children.

Hobson, Christopher Z. “Blake, Methodism, and ‘Christian Perfection’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 55.2 (fall 2021): 47 pars. <Blake (2022)>

⁶⁰⁵ Rpt. with slight revision in her and John Sparrow’s Hymns Unbidden: Donne, Herbert, Blake, Emily Dickinson and the Hymnographers (New York: New York Public Library, 1966), <BB #1552B>.

“This essay argues that Blake rejected John Wesley’s teaching of “Christian perfection” and examines the implications of this rejection for Blake’s ideas of morality, conduct, and social and sexual freedom” (abstract).

Jesse, Jennifer G. William Blake’s Religious Vision: There’s a Methodism in His Madness. Plymouth: Lexington Books, 2013. <WBHC 2208-09>

A key recent study that examines the profound influence of Methodism and John Wesley, in particular, on Blake.

Johnson, Mary Lynn. “More on Blake’s (and Bentley’s) ‘White Collar Maecenas’: Thomas Butts, His Wife’s Family of Artisans, and the Methodist Withams of St. Bartholomew the Great.” Blake in Our Time: Essays in Honour of G.E. Bentley, Jr. Ed. Karen Mulhallen. University of Toronto Press: Toronto, 2010. 131-64. <WBHC 2436-40>

A key biographical essay on Thomas and Elizabeth Mary Butts, highlighting the Butts’s family relationship to Methodism and other new details.

Keynes, Geoffrey. “Blake and Wesley.” Notes and Queries (old series) 202 (1957): 181. <BB #2007>

A short note responding to Gleckner’s “Blake and Wesley.” Keynes points out he has obtained a copy of Wesley’s Hymns for the Nation in 1782 “with Blake’s signature at the top dated 1790” (181).

Read, Dennis M. “Blake’s Hervey, Thomas Butts, and Methodism.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.3 (winter 2023-24): 32 pars. <Blake (2024)>

On the painting, Epitome of James Hervey’s “Meditations Among the Tombs” (c. 1820), Hervey, and Butts’s Methodism.

Worden, Barbara S. “The Emotional Evangelical: Blake and Wesley.” Wesleyan Theological Journal 28 (fall 1983): 67-79. <WBHC 2880>

“To both Blake and Wesley, salvation is the response of the heart” (77).

Moravianism (See also Biographies)

Introduction

Regier, Alexander. “Moravianism.” William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 293-300. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Atwood, Craig D. “Christ and the Bridal Bed: Eighteenth-Century Moravian Erotic Spirituality as a Possible Influence on Blake.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 160-79. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An overview of the Moravian congregation around the time Blake’s mother joined and its sexual practices and beliefs.

Davies, Keri. “Bridal Mysticism and ‘sifting Time’: The Lost Moravian History of Blake’s Family.” Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering and Chatto, 2012. 57-70. <WBHC 1800-01>

Considers the Moravian concept of “bridal mysticism” (57) and how it might have influenced Blake’s mother and her first husband as well as Blake’s own ideas of gender, marriage, and sexuality.

Davies, Keri. “Jonathan Spilsbury and the Lost Moravian History of William Blake’s Family.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (winter 2006-07): 100-09. <WBHC 1710>

Surveys the career of the Moravian artist, Jonathan Spilsbury (1737-1812), and makes a convincing case he was “an associate of William Blake” (100). References to Richard Cosway, Ottobah Cugoano, and James Montgomery.

Davies, Keri. “The Lost Moravian History of William Blake’s Family: Snapshots from an Archive.” Literature Compass 3.6 (Nov. 2006): 1297-1319. Wiley Online Library. <WBHC 1927-28>

Consolidates his and Schuchard’s discoveries regarding the Blakes, the Armitages, and the Moravians.

Davies, Keri. “The Swedishman at Brother Brockmer’s’: Moravians and Swedenborgians in Eighteenth-Century London.” Philosophy, Literature, Mysticism: An Anthology of Essays on the Thought and Influence of Emmanuel Swedenborg. Ed. Stephen McNeilly. London: The Swedenborg Society, 2013. 385-412. <WBHC 2407>

On Swedenborg’s early connections to the Moravians in the 1740s, during the time of Blake’s mother’s own connection with the Moravians.

Davies, Keri, and Marsha Keith Schuchard. “Recovering the Lost Moravian History of William Blake’s Family.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 38.1 (summer 2004): 36-43. <WBHC 1698>

An essential article tracing the relationship of Blake’s mother, Catherine, and her first husband, Thomas Armitage, to the Moravian Congregation. It includes letters by both Catherine and Thomas.

Davies, Keri, and David Worrall. “Inconvenient Truths: Re-historicizing the Politics of Dissent and Antinomianism.” Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 30-47. <WBHC 1899-1900>

A key essay that rejects many long-standing biographical claims of Blake criticism, especially the idea of Blake’s relationship to Dissent and Antinomianism, in light of his mother’s membership in the Moravian Church.

Green, Matthew J. A. Visionary Materialism in the Early Works of William Blake: The Intersection of Enthusiasm and Empiricism. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. <WBHC 2103-04>

A reading of the early works through the idea of “visionary materialism.” It discusses Blake’s relationship to Locke, Newton, and Bacon via Reynolds; the Songs (particularly, “The Human Abstract” and “The Divine Image”); All Religions are One; Moravians, antinomians, Swedenborgians, and other enthusiasts; Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and Lavater.

Peucker, Paul. A Time of Sifting: Mystical Marriage and the Crisis of Moravian Piety in the Eighteenth Century. University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 2015. <Blake (2018, 2019)>

An important study of the mid-eighteenth-century crisis of Moravianism involving sexuality that coincides with the association of Blake's mother with the church.

Regier, Alexander. "The Polyglot Moravians in Eighteenth-Century London." Exorbitant Enlightenment: Blake, Hamann, and Anglo-German Constellations. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. 151-66. <Blake (2019, 2020, 2022, 2023, 2024)>

Examines the Moravian's German roots and their importance to the Fetter Lane congregation.

Ripley, Wayne C. "The Influence of the Moravian Collection of Hymns on William Blake's Later Mythology." Huntington Library Quarterly 80.3 (autumn 2017): 481-98. <Blake (2018)>

Shows how Blake's later mythological language in The Four Zoas manuscript drew on John Gambold's 1754 Moravian hymnal.

Rovira, James. "The Moravian Origins of Kierkegaard's and Blake's Socratic Literature." Kierkegaard, Literature, and the Arts. Ed. Eric Zolkowski. Evanston: Northwestern University Press, 2018. 239-60. <Blake (2019)>

A fascinating look at the parallels between Kierkegaard's and Blake's Moravian heritage and its impact on their conception of Socrates.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "The Peculiar Alchemical Research of John Flaxman, Charles Augustus Tulk, and Fabian Wrede Ekenstam (1776-1818)." Heredom: The Transactions of the Scottish Rite Research Society 29 (2021): 96-132. <Blake (2024)>

Argues that "[t]hough Flaxman's biographers have been unaware of his alchemical involvement, evidence for his collaboration and that of his wife Nancy survives in the unpublished correspondence and book marginalia of Tulk and [Fabian Wrede] Ekenstam" (96). In addition to these figures, there are references to Blake, Moravianism, Swedenborg and later Swedenborgians (particularly, Augustus Nordenskjöld), and Thomas Taylor.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "The 'secret' and the 'Gift': Recovering the Suppressed Religious Heritage of William Blake and Hilda Doolittle." Women Reading William Blake. Ed. Helen P. Bruder. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 209-18. <WBHC 1795-1800>

Compares the Moravian background of Blake and the Modernist poet, Hilda Doolittle (H.D.).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "'A Secret Common to our Blood': The Visionary Erotic Heritage of Blake, Thomas Butts and Mary Butts." Blake, Gender and Culture. Ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne J. Connolly. London: Pickering & Chatto, 2012. 71-82. <WBHC 1800-01>

Examines the religious and erotic ideas of Mary Butts (the great-granddaughter of Thomas Butts) in light of Swedenborg, Moravianism, and Blake.

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "Text Books for Innocence: Moravian-Swedenborg Infant Education and William Blake's Songs of Innocence and Experience [sic]." Studies in Romanticism 62.3 (fall 2023): 405-34. <Blake (2024)>

"In the 1780s and 90s, William Blake and his wife Catherine shared the radical, often esoteric theories of Moravian-Swedenborgian pedagogy with an international network of mystical Freemasons, and he produced illustrated (illuminated) songs and poems to express their notions of infant education" (406).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "William Blake and the Jewish Swedenborgians." The Jews and British Romanticism: Politics, Religion, and Culture. Ed. Sheila A. Spector. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005. 61-86. <WBHC 2659>

"Blake's complex and ambivalent attitude toward the Jews was rooted in his early Moravian-Swedenborgian religious background and developed through his access to a Jewish-Christian subculture within Illuminist Freemasonry" (62).

Schuchard, Marsha Keith. "Young William Blake and the Moravian Tradition of Visionary Art." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 40.2 (winter 2006-07): 84-100. <WBHC 1710>

Focuses on the possible Moravian influence on Blake's "early artistic development" (84).

Sklar, Susanne. "Erotic Spirituality in Blake's Last Judgement." Sexy Blake. ed. Helen P. Bruder and Tristanne Connolly. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2013.⁶⁰⁶ 125-40. <WBHC 1803-04>

On the Petworth Last Judgment and its depiction of the Babylon Harlot in the context of Sheela na gigs, Swedenborgianism, and Moravianism.

Mysticism, Occult, and Alchemy (Including Jacob Boehme, Paracelus)

Introduction

Quinney, Laura. "Mysticism." William Blake in Context. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2019. 301-08. <Blake (2020, 2021, 2022, 2025)>

Studies

Adlard, John. "A 'Triumphing Joyfulness': Blake, Boehme and the Tradition." Blake Studies 1.2 (spring 1969): 109-22. <BB #1218.8>

A useful reading of Milton highlighting probable allusions and parallels to Boehme.

Andersson, Bo, Lucinda Martin, Leigh Penman, and Andrew Weeks, ed. Jacob Böhme and His World. Leiden: Brill, 2019. <Blake (2019)>

While largely on Böhme's seventeenth-century contexts, the collection does include essays on Paracelsus, the Kabbalah, and his English translator John Sparrow (1615–70).

Aubrey, Bryan. Watchmen of Eternity: Blake's Debt to Jacob Boehme. Lanham, New York, and London: University Press of America, 1986.⁶⁰⁷ <BBS 355, WBHC 1569-70>

⁶⁰⁶ Many papers were delivered at the conference "Blake, Gender and Sexuality in the Twenty-First Century, aka The Sexy Blake Conference, 15-16 July 2010, St Aldate's, Oxford" (17n1).

⁶⁰⁷ Revises and incorporates Aubrey's essay, "'Visions of Torment': Blake, Boehme and The Book of Urizen," Studies in Mystical Literature 1 (1980), 120-53, <BBS 355>.

An important examination of Blake's reading of Boehme.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and the Paranormal." Notes and Queries 64.1 (2017): 57-62. <Blake (2018)>

On Blake's belief in the paranormal.

Brogan, Howard O. "Blake and the Occult: 'The Real Man the Imagination which Liveth for Ever.'" Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 147-60. <BBS 425>

"[A]ll of Blake's characteristic work is occult. It is this element in it that gives it its startling originality to readers of his own and succeeding times" (157).

Fischer, Kevin. Converse in the Spirit: William Blake, Jacob Boehme, and the Creative Spirit. Madison: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2004. <WBHC 2020>

A comprehensive study of Blake and Boehme that is strikingly lucid in its explication of Boehme.

Fischer, Kevin. "Imagination and Experience: Jacob Boehme and William Blake." Temenos Academy Review 20 (2017): 98-117. <Blake (2019)>

"Both [Boehme and Blake] men saw [imagination] as rooted in living experience, and as such necessary for a fuller knowledge and understanding of reality. For both, abstract reasoning alone gives only a partial view, one that can distort and limit our understanding and the world that we do experience" (98).

Gibbons, B.J. Gender in Mystical and Occult Thought: Behmenism and Its Development in England. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1996. 191-98. <WBHC 2060>

A study of gender in the thought of Jacob Boehme, with its reception in England. One section is on Blake.

Hirst, Désirée. Hidden Riches: Traditional Symbolism from the Renaissance to Blake. London: Eyre and Spottiswoode, 1964. <BB #1855, WBHC 2152>

A still useful study of Blake's esoteric sources, with chapters on Jacob Boehme, the Cambridge Platonist, William Law, the Swedenborgian Movement, and Free Masons. Her "List of Leading Characters" (xiii-xv) is a good starting point for the uninitiated.

Hirst, Désirée. "Once More Continuing 'The Tyger.'" Blake Studies 7.2 (1975): 177-79. <BBS 411>

Suggests the contrasting imagery in "The Tyger" are elucidated by a passage from Robert Fludd's Mosaicall Philosophy (1659).

Ito, Yuki. "Toso no Honoo to Moetsukinu Mono: Blake to Nietzsche wo Tunagu Mono tshiteno Yeats no Jacob Böhme no Juyo nitsuite [A Flame of Battle and Something That Never Burns Out: The Reception of Jacob Böhme in Yeats as a Link between Blake and Nietzsche]." Josai Daigaku Gogaku Kyoiku Kenkyu Center Kenkyu Nenpo [Annual Bulletin of the Center for Language Education in Josai University] 14 (2021): 29-50. In Japanese. <Blake (2023)>

Jessen, Elisabeth Engell. "Boehme and the Early English Romantics." An Introduction to Jacob Boehme: Four Centuries of Thought and Reception. Ed. Ariel Hessayon and Sarah Apetrei. New York: Routledge, 2014. ⁶⁰⁸

On Boehme's influence on Blake and Coleridge.

Jessen, Elisabeth Engell. "William Blake's Milton a Poem as a Conversion Narrative in the Behmenist Tradition." Literature and Theology 30.3 (2016): 293-308. <Blake (2017)>

Challenges the idea of a conversion narrative as focusing on the author's past experience, showing how its ultimate focus is, instead, on the reader" (abstract).

John, Donald. "Romantic Regeneration: Blake, Creation, and the Constitutive Imagination." Temenos Academy Review 9 (2006): 189-206. <WBHC 2211>

Focused largely on Jerusalem, examines Blake's idea of creation and theodicy, comparing his thought to Milton, Boehme, and William King (1650-1729).

John, Donald. "'They became what they beheld': Theodicy and Regeneration in Milton, Law, and Blake." Radicalism in British Literary Culture 1650-1830. Ed. Timothy Morton and Nigel Smith. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2002. 86-100. <WBHC 2211>

Considers Blake's ideas of creation, the Fall, resurrection, and theodicy in relationship to Milton and William Law's notion of Jacob Boehme, with references to Swedenborg and the Gnostics as well.

John, Donald. "William Blake and the Dionysius Andreas Freher Illuminations to the 'Law' Edition of Boehme." Temenos Academy Review 12 (2009): 159-80. <WBHC 2211>

Larrissy, Edward. "'self-Imposition', Alchemy, and the Fate of the 'Bound' in later Blake." Historicizing Blake. Ed. Steve Clark and David Worrall. London: Macmillan, 1994. 59-72. <WBHC 1869-71>

Argues that hermetic and alchemical traditions elucidates Blake's later notions of the bounded, circumference, limit, and energy.

McClellan, Jane Martha, and George Mills Harper. "Blake's Demonic Triad." Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 172-82. <BBS 567>

Reads Blake's use of threes and threefold, tying it to "the Pythagoreans' sacred tetractys" (172).

McQuail, Josephine A. "Passion and Mysticism in William Blake." Modern Language Studies 30.1 (2000): 121-34. <WBHC 2391>

Responding to the arguments of Brenda Webster's Blake's Prophetic Psychology (1983) and Margaret Storch's Sons and Adversaries (1990) that suggest Blake was sexist, argues, ultimately, that Blake's mysticism explains his view of women.

⁶⁰⁸ Not recorded in WBHC.

Nanavutty, Piloo. "Materia Prima in a Page of Blake's Vala." William Blake: Essays for S. Foster Damon. Ed. Alvin H. Rosenfeld. Providence: Brown University Press, 1969. 292-302. <BB #2565, BBS 626-27, WBHC 2608-09>

On alchemical symbolism in the poem, including its illustrations.

Newman, Marcia. "'Milton's Track' Revisited: Visual Analogues to Blake's Vortex in the 'Law Edition' of Boehme." Interdisciplinary Literary Studies 5 (2004): 73-93. <WBHC 2456>

Focusing on Milton, argues: "As Blake extends his myth of the fall to include and emphasize the story of redemption, there is strong indication that he is not only indebted to Jacob Boehme, but also to Boehme's follower and illustrator, Dionysius Freher" (76-77).

Raine, Kathleen. From Blake to A Vision. Dublin: Dolmen Press, 1979. <BBS 614, WBHC 2564>

On the use of perennial philosophy by both poets, with an emphasis on Blake's influence on Yeats. Discussions of the occult and Yeats's and Ellis's edition of Blake.

Spector, Sheila A. "A Numerological Analysis of Jerusalem." Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 327-49. <WBHC 2095-98>

Identifies numerical patterns in Jerusalem, which "provide an alternative hermeneutical basis for reading the prophecy" (347).

Squibbs, Richard J. "Preventing the Star-Led Wizards: Blake's Europe and Popular Astrology." Prophetic Character: Essays on William Blake in Honor of John E. Grant. Ed. Alexander S. Gourlay. West Cornwall, CT: Locust Hill Press, 2002. 351-85. <WBHC 2095-98>

"I will show how Europe associates star-gazing with a counterrevolutionary ideology that denies the French Revolution what Blake sees as its true role as the agent of the apocalypse" (351-52).

Stewart, David. "The Context of Blakean Contraries in The Marriage of Heaven and Hell." Essays in Literature 21 (1994): 43-53. <WBHC 2709>

"Blake seems to be employing the . . . Behmenist model' that 'evil is a necessary part of the Godhead but does not exist independently' (52)" (WBHC 2709).

Trawick, Leonard. "Blake's Empirical Occult." Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (1977): 161-71. <BBS 663>

"While Blake does have many affinities with the occult traditions, his own view of reality is ultimately inimical to them" (162). Highlights George Berkeley's influence.

Whittaker, Jason. "Zoamorphosis: 250 Years of Blake Mutations." Re-envisioning Blake. Ed. Mark Crosby, Troy Patenaude, and Angus Whitehead. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2012. 207-24. <WBHC 1899-1900>

An overview of Blake's reception that offers a rationale of sorts for Whittaker's webpage on Blake's reception, Zoamorphosis. It includes a brief case study on Blake's reception among spiritualist and occult circles.

Wordsworth Circle 8.2 (spring 1977).⁶⁰⁹

A special issue on Romanticism and the Occult, with three essays on Blake.

Norse Mythology (See also Antiquarianism and Druids and Illustrations to Gray)

Choe, Sharon. “Deformed Bodies and Norse Origins in William Blake.” Studies in English Literature, 1500–1900 60.3 (summer 2020): 529-49. <Blake (2021)>

“The scope of this article then is to rethink how the formation of Urizen’s deformed body speaks to Blake’s antiquarian interests, specifically in the North and Old Norse, and how this interest in an alternate creation narrative reveals the limits of the Genesis narrative when examining The Book of Urizen” (531).

Gourlay, Alexander S. “Construing ‘Har’: Blake’s Polygot Roots.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 57.4 (spring 2024): 5 pars. <Blake (2025)>

About the possible sources for Har, emphasizing the “Har” in Paul Henri Mallet’s Edda and the etymology of “hoar” and “hoary.”

O’Donoghue, Heather. “Preromantic Responses: Gray, Blake, and the Northern Sublime.” English Poetry and Old Norse Myth: A History. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2014. 65-103. <WBHC 2473>

Largely on Gray’s poetry, with a conclusion focused on Blake’s use of Norse mythology in his prophetic books and a slight discussion of Blake’s illustration to Gray’s “The Descent of Odin.” She points out that “the Old Norse sibyl, or völv” was anglicized as “Vala” (100-01).

Stenberg, Theodore T. “Blake’s Indebtedness to the ‘Eddas’.” Modern Language Review 18.2 (1923): 204-06. <BB #2752>

An early, though useful, account of the names and concepts Blake borrowed from the Eddas as found in Mallet’s Northern Antiquities (1770).

Wright, Julia M. “‘Empire is no More’: Odin and Orc in America.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 26 (1992-93): 26-29. <BBS 409>

Points out the “close correspondences between America’s Orc and Odin” (27).

(Neo)Platonism (See also Plato and Thomas Taylor)

Brogan, Howard O. “Blake on Woman: Oothoon to Jerusalem.” CEA Critic 48.4/49.1 (summer-fall 1986). 125-36. <BBS 434-35>

“I may be able at least to explain Blake’s attitude toward women as a consistent development by looking at it in a much broader mythological context” (126). Also suggests that “Blake’s attitude toward woman can be illuminated by considering it in light of Neoplatonic and Gnostic influence upon him” (125).

⁶⁰⁹ Not recorded as a collection by Bentley.

Brown, John E. “Neo-Platonism in the Poetry of William Blake.” The Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism 10.1 (Sep. 1951):⁶¹⁰ 43-52. <BB #1298>

Sees roots for Blake's mysticism in Plotinus.

Catană, Adela Livia. “Songs of Innocence and [sic] Experience: A Neoplatonic Approach.” Signs of Identity: Literary Constructs and Discursive Practices. Ed. Emilia Parpală. Newcastle upon Tyne: Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2017. 55-65. <Blake (2018)>

A reading of Songs relying heavily on Raine's and Harper's work.

Chayes, Irene H. “Blake and Tradition: ‘The Little Girl Lost’ and ‘The Little Girl Found’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 4.1 (Aug. 1970): 25-28. <BB #1217.62>

A critique of Raine's overemphasis on Thomas Taylor and Platonism in her reading of the poems in Blake and Tradition (1968).

Chayes, Irene Hendry. “Plato's Statesman Myth in Shelley and Blake.” Comparative Literature 13 (1961): 358-69. <BB #1375>

Suggests that both Shelley's Prometheus Unbound and Blake's “Mental Traveller” allude to “the myth recounted in [Plato's] Statesman” in which “there are two alternating cycles of order and disorder in the universe, the Age of Kronos, or Saturn, during which the motion of the world is directed by God himself, and the Age of Zeus, or Jupiter, in which the world, unguided, reverses its motion and revolves in the opposite direction” (360).

Colebrook, Claire. Blake, Deleuzian Aesthetics and the Digital. London and New York.: Continuum, 2012. <WBHC 1877-78>

Explores Blake using Deleuze, with much on Modernity, Plato, the body, and digital media.

Douglas, Dennis. “Blake's Europe: A Note on the Preludium.” Journal of the Australasian Universities Language and Literature Association 23.1 (1965): 111-16. <BB #1512>

A Neoplatonic reading of Enitharmon and the Shadowy Female.

Fletcher, Joseph. William Blake as Natural Philosopher, 1788-1795. Anthem Press, 2021.⁶¹¹ <Blake (2022, 2024, 2025)>

Examines Blake's relationship to science and philosophy in his early illuminated books, making the case that he was a pantheist who rejected vitalism. Discusses Platonism, Aristotle, Bacon, Descartes, Newton, Locke, Priestley, and Darwin to suggest that Blake's critique of their thought was ultimately tied to their dualism.

⁶¹⁰ Not recorded as a collection by WBHC.

⁶¹¹ Incorporates Fletcher's “Ocean Growing: Blake's Two Versions of Newton and the Emerging Polypus,” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 49.3 (winter 2015-16), 38 pars., <WBHC 1746>; “Unruly Children: Blake's Book of Urizen and Embryology's Break from Newtonian Law,” Essays in Romanticism 23.1 (2016), 113-32, <Blake (2016)>; and “Leibniz, the Infinite, and Blake's Early Metaphysics,” Studies in Romanticism 56.2 (summer 2017), 129-55, <Blake (2018)>.

Haggarty, Sarah. “Blake’s Newton, Line-Drawing, and Geometry.” Studies in Romanticism 60.2 (2021): 123-51. <Blake (2022)>

Proposes two new sources for the Newton print and positions “him for the first time in his contemporary mathematical-cultural context” (127), with references to Blake’s supposed argument with Thomas Taylor over geometry.

Harper, George Mills. The Neoplatonism of William Blake. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1961.⁶¹² <BB #1793, WBHC 2129-30>

A classic study that emphasizes Blake’s reliance on Platonism and his relationship with Thomas Taylor.

Hasegawa, Akira. Den’en Toshi to Sennen Okoku: Shukyo kaikaku kara Bruno Taut e [Garden City and the Millennium: From Religious Reformation to Bruno Taut]. Tokyo: Kosakusha, 2021. 613 pp. In Japanese. <Blake (2024)>

Chapter Four, “Igirisu seikimatsu to sinrei shugi [British fin de siècle and Spiritualism],” mentions Blake and Neoplatonism (p. 98).

Heppner, Christopher. “A Desire of Being’: Identity and The Book of Thel.” Colby Library Quarterly 13.2 (1977): 79-98. <BBS 439, WBHC 1877>

“[T]he action [of Thel] is primarily a poetic exploration of modes of being in the world, rather than a Neo-Platonic account of an unborn soul fleeing from the agonies of descent, and that Thel’s flight at the end of the poem is at the least a set-back to the search upon which she had set out at the beginning” (80).

Hoagwood, Terrence Allan. “The Four Zoas and ‘The Philosophick Cabbala’.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 12.2 (fall 1978): 87-90. <BBS 385>

Suggests that “The Philosophick Cabbala’ [by the Cambridge Platonist, Henry More (1614-87)] furnishes a long series of parallels to The Four Zoas” (90).⁶¹³

Larrissy, Edward. “Blake and Platonism.” Platonism and the English Imagination. Ed. Anna Baldwin and Sarah Hutton. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1994. 186-98. <WBHC 2312>

A good overview of Blake’s relationship to Platonism and Plato, including Thomas Taylor.

Miner, Paul. “Blake: An Unrecognized Allusion to Plato.” Notes and Queries 58.1 (March 2011): 61-63. <WBHC 2410>

⁶¹² Incorporates Harper’s “The Source of Blake’s ‘Ah! Sun-Flower,” Modern Language Review 48.2 (1953), 139-42, <BB # 1794>; “The Neo-Platonic Concept of Time in Blake’s Prophetic Books,” PMLA 69.1 (1954), 142-55, <BB #1792>; “Blake’s Neo-Platonic Interpretation of Plato’s Atlantis Myth,” Journal of English and Germanic Philology 54.1 (1955), 72-79, <BB #1791>; “Thomas Taylor and Blake’s Drama of Persephone,” Philological Quarterly 34 (1955), 378-94, <BB #1796>; and “Symbolic Meaning Blake’s ‘Nine Years’,” Modern Language Notes 72.1 (1957), 18-19, <BB #1795>.

⁶¹³ Note that More is appropriating “Cabbala” here to describe his own expositions of Genesis. See “The Preface to the Reader.”

The allusion is to Thomas Taylor's translation of Timaeus.

Mounsey, Chris. Understanding the Poetry of William Blake through a Dialectic of Contraries: A Study of the Philosophical Contexts within which Blake Developed His Ideas. Lewiston: Edwin Mellen Press, 2011. <WBHC 2434>

Focuses largely on Four Zoas, with chapters on Blake's Neoplatonism, Milton, and Jerusalem.

Raine, Kathleen. Blake and Tradition. 2 vols. (Vol. 1. Vol. 2.) Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1968. London: Routledge, 2002.⁶¹⁴ (Vol. 1. Vol. 2) <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>

A once very influential study on Blake's thought, literature, and art largely in relationship to Platonism, Hermeticism, and Gnosticism that collects much of Raine's work on Blake delivered or published elsewhere in the 1950 and 1960s. Raine's insistence that Blake's work could be decoded through the lens of these sources has been largely rejected, but the question of Blake's relationship to these sources remains open.

The Routledge edition of 2002 is a facsimile (WBHC 2560). A shorter version of the book was published as Blake and Antiquity (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1977; London and New York: Routledge, 2002. Paperback. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2023), <WBHC 2563>.

Raine, Kathleen. “The Crested Cock.” Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 1.3 (Dec. 1967): 9-10. <BB #1217.6>

Identifies probable sources for “the crested Cock” (M 28 [30]: 24, E 126) in James Macpherson's Introduction to the History of Great Britain and Ireland (1772) and Thomas Taylor's Works of Plato (1804).

Raine, Kathleen. “The Little Girl Lost and Found and The Lapsed Soul.” The Divine Vision: Studies in the Poetry and Art of William Blake. Ed. Vivian de Sola Pinto. London: Gollancz, 1957. 17-63.⁶¹⁵ <BB #2402, WBHC 2533-34>

The first part reads “The Little Girl Lost” and “The Little Girl Found” as Platonic allegories of the soul, emphasizing the supposed influence of Porphyry and the translations of Plato and the Platonists by Thomas Taylor. The second part extends this analysis to the phrase, “the lapsed soul,” from the “Introduction” for Experience.

Shabetai, Karen. “Blake's Antifoundationalist Poetics.” SEL 27.4 (1987): 555-70. <BBS 636>

Uses largely Marriage to argue that “Blake uses perception as a language to destroy the ‘Platonic myth’ that he held responsible for the damaging metaphysics of his age” and ⁶¹⁴ Incorporates Raine's “Blake's 'Cupid and Psyche,'” Listener 58 (1957), 832-35, <BB #2481>; “Blake's Debt to Antiquity,” Sewanee Review 75 (1963), 352-450, <BB #2482>; “The Sea of Time and Space,” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 20.3/4 (1957), 318-37, <BB #2486>; “Some Sources of Tiriel,” Huntington Library Quarterly 21.1 (1957), 1-36, <BB #2487>; and “Who Made the Tyger?” Encounter 2.9 (Jun. 1954), 43-50, <BB #2490>.

⁶¹⁵ Rpt. in Raine's Blake and Tradition, <BB #2478, BBS 613, WBHC 2560-63>.

that “Blake makes use of something like antifoundationalism to make room for his own sense-producing system” (564).

Satan and Satanism (See also John Milton, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell and Milton)
Bentley, G.E., Jr. “Blake and Young.” Notes and Queries 199 (Dec. 1954): 529-30. <BB #1155>

Identifies the allusion to Young in For the Sexes, “Truly My Satan thou art but a Dunce.”

Brinkley, Robert A. “Blake and the Prophecy of Satan.” New Orleans Review 9 (1982): 73-76.
<BBS 425>

“In Milton, ‘Milton is Satan’ (73)” (BBS 425).

Brisman, Leslie. “Blake and the Eternals’ Time.” Milton’s Poetry of Choice and Its Romantic Heirs. Ithaca and London: Cornell University Press, 1973. 192-212. <BB #A1282>

Read the later epics, and particularly Los’s relationship to the Spectre and the Fallen World, as elaborations on the Son’s rejection of Satan from the pinnacle of the Temple in Paradise Regained.

Calè, Luisa. “Blake and the Literary Galleries.” Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008. 185-209. <WBHC 2113-15>

Considers “how Blake responded to the rhetoric and aesthetics of the literary galleries,” with a focus on “Fuseli’s Satan Bursts From Chaos, a Milton Gallery picture which Blake was commissioned to engrave” (186), a design that echoes in The [First] Book of Urizen and the illustrations to Night Thoughts.

Cooper, L.J. “William Blake’s Aesthetic Reclamation: Newton, Newtonianism, and Absolute Space in The Book of Urizen and Milton.” European Romantic Review 29.2 (2018): 247-69.
<Blake (2019)>

“[A]rgues that The Book of Urizen and Milton illustrate that Blake was also aware of and critical toward popularized accounts of Newton’s works. [...] Milton’s defeat of the Newtonian Satan achieves two things: it allows Blake’s deployment of Newton’s absolute space to challenge the self-interested, institutionalized authority Newtonianism had obtained, and it provides a template for Newton’s redemption from Newtonianism within Blake’s oeuvre” (abstract).

Crisafulli, Edoardo. “La rinascita della fortuna di Dante in Gran Bretagna vis-à-vis l’ideologia e l’estetica mainstream nell’epoca romantica: il caso della metamorfosi del Lucifer dantesco nella triade Milton, Cary, e Blake.” Dante e l’arte 7 (2020). Special Issue: “Dante e Blake.” 59-100. In Italian (abstract in Italian and English). <Blake (2021)>

On Cary’s translation of the Divine Comedy and Blake’s images of both Milton’s Satan and Dante’s Lucifer. “Blake’s Satan is the epitome of a humanity whose fall from grace stems from a withered poetic imagination. This view modernizes, but does not cloud, the notion of absolute evil underpinning Christian metaphysics” (abstract).

Erle, Sibylle. “And I gave it to my foe’: Deadly Games of Creation in Blake’s The [First] Book of Urizen and ‘A Poison Tree.’” Prudent Crossings: From Milton’s Paradise to Canada’s Bush Gardens. Ed. Alessandra Boller et al. Augsburg: Wißner-Verlag 2023. 21-38. <Blake (2024)>

An important consideration of Blake's depiction of creation and the fall, his use of Milton, and Urizen's relationship to Satan, with commentary on Marriage and The Ancient of Days as well as the poems mentioned in the title.

Fernie, Ewan. "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell." The Demonic: Literature and Experience. London and New York: Routledge, 2013. 165-68. <WBHC 2107>

A breezy celebration of Marriage in a book on literature and the demonic.

Gross, Kenneth. "Satan and the Romantic Satan: A Notebook." Re-membering Milton: Essays on Texts and Traditions. Ed. Mary Nyquist and Margaret W. Ferguson. New York and London, 1987. <BBS 496>

"In the Marriage, 'Blake allusively restructures Paradise Lost itself' (339)" (BBS 496).

Hsu, Kan-Lin, and Pang-Li Liu. "[The Voice of the Anachronic Bard: 'satanic Mill' and Market Society]." [Journal for Philosophical Study of Public Affairs] 70 (2019): 109–67. In Chinese. Abstract in Chinese and English. <Blake (2020)>

Hutchings, Kevin D. "Locating the Satanic: Blake's Milton and the Poetics of 'self-Examination.'" European Romantic Review 8.3 (1997): 274-97. <WBHC 2179>

On Blake's proto-Foucauldian examinations of Milton.

Hutton, Joseph. "'Lovers of Wild Rebellion': The Image of Satan in British Art of the Revolutionary Era." Blake, Politics, and History. Ed. Jackie DiSalvo, G.A. Rosso, and Christopher Z. Hobson. New York: Garland Publishing, 1998. 150-68. <WBHC 1950-53>

Considers Blake's depictions of Satan in the wider eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century political context.

Leader, Carol. "Evil, Imagination and the Unrepressed Unconscious: The Value of William Blake's Satanic 'Error' for Clinical Practice." British Journal of Psychotherapy 31.3 (2015): 311-32. <WBHC 2314>

"While setting this paper within an analytic frame, the writer aims to offer an overview of Blake's central concepts—particularly those concerning Satan and the state of 'Error'—that are revealed in their most refined form in his celebrated 'Illustrations of the Book of Job'" (abstract).

Paley, Morton D. "¶ & His Two Sons Satan & Adam." Studies in Romanticism 41.2 (summer 2002): 201-35.⁶¹⁶ <WBHC 2713-15>

The definitive account of the Laocoön plate.

Santos, Andrio J. R. dos. "'Amante de selvagem rebelião': a figuração satânica nas profecias continentais de William Blake ('Lover of a Wild Rebellion': The Satanic Figuration in William Blake's Continental Prophecies)." Fronteiraz 19 (Dec. 2017): 272-90. In Portuguese (abstract in Portuguese and English). <Blake (2020)>

⁶¹⁶ Incorporated in Paley's The Traveller in the Evening (2003), <WBHC 2499-2501>.

Schock, Peter A. "Blake, the Son of Fire, and the God of this World." Romantic Satanism: Myth and the Historical Moment in Blake, Shelley, and Byron. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003. 41-77. <WBHC 2653>

Considers Satan in the prophetic works. There is also an epilogue on The Ghost of Abel.

Schock, Peter A. "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell: Blake's Myth of Satan and its Cultural Matrix." ELH 60.2 (summer 1993): 441-70. <WBHC 2653>

"The diabolism of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell participates, of course, in the widespread revision of the myth of Satan during the Romantic era" (441).

Stone, George W. "[Blake's 'The Tiger \[sic.\]'](#)." The Explicator 1.3 (1942): 22. ⁶¹⁷ <BB #2766>

"The stars I take to symbolize the angelic legions fighting for the Lord upon that historic occasion [of Satan's fall]" (42).

Wardle, Judith. "satan not having the Science of Wrath, but only of Pity." Studies in Romanticism 13.2 (spring 1974): 147-54. <BBS 649>

On Hayley and his differences from Blake's aesthetic views and practices.

Wittreich, Joseph Anthony, Jr. "The 'satanism' of Blake and Shelley Reconsidered." Studies in Philology 65 (1968): 816-33. <BB #2998>

A comparison of their views on Milton's Satan.

Wright, Julia. "'Greek & Latin Slaves of the Sword': Rejecting the Imperial Nation in Blake's Milton." Milton and the Imperial Vision. Ed. Balachandra Rajan and Elizabeth Sauer. Pittsburgh: Duquesne University Press, 1999. 255-72. <WBHC 2886>

"[E]xplore[s] Blake's use of Milton, the new national bard, as an emblem for cultural complicity in and corruption by the imperial project for which the classical nations provided the type. In Milton; A Poem in Two Books [...], Blake begins by representing Milton as an emblematic national poet who has been infected by classical culture (a culture identified with Satan in Milton), and closes by envisaging the poet's apocalyptic purification" (256).

Swedenborg and Swedenborgianism (See also John Flaxman, Charles Augustus Tulk, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, Milton, and the Annotations to Swedenborg)

Introductions

Bellin, Harvey F., and Darrell Ruhl, ed. Blake and Swedenborg: Opposition Is True Friendship: The Sources of William Blake's Arts in the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. New York: Swedenborg Foundation Inc., 1985. <BBS 364-65, WBHC 1597-98>

Reprints significant essays on Blake and Swedenborg.

Blake and Swedenborg

Adlard, John. "Blake's 'The Little Girl Lost and Found.'" Archiv fur das Studium de neuren Sprachen under Literaturen 210 (1973): 330-34. <BB #A787>

⁶¹⁷ Rpt. in The Explicator Cyclopedie (1968), 43, <BB #A1587>. Quotation taken from the reprinted version.

Suggests that the imagery has sources in Swedenborg and Agrippa.

Baine, Rodney M., and Mary R. Baine. "Then Mars Thou Wast Our Center." English Language Notes 13 (1975-76): 14-18. <BBS 358>

Suggests that the source of Blake's imagery in the Mars passage on pl. 5 of America was Swedenborg's Concerning the Earths in our Solar System. See Michael Ferber's "Mars and the Planets Three in America" for a response.

Bellin, Harvey F. and Darrell Ruhl, ed. Blake and Swedenborg: Opposition Is True Friendship: The Sources of William Blake's Arts in the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. New York: Swedenborg Foundation Inc., 1985. <BBS 364-65, WBHC 1597-98>

A reprint of significant articles on Blake and Swedenborg.

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake's Annotations to Swedenborg's Heaven and Hell." University of Toronto Quarterly 34 (1965): 290-93. <BB #1160>

"Blake's copy is in Harvard" (BB #1160).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "Blake and Swedenborg." Notes and Queries 199.1 (1954): 264-65. <BB #1154>

Given the list of biblical books on Jerusalem pl. 41, "Blake evidently accepted literally Swedenborg's strictures on the Bible throughout his life" (264).

Bentley, G.E., Jr. "A Swedenborgian Bible." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 24.2 (fall 1990): 63-64. <BBS 407>

On a Bible published in 1809 and 1813 and abridged by George Hazard "to make it conform to the Swedenborgian canon" (64) (BBS 407).

Carr, Robert. "Divine Construct and the Individual Will: Swedenborgian Theology in The Book of Thel." Colby Library Quarterly 23.2 (1987): 77-88. <BBS 430>

Swedenborgian theology "gives meaning to the vision of cyclic progression taught by the Cloud and hence to Thel's attitude towards the cycle and her flight from it" (77).

Chapman, Wayne K. "Blake, Swedenborg, and A Vision: A Case for Recombinate Influence." Yeats's Poetry in the Making: Sing Whatever Is Well Made. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2010. 154-85. <WBHC 1836>

On the influence of Blake and Swedenborg on Yeats's A Vision (1925).

Cho, Nancy Jiwon, and David Worrall. "William Blake's Meeting with Dorothy Gott: The Female Origins of Blake's Prophetic Mode." Romanticism 16.1 (2010): 60-71. <WBHC 1849>

Discusses Blake's meeting with the Quaker writer, Dorothy Gott, who also attended the Great East Cheap Swedenborg Conference in April 1789.

Davies, Keri. "The Swedishman at Brother Brockmer's: Moravians and Swedenborgians in Eighteenth-Century London." Philosophy, Literature, Mysticism: An Anthology of Essays on the Thought and Influence of Emmanuel Swedenborg. Ed. Stephen McNeilly. London: The Swedenborg Society, 2013. 385-412. <WBHC 2407>

On Swedenborg's early connections to the Moravians in the 1740s, during the time of Blake's mother's own connection with the Moravians.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "Blake and Swedenborg." PhD Diss. Brandeis University. 1977. <BBS 449>

"A careful and original study, placing Blake firmly in the Swedenborgian context of his times" (BBS 449).

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "An American Original: Mrs. Colman's Illustrated Printings of Blake's Poems, 1843-44." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.1 (summer 1977): 4-18. <BBS 382>

"Between 1843 and 1845, Pamela Chandler Colman, an American Swedenborgian active in the production of children's books, was responsible for printing in four separate publications nine different poems from Blake's Songs of Innocence" (4). Shows that the reprintings had illustrations based on Blake's original designs and suggests that Colman may have seen Robert Balmanno's copy U.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "Mr. Rudall, The Flautist: An Authentic Blake Anecdote." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 11.2 (fall 1977): 123. <BBS 383>

On an anecdote about Blake during his time living at 3 Fountain Court when he was visited by "Mr. Rudall, the flautist" (123), which was published by the Swedenborgian James Spilling in "Blake the Visionary," New Church Magazine, 6 (1887), 209. Deck suggests the anecdote came down to Spilling from Charles Augustus Tulk to J.J. Garth Wilkinson.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "New Light on C.A. Tulk, Blake's Nineteenth-Century Patron." Studies in Romanticism 16.2 (spring 1977): 217-36. <BBS 649>

A useful overview of Tulk, a Swedenborgian and a friend to Flaxman and Coleridge, including reference to the Tulk printing "The Divine Image" and "On Another's Sorrow" in the Swedenborgian periodical, The Dawn of Light in 1825.

Deck, Raymond H., Jr. "Unnoticed Printings of Blake's Poems, 1825-1851." Blake: An Illustrated Quarterly 10.4 (spring 1977): 125. <BBS 381>

"In Swedenborgian publications, most U.S." (BBS 381). For a comprehensive list of poems reprinted between 1806 and 1849, see BR pp. 825-28.

Dunn, Allen. "The Spirits of Satire: Kant and Blake Read Emanuel Swedenborg." Soundings: An Interdisciplinary Journal 102.4 (2019): 325-44. <Blake (2020)>

On how Kant and Blake satirized Swedenborg.

Erdman, David V. "Blake's Early Swedenborgianism: A Twentieth-Century Legend." Comparative Literature 5.3 (1953): 247-57. <BB #1564>

Rejects the notion that Blake or his family had anything to do with the Swedenborgians before 1789, but the recent discoveries of Blake's mother's association with Moravianism and connections between Moravians and Swedenborg himself (c.f., Davies's "The Swedishman at Brother Brockmer's") make the idea more plausible.

Erle, Sibylle. "Representing Race: The Meaning of Colour and Line in William Blake's 1790s Bodies." The Reception of Blake in the Orient. Ed. Steve Clark and Masashi Suzuki. London: Continuum, 2006. 87-103. <WBHC 1857-62>

An important essay examining Blake's depictions of race in light of eighteenth-century race science, with a focus on Patrus Camper (1722-89), Johann Caspar Lavater, and Emanuel Swedenborg in particular. She discusses "The Little Black Boy" and the commercial engravings.

Erle, Sibylle. "Shadows in the Cave: Refocusing Vision in Blake's Creation Myth." Blake and Conflict. Ed. Sarah Haggarty and Jon Mee. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009. 144-63. <WBHC 2113-15>

On Blake's depictions of the eye and vision in relationship to John Locke and Isaac Newton; Swedenborg and the Swedenborgian optician, George Adams; and John Hunter and Erasmus Darwin.

Garcia, Humberto. "Blake, Swedenborg, and Muhammad: The Prophetic Tradition, Revisited." Religion & Literature 44.2 (summer 2012): 35-65. <WBHC 2051>

"Read alongside Swedenborg's works, Blake's scattered references to Islam suggest identification with the Prophet Muhammad and admiration for a polygamous Muslim heaven" (36).

Garrett, Clarke. Respectable Folly: Millenarians and the French Revolution in France and England. John Hopkins University Press, 1975. ⁶¹⁸

